AMARILLO — The High Plains Lighthouse for the Blind, 2010 N.W. 1st St., will be having an open house Tuesday from 4-6:30 p.m.

Special guest will be Mrs. Estelle Marsh, charitable donor for the organization. Special presentations will be made at 4:30 p.m.

The open house is being held in honor of expansion and remodeling of the facility.

PAMPA — The second annual reunion for members of the Pampa Army National Guard will be July 28-29. Reunion headquarters will be the Coronado Inn, 1101 N. Hobart, in Pampa.

For more information, call Joe Martinez at (806) 665-7750.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton accused conservative Republican senators Saturday of trying to hold welfare reform hostage to extreme political views in demanding that unwed teen mothers be denied assistance. "This approach would punish the innocent children of unmarried teen-agers for the mistakes of their parents," Clinton said in his weekly radio address.

With Senate Republicans sharply divided over the shape of welfare reform, Clinton is trying to help steer the GOP-controlled Congress toward legislation he would be willing to sign into law.

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Ten-year-old Lawrence Shields picked through a bucket of dirt at a commercial gem mine, and found an interesting rock.

"I just liked the shape of it," he said.

It turned out to be a 1,061-carat sapphire, one of the state's biggest.

Experts said it is worth thousands, but that its exact value won't be determined until it's cut and polished. Lawrence and his parents say they've been told it could be worth more than $35,000.

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler is pushing back its timetable for replacing rear door latches on 4.6 million minivans until at least September.

The automaker miscalculated how quickly it could get parts, spokesman Rick Deneau said.

Minivan owners can begin making appointments Sept. 4 to get the work done, Chrysler said.

In April, Chrysler wrote owners in the United States and Canada to say that the latches would be replaced.

A month later, city recovering from tornado

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

June 8, 1995.

A F-3 magnitude tornado strikes Pampa, ravaging a strip about a mile long through an industrial park and into a residential area, causing lesser damage into the city past Central Park and northeast of Loop 171.

The tornado developed southwest of the city about 4:27 p.m. and spun into town wreaking havoc in its path. At 4:35 p.m., law enforcement officers reported the twister moving in a northeast direction toward Alcock and Gwendolen, then toward Somerville and Hobart, then toward Caprock and Pam apartments.

Other observers reported it was accompanied by smaller tornadoes moving along side.

Pat Griffin watched the storm from the time it struck the industrial park along Milliron and Price Roads while she worked at her daughter's store, Rebecca Ann's, on Hobart.

"At first we saw all this debris around the funnel. Then I guess we knew it was coming toward us," she recalls.

Instead of seeking shelter immediately, Griffin, like many others across town, watched the development of the storm.

"It was hard to get away from looking at it. We were blessed by the Lord to get to see it," she said.

Griffin and two other employees — Pama Miller and Teresa Collins — continued observing the twister until the roof at Steve and Star's Family Hair Styling started "waving."

Debris started to hit the windows of Rebecca Ann's, where Griffin remained amazed by the storm. She managed to close out the cash register, turn off the electricity and lock the front door before she and the other two women sought shelter in the dressing rooms in the back.

Griffin says she heard a loud whistle and stopped up her ears, though she says the other two don't remember hearing anything. Windows started popping out, the front door flew open, clothes went flying and insulation started piling in.

Then everything went dark, Griffin remembers. She looked around the corner of the dressing room and saw light pouring through a crater where the roof used to be.

Soon people, including volunteers from local churches, started filing in to help in the clean-up. The roof had landed "facing the sky" in the back yard. Clothes were all over, as were the dented remains of fixtures.

After the storm had passed, residents began clearing debris-strewn streets, and emergency crews from across the Panhandle converged on the city. Red Cross operatives from around the state and nation soon followed.

Lefors, McLean, Skellytown, Spearman, White Deer, Borger, Panhandle, Fritch, Potter County, Pantex, the Rufe Jordan Unit, National Parks Service, Phillips 66, Stinnett, Canadian and Hoechst Celanese all sent crews to help almost immediately.

Red Cross workers streamed in from Amarillo, Dumas, Borger, Perryton, Childress, Wichita Falls, Lubbock, Fort Worth and even Pennsylvania and Washington state.

Emergency crews from Southwestern Public Service worked through the night in the area to restore power and repair downed power lines. Energas officials helped turn off gas lines.

Most of the streets and alleys in the residential area had been cleared by the following Saturday night, and leveling of homes beyond repair had begun.

All were commenting on how lucky the city was that no one had been killed in the storm. Seven people had been hospitalized in Pampa and Borger hospitals, but a majority had been treated and released that night.

One month later, clean up is just now slowing down.

"We're trying to get back to normal," Public Works Director Richard Morris said Friday.

"We were still doing work early last week. We are still doing a lot of brush clean-up and alley clean-up in the affected areas," Morris said.

Those areas essentially stretch across town, he said.

Within days after the disaster, local banks began offering interest-free loans to those individuals affected by the storm.

By Friday, approximately 47 loans had been made by Citizens Bank and Trust, Boatmen's First National Bank and National Bank of Commerce totaling about $227,000.

Golden Horseshoe clue

The Top O' Texas Rodeo Association's Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt has begun, with the prize for finding the hidden horseshoe being a set of box seat tickets for all three nights of the Top O' Texas Rodeo on July 13-15. No clues will be given in the newspaper or on the radio; hunters have to enter the participating stores and businesses to find the clues. Today's clue can be found at a hotel. Monday's clue can be found at a tire company. In clues from last week, Monday's clue can be found at Builders Plumbing Supply; Tuesday's clue can be found at Alco Discount Store; Wednesday's clue can be found at the National Bank of Commerce; Thursday's clue can be found at Hansford Implement Co.; Friday's clue can be found at Circle C Boot and Shoe Repair; and Saturday's clue can be found at Wayne's Western Wear.

Texas windmill

Standing guard over an open pasture, a sentinel of the plains creaks and groans near Claude as West Texas breezes provide the power to bring water up from the ground for livestock. With hot summer weather ahead for the next few days, cattle and horses will be appreciative of the water provided by the windmills around the Texas Panhandle.

Bring out the boots and jeans — it's rodeo week again in Pampa

The 49th Annual Top O' Texas Rodeo and Kid Pony Show activities kick off Monday night for a full week of rodeo events.

The Top O' Texas Kid Pony Show performances will be held nightly at 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, with the Top O' Texas Rodeo performances scheduled nightly at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, all in the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena east of Pampa.

Rodeo Secretary Jane Jacobs said participants are still being accepted for the rodeo parade, which will be held Saturday at 10 a.m.

Tickets for the Kid Pony Show, Top O' Texas Rodeo and the dances may be purchased at the Rodeo Office, located in the Pampa Chamber of Commerce office, 200 N. Ballard, 669-3241.

Entrants are also being sought for the Celebrity Pickup Race scheduled for 6 p.m. on Thursday. Jacobs said rules have been changed for the event to make it safer and encouraged people to enter the event. Contact the Rodeo Office for information.

As usual, special activities are scheduled for each night of the Top O' Texas Rodeo performances.

On Thursday, all ticket holders will be treated to a free barbecue beginning at 5:30 p.m. The Celebrity Pickup Race will begin at 6 p.m. that night.

Friday has been designated as Family Night, with a free child ticket offered for each adult ticket purchased. In addition, senior citizens age 60 and over may obtain a free ticket with each senior ticket purchased.

The rodeo parade will kick off activities for Saturday. Steer roping will be held at 1 p.m. in the arena. Also, Pony Express races will be held at 3 p.m., with finals beginning at 7:15 p.m.

Kracker Jack will play for the rodeo dance in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion at 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday, with Emmy winning Asleep at the Wheel also providing the music for Saturday's dance, also beginning at 9 p.m.

The Mundy Companies and Albertson's will sponsor the free barbecue, with LOL Cattle Co. sponsoring the Celebrity Pickup Race.

A nightly call scramble for the kids at the rodeo will be sponsored by Bowers Ranch. Frank Johnson will sponsor the Saturday steer roping event.

Special features each night of the rodeo will include the Wrangler Bull Fight, sponsored by Bowers Ranch and Wayne's Western Wear; the Coors Chute Out, sponsored by North Country Coors; and the Dodge Ram Tough Rodeo, sponsored by Robert Knowles Dodge.

The Top O' Texas Rodeo is marking 31 years as a Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association sanctioned rodeo.

Jacobs said plans are already under way to mark next year's 50th anniversary of the Pampa rodeo.

Law firms increase profits nearly 5 percent

HOUSTON (AP) — Years of cutbacks and belt-tightening have apparently paid off for a once-bloated Texas legal industry.

The state's 25 largest firms saw profits jump 4.6 percent in 1994, according to a survey by Texas Lawyer magazine.

Of those, 19 reported increased revenue. Efficiency is apparently up, too, as the report indicated the amount of revenue per lawyer is up 6.3 percent.

"After quite a few years of downsizing — getting the corporate religion — the cuts started showing up at the bottom line," said Joseph Calve, editor of the Dallas-based publication.

He said it was the best year for Texas law firms since 1990.

The oil boom and subsequent bust that loaded dockets with bankruptcy cases were the glory years for the Texas legal profession. Many firms became oversized and sloth-like, making cutbacks inevitable.

Another boost of efficiency has been improved technology. Firms such as Houston's Fulbright & Jaworski, the largest in Texas, have boosted their reliance on the PC.

The downsizing trend has been great for lawyers but tough on young attorneys entering the profession.

Feeder cattle trade steady in limited test

There were 8,900 confirmed sales of feeder cattle in the Texas Panhandle and western Oklahoma this past week, according to the USDA Market News Service. Slaughter trade was steady to lower.

Feeder sales for the week compares to 4,900 last week and 4,400 a year ago.

Compared to the previous week, feeder steers and heifers traded steady in a limited test. Movement was light over the holiday weekend. Demand was moderate for light supplies with many steers over 800 pounds included in the mix.

Seller interest was moderate but many cattle were held in firm hands, according to USDA officials. A steady to weak slaughter market along with volatile and uncertain futures prices offered little direction to the feeder market last week. It continues to be supply driven.

The bulk of supply was Medium and Large number one 750 to 855 pound steers and 600 to 750 pound heifers. The supply included 96 percent yearlings over 600 pounds.

Sales last week were mostly for current delivery. There were a few for August and October delivery.

There were 74,700 sales in the Texas Panhandle and eastern Oklahoma feedlot trade last week compared to 99,700 the week before and 83,200 for the same week last year.

Compared to the previous week, slaughter steers and heifers were steady to 50 lower.

Trade was slow early in the week with the Fourth of July holiday on Tuesday. It became moderate on Wednesday and active on Thursday.

Movement was good this past week, USDA officials said, with good clearance. Few feedyards carried cattle over into next week.

Futures were erratic most of the week closing on Thursday strongly higher. Opening Friday was higher.

Boxed beef was mixed in direction last week, mostly moving lower.

On Thursday, prices on heavy Choice 1-3 carcasses was $105.60 which was $1.49 lower than Friday of the previous week.

The weighted average price of all beef type steers last week was $62.95. This past week's movement included 5,600 formulated and 100 previously contracted cattle to be shipped this week. The average live weight of most cattle slaughtered at area packing plants last week was 1,163 pounds with 27 percent heifers compared with 1,147 pounds and 32 percent heifers the previous week and 1,154 pounds and 32 percent heifers the corresponding week a year ago.

Spokesmen for all three banks expressed some surprise that so relatively few loans had been taken out.

"Evidently there wasn't the need that we had anticipated," said Larry Orman of Citizens.

Duane Harp, also of Citizens, added that he recalled one woman who said she didn't want a loan because, as she said, "there are people who need it worse than me."

Harp said that "lots of people felt that way."

Don Babcock, president of Boatmen's, feels that the rush for loans is yet to come.

"I think the further we go into it the more we might see. The big part may come later," he said.

The Pampa Economic Development Corporation began extending similar loans to businesses.

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce announced a disaster relief fund within days of the storm as well.

Approximately 44 families and individuals had applied and received money by Thursday, according to Nanette Moore, chamber manager.

Moore said that $17,310 had been given out, leaving $1,100 remaining in the coffers. Two upcoming fundraisers by Exposito College of Hair Design and Dobson Cellular Phones should increase that amount, Moore said.

Officials from state and federal disaster agencies toured the site five days after the storm and compared their findings with the city and county's.

That team, including representatives from the Texas Department of Public Safety's Division of Emergency Management, the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Small Business Administration, submitted their findings to their respective agencies. The agencies then determined if Pampa and Gray County were eligible for state and federal assistance.

A week later, another assessment team looked at the public assistance work costs.

Thursday it was learned that the city and county's request for federal assistance had been denied at first, but Friday afternoon Gov. George W. Bush signed a second disaster declaration for Gray, Parmer, Wheeler, Wilbarger and Webb counties.

Jo Moss, public information officer with the DPS's Division of Emergency Management, said that, contingent on federal approval, this would mean FEMA could provide individual assistance such as personal low-interest loans and business and agricultural assistance, as well as public assistance to help defray city and county expenses.

Moss added that Bush's declaration does mean that sales tax on labor for disaster-related efforts has been waived by the state.

Pampa part of Dodge Truck Rodeo Series Sweepstakes

ATLANTA, Ga. — The 1995 Dodge Truck Rodeo Series Sweepstakes is scheduled for the Top O' Texas Rodeo July 13-15 in Pampa.

Robert Knowles auto dealership is the Pampa sponsor in the sweepstakes, according to Harold Bentley, sales manager at the Pampa dealership.

The Pampa rodeo is one of about 300 rodeos nationwide participating in the 1995 sweepstakes program, Dodge officials said. This is the third year Dodge Truck has offered the program.

Over the next few months more than 500,000 people are expected to enter the sweepstakes for a shot at winning the estimated $60,000-plus grand prize: a 1996 Dodge Ram 3500 Club Cab Laramie SLT Cummins Diesel pickup, equipped with a Ramsey Pro-9000 electric front-end winch; a Lance Squire 4000 nine-foot slide-in camper; and a FeatherLite model M94-19 three-horse trailer with a dressing room.

"We call it the Ultimate Cowboy Rig," said Elaine Pearson, Dodge Truck marketing specialist. "It is the kind of outfit that every cowboy wishes he had."

Robert Knowles, left, and Harold Bentley, sales manager for Robert Knowles Dodge in Pampa, display a belt buckle to be awarded by Dodge Trucks during the Top O' Texas Rodeo in Pampa July 13-15.

While hundreds of thousands of people will enter the Dodge Truck Rodeo Series Sweepstakes, less than 300 will have their names tossed into the hopper for the December 1995 drawing.

The Dodge Truck Rodeo Series Sweepstakes will only be offered at designated Dodge Truck-sponsored rodeos nationwide. Entrants can sign up at the participating rodeos, and the local winner will receive a custom trophy belt buckle from Dodge Truck and Award Design Medals, Pearson said.

"The drawing is usually at intermission during the last night of the rodeo," Bentley said.

The local winner will automatically be entered in the national sweepstakes drawing.

The odds of winning the national drawing are estimated to be about 300:1, which Pearson said are better odds than one might have on winning a multi-million-dollar national lottery.

"Only the local sweepstakes winners are eligible," she said. "That's what makes the competition and the promotion so unique. Those people know for sure their names will be the only ones in that box come December 1995 when the national drawing is held in Las Vegas, Nev."

What name comes out will be based on what Dodge Truck officials call the Cowboy's luck of the draw, she said.

In December, Dee Fackrell of Provo, Utah, was the winner of the 1994 Dodge Truck Rodeo Series Sweepstakes and was awarded a 1995 Dodge Ram 2500 Laramie SLT Cummins Diesel pickup.

