

Waste system plan advances

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

The city commission took preliminary steps toward converting Pampa to a container waste collection system at its regular meeting this morning.

Commissioners adopted resolutions financing the new system and setting a bid date for the containers, and approved a contract making a Dallas firm the city's financial adviser.

By switching to the containers, city officials hope to cut sanitation personnel costs in half. Individual garbage cans will be replaced by one three cubic yard container for every four houses.

The city intends to issue certificates of obligation in the amount of $1,100,000 to pay for the new system. The certificates are similar to revenue bonds, but put the city under more obligation and as a result have a lower interest rate.

The approved contract with Rauscher, Pierce and Refsnes Inc. includes a $1,000 fee for rating the certificates. Wofford said the contract states the city is under no obligation to the corporation if it decides not to issue the certificates after receiving bids.

June 26 was set as the bid date for the new equipment. Mayor Ray Thompson said none of today's action obligates the city until the commission actually approves purchase of the containers. That decision will be made at the July 10 commission meeting.

In other action, the commission granted Southwestern Public Service Co. a new 20-year franchise to provide electricity within the city.

The new agreement is almost identical to the former franchise granted in 1958, except for the distance the company is required to run lines to new customers at no charge. The distance was previously unlimited inside the city but is now set at 200 feet.

A resolution authorizing city participation in the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) Summer Youth Program was also adopted by the commission. William Ragsdale, local Texas Employment Commission manager, told the commission the program would provide jobs with the city, county and non-profit organizations for about 30 disadvantaged young people.

Bids on materials for this summer's street maintenance seal coating program were opened and read to the commission. Lewis Construction Co. bid a total of $132,62.50, while E.D. Baker Corp. submitted a bid of $141,800. G.W. James Materials Co. bid $160,275.

Thompson said the bid will be awarded at the next commission meeting June 12.

In addition, the commission authorized Wofford to sign all documents related to the city's current traffic engineering survey. The survey is being paid for by a $30,000 state grant.

Canadians at polls today

TORONTO (AP) — Canadians from Eskimo settlements above the Arctic Circle to the steel and glass canyons of major cities today choose the government that will lead them into the 1980s and through the gravest crisis in their nation's 112-year history.

The choice is between the Liberal administration of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the flashy, tough-talking French-Canadian who has been prime minister for the past 11 years, and the opposition Progressive Conservatives, led by untested 39-year-old Westerner Joe Clark.

In a two-month campaign, Trudeau appealed for support in the name of national unity, saying only he could keep separatist-minded Quebec province from seceding and splitting the country in two. Clark told Canadians that for the sake of a troubled economy it was time for a change at the top.

The opinion polls showed the two major parties dead even at about 40 percent each in the popular vote. But because of the peculiarities of Canada's parliamentary system and political patterns, analysts gave the Conservatives a slight edge.

It would be the first Conservative government since 1963.

Executions in Florida appear sure

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Two condemned murderers, their pleas for life rejected by Florida's courts, placed their hopes on federal judges in four cities today as their scheduled executions crept closer.

John Arthur Spenkelink, 30, and Willie Jasper Darden Jr., 45, will die in Florida's electric chair at 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. respectively on Wednesday — unless their lawyers can find sympathetic courts. Requests for a stay of execution for Spenkelink were scheduled in New Orleans before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Attorneys for his cause were also in Washington, seeking a justice of the Supreme Court who would grant a stay.

Darden's lawyers got a 2:30 p.m. EDT hearing to ask a Tampa federal judge for a stay, and turned to the Florida Supreme Court in Tallahassee to appeal a rejected plea for a rehearing in the court where he was sentenced to death.

Meanwhile, in Tallahassee, police said 15 to 20 anti-death penalty protesters were keeping a vigil outside the mansion of Gov. Bob Graham, vowing to stay until he grants reprieves. Graham, who signed the death warrants Friday, said the protesters could stay "as long as their action does not infringe on other people's legitimate rights."

"I have no way given up hope that there'll be an intervention," an ailing Lois Spenkelink, 67, said Monday evening in Starke after visiting her son at Florida's toughest prison. Friends said she cried after the visit, and when she met reporters she simply read her brief comment and did not answer questions.

Spenkelink, a California prison escapee when he came to Florida, was sentenced to die for the murder of Joseph Szymankiewicz, 46, of Detroit, an Ohio parole violator who was traveling with Spenkelink when slain in a Tallahassee motel in 1973.

Darden was sentenced to death for the murder of James Turman, who surprised Darden during a robbery of Turman's furniture store in Lakeland.

The prisoners' chances to escape the heavy oak chair at Florida State Prison had diminished considerably Monday.

"When the Florida Supreme Court turned down that appeal, that limited all our options," said Joe Ingle, director of the Southern Coalition on Jails and Prisons of Nashville, Tenn.

He was referring to the highest state court's rejection Monday of appeals on behalf of both condemned men.

The court unanimously rejected an argument that prosecutors didn't give Spenkelink's attorneys proper notice about points the state raised in his murder trial. It was the fourth Spenkelink plea turned down by the state Supreme Court.

Workers hospitalized

Two Brown & Root Construction employees remain hospitalized following an accident Saturday at the Celanese construction site which left one with a broken back and the other with a broken rib and broken toes.

Rick Wolfe, 24, of Borger, and Doyle Morris of Pampa, both Brown & Root pipefitters, were recovering today following surgery Sunday.

Wolfe suffered two broken vertebrae and underwent surgery at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo. Morris is recovering from surgery to his foot at Highland General Hospital. The two men were taken to Highland General by Celanese ambulance.

Wolfe said today he and Morris were attempting to fix a hanger on the pipe rack when another employee told Morris to strike the pipe with a hammer. The hammer blow dislodged the pipe, causing it to come down on top of him, Wolfe said.

A SHARP turn Monday left this 36-ton fire truck at the Kansas City International Airport on its top and two firemen slightly injured. The vehicle was returning to its station at the airport after answering an emergency call when the accident occurred. The Fire Department truck, termed a total loss, may cost $250,000 to replace.

Killer Bees coming back

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said today the Killer Bees are expected to return at 3 p.m. to their jobs in the Senate after a five-day absence.

Hobby said he had talked with one of the 12 absent members, who advised him that the Senate should recess until 3 p.m.

"I'm sure the absent members will return and we can resume the normal business of the Senate," Hobby told other senators.

He said the Senate would stand at ease until 3 p.m. Earlier, Gov. Bill Clements said he is thinking of declaring vacant the 12 Senate seats.

Clements returned to the Capitol after a four-day trip to Connecticut. He was out-of-town when the dozen rebels fled the Senate Friday in protest of a presidential primary measure.

The governor has taken a hands-off attitude on the election proposal.

"We'll explore that possibility today. We're going to look into it and look into what precedents we might have for it," Clements told reporters of calling a special election to replace the absentees.

"It's a shame these elected officials are walking away from their responsibility," the governor said.

On Monday, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby conceded the Killer Bees probably have succeeded in blocking a 1980 presidential primary bill they contend was tailor-made for John Connally.

But don't expect Hobby to wave white flags, send out conciliatory messages to the dozen absentees or let down support for the controversial election proposal.

"To reward behavior of this sort is obviously not wise," Hobby told reporters in his office Monday.

He scheduled a 10:30 a.m. Senate session today amidst rumors the gang would not reappear until 12:01 a.m. Wednesday.

If the AWOL senators return, Hobby was asked, would the presidential primary stand a chance of passage?

"I think not," he replied.

