Pampans killed in plane crash

By GREG HARDIN
Pampa News Managing Editor

Engine trouble was blamed for a light plane crash that claimed the lives of a Pampa man and his wife around noon Saturday six miles south of the city.

Late Saturday evening Sheriff's deputies, Department of Public Service Troopers and local authorities continued to probe for the exact cause of the crash that claimed the lives of C.L. "Bob" Roberts, 49 and his wife Marion, 46.

According to authorities at the crash scene witnesses heard the plane engine "missing and sputtering" shortly before the single engine craft nose dived into the north wall of a 20 foot deep gully.

"The plane circled over this warehouse," Sheriff Rufe Jordan said as he motioned towards a structure near the crash site. "He was having trouble with the engine before he tried to set the plane down in this field."

Jordan relayed a description of how the pilot had tried to bring down the small plane in an open field but missed making a safe landing by 30 feet.

Other authorities at the scene said the craft exploded on impact sending smoke and flames more than 50 feet into the air. Firemen battle the blaze for more than 20 minutes as rescue workers watched in horror unable to help the victims trapped inside the burning craft.

Witnesses to the accident said the small plane had made several passes over the area six miles south of Pampa shortly before the crash.

"He buzzed around for awhile but we didn't think anything about it until we heard his engine start missing," one witness said shortly after the pair were removed from the smoldering wreckage. "It was like all of a sudden something just happened and they came down."

Several persons told authorities that the plane was only a few hundred feet off the ground moments before the crash.

"They were between three and five hundred feet when they started down," Jordan said. "We will have the people from Amarillo here to check out the crash and determine just what happened."

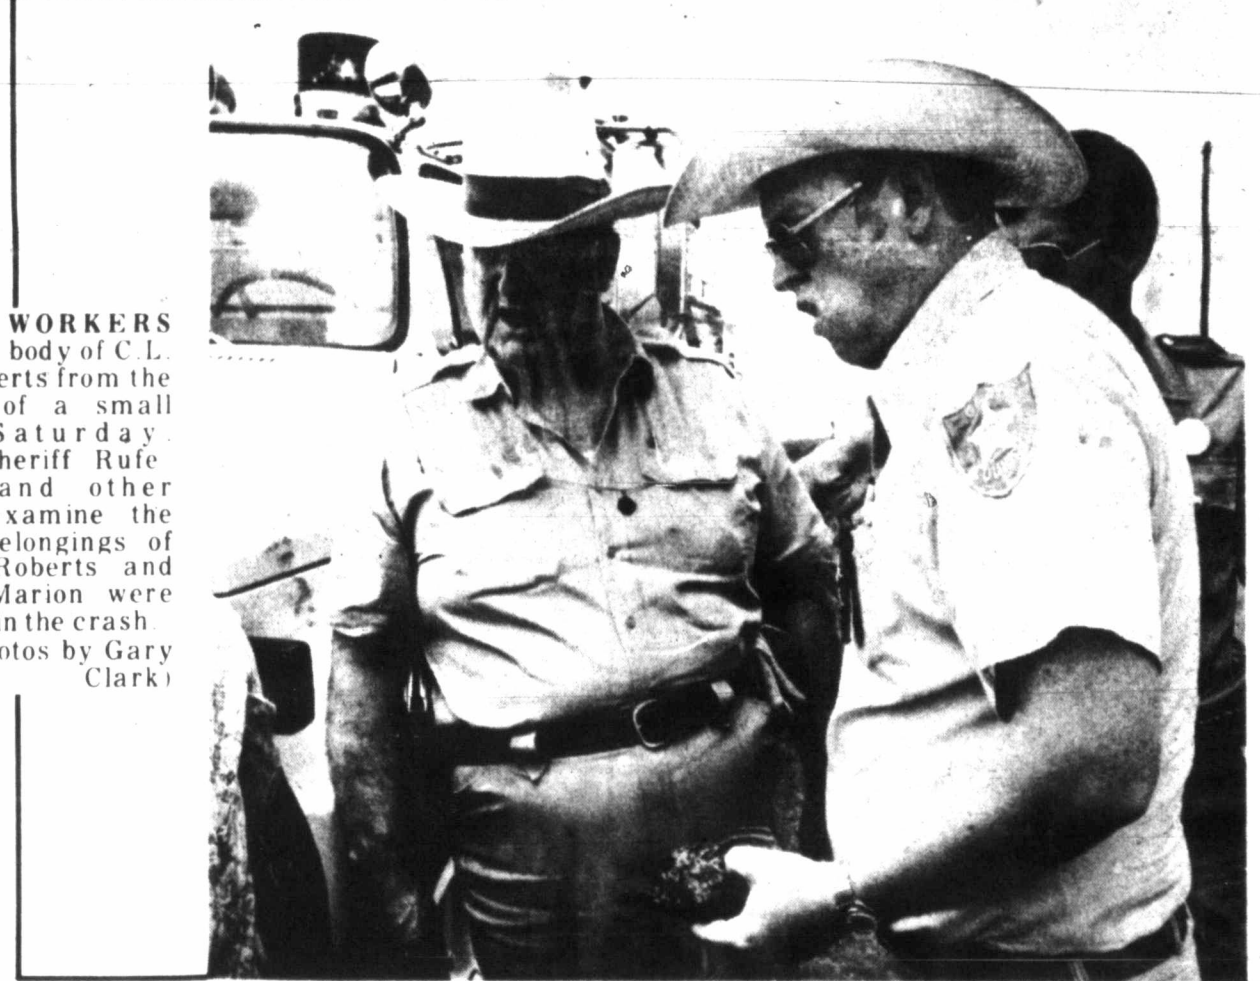

Officials said that the identity of the victims was made through personal papers and the ownership of the plane.

"The bodies were burned beyond recognition," one officer said. "We know who they are through the documentation and other information obtained from the plane."

Roberts was an independent oil producer and a partner in the Commanché Oil Co. of Pampa. He was also a member of the Masonic Lodge.

Both victims were taken to Duenkle - Smith Funeral Home and then transferred to Amarillo where autopsies will be performed.

Funeral services for the both Roberts and his wife will be held Monday at 3 p.m. in the Highland Christian Church.

Hospital criticized

WHEELER - In a recent commissioners court meeting a local resident lashed out against the Park View Hospital's taxing policy and other charges made on patients by the hospital.

C.E. Loter told the commissioners that the hospital was charging an excessive tax on patients bills and that other hospital charges were excessive.

County Judge Wendell Morgan advised Loter that the court had no authority over the hospital but that the commissioners would bring the allegations to the attention of the hospital board.

Harold Comer -

DAN LACKEY and LYNNE HOLCOMB

Although prosecuting attorneys are often expected to be case-hardened, verbally pugnacious, and brusque, as usually portrayed in movies and television, 31st District Attorney Harold Comer comes across—both inside and out of the courtroom—as a Nice Guy D.A.

"As far as that killer instinct goes, I don't know whether I've got it or not," Comer says, mentally musing over his first two and half years in office. "I just present my case, argue my case, just the way I feel."

"Oh, I've had that feeling," he explains. "Especially in child abuse cases, or rape or murder cases, but I try to keep my cool... It's against legal ethics—and open to objection in court—to argue your personal feelings, but the law does give you the chance to show some temperament during final arguments."

Not surprisingly, Comer says he counts patience as a key lawyerly virtue. An almost pious defender of his faith in the American legal system, the district attorney recently took time for some casual "cross-examination" on subjects ranging from capital punishment to the Pampa drag.

On such routine aspects of due process as the necessity of asking a witness from Pampa if Pampa is in Gray County: "I don't get bored. I know that one of the elements of any criminal offense is establishing where it happened. Because if I don't establish, for example, that it happened in Gray County, we're in the wrong court."

On guns in Texas: "I want to talk about hand guns. I think it is true that a gun around the house in a domestic quarrel can lead to death quicker—easier—before a person has time to reflect. It's an easy way to kill."

On capital punishment: "I'm for it, of course. I think it's a deterrent to crime. But I also agree with the Texas law which qualifies the death penalty to include only such things as contract murder, killing of law enforcement officer, murder while escaping from prison, or in the act of rape."

On courtroom "cronyism": "We're friends, many of the lawyers and I, but once we're inside that courtroom, we're adversaries. It's a contest, a competition. You have to remember, we're professional people, our reputations depends a lot on how we represent our clients. And my client is the State of Texas."

On the adversary system in court: "I don't think the truth is always black and white. And the best way to get at the truth is by cross-examination."

On the rights of the individual versus the rights of society: "I never did agree with the Warren (Supreme) Court because I think they sacrificed the interests of society for the protection of the individual. But I believe in the procedural safeguards relating to search and seizure.

"They protect not just the rights of criminal defendants but the rights of all of us. They have to be applied across the board and as a result it may be that some guilty defendants are going to be set free. I think it's a small price to pay so that we don't convict an innocent person."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

What is a politician

Since government has become such a factor in each and every one of our lives, shouldn't we try to understand the cause of this government dominance?

To understand this cause shouldn't we analyze what attracts human beings to politics?

With instance after instance being brought to public view of politicians lining their pockets as a result of their political offices, it becomes easy to assume that money is the main attraction which causes individuals to become politicians. In many cases this is no doubt true. Government funds often seem to belong to no one and thus tempt many in government employ to bestow them on the most deserving person they can think of, who often turns out to be themselves.

With government controlling more and more of our economy, the fact that crooks have to go where the money is causes more and more of them to turn to government employment.

However, there is probably an even stronger reason for individuals to become politicians.

That is the power which accompanies political office. Many idealists think they know better than the ordinary person what is good for that person. They consider themselves a cut above the ordinary individual who just isn't smart enough to know what he or she should do.

Idealists seek government power to impose their ideas upon the rest of us. They may be personally honest insofar as not thinking of lining their own pockets with money but have little compunction about bolstering their egos with government power to impose their ideas upon us dumb common people, who just want to make our way in a free market in open competition with everyone else. They don't believe in a free market or voluntary actions. They do believe in controlling others by means of government power. Most politicians and political actionists fall in this category.

So much for so little

If you're a comparison shopper, perhaps you would be interested in knowing how the price of your daily newspaper compares with prices for the same item in other communities.

Be advised, according to the American Newspaper Publishers Association, that the going price is 15 cents. Out of 1,876 daily newspapers surveyed, 1,096 charged 15 cents.

There is, of course, the other side: The price is steadily rising. In 1977, 21.1 percent of newspapers sold for 20 cents. In 1978 that percentage had increased to 29.6.

Some newspapers charge even as much as...

But let's not bother about that. The fact is the majority of daily newspapers in the United States sell for 15 cents. And if we do say so ourselves, how else can you buy so much for so little?

Ah, wilderness

Presidential campaigners are tuning up for the New Hampshire primaries and we are already beginning to hear the familiar promises. One that will almost certainly sound hollow this time around is the traditional vow to bring the bloated federal bureaucracy under control.

That was one of Jimmy Carter's main planks in 1976 and it carried a lot of appeal for the hard-working folks out in the fields and factories. With his usual flair for hyperbole, Mr. Carter pledged to sweep through Washington like a Georgia Sherman, laying waste to desks, file cabinets and mimeograph machines. As an "outsider," he was just the man who could do it. When the slaughter ended there would be a neat, streamlined federal government with 200 or fewer agencies, compared with an alleged 1,900 then existent.

It was a grand vision but nothing more. Mr. Carter has been able to merge some federal advisory committees, which had sprouted like weeds in past administrations, but not to cut their spending, which has climbed 24 percent during his regime. The true core of government, some 469 departments, agencies and sub-agencies, has hardly been touched. These administrative subdivisions continue to divide and multiply.