Dodge Truck is the official truck of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

Texas stocks of corn, old crop wheat, sorghum down

AUSTIN — Texas stocks of corn, sorghum, and old crop wheat in all storage positions were down from last year.

According to figures released by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, total stocks of old crop wheat in all storage positions decreased 6 percent from last year to 33.69 million bushels. Farm stocks totaled 400,000 bushels, down 33 percent from 1994, while off-farm stocks totaled 33.29 million bushels, a decrease of 6 percent from June 1, 1994.

Total corn stocks on June 1 were down 11 percent to 31.60 million bushels. Farm stocks, at 4 million bushels, were the same as last year and off-farm stocks dropped 12 percent to 27.60 million bushels.

Total sorghum stocks were 13.24 million hundredweight (cwt) on June 1, down 14 percent from the 1994 stocks. On-farm stocks decreased 6 percent to 0.84 million cwt, while off-farm stocks decreased 15 percent to 12.40 million cwt.

Off-farm soybean stocks increased threefold to 4.04 million bushels. Off-farm barley stocks totaled 58,000 bushels compared with 792,000 bushels last year.

Total stocks of corn in the United States were 3.42 billion bushels, up 45 percent from the June 1, 1994 level. All old crop wheat stocks decreased 10 percent to 510.2 million bushels while soybean stocks increased 43 percent to 792.0 million bushels.

U.S. stocks of sorghum totaled 88.3 million cwt, up 23 percent from last year, while oat stocks were down 5 percent to 100.6 million bushels on June 1.

Unemployment edges down due to summer jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate edged down to 5.6 percent in June as a rebound in hiring for temporary summer jobs and construction helped lessen fears that the economy was sliding into a recession.

The Labor Department report, which showed unexpected strength in June and a less bleak performance in the two previous months, came just a day after the Federal Reserve cut a key interest rate by 0.25 percentage point in an effort to give the economy a boost.

The central bank might have delayed its interest rate cut had it had the benefit of the new jobless statistics, analysts said. But they insisted that the Fed would have still moved, probably in August, to begin cutting interest rates because of continued job loss in the key manufacturing sector.

"This report shows the economy isn't collapsing, but it is still struggling," said Robert Dederick, an economist at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "The real question is whether the weakness in manufacturing will spread to the rest of the economy."

The Clinton administration breathed a sigh of relief at the better job figures. Labor Secretary Robert Reich said with the latest gains, the economy has now created 7 million jobs since President Clinton took office in January 1993.

In a statement, Clinton said: "Seven million jobs in 30 months is very good news, but still not good enough: Millions of Americans are working harder than ever just to stay in place."

"In order to increase incomes for hard-working Americans, we must remain committed to a broad-based economic strategy to reward work, balance the budget, open markets for American goods, invest in education and training, target tax cuts to helping families invest in their futures, and take serious steps to health reform while protecting Medicare," Clinton said.

Joseph Stiglitz, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said the report was "a welcome sign that, while too many working families are still struggling, the current economic slowdown is likely to be temporary."

Meanwhile, the United States and Japan staged a surprise joint intervention in currency markets today in an effort to make sure that the Fed's rate cut does not put downward pressure on the dollar. Lower rates in the United States can make dollar-denominated investments less attractive to foreign investors.

The intervention had modestly positive effect, lifting the dollar to 86.88 yen in late morning trading.

"There wasn't a compelling need to intervene because the dollar wasn't under downward pressure," said Robert Hormats of Goldman Sachs in New York. "They probably wanted to remind the markets that the United States and Japan are working together to support the dollar if the need arises."

The Fed's reduction to 5.75 percent in the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, prompted more banks to announce today cuts in their prime lending rate, the benchmark for millions of business and consumer loans.

Friday, New York-based Chemical Banking Corp., the nation's third largest bank, and First Chicago Bank announced they were trimming their prime rate from 9 percent down to 8.75 percent.

The Labor Department report showed payroll employment rose by an unexpectedly large 215,000 last month.

But analysts said much of the strength in the June report came from special factors including one extra week between surveys, giving employers more time to hire people, and a big improvement in weather conditions that boosted construction jobs.

The bond market was jolted initially by the stronger-than-expected unemployment report, but it quickly stabilized and recouped some of its initial losses. In late morning trading, Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond was trading at a yield of 6.53 percent while the Dow Jones industrial average was up more than 11 points from its record close of the day before.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Nation-states on the wane

The leaders of the seven richest and most industrialized nations in the world met in Halifax, Nova Scotia, attended dinners, met in plenary sessions, chided Russian President Boris Yeltsin for churlishness, spoke portentously about the problems facing the international community in the next century - and ignored or failed to deal with any of the real, pressing problems of the world of today. Some seemed frustrated by this lack of real power, others seemed oblivious.

Some observers saw in this high level wheels spinning some thing akin to the twilight of the nation-state.

Perhaps the most pressing problem facing the industrialized world is the prospect of a trade war between the world's two richest countries, the United States and Japan, a political conflict that could disrupt international markets and wreck the World Trade Organization, in which all of these leaders invested considerable political capital, before it is properly out of the womb. Perhaps some discussion took place behind the scenes, but in public the G-7 leaders seemed content to let these two clumsy giants blunder into a mutually ruinous conflict that could have repercussions worldwide.

Strike One.
On Bosnia, the most active site of military conflict, the G-7 leaders allowed as how they were "deeply concerned," and reiterated that they "appeal to all parties to establish an immediate moratorium on military operations." That will have about as much impact as the last dozen earnest appeals from the "world community."

Strike Two.
The seven nations' leaders did resolve to double what is now a $28 billion global bailout fund to deal with situations like the financial melt down in Mexico earlier this year, promising to think about where to get the money some time soon. But the global currency markets now trade about $1,200 billion every single day. Amid the self-congratulation about reforming and bolstering international institutions, most of the leaders understood that in that tidal wave, $28 billion or $56 billion is a small bucket.

The international financial markets are now too big for any one government or a combination of the world's most powerful governments to control or regulate.

Strike Three.
The seven leaders spoke bravely of bold new initiatives in arms control, of reforming the United Nations, of sharing information about terrorism. But these political leaders were essentially treading water on all these issues. The nation-state as we have known it since the Middle Ages is proving to be an increasingly ineffectual institution. If any international organization did have the power necessary to deal with the monetary and military crises of the moment, it would have to be a tyranny of unparalleled and ultimately unsustainable proportions.

Some will weep for the old days. But is it necessarily a bad thing that most of the commerce and day-to-day activity of the peoples of the world is beyond the control of political leadership? Has political leadership demonstrated much wisdom or foresight? Has it grown any food or produced any useful inventions?

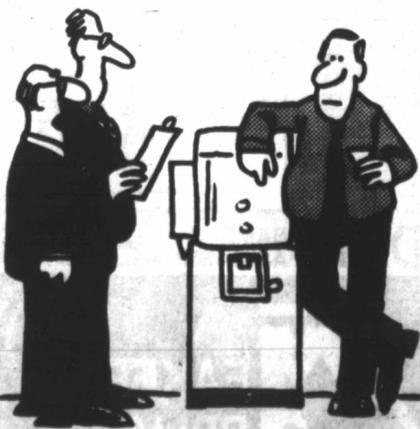

It would hardly do to begrudge these leaders their posh but increasingly irrelevant offices. But it would hardly do to expect anything useful or substantive from them either.

"Let's start the cost-benefit analysis study here."

Thou shalt not covet for a reason

As a Sunday school kid, I never quite understood the significance of the commandment, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbor's." It was easy to understand why you shouldn't covet your neighbor's wife. After all, that could lead to adultery. But what's wrong about being jealous about your neighbor's other possessions? Liberals have helped me see the light: Jealousy is a precursor to evil. It causes otherwise decent people to fall easy prey to scummy charlatans.

Look at the debate surrounding the Republican proposed tax cuts. Liberals protest it isn't fair to cut taxes of those earning over $200,000. Liberals make the incredibly thoughtless argument that since the wealthy have benefited the most from society, they also owe the most. Higher taxes are a way to make them "give something back." Liberals' agenda is to make us jealous and make us think that one person has more because another has less so they can succeed in their redistributionist agenda.

But how do people earn money in a free society? Let's take the extreme example of billionaire Bill Gates, founder of Microsoft. There is no evidence that Gates enslaved or robbed anyone. There's a lot of evidence that millions of common people like you and me voluntarily gave him money for software programs that make life easier and more pleasurable, like Windows, DOS and other products. Gates served us well, and he's rich because millions upon millions of independent decision makers agreed his products were superior to the next best alternative.

Liberals make the nonsense argument that people like Gates owe society something. If anything, society benefited far more from Gates' activities than Gates himself. That's nearly always the case. People who invented products like MRIS, miracle drugs and laser machines or services like overnight mail and electronic mail benefited society much more than anything they themselves might have received. Just ask yourself: Who received the greatest benefit from the antibiotic that may have saved your loved one's life - the inventor who got profits from sale of the medicine to you, or was it you and your loved one?

How appropriate is it to hold people, who serve us so well, up to scorn, abuse and ridicule? We might also ask: How appropriate is it for us to make social mascots out of society's leeches, vermin and parasites? How much sense does it make to confiscate the wealth of those who serve us and reward those who seek to live off and prey on others?

Liberals are about control. Jealousy is their powerful instrument for the politics of envy. They get us to covet that which belongs to our neighbor, and we in turn give them the power to confiscate what are perceived as ill gotten gains of others and pass it around. In the process, we all wind up being less free, less prosperous and less moral and become a nation of thieves engaged in the futile attempt to live at each other's expense.

You'd think at least the church would be in the forefront in preaching against envy. But one of the greatest successes of liberals is their co-optation of America's church leaders into their evil agenda. Today's church leaders, along with members of Congress, have forgotten God's commandment against coveting and probably interpret the commandment "Thou shalt not steal" as God really meaning, "Thou shalt not steal, unless there's a majority vote."

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, July 9, the 190th day of 1995. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On July 9, 1850, the 12th president of the United States, Zachary Taylor, died in the White House from apparently natural causes, having served only one year and four months of his term.

On this date:
In 1540, England's King Henry VIII had his six month marriage to his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves, annulled.

In 1755, British Gen. Edward Braddock was mortally wounded when his troops suffered a massive defeat near present day Pittsburgh during the French and Indian War. One survivor was an aide to Braddock - Col. George Washington.

In 1776, the Declaration of Independence was read aloud to Gen. George Washington's troops in New York.

In 1816, Argentina declared their independence from Spain.

Solving the teen pregnancy problem

It's just as well Republicans killed the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster to be surgeon general.

In the first place, Lyndon Johnson stripped the office of its real powers. Since then, it has consisted mainly of a secretary, a speech writer or two, and the surgeon general making endless rounds of the fried chicken and English pea circuit. Congress should either abolish it or restore its powers to be the real administrative head of the public health service.

In the second place, President Clinton in nominating him said teenage pregnancy was the nation's number one public health problem. Like most of what Clinton says, that's nonsense.

Teenage pregnancy is not a public health problem. A healthy teenager is perfectly capable of producing a healthy baby. In many countries and in our own in the past, people typically married in their teens and started their families. Biologically, there is no problem.

We discourage teenage pregnancy because of economics. Our economy is not structured to absorb young couples into the work force. Maybe it should, but at any rate teenage pregnancy remains an economic problem, not a public health problem per se.

Probably the number one public health problem is infectious diseases, many of which, including tuberculosis, are becoming resistant to antibiotics which, unfortunately, are diseases the only way known to treat them. These diseases are spread by air, water and body fluids. With more poverty, more crowding, more immigration and the deterioration of old sewer and water systems, the situation will likely get worse. That's where the public health service should be concentrating its efforts.

A pregnant teenager is no threat to the public's health. A food handler or passenger on a plane with an infectious disease is.

But, as Clinton made clear in his childish reaction to Foster's rejection, he really wanted a spokesman for abortion and sex education. Why, I don't know, because he just fired a surgeon general whose main qualification seemed to be to run off at the mouth about sex education and abortion.

Abortion is wrong. The Orwellian newspeak - a woman's right to choose - is a crock of fertilizer. A pregnant woman should have no right to choose infanticide. That's what abortion is - destroying a human life. When pregnancies are allowed to come to term, women deliver human babies - not frogs or goats. Human life begins with conception and what follows is only growth.

What bizarre mutation in the brains of feminists causes them to think that women are so special that they deserve a license to kill to eliminate a social or economic inconvenience? The rest of us can kill only in self-defense - and that is narrowly defined.

Women have a right to choose all right - contraception or abstinence. We tell criminals, don't do the crime if you can't do the time. We need to send a message to women - don't copulate if you won't parturate. A decent society would not allow women to make their own carelessness, bad judgment or promiscuity a capital crime for an innocent babe.

And a decent but tough society would send a message to men: Don't have the fun if you can't handle the dun. You help create a child and you create an 18 year obligation to support the child. If you refuse, you can spend 18 years in the chain gang, but by God, you're no longer going to dump your responsibilities on the public. It should be a crime to abandon a life as well as to take it.

I do not expect either decency or toughness from the Clinton administration. True, they sent tanks against children in Waco and snipers against a mother and her son in Ruby Ridge. But I don't call that toughness. Just brittishness.

The Alger Award: Back to the future

Perhaps no civic tribute does more to salute the American spirit than does the Horatio Alger Award. If that's so, then no television network special is more rewarding or uplifting than the one that broadcasts the awards ceremony to millions. The Alger has been awarded for 48 years, but only for the past three have they been given national television exposure. For two years, they were broadcast by NBC, and the 1995 awards aired on CBS.

From the opening segment, Ray Charles' rendition of America the Beautiful, a more tradition friendly, role model dominated hour could not have been scripted by William Bennett, Bob Dole or Dan Quayle.

The Alger are presented to persons who, like the award's namesake, have emerged from humble circumstances to fame and/or fortune through individual effort. Each story is magnificent non-fiction that shatters the myth that America is no longer the land of opportunity. Moreover, this path knows no gender or color. Among this year's honorees were a woman - Ruth Fertel, founder of the Ruth's Chris Steak House chain - and two blacks, music entrepreneur Quincy Jones and Joe Dudley, who grew up in a three room shack as one of 11 children and now runs the Dudley Products cosmetics company. In videotaped biographical pieces preceding their acceptances of the award, the winners spoke at length about their philosophies of life. Always, the message is the same: love of God, of life, of country, of education. Herbert Boeckmann, a child of the Depression, began his career as a car salesman, and by dint of hard work, today he owns the largest Ford dealership in America. This highly motivated achiever spoke movingly of his father's charitable deeds that spurred his own efforts toward "helping people help themselves." The honorees' remarks were especially salient for the young. Quincy Jones asserted, "I don't think God put us here to have everything go right every minute. That's why He's got those other funny words like 'discipline' and 'adversity.' That's what helps shape your character, and it sounds corny, but it's not corny - it's real."

John Pappajohn, the president of Equity Dynamics, reminisced about growing up, then remarked, "I was recently asked by a young man who suffered adversity, 'What do I have to do in order to be successful?' I said, 'Have a dream, and be willing to pay the price in order to have your dream come true.'"

Dennis Washington, who now presides over a business empire containing construction, railroad, mining and shipping companies, also remembered, "We didn't have a lot of money... but the family was together. That means so much." Looking back, Washington says, "The early part of your life, you may get (deal) a bad hand, but, remember, that's a (short) period... and if you can focus on the future by finding something that you like to do, with luck and help from God, you're going to have a good life." The show was co-hosted by Markie Post and

John Ritter, both outspokenly pro-Clinton in other venues. For this night, however, the political guns were checked at the door. Ritter introduced one honoree, Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, as having "values, beliefs, principles. You know, some call those old-fashioned, but to others, they're the surest sign of leadership."

