PAMPA — Registration for the summer TAAS test for out-of-school examinees is due in Iowa City no later than 5 p.m. Friday.

Packets for registration are available at the Pampa High School counselors' office.

Out-of-school examinees who have not met minimum expectations on all sections of the TAAS test may retake the necessary sections. Students who were enrolled in 12th grade in the spring of 1995 are not considered out-of-school examinees.

The test registration form must be completed and returned in the pre-addressed envelope. The forms may be sent by Federal Express or other overnight services to ensure delivery on time.

Plans are underway to administer the exit TAAS in the high school library July 11, 12 and 13. Enrolled students at Pampa High School have automatically been registered for the summer administration and will receive individual notification later from the counselors' office.

PAMPA — Any child between the ages of one and 18 may eat breakfast and lunch for free this summer, thanks to the Pampa Independent School District's summer feeding program, says Debbie Middleton with the PISD Food Service Department.

Breakfast will be served from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. Mondays through Fridays, and lunch will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. running through the end of July at Lamar Elementary School, 1234 S. Nelson.

"You don't have to live in the neighborhood to come," Middleton says. "There is no paperwork to fill out."

The project is overseen by Children's Enterprises from Lubbock and is sponsored by PISD.

PAMPA — The Gray County Appraisal District Review Board will meet later this month for its presentation of records meeting.

Wednesday's meeting was canceled due to the lack of a quorum.

At the meeting, board members will review the records of the 32,200 notices sent out after the re-appraisal of houses and businesses located in various parts of the city.

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth an estimated $4 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 10, 13, 17, 32, 44 and 49.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $10 million.

Marines rescue downed U.S. pilot

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Braving Serbian missiles and rebel guns, U.S. Marines flew helicopters into hostile Serb territory today and rescued an American fighter pilot in hiding since being shot down six days ago.

Capt. Scott F. O'Grady of Spokane, Wash., ran out of the pine-covered forest with a pistol in his hand and into his American rescuers' arms near where his F-16C jet was shot down by a missile in a Bosnian Serb stronghold southeast of Bihac.

At least one missile fired at the rescuers but missed. A Marine gunner on a helicopter fired back at the Serbs as O'Grady was flown out of Bosnia to safety. The rescuers were only on the ground a couple of minutes. There were no casualties.

Adm. Leighton Smith, commander of NATO forces in southern Europe, said the rescue mission began after a pilot from O'Grady's squadron flying an F-16 over the area heard O'Grady's voice on the radio.

The 2 a.m. signal (8 p.m. EDT Wednesday) "was the first time that we... had radio contact with the pilot," Smith said.

Fifteen minutes earlier NATO was tipped to O'Grady's existence when it received a Morse code message from the pilot "that told us exactly who it was," a NATO source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Nearly 5 1/2 hours later, O'Grady was safe on board the USS Kearsarge in the Adriatic Sea.

Smith said O'Grady conserved the batteries in his survival radio by using it only sparingly and when he thought he could make contact. The NATO source said O'Grady moved only at night until he found a location several miles from the crash site where he could be rescued.

A Serb surface-to-air missile had blown O'Grady's fighter jet in two on Friday as he flew a NATO mission over northern Bosnia. His fate had been unknown because an accompanying pilot didn't see O'Grady parachute, so it was not known for sure whether he had ejected.

Increasing the uncertainty was Bosnian Serbs claims they had captured the pilot, an action "consistent with the outrageous behavior we see from the Serbs throughout the Bosnian conflict," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said.

Were they lying? "Obviously," McCurry said.

Adm. William Owens of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington said a multinational force took part in the rescue, including two CH-53 helicopters that landed on a hilltop 50 yards from where the 29-year-old O'Grady was hiding. He ran out of the trees and was hauled aboard by Col. Martin Berndt.

"It won't be very soon that I'll forget the look on his face as he approached the helicopter this morning," said Berndt, speaking via telephone from the Kearsarge, an American amphibious assault ship in the northern Adriatic.

He told NBC-TV that O'Grady "was very talkative" and that right afterward he downed water and "dug right into a meal ready to eat, or MRE, so he must have really been hungry." He said O'Grady had not eaten for the six days he was missing.

The downing of O'Grady's plane added to tensions following the abductions of hundreds of U.N. peacekeepers by Bosnian Serbs retaliating for May 25-26 NATO air attacks on their ammunition depots outside Pale, the rebel headquarters nine miles from Sarajevo.

U.S. pilot recovered

U.S. Marines flew a helicopter into hostile Serb territory and rescued an American F-16 fighter pilot shot down six days ago by rebel Serbs. Capt. Scott F. O'Grady of Spokane, Wash., was found alive and well.

She was at the pool with her friends Marcher Hughes, 9, of Amarillo, and Shona Renee Dorsey, 10. School students using their time for summer enrichment programs

A number of students from grades kindergarten through 10 are currently participating in one of several Pampa Independent School District summer enrichment programs.

Students earned placement in the program by having continued high grades or being a member of Chapter 1 from Baker, Lamar, Horace Mann or Wilson elementary schools.

Kindergartners and first graders are participating in "Have Books, Will Travel," taught by Janie Street. This program uses travel as a theme for reading and math, and is designed to give an awareness and understanding of the earth and its cultures to the students. The program runs through June 16.

Second and third graders are busy collecting and studying insects in "What's Bugging You?" taught by Sharon Carter. Students will integrate skills in reading, language arts, math, science, social studies and art. The program runs through June 16.

"Lights! Camera! Action!" is the theme of Wanetta Hill's program for fourth and fifth graders. The program com-combines the written word and expressive reading through the use of theater arts. Students will be introduced to the theater and learn stage talk and directions. The program runs through June 16.

From books and bugs, to theater arts, physics and research, students are pursuing a wide variety of skills.

Students entering sixth grade are participating in "Think Camp," a program designed to enhance critical thinking skills. Activities in the program, taught by Kay Harvey, will help students learn the basic principles of chemistry. The program will conclude this week with a trip to a hospital lab.

A variety of activities is on hand for students going into seventh grade in "Summer Explorations," taught by Andrea Wyatt. Students will perform monologues, do partnership reading and learn to graph, measure and compare. The program runs through June 16.

Students going into eighth grade are learning that "Physics Is 'Phun'" in a program taught by Beth Shannon. The workshop is designed to cover topics such as light, sound, heat, electricity, magnetism and various forces. Using a combination of lab experiments, the ultimate goal is to allow students the opportunity to work with the physical science interactive computer/laser disc system at the high school. The program ends this week.

"Mysteries of Research" is the theme for students going into the ninth grade in a program taught by Mary Sturgeon. Using both Lovett Memorial Library and the high school library, students will be introduced to different ways to research. After instruction, they will be given a mystery to solve using those research skills.

Sophomores and juniors will both be preparing for SAT and ACT exams in separate programs, "Sophomore Summer" and "Junior University." Strategies and hints will be given to the students to prepare them for the college entrance exams.

McLean to have its rodeo this weekend

McLEAN — The 85th annual McLean Rodeo is scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights at 8 at the rodeo arena.

The rodeo will be just one event in a busy weekend.

A parade will run through downtown Saturday at 2 p.m., followed by a horse race at 5 p.m.

At 4 p.m. Saturday, men 60 years and older will compete in the Old Timers' Calf Roping contest. Two heads will be roped in the afternoon event, and the short round will take place at the rodeo that night.

Saturday's rodeo will also feature a 5-year-old and younger stick horse race.

Southern Stars will provide the music at the rodeo dance Saturday night at 9 at the slab north of the arena.

The Carly Henley Memorial Team Roping competition will take place Sunday afternoon with three separate contests.

Randy Stalls, a spokesman for the rodeo, says that improvements made possible by the recent $5,000 grant from Southwestern Bell have already begun at the arena.

The grandstands are already completely refurbished, and Stalls hopes that new lights will be installed by the time the rodeo begins.