Under Mr. Carter, the nation has acquired a Department of Energy, which has few rivals in Washington for muddling. He has proposed a Department of Education to satisfy the expansionary urgings of the National Education Association. He is pondering a new Department of Trade to satisfy the complaints of certain industries that their competitive problems don't get enough attention from Washington. A proposed Department of Natural Resources, mercifully, seems to have died aborning.

Government employment has not diminished appreciably and when you consider the "ghost battalions" of people who work on contract to the federal government, it has almost certainly risen, although the government itself does not bother to keep track.

In short, Mr. Carter tackled big government and lost. Instead of becoming a Georgia Sherman, he merely proved once again that a Georgia cadre was no match for a sophisticated Washington army. It may well be that Mr. Carter was never very deeply dedicated to the battle to begin with. When candidates make the same promises this time around, we assume that the voters will want to hear a few more specifics.

Gasoline and the environment

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

As we head into the month of July, gasoline continues to inconvenience most of us. If a line of automobiles forms anywhere, now, you can be assured that homo boodius will jump in and obediently line up, even if the line is going nowhere. In one incident, cars lined up all the way around a block to await their turns at a service station which had gone out of business months ago. And you thought there would be no one who could vote for Jerry Brown!

Speaking of the ayatollah, Jerry has been busy managing and controlling Californians out of the so-called "gas crisis," although it begins to appear that the cure is worse than the ailment. His "odd-even" plan for purchasing gasoline has, according to at least one statistician, resulted in 13.2 percent increase in a person's weekly trips to the gas pumps. The rationale, here is that when an individual knows that he can only buy gas every other day, he is more likely to stop on one "his" off days even though, under the ordinary system, he might have waited one more day.

Jerry has also decreed that people cannot purchase gas with more than half a tank of gasoline already in their cars, and has loosed the legions of pump-police to stalk the gas lines, peering into cars to make certain there are no heinous offenders. Our President-in-Waiting next decreed that service stations must be open on weekends, and followed this with an order limiting petro-criminals to purchasing no more than two gallons of gasoline in gas cans. (I suppose, though, that there must be a special exemption for this rule for arsonists.)

But then, just as the ayatollah was getting all the world's oil problems resolved, tragedy struck in the form of a decision by Standard Oil of Ohio to abandon its plans to construct a pipeline facility from Long Beach to Midland, Texas.

Over the past five years, Sohio has been battling the bureaucracy of California in an effort to get petroleum to its Texas refineries at a lower cost (which could have the effect of lowering prices to consumers.) The company estimates that it has spent some $50 million trying to obtain the 715 permits required by governmental agencies. The costs and the time delays simply became too burdensome for Sohio, and they dropped their efforts.

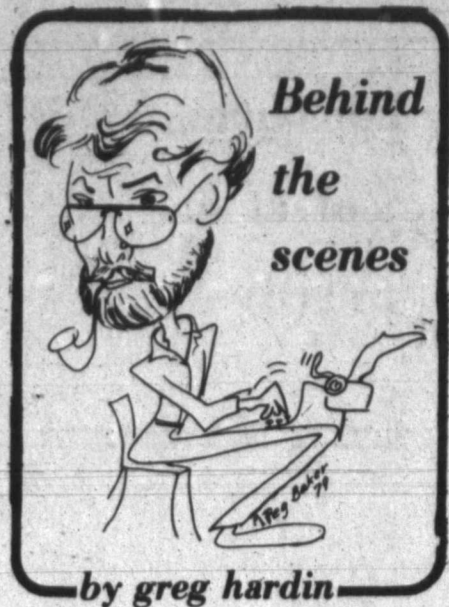

The numbskulls who while away their time in gasoline lines by gorging themselves with the mindless bilge of politicians and self-styled consumer advocates, will doubtless see some dark, amorphous conspiracy here by the oil companies. The ayatollah seems to have figured it all out, of course: it's all part of a big plot to keep him from becoming president. Personally, I would like to be able to think that the oil companies would be so public-spirited that they would be willing to forego the benefits of shorter profits in order to save the republic from four to eight years of the nonprincipled, interventionist alchemy of this West Coast mountebank. Unfortunately, it has been my experience that the oil companies - business - are so entrenched in the political system and the political parties that it really doesn't matter to them who is in office.

No, the Sohio decision is, I believe, little more than a reflection of the consequences of allowing the government to fool around with the economy. Our economic system is on the decline, we have high rates of unemployment, high rates of inflation, and increasing shortages of more and more things because we have encouraged or permitted the government to step in and pre-empt private decision-making. Much of this intervention has, of course, come from the business community itself. Much of it - especially that involved with the Sohio project - has come from so-called "environmentalists" and "consumer advocates" who, in order to gratify their own selfish delusions, have persuaded the government to enact their tastes into law.

William Tucker, a contributing editor of Harper's, recently wrote a very good article on how the environmentalists have, under the guise of seeking alternative energy sources, really been more interested in getting the state to maintain the status quo in order to insulate themselves in their preferred social positions. In Tucker's words, "more jobs, more economic growth and more mass consumption mean that more people will be climbing the economic ladder and demanding what they already possess."

And so, as you nudge your little VW along in those seemingly endless gas lines, think for a moment about the reality of why you are there. Is it really because the oil companies want to sell you less gasoline when prices are higher, or might it be because the political State has been busy imposing upon our society the values and tastes of elitists who have already "got it made," and who wish to preserve their feudal fiefdoms from the ambitions of arrogant peasants?

I want to say this straight off: I am not Catholic. But I do have a lot of Catholic friends and I have nothing against their religion.

Now that I have said that, let me say I am disgusted by some recent happenings within the Catholic Church here in Pampa.

The church, which promotes youth activities, seemed to turn on some of their own young people this week when they wanted to hold a fund raising dance in the gym at the church.

The young people asked Father Hynes for the gym's use. They were told they could not use the building, the site of many dances in the past.

Hynes reportedly told the group he had made arrangements with the local youth center to allow no dances at the church on the same night a dance was held at the youth center.

I am for free enterprise - but when you take advantage of the young people in Pampa you should get out of the money making business.

As if this weren't enough for those young people trying to raise money to help send two friends on a trip, Father Hynes told the group they would have to pay for the use of the church gym.

A sum of $125 would be required of those people who wanted to donate their time and effort to help someone else.

The church should take a second look at what is going on with the business of holding dances at the gym and what kind of deals have been made between church and private enterprise.

It is bad enough that our young people don't have anything to do here without trying to destroy the efforts of those few people who try to make something happen for others.

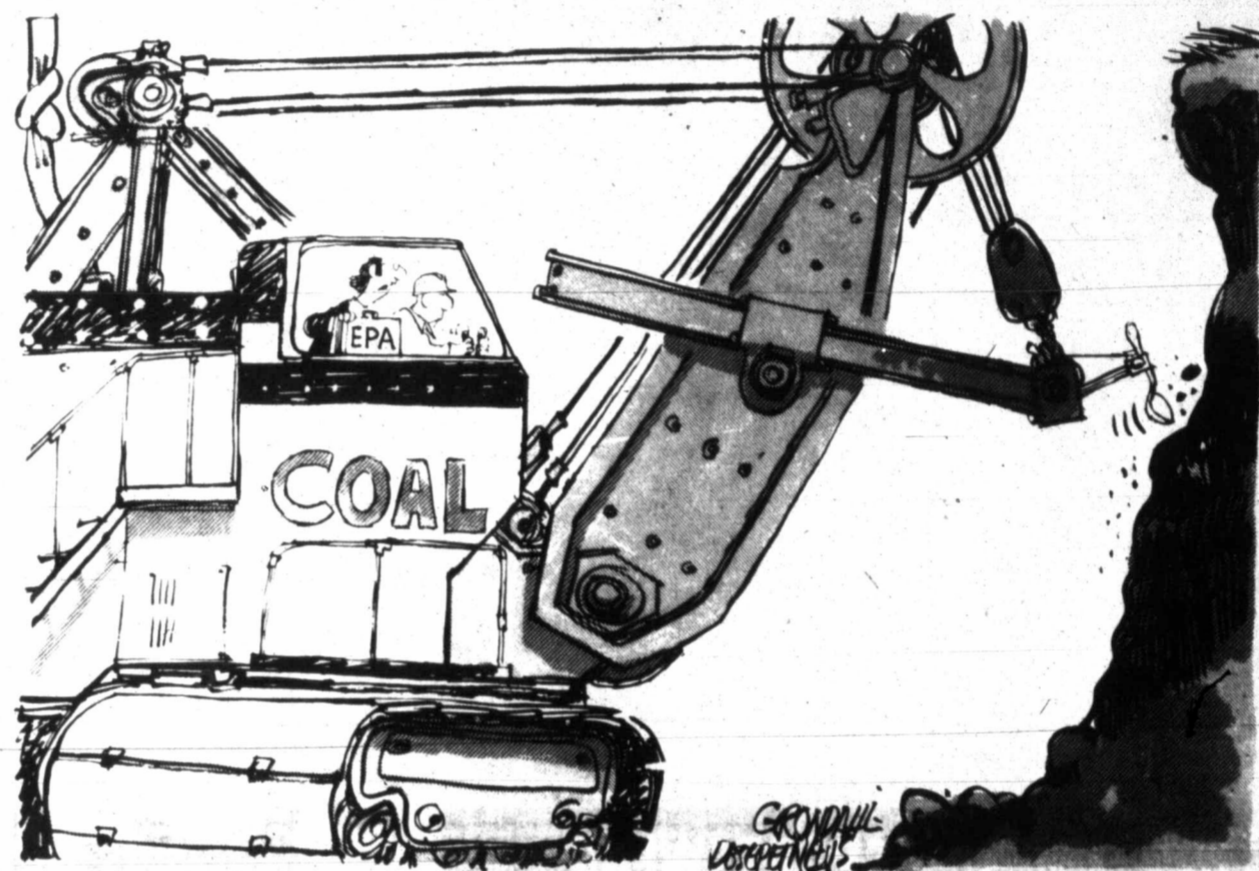

By the way, I want to thank the Optimist Club for their generous support of these young people.

The Optimists donated the use of their facilities so these young people could hold their dance.

If we had more gestures such as this from the people in Pampa, I doubt we would have the problems we are facing with our young people today.

Once again fellows, thank you for your support.

I know the young people who will benefit from the proceeds from your generosity and the hard work of their friends thank you from the bottom of their hearts also.

"All right ... Now ease her in slowly ... Slowly ... Oh, that's too much! Bring her back! Easy, easy ... That's it."

COMMENTARY

Britain's date with history

by don graff

History is something the British know quite a bit about.

As a people, they've seen and made more than a little. And recent events in London suggest they may be at it again.

The one-veto defeat of Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government on the question of Scottish home rule was, as a stream or recapitulative news reports has informed us, a history-maker, the first time in 55 years that a British government lost a confidence vote. As a note of historic irony, it was the country's very first Labor government that was brought down on the last occasion, in 1924.

The May 3 election which Callaghan has now called with Her Majesty's gracious consent is also very likely to make history by bringing to power Britain's first woman prime minister, Margaret Thatcher. Conservatives head into the election with an apparently firm lead in the opinion polls.

Much will be heard in the campaign about home rule, Britain's Common Market association, defense spending, better relations with the United States and other allies, social welfare programs and the economy in general.

But none of these is the really burning issue. That is the one that in fact brought down the Callaghan government as well as, in 1974, the Conservative government that preceded it: The ongoing confrontation between the British government and British labor that dominates politics and immobilizes the economy.

Nowhere in the democratic world is organized labor as politically powerful as in Britain. But from this strength comes a national weakness.

Today in history

By The Associated Press Today is Sunday, June 24, the 175th day of 1979. There are 190 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1497, the first recorded discovery of the mainland of North America occurred as explorer John Cabot sighted land between Halifax and southern Labrador.

