Nation's Deficit Improves

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's balance-of-payments deficit improved dramatically in the April-June quarter, the Commerce Department said today.

The department said by one measurement, the official reserve transactions basis, the deficit improved by $2.5 billion over the first three months of the year. The red ink was $831 million.

The department said the deficit was concentrated in late June, when the floating of the British pound sterling created widespread speculation against the dollar in foreign currency exchange markets.

By a second key measurement, the net liquidity balance, the deficit was an estimated $2.3 billion, an improvement of $800 million from the first-quarter red ink of $3.1 billion.

Although the department's way of figuring the two balances is more complex, basically the net liquidity balance measures most transactions with foreigners, while the official reserve transactions balance is a broader measure and includes transactions with foreign central banks and governments as well.

The department said the speculative pressures against the dollar continued in July before abating, thus guaranteeing that the speculation will show up in the next balance-of-payments report.

Since President Nixon devalued the dollar last December, there has been less speculative pressure in foreign exchange markets than before.

Bids Read, Decision Postponed

Lewis Construction Co., Pampa, was the low bidder for the parking area at Pampa High School when bids were opened by members of the school board this morning.

However, the low bid involves more money than had been budgeted for the project so the board decided to explore certain figures and alternatives with the builder and make a decision at a called meeting Friday night.

The budget for the coming school year will be subjected to a final review by the panel at the meeting Friday night before its official presentation and final adoption at the regular meeting of the school board Monday night.

The parking lot decision will be the only action item on the agenda of the called session.

Trans-Alaska Oil Pipeline Foes Urge Judge To Block Project

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline asked U.S. District Court Judge George L. Hart Jr. today to block the project on grounds that the secretary of the Interior sought to provide more land for the project than was legally allowed.

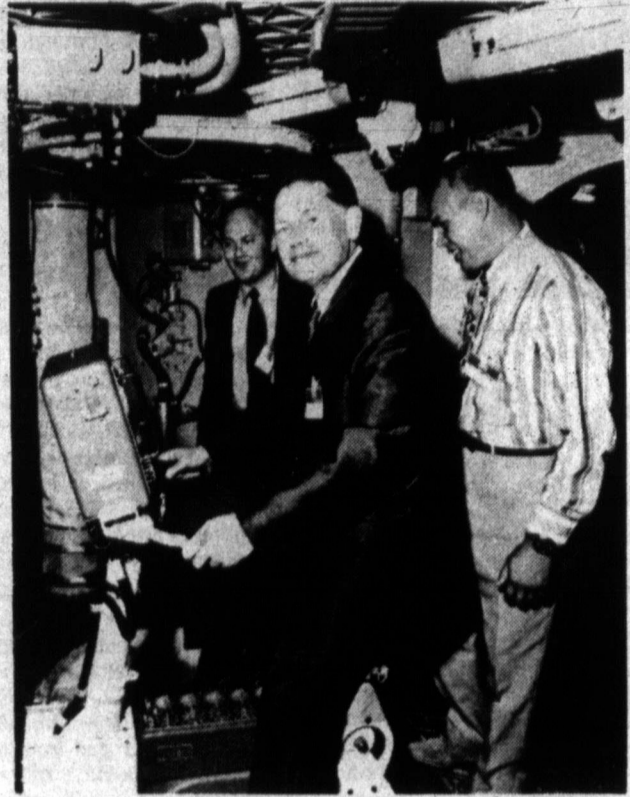

Dennis Flannery, representing environmental groups, argued that the 1920 Mineral Leasing Act would allow the Interior Department to grant a right-of-way for the pipeline no more than 54 feet wide but that Interior, oil companies and the State of Alaska were seeking in various ways to circumvent this restriction to gain much wider corridors plus additional land.

The hearings on the controversial project began Monday with arguments in which the environment groups urged continued study of environmental impacts.

Upon returning today, they submitted, as requested by the judge, their proposal for an order requiring further studies and an environmental lawyer said they estimated such studies would take four months.

In Monday's session, environment groups urged Hart to continue the injunction while requiring the Interior Department to make a study comparing the trans-Alaska oil route with an alternative route through Canada for both oil and gas pipelines.

Hart expressed interest in the

Nixon's Aides Call For Spending Curb

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon's top economic advisers told Republican platform writers today that federal spending must be curbed and Phase 2 economic controls maintained to prevent a resurgence of inflation and higher taxes.

"Price and wage controls need to be continued and improved for the time being," said the President's Council of Economic Advisers. "But we need to look forward to getting rid of them."

"An important reason for great care in adhering to non-inflationary fiscal and monetary policy now is to permit the controls to end without major disruption of the economy."

The council's statement was presented in advance of testimony before the 108-member GOP Platform Committee by the three council members, Chairman Herbert Stein, Ezra Solomon and Marina N. Whitman. The committee's draft platform goes to the Republican National Convention which opens here Monday.

The council's statement supported in effect President Nixon's call to Congress for a $250 billion ceiling on budget outlays for fiscal 1973 and his warning that he will veto programs that he considers to involve excessive spending.

"The key here is the federal budget," the council statement said, "and our effort must be to prevent an explosion of spending which will make inevitable both more inflation and more taxes."

The council painted a rosy picture of the economic outlook, declaring that the economy "is rising at an extraordinary rate — in the most recent quarter this was twice as fast as a normal." The gains promise a substantial further reduction in the 5.5 per cent rate of unemployment, the statement said.

"The economy is well on its way to a healthy combination of high employment and reasonable price stability."

Florida Woman Given Atomic Powered Heart

MIAMI (AP) — "I just keep thinking that I might blow up," joked Virginia Recupero from a hospital bed after becoming the only woman in America with an atomic powered heart.

Mrs. Recupero, a 53-year-old grandmother from Key West, Fla., Monday became the first American woman to have a nuclear-powered pacemaker — designed to regulate and stabilize the heartbeat — implanted in her body.

Less than an hour after the 30-minute operation, Mrs. Recupero said she felt "just wonderful" and found it "really hard to believe I underwent surgery at all."

"They just gave me a local anesthetic and the doctor explained what he was doing during the operation," she said.

an environmental-impact analysis.

During the next two years, Interior issued a draft analysis, held public hearings and, last March, issued what it called a final impact statement.

Now, however, the environment groups argue that Interior's "final" statement still is inadequate and needs further study to satisfy both the law and Hart's injunction.

Government and oil industry lawyers argued Monday that the statement is adequate and complies with the requirements.

American POW Camp As Clark Sees It

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark says the American POW camp he saw in North Vietnam has windows in every bedroom with no bars, a movie theater, bridge tournaments, a basketball court and paperback books.

Clark, back from a two-week tour of North Vietnam, said he met with 10 captured U.S. pilots for more than two hours under guarded conditions one night in a prison about 30 miles from Hanoi.

"These men told me they are being humanely treated," Clark said in an interview here Monday. "Those men are not brainwashed. They say they are in good health and they looked like

Kissinger To Meet Thieu And Bunker On Viet Issue

Announced Trip Raises Speculations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is sending his top national security adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, to South Vietnam Wednesday for "a general review of all aspects of the Vietnam problem, including negotiations in Paris."

Kissinger held his 16th announced secret negotiating session with the North Vietnamese in Paris Monday and then flew to Switzerland to help celebrate his parents' 50th wedding anniversary there. It was the third secret session Kissinger has held in the past six weeks.

He plans to leave Switzerland Tuesday evening and arrive in Saigon about 11:25 p.m. Tuesday night, Saigon time.

The White House cautioned against any speculation that there was a breakthrough in negotiations at Paris. It said the plan to send Kissinger for discussions with top U.S. and South Vietnamese officials has been under consideration "for several weeks" and the President feels it is desirable and appropriate at this time.

Kissinger is scheduled to arrive in Saigon Wednesday night Vietnam time and to stay until Friday. He will meet with President Nguyen Van Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and the top U.S. military commander Gen. Frederick C. Weyland and other officials.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Kissinger will return to report to Nixon before the Republican National Convention gets underway next week.

But he raised speculations over Kissinger's travel plans by declining to say where Kissinger will go when he leaves Saigon Friday evening (local time).

Japan Marks Surrender Anniversary

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito led the Japanese today in observance of the 27th anniversary of Japan's surrender in World War II.

In a tone similar to that he used when he announced Japan's surrender 27 years ago, the emperor told a gathering of about 5,000 relatives of war dead that his heart still aches with pity when he thinks of those who died in the war.

Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka told the meeting at the Military Arts Hall in Tokyo that Japan's prosperity owes much to those who devoted their lives to the nation, and "it is our obligation to make relentless efforts toward a lasting world peace."

At noon, the hour of the emperor's broadcast on Aug. 14, 1945, bells tolled at shrines, temples and churches to signal a minute of silent prayer for the nearly 3 million Japanese soldiers and civilians who died in the war.

Memorial services were held at many places, and leftist youths demonstrated against the Vietnam war at rallies in Tokyo and other cities.

good, strong men."

He said each two men shared a bedroom about 18 feet by 14 feet, with a large window, two cots, one chair and one table "where they kept their personal effects."

Clark said he was skeptical this may have been a "show-piece" camp and "a fraud," but the captured men "said they had been in other camps and they were all about like this one." A North Vietnamese official told him there were "about 25" men in the camp.

The pilots were extremely cautious about their remarks, Clark said, because their meeting was witnessed by officials and guards with tape recorders and cameras "and the men of

Special Education Report Made To Board Members, LLD Faculty

By RAY BAXTER

The engineer who could never diagram sentences and the advertising executive who failed with fractions are due a brief period of mourning for lost classroom hours because the educators have provided a "loophole."

Members of the Pampa school board and faculty involved in special education in the local system heard a crisp, concise report on a program designed to steer faltering students around the learning roadblocks.

It was presented by Joan

Williams, acting director, Language Learning Disabilities, Texas Education Agency, Austin.

She literally grabbed the attention of her audience from the beginning with the statement that one out of every three first graders entering school in Texas this year will not complete high school. While this was being digested, she heaved her other sandbag.

"Five per cent of school-age children in Texas have never been to school!"

By the time she had re-enforced these statements with facts, examples and challenges, interest hung heavy in the minds of those present as evidenced by the questions during that period and those who lingered after the breakfast session at Coronado Inn closed.

She cited as the most significant change in the special education program the shift of responsibility for the program from the agency level in Austin to the local system. This changed it from a fixed pattern that would not superimpose on every area of the state to aid maleable to the needs of the area and the good judgment of those administering to those needs.

Returning to the drop-out side of the problem, the speaker exploded the myth that monetary gain is the chief reason by citing the results of a sampling of ten thousand dropouts.

Money was in fourth place behind such reasons that the classroom work was too hard, irrelevant or that the student could read. She left her audience with the words of one from the sampling.

"Stop teaching me what you are able to teach me and teach me what I am able to learn. Prepare me for a productive place in society."

President In Mountain Retreat Reviewing New Economic Policies

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — Back where he launched it precisely a year ago, President Nixon is assessing his new economic policy in the wooded seclusion of his Camp David retreat.

From all indications, including an optimistic set of comments from key economic advisers, the chief executive is immensely pleased with results of the action he ordered last Aug. 15.

When Nixon flew here Monday—his third trip to the Maryland mountaintop retreat in a week—a White House spokesman said he was "reviewing economic matters, economic policies."