As the group ended their fourth day undercover, Hobby, the Senate's presiding officer refused to withdraw warrants for their arrest.

He ordered them captured Friday after they boycotted a Senate session to stop action on a measure that would hold a 1980 presidential primary in March, separate from May primary elections. Unless two return, the 31-member Senate lacks 21 members needed for a quorum and can do nothing.

The rebels claim the primary measure would benefit Connally by allowing Democrats to vote in the Republican presidential contest, then cast ballots for conservative Democrat state candidates two months later.

Connally, a Democrat when he served six years as Texas governor, has said he does not care when Texas holds a primary.

Hobby thought one absent senator, Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, was heading back Monday.

Retiring teachers recognized by School Board

Four retiring teachers of the Pampa school district were presented certificates for service at a regular session of the local school board held Monday evening at Carver Center.

Doris Price of Stephin F. Austin Elementary School received a certificate of commendation for 43 years of service.

Jane Wiens of Pampa High School was honored with a certificate for her 30 years in the system, and Gail Heaton of Wilson Elementary was recognized for 25 years of teaching.

Berlyce Evans was recognized for her 10-year teaching career at Horace Mann Elementary School.

The board unanimously approved the due bills and invoices report for the fiscal periods ending May 8 and 21.

The school district spent $511,340.24 through its checking account for general operating the first period and accumulated expenditures of $65,971.59 for the same fund in the second period.

The Cafeteria Fund showed respective expenses of $49,383.15 and $18,016.40 for the two periods.

The school district wrote checks amounting to $148,483.56 for the payroll fund in the first reported period, leaving the system $1,565,785.65 of its total budget allocation until new monies are distributed in September.

The board appropriated $7,540,914.50 for the 1978-79 school year and has present outstanding encumbrances of $79,385.46.

The largest expenditures for the past fiscal month were for general operating and food services at costs of $522,879.18 and $34,519.87 respectively.

Board President Al Smith said he saw nothing that ran over the budget by a significant amount.

The board continued a discussion from a previous meeting of possible action on 1977 legislation providing persons older than 65 with at least a $3,000 property exemption.

A present bill in the Legislature, if passed, will create an additional $10,000 exemption for those 65 and older and the disabled.

The board will take steps to rescind the $3,000 exemption, which will prevent its extraction from city tax funds in case the larger immunity becomes effective.

However, the original March 1976 exemption will be reinstated if the recent legislation is stopped in the Texas Congress.

Trustee Paul Simmons suggested an exemption exceeding the designated $3,000 immunity in case of reinstatement. The board unanimously approved the move.

According to a quick survey of the Panhandle, several districts also are abrogating the old policy until the legislature turns out its vote, said Supt. Bob Phillips.

Jerry Pope, a counselor for the school district, gave a report on special education in the community schools.

Federal interest in special education has brought about changes in related programs, according to Pope.

He said the eligibility requirements of the program have stiffened, resulting in a lower number of students.

Pampa had about 700 students last year and has 595 enrolled this year. These students are listed under primary handicaps and may have multiple handicaps.

A primary handicap must be designated for the special education student if he is to qualify, said Pope, and teachers, parents and concerned persons can recommend a child for the program.

Students were placed in special education classes if they were considered a disciplinary or other type problem five years ago, Phillips said, but federal restrictions have tried to change that.

The use of psychologists and physicians to analyze and treat problems has reduced the number of special education children, said Pope.

The special education program has included between 250 and 300 meetings for evaluating students' needs, said Donna Anderson, school district diagnostician.

The diagnostician, according to Pope, tries to analyze a problem child's disability as language equated or as emotionally, sociologically or intellectually related. An administrative report indicated several possibilities of distributing youngsters in the elementary schools were being studied. The objective of the study is to reduce the student-teacher ratio.

Steps toward developing the reading program for elementary children were also discussed.

Consideration of ways to obtain the board's goal of a low student-teacher ratio and the development of the reading program will be set before the school board along with other delayed proceedings in a special session at 5 p.m. Thursday.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Commandment.

Windfalls and ratholes

If there is a general expertise to be found among most all politicians it is the ability to twist the language around to suit an immediate goal. To those of us who have had contact with rural life, windfall has meant fruit dropped to the ground as wind blew around the trees. Owners of such trees usually allowed children to pick up the windfall - fruit. To shake the tree became and act of theft and was avoided, because access would then be denied.

Windfall also means an unexpected sudden gain or advantage. The regulations government mandated on domestic oil became an advantage to the oil-exporting foreign nations; lifting the controls which tended to subsidize this competition can hardly be called a windfall for domestic producers. We suggest it is more of a return to rightful parity than any sudden "unearned profit." The use of the term "unearned profit" is another prime example of semantics used to influence emotion rather than presenting logic or fact.

President Carter in a recent speech said, "They (the oil industry) will try to pass this charade off on the American people as a so-called 'plowback' provision. But it isn't a 'plowback'; it's a 'plow-under' and a 'kick back' and what is going to be plowed under is the Energy Security Fund with its aid to research and its aid to the poor, and what is going to be kicked back to the oil companies is the money that would go to finance these absolutely necessary programs."

That was quite a mouthful of rhetoric for even Jimmy Carter. It was an outright attack of the oil industry before the fact. He condemned a large segment of our private sector, not for anything they had done, but for what he said they would do. This goes way beyond the "innocent until proven guilty" idea. It is condemnation of guilt for a fantasy in a soothsayer's mind.

The president and his administration are still trying to fool the American people. There has been a desperate attempt to shift the blame for inflation and our energy mess to anyone save the true culprits. The sad part of all this is that it is working.

In spite of all the evidence of waste, mismanagement and downright fraud in the government's handling of tax money, people seem more willing for profits to be drained off by profligate federal agencies than to let it remain in business to enhance a faltering economy.

Far too many people are ready to believe any emotional outburst against industry, especially the oil industry. They will not believe what we say here. We are most certain that they will not follow our suggestion to seek the facts for themselves and let logic direct their own thinking.

If the truth of the disparity between our domestic and foreign oil situation were pursued, it would not be difficult to find just who is shaking the trees to gain more than windfalls. The assault on oil industry profits is part of a campaign to insure that the revenues from paying the world price for oil accrue to the politicians and not to the industry.

The question becomes: Who should we trust to make the best use of domestic oil profits? Should it be the private sector with its record of achievement, or politicians with their record for dropping tax money down the rathole of no return?

Bounty hunters

The wanted poster put out by the Iranian government, if such exists, reads: "Wanted Dead: The Shah, his wife, his brother, his twin sister, former ambassador to the U.S. Ardeshir Zahedi and former prime minister Shahpour Bakhtiar." Bounty hunters should have no fear of killing their prey in foreign lands, says the regime, because the murders are officially sanctioned by the Iranian state. The murderous hand is simply an extension of the Iranian government carrying out a state execution. We wonder how other governments will react to the Iranian government's intent to carry out executions on their soil.

Powerful message for free enterprise

The story of the little red hen has been in circulation for some time, but still makes for refreshing reading - even the second time around. It was written by William Drake, president of Pennwalt Corp., and carries a powerful message.

Once upon a time, there was a little hen who scratched about the barnyard until she uncovered some grains of wheat. She called her neighbors and said, "If we plant this wheat, we shall have bread to eat. Who will help me plant it?"

"Not I," said the cow.
"Not I," said the duck.
"Not I," said the pig.
"Not I," said the goose.