On this date: In 1520, the Spanish conqueror of Mexico, Hernando Cortez, entered Mexico City.

British politics have been class-based since World War I and the emergence of the Labor Party as a sharer of power. Since World War II, they have been increasingly dominated by bread-and-butter economic issues - wage and benefit demands rather than long-term development. In the process, the national economy has stagnated.

Britain, which launched the Industrial Revolution, now brings up the rear among major industrial powers. Its gross national product today is little more than half that of France, long its economic inferior. The productivity of British workers lags far behind their German and Japanese Counter parts. Britain has lost its onetime leading position in key industries; once the world's second-largest auto producer, it now imports half its needs. And were it not for the bonanza of North Sea oil, which will not last indefinitely, it would still be running the ruinous balance of payments deficits that drained the pound of value throughout the '50s and '60s.

In such a situation, demands for larger cuts of an economic pie that is not growing have resulted in inflation, paralyzing strikes and a running battle with governments of whichever party happens to be in power. Both Conservatives, based in the upper classes and speaking for business and accumulated wealth, and the Labor Party, founded, financed and largely led by the unions, have sought to contain concessions within limits the economy could afford.

Both have met failure, the Conservatives in the coal-mining strike of 1974 and Labor in the chain-reaction public service walkouts of recent months. These last have been manifestations not of organized but of unorganized labor, staged in defiance of union leadership and demonstrating that real power in British labor has now passed from that leadership to a rank and file caring little for party politics.

The odds are that on May 3, British voters will decide that the Conservatives, with their promise of firmness, can best deal with the situation. On the other hand, it would be no great surprise should voters ignore the polls and again buy Labor's argument that it speaks the working man's language and is best positioned to achieve an accommodation.

The surprise will be if the winners of either party should find a solution to the government-labor confrontation. That would really make history.

Treasure hunt slated to begin

Pampa merchants and the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association are sponsoring a "Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt" in conjunction with the Top O' Texas Rodeo, scheduled for July 12-14.

A golden horseshoe has been hidden somewhere in the area and clues will be given through the local media each day to help locate the lucky shoe.

The shoe's finder will receive a $100 savings bond and a box seat to all three rodeo performances. The box seat is a $96 value.

Clues will also be placed in selected stores around Pampa. People who want to get their clues a day early will know the type of store in which it is located. If they find the store, they can pick up the clue.

But in order to get the clue a day early, a participant may need to go to several stores before finding it. The clue, of course, will be given the following day through the media.

Clue number one, for example, can be found in a general merchandise store in Pampa all day Monday.

Good luck, mystery buffs and hunters! Find the golden horseshoe and win yourself a pair of fine prizes.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE members Bob Chambers (left) and Archie Mannes display the golden horseshoe now hidden somewhere around the Pampa area. The finder of the horseshoe will win a $100 savings bond and a box seat to all three performances of the Top O' Texas Rodeo, scheduled for July 12-14.

police report

The theft of an electrical air compressor valued at $400 from a construction warehouse at Brown and Somerville streets was reported by Vaughn Oil Company.

Eleven rolls of insulation valued at $147 were reported stolen from construction site at 225 E. Brown St. by Plains Building Co. of Amarillo.

Elma McCray, 1711 Evergreen St., reported that an unknown person had broken a window at her residence with shots from a BB gun.

Police answered 48 calls in the 24 hour period ending at seven Saturday morning.

minor accidents

A car driven by Deborah Miller, 213 N. Nelson St., struck a properly parked vehicle in the 100 block of N. Cuyler street. Miller was cited for improper backing.

A car driven by Foy Barrett, 516 Hazel St., was in collision with an auto driven by Thad Carrol of White Deer. The accident occurred in the 1400 block of Alcock Street when Barrett reportedly failed to yield the right of way.

Girls from homes profess love for "Brother Roloff"

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — One by one, the girls who the state says Lester Roloff can't house without a license walked to the pulpit to profess their love for Brother Roloff.

Moments before, the girls had heard that the fundamentalist preacher reached an agreement with the state that will close the embattled Rebekah Home for Girls but allow Roloff to place its residents in non-state facilities.

"These homes really aren't shut," one teary-eyed girl testified at the Friday night prayer session. "We just need time to pray and get stronger."

"The Rebekah home will always be opened. I don't care what nobody says," another girl said.

The emotional prayer session — Roloff's prayer sessions are always emotional — climaxed a three-day cat-and-mouse game. A troika of state agencies was prepared to march on Roloff's homes to carry out a judge's order to close them. The fiery preacher has long battled efforts to force him to get licenses for his homes. Roloff says it's a matter of separation of church and state.

"We're closing up tonight," Roloff told the 2,000-member congregation. "But none of our girls are in the Texas Youth Council. At least the war is over."

The battle line in the skirmish was a 300-member human wall of preachers and parents. When state officials sent a reconnaissance party to scout ahead Wednesday, they found an impressive show of solidarity by the Bible-clutching Roloff supporters. The Rebekah girls — about 100 were still here — were locked inside the People's Church.

Farmers want end to strike

The president of Texas' largest general farm organization recently urged striking independent truckers not to ignore the Texas fruit and vegetable harvest, now in progress in South Texas.

Carrol Chaloupka, Texas Farm Bureau President from Dalhart, said, "We recognize that the trucking industry is suffering from the price of fuel and the shortage of fuel, just the same as agriculture, but this is the only income that many of these farmers will receive this year."

The harvest in the Winter Garden area and the Rio Grande Valley is reportedly suffering from a shortage of trucks, compounded by the Independent Truckers Association strike.

"We need the full cooperation of the truckers to move these perishables immediately because very soon they will be in no condition to be moved at all," added Chaloupka.

Severe thunderstorms pound Panhandle

Severe thunderstorms rolled over the Texas Panhandle Saturday evening causing heavy rains and damaging hail in the southern portions of the Panhandle.

The Amarillo Weather Service issued severe thunderstorm warnings for Carson, Potter, Randall, Armstrong and Briscoe counties, however, no warnings had been issued for Gray County at press time.

At 5:25 p.m. the Amarillo Weather Service reported a severe storm system running 5 miles north of Plainview to just south of Silverton moving to the southeast at about 15 miles per hour.

At approximately 6:00 p.m., a tornado was spotted south of Silverton near Quitaque, while large hail and damaging winds were reported in parts of Armstrong and Briscoe Counties.

Swisher and Randall Counties of the Texas Panhandle were put under a flash flood warning until 8:00 p.m. last night as heavy rains flooded some areas causing extremely hazardous driving conditions.

Pair to die in 'chair'

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A few weeks ago, Robert Sullivan scoffed at suggestions that John Spenklink's execution would trigger a rash of executions in the United States.

Now, his state court appeals exhausted, only three days separate Sullivan and another convicted murderer from Florida's electric chair.

Sullivan, 31, and Charles William Proffitt, 33, are scheduled to die at the Florida State Prison near Starke on Wednesday. Unless they can find a federal court to halt the executions, Sullivan will be executed at 7 a.m. and Proffitt will follow a few minutes later.

"There are no prospects of any more executions in Florida this year," Sullivan told a reporter shortly after Spenklink was executed at Florida State Prison on May 25. "The next execution will be held in Texas in 1980."

Both men already have lost direct appeals of their convictions and sentences — appeals that deal primarily with issues of guilt and innocence. The second round of appeals raise more complex issues that revolve around whether the trials met constitutional standards.

Both men have asked the federal courts to stay their executions until their petitions can be given a full hearing. Sullivan has a petition for a stay pending before U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzales in Fort Lauderdale. Proffitt before U.S. District Judge William Terrell Hodges in Jacksonville.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Patchy clouds interrupted mostly fair skies across Texas Saturday as forecasters predicted some liquid relief from hot summer days.

Temperatures were warm to hot again, ranging from 70 at Guadalupe Pass to 86 at several reporting stations.

Forecasters called for showers across West Texas Sunday, with partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures the rule in the rest of the state.

National weather

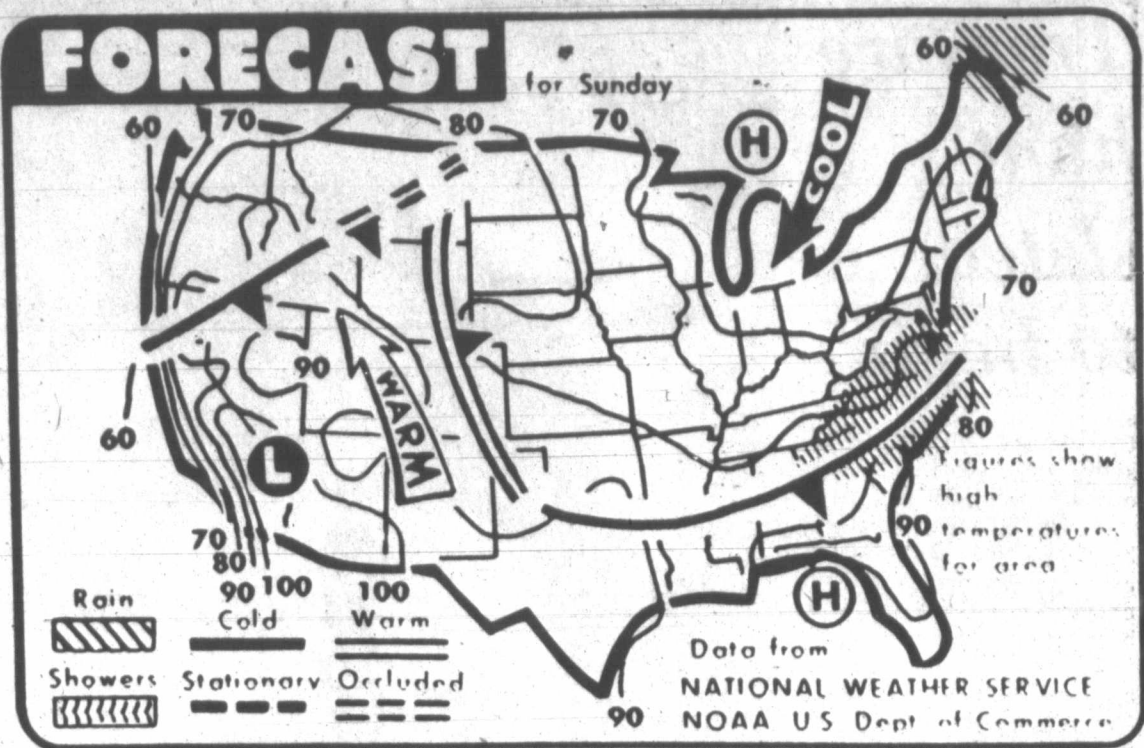

Showers and thunderstorms dampened areas from the lower Great Lakes to New England and through Florida early today, as well as from South Dakota to Oklahoma and across the Texas Panhandle into New Mexico.

Thunderstorms produced damaging winds, large hail and spawned half a dozen tornadoes Thursday.

Three tornadoes were reported in Oklahoma and one each in Nebraska, Ohio and Florida. Large hail hit Missouri, Oklahoma, Indiana and Nebraska and Kansas. Winds in parts of Kansas reached 70 mph.

Early today, winds reached 60 mph in southeastern Nebraska, and 75 mph with large hail in northeastern Kansas and northwestern Missouri.

Skies were generally clear from the Pacific Coast to the Rockies and in the Northeast.

RAIN IS predicted for Sunday in portions of Georgia, the Carolinas, Virginia, Maryland and Maine, according to the National Weather Service.

As we write this news article, Gray County range operators are attempting to sign-up considerable acreage for a cost-share grasshopper spray program.