The spokesman signaled presidential concern, however, about congressional moves to exceed his budget—moves which the White House contends could hurt anti-inflation efforts.

It was a year ago today that Nixon, after a weekend conference at Camp David with his top economic advisers, told a nationwide television audience that he had decided to impose a wage-price freeze, to slap a 10-per-cent surcharge on imports and to free the dollar from its links to gold.

He pledged, too, to cut the rate of inflation by half—and his advisers are proclaiming success.

Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz, in an anniversary briefing for newsmen, noted that the rate of inflation over the past four months has been less than 2 per cent. This compares, he said, to the 6.1-per-cent increase in 1969 and to the 5.5-per-cent increase in 1970.

At the same briefing, Budget Director Caspar Weinberger voiced concern that Congress "is on a rather dangerous spending path."

Weinberger said he was referring specifically to a $30.5-billion health-education-labor appropriation bill passed by Congress and now before the President.

The measure was passed by Congress in the face of a threatened presidential veto. And, while aides refused to say what action Nixon would take, they indicated he would strike down the bill—as he implied he would when he asked Congress recently to clamp a $250-billion ceiling on federal spending this year.

Mitchell Blasts Clark Again, Calling Him 'Naive American'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell delivered another blast at Ramsey Clark today, calling him "a naive American" who was "unwittingly duped into playing Hanoi's wretched game."

Clark, who was attorney general in the administration of President Johnson, returned from a two-week visit to North Vietnam with a plea to end the U.S. bombing.

"We are bombing the hell out of that little country and it has got to stop," Clark said at a news conference in San Francisco Monday. "There is no possible moral justification for it."

He also said he thought the North Vietnamese had become "disgusted" at continued emphasis by Americans on when U.S. prisoners would be released.

Mitchell, in a statement released by the Committee for the Re-election of the President, said "Mr. Clark's behavior while within the frontiers of a country waging war against an ally and the armed forces of the United States was inexcusable."

He called on Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic candidate for president, "to face up to this issue." McGovern, who has described Clark as being of Cabinet caliber, said Sunday that Clark is not the issue—the bombing is. Mitchell was attorney general under President Nixon and recently resigned as the President's campaign manager.

Clark said he saw hospitals, schools and churches that had been bombed, as well as several dike installations that had been damaged, but did not witness any actual bombings.

"I believe in the basic goodness of the American people," he said. "If they know the truth, they'll do justice."

Mitchell, who criticized Clark for the second time in recent days, said "Occasionally, a naive American has been unwittingly duped into playing Hanoi's wretched game, into serving as an American megaphone for Communist propaganda. Such a naive American is Mr. Ramsey Clark."

Clark also said Monday he was confident American prisoners will be released when there is a settlement of the war.

Texas King Cotton Shifts Base Of Operations To Dusty Plains

DALLAS (AP) — King Cotton is leaving the "Deep South" environment of East Texas for the rugged, dusty plains of West Texas.

Lured by irrigated water and bigger, more modern farms, this economic mainstay is finding a new home where three-fourths of the state's cotton production is now centered.

In an article written by Carl G. Anderson Jr. for the business review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, published today, it is noted that Texas grows nearly a third of all America's cotton on little more than three per cent of the state's land.

One hundred years ago, when banjos, river boats and black field hands were synonymous with cotton, all of the state's cotton was produced in East Texas.

But, Anderson says, cotton production has been moving west since the turn of the century and 75 per cent of all of it comes from west of Abilene.

The big spur behind this important change has been, in recent years, brought on by modern technology better adapted to the vast areas available in West Texas, and increased irrigation.

While the environment for cotton improves in West Texas, the article states, marginal land is being retired from production in East Texas.

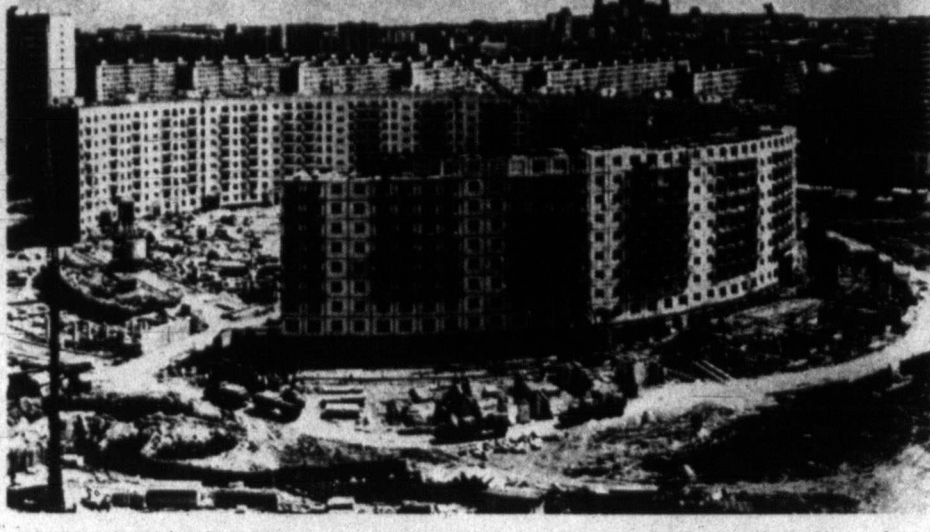

Ironically, East Texas is turning more to beef cattle production, heretofore the backbone, along with oil, of West Texas.

Anderson says the largest cotton crop produced in Texas was the 1949-50 season, when more than six million bales were harvested from just over 11 million acres. That made an average yield of 261 pounds per acre.

"Improved cultural practices pushed yields to 410 pounds per acre in 1968, but setbacks from weather and other adverse growing conditions have since held yields below that level," Anderson notes. "Yields averaged 282 pounds per acre in the 1971-72 season."

"Reflected in this recent drop were drought conditions that impacted on dryland crops and a late, cool spring in the irrigated High Plains that combined with an early wet fall to cut yields there."

The average price received by Texas farmers for cotton has varied widely from 39 cents a pound in 1950 down to slightly more than 17 cents in 1966, which was the lowest price since 1941. However, there was a sharp comeback in 1971 when the price ranged from 26 to 30 cents a pound most of the harvest season.

Average Russ Consumes One-Third Of Goods Enjoyed By Average Yank

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average Soviet citizen consumes about one-third of the goods and services enjoyed by the average American, according to a report prepared by Commerce Secretary Peter G. Peterson.

"Like the United States, the Soviet Union is currently faced with a restive consumer," Peterson said in a report on his trade negotiations with the Russians. "In our terms, however, their consumer problem is that of another generation.

Soviet consumers have only about 10 per cent of the durable goods, and 20 per cent of the soft goods that U.S. citizens have, he said.

"This provides commercial opportunities for the West," Peterson said.

As for services, the average Soviet citizen has about 31 per cent of the personal services, 35 per cent of health services, and 64 per cent of educational services of Americans, his report said.

He said automobiles are just beginning to be produced in significant volume in Russia, but customers must wait four to six years for a new car. "Shorter, but nonetheless extensive, delays apparently exist for the best-quality refrigerators and furniture."

Some goods such as automatic washers, dryers and freezers "do not seem to be manufactured or sold at all in the U.S.S.R.," he said that So-

DPS Regional Officer Faces Trial On Charge Of Violating Bird Law

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) — Maj. Kent Odum, commander of the Corpus Christi region of the Department of Public Safety, will go on trial here Thursday on charges of violating federal migratory bird laws.

Odum is one of 10 defendants charged with shooting migratory birds over a baited area.

The charges contend that Odum, another DPS officer and eight other persons were hunting doves Sept. 1, 1971, in Nacogoches County.

The charges arose from an investigation by a game warden and were based on information filed in January by the U.S. Attorney's office in Tyler.

The defendants were charged before U.S. Magistrate Joe Huffstutler, who also will preside at this week's proceedings.

According to a spokesman with the U.S. Attorney's office in Tyler, the regulations which were allegedly violated prohibit the shooting of migratory birds over an area in which food or other bait has been placed to attract them.

The regulations are part of a treaty the United States has with Canada and Mexico to protect migratory birds.

Odum is commander of the DPS region which extends from Zavala County on the west to Comal County on the north to the Rio Grande on the south and Calhoun County on the east.

Odum was accompanied on the hunting trip by James W. Field, a pilot-investigator with the Corpus Christi DPS region.

The other persons named as defendants were described by Odum as "acquaintances from various places in the state."

Although addresses were unavailable Monday night, the other defendants named were Guy Vernon Layton, Warren and Roger Allen Hazlip and Barnett Dugat, Hubert Oxford, Brian E. Blair and Ravel Ennis.

Odum denied he and his friends had violated the federal regulations. He claimed the seeded area was near where his group had been hunting.

"We had an opportunity to pay a $25 fine without any suspension of our hunting licenses. But we weren't guilty of any violation, so we wouldn't pay the fine," the DPS official said.

Odum added that the incident was "just one of those embarrassing things."

He said neither he or any of the others in the party knew anything of the nearby bait.

Odum is a 35-year veteran of the DPS and assumed his present post in 1957 when the DPS was reorganized into regions.

According to officials with the U.S. Attorney in Tyler a conviction could bring a sentence of up to 6 months in jail or a $500 fine, or both.

Man Arrested For Conduct

Answering a disturbance call last night, Pampa police officers had to forcibly restrain a man to take him in custody for intoxication.

This was on the second call in one night, according to the official report of the incident, reporting the man shouting and beating on the door of his former wife's home.

After the arrest he was taken to Worley Hospital, examined by his personal physician and kept overnight for observation. He was reported released to police this morning.

Police records show three previous disturbance complaints of this nature and one attempted suicide by the subject.

Child Injured In Accident

Veronica Lou Kitchens, 3, was hospitalized for examination and treatment following a car-pedestrian accident in the 700 Blk of Albert St. Monday.

The child started across the street in the wake of an eastbound car and was struck a glancing blow by the westbound vehicle as she suddenly appeared from behind the other car.

No citation was issued. The investigating officer ruled it an unavoidable accident due to lack of visibility.

The injured girl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Kitchens, 901 S. Reid St.

Record Barrels Of Oil Asked

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Major buyers of Texas crude oil have asked for a record 3,751,417 barrels of oil next month, the Railroad Commission reported Monday.

The commission said the nomination for September is 50,113 barrels more than this month, which had the previous record.

The commission said the U.S. Bureau of Mines forecast of September demand for Texas crude is 3,525,000 barrels a day, a decrease of 75,000 from August.

being permanently disabled. The annual cost to the economy is figured at more than $5 billion.

"Despite the public's widely held assumption that the federal government exercises broad authority in the interest of their safety," says Rep. Harley O. Staggers, chairman of the House Commerce Committee, "existing federal authority to curb hazards in a majority of consumer products is virtually nonexistent."

The national commission reported that in agencies which have some powers now, regulation is "burdened by unnecessary procedural obstacles, cumbersome investigative powers, inadequate and ill-fitting sanctions, bureaucratic lassitude, timid administration, bargain-basement budgets, distorted priorities and misdirected technical resources."

Thus, the Staggers committee has responded with a bill, due to reach the House for action soon, creating a new independent regulatory commission with broad power to prevent or reduce product-related deaths and injuries. This would include setting mandatory safety standards and banning products from the marketplace.