As in previous years, the Alger were produced for television by actor Don Johnson. On the occasion of the awards ceremony's first telecast two years ago, Johnson told us, "Being a parent and being somewhat sensitive to the fact that there aren't (many) positive role models these days, I felt that it was really important to see this get on television."

"Television should be used for education as well as entertainment and creating a positive outlook for the future... The thing I loved about the (Horatio Alger Association) is that it's based on good, old-fashioned fundamental tools for success... Let's encourage success. That's what America's about."

The Horatio Alger Awards is not standard prime time fare, and yet I can't help but think that there's room - no, there's a crying need - for more programs like it. Television can be as much a unifying as it is now a dividing influence - as educational as it is now downright stupid.

Just look at the competition. While CBS was presenting the Alger, NBC's Dateline was giving us the very, very latest on the O.J. Simpson trial. ABC was airing Family Matters, on which, according to TV Guide, "another transportation-chamber mishap turns Urkel into a gyrating Elvis with a hunka hunka lot of explaining to do." And Fox was showing Encounters: The Hidden Truth about "people who claim to have received implants from aliens."

Letters to the editor

Japan is still whining

To the editor:
It is now clear that we are not going to get past the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II without more whining from one of the two countries that began that horrible conflict.

Now the mayor of Nagasaki is knocking Bill Clinton and the United States in general because Clinton dared to comment that Harry Truman made the right decision when he ordered the "A-bomb" dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Mayor Itcho Ito said Mr. Clinton's comments "wounded the souls of those who survived the blast and those who lost family there."

That is an interesting comment from the representative of a country that supported the rape of Manchuria and Nanking, and nodded with approval at the death marches on Bataan, that consistently approved of the destruction of body, soul and mind of every foreigner who fell within its control.

It is impossible to believe that the Japanese would not have used the bomb throughout the war had it been available, especially now that it has been proven that the country also sanctioned biological warfare.

Ito is right about one thing, though he stops short with his concern about his own countrymen. Everyone should stop to think of the victims of the bomb, just as we should have concerns for the victims of the Japanese atrocities and the German genocide, and for all the victims of that war. But Americans should never, never, never apologize for using the only weapon that was likely to stop the war.

The bitter Battle of Okinawa had just ended leaving almost 14,000 U.S. soldiers and Marines dead, and now the dreaded invasion of Japan faced America. We had already lost 200,000 U.S. soldiers, sailors and Marines. Conservative estimates indicate that many more would be sacrificed had the invasion of Japan been necessary.

Using the words of Leland and Lucille Flesher of Hereford, "If there had been no Pearl Harbor, there would have never been a Hiroshima and Nagasaki."

If Mayor Ito or his parents had been willing to control Tojo and the bloodthirsty Japanese army, bent on the conquest of all Asia, that bomb would not have been necessary in the first place.

Pampa is truly kind

To the editor:
I would like to take this opportunity to thank the city of Pampa and all the individuals who helped my sister, Laura Walkup, who was seriously injured and lost her home and everything she owned at 533 N. Christy during the tornado on June 8th. I live in Elko, Nev., and was notified within an hour after it happened by Sgt. Charles Love of the Pampa Police Department, whom I worked with at the Police Department nearly 20 years ago.

I want the people of Pampa, Texas to know what a wonderful community they have. I grew up in Pampa and went through the school system, and I can honestly say I have never met more kinder people in my life. I was overwhelmed by how the community pulled together, set aside all selfishness and helped wherever they were needed, whether it be to help pick up debris, take food, fill out paperwork, protect property, give hugs, or whatever was needed to be done.

The people of Pampa and outside agencies were tremendous. I still sit and cry when I think of all the caring people who helped my sister and me while I was trying to take care of her. Words can never say how grateful I am but I will always have a special place in my heart for the people of Pampa, Texas.

Again, thank you for turning a tragedy into a blessing and may God bless you all.

Powell for president?

To the editor:
Many people keep advocating that Colin Powell enter the presidential race, either as a Democrat, Republican or third party. No one mentions his credentials other than he is articulate, popular and black. I wonder how much of a "war hero" he would have been had he not been black? We have had about three years example of a president who is marginally adequate for the job of president. We have found out, the hard way, that being an attractive glib public speaker is inadequate credentials. Ben Wattenberg is the latest to promote Colin Powell.

Where does Mr. Powell stand on social programs and economic programs? Is he an advocate of individual initiative or is it the government's responsibility to provide the needs and wants of the people? Mr. Colin Powell, I am confident, was a competent military leader, but the other credentials, needed to lead the United States, is unknown. More needs to be known of Mr. Powell if he is to be considered for the presidency.

Gratitude for the help

To the editor:
We at B & G Electric would like to express our thanks and gratitude to all the good people who helped in so many ways on June 8 and every day since. You have helped us get our lives back to normal and the clean up work has been accomplished in such a short period of time.

There are so many of you good people that helped the storm damaged businesses and homes. No words will ever express the thanks and appreciation we have at B & G Electric. There are just too many people and not enough time. To all you good people, thank you so very, very much.

Wayne and Lois Brooks, Royce and Belinda Waldrip and Phyllis and Frank Dominey, "The Crew" of B & G Electric

Let others feed kids

To the editor:
Mr. Wade Mitchell's fine letter in the June 11th issue about the summer lunch program at the school deserves to be reprinted a few times. He condemns, as we all should, the idea that the government ought to feed our children. Parents should feed children. Whatever has happened to moral responsibility?

Where has self-respect hidden?

Charity is in no way a function of government. If soup kitchens are needed (which I doubt), our churches, or maybe the Salvation Army, can and will provide them, and they will get all the support they need from people like Mr. Mitchell and me.

Clean-up appreciated

To the editor:
I would like to say thanks to each one that helped me in the recent disaster. It was great how they all pitched in to help clean up.

Thanks to all,

NAACP to close Southwest Region office in Dallas

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The NAACP has announced it will close its Southwest Region office in Dallas by the end of the month.

The shutdown, under discussion for weeks, was announced Friday at the 86th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "We will go from seven to four (regional offices) as a cost-saving measure," said Earl Shinhoster, NAACP acting executive director. "We also will have 21 fewer people (on staff)."

Shinhoster said three of the seven NAACP's regional offices will close and merge with existing offices within the next month to save money.

Food For Thought

Cornish hens make for easy entertaining: one bird per person, and no one has to carve. Rub hens with a cut lemon and brush with butter or oil. Stuff each hen with a lemon half and a sprig of thyme. Roast at 375 degrees for 45 minutes to an hour.

Cherry tomatoes are just the right size for party snacks - especially when they're stuffed with basil-and-garlic pesto or a smooth mixture of smoked salmon, cream cheese and dill.

Tabasco, the hot-pepper-sauce, is now available in a milder version, made from jalapeno peppers. It's green.

Squeeze extra nutrition into a favorite snack for the kids: make gelatin dessert according to package directions, adding hot water but not cold. When the gelatin is slightly set, fold it into 8 ounces of yogurt in a compatible flavor, then chill.

You can beat egg whites for soufflee just so far - until they hold firm peaks - but don't overdo it, or they start to separate.

You can't beat the steaks at Danny's Market. It's everyone's favorite!

Minding your own Business

By Don Taylor

Want to start something?

Recently, I heard a story on an airplane about a man who tried to enter a posh restaurant without a tie. The bouncer (disguised as a maitre d') told him that he could not go in. The man went back to his car to search for a tie. All he found was a set of jumper cables. He tied them around his neck and went back to the restaurant. The bouncer rolled his eyes, but finally said, "OK, you can go in, but don't try to start anything."

We had a good laugh and settled back into our own thoughts as the airliner bored holes in the sky. As I thought about the "don't start anything" line, it led to thoughts on starting a business. I wondered what I would start if I were faced with that decision?

Later, during the flight I picked up an old issue of INC. magazine. Inside was an article on what types of business well known celebrities would open if they were to start something new. Some of their thoughts may surprise you. They did me.

The expert's ideas

Ed McMahon, former Tonight Show announcer, would start a home remodeling business. Best selling author Stephen R. Covey would open character building schools.

Remington Corporation's razor guru Victor Kiam would sell travel alarms to increase hotel/motel security. Debbi Fields, who founded Field's cookies and produced millions of 180-calorie-per-cookie cookies, would open health spas to teach people how to "lead a good, healthy life." (Without cookies, I assume.)

Tom Peters, author of In Search of Excellence, would find a dark corner in some mundane industry to attempt to offset his alleged "$65,000-for-two-hours-work" salary. Syndicated radio adviser Bruce Williams would start a regional airline. Donald Trump, billionaire and former airline owner, would consider anything but an airline.

Henry Bloch, founder of H&R Block tax services, would start a home repair service. Radio talk show host Rush Limbaugh didn't have any ideas.

The grass is greener

From personal experience I know that the grass is always greener in the idea pasture next to the one you're in. I've visited with many small business owners, and even the highly successful ones believe that most other businesses would be easier to run than the one they own.

There are of course still good businesses to start. There are still ideas that would make money and serve customers well. However, you shouldn't ask me to tell you what those good ideas are. Like Rush, I don't know.

I would suggest that you follow these guidelines if you're looking for a business to start: First, carefully evaluate your own skills and abilities. They should match at least some of the ones you'll need in the business you're considering. Second, any business you start should be something you enjoy doing. When work is fun, it isn't work.

The third step is to find a niche where you can solve a problem or create good feelings. I know this sounds a little vague, but it is the best advice I can give you. You can spot profitable niches by observing what's going on around you.

Next, put together a simple, but complete plan. You'll need to estimate revenues, startup costs and monthly expense requirements to see if you have enough money. (Small Business Development Centers can help you with this step.) Revise your plan until you get a short, error free and easy-to-read document.

If your idea never comes together, don't get discouraged. Consider the planning process as valuable experience for your next good idea. The next one just might make you a millionaire.

Texas resort executive bucks Japanese tradition

By LESLI HICKS
 San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Ten years ago, Yoshimi Nakaue was a Japanese high school student with two options.

"My father told me I could go to the university or I could go to 'Higa School,'" Nakaue, now 28, recalled recently.

She wisely picked the latter. "Higa School" meant one-on-one instruction from her adoptive father, Kiyonori Higa, the businessman from Osaka who came to town five years ago and bought The Club at Sonterra, a private club developed in 1990.

Higa, himself the son of a residential builder, knew how important parental guidance could be, particularly when the lesson is: Start at the bottom of the totem pole so you'll be better after you climb to the top.

Nakaue's initial training included serving tea to company guests. "I also was a clerk before working my way up," she said through an interpreter. "Within two years, I had learned how to negotiate with the banks. Later, he (Higa) left me in charge of operations."

Nakaue, who actually has owned the club quietly through her company TB Texas Inc. since 1991, and managed it since 1993, clearly took the Higa curriculum to heart.

The family has shed its ownership of two other clubs it acquired after Sonterra Tapatio Springs and Woodlake Country Club and plans to concentrate solely on their first U.S. real estate investment.

And, they say, they have no plans to sell any time soon. Beyond their fiscal commitment, Sonterra is a project of the heart.

Sonterra, part of the exclusive 4,380-acre Stone Oak community about the same age, has two 18-hole championship golf courses that together span 391 acres at the base of the Texas Hill Country.

It was developed by area businessman Tom Turner Sr., founder of the Sigmor Corp. retail gasoline station empire, which he later sold to Diamond Shamrock Inc.

Nakaue plans to celebrate the club's birthday in a gala planned for May 21. The guest list includes Sonterra's 2,000 members and their guests.

For Nakaue, who divides her time between New York and San Antonio, the milestone is especially sweet.

Although Japanese women have made professional inroads, those who must or want to work outside the home face a well entrenched stereotype: Women who have children "should" stay at home.

"I thought there would be more opportunity for me in this country," she said.

Since assuming her role at Sonterra, Nakaue has made several changes physical and visceral, including adding six tennis courts to the initial 17 and creating a patio area by the putting tees.

She also has planted 2,200 crepe myrtles at the site and founded an employee scholarship program.

Meanwhile, she is working on tentative plans to expand the ballroom and the pro shop, and is considering adding a conference center.

"There are many more things I want to do," she said.

As Nakaue has grown in the job, her father, 54, has changed somewhat, too. First, although he still smokes cigarettes, he has had heart problems in recent years.

"At one time I had planned to do more acquisitions, but could not because of my health," he said. "I also felt it was time to turn ... Sonterra over to Yoshimi," said Higa, who is retired except for his role as chairman of Sonterra's management arm.

Texas jobless rate rises

DALLAS (AP) - Unemployment continued its upward trend in Texas last month, the Labor Department has said.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said the seasonal adjusted rate for Texas in June was 6.3 percent, up from 6.0 percent in May, but lower than 6.6 percent unemployment for the same month in 1994.

Bob Gaddie, the bureau's southwest regional commissioner, said the state's unemployment has been on an upward trend from February, when a reading of 5.1 percent was recorded. That was the lowest jobless rate since January 1990.

Nationally, the unemployment rate was 5.6 percent for June.

Because unemployment rates can be volatile from month to month, three-month moving averages often are more meaningful, Gaddie said. The three-month average was 6.1 percent, compared to 5.9 percent one month earlier, 5.6 percent two months earlier and 6.6 percent 12 months earlier.

Total Texas employment in June was 9,055,000, essentially identical to May's level, but up 273,000 from June of 1994.

The size of Texas' labor force - which also includes those seeking work - was 9,660,000, up 254,000 over the year. The number of unemployed people was 605,000 in June, compared with 624,000 a year ago.

Figures on industrial employment, available only through May, show a loss of 2,500 lost jobs in non-durable manufacturing, with the losses concentrated primarily in printing and publishing. The Houston Post, which had 1,900 employees, went out of business on April 18.

NASA official disputes report that supplies were missing from laboratory

HOUSTON (AP) — A NASA spokesman said Saturday astronaut Bonnie Dunbar was treated in a NASA laboratory after an allergic reaction last fall — not rushed to a hospital near death as has been reported.

CBS News said Friday that a NASA investigation found life-saving supplies were missing from the lab where a medical experiment was being performed on Dunbar.

But Johnson Space Center public affairs director Jeff Carr said the shuttle Atlantis crew member was taken to the hospital only for observation after her reaction to the experimental drug.

"You cannot possibly predict that kind of a reaction, but the (NASA) report found that when the reaction occurred, the physician and the medical team on the scene reacted appropriately," Carr said.

"The subject (Dunbar) was treated and stable and then only transported to a local hospital for observation," he said. "It's a far cry from the impression that she was rushed to the hospital near death."

The experimental dye was injected into Dunbar last October to measure her blood volume while she prepared for Atlantis' recent linkup with the Russian space station Mir.

CBS said the drug was not approved for human use in the United States.

"That's not true," Carr said. "It is in fact approved for experimental and research use in humans in the United States, although it is not FDA-approved for clinical applications in the United States."

"This particular tracer is used in clinical applications widely in Europe so there is a broad data base for the use of this chemical tracer in human subjects."

Carr said the NASA probe found that all necessary supplies were at hand. However, a review team determined some other items should be readily available.

"They saw some things that they thought ought to be part of the standard inventory which were not. ... (But) to say that the laboratory was without the resources it needed to render emergency care, that's absolutely wrong."