It looks like that three different areas are getting blocked up to spray in the cost-share program. These areas are: along the Gray-Wheeler County line north of the river; around Bowers City and southeast towards Lefors; and then an area southeast of McLean over into northwest Collingsworth County.

Gray County also has a lot of areas with grasshoppers that will not be in any spray program. Producers and homeowners with grasshoppers will need to take care of your own grasshopper problem areas now. The sooner you spray heavily infested areas, the better control will be.

Look for signs of infestations along roadsides and weed patches and fence rows bordering cultivated fields. Many of the grasshoppers that damage new crops and gardens hatch in these idle areas. Early treatment of these areas before the young hoppers move from their hatching will greatly reduce the amount of acreage that might otherwise require treatment later.

In some situations, crops and gardens will need to be treated to prevent extensive damage. Baits applied to field margins have long been a means of grasshopper control. The following insecticides are approved for most crops, gardens and rangeland: Sevin, Diazinon and Malathion. In addition, Toxaphene is approved for most crops and Pennac and Dibrom are approved for grasshopper control in rangeland. Be sure and check label directions. If you have questions about grasshopper control, contact the Gray County Extension Office - 669-7429.

A clinic to diagnose sick plants, soil or insect problems will be held Tuesday, June 26th in the Courthouse Annex Meeting Room, Pampa, Texas. The hours for the free clinic are from 10:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

This is a come and go affair for anyone with problems or questions about sick plants or insects. Farmers, homeowners or anyone with problems relating to diseases, insects, soil fertility, gardening and general landscape plants are invited to bring sick or troublesome specimens to the informal clinic.

There will be five Texas Agricultural Extension Service Specialists on hand to assist and counsel with you. These specialists include: Dr. Bob Berry, Plant Pathologist; Dr. Carl Patrick, Entomologist; Dr. Dale Pennington, Soil Chemist; Everett Janne, Landscape Horticulturist; and Dr. Roland Roberts, Vegetable specialist.

This informative clinic is sponsored by the Gray County Horticultural and Crops Extension Committees in cooperation with the Gray County Extension Office.

Tell your friends and neighbors about the clinic as this will be the best opportunity to get some answers on sick plants during the entire summer growing season.

Bring your sick plant specimens or insects to this clinic and one or more of the specialists will assist in advising you on your plant problems.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Recent rains have brought a mosquito problem to many Texas communities. Standing water from these showers make an excellent breeding place for mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes can lay eggs wherever standing water is available for a week or longer. Old tires, tin cans, birdbaths, roadside ditches, rain gutters, temporary water containers, and swampy places all can hold enough water to provide breeding sites for mosquitoes.

If mosquitoes are a problem, the first thing to do is eliminate their breeding sites.

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA throws her racket down in disgust as she competes in the final of the Colgate International Grass Court Title at Eastbourne England Saturday. Chris Evert Lloyd won the three-hour game. (AP Laserphoto)

Women's, men's tennis

(AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd prepared for today's final of the $100,000 Eastbourne International grass courts tennis tournament in England knowing that the final that really matters is still two weeks away.

The two women are seeded to meet in the Wimbledon women's singles final, and both have been treating the Eastbourne event as a warmup.

Last year they met in the final at Eastbourne and Navratilova won. She went on to beat Evert Lloyd at Wimbledon two weeks later.

But Chris, who crushed Virginia Wade of Britain 6-3, 6-2 Friday, does not see Eastbourne as any guide to Wimbledon prospects.

"Sure, it would help if I won," she said. "It would give me a lot of confidence going to Wimbledon. But I don't think it would have any real bearing."

Evert Lloyd has a 24-8 head-to-head record against Navratilova, but the Czechoslovakian native has had the better of their recent meetings.

Navratilova reached the final by default because Tracy Austin withdrew from the semifinals with a groin injury.

Evert Lloyd was happy for the first time during her defeat of Wade.

"I felt like I was really getting somewhere on grass," she said. "I felt really comfortable."

Evert Lloyd's serve, which has been a source of concern to her all week, also improved.

"I was very happy with it, and that made a big difference, said the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., star. "I am now curious to play Martina. I haven't played her for three months, and I am interested to see how she is playing."

In Surbiton, England, Brian Gottfried, the United States' third-ranked tennis star, wants to abolish tiebreakers.

He lost one 7-0 Friday against big-serving Vic Amaya and bowed out of the Debenhams international tournament, the last big warmup event before Wimbledon. But he expressed his dislike of tiebreakers long before the match started.

"I would rather see the big tennis events as they used to be, with all five sets played out," Gottfried said. "Tennis should be a test of stamina as well as skill."

At next week's Wimbledon, where Gottfried is the ninth seed, tiebreakers come into operation at 8-8, not 6-6 as in most tournaments. And there is no tiebreaker in the final set, which is played out until one player wins six games and is at least two games ahead.

The whitewashing of Gottfried in the tiebreaker Friday was scarcely the only reason for his defeat. He was within a point of a 4-2 lead in the first set when Amaya trailed 0-40 on his service, and later had a set point. But Amaya's big service saved him both times and he went on to win 7-6, 6-3.

Mark Edmondson defeated Colin Dibley 7-6, 6-4 in the other semifinal, an all-Australian affair. Amaya and Edmondson faced off in the final today.

Gottfried said, "No excuses. I lost the match. But I still want the tiebreaker abolished."

Alcott, Britz share lead in LPGA

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Amy Alcott was happy with a tough golf course, and Jerilyn Britz was floating in the sky. Together they share the first-round lead of the Ladies Professional Golf Association $100,000 Lady Keystone Open at Hershey Country Club's West Course.

Alcott, who says she plays poorly on boring golf courses, and Britz, who relaxes by flying an airplane, both shot 4-under-par 68s Friday to take a 1-shot lead over Shelley Hamlin and Kathy Whitworth. Another shot back at 70 were Betsy King, Vicki Ferguson, Beth Daniel and Dot Germain.

"The course is fine because it is a challenge," Alcott said. "It puts a premium on driving the ball straight and on thinking."

Alcott turned in four birdies and no bogeys over the par-72, 6,398 yard layout.

Britz scored an eagle 3 on the par-5 16th hole. She hit her tee shot into the left rough, but she clubbed a 5-wood three feet from the pin to earn the eagle. Otherwise, she recorded five birdies, a bogey and a double bogey in her round.

"This was going to be my week off mentally, because I've been tired," Britz said.

National League
Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark received a vote of confidence Friday night, but the Montreal Expos continued to make the rest of the Phillies feel rather insecure.

After winning the National League East three times in a row, the Phillies have dropped 22 of their last 33 games to languish in fourth place, 5½ games off the pace. The Expos have beaten the Phils 7-for-7 this season, including Friday night's 6-5 squeaker.

"I've heard the rumors before about my firing but I'm not worried about my job," said Ozark, who was given a vote of confidence by Paul Owens, the Phillies' player personnel director.

In other National League action, Pittsburgh beat Chicago for the seventh time in as many meetings 7-2; St. Louis downed the Mets 4-2; San Francisco edged San Diego 2-1; San Francisco nipped Cincinnati 3-2 and Atlanta shaded Los Angeles 3-2.

Andre Dawson drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly and Warren Cromartie knocked in two runs with a single to pace the Expos' attack. Montreal, behind 2-0 in the first inning, scored three times in the fourth to take a 4-2 lead. Cromartie delivered the tying and lead runs with a single. Tony Perez added an RBI single and Dawson drove in the winning run in the fifth.

Ozark was ejected for protesting a stolen base by Montreal's Rodney Scott in the eighth inning.

Pirates 7, Cubs 2
 Phil Garner and Bill Robinson drove in two runs apiece as the Pirates won their sixth in a row behind the eight-hitter of Bert Blyleven. Grant Jackson and Kent Tekulve. Garner's two-run double off Ken Holtzman helped Pittsburgh to a 3-0 first-inning lead and Robinson had RBI singles in the third and eighth.

Cardinals 4, Mets 2
 Ted Simmons belted his second home run of the game to start the seventh inning, snapping a 2-2 tie and enabling Silvio Martinez to beat the Mets for the fifth time in five career decisions. Simmons also hit a solo homer in the Cardinals' two-run first. Keith Hernandez and Martinez scored on sacrifice flies for St. Louis.

Astros 2, Padres 1
 The Astros were held to one hit until Jeff Leonard doubled home the tying run in the seventh and scored on a pinch single by Denny Walling. That made Joe Niekro the majors' first 11-game winner with help from Joe Sambito, who pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the eighth. Sambito has not yielded an earned run in 29 innings.

The Astros are now 4½ games ahead of Cincinnati in the NL West.

Giants 3, Reds 2
 Rookie Phil Nastu scattered seven hits in 82.3 innings, Bill Madlock singled home two first-inning runs and Terry Whitfield doubled home the winning run in the ninth. Reds George Foster and Dan Driessen homered.

The Giants have beaten the Reds six times in eight meetings.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2
 The Dodgers' loss to Atlanta was their sixth of nine to the Braves. Rookie Tony Brizzolara allowed seven hits in eight innings and drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the fourth as the Braves edged Los Angeles Friday night. Atlanta erased a 2-0 deficit by scoring all three runs off Bob Welch in the fourth.

American League

Catfish Hunter waited a long time for his first victory this season and the last three innings against the Cleveland Indians Friday night must have made it seem even longer.

Hunter saw six innings with a 3-0 lead but when he walked the leadoff batter in the seventh and issued two straight balls to the next, Manager Billy Martin took him out. Five relievers followed before the Yankees nailed down a 3-2 decision over the Indians.

"Rich Gossage's absence made me do a lot of thinking before we got that final out," said Martin. Gossage is out with an injured thumb.
 Ken Clay finally quelled the Indian uprising after they scored two runs, throwing a double-play ball with the bases loaded.

In other American League games, Kansas City outscored California 9-5; Milwaukee routed Seattle 15-8; Boston stopped Toronto 12-1; Baltimore trimmed Detroit 6-5; Minnesota beat Chicago 5-3 and Oakland took a 6-5 decision from Texas.

Royals 9, Angels 5
 Frank White drove in four runs with a home run, double and single and Rich Gale won his first game since May 30, leading Kansas City over California. Gale was chased in the eighth by Brian Downing's three-run homer and needed late relief help from Marty Pattin.

Brewers 15, Mariners 8
 Gorman Thomas, Charlie Moore and Robin Yount smashed home runs to lead Milwaukee over Seattle. Jim Slaton, 7-3, gave up five of Seattle's runs but managed his fourth consecutive victory with relief help from Bob McClure. Glenn Abbott, 3-8, took the loss for Seattle.

Red Sox 12, Blue Jays 1
 Jim Rice hit two homers and Bob Watson and Fred Lynn one each to power Boston over Toronto. Rice, the American League's home run champion and Most Valuable Player last year, belted his 16th homer off reliever Dyer Miller in the third and lined one off Mark Lemongello in the sixth. Watson lined a homer in the second, triggering the Red Sox 3-0 lead against Toronto. Jefferson and Lynn unloaded his 18th homer against starter Jesse Jefferson.

Orioles 6, Tigers 5
 Baltimore scored three runs in the ninth on a solo homer by Ken Singleton and a two-run blast by Doug DeCinces to beat Detroit. Singleton's 15th homer came off Dave Tobik, who relieved Kip Young after he threw two balls to leadoff hitter Kiki Garcia. Eddie Murray singled and after Gary Roenicke was retired for the second out, DeCinces lined his sixth homer over the left-field fence.

Twins 5, White Sox 3
 Ron Jackson slammed a three-run homer and singled in another run as Minnesota cut a five-game losing streak by beating Chicago.