Gov. Bush signs criminal justice legislation package into law

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush on Wednesday signed into law a package of criminal justice legislation, including measures to limit appeals of death row inmates and create weapon-free zones around schools.

"These new laws will help get career criminals and drug dealers off our streets and away from our schools," Bush said. "They will make Texas safer for all our citizens."

At a new state jail facility in San Antonio, Bush also signed bills fine-ing the penal code and changing Texas Department of Criminal Justice rules regarding inmate privileges.

The law limiting death row appeals aims to shave about two years off inmates' stays on death row and save taxpayers about $50,000 per inmate, according to the governor's office.

Texas' 401 death row inmates have waited an average of eight years between conviction and execution. Some inmates have been on death row nearly 20 years.

The new law alters the timetables and deadlines for inmate appeals. It also requires habeas corpus appeals and direct appeals to be filed at the same time to allow the appeals court to consider them concurrently.

Bush's office estimated the law would save the state about $1 million a year.

"Murderers who are sentenced to death will no longer be able to endlessly delay justice by repeatedly filing court appeals," Bush said.

Bush also signed a law establishing weapon-free zones around schools.

Anyone carrying a weapon within 300 feet of a school or official school function will be prosecuted for a state jail felony, instead of a class A misdemeanor, under the law.

The penal code revision eliminates automatic probation for repeat offenders in the state jail system, which was created in 1993. Under previous law, anyone repeatedly caught for a state jail offense received probation as punishment.

Pilot

Today's "relatively clean" sunrise rescue included a Marine team and CH-53 and Cobra helicopters from the Kearsarge, said Marine Brig. Gen. Terry Murray in Washington. They were escorted by F-18s and electronic warfare planes.

"We had the whole shooting match up there," including Cobra helicopters, Harriers, AWACS radar planes and other support aircraft, Smith said from U.S. Naval Headquarters in London.

Berndt "is a pretty strapping young guy," Smith said. "He saw the pilot come running out of the woods, so he grabbed him and snatched him aboard and they got out of there."

Berndt said a missile was fired at the helicopter after O'Grady was picked up, but missed. Smith said small arms fire at the helicopters also missed, and that a gunner fired back when evacuating the hilly area about 20 miles southeast of Bihac and 60 miles inland.

O'Grady was flown to the Kearsarge, which has a 600-bed hospital, and the medical report is "very good," Smith said. He is expected to fly to Italy on Friday. O'Grady's family in Spokane expects him home by the weekend.

Asked how O'Grady survived a six-day ordeal after being shot down, the admiral said: "He maintained his cool."

"He's very smart, he's very determined and very gutsy to have evaded for as long as he did using the equipment that he had."

O'Grady's mother, Mary Lou Scardapane, and stepfather told The Associated Press that O'Grady called them shortly after he reached safety. "We talked to Scott tonight and he sounded wonderful," Joseph Scardapane said. "Our cup runneth over."

O'Grady's father, Bill O'Grady, said he was overwhelmed with relief at the rescue.

Stacey O'Grady of Washington spoke to her brother. "He can't quite understand what all the big fuss is about," she said.

Ms. O'Grady said the family had been braced for the worst because her father learned from officials that the Serbs had found his parachute and other belongings indicating he was alive.

"They said, 'Your boy is out there somewhere,'" she said.

Paul O'Grady of Alexandria, Va., praised his brother's rescuers. "I want to thank the armed forces, just from the bottom of my heart. I can't thank them enough."

At NATO headquarters in Brussels, Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the pilot was surprisingly healthy: "I am told that he is well, that he has a six-day beard and that he has a small burn on the back of his neck as a result of exiting the aircraft."

O'Grady is assigned to the 555th Fighter Squadron at Aviano Air Base in northeastern Italy. He'll be taken there from the Kearsarge, which is carrying members of the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit.

President Clinton called O'Grady's family to share their happiness.

Lecture, workshop in Pampa to focus on methods of teaching reading skills

According to the last National Assessment of Educational Progress, 43 percent of fourth graders nationwide lack basic reading skills.

In an effort to reduce those numbers, Pampa's Auxiliary Nursing Service and the Nebraska Education and Research Center are sponsoring a lecture and workshop this weekend by Susan Robertson.

Robertson, a certified teacher for over 20 years, will speak on the philosophy, economics and socioeconomic repercussions of the whole language method of teaching reading.

The whole language method, says Robertson, teaches that children can learn to read the same way they learn to walk or talk, simply by exposure.

Students in this method are not taught the sound-symbol relationship stressed in phonics, and instead are taught to learn whole words by seeing them on the page.

"Whole language causes learning disabilities," claims Robertson.

"If we use phonics, we won't have children who are physiologically healthy not learn to read," she continued.

Robertson claims in a press release that the whole language method is responsible for creating a "tremendous variety of learning disabilities," including dyslexia, Attention Deficit Disorder and Attention Deficit-Hyperactivity Disorder.

The State of Texas, according to Robertson, currently allows for no applied intensive systematic phonics system in school systems without a special waiver.

Pampa Independent School District uses the whole language method, says Robertson, who hopes to attract local teachers to her Saturday workshop to instruct them in methods of teaching phonics.

Jane Steele, PISD assistant superintendent for instruction, says that while some campuses may integrate the whole language method into their curriculum, the district has not adopted the method exclusively.

In fact, Steele says, individual campuses make their own decisions on what method or methods to use based on what works best for the students.

"The district decides the 'what,' for example how to improve reading scores. The campuses decide how to go about that," Steele said.

Robertson, based in Houston, speaks and gives workshops 50-60 times a year across the country. At one such speech, she caught the attention of Meg Parson, owner of the local Auxiliary Nursing Service.

Debbie Cochran, spokesperson for the service and organizer of Robertson's speech, said that Parson thought such a speech would benefit this community.

Robertson will present a lecture Friday night at 7:30 p.m. at M.K. Brown Auditorium. Cost is $7.

Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. she will host a workshop. Cost for the workshop is $35.

Investigation continues into crash death

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS News Editor

SHAMROCK - Inquiry into an automobile crash which claimed the life of a 71-year-old Shamrock woman and involved a Wheeler County deputy continues as investigating Shamrock officials await the visit of a state accident reconstruction team.

Freda L. Smith, 71, died when the car she was riding in was in collision with Deputy Rick Walden's patrol car shortly before 4 p.m. May 25 in the 1200 block of North Tennessee in Shamrock. Her husband, Bill Smith, 74, suffered a broken hip in wreck, said Wheeler County Sheriff Jimmy Adams.

Walden sustained two broken ankles, a broken rib and bruises. Shamrock Police Chief Monte Cornett said he expects to reconstruct the collision in the next 10 days with the help of the Department of Public Safety's accident reconstruction team from Lubbock.

Adams said he expects the event to be presented to a Wheeler County grand jury, though he believes no indictment will be returned against Walden.

"That's the will of the people as the grand jury," he said.

Adams said Walden was responding to a call when the crash occurred and some emergency equipment on the car was operating.

"We do know his lights were activated," Adams said.

The car's siren was destroyed and the interior console "messed up," the sheriff said.

Arkansas governor indicted in Whitewater case

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - Gov. Jim Guy Tucker became the most prominent figure indicted in the Whitewater investigation when he was charged with lying to get a $300,000 Small Business Association loan and trying to dodge taxes.

The Democrat who succeeded President Clinton as Arkansas governor was indicted Wednesday along with William J. Marks, his partner in a Florida cable TV venture. The two men and Tucker's personal lawyer, John H. Haley, also were charged with conspiring to conceal the cable venture's true value from the Internal Revenue Service.

"I look forward to an aggressive presentation of the facts of my business transactions in a public forum," Tucker said in a statement. "I am confident I will be vindicated."

Tucker attorney George Collins said the governor has "absolutely done nothing wrong" and will plead innocent at his arraignment sometime next week.