4-H'sers busy preparing for judging of recordbooks

Dates
 10 - Grandview 4-H Club meeting, 7 p.m., Grandview School
 14 - 4-H Clothing Camp, Texas 4-H Center, Brownwood
Recordbook Judges Needed
 County: We will again be exchanging recordbooks with Randall County. County judging will be Tuesday, July 18, at 8:30 a.m. at the District Extension Office in Amarillo. This is a great way to get new ideas and learn how other 4-Hers do things. Let us know if you can help!
 District: District recordbook judging is Tuesday, July 25, in Amarillo. We can take several judges that day. It is a great team experience. You don't have to be a recordbook expert to judge. We all are Teaming together this year! Let us know if you can help!

Grandview 4-H Club
 Grandview 4-H Club will meet Monday, July 10, at 7:00 p.m., at the Grandview School. The meeting will be a 4-H Recordbook Workshop. Danny and Donna will be on hand to help 4-Hers learn how to do 4-H recordbooks. Members need to bring: 1) a parent, 2) project record forms, and 3) $2 for a 4-H recordbook cover (optional). The club will also elect a 4-H Council Delegate at this meeting.

Horse Project
 The Gray County 4-H Horse Project Group will be doing two community service projects this month. They will be setting pivots for the Top of Texas Rodeo July 13-15, and will be riding in the Top of Texas Rodeo Parade. For more information, contact Sharon Price.

District Horse Show
 Congratulations to Chad Richards and Sean O'Neal for qualifying for the State 4-H Horse Show. Sarah Teague and Royce O'Neal also did an outstanding job at this year's horse show. Placings are as follows: Chad Richards - 1st place, Two year old pleasure, 1st place and Champion Mare; Sean O'Neal - 1st place Grade Mare, 5th place Novice Showmanship and 6th place Novice Horsemanship; Royce O'Neal - 3rd place Registered Mare under 5 years old, 8th place Novice Showmanship; Sarah Teague - 7th place Novice Showmanship and 4th place Novice Horsemanship.

Number of Mexican feeder cattle crossing border grows

SANTA TERESA, N.M. — An estimated 15,000 feeder cattle crossed the border into Texas and New Mexico from Mexico in the past week, USDA Market News Service reported over the weekend.
 This compares to 12,698 for the previous week and 1,553 for the same week a year ago.
 Compared to the previous week, feeder steers and heifers sold mostly steady. Demand was good for number one steers and heifers and moderate for number two steers and heifers.
 Few cattle sold on the current market. Seventy percent of the cattle that crossed were retained by owners and placed on grass or in feedlots or previously contracted.

 USDA reports it is starting to see an increase of slaughter cows and bulls crossing the border.
 The bulk of supply last week consisted of steers and heifers weighing 250-600 lbs. Included in the supply were about 2,500 head of slaughter cows, bulls and heifers.
Feeder Steers: Medium and Large 1- 300-350 lbs., 77.00-82.00; 350-400 lbs., 72.00-77.00; 400-450 lbs., 68.00-72.00; 450-500 lbs., 65.00-68.00; 500 -550 lbs., 64.00-65.00; 550-600 lbs., 62.00-64.00.
Medium and Large 2: 300-350 lbs., 67.00-72.00; 350-400 lbs., 62.00-67.00; 400-450 lbs., 58.00-62.00; 450-500 lbs., 56.00-58.00.

Medium and Large Brahman: 300-350 lbs 57.00-62.00; 350-400 lbs., 52.00-57.00; 400-450 lbs., 48.00-52.00; 450-500 lbs., 46.00-48.00.
Feeder Heifers: Medium 1: 300-350 lbs 68.00-73.00; 350-400 lbs., 63.00 -68.00; 400-450 lbs., 60.00-63.00; 450-500 lbs., 58.00-60.00; 500-550 lbs., 56.00-58.00; 550-600 lbs., 54.00-56.00.

For the week ending July 1, 12,698 feeder cattle and 1,553 slaughter cattle were imported from Mexico. This brings to 982,765 feeder cattle for the year to date and 60,767 slaughter cattle. This compares to 608,846 feeder cattle for the same time last year.
 Records on slaughter cattle were not kept.

TENNIS

PAMPA — The Pampa Tennis Clinic will be held July 17-21 with a singles tournament July 22 at the high school tennis courts.

Times are from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. Monday through Friday with the tournament starting at 8:30 a.m.

Cost is $80 per person, which includes the tournament fee.

Head instructor will be PHS tennis coach Larry Wheeler, who had coached 12 entries into the Region 1-4A spring tournament in his three years as a coach. He is a former Oklahoma Intercollegiate Conference champion at Southwestern Oklahoma State University, where he was a four-year letterman.

Wheeler's clinic staff will include several PHS tennis alumni, who are presently participating at the collegiate level.

Participants should bring a racquet, water jug and towel.

Checks should be made payable to Larry Wheeler. Contact Wheeler at 806-665-6422 or mail checks to 1709 Hamilton, Pampa, Tex., 79065.

FOOTBALL

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech senior linebacker Zach Thomas of Pampa was recently named to the Football News preseason All-American team, the publication announced.

The 6-0, 232-pound Thomas was a first-team pick on two All America teams last year after collecting 106 tackles, 3 1/2 sacks and four interceptions.

Sophomore receiver Sheldon Bass and senior defensive back Marcus Coleman were selected to the magazine's preseason All-Southwest Conference team, along with Thomas.

Earlier this year, Thomas was honored by Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame as the outstanding athlete for 1994 in football. Among the other honors Thomas received last season was being named to the Football News All-Southwest Conference first team; the American Football Coaches Association All-America Team and the UPI All-America first team.

Thomas helped Texas Tech gain its first-ever Cotton Bowl berth as a member of the Southwest Conference, and the school's first appearance in the game since 1939.

GOLF

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Brett Ogle birdied the 18th hole Saturday to tie Steve Lowery for the lead heading into the final round of the wide-open Western Open.

Ogle shot a 3-under-par 69 and Lowery a 70 to move past second-round leader Jay Haas with a three-day total of 7-under 209. Haas led until the 16th hole but bogeyed the last two to fall one shot back. Bob Estes and Grant Waite were another stroke off the pace.

Tom Watson, looking for his first PGA Tour victory since 1987, headed a group of five golfers three behind the leaders.

The Ballpark has homey atmosphere

ALL-STAR GAME

ARLINGTON (AP) — When players from all 28 major league teams gather Tuesday at The Ballpark in Arlington for the All-Star game, several of them may look around the 1-year-old stadium and feel right at home.

Detroit players will instantly recognize a tribute to Tiger Stadium with The Ballpark's so-called Home Run Porch in right field. Red Sox players may notice a tricky, asymmetrical outfield much like Boston's Fenway Park.

Kansas City players may be comforted by the grassy hitter's backstop in center field, similar to Kauffman Stadium. Baltimore players will see a resemblance to Camden Yards, their modern home with a throwback look and feel.

There's always something to see or do at the $195 million Ballpark.

Hungry? Go to the upscale Diamond Club restaurant hidden behind windows in left field, or check out the view from Friday's Front Row Grill sports bar in right field. There's also plenty of concession stands with great names like Bambino's Pizza, Home Run Bakery and Cy Yogurts.

Want to know more about the game? Take a stroll through the Legends of the Game Baseball Museum and its learning center.

The museum and a sports art gallery are located in the part of the stadium that truly makes The Ballpark unique: there's a building inside.

Because the stadium is in suburban Arlington, a booming city midway between Dallas and Fort Worth, there were no warehouses or downtown buildings to use as a backdrop, as at Baltimore's Camden Yards and Denver's new Coors Field.

So architect David Schwarz decided to put in his own and use the four-story structure to connect the sections of seats in left and right fields. Tenants include the Texas Rangers team offices, a radio station, an orthodontist and the Troy Aikman Foundation.

The building was Schwarz's way of fitting a traditionally round facility into a square block, another nod to some of the great ballparks of yesteryear.

It fits in perfectly, and when people are on the balconies facing the field, it's hard not to think of fans in Chicago watching a game at Wrigley Field from atop their apartment buildings.

Surrounding the building are several old-fashioned billboards, but the sign that draws the most attention doesn't advertise anything, except a chance for sluggers to improve their wardrobe.

The "Hit it Here, Win A Free Suit" sign atop the second deck of Porch is marked at 501 feet, but likely is farther. There's no sponsor, although Texas Gov. George W. Bush, a Rangers part owner, once joked he'd give away one of his own.

For the really ambitious sluggers, Schwarz has added another target to swing at by leaving a sliver of daylight between the Porch and the right field seats. It's the only spot a ball literally can be hit out of the park.

So far, the stadium is a home run with fans.

The 49,178-seat park was sold out for 21 of 62 games last season. Even without the 20 games lost to the strike, Texas shattered its single-season attendance record by averaging 40,374 per night and with a total draw of 2,503,198. Like most teams, attendance is sagging this year. Texas was averaging only 26,485 going into this weekend.

Many of those fans parked in the north lot that used to be Arlington Stadium, an overgrown minor-league facility that was the Rangers' home for 22 seasons. The old park has been razed, except for a marquee near the highway.

Going into the 9-10 year-old Minor League City Tournament at Pampa's Optimist Park, the Celanese team completed the regular season with the best record, going 11-2. Team members are (front row, l-r) Tyson Moree, Matthew Woodruff, Derek Lewis, Tyrel Bolin, Jason Brown and Brian Denny; (second row, l-r) Zach Ferris, Tyler Howard, Daniel Heuston, Coy Devoll, Brodie Hall and Clint Dalrymple. Coaches are (from left) Ben Howard, Bill Heuston and Terry Hall.

Moose Lodge, AMT advance in 9-10 Minor Bambino Tournament

PAMPA — Moose Lodge defeated OCAW, 17-12, in the 9-10 Minor Bambino Tournament Thursday at Optimist Park.

Ryan Zemanek led Moose Lodge at the plate, going three for three with a double and a home run over the center field fence. Eddie Palma had two hits while Chance Crain, Blake Helms and Tyler Holmes each had a double for Moose Lodge. With one hit each were Matthew Robben and Garrett Johnston.

Leading OCAW was Max Simon, who was three for four, including a triple. Matt Jameson was two for three, including a triple. Hal Rogers and Aaron Smith had one hit each.

Zemanek was the winning pitcher, giving up three hits while striking out six and walking six. Cody Newman took the loss. He gave up nine hits while striking out three and walking six.

In other 9-10 tournament action, AMT defeated Mean Mother Motor Cars, 14-4.

Jordan Maxwell and Jordan Klaus with AMT teamed up to pitch a one-hitter in five innings of play. Maxwell struck out three batters in three innings and gave up three runs.

Klaus struck out six batters and gave up one run in two innings.

AMT hitters were led by Colin Bowers with a single, triple and an inside the park home run. Jordan Klaus had a double and triple; Jordan Maxwell had an inside the park home run and Ben Mulanax, a double. Jake Albus, Nathan Bruce and Dusty Lenderman had singles for AMT. Grant Biehler had the lone hit for MMMC.

Mark Garza and Ben Frogge combined for three strikeouts in four innings.

The District 14-15 year-old Tournament opened Saturday at Optimist Park with six teams entered in the double-elimination event.

The Pampa All-Stars played the Randall All-Stars Saturday night. The winner plays River Road at 7:30 tonight. The loser plays at 6 Monday night.

Becker, Sampras square off in men's Wimbledon final

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Boris Becker can already claim to be the greatest player at Wimbledon since Arthur Gore.

He wants more. Pitted today against two-time defending champion Pete Sampras, Becker will play in his seventh Wimbledon men's final, the most since the long-forgotten Gore made it for the eighth time in 1912.

Gore won three titles. Becker won the first of his three championships 10 years ago at age 17 to become Wimbledon's first unseeded and youngest champion.

Now, Becker hopes to stage an anniversary celebration at Sampras' expense.

"It was basically the thing everybody, especially in Germany, talked about the past two weeks," Becker said. "I had a hard time not thinking about that."

The stakes are considerable for Sampras as well. He could become the first player to win three consecutive Wimbledon men's titles since Bjorn Borg earned his fifth in a row in 1980.

"I'm ravenous," said Sampras, who sprawled Becker-like onto the grass in pursuit of shots five times during his semifinal victory over Goran Ivanisevic.

"This is the biggest tournament in the world, and you do whatever you can to win it. You dive, you scrap, you claw and do whatever you can to try to do it again."

Told of Sampras' comments, Becker asked for the definition of "ravenous," then said: "It seems like two hungry boys are going to play on Sunday."

Each summoned his best performance of the tournament in the semifinals. Sampras overcame 38 aces by Ivanisevic to win in five sets, while Becker rallied from a 6-2, 4-1 deficit to upset top-ranked Andre Agassi in four sets.

"That must probably be the best match I have ever had at Wimbledon," Becker said.

The 27-year-old Van Gogh lookalike may need another masterpiece to beat Sampras, who has a 5-2 record in Grand Slam finals and a 20-match winning streak at the All England Club.

"Pete does everything like Boris, except a little better," Agassi said. "Pete serves bigger, moves better, is a little better off the ground."

"The only thing that I think Boris does well that Pete might struggle with at times is Boris has a tendency to close you off. He won't make a lot of careless errors and let you sneak breaks back. Pete isn't that way, Pete can miss some high volleys."

In the computer rankings, the margin between the two players is slim. If the third-ranked Becker wins, he'll overtake the second-ranked Sampras. And Becker has won two of his past three meetings with Sampras, all last year.

Against Agassi, Becker often matched groundstrokes with the game's best baseliner. The rallies supported Becker's contention that he's a better, more complete player than the teen-ager who beat Kevin Curren in the 1985 Wimbledon final.

"Ten years ago, if I would have to play as many points from the back, I couldn't have done it," he said. "I wouldn't have the legs."

Few fans seemed distressed that Becker spoiled the anticipated all-American showdown between Agassi and Sampras. One year after stirring controversy at Wimbledon by receiving treatment from his trainer during a bathroom break, Becker has become the sentimental tournament favorite at his favorite tournament.

The proud German considers the All England Club his home. Its unique ambience somehow seems to make his serves faster, his volleys crisper, his resolve greater. Arthur Gore would understand.

"Nobody," Becker said, "should underestimate me at Wimbledon."

Dodgers' Nomo is one of few bright spots in Major League season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — His image is projected into the streets and shops of major Japanese cities via big-screen televisions, bringing scurrying pedestrians to a halt.

On this side of the Pacific, Hideo Nomo has Los Angeles in the grip of a tornado, packing power of up to 93 mph.

Fans can't get enough of the 26-year-old rookie pitcher who leads the National League with 119 strikeouts. Nomo has been one of the few bright spots in a baseball season that has seen many people turned off by last season's strike and cancellation of the World Series.

Not since Fernando Valenzuela arrived from Mexico in 1980, rolling his eyes toward the heavens on each pitch, has Dodger Stadium reverberated with such enthusiasm.

"I can't even imagine how excited all the fans are. I can't express it," Nomo said through a translator.

Lending an exotic air to the Nomo phenomenon is his status as the second Japanese player to make the majors since Masanori Murakami pitched for San Francisco in 1964-65.

Adding to his mystique is the lack of Dodgers games carried on local and national television, leaving Angelinos scrambling for hard-to-get seats on nights when Nomo pitches.

All this for a guy who had a loss in his first six games after arriving in Los Angeles with a sore shoulder. Nomo now is 6-1, including six consecutive victories, and a 1.99 ERA.

Pampa bicyclists finish second journey across Lone Star State

PAMPA — Dubbed the Trans-Texas Tour Team, Pampans Bob Davis, Fran Kludt and David Kludt conducted their second annual bicycle ride across Texas June 11 through June 17.

The route was from Sabine Pass in the extreme southeast corner of the state to Texline (in the northwest corner), 916 total miles. The daily ride mileage varied from 114 miles on the first day to 152 miles on the last, 131 miles per day average.

The routine consisted of Davis and Fran riding and David driving the support vehicle. Overnight stops were made at Livingston, Waco, Cisco, Paducah and Pampa.