Jackson singled and scored in the second inning off loser Ken Kravec, 8-5, and hit his 11th homer in the third after Bobby Randall and Roy Smalley walked. Winner Geoff Zahn, 6-1, was lifted in the ninth in favor of Mike Marshall, who gained his 16th Twins' save.

A's 6, Rangers 5

Light-hitting Larry Murray drove in three runs with an inside-the-park home run and a double and reliever Dave Heaverlo shut the door in the eighth and ninth innings as Oakland beat Texas.

Foyt will race in Music 500

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — "Somebody said I was sandbagging," grumbled A.J. Foyt after winning the pole position for today's Music 500. "How do you sandbag 1-100th of a second?"
 Foyt admits to being talented, but not talented enough to shave his qualifying run to within that minuscule fraction of a second of Danny Ongais' speed, posted earlier, in Thursday's opening round of time trials for the $375,000 event.
 The 44-year-old Foyt averaged 182.334 miles an hour in his five-mile qualification effort while Ongais averaged 182.315 mph. Ongais had the fastest lap of the trials, 182.852 mph, but his first lap was considerably slower and pulled his average down.
 "Sometimes it takes a lap to really get into it," Ongais offered. "As to the faster lap, we achieved a speed close to that only once before (in practice)."
 The speeds were well off the 1973 track record of 191.367 mph.
 "My fastest laps in practice were about 179 and I was trying awful hard then," Foyt insisted. "We lowered the gear (ratio) before qualifying. I figured I'd have to really pick it up in (turns) one and two. I just gritted my teeth and hoped. I was just surprised as the crew at how fast I went."

 Despite driving on the edge of control for both laps, they were remarkably identical. Both laps times were 49.36 seconds, uncommonly consistent for such a flat-out run.
 Billy Vukovich is second to Foyt in the U.S. Auto Club championship division's season point standings.
 Foyt's run did not visibly distress the stony Ongais, or apparently surprise him.
 Johnny Parsons made it a front row of all former pole-position starters here. However, it was several decisive miles an hour down to Parsons' 179.104 mph run.
 Parsons drew his position in 1976 after time trials were washed out. Ongais had the pole here a year ago in his rookie appearance at the 2.5-mile triangular Pocono International Raceway.
 Behind Foyt and Ongais, the speeds for the rest of Thursday's 22 qualifiers dropped off rapidly. An exception was Janet Guthrie, who qualified fourth, the best of her career, and only missed the front row by three-hundredths of a second.

There might be a Rocky Balboa

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Mike "Hercules" Weaver probably is not a name that will be remembered for long. Except, perhaps, by Larry Holmes. They called Hercules a tuneup. They called him a bum. They said he wasn't worthy to fight for the world heavyweight championship. Network television shunned the fight because it wouldn't sell.

But Friday night in Madison Square Garden, 26-year-old Mike Weaver, who fought his first professional fight in 1972 for $85, proved there might really be a "Rocky Balboa."

Holmes still has his World Boxing Council championship belt, but only by the grace of a tremendous right uppercut that seemed to come from nowhere. Some of the ringsiders didn't even see it.

"Yeah, it hurt, but I wasn't finished," Weaver said of Holmes' punch in the 11th round that laid him out flat.

Both men were dog tired. They had absorbed a giant's share of punishment. With time running out in the 11th round and Weaver knowing he was behind, the challenger backed Holmes into his own corner with a hook and two right hands.

Suddenly, Holmes turned loose a right uppercut that took the legs out from under Weaver. The challenger took the eight count and two seconds later, the bell saved him.

In the 12th, Holmes went immediately to the attack, backing Weaver to the ropes with vicious combinations to the head, and the challenger was defenseless. Referee Harold Valan stepped in and stopped the fight with 44 seconds gone in the round. Weaver's corner protested vigorously.

"I just got killed at the end by that right hand," said Weaver, who had many of the 14,136 fans at the Garden conjuring up visions of Rocky in his rags-to-riches movie fight against world champion Apollo Creed.

Did the referee say anything to Weaver when he stopped the fight? "He didn't say nothing," Weaver said. "He just stopped it. I said I was all right. He said, 'No, you're not.' They just didn't want me to win the fight. Everybody was against me."

Well, not everybody. In the fourth and fifth rounds, the crowd began to chant "Weaver, Weaver," as the challenger being to attack. Holmes went down midway through the fourth round from what Weaver said was a right hand, but the ref called it a slip. In the sixth round, one of Holmes' worst, the champion looked tired. Again it was Weaver on the attack. However, in the seventh, eighth and ninth rounds, Holmes regained the initiative, throwing a heavy jab and combinations to the head. Weaver got in an occasional body punch, but when Holmes was dancing and jabbing, Weaver was helpless.

Then, in the 10th, Weaver's left jab found its mark. He hit Holmes with a walloping right hand that hurt the champ with less than 10 seconds left, and the crowd resumed its chant: "Weaver, Weaver."

The 11th round was furious, and Weaver perhaps had the best of it until that right uppercut ended his made-for-Hollywood fight script.

"This man might not have much credit or recognition," Holmes said, "but you'll have to give it to him now. Mr. Weaver surprised you like I did two years ago."

Holmes said Weaver hit him in the ear in the first round, and his ear was still ringing after the fight. He also accused Weaver of twice poking him in the eye with his thumb.

"I couldn't see for two rounds," Holmes said. "I swear I couldn't see the man, but I kept on fighting. Any man who believes I should have quit should die and go to hell."

Holmes, 29, of Easton, Pa., kept his flawless record intact with the victory, going 31-0 with 22 knockouts. He weighed 215. Holmes' next fight is planned for September against Earnie Shavers.

preliminary, which many thought would be the best fight of the night, former lightweight champion Roberto Duran, 145½, of Panama, scored a unanimous and rather lopsided decision over Carlos Palomino, 145½, of Huntington Beach, Calif.

In a 10-round heavyweight prelim, a rotund Jimmy Young of Philadelphia, at 235 pounds at least 20 pounds overweight, stopped Wendell Bailey of Baltimore at 2:37 of the third round, when the referee stopped the fight.

Bailey, 20½, won the first round and many ringsiders thought Young was headed for a quick shower. But the wily 30-year-old ring veteran held on to finish the round and came back strong in the second and third. Young now has a record of 23-8-2 with eight knockouts, and Bailey dropped to 13-2 with three KOs.

George Foster, real rich slugger

SAN FRANCISCO—He sits in one of those bare cubicles, without privacy, that are the norm for baseball dressing room architecture. He's on a short stool without back or arms. And his face is sunk into his cupped hands, only the steel wool of his black hair showing.

George Foster, who banks more than $4,500 every time the Cincinnati Reds take the field for a National League baseball game, is not a cameo of jubilation.

His right leg is bare to the knee and heavily swollen around the ankle.

"My God," he's thinking to himself, "imagine what it was like for Dave Parker (the Pittsburgh Pirates star) when he got his cheekbone crushed. Not knowing whether his career is over or not. That's the way it can be for me."

This day, George is out of the lineup, temporarily, with that damaged ankle and not sure how it's going to affect him, present or future. It's making him moody.

Injuries are an occupational hazard that professional athletes live with, and the good ones, like Foster, recognize them as a temporary deterrent. But there's always that nagging worry that it's not going to get better or that it's going to have a tangential effect, the way Dizzy Dean's broken toe changed his pitching delivery and ultimately ruined his career.

So George is withdrawn, actually sullen, when a guy who's a virtual stranger intrudes on his reverie and asks how Foster's life has been affected by the affluence that has come to him in 1979.

You see, after threatening to play out his option to become a free agent, Foster was signed to a whopping three-year Reds contract that calls for more than $700,000 per annum, which was more than the club was willing to pay his ebullient ex-teammate Pete Rose. Rose and Parker are the only two men in baseball earning more than George.

"Why do you ask me that question?" he reacts testily to the to the query about affluence. "You ask Pete Rose about that?"

No. But Rose is not in town. George Foster is. Slowly, because somewhere George was apparently taught good manners, he comes out of his shell and swings around on his stool, bracing his back against one wall of the stall, his feet propped against the other side. And he is ready to talk.

"I live the same I always have," he says carefully. "I just have more security now. I go out every day and do the best I can like I always have, living by the principles of Jesus Christ. I don't see any change."

The difference, of course, is that George Foster has become a celebrity baseball player. He is someone to listen to, or we are geared to believe that.

"Back when no one was aware of me," muses Foster, "I said the same things that I do now. And no one paid any attention. But now people listen to me because I have the stats."

Well, the statistics show that George Foster, age 30, is the premier power hitter in baseball today and has been for the last three years. He has led the National League in the important category of "runs batted in," for three straight seasons. He could become the first man in major league history to win four straight RBI titles.

He has topped the league in homers the last two years, and the total of 52 he hit in 1977 has been exceeded by only two players (Hall of Famers Hack Wilson and Ralph Kiner) in National League history.

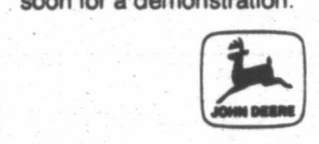

John McNamara, who now manages the Reds, was a coach with the Giants then. "George couldn't hit the breaking pitch at the time," recalls McNamara. "Even after he got to the Reds, they had to send him down to the minors."

Foster recalls: "I always had the confidence that I could play. All I needed was the chance, which eventually I got here."

Watson's "fear of flying"

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — It isn't unusual to hear one of golf's touring pros say he'd rather come from behind after trailing a little going into the last round of a tournament.

"It's fear," said Tom Watson. "The fear of leading."

"I've won with big leads, and I've lost with big leads. I've won coming from behind and I've not won from behind. I'd always rather be leading."

That's his position, one that's becoming something of a habit for the man who has dominated the game for the past 2½ seasons.

He scrambled to a hard-won 69 that gave him a 36-hole total of 135, seven under par and 3 strokes in front of the field after Friday's second round of the $350,000 Canadian Open golf tournament.

"I'd just like to be leading by a lot more than that going into the last round," Watson said. "But, of course, there's a lot of other guys who'll have something to say about that."

But Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller isn't among them. Zoeller, who had composed a solid 67 in Thursday's first round, slashed his way to a horrendous 83 in the gusty winds at the Glen Abbey Golf Club course Friday. Somehow, he signed for a score of 81 and was disqualified.

He wasn't alone in his difficulties. There was Australian Jack Newton, who shot a course record 64 to open the tournament. He went 10 shots higher over the second 18 holes and drifted back into a tie for second with Lee Trevino and D.A. Weibring at 138.

"Obviously, I didn't play quite as well," said Newton, who lost a playoff to Watson for the 1975 British Open. "I hit the ball close to the hole four or five times and missed all the putts. That was the turning point," he said.

Trevino, a two-time Canadian Open winner, had to rally from a pair of double bogeys for his round of par 71. Weibring, a tour sophomore, chipped in twice on the way to a 70.

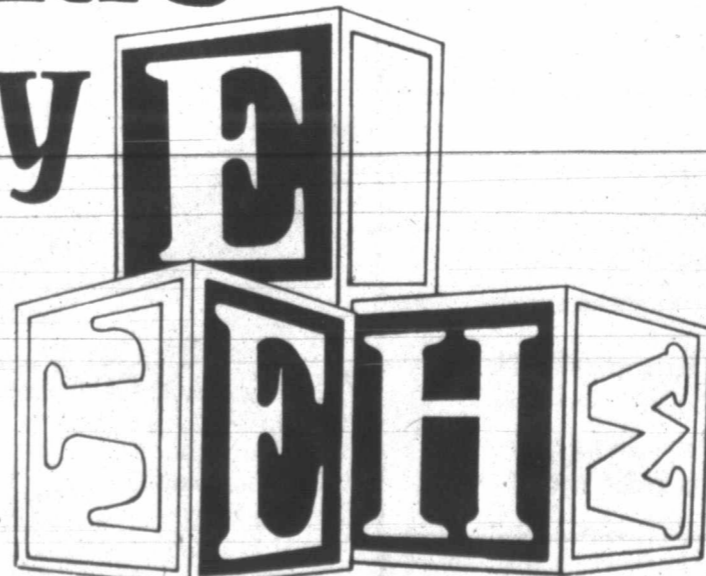

Of the leaders, all but Watson and Newton played in the relative calm of the morning. Watson and Newton, in the afternoon, had to fight chilly winds that gusted to 30 mph. Watson's 69 was the only subpar round of the afternoon.