If convicted on the felony charges, Tucker and Marks would each face up to 12 years in prison and a $750,000 fine. Tucker also would have to resign. He would be replaced by Republican Lt. Gov. Mike Huckabee.

The Whitewater investigation began as a probe of Clinton's ties to a failed savings and loan, Madison Guaranty, and the Whitewater land development venture. The Resolution Trust Corp. has questioned whether Madison funds were illegally diverted to pay off the political and personal debts of prominent Arkansans, including then-Gov. Clinton.

The indictments Wednesday had nothing to do with Clinton or the Whitewater venture.

Immigration reduction plan gets mixed reviews on Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal that Congress reduce legal U.S. immigration while giving priority entry to more than a million spouses and children of legal permanent residents is drawing mixed reviews.

Interest groups ranging from immigrant-rights advocates to pro-business conservatives decried as anti-family, anti-business and racist the recommendations by the bipartisan U.S. Commission on Immigration Reform.

But President Clinton called the proposal "a road map for Congress to consider."

In a statement, Clinton said: "Consistent with my own views, the commission's recommendations are pro-family, pro-work, pro-naturalization."

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration that will consider immigration reform, said the commission plan "makes our job easier."

"The interest groups should be reminded that, for the last 20 years, 75 percent of the American people have consistently wanted to reduce immigration," Smith said in an interview. He plans to introduce his own massive immigration reform bill next Thursday.

The commission's recommendations, formally submitted to Congress on Wednesday, would clear 150,000 spouses and children of legal permanent residents now awaiting visas each year over eight years.

To make room for them, the commission would eliminate visa eligibility for the brothers, sisters and adult children of citizens. That would change a 30-year-old policy that has given immigration priority to job-seekers and foreigners who hope to reunite with family members.

The nine-member commission, which was created by Congress and chaired by former Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Texas, would reduce to 550,000 from 675,000 the number of visas available to citizens' family members, job-seekers and refugees.

Rep. Dick Arme, R-Texas, the House majority leader, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., ranking Democrat on the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, both said they opposed the reductions.

"A principled debate would expose the impulse to limit legal immigration as a misguided attempt to make legal immigrants the scapegoats for America's problems," Arme said in a statement.

The Senate subcommittee was expected to approve legislation today beefing up border patrols and tightening the enforcement of laws against hiring illegal aliens.

Jordan said the commission's plan was the only way to reunite the nuclear families of legal residents, and Smith added that it will end "chain migration" by the extended families of immigrants. But Asian Americans objected to the commission's definition of nuclear families.

"In effect you're restoring the discriminatory impact of what was removed in the '60s" when reforms replaced national origins with family ties as the basis for immigration priority, said Margaret Fung, executive director of the Asian American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Also under the commission plan, only college-educated foreign workers whose prospective employers can prove they can't find a suitable American worker would be admitted. The employers would be required to pay an unspecified "substantial" fee.

Stuart Anderson, policy director for the Alexis de Tocqueville Institution, a conservative Washington think tank, said the employer fee amounts to an anti-business tax.

President Zedillo defies Mexico union and party pressure and sells off government-run economy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Defying protests by unions and even members of his own party, President Ernesto Zedillo wants to sell government companies to private investors he hopes will rejuvenate Mexico's antiquated industry.

Before he's finished, Zedillo plans to sell ports and highways, airports and railroads, change labor laws, even amend Mexico's constitution, crack down on corruption and slash away at bloated workforces.

The sales are expected to net up to $14 billion and leave fewer than a dozen firms in government hands, ending the era when 2,800 state companies ranged from hotels and soccer teams to button and bicycle factories.

Soon to go on the auction block are concessions to run nine major ports that handle 70 percent of Mexico's oceangoing cargo.

To clear the way for the sale, the government bought out the union-owned companies that ran the ports, then fired all 4,000 workers. Workers have been hired or rehired as day laborers.

The railroads, a state monopoly since the 1920s, will be next on the block, followed by secondary petrochemicals, toll highways, and Telcel, the satellite communications monopoly. Private companies will be allowed to operate airports and to build and run power plants.

Only the oil monopoly Pemex, formed from seized oil companies in 1938, will remain untouched. Pemex is a symbol of Mexican sovereignty, and any talk of selling it is taboo.

Privatization was a Zedillo priority but it also was a condition the United States and world financial institutions set for a $51 billion loan package to bail Mexico out of its economic crisis that began with the collapse of the peso in December.

"At the very least, $10 billion could easily be raised," said Roberto Villarreal, a Treasury Department official. "But we are seeking more than money. We are interested in providing better long-term service."

Zedillo's predecessor, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, closed or sold dozens of state-owned companies, including the inefficient phone company Telmex and 18 of Mexico's 23 banks. Telmex's monopoly ends in 1997.

The sales by Salinas, a U.S.-trained economist, netted more than $20 billion, much of it spent on fighting an Indian rebellion and on a public works program.

In past decades, when preserving jobs was the key goal, the government would buy and subsidize any company that went bankrupt. By the time Mexico's banks were seized in 1982, the government owned or controlled 80 percent of the economy.

A number of old-timers in Zedillo's Institutional Revolutionary Party oppose any changes. They include Fidel Velazquez, the 95-year-old leader of the 5 million-member Mexican Labor Federation, which is part of the party.

Groups urge Governor Bush to veto tobacco sales bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A coalition of health groups is urging Gov. George W. Bush to veto a bill regulating sales of tobacco products, saying the measure would override all tobacco-related city ordinances except those regulating public smoking.

The groups, including the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association and the American Heart Association, said that the bill would particularly affect city laws restricting the placement of cigarette vending machines.

Such ordinances are intended to limit access children have to tobacco by prohibiting the placement of cigarette machines in areas accessible to children.

The coalition said cities such as San Antonio, Austin,

Dallas, Houston and Arlington have stricter rules regarding tobacco sales in vending machines that would be lessened if the bill, which was supported by the tobacco industry, becomes law.

"Rescinding local ordinances in favor of a weaker statewide standard is bad news for kids and their parents. And it will usurp power from local municipalities," said Cindy Antolik of the cancer society.

The bill would have a statewide vending standard replace local laws. Cigarettes vending machines would be allowed anywhere as long as they are supervised, the coalition said.

"If an employee has the time to supervise a vending machine, why couldn't that same employee just sell the cigarettes over the counter? Liquor isn't sold that way and tobacco shouldn't be either," said Kelly Boyles of the heart association.

Ray Sullivan, a Bush spokesman, said the governor's staff is still reviewing the bill. "No final decision has been reached yet. The governor has until June 18 to take action on that bill," he said.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Congressional tax cut debate

The decision by his Senate Republican colleagues to defeat Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's proposal to include a modest tax cut in a bill designed to balance the federal budget by 2002 is a massive betrayal of the core Republican constituency. If the Republican Old Bulls in the Senate don't understand that middle-class people - and the American economy - need and deserve a bit of tax relief, they need to be retired.

Even though he voted right himself, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, now the leading GOP presidential candidate, deserves a large share of the blame for this debacle. If, as Senate majority leader, he can't get his own party to unite around so crucial an issue, what kind of leadership qualities will he bring to the presidency? The evidence is that he didn't bestir himself much for narrow political reasons.

The Senate voted 69-31 against including tax cuts in the budget resolution. Of those voting against tax cuts, 23 were Republicans. With a few exceptions, the vote split along "generational" lines: Republican senators elected since 1986 tended to vote for tax cuts, while those elected before 1986 tended to vote against them.

The cuts Sen. Gramm proposed, pretty much what the House of Representatives had already passed, amounted to $353 billion over seven years. To place that in context, the federal government plans to spend about $8 trillion over that period of time. To imagine that letting taxpayers themselves - the people who earned it - keep $353 billion of that vast sum to spend on such fripperies as food, clothing, or taking care of their children would create insuperable barriers to a balanced budget is to lose all sense of proportion.