"Then I will," said the little red hen. And she did. The wheat grew tall and ripened into golden grain. "Who will help me reap my wheat?" asked the little red hen.

"Not I," said the duck.
"Out of my classification," said the pig.
"I'd lose my seniority," said the cow.
"I'd lose my unemployment compensation," said the goose.

"Then I will," said the little red hen, and she did. At last came time to bake the bread. "Who will help me bake the bread?" asked the little red hen.

"That would be overtime for me," said the duck.
"I'm a dropout and never learned how,"

said the pig.
"If I'm to be the only helper, that's discrimination," said the goose.
"Then I will," said the little red hen.

She baked five loaves and held them up for her neighbors to see.

They all wanted some and, in fact, demanded a share. But the little red hen said, "No, I can eat the five loaves myself."

"Excess profits!" screamed the duck.
"Capitalist leech!" screamed the cow.
"I demand equal rights!" yelled the goose.

And the pig just grunted. And they painted "unfair" picket signs and marched round and round the little red hen, shouting obscenities.

When the government agent came, he said to the little red hen, "You must not be greedy."
"But I earned the bread," said the little red hen.

"Exactly," said the agent. "That is the wonderful free enterprise system. But under our modern government regulations, the productive workers must divide their product with the idle."

And they lived happily ever after, including the little red hen, who smiled and clucked, "I am grateful. I am grateful."
But her neighbors wondered why she never again baked any more bread.

Why politics is necessarily evil

By ROBERT LEFÈVRE
The distinguishing feature which separates the libertarian from others who interest themselves in the political machinations of various parties is their lack of anger. Conservatives and liberals operate with fists clenched and with grinding teeth. The evils which have descended upon our fair land are viewed as the exclusive product of the opposing party. Men of their own party are noble, good and reasonable; men who oppose are villains of incredible cunning and questionable motivation.

Seen in this light, politics is neither good nor bad; rather politics is neutral and men are good or bad. This being accepted as factual, then it behooves the individual to throw out the bad men and put in the good. This is a process as old as Marcus Aurelius and as foredoomed to failure as the effort to make a rope of seafoam and sand which will girdle the universe.

The libertarian sees a fatal flaw in this approach to the political morass. Those who enter the arena inflamed with anger see reality shimmering through a red haze. They are handicapped, having lost the first round in their inability to control themselves.

The libertarian, who has done his homework and understands what politics is, recognizes that the entire process is predicated upon a faulty premise, to wit: that some persons, of right, may control the lives and properties of other persons. Due to the nature of man and the nature of this world where men live and have their being, there is no way in which happy solutions will emerge from such faulty reasoning based upon unrealistic premises.

Additionally, there is no reason to become angry over a blind and unthinking acceptance of such fallacious propositions. In this regard, the entire human species has been victimized and exploited for approximately ten thousand years. To become angry at the current promoters of the doctrine is to trade reason for hate. Far better to accept the situation as we find it. There are many fine people who have been lured into support of an erroneous philosophy. This does not invalidate their basic propriety, which is not in question. It is the philosophy which must be challenged. And to deal with a faulty philosophy does not require an attack upon the men who hold it; rather it demands the emergence of a superior philosophy.

If the libertarian position has merit, it lies in the elevation of the philosophical position, not in the superior character of libertarians over Republicans or Democrats.

Looked at in this way, the serious student of liberty can readily master his own emotions. There is no point in anger. There is only purpose in understanding. Further, all of us, libertarians included, have participated in support of this ailing, limping and maimed philosophy unless we were born wise. That a few have finally seen through the veil does not warrant anger or hatred directed at those who have not.

What the libertarian recognizes is the immutable principle of man's individuality. Each of us is born in control of his own mind and body. No one of us is capable of controlling himself perfectly. Perfection is the star that draws us, but however we strive, it remains above and beyond our reach. Thus, each of us controls himself imperfectly.

Man's imperfection is well known and has long been acknowledged. It is here that the philosophies of statism emerge. Since man is imperfect he is prone to err. Since the errors he makes might injure another, let the state interpose restraints to prevent these actions which are less than perfect, and to punish those who actually perform injuriously.

But, alas, what is the state? It is merely another grouping of men, each of them prone to err as those they seek to correct, inhibit and retaliate against. And so to prevent the blind gropings of those who do not see clearly, we grant power to those who blindly grope to interpose by force and violence. And they must and will impose by blindly groping.

The real curse that accompanies mankind is not our weakness but our assumption that, by some popularly conducted ceremony such as an election, the lack of wisdom is miraculously overcome. The state is not a miracle. But the evil is the assumed magic and miraculous powers that accompany belief in the state to make mistakes is bad enough; but to make them within a power cubicle which teaches us that anything emerging from the cubicle is right is the real daemon.

In short, the state has become the newest and greatest of all pagan religions. And the political parties vie against each other under the assumption that one particular group of high priests will perform the rituals and employ coercion in a manner superior to another group of high priests.

This political warfare is the ancient contest between those who backed Amon versus those who backed Aten in the Egyptian pantheon. Whichever faction triumphs, the people bow to a pagan idol and refuse to exercise their own individual wisdom and personal responsibility. They are taught to believe that if they pray (or vote) in accordance with the wishes of a gang of votaries, miracles will occur on their behalf. It is a delusion.

The libertarian who understands the philosophy of freedom to any extent opposes statism per se (the new pagan faith) and is not willing to accept pagan management of his person or resources. At the same time he refrains from emotional excesses. Our task is to inform and educate; not to take power.

Prison guards... unwanted men

Behind prison walls it's now the guards who are growing restive. They are organizing; some are striking.

This has to do with why. You call them "prison guards." Their national organization is called the American Association of Correctional Facility Officers. Obviously they prefer to be identified that way.

But what they are are prison guards, society's "unwanted men."

Scholarly criminologists who've never carried the keys tend directly or indirectly to regulate, dominate and frequently castigate them - these men who man the ramparts of our prisons - with no comprehension of the dimensions of that job.

The prison guard has to keep people in places they don't want to be. Some of them can go at him with a knife made from a spoon - and they have nothing to lose.

The professional prison guard absorbs anger and guilt with which he had nothing to do. Yet he must enforce rules to protect inmates from one another and from themselves - in subtle ways that civil rights lawyers never even suspect.

The conscientious guard knows his responsibility as does nobody else in the criminal justice system. Of the prisoners who are his to safekeep he knows their eating needs, bathroom habits, loneliness and their boredom, and how much of their bravado is fear.

The prison guard knows who needs patience and who responds instead to impatience.

He comprehends the frail vulnerability of some to manipulation and bullying; their remarkable idiom and symbols, their unique body language; the kindnesses and intense loyalties of which they are capable and the sometimes vicious brutality.

With a sixth sense born of ceaselessly patrolling the brink of a volcano he senses how collective tensions rise and subside in response to mysterious tides and social rhythms which no sociological treatise can adequately explain.

Prof. Bob Barrington, Department of Criminal Justice, Northern Michigan University, believes there is no more acute need in the criminal justice system than somehow to improve the morals of the correctional officer.

He says, "The militant unionism we see developing is a response not simply to economic needs but it reflects a deep and longstanding frustration about many things."

While our prison system this last decade has been trying to adjust to endless civil rights suits, new court orders, to changes undermined, often they are unsupported by their administrators, the courts and the public.

If anybody is going to be left to perform this necessary, difficult and dangerous job, the rest of us had better start thinking long and hard about how properly to salute selfless public service; otherwise the men we want in those jobs may abandon them to the kind we don't want.

