

THIS WAS THE SCENE in the 600 block of East Frederic this morning when a Halliburton Services diesel truck carrying machinery and another diesel truck were involved in a traffic-clogging accident. According to police officers, the driver of the Halliburton truck fell asleep at the wheel at about 10:15 a.m., when the accident occurred. No injuries were reported, but traffic in the area was disrupted for about an hour while firemen washed down diesel fuel that leaked from the trucks.

Cabinet shakeup over Energy issue gets Carter's attention

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, whose reshaping of his White House staff is expected to consume less of his time than his Cabinet shakeup, is likely to return to work this week on energy issues.

"Now that the Cabinet-level changes have been made, there will be additional focusing of the president's attention on the Energy Mobilization Board and the Energy Security Corp.," White House press secretary Jody Powell said Sunday.

Proposals to establish the board, intended to cut through red tape to speed up development of energy projects, and to create the energy corporation, to finance energy development, were sent to Congress last week. The Senate Energy Committee tentatively agreed Saturday to support the mobilization board.

While he has completed the firings that shook his Cabinet last week, the president is still looking for a new secretary of housing and urban development, a new Federal Reserve Board chairman and a new transportation secretary.

Some of the changes he is contemplating in his White House staff, although unlikely to add any new faces to the inner circle of advisers, may be revealed this week, Powell said.

And Hamilton Jordan, Carter's newly named chief of staff, said today that the president intends to widen "the circle of persons inside and outside government that will give him advice."

In an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" program, Jordan was questioned about the number of Georgians advising Carter.

"The shakeup is not over," Jordan replied. "It is not an unusual thing for a president to have people in the White House around him from their home state."

He added that the "influence of the Georgians on the staff—myself included—has been greatly exaggerated. My new responsibilities as chief of staff have been greatly exaggerated. I will not stand between the president and his Cabinet. I will not be the boss of the Cabinet. I will try to work to manage in a better way the affairs of the White House."

In another interview today, presidential troubleshooter Robert Strauss said Washingtonians have overreacted to the Cabinet changes because the capital is "a company town."

"We haven't kept it in perspective as well as the people across America have," Strauss said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show. "The president said all along that he was going to restructure his government."

Carter, in a meeting with several reporters Saturday, made clear that he wants to see some stability returned to White House operations, after nearly three weeks of uncertainty. It was also made clear that Carter knows what changes he thinks should be made to strengthen the staff.

Reporters also learned that the overriding theme in the Cabinet shakeup was loyalty, a point stressed Sunday by Jordan, who said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"Once the president makes a decision on policy or a piece of legislation, it is the responsibility of people in government to support that action or leave the government."

Carter clearly felt that Joseph A. Califano Jr., whom he fired as secretary of health, education and welfare, had been working at cross-purposes to presidential goals.

It was understood that the president expects his Cabinet members to be team players and that if he had made an error in the past, he felt it was in waiting as long as he did to use dismissals to make this clear.

It was also understood that Carter was dissatisfied with Califano's record on Capitol Hill, where the president feels the HEW secretary was unable to achieve legislative success for programs in his area.

But a member of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's staff said that "with (House) members, Joe Califano got along fine."

Accident victim's body discovered

A Pampa man who may have fallen asleep at the wheel of his jeep was found dead in a patch of tall weeds off Texas 152 Sunday morning more than 24 hours after state troopers estimate the mishap occurred.

The man was identified as John Preston Mack, 35, of 1117 Charles St.

The accident occurred about 17 miles east of Pampa. Mack was reportedly returning to his home in Pampa from Altus, Okla., where he was manager of a Coca-Cola bottling distributorship.

The body was discovered at 8:13 a.m. Sunday in tall weeds 200 feet from where Mack's jeep came to a stop. State troopers said the accident occurred between 1:30 and 2 a.m. Saturday.

Troopers said Mack "apparently fell asleep at the wheel," before losing control of the vehicle. The jeep struck a culvert and two reflector posts, throwing Mack from the driver's seat, officers said.