In fact, the budget is more likely to be balanced if the economy grows at a faster pace than it has in the last few years, and it's more likely to grow if taxes are cut. A capital-gains tax cut, to which every Republican in Washington has pledged fealty but which 23 Republican senators chose to reject, would unquestionably increase federal revenues.

But more important than projections about revenues, more important even than a balanced budget, is the simple matter of fairness. The American people are severely over taxed right now to support a bloated, pork-laden federal government that stifles creativity and innovation, chokes off economic growth and development, and systematically undermines community and family values.

Taxes should be lowered even if tax reductions threaten the goal of a balanced budget. To vote against tax reductions even in the context of a proposal that promised to balance the budget at the same time demonstrates astounding arrogance and a patrician indifference to ordinary Americans.

By and large, the longer a politician stays in Washington, the more he comes to identify with the interests of the government as an institution and to participate in the predatory culture of the Inside-the-Beltway crowd - and the less empathy he has with the concerns of those meddling folks back home who believe the civics book myth that it's their government.

The Supreme Court has decided term limits can be imposed only through a constitutional amendment. Those 23 Senate Republicans offered a compelling case for getting one passed as soon as possible.

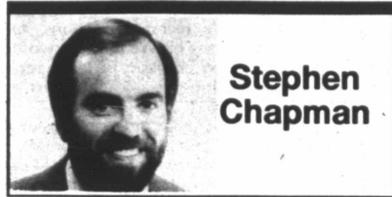

Thought for today

"Total freedom is never what one imagines and, in fact, hardly exists. It comes as a shock in life to learn that we usually only exchange one set of restrictions for another. The second set, however, is self-chosen and therefore easier to accept."

The perennial electric car fantasy

Stephen Chapman

Back in the 1960s, when I was growing up, Americans had a clear picture of what the future would be like. We'd all wear Star Trek-style jumpsuits, eat meals composed of nutritionally complete pills and drive electric cars. Now that we're living in the future, we find that most of us don't want to dress like Captain Kirk or reduce dining to its barest function. But some people haven't given up on electric cars.

The Clean Air Act allows states to mandate the sale and purchase of electric cars to combat urban air pollution, and some states are doing just that. California, New York and Massachusetts have decreed that by 1998, at least 2 percent of the new cars sold have to be "zero-emission vehicles," with the percentage rising in subsequent years.

The electric car is a perennial green dream. It grows partly out of a basic dislike of modern transportation: E.F. Schumacher, in his classic Small Is Beautiful, waxed nostalgic for the Middle Ages, when the only people who moved about were people who had pressing reasons to do so, such as scholars and saints. Contemporary environmentalists may have given up hope of getting rid of cars, but they still want to junk the gasoline-powered version. Al Gore, in his 1992 book, Earth in the Balance, called for eliminating the internal combustion engine within 25 years.

The problem is that nothing has yet come along to displace it. Environmentalists decided to stop waiting and start forcing. The assumption, undoubtedly correct, is that unless the law compels Americans to buy electric cars, they'll never do it.

The Clean Air Act mandate sounds like an innocuous requirement, until you consider the state of electric-car technology. The first problem is cost: Going electric is estimated to add from $10,000 to $20,000 to the price of a car, and the battery packs that power the vehicles have to be replaced every three years or so, at about $3,000 a pop.

Then there's the matter of range. An electric car can travel only about 100 miles - less if the driver insists on wasting energy on such frivolities as running the windshield wipers, using the heater or turning on the headlights - before it has to be recharged, which typically takes several hours.

Performance and comfort are not selling points either. Electric cars don't excel in the winter months, since their batteries lose up to half of their energy-storage capacity in cold weather. Heaters and defrosters may not work as well as we've come to expect. Because the batteries weigh so much, the cars need to be small. Otherwise, they'll be so heavy that they'll be able to accelerate only about as fast as the average glacier - not to mention that their modest range will shrink even further.

In short, the advent of the electric car will mean getting used to a tiny, temperamental vehicle that is suitable only for short trips and comes with a price tag bigger than the passenger compartment. These shortcomings help explain why it hasn't come about on its own.

The inconveniences might be tolerable to many Americans if they were needed to clean up the air and protect the environment. But that happens to be untrue. One reason is that emissions from new cars are already down 98 percent over the last quarter century - so there's not much pollution left to eliminate. Most of the auto pollution comes from older cars with defective pollution-control equipment. Another reason is that some of the power plants that will supply the juice for electric cars will produce pollution of their own by burning coal or oil.

A recent study published in Science magazine unearthed new evidence that electric cars will be no favor to the environment. Carnegie Mellon University scholars Lester Lave, Chris Hendrickson and Francis Clay McMichael note that the most plausible power source is lead-acid batteries. Unfortunately, mining, smelting and recycling the lead for all those batteries would pollute our air and water with large quantities of a very nasty substance.

One of the triumphs of modern environmentalism has been the huge reduction in human exposure to lead, thanks mainly to the elimination of leaded gasoline. But Lave, Hendrickson and McMichael estimate that electric cars powered by lead-acid batteries would cause far more pollution than cars with leaded gas - about 60 times as much. These vehicles would create a far bigger problem than the one they are mistakenly designed to alleviate.

These inconvenient facts will probably not dampen the enthusiasm of hard-core enthusiasts, who regard auto makers and oil companies as the root of all evil. But to the clear-headed, electric cars look like an answer in search of a question.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, June 8, the 159th day of 1995. There are 206 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 8, 632 A.D., the prophet Mohammed died. Mohammed's teachings, recorded in the Koran, forged a new religion, Islam.

On this date:
In 1845, 150 years ago, Andrew Jackson, the seventh president of the United States, died in Nashville, Tenn.

In 1861, Tennessee seceded from the Union.

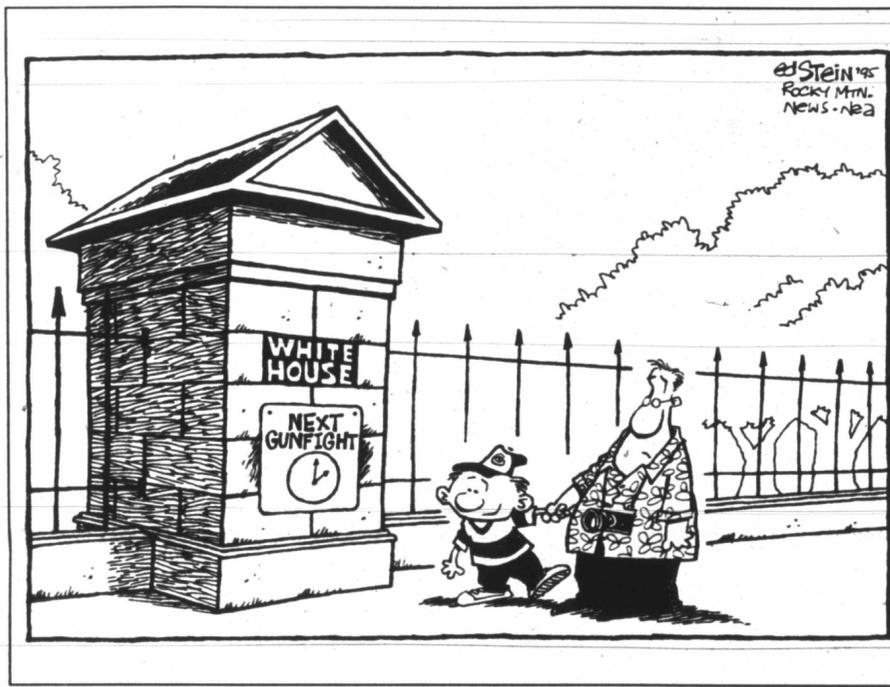

In 1905, President Theodore Roosevelt offered to act as a mediator in the Russo-Japanese War.