Congress Seeking Way To Help Fight Unsafe Consumer Products

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years after a national panel sounded an alarm, Congress is still looking for the best way to help rescue millions of Americans endangered by unsafe consumer products in their homes and schools.

While the concept of new federal protection for consumers is winning increasing support on Capitol Hill in light of a 1970 report by the congressionally created National Commission on Product Safety, a dispute continues over major organizational aspects.

Experts estimate 20 million Americans a year are injured by products in or around their homes and schools, with 30,000 deaths and 110,000 persons

Snyder Residents Work To Restore Normalcy

SNYDER, Tex. (AP) — The worst flooding in the area in 10 years brought death and extensive property damage to this Scurry County community but residents worked today to restore normalcy.

Sixty-six-year-old John Selman lay in his bed with two broken legs when the brackish flood waters pushed through his door Sunday.

An ambulance summoned to his home was stalled three blocks away by rising water. But several National Guardsmen, using a high-axle truck, hauled Selman out of the flooded house on a stretcher.

Another man spent more than two hours clinging to a telephone pole as the creek waters lapped at his feet. He was brought to safety by guardsmen, who worked late in the night, aiding stranded motorists and residents.

The flooding was spawned by torrential rains that dumped an official 4.37 inches on Snyder, although areas north and west of the city sported up to 10 inches.

Damage to the community was estimated at nearly $2 million.

Anti-Poverty Program Facing Obstacles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The war on poverty in Texas won't be won until some of the warriors stop fighting among themselves.

With little sign of victory despite some battles won, federal officials say the government program is too often mired in the confusion of political infighting, minority confrontations, fund juggling and legal suits.

Some distributing agencies are under notice to shape up or face an early cut-off of federal funds. Others are being closely scrutinized for improved performance or a change of heart.

Accusations against some community agencies range from improper political activities to inadequate record-keeping, poor accounting to falsification of travel vouchers and keeping the poor out of any role in administering the program intended to aid them.

Samuel Martinez, who directs the Office of Economic Opportunity in the five-state southwestern region, says poverty agency "can only operate as effectively as the community wants it to operate."

Another federal official, E. T. Barrie, deputy associate regional manpower director of the Department of Labor, described the situation in Dallas "like overhauling a beat-up old car — when one aspect is corrected, another breaks down."

Part of the trouble may lie with a public misconception of what the war on poverty is all about.

OEO isn't in the welfare business. It has nothing to do with food stamps, a monthly dole, or the welter of forms that control them. It aims at helping the poor help themselves.

Through some 950 community action agencies across the nation, its programs touch on widely different areas—child and day care, Head Start and youth leadership, manpower training to fit people for jobs, economic pump priming to get small businesses going, legal services, research into problems like drugs and alcohol which plague the ghettos of the land. Parallel programs for Indians and migrants are run out of Washington.

The state agency has limited funds for doing so much. Last year's national annual budget was $703,845,000 spread around among an estimated 25 million poor needing its services around the country.

Of that 703 million approximately 45 million is allocated to the Southwest.

OEO has 132 agencies and a staff of 121 in the five-state region of Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Louisiana. Its local headquarters is in Dallas. Martinez reckons that probably less than 10 per cent of its funds go into administration.

In most cases OEO work is done by a non-profit community organization; in two counties in Texas — Val Verde and Webb — it is done by existing county agencies.

Although some local agencies are doing a first-rate job, Martinez admits his biggest problems are in Texas. "It's such a big state and there's such a lot of diversity," he said. "There is a vast difference in the cultural aspects of various communities. Acceptability by public officials is more readily accomplished in some places than others."

According to the OEO director, Oklahoma City and Little Rock, Ark., are good examples of acceptance of the poor, while Louisiana and New Mexico have "good sound operations."

But, while "tremendous progress" has been made in Texas, Martinez finds it is still difficult to administer social programs here.

"Overt discrimination (against the poor) is much more evident in some parts of Texas than I have witnessed in other states," he said in a recent interview. "That kind of prejudicial behavior is reflected in a lack of sensitivity toward the programs we operate."

Martinez said a poverty agency is partly dependent on "the attitude of the community to the broad scope of federal funding and its attitude toward the poor — whether it considers them inherently lazy, inherently ignorant, and inherently unmotivated."

"If it does," said Martinez, "then it is difficult for an agency to get the support which it needs to operate. The agency develops an image of being a poorly managed and administered organization. Then it becomes difficult for it to attract quality people to assist in its administration. Good men are reluctant to get embroiled with an organization that has a poor image. Mediocre administrators, even good ones, have difficulties in such cases."

Martinez said most of the strongest critics of the poor never get to see a poverty area.

"They need to view a barrio or a ghetto," he said. "They need to see it, smell it, feel it. They've no conception what it's like to be without a job, to have no education, no school lunches, ill health, a lack of transport."

The frustrations of the poor also play their role.

"The degree to which frustration develops into open hostility is a significant factor," Martinez said. "When it does that, then cooperation is at a minimum. Selection of leaders in the target areas becomes difficult. It may result in ulterior motives entering the picture. Self-serving interests may exceed those of the poor."

Martinez said such cases were exceptions, not the rule, however. Given a chance to participate, the poor often do an excellent job, he said. But he added:

"No one can do a good job when he is angry, frustrated and hostile—with the establishment, with his peers, or even with the agency which funds him. That's when objectivity goes out the window."

Dallas has been the most critical area Martinez has had to tackle since he came to the city from Denver, where he headed a six-state OEO region.

Dallas is now nearing the end of a 120-day shape-up program ordered by Martinez early in April. If things don't improve, its funds could be threatened.

"I am not totally satisfied with the progress made and will probably have to take some additional action," Martinez said.

The Dallas agency has a budget of about $6 million a year, half of it funded by the Department of Labor.

The Martinez investigation uncovered 68 pages of alleged inadequacies in DCA's operation. "We've done a terrible job," conceded computer company owner George Zimmermann, its chairman, after only three of nine members turned up for a meeting of the DCA executive committee.

Board member Stanley Gaines was ousted from his $10,000-a-year job as director of DCA's credit union program and unsuccessfully sued both OEO and DCA. Zimmermann said he would not seek re-election as board chairman.

OEO, charging racial discrimination in DCA's hiring practices, ordered the agency to suspend all further employment. It was said more blacks were being hired than Mexican-Americans or Anglos.

The state of poverty programs in some other Texas cities is only marginally brighter. Some samples:

The county-run Community Action Agency in Val Verde County in Southwest Texas is under fire for late and inaccurate financial reporting and for keeping the poor out of a share in administration of the program. Martinez first put Val Verde County officials on notice that they faced total defunding of their $300,000 program unless a list of charged deficiencies was remedied within five weeks. This deadline was lifted after Martinez paid a personal visit to Del Rio and convinced himself the townspeople meant business.

In Central Texas, the fate of Navarro County Action Committee remains in suspense at Corsicana. County officials say NCAC officials have been playing politics by backing a public housing project at Kerens and "running a taxi service with government-owned vehicles."

OEO officials urged NCAC director Jerome Vacek and County Judge Kenneth Davis to get together and iron out their difficulties. At last report, there was no progress.

Altogether there are 48 separate community agencies operating in Texas.

Says Martinez: "Once the principals of the community—the county, the municipal authorities and so on—get out and recognize the poverty situation, it is possible to find means to resolve the problem. If the public officials won't show sensitivity, they (the poor) will turn to the radical elements and self-styled leaders who have motives of their own."

"Of course, I can't wave a magic wand to put things right, although some people expect that. A demonstration of action is needed in support of a verbal commitment."

GI Bill Education Benefits Disclosed

New insights into veterans' use of GI Bill education benefits are revealed in a comparison of World War II, Korean Conflict and Vietnam era participation rates at the six-year point in all three programs, according to Jack Coker, Veterans Administration Regional Director.

The Vietnam era program was six years old in June, 1972. When only those who enrolled in school are considered, Vietnam era veterans are now ahead of both the World War II and Korean Conflict groups in participation.

Vietnam era veterans, though they were already the best educated group of servicemen in history, are going to school at the rate of 36.9 per cent compared to 34.1 per cent for Korean Conflict veterans and 32.7 per cent for World War II.

They are going to college at the rate of 21.9 per cent compared to 20.1 per cent for the Korean Conflict veterans and 13.8 per cent for World War II.

When all forms of training are considered, Vietnam era veterans are participating at a higher rate than Korean conflict veterans, the study reveals, but they are still behind World War II veterans.

The overall participation rates are: Vietnam, 40.6 per cent; Korean conflict, 39.8; and World War II, 45.3 per cent.

Out of 5.9 million eligible Vietnam era veterans, 2.4 million have used their education benefits. At the same point in time for the Korean group, 2.1 million out of 5.3 million eligibles have participated. Some 6.9 million out of 15.3 million eligible World War II veterans trained during the six year comparison period.

Worry Clinic

By George W. CRANE
Ph.D., M.D.

Prof. Nichols may be opening up a virgin field for psychological research. Alas, it has been almost overlooked by previous scientists. But empirical observation shows it may be a boon to medical diagnosis as well as to Cupid!

CASE U-562: Prof. David G. Nichols is the talented head of the psychology department at the University of Colorado.

"Dr. Crane," he asked, "have you a bibliography dealing with the relationship of odors to various human ailments?"

"For I was interested in your recent newspaper case about the dog that turned on its human friend after the latter had developed leukemia."

"I remember that physicians used to comment on the characteristic scent of typhoid fever patients."

"And schizophrenics seem to give off a certain odor, probably due to anxiety."

"But do you have any other scientific references on this subject?"

OLFACTORY PSYCHOLOGY

Prof. Nichols is pioneering in a very valuable field for human research.

When I was 16, I suffered from what pioneers termed "milk sick."

This ailment caused the death of Abraham Lincoln's mother and I had lost a cousin the summer before to the same malady.

For it apparently results from poison absorbed by cattle when pastures dry up and they are driven into the woods to forage for food.

There they eat white snake root, whose poison is secreted in their milk and thence can be fatal to human beings.

My uncle, who had nursed that cousin who died of milk sick, sniffed the air of my bedroom and immediately exclaimed:

"This is milk sick."

For a peculiar sweetish odor apparently is linked with such a sick room.

We also know that in certain dogs, such as beagles and bloodhounds, the sense of smell is so acute that they can pick one man out of possibly 1,000.

And they can follow a spoor that may be several days old.

Moreover, male animals seem hypersensitive to sexual odors of the females of their own species.

But don't grow excited by similar odors in females of an alien species.

Blind people also train their attention to the point they are much more skillful at analyzing body odors!

Back in the 1920s I did a lot of research on both the deaf and some blind teen-agers.

One blind girl in Wisconsin, could detect colors merely by smell.

Despite the fact we completely blocked her vision by taping her eyes (even though she was supposedly blind and in the State School for the Blind), she still identified colors with her nose!

Perhaps she had developed such a refined olfactory sense that she could detect some faint difference in the chemical odors of the various dyes used on the Holmgren yarns and other colored fabrics.

Physicians often report differences in the odors of virgins vs. married women patients even after the latter are bathed thoroughly.

And it is highly possible that human males subconsciously react to faint sexual aromas of the opposite sex.

Perhaps Prof. Nichols will ultimately open up an entirely new field of medical diagnosis, as by training dogs to sniff out previously undiagnosed cases of diabetes or breast cancer vs. prostatic cancer, etc.