Mack was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford, who ordered an autopsy. Lunsford said "the actual cause of death won't be known until we get the report back."

Troopers said the jeep was spotted by a passing motorist about 4:30 Saturday.

Gray County sheriff's deputies spent much of the night searching for the missing driver, and deputies and troopers began an extensive search at daylight Sunday morning.

Lunsford said the victim was "lying in a ditch in some tall weeds, and it was impossible to see him from the highway."

Pampa pathologist Dr. James Tilden was scheduled to perform an autopsy on the victim this morning. However, officers speculated that Mack may have died from internal injuries. The victim suffered only minor cuts externally, troopers said.

According to Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan, Mack had called his wife from Wellington, Okla., about 12:30 Sunday morning, saying he was driving home.

Funeral arrangements for Mack are pending with Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors. Survivors include his wife, a son, and two daughters. Mack's complete obituary is on page 4 of today's News.

Domestic disturbance results in two arrests

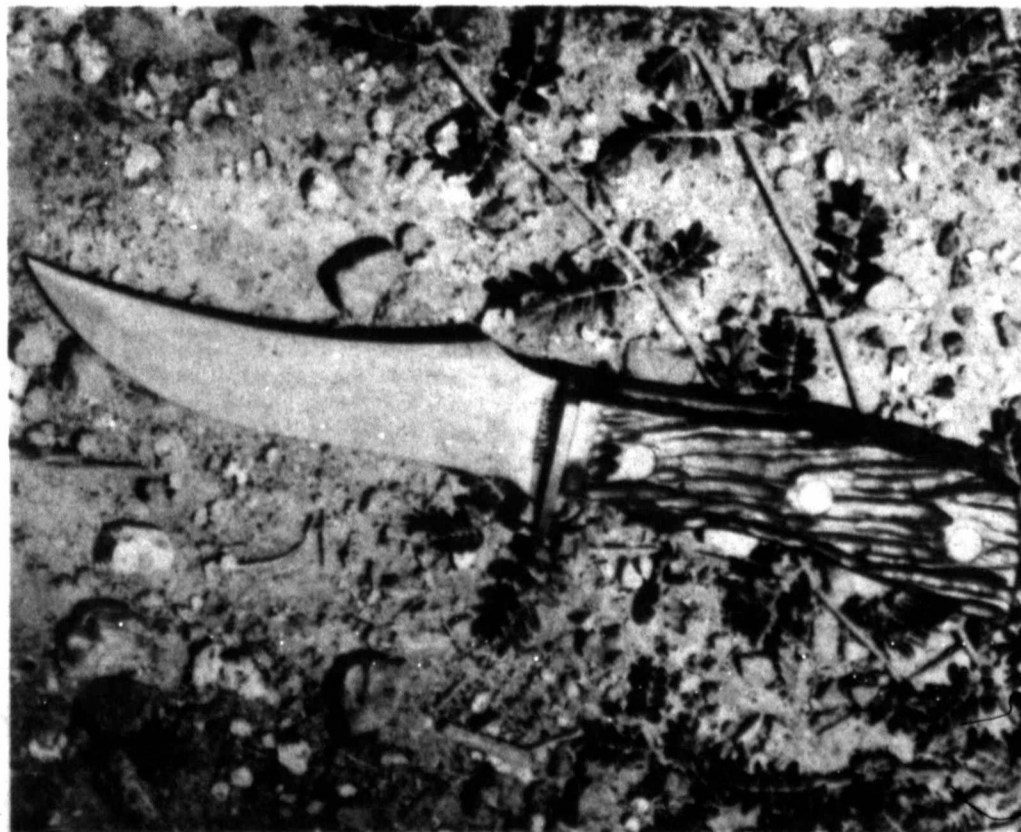

Mike Anderson (above right), estranged husband of Letha Anderson of 1000 McCullough, was arrested twice during the weekend in connection with what police described as a "domestic disturbance" between the separated couple.

The story began at about 11:30 p.m. Saturday when Mrs. Anderson told police Anderson struck her and took her 1972 Buick station wagon from the Keg Tavern at 323 W. Foster. Anderson later returned to the tavern, where he was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, public intoxication and simple assault.