In 1915, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan resigned in a disagreement over U.S. handling of the sinking of the Lusitania.

In 1942, Bing Crosby recorded "Adeste Fideles" and "Silent Night" in Los Angeles for Decca Records.

In 1953, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that restaurants in the District of Columbia could not refuse to serve blacks.

In 1966, a merger was announced between the National and American Football leagues, to take effect in 1970.

Free to make choices as to how we live

Charley Reese

We Americans need to think more about how we want to live than about how we are going to vote. That would be putting first things first. It's only after we decide how we wish to live that we can know intelligently how we ought to vote.

Most Americans, without realizing it, have been made the victim of an old debater's trick. The best way to win a debate is to frame the question.

A silly example will show you how it works. Take the subject of spouse abuse. You could have a debate on how severe the penalty for spouse abuse should be. Or you could have a debate on how often a spouse ought to be allowed to beat his partner.

As you can see, the first question assumes spouse abuse is wrong. The second question, however, assumes that spouse abuse is OK and the only question left open for discussion is the frequency of spouse abuse that is to be permissible.

If you pay close attention, you will see how often the government plays this trick on the American people. They are asked to debate how much foreign aid they should provide not if any foreign aid at all should be provided. They are asked how much involvement in other countries' affairs we should have or what form it should take - not whether or not we should have any involvement in the affairs of other countries at all. A variation is used to simulate political opposition. For example, Republicans are claiming to be "against" foreign aid by proposing to spend only about $18 billion, whereas the Democrats are "for it" because they want to spend $21 billion. This minor reduction is being reported by the press as an attack on foreign aid. As you can see, it's all a charade intended to fool the American public into thinking it has a genuine opposition party when in fact both parties are committed to foreign aid.

As always, the debate is framed in such a way as to deny Americans genuine choice.

Built in to nearly all the questions the American people are asked to "debate" are the assumptions necessary to maintain the status quo, politically, economically and socially. That way the Establishment can maintain the illusion of freedom without the substance. No slave would have thought himself free if he had been told he was free to choose whether he should receive 15 lashes with a chain or 20 lashes with a whip.

Nor are we free if our choice is only how much big government we have to support; what minor percentage of fluctuation there is to be in our taxes; who should run our lives federal bureaucracy A or state bureaucracy B or some combination. None of those are real choices. To borrow a term from the Goldwater era, they are only "echoes."

That's why we need to think about how we really want to live our lives. Do we wish to continue in a society in which the only criteria is economic, as determined by the corporate culture, in which everything from human life to death is measured in dollars? Do we wish to remain a proletariat - landless people working for wages provided by giant corporations over which we have no control?

Do we want to maintain a society that views consumption as the highest human achievement? Do we wish to live on a global commons like a herd of helpless sheep, controlled by our multinational shepherds?

If your answers are yes, you have the easiest course. Do nothing. That's how we are living.

The harder answer is no because that immediately sets us to the tasks of deciding alternatives and then starting to make them realities. I believe we need alternatives, but I also believe that the old political ties and organizations and coalitions will be of no help. They are all wedded to the status quo with only minor variations to maintain the illusion of freedom.

To build a new future will require new thinking, new tools and new coalitions.

Advice graduates might not want to hear

Sara Eckel

At graduation time, we hear a lot about unlimited potential, about harnessing your dreams, about reaching your loftiest goals.

And indeed, sitting on a lush, green campus at the dawn of summer, the world does seem ripe with possibility - obstacles for the faint-hearted, troubles for the weak.

You all are wonderful, the speakers tell the grads. You all can do absolutely anything you put your mind to. You are only limited by the scope of your dreams.

That's what we tell our young people in public, on official days of optimism. But should a kid actually venture forth on some ordinary Tuesday to tell an adult her dream - to be a filmmaker, a senator, an astronaut or a novelist, say - a different ethos prevails.

"But what will you do for money?" blurts the uncle.

"You know those jobs are very competitive," warns the career counselor.

"Have you considered (insert drab but safe occupation here)?" ask the parents.

"You've got to think practically," says just about everyone.

Practicality is certainly a worthy virtue. But pursuing a dream job isn't necessarily impractical. Certainly those who do rise to the top - the Sally Rides, the Steven Spielbergs, the Patricia Schroeders - were wise to cling to their dreams.

But for every success story, there are many other failures. For every best-selling novelist, it's currently sitting in the slush piles of literary agents across the city, and Meg is waiting to find out if a half-decade's worth of work will become a published book or a just publisher's doorstep.

Meg sees it like this. In order to get a publisher she must first find an agent. Therefore her fate is in the hands of the hundred or so agents who might possibly read her book. Once she gets past that hurdle, she must find a publisher, of which there is also a finite number. Her book may not hit the right desk, at the right time. It may not get published. Meg accepts this. She's aware of the chance she took.

But she'd do it again. In fact, she is. Currently Meg is hard at work on her second novel.

The point is, failure happens. And the more competitive your field, the more likely failure becomes. But once the decision to risk it is made, life becomes much easier. Helmet-haired career counselors can be laughed off. Condescending uncles can be given a polite shrug. Fretful parents can simply be told not to worry.

There is nothing wrong with veering toward the safe side, with opting for security over self-actualization. Indeed, many lucky people never have to make such a compromise, since their chosen fields readily permit both.

But for serious dreamers, the chance of success is worth the risk of failure. For them, it is better to have pursued the dream and failed than to have never tried and always wondered.

Lesson in Consideration Is No Page From This Book

DEAR ABBY: I'm 28 years old. I've been reading your column since I was in middle school, and until now, I never felt the need to write to you.

Abby, I just can't understand how anyone can be so inconsiderate as to just tear a page out of a telephone book and put it in her pocket! I felt like going up to her and giving her "what for," but I held my tongue. Why don't these inconsiderate people simply write down the number they need and leave the phone book intact for the next person?

DISGUSTED IN GLADSTONE, ORE.

DEAR DISGUSTED: You are not alone. I'm sure many who read this will identify with that frustrating experience. Who knows, because you took the time to write to me — and I thought your letter worthy of publication — many more telephone books may remain intact.

Help! I need to know as soon as possible, as the wedding invitations will be printed soon.

PLANNING A WEDDING

DEAR PLANNING: To make any reference to gifts on the wedding invitations would be most improper. However, your idea of informing the guests that your daughter is registered at a store in Mexico is a practical solution, considering the tariffs if gifts are carried or mailed into the country.

DEAR ABBY: You once published your definition of maturity. I thought it was great. Will you kindly run it again?

GRANDMA KATIE,
MONTGOMERY, ALA.

DEAR GRANDMA KATIE: Here it is:

- Maturity is:
- The ability to stick with a job until it's finished.
 - The ability to do a job without being supervised.
 - The ability to carry money without spending it.
 - And the ability to bear an injustice without wanting to get even.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is getting married in her hometown in Pennsylvania. She and her fiancé (who is a Mexican citizen) are working in Mexico and will live there following their wedding.

She is planning a large wedding. Here's the problem: They will have to mail or carry their gifts to Mexico. And they will have to pay taxes on everything.

It would be so much easier for them to buy everything they need when they get to Mexico. If they receive gifts of money, it will simplify matters greatly.

How can I let people know, without appearing greedy, that they should give the bridal couple money? Do I put it on the invitation, or tell them she is registered in a store in Mexico?

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you don't operate on a strict schedule today, you might find that the duties you should have finished earlier overlap with later ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your instincts will direct you to the right things in matters concerning your security today. Try to use the same discretion in social and commercial situations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You usually try to be a giving and considerate person, but today you might step out of character and display some stinginess toward companions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Let situations that presently function smoothly run their courses today. If you step in and try to orchestrate changes, you might jam up the machinery.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard against the inclination to misread the intentions of associates. They could say and mean one thing, and you could interpret it entirely differently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Pride may cause you to look for scapegoats today if things don't go just as you hope.