Briton's unions

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
LONDON, England - Long after Mrs. Thatcher moves into the British Prime Minister's residence, the people of this country will have to wrestle with the issues of extra-parliamentary power.

For years, the trade unions have been the real government of Britain. The reason for their extraordinary power is that they are virtually above the law. And the unions are determined to maintain this privilege and power.

Sir Robert Mark, former commissioner of Scotland yard, recently described this appalling situation. He wrote in a magazine article:

"In any critical situation in which the law does not support them (the unions), the government of the day - their partner or their puppet according to their view - declares its intention to change the law in their favor."

Sir Robert added: "This is not unlike the way the National Socialist German Workers Party achieved unrestricted control of the German state between 1930 and 1938."

The union power in Britain in Sir Robert's view, is "changing the nature of our society irreversibly."

Unquestionably, if freedom is to survive in Britain and the ancient society is not to become a Marxist tyranny, the union power must be confronted and overcome. The brutal union abuse of power in last winter's strikes had a tremendous impact on the British public. In the strikes, cancer patients were denied admission to hospitals. Sick people were removed from ambulances and dumped in the street by striking drivers.

Hardly a day passes that a strike isn't called or threatened. Strikes and slowdowns are commonplace on the railways. Teachers threaten to strike at examination time. One never knows when airport workers will refuse to serve planes or unload luggage. In a recent dispute, the Dunlop automobile tire plant at Birmingham was surrounded by pickets who blocked the factory and prevented the entry and exit of trucks. The company was compelled to consider the use of helicopters to bring supplies into the plant.

Basic change in the labor law is needed to prevent secondary picketing - at the premises of suppliers and customers - and an end to the closed shop, as well as the application of criminal law to prevent violence against employers and employees who want to work.

Unfortunately, corrective action is likely to be the most in scope and some time in coming. The conservatives are afraid of the union power. They aren't eager for nationwide confrontation with coercive unionism. They are especially fearful of the disruptive capacity of the seven million members of the public sector union.

The British economy won't regain its strength, however, and law and order won't be fully in effect, until a confrontation with the union power takes place and the authority of Parliament is upheld. In a free society, unions can't be a state with a state.

Wet weather covers state

Three drown in flooding

By The Associated Press
Violent thunderstorms dumped several inches of rain on the Texas Hill Country and Central Texas Monday night and lightning touched off blazes that emptied Austin's firehouses.

More than 4 inches of rain fell in that area as severe thunderstorm, tornado and flash flood warnings were prompted from north of Dallas and Fort Worth to Houston and South Texas. Light rain also fell in the Panhandle and South Plains.

Roads were reported under water at one time in Sherman, north of Dallas, and Breckenridge, west of Fort Worth.

Flood warnings were issued for the Colorado River from Austin to Bastrop, the Little River in the Cameron area, and the San Gabriel River in the Georgetown area due to the threat of lowland flooding.

The North Texas rains drifted slowly eastward into East Texas after daybreak and much of South Texas still was under a thunderstorm warning at midmorning.

The rain in Southeast Texas

Barbecue reset

The 54th annual Grandview-Hopkins free barbecue has been rescheduled from May 24 to May 31 at noon.

moved offshore this morning with a few light to moderate showers reported on the Coastal Plains.

Decreasing cloudiness was expected from the west today. Temperatures were expected to range from the low 90s along the Rio Grande to the 70s and 80s elsewhere.

Austin was one of the cities hardest hit by the nighttime thunderstorms.

Wet streets there may have contributed to the death of an 8-year-old Austin boy Monday. Tony Hernandez died after he was struck by a pickup truck.

Three Austin firemen were injured when lightning struck nearby as they battled a church fire. All were taken to Breckenridge Hospital for observation.

Fire officials blamed lightning for the church fire and minor blazes at seven Austin homes. At one time, all vehicles were away from the city's 23 fire stations, officials said.

At Temple, 70 miles north of Austin, Cary Williams, 14, was swept into a flooded drainage ditch and carried under two bridges before he managed to grab a tree and hang on until students from Travis Middle School rescued him.

Authorities searched today for a fourth person feared drowned in Southwest Texas after floodwaters transformed the peaceful Devil's River into a torrent Sunday night and early Monday.

Three bodies were recovered Monday near Texas 163 about 16 miles north of Comstock in Val Verde County, near the Mexican border. The victims were identified as Brad Elliott, 14, and his 12-year-old brother Byron, both of Ozona, and Del Rio resident David Sanchez, in his late 20s.

Department of Public Safety officials said they would continue to search for the boys' father, Larry Elliott, who was missing and feared drowned.

Flood warnings and watches and severe thunderstorm warnings were posted throughout Texas Monday as the thunderstorms rumbled eastward.

Four members of the Elliott family survived including Martha Elliott, mother of the drowned boys, her 3-year-old daughter and two relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sparling, of Tulsa, Okla.

DPS officers said the Elliotts were returning to Ozona when the storm hit. They stopped about 10 p.m. behind Sanchez' truck at a low water crossing.

Police watching all-night stores

Pampa police, continuing their investigation of the armed robbery Friday of Allsup's Convenience Store at 500 E. Foster, have dropped their original suspect in the case.

Meanwhile, the Allsup's management has announced plans to increase the number of its employees per store working during late-night and early-morning hours.

"We're going to double up help in some shifts," Operations Manager Marvin Kramer said Monday.

Although the stores stay open 24 hours, the Foster store and the store at 201 E. Brown were reportedly closed Sunday night. However, Kramer said Allsup's headquarters has issued no directive for its Pampa stores to close at night.

All but one of eight convenience stores robbed in Pampa since January have been Allsup's. Following Friday's robbery, a 16-year-old female clerk was raped.

Police Chief Richard Mills said an Amarillo man thought by police to be the robber-rapist was one of several suspects who have since been cleared.

"We're coming up with a fresh one every day, but we're knocking them down as soon as we get them," Mills said.

Police have stepped up their surveillance of local convenience stores in response to the rash of robberies this year, Mills said.

The increased surveillance hasn't caught any robbers yet, Mills said, but it did get a male who was arrested Sunday night after he allegedly exposed himself to the clerk at the Allsup's store on Highway 60.

Rig mishap under study

GALVESTON (AP) — The rear leg of the Ranger 1 oil drilling rig may have broken off because of metal fatigue, according to the head of a board of inquiry looking into the May 10 collapse of the rig in which eight of the 34 men aboard were killed.

The rig toppled into the Gulf of Mexico south of Galveston. Rescuers saved 26 men and found the bodies of three others. Five men are still missing and presumed dead.

"There is a fracture all the way around the leg about a foot above the mat," Capt. W.E. Whaley Jr. said Monday. The mat was the base of the rig, sitting 60 feet beneath it on the ocean floor.

"The fracture face and configuration compare to a typical fatigue failure," he said.

Testimony during the four days of hearings has shown crew members felt the rig shudder about five hours before the platform's stern leg collapsed at about 10:30 p.m.

Weather

National weather

By The Associated Press
 A slow-moving cold front was spreading rain from the Carolinas to Texas, where some sections of the Lone Star state reported golf ball-sized hail and three-inch downpours in less than an hour.

The heavier rainfall was concentrated over northern Texas and Arkansas. Locally heavy rain was expected to spread eastward into the lower Mississippi Valley today.