After posting bond totalling more than $500, he was released from city jail Sunday morning. At 2:35 that afternoon he went to Mrs. Anderson's residence and reportedly struck her several times in the face, knocking out a couple of teeth.

Her son called police, who obtained a warrant from Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford to arrest Anderson for aggravated assault. Officers arrested the knife-wielding husband, and took Mrs. Anderson to Highland General Hospital for treatment. The aggravated assault charge was reduced this morning to simple assault, a misdemeanor subject to a $203.50 fine in municipal court.

Bentsen applauds announcement of new energy head

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, is applauding the announcement that fellow Texan Charles W. Dufcan Jr. will be the new head of the Department of Energy.

"Charles Duncan has been a close personal friend for many years. He is a man of high ability and total integrity, an excellent choice for a difficult job," Bentsen said.

Duncan, the deputy secretary of defense, was chairman of the board of Houston's Rotan Mosle Financial Corp., before coming to the Pentagon in 1977.

He was president of the Coca-Cola Co. before accepting the Houston position in 1974.

Officials try to complete oil slick chart

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Scientists and Coast Guard experts today will try to complete a chart showing the exact location of a massive oil spill in the southern Gulf of Mexico.

The oil is spurting from a blown-out Mexican oil well in the Bay of Campeche, off the coast of Mexico. It has been spreading into the Gulf of Mexico at a rate of 30,000 barrels a day, since the well blew out June 3.

The Coast Guard and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration have set up a command post here to monitor the spill, concerned that the oil might threaten the Texas coast.

Their observers have been flying a specially equipped airplane over the Gulf the past week, hoping to discover whether the spill is moving and if so, in what direction.

Spokesman Richard Griggs said the aerial reconnaissance has spotted several smaller patches of oil which apparently have broken away from the main oil slick, but said there's no way of knowing how many of the small patches there are.

Some Coast Guard officials have said they should be able to produce a meaningful chart of the spill by Tuesday.

Thursday the United States and Mexico jointly airlifted about 450 small Kemps Ridley sea turtles from their normal spawning grounds to Galveston, to get them out of the way of the spreading oil.

One of the more widely-circulated quotes of the week came from Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, who exclaimed after the first round of Cabinet firings: "Good grief! They're cutting down the biggest trees and keeping the monkeys."

Wilson referred specifically to the dismissals Thursday of HEW Secretary Joseph Califano and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

Wilson, a supporter of the deposed Nicaraguan regime, was not pleased to see former President Anastasio Somoza leave the country.

"I'm convinced that it's going to be a Marxist state," the Lufkin Democrat said. He predicted that the military governments in Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador would fall to Marxists as a result.

Bentsen put in a bid this week to exempt independent producers from the proposed windfall profits tax.

The exemption would apply to the first 3,000 barrels a day that an independent producer.

"The evidence is clear. These independent producers are reinvesting everything they earn and then borrowing more money on top of that to explore for oil and gas," the senator said. "I am deeply concerned that imposing the House version of the windfall profits tax on independent producers might discourage desperately needed new exploration."

Bentsen is a member of the Senate Finance Committee presently studying the House proposal.

Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, introduced a bill Friday to give tax breaks for production of synthetic fuels, solar and wind energy, diesel, alcohol fuels and unleaded gasoline.

"If we can create a real incentive for private industry then we will have accomplished something toward solving the energy crisis," the Lubbock congressman said.

The bill would allow companies to depreciate refinery and other facilities over five years.

"Not only will this give us increased fuel supplies, but it will build up additional tax bases in communities which otherwise would not happen without this type of incentive," Hance said.

An ensemble company from the Houston Ballet scheduled three weekend performances at the Carter Barron Amphitheater, operated in Washington by the National Park Service.

The Texas congressional delegation was invited to a backstage reception Saturday night.

Ben Stevenson, the ballet company's director, may have enjoyed the Houston Ballet's Washington debut more than anyone. He was artistic director of the National Ballet in Washington before it folded.