Kludt said the trio spent slightly under 10 hours per day on the road. Kludt said the southeast-northwest route was chosen because he lives in Pampa (close to the end of the ride) and his parents live in Orange (close to the start of the ride).

This is the second consecutive year (Fran Kludt and David have made the journey across the Lone Star state.

"Bob and I initially wanted to see if we could complete a long ride, then decided to make it one that not everyone has already done. Two years ago, I knew no one who had even attempted a ride like this, and now I know of two people who have completed it twice along with their support manager."

David, Fran's son, drove the support vehicle that carried food, water, tools and spare items, while Fran's wife, Eileen, and youngest daughter, Amanda, assisted for two days in the middle of the ride.

"He (David) is the most experienced support person in this part of the country. He managed the supplies, kept the carbo fluids ready on ice, quickly replaced us during stops, and scouted ahead for bad roads or other problems," Kludt stated. "He typically would drive ahead and wait for us about 10 miles, unless he had to go for supplies, etc. When we decided that we had reached the ending point for the day, we marked the spot, loaded the bikes in the truck and drove to a nearby motel to shower out. Then we would look for a lot of food and a good night's rest, and go at it again in the morning."

Kludt said weight loss was a concern (they weighed at least twice daily) because of the possibility of dehydration.

"Between the two of us, we consumed from three to five gallons of water a day," he said. We also ate (fruit and energy bars) almost continuously while riding. Our weight did not change more than a pound for the duration of the trip, although I probably lost some fat and firmed some muscle for no net loss or gain."

The bicyclists wanted to show their versatility and reversed directions this year, riding from south to north instead of north to south.

"It also happened to fit in nicely with my family's summer schedule," Kludt said.

They finished the trip in seven days, compared to nine the year before, but the route this year was actually four miles longer and more difficult.

"The weather, however, was a mixed blessing," Kludt said. "The temperature was cooler than last year, but the wind was in our face for four days. The story line is, 'We are getting older and don't have as much time.'"

Among the highlights of the trip, Kludt said, were starting in the rain and crossing the Port Arthur Bridge; riding through the endless trees of the Big Thicket and endless hills through Huntsville; a sea of purple flowers outside Dublin; the beautiful farmland around Waco, and topping the Caprock east of Pampa and sleeping at home. Among the low lights, he said, were a late start the first day along with lighting and a head wind; a crash in the big thicket which ended the first day, losing touch with the support vehicle at Aspermont and the endless climb onto the Caprock after 100 miles to Wheeler; unbelievable feedlot smell outside Pringle; the 60 continuous miles of tough wind to Dalhart.

Kludt said it was hard to single out the most difficult part of the ride.

"It was probably the mental aspect. The physical demands were great, but with the exception of the injuries and saddle sores, you can train and get ready for them," he said. "However, the mental part is the toughest — getting up in the morning still sore and tired from yesterday (and the day before, etc.), and again tackling the longest ride of your life enthusiastically, but at the same time knowing that you will also have to do it all again tomorrow. The mental stress and worry will keep you from resting well at night. It begins to get better if you can make it through the fourth day, you will be recovering from the first day, and be close enough to the end to take heart and gain confidence."

Kludt said he contributed the successful trip to the blessings of the Lord Jesus Christ, proper training and preparation, and excellent ride support.

New indoor soccer facility under construction in Amarillo

AMARILLO — It's new! It's huge! And it will be fun! High Plains Indoor Soccer, a 23,100 square foot facility that contains a regulation size indoor soccer field, a concession area with seating, a video arcade game area, a practice field, and a sporting goods store all on the first floor is under construction at 33rd and Osage in Amarillo.

The soccer playing field has a special padded grass like carpet and is surrounded by laminated walls called dasher boards. On the spectator side, the top half of the dasher board has 1/2-inch thick tempered glass, which allows for safe game viewing. A net covers the playing field at a height of almost thirty feet in the center. The two-story facility also has a second floor that contains a children's play area complete with a video viewing area and additional seating. The fully air conditioned and heated facility can comfortably seat over 300 people and there is never an admission fee except for special events.

The concept of indoor soccer is similar to other team sports. Teams of up to 12 players will be grouped into leagues by age. Ages range from under six, (boys and girls), to 45 and older, (men, women and coed). Also planned are housewife leagues where child care is provided, and a walkers league where running is a foul.

Each player on a team pays a fee for a guaranteed eight games per season, typically one game per week. The top two teams in each league will then participate in a playoff on the ninth week. Trophies and medals will be awarded to each team member of the league's season champs. The concession will be stocked with soft drinks, health food and other snacks. The sporting goods store will contain a full line of soccer sporting goods for both the indoor and outdoor player. A top of the line sound system rounds out the new facility.

Leagues are now forming for the season that starts Sept. 4. For information, call 806-374-0902.

DiMaggio to be honored

ARLINGTON (AP) — A presentation to former New York Yankees great Joe DiMaggio will highlight the pregame festivities at Tuesday's All-Star game.

As part of a ceremony honoring major league players who served in the military during World War II, Secretary of the Togo West Jr. will make a presentation to DiMaggio, who missed three seasons while serving in the Army from 1943-45.

In addition, a 120-member chorus will sing patriotic songs and military jets will fly over The Ballpark in Arlington following the national anthem, to be sung by country star Lyle Lovett.

Pond management field day scheduled for Gray County

A pond management field day is slated for early August in Gray County, according to state wildlife biologists.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and Texas Wildlife Association, in conjunction with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Natural Resources Conservation Service, Texoma Fish Hatchery and Pan-Bio of Amarillo, will host a Pond Management Field Day at the Bill Gething Ranch on Saturday, Aug. 12, in Gray County, according to James Ray, waterfowl biologist for TPWD region one.

Registration will be at 7:30 a.m. with coffee and doughnuts, TPWD officials said. The program will begin at 8 a.m. and conclude at 3 p.m. with presentations on pond construction, fish stocking and management, aquatic vegetation control, wood duck management and riparian habitat management.

Two credits will be awarded to participants accruing Continuing Education Units (CEUs) through the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, he said.

According to Ray, TPWD field offices receive requests each year from landowners in the Rolling Plains for information on managing fish and wildlife habitats.

"This field day," Ray said, "is intended to bring landowners and resource specialists together to discuss pond and riparian habitat management that benefit both fish and wildlife. Though the primary emphasis of the field day is on fisheries management, presentations in the afternoon will focus more on wildlife considerations."

Management of riparian (creek and river bottom) habitats can enhance water quality, fisheries, and wildlife habitat, Ray said. Riparian habitats are among the most diverse wildlife habitats in this part of Texas.

"Proper management of these habitats has the potential to positively impact a greater number of plant and animal species than any other habitat type in the region," he said.

A registration fee of $10 per person includes lunch and refreshments, Ray said. Attendance is limited to the first 100 paid registrants.

Register by mailing the fee to: Texas Wildlife Association, 1635 NE Loop 410, Suite 108, San Antonio, TX 78209. Include address and telephone number. To register by phone, call 1-800-460-5494 with credit card number (Visa, Mastercard, or American Express).

For more information, contact the Texas Wildlife Association, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (806/655-3782 or 806/655-4341), the Gray County Extension Office or the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service Office in Pampa.

State Education Board approves Goals 2000 program

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite protests that the funding will mean federal meddling, the State Board of Education has approved an education program under which Texas schools could get millions more federal dollars.

Meanwhile, supporters of the funding application said the fears are unfounded.

"For the past 13 years as a school superintendent in Texas, I have been a proponent of local control. I have been an opponent of more mandates from the state or from the federal government," Education Commissioner Mike Moses said in recommending continued Texas participation in the federal Goals 2000 program.

"This is not an application that seeks to promote anything other than academic excellence in our schools," Moses said of Texas' plan.

The state board approved the program 10-5 Friday.

It will be monitored to ensure it doesn't require Texas schools to follow requirements that are unfunded or inconsistent with state policies, officials said.

The proposal, which is called Academics 2000, focuses on students' early mastery of basic academic skills.

Texas got about $7 million in the first year of the program, and would get about $29 million in the second year beginning July 1, according to information presented to the board.

At least 90 percent of funds must be awarded to school districts. The state already gets about $1.6 billion a year from the federal government for various programs, Moses said.

Besides applying for funding, Moses noted, the board action requests designation of Texas as an "Ed-Flex" state, which would free it from certain federal education regulations.

He also said the plan in no way promotes school-based health clinics, as feared by opponents. Board member Will Davis of Austin, among the plan's supporters, agreed.

Davis said he has carefully read the plan and "I can't for the life of me find any of the buzzwords that are giving everybody a stomachache."

But several board members, including Donna Ballard of The Woodlands, remained unconvinced.

"I cannot violate my conscience by ignoring the fundamental flaws I perceive of this educational restructuring attempt by the federal government," she said.

PHS Class of '50 to have reunion

The reunion of the Pampa High School Class of 1950 is set to begin Saturday morning on Aug. 12 with coffee at the Pampa Country Club. There will be a $3 fee for all participants.

Organizers said everyone is welcome to attend and visit class members.

A banquet is also scheduled at the country club for that evening.

Reunion organizers appreciate any assistance or information in locating the following class members: Barbara Amery, Jimmy Baines, Carl Norman Barber, Peggy Bogard, Betty Carroll Wilson, Bertie Cator Wells, Johnnie Dean, Mike Ellis, Marjetta Ford, Charles Gist, Lowell Grace, Betty Sue Greene, Patricia Harris, Mildred Hester, Jimmy Hyatt, George Kilpatrick, Bennie Lindsay, Jimmy Munn, John Nolan, John Shannon, Gwenda Shaw and Nancy Williams.

Please contact Dorothy Dixon Barrett at (806) 669-2048 if you have any details pertaining to these class members.

A friendly, smiling face

Chris Bradley's mother, Carolyn Bradley, said her son Chris once told her that the best part about having a job is the paycheck.

"It makes him equal to everybody else," she said.

Chris, 22, was one of the Pampa High School Senior Development Class students hired by a local business.

For the past three months, every Tuesday and Thursday from 9:30-11 a.m., Chris has been working at Country General, of which he said is, "A nice place to work."

"He had a job coach go in with him just for job training and then he was hired and he took the drug test just like any other employee," said Carolyn.

Chris had been in the job training program at Country General but he wasn't on the payroll. It wasn't until Charlie Fegley, Country General manager, came to Pampa that Chris began to draw a paycheck.

"He got along with everybody," said Fegley. "It seemed like the next step for him."

Most senior development students who work have a job coach or peer tutor who guides them while they are at a job but Fegley decided to ease the job coaches out and take the responsibility for training Chris.

"They said, 'You let us work with him' because they want to do it," said Rosemary Schiffman, PHS Senior Development class job training coordinator. "They don't expect the school or somebody else to train the employee. They do it themselves."

"It's very much one on one," she said.

"And that is unusual for a business," said Carolyn. "Because most of them want a job coach there. They are very comfortable with it."

"They (Country General)," want direct contact with him," said Schiffman. "It really is a nice situation."

Fegley said he decided to ease the job coach out so Chris could learn, "To get a sense of responsibility for himself."

Fegley had some experience working with disabled people at a store in Dumas which had a similar program.

"He gets along the public real well," said Fegley. "He's a real special young man."

"Everyone deserves an opportunity," said Fegley. "Chris is just one of those who has to work extra hard to get it."

"We really appreciate him," said Carolyn about Charlie. "And he seems to enjoy working with Chris very much."

"We've been making plugs for Country General all we can," she said. "I tell all my friends to go out there and buy."

Two of the job duties Chris said he enjoys doing are watering the plants — and pricing the candy. He also got to play "Safety Pup" at the petting zoo Country General had at the store a few weeks ago.

Chris enjoyed it so much, said his mother, he is hoping that he will be asked to do it again next year.

Chris is also learning how to get to work on his own and move about town.

"He takes Panhandle Transit to work," said Carolyn.

"It's the only way for (PHS) Senior Development class students to get to work," said Schiffman. Panhandle Transit has been instrumental in helping the students but since government funding to the shuttle service has been cut, the work schedules of the students had to be rearranged.

Carolyn said Chris is also attending the Sheltered Workshop here in Pampa.

She said the reasons why they moved here are the programs that are offered for the disabled.

"We had checked out the facilities and they had good programs for the disabled," said Carolyn. She was also impressed with the school system, in particular the PHS Senior Development program.

Through the PHS job program, students get hands on experience training at local businesses.

"We just do different jobs in different areas of town," said Betty Parsley, job coach for the program. She said it helps the students get experience to get paying jobs.

"This is an excellent program for students," said Parsley.

"It's a blessing," said Parsley about her job and the program. "I've never had a job more rewarding."

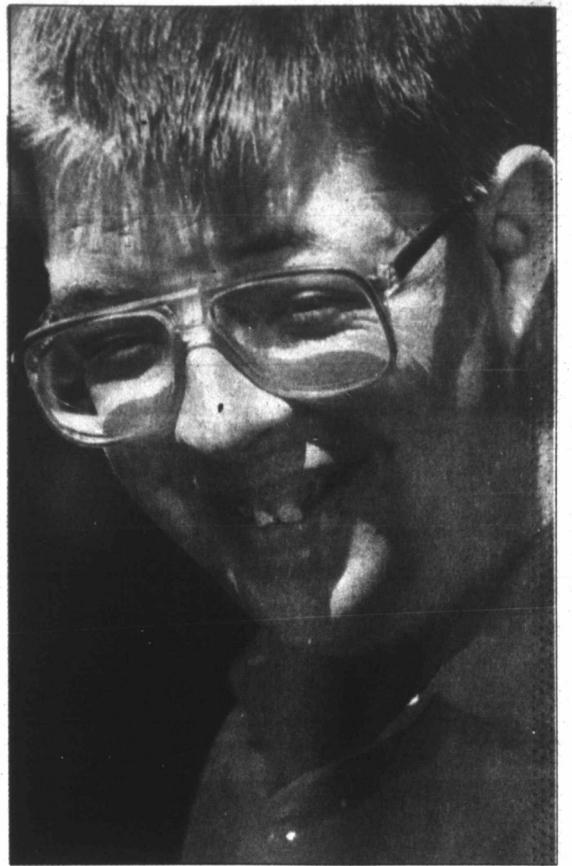

Still, for Chris, his paycheck carries that sense of equality he can share with everybody else, especially young adults.

"Can you tell them what you do with your paycheck," Carolyn asked Chris.

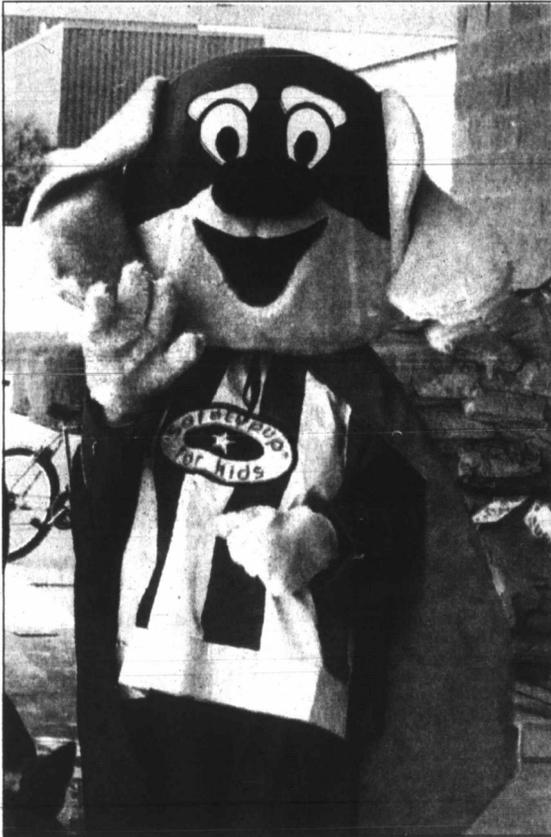

"Spend it," said Chris without a hint of hesitation. What he usually buys are compact disks, mostly rock and country western.