You mustn't try to make others look bad to make yourself look good.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will know your proper course of action today, yet you might still operate against your better judgment. Try not to trip over your own shoelaces.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Reciprocate in a like manner today if friends go out of their way to help you. A failure to do so will leave a bad, lasting impression.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today it would be better to say no up front than to make an agreement you can't keep. The former plan will win admirers, the latter will lose them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will get more accomplished today if you do what needs doing on your own instead of waiting for someone else to issue directives and serve as an overseer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will have an innate ability to organize and delegate today, but you must contribute as well. Instead of telling others what to do, try setting an example.

MIAMI (AP) — Panthers coach Roger Neilson has been fired after the team finished each of its first two games just one point out of playoff contention, Miami television station WTVJ reported.

Neilson, 60, led Florida to a 20-22-6 record this season, fifth in the Atlantic Division.

A news conference was scheduled Thursday afternoon at the team's corporate headquarters in Fort Lauderdale, but neither Neilson nor Panthers spokesman Greg Bouris would give further details.

Neilson previously coached the Rangers, Kings, Buffalo, Vancouver and Toronto in the NHL.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Devils owner rejected an offer by financier Robert Brennan to buy the NHL team and keep it in New Jersey.

Brennan offered to buy the team, rumored to be heading to Nashville, Tenn., at "fair market value."

The offer was extended to Devils owner John McMullen by owner of ITB, a company Brennan chairs and that owns and operates two New Jersey racetracks, Garden State Park and Freehold Raceway.

A source close to the league said the offer was around $65 million and would increase $10 million if the Devils won their first Stanley Cup.

McMullen, who has been unhappy with the team's lease with the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority since moving from Colorado in 1982, has been entering overtures from Nashville officials about a potential move. He has also talked with state officials about revising the current lease.

TENNIS

LONDON (AP) — Australian Siobhan Drake-Brockman was the latest surprise in the Beckenham Open, making second-seeded Pam Shriver the seventh seeded player to lose in two days, 7-5, 1-6, 6-4.

Czech Petr Korda, fourth-seeded, scored a 6-0, 6-3 victory over Briton Michael Wyeth, and third-seeded Javier Frana of Argentina beat Australian Neil Borwick 6-0, 6-2.

Defending champion Kerry-Anne Guse downed fellow Australian Catharine Barclay, 7-5, 6-4 and top-seeded Nicole Bradtke beat Meilen Tu, 6-3, 6-1.

SOCCER

GAVLE, Sweden (AP) — Sweden scored three straight goals in the last 19 minutes to edge European champion Germany 3-2 and Japan beat Brazil 2-1 in the women's World Cup. All four teams have 1-1-0 records and three points in Group A.

Michele Akers, among the world's top female players, will not play for defending champion United States against Denmark in Group C because of a mild concussion sustained in the World Cup opener.

FOOTBALL

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee football coach Phillip Fulmer suspended two defensive starters for the 1995 season for their involvement in a $25,000 telephone scandal.

Fulmer and basketball coach Kevin O'Neill released a joint statement detailing punishment for 31 scholarship athletes who helped make 17,000 long-distance calls using the stolen charge account of a department employee.

Fulmer suspended the eligibility and scholarships of safety Jason Parker and tackle Leland Taylor. Both would have eligibility remaining for the 1996 season if they return.

In addition, five athletes will be suspended for the first game of the season and lose $850 from their scholarships value — about the cost of a dorm room for one semester — plus two complimentary tickets to each game.

Rockets get by Magic in overtime

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — If the Houston Rockets keep this up, we're going to need some new adjectives.

Incredible, unbelievable, amazing. They all seem to fall short to describe the Rockets' 120-118 overtime victory over Orlando in Game 1 of the NBA Finals on Wednesday night.

It was perhaps the most astonishing chapter yet to this team's improbable playoff run.

"What a great sport we have," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said.

Hakeem Olajuwon, pushed around by Shaquille O'Neal much of the night, winning the scoring battle between them but losing the rebound fight big-time, won the game with a rebound.

After trailing by 20 points in the first half, after being headed for certain defeat before Orlando's Nick Anderson missed four free throws in the final 10.5 seconds of regulation, the Rockets held 1-0 lead in the series.

This No. 6 seed from the West tied NBA playoff records with its sixth road victory in a row and eighth away from home overall in the postseason. And this one may have been the most unlikely of them all for the defending champions.

"I felt they deserved to win tonight," the Rockets' Mario Elie admitted, "but we seem to be pulling the game, like a magician, out of the hat. I don't know how we do it, but this team never quits."

Olajuwon tipped in Clyde Drexler's miss for the winning basket with three-tenths of a second left in overtime. O'Neal had gone out to try to block Drexler's layup, the shot went high off the glass, and Olajuwon was there for only his sixth rebound of the game in the suddenly icy silence of the O-rena.

O'Neal had 26 points and 16 rebounds. Olajuwon had 31 points. But they shared the prominent roles with many others on this night.

For Houston, Kenny Smith, Robert Horry and Drexler also were in the spotlight.

With the Rockets offense sputtering and Olajuwon on the bench with three fouls, Drexler scored the last seven points of the first half to cut Orlando's lead to 61-50.

He kept it up in the third period, and his teammates joined in, especially Smith. The point guard had been quiet offensively in the Western Conference finals and had been beaten badly by Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway early in Wednesday's game.

But Smith was 5-for-6 from 3-point range as Houston made 7 of 11 3s in the quarter to go ahead by as many as nine. Smith's five 3s broke the finals record for a quarter. His seven 3s in the game also broke a finals record of six shared by four players, including Michael Jordan.

Several team 3-point records also fell, the first of many to be broken in a series where both offenses are designed to create open shots from the perimeter.

Smith's biggest heroics came later.

With the big fourth quarter from Hardaway and an overpowering performance by O'Neal down the stretch, Orlando led 110-107 and had the ball as time was running out. The Rockets fouled Anderson, a 75 percent free throw shooter in the playoffs.

He missed both shots but, to the relief of the O-rena crowd, he got the rebound and was fouled again. Incredibly, he missed them both.

Smith got the long rebound and, after a timeout, made the 3-pointer that forced the overtime. "I haven't missed four free throws in a row since I don't know when," Anderson said. "I think it was more mental."

The Magic, the worst free throw-shooting team in the NBA in the regular season, were 12-for-14 until Anderson stepped to the line. Even the normally shaky O'Neal was 5-for-7.

It was a miserable end to what had been a strong night for Anderson. He made four 3-pointers, scored 22 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Before the ball was thrown inbounds to Smith for the game-tying shot, the Magic tried to get a delay-of-game penalty in order to get a look at the Rockets' offensive set. But it wasn't called and, after a fake, Smith got an open look at the basket.

Orlando had a chance for a last shot in overtime, but Horry blocked Dennis Scott's 3-pointer, then made two 3-pointers in overtime.

Smith and Drexler finished with 23 points apiece. Horry scored 19 and Elie 18. Hardaway scored 26 and Horace Grant had 15 points and 16 rebounds for the Magic, who dominated the boards 57-41, but committed 18 turnovers.

The Rockets made 14 of 32 3-pointers. Orlando coach Brian Hill would't second-guess his decision to double-team Olajuwon virtually every time he got the ball, thereby leaving Smith or someone else open.

Mantle undergoes liver transplant

DALLAS (AP) — Mickey Mantle early this morning underwent a liver transplant that doctors said was needed to save his life, hospital officials said.

A liver donor was found late Wednesday and once tests showed it was compatible with the 63-year-old Hall of Famer, surgery began around 4 a.m., said Jennifer Jones, a spokeswoman at Baylor University Medical Center.

"He was already prepped (for surgery) so I don't think it took them very long to start after the liver arrived," she said.

The operation was expected to last between four and six hours, Jones said.

The surgery was winding down at 10:30 a.m., Jones said.