South African Gary Player also shot 73. But with a 153 total, he missed the cut for the final two rounds. So did Arnold Palmer, who scored his first career victory in this event in 1955. He shot 80-153.

Andy Bean, recent winner of the Atlanta Classic, had 73-145 but withdrew with pulled stomach muscles. Jerry Pate also pulled out because of arm troubles. Recently crowned U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin was 73-145 and defending title-holder Bruce Lietzke 74-145. Jack Nicklaus shot 75-145.

Watson, winner of four titles and more than $353,000 already this season, said he hit "quite a few good, key shots" but saved his round with some excellent scrambling down the stretch.

No magic in teaching math

No magic exists for teaching children arithmetic, despite new and innovative methods being used in education. Schools and educators usually have to work together to provide the best education possible in all areas of study.

The Pampa School District took important steps in improving its math program in 1977, when some of its members formulated a competency test for sixth graders.

Although the test provides no magic formula for teaching, it does weigh students' achievements and deficiencies in basic arithmetic, said Marjorie Gaut, the Assistant to the Superintendent in Educational Services.

Betty Graham, a high school math teacher and the coordinator of the competency test, said she had seen improvement in the understanding of fractions and the computation of whose numbers since the first test was given.

In overall grading, a chart for tests taken at the end of school years between 1977 and 1979 shows favorable results.

The same basic test has been given every year, said Graham, although some questions have been reworded for more clarity.

In 1977, 271 students took the test and 16.2 percent of them scored in the 90 percentile. The same category showed a 7.7 percent increase in 1979 when 268 youngsters took it.

However, the percentage in the upper percentile had dropped to 12.9 in 1978.

The 1977 school system had nine students in the 30 and 40 percentiles while no students scored below 50 in 1979 with the exception of one youngster who reportedly did not try.

Four students were included in the two lower scoring ranges in 1978.

The tests were taken from results of a Region XVI Service Center meeting, at which Graham, Kay Hood and Floyd Sackett discussed basic math objectives for elementary students with other area representatives.

Texas education service centers had similar meetings, at which discussion groups were formed to decide on what essentials should be learned.

Each group's choices were presented at its service center for a collective vote.

The results from each center were sent to Austin for a final tabulation and were used to establish the guidelines for the pamphlet, "Essential Mathematics Objectives."

The seven mathematical strands for Pampa's competency test were drawn from this pamphlet. Sixth graders should have a grasp of these strands, according to the standards set by the test.

They are: non-metric geometry, operations and their properties, number and numeration development, mathematical sentences, measurement, charts and graphs, and statistics and probability. "Most of these are pretty basic," said Graham, who explained that the test tried to cover essentials needed to get along in life.

Sixth grade teachers in the system submitted questions in these categories to Graham, who selected those to be used on the test.

The exam measures whether a student understands what he should after his first six years of school, said Gaut, who also explained why it is called a midpoint test.

A student has a minimum of four years in math courses after the sixth grade, said Gaut.

Gaut said problems in math learning can be pinpointed to enable educators to better plan the upcoming curriculum.

Administrators also are better able to evaluate programs on how they related to student learning goals through the tests, she said.

Remedial programs for those who are not meeting the essential goals have been used, she said.

To give the test more reliability, controls have been added to the testing procedure, said Graham.

This year's aides, Gay Kuemel, Dennis Wyatt and Sharon Balcom, were instructed to give directions the same way at every testing, said Graham. These same aides were used at every testing, she added.

Give me that old time religion

'Tears of Joy'

It is been sometime since religious groups met in tent as they spread "the word" for city to city but recently Pampa got a taste of that old time religion.

Members of the Church of God Union Assembly pitched a tent at the corner of Crawford and Barnes for an old time tent revival.

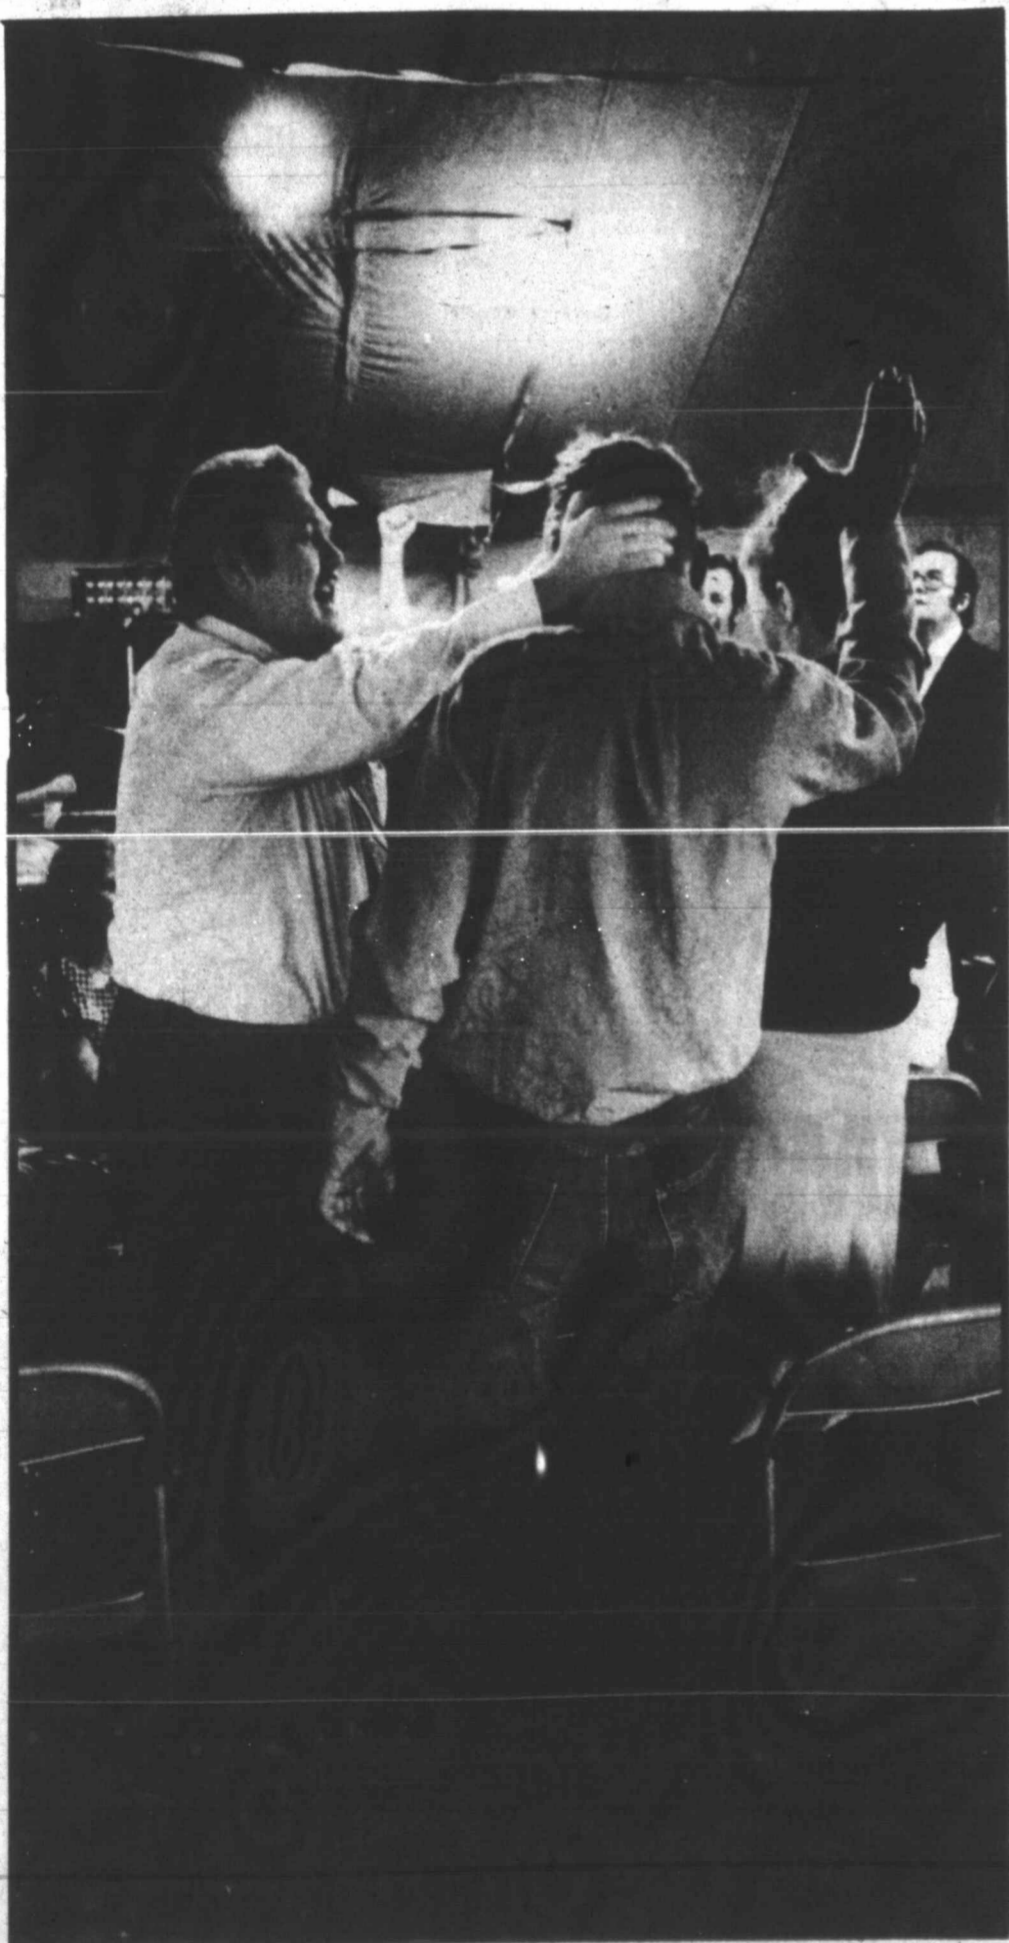

Church elders said the revival was in order to raise funds for a new building for the group that has been in Pampa for the past 36 years.

The group, which is part of the nation-wide church, does not ask for donations during the service but will accept any money offered for the new church building.

Various ministers preached on various subjects from the King James version of the bible, the group believes that it is the only true version of the bible, during the week long revival meeting.

Many of the revival goers burst into tears but members of the group said it was not from fear but were "tears of joy."

The tent revivals were a thing of the past but some people in Pampa have brought back that old time religion.

Miss Lehnick in musical

A quiet-spoken young woman reared in Pampa has found performing on stage to be quite different from sitting in a classroom.

"It's brought out the ham in me," laughs Debbie Lehnick, who has spent the past several summers attending classes, first at Pampa High, then later at West Texas State University.

Miss Lehnick, 21, is in Lubbock appearing in "The Sound of Music", a production of the Country Squire Dinner Theatre. She plays Liesl, the eldest daughter of Capt. Von Trapp.