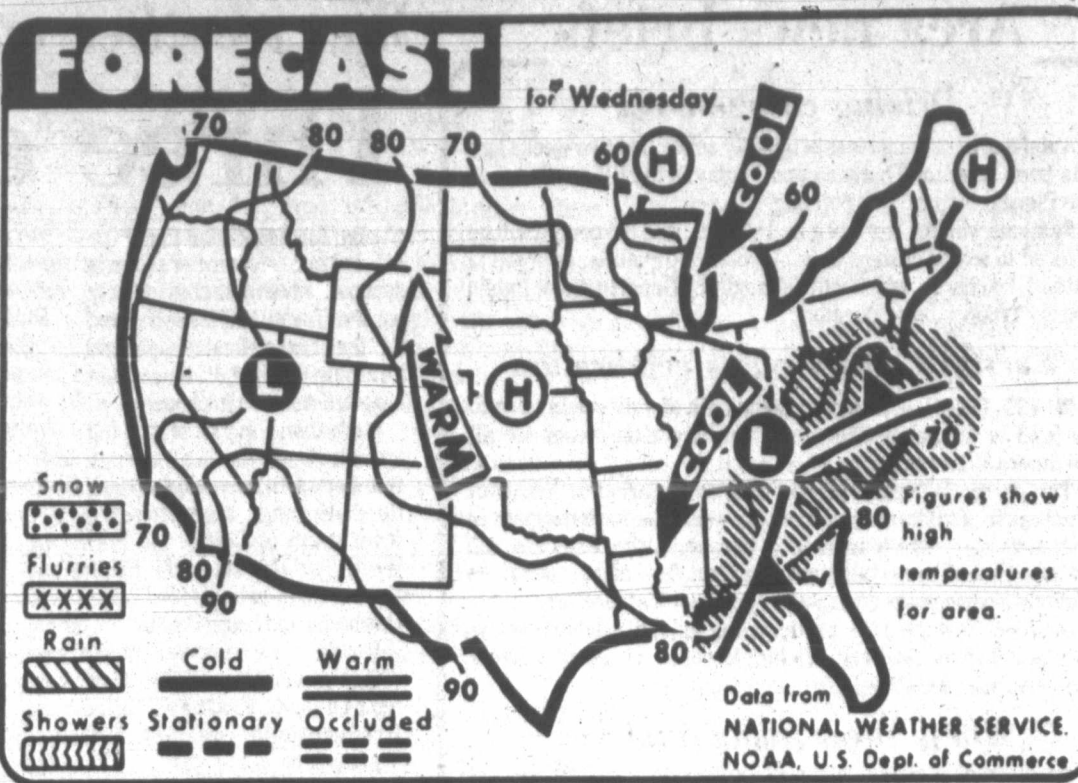

Thunderstorms brought large hail and flash flooding to North Central Texas on Monday. The town of Palo Pinto, about 75 miles west of Dallas, reported three inches of rain in less than an hour. Three persons drowned and a fourth was still missing today in Southwest Texas.

Rivers in South Texas were on the rise. On Monday night, 1 1/2 inches of rain fell at Austin and College Station. The Colorado River near Austin was approaching floodstage and lowland flooding was expected today.

Thunderstorms also produced heavy rains in western Arkansas. A flash flood watch was in effect for the southern two-thirds of Arkansas and southern Oklahoma.

Lighter rains were scattered through the Tennessee Valley into the Carolinas.

Light rainfall was also reported over the northern plains and the northeast. Clear to partly cloudy skies prevailed in California, portions of Nevada, the northwest and the Great Lakes region.

RAIN is forecast for a large portion of the East Wednesday, but clear skies are expected for the rest of the nation, according to the National Weather Service.

FOCUS

25 years after "Brown"

Twenty-five years ago this month the Supreme Court handed down its decision in the case of "Brown vs. Topeka Board of Education." This decision declared that racial segregation in the country's public schools is unconstitutional. Black Americans have made important gains in education since then. Last year, for example, 73 percent of blacks between 20 and 24 had completed high school, compared with only 42 percent in 1960. More black students are enrolled in colleges now than ever before. But because segregated housing patterns still exist in some areas, especially in large northern and western cities, the question of how to enforce the 1954 court ruling remains a serious problem.

DO YOU KNOW — Which state has the country's largest black population?
MONDAY'S ANSWER — Pierre Trudeau is Canada's prime minister.

Wayne medal a virtual certainty

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Wayne, who brought law 'n order to the American West single handedly, who fought and won World War II dozens of times, is taking Congress without a struggle.

"Few people are given the title, 'The,'" Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. was saying. "There's The President — The Pope — The Queen — and The Duke."

John Wayne, the Duke, 71, hospitalized for treatment of cancer, is going to have a congressional gold medal struck in his honor. No doubt about it.

The Senate already has approved the idea, and the House of Representatives is certain to do the same. Specifically, the legislation would authorize the president to present the gold medal to Wayne and authorize the Treasury Department to strike bronze replicas for sale to the public.

Only 83 Americans have been so honored. And most of them — George Washington and Andrew Jackson to name two — didn't make movies about wars and the West. They lived them.

A House banking subcommittee met Monday to kick around the idea of a medal for Wayne. It wasn't a hearing, it was a love feast.

Rep. Thomas Evans, R-Del., remembered growing up as a kid in Seaford, Del., shelling out 11 cents to watch John Wayne on the big screen. "And 11 cents meant something," he said.

"I learned a lot from John Wayne and I think America learned a lot from him because he set the standard for American manhood," he said.

Evans, 47, grew up on John Wayne. He was born three years after The Duke made the first of his 200 films.

From the President of the United States, in a letter to Rep. Frank Afnunzio, D-III., subcommittee chairman:

John Wayne's "true grit helped win the West. World War II, and the hearts of thousands of us across the country and the world."

From a tearful Maureen O'Hara, actress, for 39 years a friend of Wayne, and his co-star in "The Quiet Man":

"To the people of the world, John Wayne is not just an actor, and a very fine actor. He is the United States of America."

Penney's names new store manager

Altie M. Orr, a 21-year veteran with the J.C. Penney Company, has been named store manager of the company's 34,000-square foot department store now under construction at the new Pampa Mall.

Orr is a native of Woodston, Kan. and a graduate of Fort Hays (Kan.) State College, with a degree in business and economics. Orr began his career with J.C. Penney in Westlake, Cal., as a department manager trainee and was later promoted, holding various positions in the downtown Berkeley, Cal., store.

Orr transferred to Westminster, Colo., in 1967 as assistant manager, remaining there until 1973 when he became assistant manager of the Villa Italia Shopping Center J.C. Penney Store.

Initiative, referendum bill is mortally wounded, says sponsor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The sponsor of a proposal giving Texans a limited right of initiative and referendum says it is badly wounded, if not dead.

Needing 100 votes for approval, the constitutional amendment received an 84-34 tally in the House on Monday — five fewer "aye" votes than when it came up last week.

Rep. Carlisle Smith, D-Grand Prairie, the sponsor said he was not ready to pronounce the measure (HJR3) dead. "but I am saying it is wounded."

Smith said he might ask the House to reconsider Monday's decision "if I think we have the votes to pass it." But time is running short.

The legislative session ends at midnight, May 28. Should the House ultimately approve an initiative and referendum proposal, the Senate — paralyzed since last Friday by the absence of the 12 "Killer Bee" senators — still would have to act.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he would call lawmakers back into special session if they failed to submit initiative and referendum to the voters. Smith was asked if he thought Clements would make good on his threat.

"I don't think Mr. Clements has any choice but to call a special session," Smith said.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, urged rejection of the measure because, he said, it would undermine the representative system of government.