Alas, olfactory research has been largely overlooked in psychology, but the keen scent in dogs suggests human beings might profitably cultivate it.

Blind patients should make excellent observers.

Prof. Nichols merits a double salute for pioneering in this fertile realm.

(Always write to Dr. Crane, Hopkins Bldg, Mellot, Ind. 47958 enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Board member Stanley Gaines was ousted from his $10,000-a-year job as director of DCA's credit union program and unsuccessfully sued both OEO and DCA. Zimmermann said he would not seek re-election as board chairman.

OEO, charging racial discrimination in DCA's hiring practices, ordered the agency to suspend all further employment. It was said more blacks were being hired than Mexican-Americans or Anglos.

PAMPA, TEXAS 66th YEAR TUESDAY, AUG. 15, 1972

Ford's Body Shop Fixes Car Damage

For the best body work in town—and in the immediate area—the business to visit is Ford's Body Shop at 111 N. Frost.

Coyle Ford, owner and manager of Ford's Body Shop, has several expert body repairmen, including himself, ready to fix your crumpled fenders and caved-in doors. Ford's probably does the most auto body work in the Pampa area.

Robert McCain, shop manager, said Ford's appreciates the business given them by people from White Deer, Miami, Lefors, Mobetie and other area towns.

The people come to Ford's because they know the most modern equipment is used in restoring the once-beautiful features of a damaged car. And with the best equipment and trained, experienced repairmen, you can be assured that the best job will be done. Satisfaction is guaranteed to suit the customer's taste.

With as many cars on the road as there is today, it is nice to know that if your car is involved in an accident, there is a place where repairs can be made as cheaply and as beautifully as at Ford's Body Shop.

There is always an attendant on duty to help you with your problem if an accident should occur.

Ford invites you to come by the shop anytime to look over the fine facilities and check some of the work done at Ford's Body Shop.

Clements Barber Shop Has Fountain Of Youth Styling

Looking for a Fountain of Youth?

Clements Barber Shop, 310 S. Cuyler, may not be able to restore youth, but a styled haircut and scalp massage can help one look and feel younger.

Looking forward has been a policy of Bob Clements, who has been a barber since 1946. He has had training at Amarillo, Tyler and Dallas.

"I went to some of these styling shows and saw what some of these barbers were doing that I couldn't do and I said to myself, that's for me," Clements said.

In an effort to provide better service for his customers, particularly in these days when men care about their hair and its appearance, Clements has kept up with the latest trends and methods of haircutting and styling.

Clements has satisfied customers from Miami, Wheeler, McLean, Canadian, Pampa and other Panhandle points. With a practicing knowledge of hair-less retardation, Clements massages the hair and scalp for 20 minutes to increase the circulation and to relax the scalp.

"If this procedure is not followed, the hair stands straight up, making a good styling or cutting job nearly impossible," Clements claimed.

Clements doesn't claim to be able to restore hair that has been lost, but he does feel he can help a person to retain the hair he has.

Handling a line of Roffler's products, Clements recently received an award for being the best Roffler salesman in the Lubbock-Amarillo-Pampa area.

Keeping pace with the need of a style for long hair advocates, the Avante, or forward look, was created by Roffler.

Men who want to keep their hair long but clean and neat will especially like this style. Clements has added the style to his list of credits.

"The natural look" is Clements' specialty, but he does regular barbering as well as styling.

So if you're looking for aids to a more youthful appearance—or if you're young and want to look your best—drop by Clements Barber Shop or call 665-1231 for an appointment.

New Satellite To View Hazards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has sent aloft a satellite to investigate the potential hazards to space travel from minute space particles.

The satellite, known as Explorer 46, is equipped with 76 detectors to record the impact of small meteoroids.

Launched Sunday from Wallops Island, Va., the satellite will circle the Earth every 98 minutes in an orbit 506 miles above Earth at its high point and 305 miles at the low point.

Mexico is known as the "storehouse of the world" because of the fertility of its soil and its almost inexhaustible mineral and other natural resources.

And No-Roach does this without any attention from the housewife, not even any tell-tale odor to give away the secret.

Easy-to-use, odorless, and as the name tells you effective. What more could any householder ask for? No more says the Johnston people. Just ask for Johnston's No-Roach as simple to use as it is effective.

You can obtain Johnston's No-Roach at Ideal, Furr's, Save-U, Cashway, Piggy Wiggly and all food stores. Dist. by Affiliated, Kimbell.

A FORWARD LOOK — Looking forward has always been the policy of Roffler Industries. And to keep pace with the need of a style for neat long hair advocates, the Avante—or forward—look was created. The style is one of many available at Clements Barber Shop.

Mars Landing Test Successful

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — NASA officials report the third in a series of four Roswell tests of a Mars landing system was conducted successfully Sunday after several days' delay because of unsatisfactory weather.

They said a balloon carrying a facsimile Viking lander and parachute system was launched from the Roswell Industrial Air Center about 7:30 a.m., and the lander was softly dropped onto White Sands Missile Range later in the day.

The test was a repeat of the first of the series July 11. NASA said the rerun was necessary because the first launch exceeded planned conditions and the lander suffered some damage on impact.

The series is scheduled for completion with the fourth launching Friday in the least severe of the tests.

DO-IT-YOURSELF Repair a Handle with Care

By MR. FIX
Hatchets and axes need sharpening from time to time and the claw in a hammer may need touching up with a file. But otherwise such tools last nearly forever.

The one part that doesn't is the handle. The wooden handle does crack or break in time and it seems a shame to part with the tool.

Handles can be replaced but they must be replaced properly. A different handle off some other tool is not proper replacement. It will make the tool difficult or even dangerous to use.

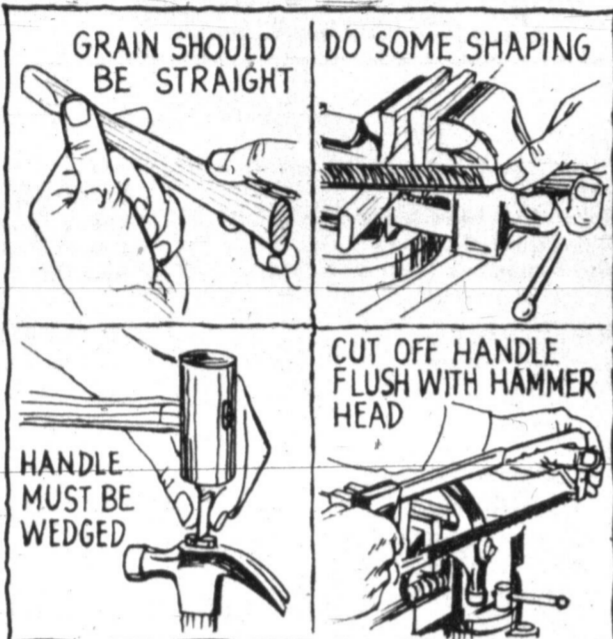

Tools such as these are carefully balanced. When a new handle is put on a hammer it should achieve the same balance as when it was new. Pairing a new handle to the old head should be done with care. Neither picking nor fitting should be done hurriedly.

Try to find a handle as close to the original as possible. Consider size, shape and weight. Make certain it is for the same kind of tool.

Once you have picked one that seems right, check its grain. The grain should be straight, not run diagonally across the handle.

No handle fits the first time. Some shaping is necessary. Put the head on as far as it will go without forcing. The head will leave a mark where it cannot go any farther.

Use a wood rasp to take away wood at that point. Work slowly and remove the same amount all around.

Fit and file, working off the excess wood until the handle fits the eye of the head with wood touching all interior surfaces evenly. Try to keep the original shape of the handle and do not leave sharp corners which are the first to break.

Once the handle is fitted it must be wedged. Some handles have slots already cut for the wedges. These are necessary if you use wood wedges. Metal wedges make their own cuts.

Wooden wedges may be hard to find. It's worth the effort to cut them from the old handle since wood wedges can be fit to size. Metal wedges are usually used for tightening an old handle.

Drive the wedges in gently. Slim wedges that go in deeply are preferable to short, fat ones.

With the wedges in, finish by cutting away the excess so that it is flush with the hammer head. Smooth the end.

Don't leave the handle unfinished. Seal it so it does not absorb moisture and warp. Use shellac or varnish applied in several thin coats. Never paint a handle, since paint hides cracks.

IT'S IN THE NAME — No-Roach delivers what it promises—no roaches. Or many other crawling pests. And it works without any attention from the housewife. Just wipe it on, walk away and let it work.

What's In A Name? No-Roach Answers

SHAKESPEARE: "WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

And the Johnston people answered: "A complete description of our product—that's what!"

As a matter of fact, the Johnston people are absolutely right. They make a product called No-Roach. The name says it all: No-Roach.

What No-Roach does—all right in the name.

And if the Johnston people were to add to the name of their product enough letters to describe how to use No-Roach, it would still be a short, simple name. Like "brush-on."

That's all there is to Johnston's No-Roach. Just brush it on and the cockroach population will begin to decrease immediately.

That's true of any other crawling pest problem you might have, too. Johnston's No-Roach is a compound that quietly, very discretely works for you night and day infecting every insect that crawls across its path with a deadly poison that lingers long enough for the carriers to get back to the nests and infect the unborn eggs.

And No-Roach does this without any attention from the housewife, not even any tell-tale odor to give away the secret.

Easy-to-use, odorless, and as the name tells you effective. What more could any householder ask for? No more says the Johnston people. Just ask for Johnston's No-Roach as simple to use as it is effective.

You can obtain Johnston's No-Roach at Ideal, Furr's, Save-U, Cashway, Piggy Wiggly and all food stores. Dist. by Affiliated, Kimbell.

FAA Hopes Security Systems Deter Hijackers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tighter security measures by the nation's airlines and a decline in the number of persons arrested have given Federal Aviation Administration officials hope that would-be hijackers are being deterred.

The FAA said 170,078 persons underwent special security checks in June because they appeared to fit the FAA-developed profile of hijacker behavior. This compared with 80,059 such checks in May.

The FAA says 453 persons were prohibited from boarding in June because their actions were suspicious, they could not properly identify themselves or they were guilty of a law violation. This compared with a total of 474.

There were 148 arrests in June, compared with 192 in May. There were 16 arrests for various phases of air piracy, 60 for narcotics charges, 14 for possession of handguns, 4 for being fugitives from other jurisdictions, and 54 for immigration violations and other offenses.

The FAA last April ordered airports to provide improved security arrangements at terminals and told the airlines to tighten preboarding screening techniques.

State Eradicates Marijuana Patch

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Gus Douglass says marijuana hunters who found a bonanza in West Virginia's eastern panhandle counties last year will do well by staying home this summer.

The commissioner reported Sunday that as of August 7, crews from his agency had destroyed 1,111 acres of marijuana since an eradication program, funded by the legislature, began in May. Douglas said "this is nearly one-half of the known 2,600 acres growing wild" in the state.

Pampa Man To Attend Convention

In recognition of outstanding achievements in the insurance field, Delbert Woodie, 2000 N. Hobart, Pampa, will be the guest of Farmers Insurance Group Aug. 24-27 at its Topper Club Convention at Houston, according to R.G. Lindsley, vice president in charge of sales for the company, whose home office is in Los Angeles. Headquarters will be at Astroworld.