The theater group presented the same musical for several weeks in Amarillo's Country Squire, then took the show to the South Plains, where it will be held over through mid-July.

Miss Lehnick, a senior student at WTSU, was a 1976 graduate of Pampa High School, where she was active in choir. She performed in "Brigadoon" and sang the lead in "Annie Get Your Gun".

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lehnick, she also was pianist with the First Baptist Church youth for several years.

This summer, the accomplished musician is a member of the Country Rogues, the small portion of the theater cast that provides pre-show entertainment to warm up the audience.

"We just wait tables and every night we do a 20-minute pre-show -- a variety of music -- one country, a slow one, and some upbeat ones to get them ready for the show," says Miss Lehnick, who accompanies the Rogue vocalists on the "string machine", an instrument combining piano, clavichord, string and bass elements.

"It's been good for me that the show's run this long," says the petite performer. "It's gotten kind of tiring. I can tell I wouldn't like to go on the road all year."

She may not be "on the road" yet, but she does have an agent, to represent the easy-listening band she and her fiance, Barry Talley, have put together. They've played several dances in Amarillo, Talley's hometown.

Debbie will graduate from WTSU in December, after she completes her student teaching and a few more hours of classroom instruction for a music education degree. She and Talley plan to marry in June, and after that, she's not sure what they'll do.

"We have several things we could pursue," she explains. Talley, also a music education major, performs with the Country Rogues, and is a member of the orchestra with "The Sound of Music".

"He steals the show every night," she laughs.

In the fall the two again will study for their degrees, and will perform with the Rogues, doing nightly shows at the dinner theater.

Debbie, who sang last summer at the Hilton in Amarillo, will prepare for a voice recital to be presented in December, during which she will perform arias in German, French and English. They will both be busy with other campus activities, which for Debbie include a music sorority and two honor societies.

She's not sure whether she'll pursue a teaching career in music, but knows she and her fiance will stay in that field.

"I enjoy being on the stage and performing so much, I don't think I want to teach," she says.

Days mark 50 years

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight L. Day celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last week. The Days, residents of the Lefors and Pampa areas since 1925, live east of Pampa.

The former Mary W. Hickman and Day were married June 22, 1929, in the basement of the First Baptist Church building in Pampa. The building was located where the Combs-Worley building now stands. District Judge W.D. Ewing performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Day operated one of the first laundries in Lefors. Day participated in brick-laying on Cuyler Street in Pampa, and also helped build the Burlington railroad track into Lefors. The couple lived in Lefors until 1949, when they moved to their present home.

Day also worked for 12 years with the Lefors Independent School District and was with the Pampa Police department for 14 years and the Gray County Sheriff's Department almost 15 years. He retired in 1974.

Day, a veteran of World War II, is a member of Masonic Lodge No. 966, and he and his wife attend Central Baptist Church.

The couple has two daughters, Mrs. Jess Hageman, 121 N. Sumner, and Miss Farrell Day, east of the city.

Allstons to have reception

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Allston, 910 Jordan, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary this afternoon at a reception given by their children.

The activity will be from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in the parlor of the First Christian Church, 18th and N. Nelson.

Children of the couple are Mrs. Angus Owens and Tom Allston, both of Dallas. The couple has two grandchildren, Aaron and Stacy Allston.

The former Ruth Bailey married Allston June 29th, 1929, in Amarillo. The couple has lived in Pampa 39 years, and are members of the First Christian Church.

Allston is employed by Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet.

Vandever reception planned

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Vandever of Mobeetie are hosting a reception this afternoon on the occasion of their parents' 25th wedding anniversary.

The reception will be from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Vandever home. The family invites friends to drop by and visit with the couple.

Hosting the reception are Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Light, Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Shorter, Mr. and Mrs. Rick Hefner, and Ronny Vandever.

The Vandeveres were married June 26, 1954, in Clayton, N.M.

Rock and roller disco

Disco dancing is turning old fashioned roller rinks into light and music palaces. A new sport, disco roller skating, combines the skills of skating with the thumping beat of disco dancing.

With sport comes competition and some of the best disco roller skaters came here last August to compete in the Hawaiian Punch Disco Skating Championships. Johnny M. Pool, 31, of Los Angeles, won the singles competition.

Mending mature marriage

by louise pierce

Secrets can be good or bad for an older marriage. Unrevealed infidelity or dishonesty can be destructive when it comes out -- and it nearly always does. But it's the good secrets that I want to emphasize here. There are countless things that should be held inside us instead of being blasted into the clear air of an enduring union to no purpose. Letters tell me that.

DEAR LOUISE: My husband and I have been married for twenty-five years, though I don't know why. We're both highstrung and tempery, and we disagree so much that we are always threatening to leave each other. If I say I like snow, he says nobody but an idiot would like it. If he says he wants pie for supper, I say he can't have it because I hate baking pies. Our arguments start like that and then go on to real scrapping. We get loud and sometimes I wish I could slap him and almost do. We used to get along fairly well but we sure don't now. Would you get a divorce? M.G. DEAR M.G.: For myself, I would never get a divorce. For you, I wouldn't advise it either. I believe you can learn to control your temper tantrums and try hard not to upset each other. The problem seems to be your quick resort to angry words. You don't need to react that way. You'd be better off to follow the counsel of many leading marriage experts, who say that spoken anger can have dire results -- but that secret anger can avoid a rift. You can take out your rage in secret fantasy, they tell us -- and I believe them. I've followed that advice in my own marriage. Many a time I've told my mind exactly what I'd like to say when my husband comes home, that way I get the angry words out of my heart by thinking them and I don't have to say them. You can spell out your anger to yourself; you can plan what you'd say if you were going to attack him out loud; you might even practice your oration mentally, right while you're standing there together and he's just yelled at you. If you calm down, he's quite likely to follow suit. But be sure you don't forget yourself and scream your planned speech at him.

DEAR LOUISE: What can you substitute for your need to blow up when your husband makes you so mad you can't stand it? J is so aggravating that I often think I'd be happier if we weren't together. I love him, or maybe he's just a habit after all our years together, but anyway he never does anything I ask him to. He says he forgets or he doesn't feel like running errands or he hasn't got time, anything I want him to do. I wish I wouldn't blow up because it always makes things worse. But what else can I do when I get so mad? B.T. DEAR B.T.: You can express your feelings in another way -- by writing them down. You can make two lists, one of your husband's bad qualities, including his failure to grant your requests around the house, plus whatever other faults he flaunts at you. Then make a second list, this time of his good points. (There are nearly always more good points than bad, but be honest about both lists.) Compare the two. If the bad outweighs the good, you may be justified in taking a vacation from home to think things over and decide whether your love for him is real enough to endure his faults. Most wives decide to stay with their husbands in such a case. My guess is that you will too. There's a good in everybody, you know -- and husbands are no exception to this marvelous rule. At any rate, your compared lists will take the place of your heated arguments. Thus, secretly, you will be able to reach the conclusion that seems right for you. If the situation remains unhappy, in spite of your shushing your fury, then ask him to make secret lists about your good and bad qualities without revealing them to you. I've never known this to happen without the couple's reaching a path they can walk together in harmony.

One of the saddest sights I ever saw was a house that was literally cut in two. It sat on a high hill and was split down the middle when the couple got a divorce. Each half was boarded up on the sides nearest each other. The neighbors laughed about it, but it was not funny to me. The memory still haunts me.

There are countless times we can do our quarrelling secretly, never allowing our spouses to know that we gave the sputtering bomb no chance to explode. Such secrets can be well worth trying. What are yours?

We are sorry...
Due to a lack of communication, an error appeared in the Thursday edition of People. The 50th anniversary reception for Mr. and Mrs. Joe Carlton, 426 Crest, will be this afternoon from 2:30 to 4:30 in the Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room, instead of being held Thursday as it appeared in the newspaper.

DECORATING TRENDS...
Charlie's

CARPET TERMS are second nature to us, so it's natural for us to talk about Olefin fibers, about cut pile and backing and broadloom, shags and plushes, without giving a second's thought to the meaning of what we're saying, since these terms are as familiar to us as a carpenter's tools are to him.

But they may be a mystery to many of you, so let's look at a few of them. You've all heard the term broadloom, for instance, but how many know that this doesn't mean a type of yarn or fabric, but any carpet woven or tufted on a broad or wide loom, at least six feet wide, and often twelve or fifteen feet wide?

Fibers are the basic "thread" of the carpet yarn, many fibers being combined to make a single yarn. These fibers may be natural, like wool, or manmade, such as the popular nylons, polyesters and acrylics.

Pile simply refers to the exposed or top surface of the fibers. When these are cut, the result is a cut pile, or plush. When looped, they create a loop pile. These can be combined in sculptured effects. Shags are loosely tufted long pile carpets, the pile being an inch or inch-and-a-half long, or longer.

But words tell only part of the carpet story. Seeing for yourself is convincing when you look over our great collection. If words fail you, the carpets won't. And you can buy on convenient "terms." Come in...to your carpet headquarters!

REV. JOHN GAY of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ accepted a plaque from Ms. Nova Purdy of the Texas Department of Human Resources Thursday for his church's efforts in helping a young mother and her two children. Rev. Gay and the church's members helped her find a place to live, and helped pay off the family's outstanding bills. He reports the mother has developed initiative and responsibility, and it appears she will soon be providing a real home for herself and her children. (Staff photo)

by sally shaffer miller

From the time I was just a little sprout, my personal jolly giant told me not to use ugly four-letter words. Didn't your giant give you the same instructions? And haven't you given them to your young sprouts?

Some four-letter words are really nasty, aren't they? For example, HATE is a nasty word. So is WORK. That's a particularly vile but necessary word for adults, but it goes with another, more enjoyable word with eight letters called PAYCHECK.

As long as we're dealing with words, we might as well talk about the good four-letter words, especially for the children in the house. LOVE is one of those words. So are GOOD and CAKE.

CAKE is the really good word that we need to discuss. There are so many cakes that are good, but this one is special. I call it the PEARICOT-CHERRY CAKE. It's pretty and it's simple. I'm giving you the double recipe, which will make two cakes, because if your family is like mine, one layer won't last long. I know from experience! HAVE ON HAND:

- 1 BOX OF YELLOW CAKE MIX TO MAKE 2 1/2" LAYERS
- 2 CANS (1 LB., 14 OZ. EACH) APRICOT HALVES, WHICH YOU WILL DRAIN BUT SAVE THE JUICE
- 8 LARGE CANNED PEAR HALVES, DRAINED. DRINK THE JUICE, OR GIVE IT TO THE CLOSEST CHILD IN YOUR HOUSE

12-14 MARASCHINO CHERRIES. I USUALLY CUT THEM IN HALF, BUT YOU MAY LIKE THEM WHOLE.

ONE-HALF CUP BUTTER. IN THIS CASE, YOU ARE ALLOWED TO CHEAT AND USE MARGARINE.

ONE-HALF C. REAL SHERRY, NOT THE COOKING KIND. THIS IS OPTIONAL, BUT IT IS REALLY GOOD.

1 C PACKED BROWN SUGAR

ONE-FOURTH TO ONE-HALF C. PECANS, CHOPPED ALMOST INTO OBLIVION

1 CARTON HEAVY WHIPPING CREAM

NOW DO THIS:

FOLLOW THE DIRECTIONS ON THE BOX AND MAKE THE CAKE. WHILE IT IS BAKING AND COOLING, DRAIN THE APRICOTS AND KEEP THE JUICE. DRAIN THE PEARS AND DRINK THE JUICE. IF THERE ISN'T A CHILD HANDY TO DO IT FOR YOU, CHOP THE NUTS.

WHEN THE CAKE LAYERS COOL, PUT THEM ON SEPARATE SERVING PLATES AND PRICK THE SURFACES WITH A FORK. SPOON ONE-FOURTH C. OF THE APRICOT JUICE OVER EACH LAYER.