"If you represent your people and I represent my people, there is no better representative form of government than this. ... I trust a system that allows intelligent decisions to be made by informed people," Washington said.

Smith said the people of Texas want initiative and referendum and should get the chance "to speak on whether they want this kind of system. It will carry every county in the state, and you know it."

He urged each House member to "share just a little part of your chair" with the citizens.

Smith's proposal would let Texans, by petition, put initiative issues for new laws and referendum measures to repeal unpopular laws on general election ballots. If voters approved the proposals, they would go before the Legislature, which would have to act.

If the Legislature rejected or amended a measure it received by initiative or referendum, the voters again would receive the issue and could pass their original proposal over the Legislature's head.

Critics of the proposal say it makes it too hard to get an issue on the ballot because a petition would have to be signed by 15 percent of the total number of voters in the last gubernatorial election.

Rep. Luther Jones, D-El Paso, said that would impose the "onerous burden" of gathering 355,000 signatures.

Editors named for PHS publications

Editors for Pampa High School's 1979-80 yearbook and weekly newspaper were named at the Publications' Dinner held Monday night Tom's Country Inn.

The newspaper editor and assistant editor will be Valerie Swindle and Margo Hoffer, respectively. Cary Raulston was assigned two positions, circulation manager and cartoonist.

The advertising manager will be Dennis Graham, while Hoffer will be editor of the Harvester yearbook.

Special recognition went to D'Conway for outstanding publication service and Lynne Holcomb, who received the National Observer Plaque.

John Nooncaster, Conway and Holcomb were honored as members of the honorary high school society for journalists, Quill and Scroll.

New members of the society were announced as Ed Sackett, Kim Campbell, Mia Dacus, Hoffer, Swindle, Frazier and Jennifer Gage.

For outstanding work in class activities, Lynne Holcomb and John Nooncaster were given editor pins and Ed Sackett was awarded for his efforts as a photographer.

Other class awards were given to Campbell and Dacus for journalism, Susan Sheppard for advertising and Valerie Swindle for publications.

Letters denoting the successful completion of one full year on the staff were presented to 22 students.

Mending mature marriage

by
louise pierce

Do you ever surprise each other? If not, you are missing a delightful experience and one of the best marriage-menders within your power. If your marital union is faltering or failing, consider the glue of surprise to patch it back together. Then hope that the splice will stick so tightly that it will never threaten to break again. I know of cases where it has worked exactly like that.

Staid routine can be boring, even exhausting. The same job year after year, the same house all your life, the same time schedule so rigid that you wake up without an alarm and fall asleep precisely at 10:30 every night—this ho-hum living for 30 or 40 years can become humdrum, even dum-dum, when you spend most of your waking hours with your mate and wonder whether your hoary marriage relationship isn't as unsatisfying as your retired uneventfulness. I think this idea recurs as a gnawing need or an exploding demand in most older couples. The non-adjusters don't try to overcoax their increasing annoyance; they separate—or they go on growling at themselves and each other ad infinitum. But the wise husband-and-wife twosomes do something about their "nothing ever happens" routine. They make things happen.

More and more, people are telling me how they have lived their unexciting existences into surprising days so full that they are tired enough to sleep at night and thus wake up rested the next morning.

DEAR LOUISE: Dent wouldn't take me anywhere. I got sick of hearing the neighbor women tell about going downtown to play bingo and having hamburgers at the drive-in and visiting their relatives in other towns. Dent hit the ceiling every time I wanted any of those things. We'd had our life, he said. We'd just as well make up our minds to sitting in a corner and letting somebody crack bark over our heads. Well, I didn't feel that way. So I had to busy myself with something more interesting than sitting in a corner with him. One night I stirred up an angel food cake from scratch. It looked so good after I frosted it that I stuck some candles on it though it wasn't anybody's birthday. When Dent came out to the kitchen for supper, his eyes popped half out of his face. He asked, "What's the occasion?" And I told him, "It's our living through another wonderful day together." His face went soft and his chin relaxed a little. We ate every bite of that cake, just the two of us. The next afternoon he disappeared and came back with a box for me. I couldn't believe it when I undid the ribbons and I found an American Beauty rose in a little glass bowl, the first flower he'd ever given me in all our years together. I held the bowl tight and cried all over him. He sniffled a little too. We were standing in front of our big mirror and it seemed to me we both looked younger than we had the day before. A cake and a rose had brought back the feeling for each other that we thought was gone forever. Now we dream up a little surprise at least once a week.

As for me, Otis has kept me in continuing surprises, ever since we were married 42 years ago. Some of them have been sweet and much enjoyed. He never forgets my birthday or our anniversary, making the place a surprise to me.

Regarding mind-boggling surprises, I get one of those so often that sometimes I think tension is a way of life for me. Otis has offices in 'wo towns and makes trips to several others. He likes to have me go with him, and he calls to say, "How about packing our bag, honey? We have to leave in thirty minutes." I rush around like a around like a teenage (or maybe more like a headless chicken), packing things we don't need and forgetting necessities.

But, even so, the surprises keep us so active that we feel young, which we are in spirit.

Some years ago Dr. David Wiscott wrote in "How to Live With Another Person": "A marriage is old when two people feel that there is nothing new to discuss together."

So let us never allow our marriages to grow old. Let us discover something new every day.

DEAR ABBY: Now that the summer season will soon be upon us, how about some help for us poor suckers who have summer cottages?

We've had our cottage for eight years, and each summer we grow more popular than the summer before. Friends and relatives come in droves to enjoy themselves in the sun and partake of our food and drink. They stay anywhere from a weekend to a full week. They always come empty-handed, of course.

We have even written notes in advance saying, "We are sorry, but we can't have you this year."—but they come anyway. Why are some folks so thick? We bought this place to get away from these people.

We don't want to seem cranky, but we'd like to entertain the guests we really WANT, without all these others "surprising" us. We're tired of running a free hotel, and are thinking of selling. Can you help us?

HAD IT IN MINNESOTA

DEAR HAD IT: If you've actually written to say you can't accommodate them, but they come anyway—your only salvation is to develop a thicker hide. Greet the unwelcome ones at the door with, "You may stay for a few hours, but when the sun disappears, please do likewise."

DEAR ABBY: You are so right when you say, "Live your life one day at a time."

After 13 years of a happy marriage, beautiful children, a successful husband (due to my help), a beautiful home and all the trimmings, my husband informs me that he is just not "happy" anymore!

At the same time, my brother's wife has decided the same thing. Strange? Not really. She is divorcing my brother (she also has a lovely home and two beautiful children) so she can marry my husband.

Need I tell you how much hurt and unhappiness these two selfish people have caused everyone involved?

So, here I sit, still in shock, very hurt and bitter, thinking of how wise your philosophy is. "Live your life one day at a time."

That's all any of us really has. Sign me...
ALONE WITH TWO CHILDREN TO RAISE

DEAR ALONE: You asked for no advice, but may I give you some? Don't dwell on your bitterness, hurt and resentment. Turn your attention to putting your life together by pursuing new interests. Work on being a positive, attractive, likable person. You still have a lot of living to do. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is convinced that shampooing his hair will cause it to fall out.

Arnold is 25 and good-looking, but he's got this thing about losing his hair because his father was bald at 40. He never brushes his hair because if he sees a few hairs in his hairbrush he practically freaks out! And if he wakes up and finds a few hairs on his pillow, it spoils his day.

He's a wonderful guy, but you don't know how hard it is to sleep with a man who has hasn't washed his hair since last July. Help! Maybe he'll believe you. I've given up.