Keynote speaker will be J.E. Metschan, vice president in charge of underwriting for Farmers Insurance Group.

Topper Club honors are awarded annually by Farmers Insurance Group to its leading district managers and agents throughout the company's operating territory. Membership is made up of those who meet production standards in all five member companies of the organization. Wives of club members also will be guests.

Arrangements for the convention are being handled by Darell F. Norris, regional manager, and Marion Hedrick, regional sales manager of the Texas region with headquarters in Austin.

Delegates to the Texas meeting are from the entire state of Texas.

Dear Abby
Mom wants to ease little girls' curiosity

By Abigail Van Buren
 (© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.)
DEAR ABBY: My neighbor has three very nice daughters, ages 9, 10 and 11. No sons. This lady stops and visits with me when I am out in the yard and she seems to be a patient and conscientious mother.

I have a four-year-old son and a 13-year-old daughter who play with the neighbor's children. Recently, when my two were at this neighbor's house, she said to my daughter, "I wish I had a son. Would you ask your mother if she would let you bring your little brother here so my daughters and I could give him a bath. Then my girls could see what a little boy looks like. That would help to satisfy their curiosity."

I really can't see any reason to refuse this request, Abby, but I'd like your opinion about it.

MASS. MOM
DEAR MOM: If the girls just happened to be around when you were bathing your son, their natural curiosity could be satisfied, and I see nothing wrong with it. But I wouldn't set up a bath at your neighbor's so the girls could "help," and thereby satisfy their curiosity.

DEAR ABBY: I could have written that letter from the teen-aged girl who was head over heels in love with an "older man" who was separated from his wife.

I know exactly how that girl felt. At 16 I was in her shoes. My dream man was divorced and the father of small children. I was inexperienced, and thrilled beyond words that an older man [of 26!] would even look at me. I lost my heart and my head to him, not realizing that what he saw in me was a free babysitter and a bed partner when he felt the need. And I didn't cost him a dime.

My love affair with him was my first. At the same time, it put me in social limbo. Boys my own age seemed like infants. I missed the school proms, and the fun of being 16. It made a liar out of me, a sneak, and it robbed me of my last carefree days of youth.

What did I get instead? The constant fear of unwanted pregnancy. [I was lucky, it never happened.] Alienation from my parents who really loved me, and two years devoted strictly to him. I also got the very real pain of losing my first love, for would you believe that right in the middle of our big love affair he married somebody else!

That was seven years ago. And it was the best thing that ever happened to me. Sometimes I still ache a little at the thought of him, but not because of losing him. But for what I lost of myself.

GLOWWORM
DEAR GLOWWORM: Thanks for sharing your slice of life. Perhaps another teen-ager who is in love with an older (married or separated) man will learn from your experience. But probably not. Would YOU have listened when you were 16? Pity!

DEAR ABBY: How should one handle relatives who travel thru several states to visit you without giving you any notice.

A couple of years ago, my husband's brother and his wife came unannounced to visit us for several days. We both work and I was inconvenienced. I asked them to please let us know when they were coming next time so I could make plans and be more prepared.

Well, they showed up again this year without preparing us, which made me angry. They said, "We don't like to promise to be anywhere on a specific date because we don't want to be a slave to a schedule on our vacation."

On this last visit of theirs I was sick and did not feel like cooking, entertaining or visiting. I was totally unprepared for this unexpected company.

When they left I told them if they could not give me a few days notice, not to come again. My husband thought I was rude. These people read "DEAR ABBY," so please print this.

ANGRY IN TEXAS
DEAR ANGRY: Here's your letter. I hope it helps.

Problems: Trust Abby. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, BOX 6790, L. A., CALIF. 90008 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 6790, Los Angeles, Cal. 90008, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

My son's science teacher told me about research being done to help worms forget. Soaking a worm's tail in a chemical wipes out his memories.

I don't remember the name of the magic elixir. And this is hardly important because to begin with, I haven't any worms. And, if I did, I rather think I'd let them keep what remembrances the poor things might happen to have. Worms have little enough as it is.

I do not mean I want the research stopped! After all, the scientists are obviously after bigger game than worms! Hopefully, they are working with worms in order to someday help man remember and forget.

This can either frighten or inspire us. We can be overwhelmed with Orwellian fears of mind-control.

As a woman and a mother, I choose to look hopefully into the future, when the worms have helped me to an easier life.

No longer will I be halfway to Florida before remembering I didn't turn off the gas under the bacon pan.

Not once will I open a file drawer and discover five neatly packed books—the ones I thought had been mailed to friends three months before.

Oh, what a dream world this will be! We will remember what we should remember and forget what we want to forget. The faux pas of the past need

Woman Runner Says after 28-Mile Stint She Can Feel Refreshed; Solve Problems

By PEACE MOFFAT
 AP Newsfeatures Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) —

How would you like to run six miles? Or what about 16 — or even 26, the official distance for a race to be classified as a marathon. At the end of one of those stints, a long-distance runner says it takes up to six weeks to recover physically.

But for some people running a marathon is a real groove. Take, for instance, Kathy Miller, a self-described "service brat," who was in town recently for the Crazylegs Marathon, a six-mile race for women only in Central Park, sponsored by S. C. Johnson & Son, and supervised by the Road Runners Club of New York.

Although she came in sixth, Miss Miller wasn't displeased. "I'm not much good at short runs; I've got a lot of stamina, and I'm mostly concerned about just getting there. This was more like a sprint for me," the long-legged runner admitted.

Miss Miller, a resident of Syracuse, N. Y., says she started running at Lynchburg College in Virginia. "I had been playing lacrosse and field hockey on the girls' teams and was recruited by the men's track coach, who needed team members. He said, 'gee — you won't win anything, but you can pick up some points for the team just being there.'"

It turned out a little differently. In between being sports editor of the school paper and entering a local beauty pageant, Miss Miller became a good runner, and by the time she transferred to the University of Syracuse, she was working out with the men's cross-country team.

"I wanted to run a marathon, but the coach told me no woman in the world can run a marathon," she recounts. "Then one day I ran 28 miles, and since that was two miles over the official marathon distance, he changed his mind."

The next step was to enter Miss Miller in an actual race — the Boston Marathon. But since the rules of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) forbade women from entering such events, this was a slight problem.

"I took my medical at Syracuse, entered under just my initials; the coach picked up my numbers and when we started the race, I had on a hooded sweatshirt," Miss Miller says.

But two miles down the road, the hood fell back, the officials saw there was a female competing in a race that was supposed to be just for men, and there was a ruckus. The result was Miss Miller's suspension from the AAU for six months.

"Maybe they had a point in Boston — maybe I was interfering," she says, looking back. "But I had worked really hard, and become kind of good. So the next year I went back to Boston, crashed the race again, and did it an hour faster. Other girls crashed too in the following years, and all of a sudden, we were beating some of the men. The press got onto it, and finally this year, the AAU changed rules, and gave us official sanctions to run on an 'experimental' basis. That means we can run in the same races with men, but we can't compete against them, and have separate scoring, and separate starting lines."

Miss Miller, who also has made a film about racing, received a masters degree in public relations and likes to write. She says she usually runs about 10 miles a day.

"When I run, I run how I feel," she says. "I can be exhausted before running, and then feel refreshed afterwards. Through running, you're an active part of the environment. You hear your heart beating, your feet hitting the ground. If you're in shape, it's great."

"I can sort out so many things in my mind when I'm running," she goes on. "After an 18 or 20 mile run, my problems are solved."

After 14 competitive marathons, Miss Miller says she wants to keep on running. "The competition is secondary," she says. "Most important is the enjoyment. Long after the running part is over, I'd just like to be able to go out and totter around the block."

LONG DISTANCE RUNNER — Kathy Miller likes to run — not short sprints, but distances up to 28 miles. At left, she is third from right, getting ready to start in the Crazylegs Marathon, held recently in New York's Central Park.

The fact that you have made a limit bid does not mean that you won't find another call if partner jumps to game, provided that his jump to game is made in some new suit.

North's one no-trump response is correct. He only has eight high-card points and definitely should not respond two hearts. Had South jumped to three no-trump or four spades North would have passed quickly but South jumped to four hearts and North's hand suddenly became tremendous.

He decided to use Blackwood on the way to a slam and when South jumped to

U.S. Sprinters Good If Not Household Words

MUNICH (AP) — America's shorter-distance runners, for years dominant in Olympic Games competition, again appear powerful but the names are not at all the same as in the past.

When the sprinters go to their marks, the U.S. names will include Eddie Hart, Larry Black, Chuck Smith, Rey Robinson and Larry Burton. Even in the 400-meter dash, normally a U.S.-dominated event, the names are not household words.

Still, America figures to do well, despite the youth of the team. (In the three shortest races, the oldest runner is 25 and the average age is 21.8 years.)

Hart, the oft-injured former University of California NCAA champ, took 1972 cautiously and wound up making the U.S. team with a world-record-tying 9.9 in the 100 meters. He was joined on the team and in the record books by the 20-year-old Robinson, a virtual unknown until mid-June.

The third sprinter, husky Robert Taylor, came along quickly at the end of the season, making the team over such better-known dashmen as Mel Pender, Ivory Crockett, Marshall Dill, Willie Deckard, Willie McGee and Gerald Tinker.

For the first time in years, the United States is in jeopardy in the 100 since Russia's Valeriy Borzov, a powerful, picture book sprinter from the Ukraine, is unbeaten in the last two years.

However, the 200 meters is the biggest question mark.

Smith is in his fourth year of sprinting. Burton his first and Black his fourth. Smith was the surprise winner of the National AAU title and was first in the U.S. trials in 20.4. Burton, with a 20.3 time to his credit for 220 yards, shocked the experts by making the team.

And Black ran two 20.0 times this year, showing a powerful kick.

Jamaica's world record-holding Don Quarrie, Kenya's Julius Sang and Borzov may be favored but the Americans proved unpredictable once this year.

(One of a series on extraordinary happenings in each of the 16 modern Olympic Games.)

AMSTERDAM — The most exciting track personality at Amsterdam was the Canadian schoolboy Percy Williams, who took the 100-meter in 10.8 seconds and the 200 in 21.8 seconds.

A student at Vancouver College, Williams had hitchhiked his way across Canada to compete in the Canadian championships and Olympic try-outs at Toronto and had then worked as a waiter in the city to cover his accommodation and expenses.

Prior to this celebration of the Olympic Games, the great Paavo Nurmi (Finland) had never negotiated a hurdle or crossed a water jump in track competition. He was a complete novice at steeplechasing.

Yet, just for the novelty, he entered for the steeplechase at Amsterdam and despite falling into every ditch, he won his heat and finished a very creditable second in the final to his countryman, Toivo Loukola. This was Nurmi's last Olympic appearance and he duly collected another gold medal in the 10,000-meter.

For the first time women's events in track and field were included in the Olympic program. The first Olympic champions were Elizabeth Robinson (USA) in the 100-meter, Lina Radke (Germany) in the 800-meter, Helena Konapacka (Poland) in the discus, Ethel Catherwood (Canada) in the high jump.

For the first time, the Olympic flame was lit in Olympia, Greece, and carried to the site of the Games. Runners bore the torch through Greece, Yugoslavia, Austria and Germany on its way to the Netherlands.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

(The above was provided by ABC Sports, which will be giving full Olympic television coverage from Munich, Aug. 25 through Sept. 10.)