Mantle's liver has been deteriorating because of a small malignant tumor, years of alcohol abuse and a long dormant hepatitis C infection, doctors said. They said his highly publicized bout with alcoholism contributed to his problems.

Mantle was hospitalized on May 28 complaining of stomach pains. Although doctors publicly announced his condition Wednesday, they notified the Southwest Organ Bank Inc. on Tuesday that a new liver was needed.

The organization's director Alison Smith said it was not too unusual for an organ to be found within two days because Mantle's poor health placed him in the Status 2 category.

"His medical condition was worse than any other recipient we had listed from the local area," she said. "I'm sure there will be people who refuse to believe there wasn't some special consideration given because of who he is, but that will not be the case. We hope people realize we work as hard to recover organs for everyone on the waiting list."

Ray True, Mantle's attorney and close friend, spent time with Mantle on Wednesday night and said the former New York Yankees slugger was in pain and couldn't get out of bed.

"He has not eaten anything in days. I've never seen Mickey's face look so thin — he's emaciated," True said.

"He tries to eat. He takes a bite or two and that's about as far as he goes. He knows he has to eat, but he just can't. His stomach is so swollen ... he's got so much pressure on his stomach and other organs it makes him feel full all the time."

At a news conference Wednesday, transplant surgeon Dr. Robert Goldstein said: "I can tell you he will not get out of the hospital without getting a transplant."

True said Mantle's wife, Marilyn, and sons Danny, David and Mickey Jr., have been with Mantle around the clock.

Mantle was the centerpiece of the New York Yankees dynasty in the 1950s and '60s and one of baseball's premier sluggers. The Oklahoma boy who replaced Joe DiMaggio in center field retired in 1968 with 536 career home runs, which ranks eighth on the all-time list. Five years later, he was inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Today is the 26th anniversary of the day his No. 7 jersey was retired at Yankee Stadium.

"Mickey Mantle was an athlete that transcends the game," Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said. "He's a very unique, courageous guy. I hope there's that same determination and willpower that pulls him through this that pulled him through in baseball."

Mantle's off-field drinking exploits, notably with pitcher Whitey Ford and infielder Billy Martin, were almost as heralded as their on-field heroics.

Mantle never kicked his drinking habit and last year he admitted it was a problem. In January 1994, Mantle checked into the Betty Ford Center in Rancho Mirage, Calif., to treat his alcoholism.

His storied career also was sidetracked by many injuries. Doctors speculated the hepatitis may have come from blood transfusions Mantle received during past athletic-related surgeries.

But pain and drunkenness were of little consequence to Mantle, who always said he expected to die young because no male member of his family had lived past 41.

His father died at 41 from Hodgkin's disease, a lymphatic cancer that killed his grandfather at age 40. One of his sons, Billy, also had a long struggle with the disease, then died of a heart attack last year at age 36.

FireFighters, Operating Co. notch wins in Optimist action

PAMPA — The Pampa FireFighters Association, led by the strong pitching efforts of Dustin Harper, Kevin Schaub and Casey Brookshire, defeated Dunlap Industrial of 11-1 in a Major Bambino contest Monday night at Optimist Park.

The three FireFighters pitchers combined to hold Dunlap to one unearned run on one hit while striking out 10 Dunlap batters in the game, which ended after five innings due to the 10-run rule.

After Dunlap pitcher Antonio Estrada held the FireFighters scoreless in the top half of the first inning, Dunlap scored their lone run as Chris Lewis doubled with one out. Lewis stole third and came home when the throw to get him at third went into left field. The FireFighters held Dunlap scoreless the rest of the way and retired 12 straight batters in that span.

The FireFighters scored three runs in the second inning. Schaub drew a base on balls, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on an errant throw to first when Jared Snelgrooves laid down a sacrifice bunt. Snelgrooves went to second on the play. Charlie Craig singled and Snelgrooves moved to third. Snelgrooves scored the second run of the inning on a fielder's choice as Craig was put out at second. Willie Griffin, who reached on the fielder's choice, advanced to second on a wild pitch and scored on a hit by Chris Crow.

The FireFighters added two runs in the third. Brookshire opened the inning with a double and went to third on a single by Michael Cornelison. Cornelison was allowed to advance to second without a throw. Brookshire and Cornelison scored on a single by Schaub.

In the fourth inning, the FireFighters scored three times. Crow led off with a single and advanced to second on a wild pitch. Harper singled and Crow scored as Harper was thrown out at second on the play. Brookshire singled and moved to second on a base on balls to Cornelison. Both runners moved up a base on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Schaub.

Southern Cal's Tucker gains sweet revenge against Miami

By DAVE ZELIO
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — There must be two Ben Tuckers on the Southern California roster.

The Ben Tucker that gave up five straight hits before being yanked in a 15-10 loss to Miami last week was nowhere to be found Wednesday night. This Ben Tucker flustered the Hurricanes in a seven-hit performance that forced a third meeting between the teams Friday. At stake is a berth in Saturday's championship game of the College World Series against either Cal State Fullerton or Tennessee.

The Titans and Volunteers play tonight. USC's 7-5 victory was sweet revenge for the pitchers' nightmare against Miami, and Tucker (7-2) got most of the credit.

"It was two different pitchers — both in attitude and he had his stuff," said Chad Moeller, USC's catcher. "He was pumped up. He could have killed somebody tonight. You didn't want to get in his way, and most guys didn't."

Miami (48-16) came into the game hitting .411 through two games, but finished 7-for-33 (.212) against Tucker and closer Jack Krawczyk.

"We weren't flat coming in tonight. Coach Jim Morris hit."

But as good as Tucker was through six innings (one run on four hits with four strikeouts), USC nearly gave the game away in the seventh.

The FireFighters finished by scoring three runs in the fifth inning. With one out Crow and Harper reached base on errors. Crow scored and Harper advanced to third on a single by Brookshire. Harper scored and Brookshire advanced to second on a fielder's choice putout at first. Brookshire scored the final run on a single by Schaub.

Schaub led the FireFighters with three hits, one base on balls, one run scored and five runs batted in.

Evan Miller and Bradley Stucker also pitched for Dunlap.

Dunlap stands at 3-3 while the FireFighters improved to 2-2-1.

The Operating Company defeated Dunlap Industrial, 15-6, in a Bambino 11-12 year-old Major Bambino League game Wednesday night.

The Operating Company used walks and one hit through three innings to score six runs.

Dunlap pitcher Antonio Estrada faced 19 batters and had nine strikeouts through four innings.

Dunlap's bats came alive in the bottom of the fourth. Estrada homered, Josh Knight and Casey Crane got on board with walks. Dane Ward tripled for two RBIs. Ward scored on a wild pitch. Richard Conner walked and was left on base to finish the inning, leaving the score Operating Company 6, Dunlap 4.

In the top of the fifth led by Evan Miller on the mound, Dunlap made three outs on four batters.

In the bottom of the fifth, Justin Leos singled, Josh Knight doubled and Scotty Willett hit a triple for two RBIs. Willett was left on base.

In the top of the sixth with the score, 6-6, Operating Company wasn't finished. Every player in the lineup scored a run before Dunlap could stop them.

The Operating Company fielded three outs on three batters to win the game in the final inning.

With the Trojans leading 6-1 following solo home runs from Geoff Jenkins (22) and Ernie Diaz (8), Miami got to Tucker for three hits and four runs.

Rick Gama scored from second on Rudy Gomez's 17th double of the year. Tucker stayed on the mound after a visit from coach Mike Gillespie, but gave up a three-run homer to Eddie Rivero, his eighth of the year, pulling Miami to 6-5.

"When I asked him, 'How do you feel?' he was very assertive and aggressive about it," Gillespie said. "If he had some hesitation, we would have had to go to Plan B, which we didn't have. Ben is one of the real big reasons why we were able to string together the wins to get us here. It was a no-brain call."