"He's very responsible," said his mother. "He has grown a lot as an individual."

"I believe Chris has taught me more than I taught him," said Carolyn. "He sees the world so clearly, so simply. He has an in-depth perception on how things are in the world. I wonder who is taking care of whom."

Interesting facts to note...

* A flash flood warning warns that flash flooding is imminent or in progress. Persons in the affected area should take necessary precautions immediately.

* A flash flood watch alerts the public that flash flooding is possible. Those in the affected area are urged to be ready to take additional precautions if a flash flood warning is issued or if flooding is observed. A "freeze" describes conditions when the temperature at or near the surface is expected to be below 32 degrees during the growing season.

Adjectives such as "severe" or "hard" are used if a cold spell exceeding two days is expected. A freeze may or may not be accompanied by the formation of frost. However, use of the term "freeze" usually is restricted for occasions when wind or other conditions prevent frost.

Syfrett-Gamble

The candles were lighted by Julie and Sam Gamble, sister and brother of the groom, both of Pampa.

Registering the guests was Tiffany Hoehne, cousin of the bride, of Dallas.

Providing music were Joyce Haynes of McLean and Jan Romack of Pampa.

A reception followed in the fellowship hall of the church.

Serving the guests were Georgia McPherson, Janet McCracken and Kathy Reynolds, all of McLean, and Tiffany Hoehne of Dallas.

The bride is a 1992 graduate of McLean High School and is attending McMurray University in Abilene.

The groom is a 1993 graduate of Pampa High School and is attending McMurray University in Abilene.

After a honeymoon to Dallas, the couple plan to reside in Clyde.

Communicating with hearing aid wearers

Tips for communicating with people who wear hearing aids

— Remember that hearing aids and other devices assist, but do not correct the hearing-impaired person's communication skills.

— Make sure you have the hearing-impaired person's attention before speaking.

— Speak in a normal voice; do not shout. The necessary increase in volume is provided by the hearing aid. Speaking loudly will not make your message any clearer and will likely distort it.

— Decrease the distance between yourself and the listener. The optimal speaking/listening distance is within six feet.

— Speak to the person face-to-face so facial expressions and gestures can be seen.

— Speak naturally, although slightly slower in rate. Rushing often results in slurred speech.

— Avoid chewing, eating, or covering your mouth with your hands when talking to a hearing-impaired person.

Bridal showers give brides-to-be a chance to relax

The bride-to-be of the '90s has a lot of things on her mind:

Finishing school, holding down a job, planning the wedding, and finding a place to live after the "I dos" have been spoken are possible areas of concern.

Fortunately, bridal showers are one place that the guest of honor can leave the planning to someone else.

The following list should come in handy when planning a shower for the future bride and/or groom:

— Wedding showers can begin as early as four months before the big day, especially for the bride who will have multiple showers.

— A shower theme is a good idea. It will live up the party and give the guests some gift ideas.

— The bride-to-be should arrive at the shower in plenty of time to introduce guests who may not know each other.

Advice to Assaulted Umpire Causes Readers to Cry Foul

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you before, but I have to comment that you made a major mistake in your answer to "Retired Ump in Atlanta" in your column. By saying, "Never remove your mask during an altercation," you implied that an umpire should stay ready to be struck, and then you joked that the guilty party should be traded to the Giants.

No umpire, referee or other sports official should ever be struck or even touched in anger by anyone. Any player who attacks an official should be ejected from the game, the team, and maybe even all organized sports for life.

An umpire is hired, or volunteers, to keep order and make decisions. Players and fans who threaten the safety of officials threaten all organized sports and cannot be tolerated!

DUSTEN GALBRAITH, SILVIS, ILL.

DEAR DUSTEN: Thank you for speaking out. The volume of letters I received criticizing my cavalier response to "Retired Ump in Atlanta" while decrying violence in (and out of) sports was noteworthy. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: If only half the stories I have heard are true, violence and intimidation against officials at amateur sporting events is a serious problem.

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

If I were "Retired Ump in Atlanta," I would have had any player who broke my nose with a punch arrested for assault and battery.

From your answer, I must assume that you have never been in a serious fight with someone hitting your face hard enough to break bones. It is not funny — and gender has nothing to do with it.

It is sad and strange when somebody who does the right thing is ridiculed as a wimp while the jerk of a ballplayer who attacked him is probably still on the team.

"Retired Ump's" fellow officials should have walked off the field, taken their comrade to the emergency room, and left two teams wondering how to finish the game with no officiating crew.

Tell "Retired Ump" that any idiot can get in a fight. It takes a real man to walk away from one.

(And if his friend thought that fighting was such a good idea, why didn't he jump into the fray?)
A.T.D. IN SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: The amazon who struck "Retired Ump in Atlanta" shouldn't be traded to the Giants; she should be sitting in jail for assault and battery! Can you imagine the hue and cry that would have gone up if a male player had struck a female umpire, even if the man were smaller than the woman? What makes it different in "Retired Ump's" case? The argument that men are more physically powerful than women can't be used because, in this case, the woman was stronger physically.

No matter how many civilized societies teach gentlemen from childhood that they should not hit women, being female is not a license to beat and abuse others. Violence is wrong no matter who's doing it.

A PEACEFUL WOMAN NEAR ATLANTA

DEAR PEACEFUL WOMAN AND A.T.D.: Of course you are right. Violence is violence regardless of which sex commits it. I should not have made a joke of it. No act of violence should be overlooked or made light of. My sincere apologies.

Horoscope

Monday, July 10, 1995

In the year ahead, you might be given greater responsibilities than usual at work. Initially, it might seem like a bum deal, but it will pay off later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If things don't go your way with co-workers today, you might consider resorting to unsavory tactics. If you give up and behave in this manner, you'll regret it later. Major changes are ahead for Cancer in the coming year. Send your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An associate with good intentions might make an unwise commitment on your behalf today. Keep a tight reign on your personal affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be upfront with your mate today, or it could create a lingering problem. Do not say you're going to do something one way, then go and do it differently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you are supposed to convey some important information today, don't trust it to your memory. Write down the salient points on paper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It might be difficult to keep your extravagant urges in check today. Try to stay away from stores that carry merchandise you can't presently afford.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your efforts to catch up with things you left undone last week, you might take on more than you can effectively manage. Rome wasn't built in a day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may be inclined to embellish some gossip you'll hear early in the day that you'll want to pass on to others. Resist dealing in hearsay.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone you like, but who is a bad risk for a loan, might ask you for financial assistance today. See if you can help this friend in other ways.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you are strongly motivated and enthusiastic today, difficult objectives can be achieved. However, if you lack motivation, all bets are off.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It could prove unwise if you count on others to handle your responsibilities or make excuses for you. Do what needs doing yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Diplomacy and tact might be required in your group endeavors today. Tempers may be short and factions could develop with opposing interests and views.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Mind your behavior today. The slightest infractions could be met with little sympathy or understanding, regardless of valid reasons.

Will Ty Herndon fans make the connection?

By JIM PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ty Herndon's lucky break may be that he's so new to country audiences that they have yet to put his face with his music.

In May the 33-year-old singer topped the charts with "What Mattered Most." In June he was arrested in Fort Worth for indecent exposure and drug possession.

The impact on his career is hard to measure, but at least initially his latest single is still climbing the charts, albeit slowly. "He's not known enough right now for people to necessarily make the connection," said Danny Murphy of Country Club Enterprises, which promotes records to 300 country music dance clubs.

"In clubs, a lot of people like a song, or don't, and really don't know who the artist is."

Music City News, a country music fan magazine, was preparing its first major article on Herndon when he was arrested. That's been shelved.

"The one thing that has stood out to me is I really haven't had much mail about this pro or con," said Lydia Dixon Hardin, MCN managing editor. "We've had I think one letter of support."

If the arrest isn't fatal to Herndon's career, the events in Gateway Park in Fort Worth, will still likely dog him for much of his public life.

A male undercover police officer claims the singer sat on a log and masturbated in front of him. The singer had amphetamines in his billfold, the officer said.

The handsome Herndon has been marketed as a romantic figure to women, who buy the majority of country music CDs. Radio stations all over the country are deciding now whether to air his second single "I Want My Goodbye Back."

Gail Franceschi, chart director for the industry trade magazine Cash Box, said stations are being cautious.

"The Midwest (stations) are watching close, and drug involvement can cut back on play."

"I Want My Goodbye Back" ranked No. 29 in the July 1 issue of Cash Box, up from 32 the week before. It retained its bullet, meaning enough stations have begun airing it to maintain upward momentum.

"It's a great record," Franceschi said, "but there's no way to predict how this (Herndon's arrest) will affect it."

Herndon has worked since he was a teenager to make it as a country singer. He sang at the Opryland U.S.A. theme park and on local Nashville television for years. He won the top prize for male vocalist on "Star Search" in 1983, and was an early member of the band that eventually became Diamond Rio.

By 1989, he still didn't have a record deal and moved back to Texas. There, he matured as a performer in the Dallas club scene and was named Texas Entertainer of the year in 1993.

Epic Records took notice, signed him up and put out the album "What Mattered Most" earlier this year. The single went No. 1, and Herndon was positioned last month as a mature, seasoned entertainer fully ready to capitalize on the hit.

Interviewed the week that "What Mattered Most" went No. 1, Herndon was tired, but ebullient at the turn of events.

"I'll do everything I can while this is going on 'cause there's a certain amount of respect that it deserves when it gets to this level," Herndon said.

He spoke of the bad times when he left Nashville, and why he kept going.

"It never stopped me from believing in the music and wanting to do it and the driving force in me, that burning thing right in your gut."

"You could have just been run over by a truck, that says you're never gonna do this. That would make you get up and then make a phone call, no matter how small the opportunity... It's almost like an addiction, really."

One-stop federal service center

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials hope a prototype service center that puts numerous federal agencies under one roof makes it easier for small business operators to deal with the maze of government bureaucracy.

The new one-stop federal center, dubbed the U.S. General Store for Small Business, is a result of the National Performance Review, a task force headed by Vice President Al Gore to make government more efficient.

"Small business owners across the country have told me dealing with the federal government can be a nightmare," Gore said in a statement read by Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Margaret Richardson. "Small business owners here will get answers, not more red tape."

The store allows small business operators to consult with about 20 federal agencies about licenses, regulation and loans all at once rather than visit individual offices scattered around Houston. At the center, they'll deal with one person competent to answer questions about each agency rather than a separate person for each agency.

Greg Woods, a team leader with the National Performance

Review, said small business operators around the country made it clear they were unhappy dealing with bureaucracy.

"This to us is a very important departure from the way government has done business in the past," he said. "If the customers in Houston like this store, we'll turn it into a national chain."

The store, in a remodeled former shopping center, more resembles a bank than a government office, with cubicles, comfortable chairs and computer terminals. Customers also enjoy the benefit of free parking, something lacking at federal offices in downtown Houston.

Agencies represented include Housing and Urban Development, Customs, Small Business Administration, Environmental Protection Agency, Immigration and Naturalization, IRS, Social Security, Occupational Safety and Health and others.

"A center like this is going to be so efficient," Betty Maldonado, who runs her own small business, said. "It will be so wonderful to come to one place instead of spending days and sometimes weeks trying to take care of our business."

GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION

That God has a plan of salvation for man is evident from several passages of scripture. The prophet Jeremiah predicted that God would make a new covenant after the days of the first covenant (Jer. 31:31-34). The new covenant, or disposition or will, was delivered after the death of Jesus Christ which made it effective (Heb. 9:11-18). In this new covenant the conditions of eternal salvation are clearly stated. For example, one must believe in God because without faith it is impossible to please Him (Heb. 11:6). One must also believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God (Jn. 8:24). One must repent of sins (Acts 17:30-31.) One must confess his belief that Jesus Christ is the Son of God (Acts 8:37.) One must be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38.) As a Christian, one must live soberly, righteously and godly in this world (Titus 2:11-12).

This simple plan is revealed in the gospel. The apostle Paul wrote: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is revealed the righteousness of God from faith unto faith: as it is written, But the righteous shall live by faith." (Rom. 1:16-17.) To the Ephesian brethren, Paul wrote that the gospel which he preached was according to the eternal purpose which God purposed in Christ Jesus (Eph. 3:8-11.) Jesus said He came to seek and to save that which was lost (Lk. 19:10.)

On the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, the apostles of Christ began to preach God's plan of salvation. Some three thousand Jews repented of their sins and were baptized for the remission of those sins (Acts 2.) Sometime later the gospel was preached to the household of Cornelius, a Gentile (Acts 10.) In the book of Acts, we read of many people who heard, believed and obeyed this simple plan of salvation. From those days down to the present time that same message has been preached and is still preached. Those who hear, believe and obey God's simple plan today become members of the same church that believers were members of then, the church of Jesus Christ.

New method leads to first-time minority victories

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

ROTAN (AP) — Something unprecedented happened the last time West Texans here turned out to vote.

Two Hispanic candidates won seats on the city council. Another Hispanic got elected to the school board.

Prior to May 6 — the day cumulative voting made its debut in Rotan — minorities had never won anything at the polls.

So it's no surprise, really, that this one-stoplight town harbors some hostility over a ballot method that critics label unfair and bewildering.

"This country was founded on one vote for every person. I don't see no sense in changing it, messing it up," said barber John Price on Main Street, a tractor-traveled strip of shops.

He said his haircut customers had a lot to say about cumulative voting and the lawsuits that prompted its adoption in Rotan.

"Most all the people thought it sort of stunk," Price said.

Twenty-seven Texas jurisdictions — including the city of Rotan and Rotan Independent School District — have taken up cumulative voting since 1991.

It works like this: If five seats are open, for example, voters get five votes they may spread around or "plump" upon a single candidate. Its point is to concentrate the voting power of minorities.

"It did what it was supposed to do. It worked," said Ruben Garza, president of the Fisher County chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Garza said minority candidates didn't stand a chance without cumulative voting, even though blacks and Hispanics make up 36 percent of Rotan's 1,913 residents.

LULAC had sued the city and school district in 1994 over their large formats that LULAC said diluted the minority voice. Cumulative voting offered a way to settle the lawsuits.

"Everybody was watching," said Garza, who had run unsuccessfully several times himself. "Was it going to make a difference, or will it be the same thing?"

An education effort took hold in Rotan, about 60 miles northwest of Abilene, as city officials called a town meeting to explain the new process.

LULAC targeted Hispanics with voter-registration drives, radio ads and rides to the polls on Election Day. The result: three minorities elected.

Observers say cumulative voting won't pay off like that without similar mobilization and "plumping" of ballots.

"Cumulative voting does not amount to a 'minority set-aside program,'" sociologist Bob Brischetto wrote in a study he compiled of last month's elections in 16 jurisdictions, most of them in West Texas.

"There are no guaranteed minority positions; a group must earn them by organizing," he wrote.

In nine of the 16 jurisdictions, minority candidates won. In the seven where they lost, the minority voters didn't organize.

Brischetto conducted his study with help from the Hispanic Research Center at the University of Texas at San Antonio: Pollsters interviewed 3,615 voters to see what they thought of cumulative voting.

His findings pointed to a pattern of racial polarization.

Black and Hispanic voters overwhelmingly agreed that the method was fair; some whites disagreed. Most voters seemed to understand the concept.

Rolando Rios, the San Antonio attorney who files voting-rights lawsuits for LULAC, described cumulative voting as a way to democratically insert minority participation into majority rule.