16 Olympic 400-meter gold medals awarded down through the years and the only question this year is which American will win.

John Smith, the world 440-yard record holder, was No. 2 in the trials with a fast time of 44.3 seconds.

The man he didn't catch at Eugene, Ore., was former UCLA teammate Wyane Collett. Collett came through with a swift 44.1 to win the trials and jump into the No. 3 spot on the all-time list. The time is the fastest ever run at sea level.

Vince Matthews, the old man of the U.S. sprint corps at 25, is the only one with Olympic experience. He ran the first leg on America's world-record 1,600-meter relay team in 1968 at Mexico City.

Matthews, of Brooklyn, N.Y., once ran 44.4 in the event. He made the team with a 44.9.

The 800 features new cowbird record holder Dave Wottle against probably the world's toughest half miler, Russian star Yevgeniy Arzhanov.

Wottle, the Bowling Green ace who ran 1:43.3 to equal the world 800-meter mark, will have to beat Arzhanov, unbeaten the last two years.

Ken Swenson, the former American record holder, has apparently recovered from an Achilles tendon injury, and could be a factor.

The 110-meter high hurdle picture clouded up quickly in the last month.

Virtually unbeatable Rod Milburn began losing and he made the U.S. team only by taking third by an eyelash in the U.S. Trials. Tom Hill, who ran 13.5 at the trials, appears to have regained the form which took him to the 1970 AAU title, and Willie Davenport, the defending kingpin, is back.

The Americans are favored, and even a sweep is not unlikely, but certainly things aren't as clear this season.

Ralph Mann has something to prove and that's why he's the first choice of most in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

Mann was the NCAA and AAU champion in 1969, 1970 and 1971 as a student at Brigham Young but had a poor season in 1972 after graduating. He finally found himself, with the aid of UCLA Coach Jim Busch, and the tall (6-4) hurdler hopes his 48.4 time is just a forecast of what he's capable of.

Dave Hemery of England set the world record at 48.1 in Mexico City four years ago and Mann's time is the second best on record. Hemery is back, and Uganda's John Akii-Bua as well as Kenya's William Koskei are top threats.

The U.S. teams in the 400 and 1,600-meter relays are both among the favorites with the 400 team less solid.

Cuba, Russia and Jamaica have swift quarter-mile four-somes and it'll probably take a world mark—better than the 38.2 the U.S. team did last Olympics—to win.

Football Roundup

OAKLAND (AP) — The Baltimore Colts gave pro football its first taste of the Wishbone Offense, all the rage on college gridirons, when nothing else seemed to work against the Oakland Raiders.

But the Raiders broke the Wishbone and won Monday night's National Football League preseason game 16-0.

George Blanda, who played college football when the Single Wing was still big on campus, kicked field goals of 24, 30 and 23 yards. He also added the extra point after Kenny Stabler's 8-yard touchdown pass to Fred Biletnikoff in the third period.

"It looks like George is kicking as good as ever. You could see that tonight," said Raiders Coach John Madden of the well-preserved star whose 45th birthday is on opening day of the NFL season.

Jack Mildren, who mastered the Wishbone as Oklahoma's quarterback, made it go 48 yards in the fourth quarter against Oakland.

Mildren rushed for more than 1,000 yards last year, but pitched out on every running play Monday night. He completed a 39-yard pass to former college teammate Willie Franklin but then gave up an interception which ended the drive and the night's Wishbone experiment.

Baltimore's No. 1 quarterback, Johnny Unitas, passed for 126 yards before leaving the field at halftime. But three field goal attempts by Jim O'Brien in the first half failed.

Stabler completed 8 of 12 tosses for 109 yards after leaving starter Daryle Lamonica.

In other NFL developments Monday, Dallas Coach Tom Landry moved backfield coach Dan Reeves into the backup quarterback spot behind Craig Morton and switched Sid Gilman from the receiver and development job into Reeves' post.

The shakeup followed a shoulder separation suffered by No. 1 quarterback, Roger Staubach.

expected to be sidelined eight to 12 weeks.

Wide receiver Karl Noonan of the Miami Dolphins was reported in satisfactory condition at Mercy Hospital in Miami after suffering a shoulder separation. Doctors said they would decide within the next couple of days whether Noonan would require surgery.

Tackle Dan Yochum, Philadelphia's No. 2 draft choice, ended his holdout and agreed to a no-cut contract with the Eagles.

Wide receiver Jerome Barkum, the New York Jets' top draft pick, also agreed to terms and was expected to sign his contract today at the team's training camp in Hempstead, N.Y.

Bob Grim, veteran wide receiver obtained by the New York Giants from Minnesota in the Fran Tarkenton deal, reported to camp at West Long Branch, N.J. for the first time.

Sain Has One Leg On Own Triple Crown

CHICAGO (AP) — Johnny Sain, the Chicago White Sox pitching coach, has one leg on his own personal triple crown.

Wherever Sain has been, he usually has had a 20-game winner, his team has won a championship and his manager has been manager of the year.

In this year of 1972, Sain has accomplished the fact that Wilbur Wood has won 20 games. Now he wants the Sox to win the pennant and Chuck Tanner be named the manager of the year.

You have to go back with Sain. In the late 1950's he was the pitching coach of the Kansas City A's.

"They were known as the farm team for the New York Yankees," said Sain. "They traded off Roger Maris, Ralph Terry and Hector Lopez to the Yankees. I figured they didn't want to win, so I left."

Sain went to the New York Yankees and Whitey Ford won 25 games, the first time he had reached the 20-game plateau in his career.

The Yankees, under Ralph Houk, also won flags in 1962 and 1963. Houk won manager of the year laurels.

Sain went from the Yankees to the Minnesota Twins. The Twins won the pennant in 1965 as Jim (Mudcat) Grant recorded 20 triumphs. The next year Jim Kaat was a 20-game winner.

WINNING at weekend tennis improving your doubles game

By Tony Trabert with Joe Hyams

17. Making Your Service Return Good

Is there any way I can hit the ball closer to the top of the net to keep my opponents from getting too many put-aways on my return of service?

Lower your sights. If you shoot a gun at a target and the bullet hits high, you don't change the speed of the bullet, you lower your sights.

You are probably swinging at the ball on an upward plane, so flatten the swing a little.

I play the ad court against two opponents who are lefties. The service comes wide to my backhand and the lefty at the net is capable of reaching my midcourt with his forehand. I don't have enough control to make the angled cross-court return. Is there anything I can do?

You are probably not standing far enough to your left when you are waiting for the serve, which means a wide serve is running you out of the court and you are hitting late.

Move farther to your left so you have a good cross-court shot that is going away from the net man.

If the serve is wide and the net man goes wide with you, he leaves you all the more space to make a cross-court return.

If the service is wide and the net man has a tendency to inch toward the center, you have to keep the net man honest by hitting down his alley a few times.

Worst Fears Realized By Marianne Staubach

DALLAS (AP) — Marianne Staubach watched the collision of Ram middle linebacker Marlin McKeever and her husband, Roger, Saturday night on television, calmly turned to some friends and said: "I hope it's his head and not his arm."

A quarterback's wife would think like that. If the arm goes ... the career could be over.

"When he first got up, I thought it was his head," said Mrs. Staubach. "You can get over a headache in a couple of days. That heals faster than an arm."

But she knew when Dallas Cowboy trainer Larry Gardner helped Staubach to the sidelines that her worst fears had been realized.

"I could tell it was his arm by the way he was holding it," she said of the shoulder separation which required surgery.

She sighed and said "I guess Roger will never quit scrambling. That's him. Granted he doesn't scramble now near as much as he used to. But he's just too much of a competitor not to run when he doesn't see his receivers open.

"On this particular play he figured if he would turn inside he'd have the first down and maybe a touchdown. He didn't see McKeever ... but that's him ... all out ... down with the ship."

She said Staubach didn't feel like talking with the press Monday because "he's still coming around from surgery ... you know still a little groggy."

"I told him the doctor said he would be playing in eight to 12 weeks. He got out a schedule and said 'Oh, that's when we play Washington, right in the heart of the season. I'll be in there for the long haul.'"

Mrs. Staubach said "We're thankful that it wasn't worse. It could have been a dislocation like we went through in 1965 when Roger played for the College All-Stars. It was his left arm and it's never bothered him. But it took awhile to heal while we were in the Navy."

Staubach completed four years in the Navy before he came to the Cowboys and directed them to the Super Bowl championship last year.

Mrs. Staubach said the injury factor is always "in the back of the mind" of wives of professional athletes.

"But you never think it will happen," she said. "It's a shocking blow. Football is a big thing in our lives but we have a lot of other things too (if he doesn't recover)."

She added "Oh, he'll be back. His timing is just messed up. The surgery on Roger is similar to the operation Bob Hayes underwent. He was back in six weeks. Of course, Roger's arm is his primary weapon. But he doesn't consider the season blown."

Mrs. Boddie Leads Women's Amateur Golf

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Shreveport, La., golfer Barbara White Boddie had three competitors hot on her heels today as the second round of qualifying began in the U.S. Women's Amateur Golf Tournament.

Mrs. Boddie, who runs a tavern with her husband, shot a three-over-par 75 Monday on the 6,138-yard St. Louis Country Club course. She had a 38-37 against par of 35-37.

Second with 18-hole totals of 76 were Lancy Smith of Williamson, N.Y., Martha Kirouac, Anaheim, Calif., and Janet Webber of Fresno, Calif.

"The key to this course is the first four holes," said Mrs. Boddie at the end of her round in humid 90-degree weather.

"They are terribly difficult. If you can play them in two over par you can do well."

Calling the greens "absolutely treacherous," she said, "I made only one putt all day, a six-footer for a birdie on No. 15. On No. 6 I was three feet above the hole and I rolled my putt five feet past."

Two sons, ages 3 years and 18 months, have slowed down the holder of a record 69 round in past National Amateur qualifying. She said the National is the only tourney she enters now, except when the Louisiana or Southern meet is held in Shreveport or nearby.

Stadium Bonds Price Most Fans Out of Park

NEW YORK — A good season seat to see the Dallas Cowboys will cost more than $1000, according to a survey of stadium bond purchasers.

Discloses J. Anthony Lukas in September Esquire, published today in "Wanta Buy Two Seats for the Dallas Cowboys?" former New York Times reporter Lukas reveals how the decision to require most ticket purchasers to buy stadium bonds prices most middle income fans out of the ball park.

In addition to his season ticket and parking, the Dallas fan who wants to sit in one of the most 9,000 seats between the 30-yard lines will have to pay $1000 for Texas Stadium bonds. Seats beyond the 30s go for a $250 bond (and a $63 season ticket).

Half of the stadium's remaining seats—largely in the end zone—require the purchase of $250 in bonds. Only the seats deep in the end zones will be available on a game-by-game basis.

For the super-rich remain the Stadium suites, which illustrate what Lukas calls Dallas' "corporate psyche." The suites—bare concrete boxes—sell for $50,000 in Stadium bonds. Each suite owner is also required to purchase $1,296 of tickets for at least 32 of the next 35 years and $300 worth of membership in the Stadium Club.

According to Esquire, as of June 1 all the seats between the 30-yard lines and 23,000 seats beyond the 30s had been sold. All but 37 of the 158 suites had also been purchased.