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Tell Arnold that I said cleanliness and massage promote the growth of human hair. He stands to lose more hair (and friends) if he allows rancid oil to collect on his scalp.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

Gathering for 'Health' purposes

ST. PETERSBURG BEACH, Fla. (NEA)—This is a beautiful spot, where Bob Altman and his all-star cast are shooting "Health." But he'll never come back again.

"I was planning to do 'Popeye' around here," the prolific director said. His next project is "Popeye," with Robin Williams, "Mork and Mindy." "But I have had so many problems with the teamsters here."

Among the problems: the teamsters demanded double time after 5 p.m. and triple time after 8 p.m., with the result, Altman says, that some of the drivers were getting pay checks in amounts of $1,500 a week or thereabouts.

Lauren Bacall (starring in "Health" with Carol Burnett, Glenda Jackson, James Garner and Dick Cavett) says: "This is my time. I can feel it. I went through some very dry years, but now I think the cycle is coming my way again."

The movie is being filmed at the Don Cesar Hotel, an ancient, pink edifice. At night, Altman screens his films for his cast and crew in his private screening room, converted from a small meeting room.

They come to see the dailies first, and stay for whatever Altman feature is on that day's schedule. They come with their families and make an evening out of it. Lauren Bacall even brings her dog. He liked "Quintet."

"I did my last TV show a year ago yesterday," said Carol Burnett. "The day after that I sat down and figured out what I wanted to do—and everything has come true."

The story of "Health" is about the campaigning between two women (Glenda Jackson and Lauren Bacall) for the presidency of a health food association. The original story is by a young writer, Frank Barhydt, another of Altman's proteges.

"I used to work for a health magazine," Barhydt says. "I wanted to write a screenplay about politics and figured that a health convention was an ideal microcosm."

As the shooting goes on, Altman and Barhydt huddle under the camera boom, rewriting scenes as they go along.

Henry Gibson, the ex-"Laugh-In" star, is now making his fourth film for Altman.

"And I have done a lot of other films, too," he says. "I have totally abandoned the flower pot and the poetry. I haven't done anything like that in a long time."

Another of Altman's discoveries is Paul Dooley, who starred in the director's last film, "A Perfect Couple." For a long time, Dooley was one of the busiest actors in commercial in New York—famous mostly, perhaps, as the man in the dog suit.

"But since I did 'A Wedding,'" Dooley says, "I decided not to do any more commercials on camera—some people think it is foolish to put on a dog suit."

Altman keeps turning films out at a faster pace than any other director—this is his 15th film in 10 years. I asked him if he feels he is a good judge of his own material. "Obviously not," he said, "after 'Quintet.'"

"Directors all work differently," Altman says, "like painters and writers. I don't believe if I took longer to make my films they would be any better."

On an Altman location, they always work on Sunday and have Saturday off, which is the reverse of all other film companies. Executive producer Tommy Thompson says that is an Altman tradition, so the cast and crew can have a day off (Saturday) when the shops and liquor stores are open.

The Don Cesar Hotel is still entertaining regular guests, during the shooting. But each guest gets a letter, explaining about the filming, about how they may be inconvenienced and concluding: "Please do not approach the actors for photographs or autographs." It doesn't help.

Polly's Pointers

by
polly cramer

DEAR POLLY—Without thinking I washed a 10-year-old wool sweater with mild soap in cool water. It is now a smaller size than I can wear and the yarn is not as soft as it once was. The dry cleaner could not help so I wonder if there is anything you could suggest.—DOROTHY R.

DEAR DOROTHY—I am afraid there is not much you can do if a professional dry cleaner could not help your sweater. For future use you might keep the following letter from a reader. I notice you said the sweater was 10 years old. Have you worn it in the meantime? Forgive me for saying so but if you have not, it may be your own size has changed a bit, too.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Woolen sweaters are so popular again. As I am a spinner who has learned how to wash wool properly I feel I should pass some Pointers on to your readers.

The temperature one washes woolen sweaters in is not so important as long as the wash and rinse water are exactly the same temperature. I use cool water and a liquid concentrated washing compound. The sweater should only be gently pressed, pushing the water through the fibers, and never agitated. Water should never be allowed to run on the garment—place the sweater in the water after the basin is filled.

When "wringing out" do not wring but press and squeeze to remove the excess water. Do not lift the garment up while it is heavy with the water in it. Press the water out against the sides of the basin. Wool has tiny hooks on it and unless the above directions are all followed these hooks will come together and "felt" the wool.

The squeezed out garment can be put in the washer, set on delicate cycle, and spin dry to get the rest of the water out. Lay it flat to dry or put on a plastic hanger making sure the garment does not stretch at the neck or shoulders. Never hang unless most of the moisture is out.—SALLY

by laurence e. lamb, m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB—This is very important to me so I hope you'll answer my question. I'm married and 38 years old. For the last four to five years we haven't had any sexual relations because my husband is impotent. What does this do to me physically and mentally? I'm frustrated and depressed and feel old and angry. I'm mad at him all the time. Is this natural?

DEAR READER—Assuming that your husband is somewhere near your age group, it is certainly not natural for him to be impotent.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-12 on Impotence so you can better understand the many different causes of this problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

It's important to realize that impotence is a symptom. It can be caused by many different things.

When you don't have a normal married life, it's much easier to feel that you're not loved. That in itself leads to frustration. There's no real evidence that the absence of sex will cause you physical or medical harm but your reaction to not having sex can. After all, whatever else sex is it's one way of expressing closeness and affection for your mate. By the time older people reach the stage in life that sex is often less important to them, they will have built up a basic, sound, emotional relationship to each other and have a full appreciation of how much they mean to each other with or without sex. It's not the only way of expressing affection.

Your husband should see a physician to gain an understanding as to why he is impotent. Once the cause is understood, then meaningful measures may be taken to do something about it.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am a very afraid 14-year-old girl. I am positive I have breast cancer. My chest is so very small and I have big lumps in both of them. They don't hurt very much until now. When I get jabbed or something like that, it hurts. I can't sleep on my stomach either. Please tell me who to turn to. I'm not very close to my parents so I don't really want to tell them. What doctor should I go to? If this goes untreated, how long will it take until I die? Will it be painful? Please help me.

DEAR READER—It's most unlikely that you have cancer. I presume from your letter that you mean you have some lumps in your breast. At this age of your development these are probably related to endocrine changes in your body. You're growing up.

In any case, I know you'll feel a lot better if you do see a doctor since you are concerned about it. If you have a school physician that you're able to see or a school nurse, that would be a good person to see. Or if you have a family doctor, go talk to him or her.

$60,000 to buy release

HOUSTON (AP) — The Colombian government agreed Monday to let firefighter William Spradley and his friend, Roy McLemore, out of jail for $60,000, said a Houston Fire Department spokesman.

Dale Everitt said he was told the men were fined $20,000 apiece for civil violations, and their combined attorneys fee was $15,000. He said doctor's fees for Spradley and transportation for the men out of the South American country come to $5,000 more.

"It pretty much adds up to buying their freedom," Everitt said.

But Houston firefighters will not be raising the release money, he added.

"All the department is doing now is contacting the relatives and helping in communications," Everitt said.

The men have been in Colombia since April 29, when Spradley said, the men began a flight to Venezuela to pick up oil drilling bits.

The firefighter, who moonlights as a pilot, said their twin-engine plane was forced down in Colombia by engine trouble.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede os. j.