"Every person is treated exactly the same, so how can it be a violation" of one man, one vote, Rios asked.

"It's a new idea," he said. "Whenever something is new, people get all nervous about it. But it's really very fair."

Consider these sketches from cumulative-voting sites May 6:

— Friona city manager Paula Wilson said numerous confused voters spoiled their ballots. Hispanics accounted for only 8.2 percent of the Panhandle town's voters, although they make up 51 percent of the population. The only Hispanic candidate for city council didn't win.

"The majority of the Hispanic people are not unhappy with the government and the way it's being run," Ms. Wilson explained.

— In Earth, another Panhandle town where Hispanics make up 51 percent of the population, two Hispanics lost their bids for city council. City Secretary Noel Pittman said voter turnout among Hispanic voters was extremely low, despite cumulative voting. "It wasn't an issue, just not an issue at all," she said.

— Veloria Nanze became the first black elected to the board of East Texas' Atlanta Independent School District. Brischetto's study found that fewer than 3 percent of whites cast even one of their votes for her; but 94 percent of all votes cast by blacks went in her favor.

Brischetto points out that cumulative voting attracted a national storm of bad press in 1993 during the short time that Lani Guinier spent in line for the Justice Department's civil rights post. President Clinton withdrew his nomination amid criticism over some of Ms. Guinier's writings on ways to weight minority votes.

Brischetto characterizes the opposition in eloquent terms.

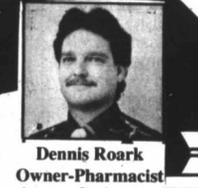

"If any numeric minority — racial, gender, country-club crowd, Bubbas, the militia — meets the magic threshold and votes as a bloc, they can elect a candidate of their choice," he concluded his study. "Perhaps this last point is why the system is so controversial."

High Plains offers free Otoscan appointments

Thea Beck and the hearing care professionals at High Plains Hearing Aid Center take pride in providing their customers with the best possible care. They evaluate everything new that comes on the market and offer those products and services which have proven beneficial to their customers.

During the month of July, High Plains Hearing Aid Center will offer free Otoscan appointments.

This safe procedure allows Thea to record your ear's condition in a color image clearer than an X-ray. You will be able to observe your outer ear, ear canal and ear drum on the Otoscope's color monitor. The Otoscan may be helpful in the early detection of developing conditions which may need attention.

During this special event Mrs. Beck will be able to answer any questions and give information about the Miniscope hearing aid (the latest aid available) and other new technology. To guarantee your personal appointment, it is advisable to call 665-6246 or 1-800-753-1696 to reserve your time.

If a hearing aid is necessary, a Miniscope hearing instrument may be the best choice. The newest in hearing aid technology, the Miniscope hearing instrument is so small it's like a contact lens for the ears. Because of its deep ear canal placement, it may barely be visible to others.

If you need a hearing aid or suspect you may have a hearing problem, visit High Plains Hearing Aid Center at 721 W. Kingsmill or call Thea or a member of her staff at 665-6246 for an appointment. If you like, you can call one of their offices or service centers conveniently located in area towns toll free at 1-800-753-1696.

An Otoscan appointment is an opportunity to learn more about your hearing health with no obligation. If you do need a hearing aid, High Plains Hearing Aid Center can offer you the finest equipment available and include the services of people with long experience in the hearing aid field. Your hearing is too valuable to risk with cheap equipment and dispensers who may or may not have the background to offer you the service you deserve. For service you can trust, put your trust in High Plains Hearing Aid Center.

The Muppets are going to Treasure Island

By SUE LEEMAN
 Associated Press Writer

SHEPPERTON, England (AP) — Ahoy there, me hearties! It's the Muppets at sea.

You'll find them aboard a galleon: Kermit in a curled gray wig and frock coat with tricorn hat, Miss Piggy in full skirts with corset. And Fozzie Bear? Oh, Fozzie Bear is a vision in the lace and velvet costume of an 18th-century squire.

So just what is this latest Muppet caper?

The fuzzy troupe is in Britain filming The Muppet Treasure Island, very loosely based on Robert Louis Stevenson's rollicking adventure yarn of pirates and treasure, intrigue and disappointment.

There are more human stars than in other Muppet feature movies. But as usual, those megastars Kermit and Miss Piggy just hog the limelight.

"I look kind of authoritative, a noble captain of the sea," Kermit recently confided during a break in filming. As Captain Smollet, he commands the mighty galleon Hispaniola which takes kitchen lad Jim Hawkins in search for treasure.

"We all enjoy playing these characters in classical literature. And, of course, it's a very good story."

Miss Piggy is Benjamin Gunn, Kermit's long lost love. She's also the verbal, voluptuous love goddess Boom Sha-Ka-La-Ka-La, who is worshipped by the inhabitants of Treasure Island and rides a real elephant. As usual, it is Kermit's love she craves.

"Yes, we have a romantic interest in each other in the film," says Kermit with a small sigh. "There are no love scenes, although we do hang upside down together facing death. ... But in our personal lives, we have gone our separate ways."

Fozzie plays the dumb but genial Squire Trelawny, owner of the Hispaniola. Curly beaked Gonzo, and Rizzo the rat are the sailor sidekicks of the good-natured Jim, played by English schoolboy Kevin Bishop.

And what about the humans, playing alongside what actor Tim Curry, cast as the evil pirate Long John Silver, calls "the most accomplished scene-stealers in the world?"

"But it is enormous fun, and you find yourself talking to these creatures made of felt, having RELATIONSHIPS with them," says Curry, best known for The Rocky Horror Picture Show.

With Curry are Scottish comedian Billy Connolly playing Billy Bones, who in his dying moment gives Jim a treasure map, and Jennifer Saunders, creator and star of the British hit comedy "Absolutely Fabulous," who is inn owner Mrs. Blunderidge.

Jim Henson Productions Inc. is making the picture over three months at the Shepperton lot, 20 miles west of London.

It was here that the company produced The Muppet Christmas Carol in 1992, the Muppets' first feature film after the sudden death in May 1990 of creator Jim Henson.

Brian Henson, Jim's eldest son, who took control of Jim Henson Productions after his father's death, directs The Muppet Treasure Island and also produces, in collaboration with Martin G. Baker.

The film, written by Jerry Juhl, Jim Hart and Kirk Thatcher, will be released in the United States in February.

The family owned company, which keeps most financial information secret, has not divulged the budget.

Back on the lot, set builders work on five stages, including a 40-foot wood and fiberglass galleon and a beach-encrusted tropical island, where Miss Piggy romps with her acolytes.

A pair of rings pivoting on axes set at right angles rocked the set to simulate the swaying of a ship. It was so realistic that several members of the film crew felt seasick.

"I've been just a little greener than usual," said Kermit. "But, after all, I came from a swamp, so I am sorta used to water. ..."

'Apollo 13'

It was April 1970, and the greatest adventure of the 20th century was winding down. The great events already had happened — the first space travel, the landing on the moon. By the time Apollo was launched for another moon landing, the three TV networks didn't even carry the telecast live.

Then came the laconic signal: "Houston, we have a problem."

Big problem. An explosion caused the loss of oxygen, power and guidance. Not only was the moon landing scrubbed, there was the danger that the three space travelers would burn or freeze, or be launched into a permanent orbit.

Those chilling April days are told with rare skill in Ron Howard's Apollo 13, with Tom Hanks as mission commander Jim Lovell. Space travel may seem like old stuff to members of today's generation, but anyone would need to be callous indeed not to be moved by this real-life adventure.

The basic events are told with the precision of a scientific exercise, but the human elements aren't overlooked. The camera focuses on the ordeal of the astronauts' families, especially Lovell's wife, Marilyn (Kathleen Quinlan), and her children.

The original crew is Lovell, Fred Haise (Bill Paxton) and Ken Mattingly (Gary Sinise). But Mattingly is diagnosed with measles (which he didn't have) and has to be grounded. The brash Jack Swigert (Kevin Bacon) takes his place.

The launch goes successfully, and all is serene until the "problem" develops. That's when Mission Control swings into action. The head man is Gene Kranz (Ed Harris) who oversees a sometimes unruly swarm of scientists, technicians and engineers. He must harness their brains and energies to find a way to bring the three astronauts back to Earth.

Apollo 13 amounts to an amazing accomplishment by director Howard and producer Brian Grazer. The publicity notes state proudly that "every single shot of the film is original." In other words, no old stuff from the original Apollo 13 or any other flight. The verisimilitude is astounding.

William Broyles Jr. and Al Reinert wrote the script, which is based on the book Lost Moon, by Lovell and Jeffrey Kluger. The only flaws are the overly technical language and a bit too much schmaltz in the family scenes.

Tom Hanks is obviously on a roll. His Jim Lovell won't win him a third Academy Award, but he'll make even more friends with his laid-back heroics. Paxton, Bacon and Sinise are excellent. Harris is a standout as head honcho at Mission Control.

The Universal Pictures release is rated PG, perhaps for intensity and minor swear words. Running time: 140 minutes

'Species'

In the Alien trilogy, the biggest fear was that the creature would make it to Earth and multiply.

In Species, MGM's excellent new sci-fi thriller, an even more dangerous alien is already among us. She's Sil, a feral survival machine with an angelic face who is driven by an unrelenting desire to procreate.

Sil was created by scientist Xavier Fitch (Ben Kingsley) in a secret Utah laboratory. Using so-called "friendly" instructions relayed from outer space, he makes a mixture of human and alien DNA. The resulting life form grows into a seemingly normal 14-year-old girl within weeks. But when videotape reveals spikes protruding out of Sil's back while she sleeps, a tearful Fitch decides to exterminate his creation.

Sil escapes into the desert and makes her way to Los Angeles. By the time she arrives, the creature has matured into a stunning 20-year-old woman (Natasha Henstridge).

So the secretive Fitch assembles a crack team to hunt down Sil. There's Preston Lennox (Michael Madsen), a former CIA operative, Dan Smithson (Forest Whitaker), an empath who can understand the emotions of other living beings, molecular biologist Dr. Laura Baker (Marg Helgenberger), and Dr. Stephen Arden (Alfred Molina), a Harvard anthropologist.

Their problem is that Sil has all the wall-scaling, flesh-tearing "gifts" of the old "Alien" plus a new weapon: the ability to seduce and draw willing victims into a deadly embrace.

Designed by H.R. Giger, who won an Academy Award for conceiving the creature in Alien, Sil is a mutating melange of black, translucent skin, exotic human female components and inhuman qualities. She skitters like a crab, scales walls like a spider and zaps victims with octopus-like tentacles.

In her human form, the cunning Sil melds seamlessly into the decadent L.A. club scene. As Arden points out, Los Angeles, with its mobile population, is the perfect hideaway. "Very little in this town is taboo or unacceptable," he says.

As she searches for a suitable mate, Sil cuts a swathe through a few Hollywood smoothies and brutally annihilates any perceived female competition.

In a final battle, Sil faces off against Fitch's team in the sewers beneath L.A.'s Biltmore Hotel.

Director Roger Donaldson (No Way Out, The Getaway) maintains the pace and tension throughout the movie without allowing the special effects to drown out the story. He includes a dramatic jump cut from the dripping alien goo of Sil's cocoon to a delicious shot of the sleeky actress in her lacy underwear.

The pick-up and date scenes from scriptwriter Dennis Feldman inject witty, cathartic humor into the thriller.

Newcomer Henstridge is perfect as a lethal creature with no conscience. Driven by base instincts — survive, eat, procreate — there's a creepy insect coldness behind her beautiful eyes.

The only annoying note is the empathy, well played by Whitaker, but a character clearly created to keep the team from getting too scientific in its search and destroy mission.

In a summer of bombastic "blockbuster" movies, Donaldson is a refreshingly restrained and disciplined director. The special effects, actors and humor blend smoothly — no one part gets in the way of story and action.

Species runs 111 minutes and is rated R. The movie is produced by Frank Mancuso Jr. and Dennis Feldman. The visual effects were supervised by Richard Edlund with make-up effects created by Steve Johnson.

Scientists look to pests for control of fire ants

KERRVILLE - Cattle producers attending Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association's summer board of directors meeting here earlier this month were told the eradication of imported fire ants is highly unlikely, if not impossible, and that effective chemical control is not likely in the near future.

Dr. Lloyd W. Morrison with the Fire Ant Lab at Breckenridge Field Laboratory at the University of Texas at Austin, said that they are looking instead for highly species-specific biological control agents (other organisms which are natural enemies of the imported fire ant).

Morrison said that since its introduction into the United States from South America some six decades ago, the imported fire ant has spread across approximately 250 million acres in the southeastern and south central United States and now occupies about half of Texas.

"Despite millions of dollars spent on the development and application of chemicals, the imported fire ants persists and continues to spread westward over the state," Morrison said.

"Although pesticides can effectively control the imported fire ant over small areas (a backyard), it is not cost-effective to apply pesticides over larger areas (range lands and wild lands)," he explained. "And once pesticide application is discontinued, imported fire ants usually return in greater numbers than before."

The Breckenridge Lab is studying the phorid fly (flies of the genus Pseudacteon, family Phoridae) which are natural predators of fire ants in South America.

"Ultimately, if our research on phorids reveals them to be as effective biological control agents as they currently appear to be, we intend to mass rear selected species in our greenhouse and release them over large areas for the purposes of controlling the imported fire ant," Morrison explained.

NAFTA benefits cattle trade

KERRVILLE - The Texas Panhandle and western Oklahoma should benefit from cattle trade with Mexico in the post-NAFTA period.

Cattlemen attending Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association's summer board of directors meeting at the YO Ranch Holiday Inn here last week were told to expect major changes effects of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Trade with Mexico commanded a lot of attention from TSCRA members concerned about a depressed cattle market. Dr. Raymond E. Dietrich, with the department of agricultural economics at Texas A&M University at College Station, reported on the results of a study to analyze the impact of the North American Free Trade Agreement on the competitiveness of beef fabrication, packaging and trade among 41 regions in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

"The study shows that the North American beef industry can anticipate major changes in regional competitive position, in location of optimal markets, least-cost distribution routes, and volumes of beef merchandized by fabrication/packaging systems as the beef industry adjusts to NAFTA and as economic, production and demographic factors undergo change," Dietrich said.

The study revealed that the Texas-Oklahoma Panhandle and Colorado enjoy a location advantage for shipping boxed beef to Mexico and will likely enjoy the most immediate benefits from NAFTA, Dietrich said.

Alberta, Canada, which is located substantially closer to the U.S. West Coast beef market, will become a major competitor for the West Coast beef market, he added. Prior to NAFTA, that market was supplied primarily by U.S. beef producers located in Colorado, nearby western states and the Texas-Oklahoma Panhandles, he said.

Good news: Maybe eggs aren't so bad for you

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

The egg taboo is beginning to crack.

Perhaps no idea has grown more fixed in the culinary consciousness over the past generation than the evils of eggs. Two over easy, once the foundation of a good breakfast, are a forbidden indulgence for many, enjoyed guiltily if at all.

The reasoning is simple. Cholesterol is bad for the heart. Since eggs have lots of cholesterol, they must be bad, too.

Clearly plenty of Americans have bought this line of thought. Annual consumption has fallen from 320 eggs per person in 1960 to 235 now.

Many experts believe that eggs have been unfairly demonized. A consensus is growing that eggs are not such bad food after all.

A three-egg omelet is unlikely to slide into the good-for-you category of five-grain bread and celery sticks. The blanket damnation of eggs is quietly being de-emphasized by the dietary gurus who set national nutritional policies and ultimately influence what all of us eat.

These experts recommend that people who already have high blood cholesterol levels should continue to steer away from eggs. So should those with a strong family history of coronary artery disease.