USC (48-20) managed to get an insurance run in the bottom of the eighth: Moeller doubled and Greg Walbridge was hit by a pitch. Miami relief ace Jay Tessmer then loaded the bases by hitting pinch-hitter Glen Carson. A single by Wes Rachels made it 7-5.

"The difference between the way I pitched the first time out and tonight is I was a lot more aggressive," Tucker said. "There's no wiggle room. You just have to go out with all you've got."

Morris didn't relish a third meeting with USC, which now is hitting .352 through three games.

"It seems like we don't do anything easy," he said. "We've played a lot of close games this year and we seem to do better when our backs are up against the wall."

Rangers rally to beat Royals, 10-4

ARLINGTON (AP) — When the Texas Rangers fell four runs behind the Kansas City Royals and pitcher Tom Gordon, their comeback odds seemed slim.

But Texas found a way to rally as Mark McLemore ripped a two-run homer in the fourth inning and added an RBI single that keyed a six-run sixth in Texas' 10-4 victory Wednesday night.

The Rangers used a 12-hit attack for their 10th come-from-behind victory of the season. Texas has scored 10 or more runs five times this year.

"This team just doesn't give up," Rangers first baseman Will Clark said. "It's not one person. Everybody on this team contributes."

McLemore was certainly overdue. Two weeks ago he was one of the hottest hitters in the majors, but the Rangers utility man went through a 5-for-42 slump that sunk his average from .404 to .319.

McLemore returned to his hot-hitting ways Wednesday night, going 2-for-3 with three runs scored to raise his average to .326.

"I've been up there thinking too much," McLemore said. "The slump was mental and a combination of facing some pretty tough pitching. I'm not going to get a hit every night. Hopefully I have my average going in the right direction again."

Rangers manager Johnny Oates planned on giving McLemore a night off Tuesday, but he was forced to insert McLemore into the lineup in the third because of Juan Gonzalez's bad back.

Part of the reason the comeback was surprising was that Gordon (4-2) had beaten Texas five straight times and he was riding a four-game winning streak.

But the Rangers got to his fastball to win for the sixth time in their last eight games. The victory moved them a half-game behind the first-place California Angels in the AL West.

Kansas City was guilty of three errors and has five over the last two games after going 12 games without an error.

"It was a screwed-up game for us," Royals manager Bob Boone said.

Gordon took a 4-3 lead into the sixth but the Rangers sent 10 men to the plate against Gordon and relievers Rusty Meacham and Dennis Rasmussen. Third baseman Gary Gaetti's fielding error led to three unearned runs in the six-run rally.

"I've had a lot of success against Texas," Gordon said. "But they got me tonight. They swung the bats and I've got to tip my cap to them."

Terry Burrows (2-1) pitched three innings of scoreless relief for the victory.

Gordon was cruising behind a 4-0 cushion, allowing one hit over the first three innings before the Rangers erupted for three runs in the fourth, two coming on McLemore's second homer of the season.

"When you're down three or four runs, you feel you're still in the ballgame," Oates said. "As long as you think you have a chance, you keep battling because you don't know what can happen in a few innings."

Kallander named SWC Commissioner

DALLAS (AP) — Kyle Kallander, who has served as assistant Southwest Conference commissioner since 1992, will become the league's sixth commissioner on July 1.

The Southwest Conference Council of Presidents confirmed Kallander at a Wednesday meeting.

Kallander, 37, succeeds Steve Hatchell, who became commissioner of the new Big 12

Conference last March.

"I'm pleased to accept this role," Kallander said. "Our overall goal is to provide the best opportunities for coaches and student-athletes to compete in the final year of the Southwest Conference. ... Once we get into the 1995-96 seasons, the teams and fans really should be excited about the final seasons of competition."

Fort Worth man executed in 1985 restaurant shooting

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer Ronald Allridge was executed early today for the shotgun slaying of a young woman during the holdup of a fast-food restaurant in Fort Worth more than 10 years ago.

Allridge, 34, had little reaction to the lethal drugs flowing into his arms and declined to make a formal final statement.

"No, I'm not going to say anything," he replied when asked by Warden Morris Jones if he had any final words.

Three brothers stood a few feet away, holding hands and then hugging.

Just before entering the death chamber, they passed to a reporter a note written on the back of a lottery ticket.

"I hope ya'll are happy!" the note said.

At 12:38 a.m. CDT, nine minutes after the lethal drugs began, he was pronounced dead.

"Truthfully, he should have been executed a long time ago," Sharen Wilson, a former prosecutor who worked to convict Allridge, said.

Allridge was condemned for shooting 19-year-old Carla McMillen, who was eating a sandwich with a couple of friends March 25, 1985 when the shotgun-wielding Allridge and two accomplices burst into a Fort Worth Whataburger restaurant and announced a holdup. Ms. McMillen, the gun pointed at her chest, was shot when she raised her hands.

"I don't wish him ill," the victim's mother, Carole, said. "But by the same token I don't wish him free. I don't want him to be able to do this to anybody else. And that's the bottom line. I firmly believe

(the death penalty) is a deterrent if it is carried out in a more prompt manner, and at the very least it deters a repeat offender."

Allridge, an unemployed 10th-grade dropout, as a teenager served prison time for killing a high school student. He also was tied to the slaying of a pizza shop manager.

A brother, James, who was outside driving the getaway car at the time of the McMillen slaying, is on death row for killing a convenience store clerk in Fort Worth. Ronald Allridge drove the getaway car in that slaying, authorities said.

Allridge exhausted his appeals several weeks ago when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review his case. Gov. George W. Bush rejected a request for a 30-day reprieve as well as Allridge's plea that his death sentence be exchanged for a 1,000-year prison term.

"This guy has had three shots already," Mrs. McMillen said. "How many more do we want to give him?"

"All the death penalty opponents say we shouldn't execute an innocent person," Ms. Wilson said. "My God. He's killed three people. He gave a statement admitting to killing this one. We're not talking about some circumstantial evidence case."

Authorities said the shooting was the latest in a string of similar robberies where Allridge and his companions, including a brother, would storm into crowded restaurants and demand patrons surrender money and valuables. During the punishment phase of his trial, prosecutors presented evidence Allridge confessed to at least 20 such holdups.

Man accused of videotaping teen girls during sexual acts

HOUSTON (AP) — At least five teenage girls were lured by an apartment maintenance man to the apartment of a paroled sex offender so they could have sexual encounters that were videotaped by the parolee, police say.

Pasadena police said they believe parolee Richard Jennings, 52, also had sex with some of the girls. He was charged with sexual assault of a child and promotion of child pornography.

Complex employee Vernon Vercher, 19, was charged with sexual assault of a child, police said.

At least five girls ranging in age from 14 to 17 were involved in the incidents, according to police. There may have been as many as 10 victims and one may have been as young as 13, officers said.

"This has been going on for a year or so, so there may be a lot more girls that were involved," police spokesman Sgt. Kelly Payne said.

Vercher would endeavor himself to the girls and then entice them into joining him for sex at Jennings' apartment, police said.

"They consented to be videotaped, and they consented to having sex," Payne said. "A lot of times Jennings had sex with them, too."

Jennings, who is unemployed, sold some of the tapes to friends, police said. He was being held in the Harris County Jail in lieu of $400,000 bond.

He's on parole from Harris County convictions for indecency with a child and sexual assault of a child, both in 1985, authorities say. He was sentenced in 1986 to two concurrent 20-year prison terms and released from prison early in 1992.

Under terms of his parole, which was to end in 2005, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles required Jennings to have electronic monitoring or intense supervision by his parole officer.

Jennings was not wearing a monitoring device when he was arrested, police said.

Vercher was jailed without bond. He is on probation for a 1994 burglary conviction from Waller County, police said.

Officers recovered about 100 pornographic videotapes, a video camera, sex toys, a VCR, two tripods and a computer from Jennings' apartment, Payne said.