The high price of seats has led fans to label the new stadium "Millionaires Meadow."

Reports the article. In support of indignant fans, a Dallas paper recently ran an editorial urging reconsideration of the financing plan "on behalf of the tens of thousands of fans who dearly loved their Cowboys, and now can't possibly afford them."

Some members of the team are also distressed. "Most black brothers just can't afford to buy bonds for Murchison's new palace," complains one player. And a white Dallas super-star adds, "It's a shame the Cowboys can't find more room in the stands for the average Joe, the kind of guy most of us on the team grew up with. It's wrong, no doubt about it."

Clint Murchison, multi-millionaire owner of the Dallas Cowboys, admits in the Esquire article that "we lost a whole group in the 12,000-to-$20,000 a year salary range who could afford season tickets at the Cotton Bowl but couldn't afford to buy bonds."

"If we discriminated against them, we discriminated against them, but no more than America discriminates against people who don't have enough money to buy everything they want."

"Well," concludes reporter Lukas, "Maybe just a little more."

Baseball Roundup

By Associated Press

Johnny Bench swept the bases just for the hell of it, then swept around the bases for real.

The Atlanta Braves, who have joined the list of baseball clubs adding a bit of diversion to the game—mainly a shapely young lady who dusts off the bases midway in the game—found they had a new sweeper prior to their Monday night game with Cincinnati.

Before the regularly scheduled contest against the Reds, the Braves engaged in another growing ritual, a softball game against their ... And half-way through the, wo-inning exhibition, out of the dugout, broom in hand, came ...

"Johnny the Sweeper!" His antics delighted the 15,318 Braves fans, who then watched the feminine mystique take its toll in an 8-0 victory over the Atlanta husbands.

But the fans were less than thrilled when the "real" game got under way: "Bench, exploding out of a slump that had provided him with just two hits in 27 at-bats, manhandled the Braves by driving in five runs with a single, a double and his 26th home run, leading Cincinnati to a 12-2 romp.

In the only other National League game, Houston defeated San Francisco 7-5. In the night's two American League games, Oakland beat Baltimore 5-2 and Kansas City silenced the New York Yankees 3-0.

The Reds' slugger took the place of the Braves' "Susie the Sweeper," who occasionally plants a kiss on the cheek of a player or umpire—or swats one with the broom.

He billed himself as "Bench the Basepath Beauty"—and he was, indeed, that, with his Cincinnati uniform shirt barely covering the white "hot pants" he wore for the occasion.

"I don't know too many guys of his stature who'd do it," said Reds Manager Sparky Anderson, "but I tell you, when he started over toward first base and I saw those wives standing over there on the sidelines, I said to myself: 'Oh, boy! Please don't grab one of them!'"

Bench didn't. He went one better. After finishing his housecleaning tour of the bases, he planted his kiss on the cheek of the home plate umpire—heavyweight boxer Jerry Quarry.

He kissed off the Braves pretty quickly with his two-run homer in the first inning, then singled to drive in the last of Four Red runs in the sixth and doubled to drive in two more in capping a four-run seventh. "I swept the cobwebs off or something," he said of the end of the slump.

Roger Metzger and Cesar Cedeno drove in two runs apiece for the Astros, who remained 5 1/2 games back of the front-running Reds in the NL East. But it was Jim Wynn who had the big RBI of the night, a tie-breaking single in a four-run seventh that propelled Houston past the Giants.

In the nationally televised battle of the American League's divisional leaders, Oakland Sports Afield magazine says 67 firearms bills are pending in Congress.

George Allen

PROSPECTUS — Juggling George Allen really revved up Redskins with his trading and proved you can assemble instant veteran team. But George's clubs have history of not lasting in long season. Still, you have to admire new direction of club. Relatively inactive in trade mart and with no draft to speak of, Skins will rely on some complement that boosted them in '71.

QUARTERBACK—Sound Sonny Jurgensen doesn't necessarily mean he'll get first call. Can't overlook what Billy Kilmer did for 'em last year. It's nice competitive situation. Rating—B+.

RUNNING BACKS—You start with Larry Brown, among best in NFL, and Charlie Horroby, who's got the blocking size. Now you add George Noack, an ex-Jet who's got a knack for the goal line. Rating—B+.

WIDE RECEIVERS—Putting Charley Taylor, Roy Jefferson on field at same time is like casting Raquel Welch, Sophia Loren in same opus. The opposition has to gasp. Taylor is coming off cracked ankle but he should be O.K. Clifton McNeil can always fill in. Rating—A.

TIGHT ENDS—They always say Jerry Smith is not built big enough for tight end but who needs size the way he can catch the ball. They have John Hilton to help out in blocking department. Rating—B.

LINE—Knee injury to tackle Jim Snowden messed up early plans. Could mean some juggling, like moving Ray Schoonke from guard. Otherwise it's an adequate veteran ensemble, built around the center play of Len Hauss. Rating—B.

DEFENSE
LINE—Stabilized last year with three veterans acquired in trades—Ron McDole and Verlon Biggs at the ends, Diron Talbert at tackle. Blended with Manny Sistrunk, a powerful young tackle. McDole's the only one over 30, so they'll be together a while. Spot young Jimmie Jones for extra pass rush. Rating—B+.

LINEBACKING—It's a question when age starts to catch up with trio that has combined experience of 31 seasons—Myron Pattios in middle, Jack Pardee and Chris Hanburger at corners. Got Rocky Rosama as free agent to help out. This is vulnerable department of team. Rating—B.

SECONDARY—Age factor here, too, with Pat Fischer (32) and Richie Petitbon (34). Now they've added old Rosey Taylor (34) to safety corps—he used to team with Pettibon on Bears. Age is balanced out by vigor of Mike Boss at corner (eight interceptions) and Brig Owens at free safety. Rating—B.

KICKING—Curt Knight had super year, leading conference in scoring. Mike Brogg is competent punter. Rating—B+.

SPECIAL TEAMS—Allen picked up Alvin Haymond from Rams to lend thrills to kick returns. If he can duplicate what Speedy Duncan did last year, they'll keep other teams on edge. Rating—B.

PREDICTION
Second in Division. And it's conceivable they could even dump Cowboys from top spot.

The Return Of Reason

"Thanks in part of their own shrillness," notes the editor of Barron's, "the ecologists' cries are falling on increasingly deaf ears."

One can well believe it. Just recently, this writer attended a symposium at which the "environmental" panelists, with a mixture of bad jokes, rude interruptions, wild charges, obvious resort to emotionalism and a thinly veiled air of smug superiority, quickly lost the audience, while the opposition, remaining calm, observing the rule of common courtesy, sticking to facts and admitting "I don't know" when that was the case, elicited intelligent questions from interested listeners.

Perhaps, as Barron's hopefully suggested, the voice of reason is returning to the land. If that be so, there is reason to believe that the "ecologists' own extremes helped to turn the trick."

For, as Barron's had pointed out last June, the back to nature movement had "spawned a new breed of activist, one for whom exaggeration, distortion and contempt for truth had become distinguishing marks. In their frantic drive to stamp out insecticides, ecologists have rigged laboratory tests and doctored results. In an effort to halt the expansion of nuclear power plants, they have stooped time and again to the technique best described as the big lie."

No doubt, too, the growing realization that the demands of the self-styled nature lovers, if carried out, would greatly accelerate taxation, cause an enormous growth of governmental bureaucracy, push prices skyward, increase unemployment and generally wreck the economy, has contributed to their loss of credibility.

At any rate, and whatever the reasons, "Activist environmental organizations have fallen into the doldrums," observed Barron's quoting from an issue of Science magazine. "Contributions and membership level have not increased at rates anticipated a year ago and 'ecology' seems to have lost some of its charisma. The Sierra Club has shut down its New York office and Friends of the Earth are in more serious straits."

Since then, Barron's continued, "two of the movement's leading lights—Mayor John V. Lindsay and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, once front runner for the Democratic nomination and sponsor of the clean air and water act—have plunged into eclipse."

Perhaps, too, some of the more reasonable people in the movement, upon reflection, have come to realize what cooler heads have known all along—that man and his economy in the dthe name of "ecology" is as hurtful to the environment as filthy streams and polluted air.

A sense of balance, with less heat and more light, is the need right now.

Why Some Fail

A noted psychologist was asked to give the reason why so many people failed in their efforts to make life successful. These frank and valid reasons were penned. Try them and see if they fit your life.

1. Finding fault with the other fellow but never seeing your own faults.
2. Doing as little as possible and trying to get as much as possible for it.
3. Spending much time showing up the other fellow's weak points, and too little correcting your own.
4. Slandering those you do not like.
5. Procrastination—putting off until tomorrow what we should have done day before yesterday.
6. Deceit—talking friendly to the other fellow's face and stabbing him in the back as he turns.
7. False belief that we are smart enough to reap a harvest to pay before sowing a crop of service.
8. Disloyalty to those who

Reds Taking Hold In Thailand?

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)—The word from contacts in Bangkok is that the situation in Thailand is gradually deteriorating. The military government is indecisive in action. The Communist underground sponsored by Peking and Hanoi grows very slowly but steadily and is now taking hesitant root in central Thailand as well as in the far north, northeast and southwest.

The outlook is not serious for this year. But it can be said with certainty that men high in the Nixon administration are privately predicting that if the Communist underground continues to grow at the present rate we will see in Thailand within four and a half to five years a full blown insurgency comparable to the earlier days in Vietnam.

This crisis would present the President of the United States in 1977 with the same type of decision President John F. Kennedy faced in the early 1960s.

Kennedy's answer to that crisis led to heavy American participation in the Vietnam war. The alternative at that late date, his advisers said, was a quick Communist takeover.

If the United States is not to be faced with that dilemma in the late 1970s in Thailand, it behooves this government to think about alternatives.

The solutions must aim at assisting the Bangkok government to so strengthen its institutions that Thailand can handle the underground largely with its own resources.

At present, the underground is not basically a military problem, although it is being handled as if it were. The problem at this stage is political. The Communists, as in the early days in Vietnam, are politically outorganizing the government.

In part this is because the military government in Bangkok has banned political organizing by the several Thai democratic political parties. In part it is because the structure of government is weak and inefficient through the great sweep of Thailand's rural areas and in most of its cities and towns.

This reporter in 900 miles of travel by car through rural Thailand a few years back found wide belts of hopelessness. Country people I questioned felt deserted by their government. Many were convinced their officials had no interest in their welfare. They saw little light in the future. Farmers were perpetually in hock to money lenders. There was no end to local corruption despite official stabs at stemming the tide.

Several years back, under American prodding, the Thai wrote a new constitution and lived by it to some extent for a time, but a coup by the military men (who had won the election and were therefore already in power) abolished elected legislatures and drove some of the top men in the country into outspoken opposition.

American aid has been available in sufficient amounts. There is deep interest in Thailand among top Nixon officials, the country being a kingpin in our Southeast Asia strategy. The Thai army has made marked improvement in recent years and his shown up well in the fighting in Laos.

The United States has spent considerable sums on the Thai police and on economic and social aid. But the military government does not know how to take hold either in the cities or provinces with programs that will bring confidence among the people. The military leaders apparently do not know how to bring about the required basic minimum efficiency of government either in Bangkok or rural Thailand to win the trust of its rural citizens.