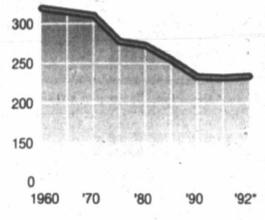

Some of them are also starting to suggest that many healthy folks with blood cholesterol levels under 200 milligrams per deciliter can probably eat an egg or two a day without worry, especially if they know their HDL levels - the so-called good cholesterol - are reasonably high.

Even those who want to keep the public from switching back to Experts suggest that many healthy folks with blood cholesterol levels under 200 milligrams per deciliter can probably eat an egg or two a day without worry, especially if they know their HDL levels - the so-called good cholesterol - are reasonably high.

Per capita consumption of shell eggs and egg products in the U.S.

One large egg contains:

- Protein: 6 grams
- Cholesterol: 213 milligrams
- Calories: 75
- Sodium: 65 milligrams
- Carbohydrates: 1 gram
- Total fat: 5 grams, including 1.6 grams saturated fat

Source: Egg Nutrition Center AP/Trace Tso

eggs agree that saturated fat are far bigger villains than dietary cholesterol. Obesity, smoking, high blood pressure and lack of exercise are worse, too.

"For the majority of people, taking eggs out of the diet does nothing," said Dr. Robert Nicolosi of the University of Massachusetts in Lowell, who chaired a recent American Heart Association conference on the links between diet and cholesterol.

The cholesterol that people eat has little impact on the cholesterol in their bloodstreams. Eating an egg typically raises cholesterol only slightly for most people.

Dr. Henry Ginsberg of Columbia University experimented on healthy young medical students who were on low-fat diets. For each egg eaten, the men's cholesterol rose an average three milligrams, and the women's went up four.

The body can make all the cholesterol it needs in the liver. Only about 25 percent of the cholesterol in the bloodstream comes directly from food. When cholesterol consumption goes up, the liver makes less, and the body takes in less of it through the digestive tract, as well.

A stunning example of this built-in control was the case of an 88-year-old man written up in a medical journal a few years ago. He ate 25 eggs a day for 15 years, yet his blood cholesterol level was below 200.

Some folks are sensitive to dietary cholesterol. They are responders. Eating an egg makes their cholesterol go up enough to worry about.

"What has caused confusion is that the response varies so much from one person to another," said Dr. Henry McGill of the University of Texas at San Antonio. "Close to half of the population have a biologically insignificant rise in cholesterol" when they eat cholesterol-laden food. "But there is always a group who respond with a dramatic rise."

In Ginsberg's experiment, a few of the volunteers' cholesterol actually fell when they ate eggs. Some stayed the same, while several went up more than twice the average. Perhaps one-third of the population are thought to be moderate to severe responders to dietary cholesterol.

Complicating all this even more, there is no easy way to tell who is a responder, and who is not. Responders can become non-responders over time, and vice versa. When Ginsberg repeated his experiment on the same people two years later, he found that only one-third responded the same way.

Even if most people suffer no ill effects when they eat eggs, policy makers are loathe to tinker with official pronouncements. Those simple dietary rules have worked well over the years. Since the early 1960s, Americans' blood cholesterol levels have fallen from an average of 220 to the current 205.

The regimen many people try to follow is the heart association's Step 1 diet. It recommends that everyone over age 2 consume less than 30 percent of their calories from fat and less than 10 percent from saturated fat. It suggests a dietary cholesterol intake of less than 300 milligrams a day and no more than four egg yolks a week.

One large egg contains 215 milligrams of cholesterol, which is concentrated in the yolk. An egg is more than cholesterol. It is an excellent source of protein, low-fat and a good choice for dieters.

Eggs are cheap, available everywhere, fixable in all sorts of interesting ways and easy to chew and digest.

All of this leads to one of the basic dilemmas of setting across-the-board nutritional rules. No one is truly average, especially in the way their bodies handle cholesterol. The heart association's 300-milligram-a-day limit may be needlessly strict for half to two-thirds of the population and not rigid enough for the rest.

Cattle producers warned about rabies epidemics

KERRVILLE - Cattle producers attending Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association's summer board of directors meeting were warned about rabies epidemics approaching metropolitan areas.

Gathering at the YO Ranch Holiday Inn here last week, more than 250 TSCRA board members, committee members, spouses and guests attended the two-day meeting.

Cattle producers were warned that two ongoing rabies epizootic (epidemics among animals) which were declared a state health emergency in 1994 are now approaching large metropolitan areas and could pose a threat to humans if preventive steps are not taken.

Dr. Keith Clark of the Texas Department of Health said that an epizootic of canine rabies which began in Starr and Hidalgo Counties in South Texas in 1988 has steadily moved northward and now involves 18 counties. During the past seven years 216 dogs, 270 coyotes, 15 cats, 15 raccoons, seven cows, three bobcats, three horses, one goat and one skunk have been confirmed positive for canine rabies.

An epizootic of gray fox rabies which began in Sutton County in 1988, rapidly spread to 22 counties with 260 cases confirmed through 1993. There was a dramatic upsurge in 1994, with 13 additional counties becoming involved and 264 rabies case being recorded.

Clark advised that more domestic animals should be vaccinated to help provide a barrier between rabid wild animals and humans.

USDA to allow avocado import

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department has proposed to allow imports of fresh Hass avocado fruit grown in approved orchards in Michoacan, Mexico.

The imports would be subject to pest surveys along with special inspection, shipping and packinghouse procedures.

Imports would be restricted to Northeastern states where climatic conditions would prevent pest survival if any pests happened to accompany a shipment.

Now, Hass avocados from Mexico are allowed only into Alaska.

Imports would be allowed in the Northeast only during late autumn and winter months, which would further decrease the risk of pest escape and survival, according to the department.

Five public hearings on the proposal will be held between Aug. 17 and 31. The first two hearings will take place in Washington.

The Market Forecaster

By George Kleinman

WHEAT - (BULL)

Outlook: The action in the wheat market has been, in a word, frenzied yet impressive over the past few weeks. Unlike the corn or beans, the corrections in price appear to come inter-day rather than over several days.

With action like this, don't be surprised to see vicious breaks when you least expect them - this market is not for the faint of heart. However, I'd look at them as buying opportunities. The long-term bias remains bullish based on the tightest domestic stocks in relation to usage in the USDA data base.

While all wheat varieties should remain firm, I'd look for the higher protein spring wheat [Minneapolis market] to lead the way.

Strategy: Hedgers: Puts have, without a doubt, been a better way hedge this year than forward contracting or shorting futures due to their limited risk feature. They allow for unlimited upside potential, which is what's needed in markets like this.

For those of you harvesting now, the market's telling you it wants your wheat. Let them have it, then if you still want to own wheat do it via the purchase of call options. This still allows you to own wheat on paper, but locks in a price floor. Meanwhile, you sold at good prices and have the use of the cash, assuming you've had a decent crop.

Traders: If you took our recommendation to buy the first 20¢ break from the top, then you're long September Chicago at $4.26, Kansas at $4.45 or Minneapolis at $4.35. Risk 15¢ for a 45¢ profit objective. Also look to buy Minneapolis September and sell the Chicago at a spread difference of 12¢ or less. Risk to 0 for a 40¢ objective.

CORN - (BULL)
Outlook: Corn is in a classic demand-pull market which makes for eager buyers on price breaks. Even though we've already experienced higher price highs than all of last year, and the crop has again averted disaster just in the nick of time with the recent rains.

I don't feel this market is like last year's. Last year, we peaked early because the market was focused on supply - demand was deemphasized. This year feed grain consumption should be the best this decade since the livestock numbers are record high. Plus exports should remain brisk because China, Asia's biggest exporter last year, is an importer this year. The next weather scare to come along should push prices over $3 on the December futures.

Strategy: Hedgers: Even though I'm still bullish, we've seen the first sign of a possible trend reversal and it may be prudent to start a new crop hedging program. I would use the September 280 puts which should cost approximately 10¢/bushel. Consider 25 percent of new crop production at this time and hope we're wrong in buying this form of price insurance this early.

Many of you still own the September 2.70 calls to maintain ownership of previously sold old crop supplies. These were fully paid for with profits on previously owned July 2.50 calls. Hold.

Traders: You still own December futures at an adjusted price [includes July net futures profits before the roll] of $2.57. We've placed the risk point relatively wide - at a close under $2.65, because we anticipated a price correction at some point. It's come [and hopefully gone] by the time you read this.

CATTLE - (BULL)
Outlook: It's time for an about face - at least temporarily. I've been bearish cattle based on the supply outlook. The USDA tells us there's 23 percent more cattle on feed than last year. However, demand for beef has been excellent. The packers are still making enormous profits and can afford to pay up for cattle. What's most impressive is the weights are down quite a bit versus the average.

Whatever the reason, this is providing less supply to the market now so we'll go with the fact rather than the statistics. The bull's back in the box.

Strategy: Hedgers: Cattle feeders own puts for August and October with strikes from 61 up to 63. Puts still allow for upside potential, but are good insurance for lower prices. If you haven't hedged your feed needs, yet with the purchase of December corn calls or futures, now could be the opportunity you've waited for.

Cow/calf operators: Hedgers own the August and September 66 puts, purchased for $2 or less. Hold. The biggest risk to feeder values still appears to be the corn market [once it wakes up again]. The biggest support will come from a robust and very current fat cattle situation. So our bearishness is tempered, but risk management still appears warranted.

Traders: Got caught in the shorts last week when we were stopped out of our short August position for about a one dollar loss. The trend appears to have turned back up and the August should lead the way. Look to buy this month at 6225 or less risking one dollar on a close only basis for an objective back to 6397.

New cattle breed association set to hold its first sale in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH - A new cattle breed association will hold its first sale in September in Fort Worth.

The North American Tuli Association recently held a meeting at the historic Fort Worth Stockyards Hotel to elect officers and a board of directors for the newly formed Association.

Elected to serve as president was Duane Jones of Stephenville; vice president, T.J. Peters, Fort Worth; and secretary-treasurer, Scott McKay, Kathryn, Alberta, Canada. Ray Record, College Station, holds the position of executive director.

Other board members include Ken Dickson, Rockwall; Jack Hooker, Dallas; Larry North, Lubbock; and Gary Smith, Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

"We are very excited about the Tuli cattle," said Jones. "Research done by Texas A&M, the Meat Animal Research Center, Clay Center, Neb., and by the University of Georgia has shown Tuli cattle to be heat tolerant, yet cold weather adaptive. Tuli also have similar disease and insect resistance to Brahman but have carcass quality similar to Angus and Hereford."

Additionally they are early maturing, fertile and have many of the convenience traits cattlemen seek today such as polled genetics, superior udder quality and a quiet disposition.

In other business the membership voted to host the first

North American Tuli Sale on Sunday, Sept. 24, at the Fort Worth Stockyards. This will feature fullblood Tuli pregnancies and embryos, percentage cattle and fullblood Tuli semen.

The Tuli breed was developed in Zimbabwe and was brought to North America for the purpose of seeking a breed which could have the heat resistance and foraging ability of Bos Indicus cattle but would offer higher meat quality and better fertility.

For a free video and more information about the Tuli breed contact: The North American Tuli Association, 424 Tarrow, College Station, TX 77840, telephone (409) 268-0843 or FAX (409) 260-2623.

New loan program available for young farmers

AUSTIN - The Texas Agricultural Finance Authority, administered through the Texas Department of Agriculture, is accepting applications for a new loan program that helps individuals purchase up to $150,000 worth of farm or ranch land, Agricultural Commissioner Rick Perry said.

"Our Farm and Ranch Finance Program is for producers who want to buy their first place or for those who want to expand their operations," Perry said. "Applicants must have at least three years of farming or ranching experience."

A Texas A&M University study conducted among producers and financial institutions in May 1994 found that a demand in Texas for almost $300 million in loans to help individuals, who are farming and ranching, buy land, Perry said.

Applicants must be Texas residents and show that they have earned at least 25 percent of their gross income from farming and ranching over the last three years. Applicants will be required to complete a business plan demonstrating that they intend to be full-time agricultural producers, and they must provide evidence that their net worth is less than $250,000. Applicants also must prove that they have finances available for necessary farming and ranching equipment and operating costs.

Applications must be completed in cooperation with a local lending institution. The maximum loan of $150,000 may not exceed 95 percent of the land's appraised value or 95 percent of the purchase price. Interest rates are based on market conditions and will be adjusted over the life of the loan. The rates must be approved by the lender and the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority.

In addition to the Farm and Ranch Finance Program, changes have been made in TAFE's Young Farmer Guarantee Program to encourage more applicants. The program was established to help those between 18 and 40 years old start their first agricultural operation. Loan guarantees may be used for purchases of feed, seed, fertilizer, livestock, poultry, farm or ranch equipment, farm or ranch buildings or to lease farm or ranch land.

To receive an application for any loan program administered by TAFE, or for more information about these loan programs and others, call TDA in Austin at (512) 475-1619; fax (512) 475-1762; or write: the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711-2847.

FREE "LIVING TRUST" SEMINAR

"What You Ought to Know About Living Trusts"

(What you don't know could cost your family thousands of dollars!)

If you own a home ... or you have assets worth at least $100,000 ... you owe it to yourself - and your family - to get the facts on living trusts. If you think you're protected with a simple Will ... think again ... A Will guarantees that your estate will go through probate, which means that your family may not be able to take possession of your estate for many months, or even years!

Plus, if your estate is over $600,000, your family may owe estate taxes which could amount to 37-55% of the value of your estate.

This means that your family may have to sell some assets just to pay the estate taxes!

A living trust avoids all this by avoiding probate and minimizing estate taxes. Plus, a living trust will protect your estate if you become incapacitated during your lifetime by avoiding a guardianship. This means your estate will be managed as you see fit, not as a court-appointed guardian sees fit.

To find out more about the benefits of living trusts, attend one of these free seminars...

Texas, Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association praises Bivins for property rights stand

KERRVILLE - Pampa's state senator was one five legislators praised by the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association during their summer board of directors meeting.

More than 250 TSCRA board members, committee members, spouses and guests attended the two-day meeting July 7-8 at the YO Ranch Holiday Inn in Kerrville.

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, was recognized by TSCRA for his efforts on private property issues during the recently completed Texas legislative session along with Sen. Bill Sims, D-Paint Rock; Rep.

Bob Turner, D-Voss; Rep. Susan Combs, R-Austin; and Rep. Harvey Hilderbrand, R-Kerrville.

The cattle producers also heard about issues impacting cattle raisers at the national level by Greg Ruelle, director of private lands, water and environment for the National Cattlemen's Association. He told TSCRA members that the beef industry has an opportunity to make some major changes during the current session of Congress, particularly with the reauthorization of the Clean Water and Endangered Species acts.

Ruelle said that the 104th Congress has been busy reforming several areas of federal law, noting that the House has passed property rights legislation and regulatory reform measures and has reauthorized the Clean Water Act. In the Senate, bills have been introduced to reform the Endangered Species and wetlands laws, as well as a comprehensive property rights bill.

Debate will also be heard on reauthorization of the Farm Bill. Ruelle told the cattle producers that congressional efforts to balance the federal budget are likely to have significant impacts on the 1995 Farm Bill, especially with regard to grain programs.

Tim Lindstrom, an attorney with the Piedmont Environmental Council in Charlottesville, Va., described the American Farm and Ranch Protection Act of 1995 (S. 910 and H.R. 864) and defined conservation easements.

"The impact of the federal estate tax on rural families is unique in the entire tax code," Lindstrom said. "The only asset valued by the code differently from its actual use is rural land, which is often taxed at values representing its potential for development rather than the rural use to which it is actually being put by the owner."