PUT AN APRICOT HALF, CUT SIDE DOWN, IN THE CENTER OF EACH LAYER. ALTERNATE THE PEAR HALVES AND THE APRICOT HALVES OVER EACH LAYER. DECORATE THEM WITH THE CHERRIES.

MELT THE BUTTER. MIX IN THE BROWN SUGAR, SHERRY, AND NUTS. SPREAD THE SIDES OF THE CAKES WITH THIS. IT TAKES A LITTLE DOING, BUT IT'S PRETTY. FILL IN ANY SPACES ON TOP, BUT SAVE A LITTLE.

MIX AND HEAT THE REST OF THE BUTTER MIXTURE WITH 4 TBSP. OF THE RESERVED APRICOT LIQUID. POUR THAT OVER THE TOPS OF THE CAKES.

WHIP THE CREAM AND SERVE IT ON EACH DELICIOUS SLICE.

Sewing machines have 'brains'

ELECTRONIC SEWING MACHINES -- CHOOSE CAREFULLY:

Electronic sewing machines -- some with a "brain" (computer) and pre-programmed touch buttons -- have advantages and disadvantages, so shop carefully before buying. Not all are fully electronic. Many are a combination of mechanical and electronic parts, but if a machine has just one electronic feature, the company may label it "electronic". Electronic features on these machines range from simple electronic needle power to the complex touch-button pre-programmed stitches.

Advantages of electronic machines start with their having more reliability and cooler-running motors than mechanical machines. Electronic machines have more sensitive foot power. Also, they generally have full needle power at all speeds -- enabling you to sew through several thicknesses of heavy fabric, such as denim, without speeding up the machine. In addition, electronic machines with touch-button stitch control let the homesever change from straight stitching to zig-zag to decorative stitching with the simple touch of a finger. These machines almost "sew for you".

On the other hand, electronic machines have some drawbacks. Most cost more than mechanical machines -- the more electronic features, the greater the cost. In shopping for one, ask to see the inside of the machine head to determine the extent of the electronics. Drawbacks also include the fact that electronic parts are more sensitive, so they can be damaged easily by improper handling. This can make internal cleaning difficult or impossible.

Repairs may be expensive and difficult to obtain. Many machine repairmen don't know how to repair electronic machines, so a machine may require shipping to the company for repair. If the "brain" is damaged in a pre-programmed touch-button machine, the entire part usually must be replaced. This can be costly. Also, if the programming was not done correctly by the manufacturer, adjustments will be needed. Parts may be difficult to obtain, too because a particular model may have been discontinued. Some machine companies change models as often as they perfect the machine.

Pleasure flight ends in tragedy

What started out as a pleasure flight for two Pampa residents ended in tragedy when the small plane they were in crash landed south of town and burst into flames. Rescue workers were forced to standby and watch in terror as firemen tried to battle the intense blaze that covered the plane. Both C. L. "Bob" Roberts and his wife were pronounced dead at the scene of the crash which was reportedly caused when the plane developed engine trouble and Roberts tried to land in an open field. The Roberts plane crashed 30 feet short of the smooth field when the planes landing gear struck the wall of a gully.

Your money's worth

by sylvia porter

Until this year, you and your brothers and sisters always have chipped in equally to help your mother live comfortably. As a group, you contribute most of your mother's support, but none of you individually contributes more than half. Since the basic tax rule is that a taxpayer gets a dependency deduction only if he provides more than half the support of a relative, does that mean that no one in your family can claim a dependency deduction for your mother?

Not at all. The tax law provides a way you get around this half-the-support rule by setting up a "multiple support agreement." This you should discuss and sign NOW! For this agreement lets you and your brothers and sisters decide which of you can take the deduction in 1979 and then you can arrange to trade off the deduction so that every year, another one of you gets a chance to claim it.

Your family can take advantage of the multiple support agreement only if you meet the following requirements:

- (1) Your mother must have received over half her support from you and your brothers and sisters.
- (2) Each of you must be able to claim her as a dependent -- except for the more-than-half support test:

- (3) None of you can contribute singly more than half your mother's support.
- (4) If you are the one selected to take the deduction for '79, you must contribute more than 10 percent of her support.
- (5) Anybody else who gives more than 10 percent of her support must agree not to claim her as a dependent the year you do.

Say you and your three brothers furnish most of your mother's support this year, each giving $2,000. Since each of you provides more than 10 percent but less than half her support, any of you can qualify for a dependency deduction under a multiple support agreement. If you are chosen to get the $1,000 deduction in '79, each of your brothers should fill out Internal Revenue Service Form 2120 stating he won't claim your mother as a dependent this year.

You will attach all the Form 2120s to your return in 1980. If your mother has too much income of her own -- $1,000 or more subject to tax -- to be claimed as a dependent, does that mean you and your brothers and sisters can't get any tax breaks for her?

No. Your family can so arrange the setup that one of you can deduct your mother's medical expenses. In short, she can be the medical dependent of one of the children, even though she gets more than $1,000 in income annually subject to taxes.

Basic requirement: the family member selected must provide more than half of her support for the year.

Once again, your family can take advantage of the multiple support agreement. You and other family members decide which of you will be treated as providing more than half your mother's support. The one selected will thus be able to add your mother's medical expenses to his when figuring out his medical deduction for the year. (Medical expenses are deductible to the extent they exceed three percent of your adjusted gross income.)

Attorneys confident of third trial

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Defense attorneys for Elmer Wayne Henley, already confident of a third murder trial for their client, spent last week hammering home their contention that Henley's rights were abused by investigators.

The retrial stems from a two-year, sex-murder-torture spree in the Houston area that left at least 26 youths dead. Henley, accused in six of the cases, revealed the killings when he phoned police in August 1973 and said he had shot Dean Corli to death at Corli's suburban home.

Henley claimed Corli, 33, masterminded the murders and that he (Henley) was used to procure victims.

Attorney Will Gray of Houston told newsmen Monday that State District Judge Noah Kennedy had committed enough procedural errors during jury selection to warrant yet another trial.

Henley's original conviction in the six murders came at San Antonio. An appeals court ruled that a venue change hearing sought by the defense in that trial should have been granted, opening the doors to proceedings here. Henley was assessed six, 99-year prison sentences at the San Antonio trial.

Gray's defense team fought without success to keep Henley's statement from jurors, but Kennedy ruled it admissible as evidence after several law officers testified that Henley properly was apprised of his rights.

Kennedy's ruling made for grisly reading during the latter part of the week.

Dated Aug. 9, 1973, the statement gives a chilling account and says Corli talked Henley into inducing young boys to visit Corli's home so the older man could sell them to a prostitution ring. Henley aid in the statement he received $200 for the first boy, and later found out the boy had been raped and killed.

Henley, 17 at the time, said he brought another eight to 10 boys to Corli without pay, saying Corli would sodomize them and then kill them.

Texans slowing down in face of gas shortage

DALLAS (AP) — At least some fuel-starved Texans are slowing down and driving less in the face of increasing gasoline shortages, say the people who monitor Texas traffic as a livelihood.

The Department of Public Safety recently polled its troopers at 31 major highway patrol stations to see if the harsh reality of lengthening gas lines had put the brakes on lead-footed Texas motorists.

"We asked the troopers if they had sensed or visually noticed any reduction in speed," Jim Robinson, DPS public information officer, said.

The survey showed troopers at 13 of the 31 stations "seemed to think speed was down," Robinson said.

Areas where patrolmen noted a slower traffic flow included included Dallas, Houston, Sherman, Texarkana, Beaumont, Pierce, Harlingen, Ozona, San Angelo, Lubbock, Wichita Falls, Childress and Kerrville.

"There are two patterns where you see some reduction," Robinson said. "In the wide-open spaces, such as West Texas, people may be afraid they will run out of gas. You also see the reduction in places where the gas lines are the longest."

Col. Wilson E. Speir, DPS director, said last week that many drivers are reducing speed as gasoline becomes a more precious commodity. "The speeds seem to be lower where the gas lines are longest," he said.

Troopers said that drivers in the upper

Panhandle and Central Texas still are driving at pre-shortage speeds, Robinson said.

The state's last highway speed survey in March estimated Texas drivers were rolling along at an average of 59.3 miles per hour. At least 75 percent were believed to be exceeding the 55 mile per hour limit.

DPS officials say the slower traffic flow does not necessarily mean greater compliance with the much-ignored speed limit. "It just means the speed is down," Robinson said. "But we have noticed more people going 55."

In the survey, troopers at 19 of the 31 DPS stations "reported visible traffic reductions," Robinson noted -- especially at night and on the weekends after normal rush-hour flows.

Chief Harold Warren, Dallas Police Department traffic supervisor, said that "traffic is a little bit lighter" in the shortage-plagued Dallas metropolitan area.

"The speed is generally slower," Warren said. "You still have plenty of speeders, but the general flow of traffic is slower."

A similar trend in the Houston area has been reported by Houston traffic officers.

"Traffic's still heavy and fast, but it's slacked off some," said Captain G. E. Rowell. The DPS survey also confirmed a new sign of gasoline shortages that decorates highways in the Dallas and Houston areas.

"Our troopers have seen an increase in the number of stranded automobiles that have run out of gas," Robinson said.

Texans think happiness is tankful of gasoline

Happiness can be many things to different people, but to many Texans happiness is a tankful of gasoline or a short gasoline line.

The current gasoline crunch is making many changes in the Texas way of life. It's even making changes in the way we greet our friends. Friends in Dallas, Fort Worth or Houston are asking "Are you odd or even?" these days just about as much as they once asked "How are you?"

The odd-even gasoline rationing system goes into effect Monday in Dallas, Harris and Tarrant Counties and in some counties surrounding the big cities.

As temperatures climbed near the century mark in Texas during the past week and gasoline lines got longer and longer, tempers got shorter and shorter. Short enough that one Dallas gasoline station attendant started carrying a shotgun for protection.

"I've had people threaten to shoot me, stab me, kill me -- anything you can possibly think of," said Dale Clark, 30. Clark kept watch over his gasoline pumps with the shotgun until police questioned the legality and he agreed to put it away.

The gasoline crunch has also resulted in a sales bonanza for some businesses. Some persons, mainly in the cities, are purchasing magnetic signs for the sides of their vehicles, indicating that it is a commercial vehicle. That allows them to buy gasoline on any day -- providing they can find it -- instead of having to depend on the last digit of their license plate.

One Houston firm started running a sale on the magnetic signs, calling them the "Gas Crunch Special." Business was booming for the signs costing $30 to $60, according to a spokesman at a Houston sign firm.

It's also created a booming business for automobile parts stores selling locking gasoline caps and siphon hoses. The locking gas caps are about as easy to find in the Dallas-Fort Worth area as a service station with only two cars waiting to be filled up.

Many Texans are also installing auxiliary gasoline tanks, mainly on pickup trucks and vans.

Just about anyone can tell a "horror story" about the problem of finding gasoline.

Oscar Howell of Lockhart thought he had plenty of time to drive his wife, Mary, to an Austin hospital before their baby was born. But he had to find gasoline on the way. He pulled off the highway three times for gasoline, but each time found a "pumps closed" sign.

At the fourth station, Howell was becoming desperate. He wheeled to the front of a four-car line.

"It was the perfect excuse. I yelled 'My wife's in labor. Can I cut in front of you?'" Howell said. He got $2 worth of gasoline and raced onward to the hospital.

He almost made it. Oscar Romel Howell was born in the car just outside the hospital emergency room door.

One could go on and on telling about the gasoline crunch, but it's almost time for the service stations to open and time to get in line for a little liquid happiness, Texas style.