May 23, 1979

Several projects that you have been involved in that have not previously paid off will come to fruition this coming year. Don't plow under the seeds which you have sown.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Others are likely to treat you in a more generous fashion than usual today, but be careful not to demand more than you're entitled to. How to get along with other signs is one of the sections you'll enjoy in your new Astro-Graph letter. Mail $1 for each and a self-addressed envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do things that you find enjoyable today, but do them as inexpensively as possible. You're a shade too extravagant for your own good.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) Major achievements are possible today through tenacity and effort. If you look for the lines of least resistance you'll lose your momentum.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Success is likely in your major dealings today as long as you do things in a practical, logical manner. Avoid hunches. They could misfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Rather than bank on the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, take advantage of what you have at hand. The rewards will be worthwhile if you handle things properly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Personal goals may have to be set aside today to enable you to do things that are for the greatest good of the greatest number.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be alert for career opportunities today, but don't expect a free ride. Developments are promising, but you'll have to work for what you hope to get.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your popularity is at a high point with your peer group today but be wary of one who uses excessive flattery. This person could have ulterior motives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your mate's judgment in family financial matters today may not be as keen as yours. Do fully discuss any expenditures he or she proposes.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be very industrious and imaginative today, but you could lack the necessary follow-through. Sitting on your ideas won't get the job done.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your material prospects look very encouraging today, provided you don't take foolish risks. Stick to sure things.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Ways will be found today to put your leadership qualities to productive uses. Be careful, however, not to boast of your achievements.

Canadiens capture title

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer
MONTREAL (AP) — They are called "Les Glorieux," the glorious ones, by the French-speaking fans who adore them. They are "The Habs," the inhabitants of Montreal, to the English-speaking.

To any and all, they are the National Hockey League's champions yet again. A fourth consecutive summer of celebration awaits the Montreal Canadiens, who have earned every restful day of it.

"I think the next-toughest thing to winning the Stanley Cup is celebrating," said Montreal left wing Steve Shutt, who had three years of practice before Monday night's 4-1 triumph over the New York Rangers assured another. "I'm going to go crazy for three or four days, just like everyone else," he said.

Everyone else, it seemed, had a head start. One frisky Canadian splattered champagne on Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau — and got away with it. Car horns blared in the streets after the glorious ones had won the title for the eighth time in 12 years but only the first on their home ice since 1968.

What happened: Jacques Lemaire scored twice — including the second Cup-winning goal of his career — and Rejean Houle added three assists to pace the Montreal triumph. Bob Gainey, named the playoffs' Most Valuable Player, and Rick Chartraw had the other goals as the Canadiens extended their record playoff series winning streak to 12.

Carol Vadnais scored for New York, which powered into this best-of-seven series seeking its first title since 1940 and left this series seeking the same thing.

Major League roundup

Ron Guidry suffers an off-day

By The Associated Press
Eyen Ron Guidry has his off-days.
And it was one of those days Monday night against the Detroit Tigers.

"My control was too good — I kept hitting their bats," joked the New York Yankee ace after giving up a career-high 13 hits and losing a 3-1 decision to the Tigers.

"They were just hitting the ball. I thought I threw well," added the Cy Young Award winner who had never before given up more than 10 hits in a game. "I kept the ball in play and they just got a few hits that fell in. And that's the name of the game."

Twins 7, Rangers 6

Hosken Powell's RBI double capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning to lead Minnesota over Texas. Mike Marshall gained his 11th save of the young season, preserving the victory for Pete Redfern, 2-0, with a ninth-inning appearance. Sparky Lyle, 3-3, who attempted to stop the Minnesota rally in the ninth, was the loser.

Mariners 12, Royals 7

Willie Horton smashed a three-run homer and Dan Meyer collected a single and two doubles, powering Seattle over Kansas City.

Blue Jays 8, Indians 1

Rick Bosetti drove in two runs with a double to key a five-run outburst in the fourth inning, leading Toronto over Cleveland.

Braves 7, Astros 5

Bob Horner's three-run homer paced Atlanta to a 7-5 victory over Houston. Horner's decisive blow followed a double by Gary Matthews and a throwing error by Enos Cabell on Jeff Burroughs' grounder. It came off reliever Bo McLaughlin, 1-2, and made a winner of Phil

Nieko, 5-6.

Phillies 5, Cardinals 3
While Horner has had a spring he wouldn't mind forgetting, Mike Schmidt is off to a memorable start. The Phillies star is batting .293 and has knocked in 34 runs. Nine times he's had the game-winning hit.

"Pete Rose is rubbing off on me," said Schmidt, crediting Philadelphia's off-season free-agent acquisition for improving his own attitude. "He doesn't need me," said the Phillies first baseman. "God gave him a gift, power, and he's using it."

Padres 3, Dodgers 2

Eric Rasmussen won his first game of the season after losing four by firing a five-hitter and outdueling Andy Messersmith, who tossed a six-hitter. San Diego won the game on Kurt Bevacqua's one-out RBI single in the ninth.

Pirates 4, Expos 2

Willie Stargell belted his seventh homer in his last nine games and Bert Blyleven won his first game in three decisions this year. Ed Ott and Omar Moreno also homered for the Pirates and Tony Perez slammed one for Montreal.

Russell Erxleben signs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints have signed their No. 1 draft choice, kicker Russell Erxleben of the University of Texas, to a six-year, million-dollar contract.

The contract was signed Monday, but no terms were announced.

However, reports indicated it may have made Erxleben the highest paid kicker in professional football history.

The contract — a series of six, one-year pacts — reportedly included a $300,000 signing bonus and a sliding salary that will average about $150,000 plus bonuses.

Erxleben, both a punter and a kicker, holds the NCAA field goal record with a 67-yarder against Rice in 1977. He made three field goals of more than 60 yards and 11 of more than 50 yards.

Asked if he thought his distance would be cut by the National Football League rules which forbid use of a kicking tee, Erxleben said it might be reduced about 10 yards a kick.

But he said he didn't expect any trouble kicking off the artificial turf in the Superdome.

As a combination kicker, he scored 120 of 134 extra points attempted in college and 49 of 78 field goals. He punted 214 times for a 44.2-yard average, with a hang time on punts consistently more than five seconds.

Most NFL teams have a separate kicker and punter, but Erxleben said he plans to keep on kicking both ways.

He said coaches' resistance to having only one kicker might be because it would require two replacements if the kicker got hurt.

"But we don't get hurt that much," he said.

"The kicking game is as important as offense and defense," Coach Dick Nolan told reporters. "Russell is capable of handling the kicking and punting jobs for us. I think we've corrected and cured our problems in that area."

The Saints already have a kicker, Rich Szaro, and a punter, Tom Blanchard.

Erxleben said he'll try to take both their jobs. "I've got to get it from them."

Baseball winners announced

The pinch, hit and run competition for area youngsters was recently held at Optimist Park.

In the nine-year-old division, the winner was Troy Owens with Grant Gamblin taking second place. Kelly Loter took top honors in the 10-year-old division, while John Thomas came in second.

Trent Watson grabbed the win in the competition among the 11-year-olds and Monty O'Neal placed second. Tate Eldridge won in the 12-year-old division and Mike Killeo was second.

The winners will now compete in the next round of competition on June 10 at 3 p.m. at Southwest Park in Amarillo. That is located at 45th and Bell.

The division competition is scheduled for July 1st at Arlington Stadium. Then survivors of that will be involved in competition at the All-Star game, July 17 at the King Dome in Seattle.