McGovern Is For Change And Nixon--Togetherness

By PAUL HARVEY

Sen. George McGovern's campaign theme will urge "change." President Nixon will urge "togetherness."

May the better product win. Sen. McGovern's sense of history tells him that now is a time of accelerated evolution—that voters are fed up with the system—and he intends to lead their "November revolution."

President Nixon sees our nation fragmented by social friction and will seek to draw the fragments together.

Thus the President promises Catholics school aid and takes Philadelphia's Cardinal Krol for a moonlight cruise on the Potomac—while leading evangelicals in prayer and taking Billy Graham for a moonlight cruise on the Potomac.

President Nixon assures Jews that Israel will never fall to the Arabs while he is President. He defers to the South in opposing school busing, appoints conservatives to the Supreme Court, women to federal

H.L. Hunt Writes

REMINDERS YOU CAN USE

Freedom enthusiasts are sometimes surprised by statements by those who, thinking or unthinkingly, favor the enemies of Freedom and our Republic. Ammunition with which to reply to anti-Freedom statements is always helpful. Such verbal ammunition has to be "stored" in advance so the Freedom enthusiast is less often caught by surprise.

One example is the orchestrated attack which we see from time to time against a non-communist government of a country friendly to the United States. When you hear a statement that South Vietnam is, for example, a "repressive dictatorship," or that the Greek government does not allow opposition, often you will find the person making the statement favors allowing the communist government of North Vietnam to invade and rule over the South Vietnamese.

It does little good to argue with the dedicated pro-communist, but the uninformed, non-communist who may be listening can be favorably influenced toward Freedom and against the communist conspiracy if you insert a few calm questions which expose the real intent of the pro-communist.

When did Ho Chi Minh ever hold an election? How is the communist government of North Vietnam less repressive than the pro-American government of South Vietnam? Why should the U.S. trade with communist enemies and refuse to trade with anti-communist allies or friends? Often the people who wish the U.S. to boycott and outlaw non-communist governments push for trade and aid for communist dictatorships. These people don't like to have such facts pointed out to those they are trying to influence. You can strike a blow for Freedom and Truth when you expose the favored treatment allowed Red dictatorships.

agencies—and puts in 30 government positions of prominence Americans with Spanish surnames.

Historically—at least since F.D.R.—it's been Democrats who have supported themselves with building blocks of ethnic voters. Now Republican Nixon warms up the melting pot while new era Democrats consider it hypocritical politicking, resent it.

Sen. McGovern appears to be claiming for himself what Mr. Agnew labeled "the silent majority."

McGovern says, "It's the people who have been passed by in American life and are frustrated that they have not had a voice in bringing about the changes that they think would improve their lives. This is a coalition of change against the status quo, and I think it represents a majority of the American people."

I think McGovern's supporters are appropriately described as "a coalition of change," but my wide-angle observation indicates that they are not a majority.

On the contrary, I recall no administration ever voted out of office during a period of prosperity.

To the zippies and the zappies and to some involuntarily unemployed or underemployed this may not appear to be a period of prosperity. But to a record-smashing total of 80.6 million Americans now working—it is.

There is a discontent among Americans but analyst Richard Scammon says much of the discontent is among middle-class Americans fed up with such burdens as busing and crime as President Nixon is.

It's more likely that the threatened Northern worker and resentful Southern Democrats will identify with Mr. Nixon. Those are all he needs.

But the campaign will be worthwhile for us all. I am not one who thinks judgment matures at 18, but some of the things today's young people are up-tight about we all should be: external involvements and home-front hypocrisy.

They're not going to wait for some still small voice to nudge our conscience; this year they're going to do it with a loudspeaker mounted on a truck.

Do We Consume Too Many Pills?

By Dr. Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—You asked what people do for insomnia. I don't use sleeping pills. I just check up on myself and see what bad habits I have. Usually it's because I've been drinking too much tea, coffee, colas, booze—take your choice. So I either cut down or cut out and sleep. People are really dumb about their bad habits. They pretend their living habits aren't hurting them, and then when their poor bodies protest at last, they stuff down their gullets thinking that will solve all their problems.

I think a lot of women would not have gall bladder trouble if they drank enough water. I've talked to a lot of them and everyone of them admits that they haven't drunk any water in years. They think their illness isn't their fault and that they're just unlucky. One or two of the fat old biddies blame it on the "will of God" but they'd have a fit if the old wind down the street blamed the "will of God" for his bad liver. No difference.

I think you doctors are to blame to a certain extent. Instead of giving pills why don't you tell those people who only need to reduce or to revise their bad habits to do just that? But of course, they wouldn't do it. They like to stuff their innards with poison.

Dear Reader—Your hostility is showing. I am glad to note that you are a woman and not a man or I would have thought you were a male chauvinist pig. However, your observations that their illness applies to both men and women. In other words, to some "fat old biddies," as well as to use your phrase some "fat old biddies."

I agree that doctors should do more to encourage people to do things to prevent illness. The problem is that most of the things people need to do about their living habits to prevent illness aren't very popular. People don't eat to limit the amount they eat or the amount they drink or to stop smoking and others don't like to do any exercise. Yet these are some of the most important aspects of maintaining good health and preventing illness.

Here's a new thought on why men are less susceptible to urinary tract infections than women. Dr. William Ferrar at Stanford University has reported that the prostatic fluid of normal men contains an antibacterial substance that completely destroys bacteria obtained from patients with urinary tract infections. This substance is being investigated further to see if it can be clearly identified and synthesized to be used in treating infections. I have always thought of the male prostate as being of relatively dubious value since it causes a lot of men a great deal of difficulty, but it may turn out that it does have a purpose even in protecting against urinary tract infections, which might explain its inconvenient location at the outlet of the bladder.

Inside Washington

After the Melodrama: Things Not So Good

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The politically lethal relationship between Sen. George McGovern and his campaign staff was pointed up in a candid remark to McGovern by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie recently at Muskie's home in suburban Bethesda, Md.

McGovern had just offered Muskie the Vice Presidential nomination. In the frank conversation that followed, Muskie noted a certain hostility toward him by McGovern's staff that would have to be resolved before he could go on the ticket.

Serious concern by a prospective Vice President about attitudes of the prospective President's staff is not without precedent. But in this case Muskie's concern was deep and emotional. Worse yet, the matter came up between these two old Senate colleagues only at the eleventh hour of a deep crisis within the democratic party.

The exchange at Muskie's home, furthermore, fits neatly into the two-week melodrama from which McGovern has just emerged. It suggests that McGovern, far more a loner than generally realized, has still not seized control of the unguided missile that is his campaign staff. Even if the fumbling search for a vice President is completely forgotten, that fact may well plague McGovern's uphill struggle against Richard M. Nixon.

By Monday evening, July 31, when he forced Sen. Thomas Eagleton off the ticket, McGovern was disenchanted with his high-powered, independent-minded staff. He avoided them studiously, turning instead to the wise old pals of the Senate. Their advice: unite the party, preferably with Sen. Hubert Humphrey or, as second choice, Muskie.

On the Senate floor on the following Tuesday, McGovern approached Muskie for the first time since shaking hands on the national convention rostrum July 13. McGovern's message: I'm swamped with things to do right now, but I'm not going to make a decision on Vice President without consulting you.

Through Wednesday and most of Thursday, McGovern said not another word to Muskie. As we have reported, McGovern was then wooing Humphrey, an act that critical period passed without communication between McGovern and Muskie.

McGovern's staffers, cut off from their candidate, could not believe he was really serious about Humphrey. But they regarded Muskie with deadly seriousness and deep animosity. To McGovernites, Muskie's refusal to endorse McGovern after his June 6 California primary victory had guaranteed more than two months of unrelieved tribulation.

Reflecting staff attitudes, McGovern fundraiser Miles Rubin told leftist campaign contributors Aug. 1: Don't worry, it won't be Muskie. Other top-level staffers—Frank Mankiewicz, chief fund-raiser Henry Kimelman, Frederick G. Dutton—were beating the drums for R. Sargent Shriver instead of Muskie.

When McGovern finally made his offer to Muskie Thursday night, Muskie was understandably less than enthusiastic. Besides worrying about McGovern staffers, Muskie sought clearance for a wholly independent campaign for Vice President—and, to his surprise, got it.

When Muskie flew to Maine to consult his wife, Jane, Friday afternoon, Muskie and McGovern staffers conferred in Washington on procedural details of the independent Muskie campaign. Mutual hostility between the two staffs brimmed over, a fact duly reported to Muskie in Maine.

On Friday night, while Muskie was making up his mind, there came a strange telephone call from Mankiewicz. Mankiewicz had been ambivalent, Muskie staffers viewed him as particularly hostile for peddling anti-Muskie tidbits to the press all year. But during the Eagleton crisis, Mankiewicz privately commented that Muskie was the obvious catalyst to unify the party—spotlessly clean, very nearly neuter.

Yet, Mankiewicz's Friday night call seemed calculated to offend Ed Muskie. Mankiewicz served up two cold red herrings—charges that Muskie had helped pollute a Maine stream with a sugar-beet mill and that duck-hunter Muskie once violated state game laws. Both are widely known and widely disregarded by the Washington press. Yet Mankiewicz asked Muskie if he had anything to add to the known facts.

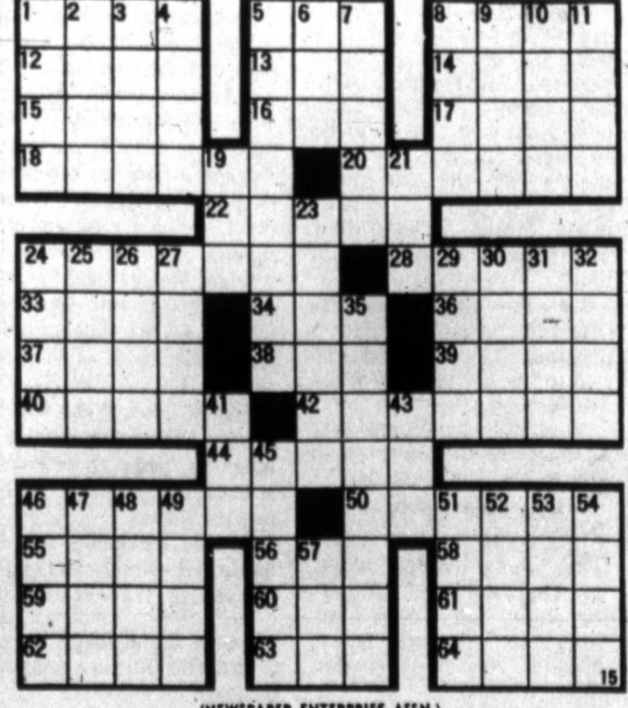

Friends are certain the negative decision by Muskie and his wife was influenced by such visible McGovern staff hostility. In fact, Shriver may bring more to the ticket than Humphrey or Muskie. But the way the deed was done suggests McGovern still has not become master of his own campaign.

Crossroads Report

Dear Editor: An eminent or something professor of experimental embryology in a big University says marriage is changing and he notes some informal polygamy going on in the circles where his informers rotate. And it may come. Up to recently a man could support a household if his wife had a job, but after taxes are reformed again it may take two or three wives. It remains to be seen how a man who can't handle even one wife is going to manage with a covey of them. And how several Ms.'s will get along with a partnership husband.