Delbert McClinton, a Fort Worth native brought his rolling blues music to a Washington nightspot Wednesday and Thursday and drew enthusiastic responses from local critics.

The Washington Star said: "Delbert McClinton's version of Southern blues reminds the listener of a raunchy sensual visit to a steamy Texas bar."

Clements happy with his work

By GARTH JONES of the Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If you want to see a man happy in his work, take a snapshot of Bill Clements.

"I'm having a wonderful time being governor," the Republican said at a news conference one day, grinning from ear to ear.

"He really is having the time of his life," said one of his closest aides.

When Clements was sworn in Jan. 16, he chuckled gleefully as he lifted his hand from the Bible — and he has been chortling ever since.

All Texas governors want the power and the glory that go with the state's chief executiveship, but not all of them have been happy with some of the quasi-official duties that all governors are expected to perform.

"I'd rather take a whipping than go through one more proclamation signing ceremony," former Gov. John Connally once told an aide. He particularly disliked public ceremonies in the governor's reception room where he had to have his picture taken with delegations presenting him with local agricultural products and such.

Former Gov. Preston Smith got a kick out of public ceremonies, but he also had a photographic quirk. He wanted photographers to wait until he put on a special pair of spectacles that had no lenses, so there would be no reflections.

Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe was a warm and interesting conversationalist in a one-to-one meeting but sometimes turned brusque and defensive at press conferences.

Clements loves it all.

He'll try on or taste anything presented him. He is always ready for just one more posed picture.

Crowds gather in the governor's reception room several times a week.

"Good to see you" is Clements' first greeting. He shakes every hand within reach and waves to everyone else.

He may arrive 15 to 20 minutes late, but he will stay until his aides drag him away.

One day a group appeared advertising a peanut festival. Within minutes, Clements had tried on two peanut-decorated hats, pinned a peanut button on his lapel, kissed two peanut princesses, eaten part of a peanut patty, and signed a proclamation.

When Clements signed the proclamation making June 19 a state holiday for Texas blacks, the ceremony was on the Capitol steps with bands, an honor guard, rifle squad and several hundred spectators.

At the end of the signing, a legislator offered Clements a T-shirt labeled "Juneteenth." Off came Clements' coat and on went the T-shirt, with all cameras clicking.

Throng of followers of evangelist Lester Roloff came to Austin one day to petition Clements that Roloff's child-care homes be allowed to operate without a state license. Clements stood on a chair in the Capitol rotunda and told the crowd he would pray for them — but the state law would be enforced.

At his weekly Capitol news conferences, Clements refuses to be intimidated by any question.

At the close of the recent legislative session, a reporter asked how Clements felt about the defeat of several of his choice issues.

Clements replied that 13 of his top 17 priorities had passed.

"That's a batting average of .760 and that ain't bad for a rookie," he said.

Another time, an out-of-town reporter demanded to know what Clements would do with a new gasoline allocation.

"Well, we're certainly not going to sit on it and wait for it to hatch," Clements replied.

Sheep population leveling off

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in 20 years, the nation's sheep population is showing some signs of leveling off from its steady decline, according to the latest Agriculture Department survey.

The lamb crop, for example, is estimated at 8,019,000 this year, only 1,000 fewer than in 1978. Shorn wool output also is expected to decline only slightly.

According to USDA records, this year's lamb crop will show the smallest decline since 1959, when it increased to 21.1 million lambs from 20.7 million in 1958.

But the lamb crop, while an important indicator, does not tell the whole story about the sheep industry. Prices of slaughter lambs have gyrated sharply but overall have been at relatively high levels, along with cattle and, until lately, hogs.

Tanker collision's oil spill breaks up

BON ACCORD, Tobago (AP) — The immediate threat of pollution to Tobago's beaches from the collision of the supertankers Atlantic Empress and Aegean Captain three nights ago appeared to be over today. Currents and winds broke up the oil slick and carried it away from the island. There was no longer any significant leakage from the Aegean Captain, and the other 1,000-foot ship was towed out into the Atlantic to let the fire aboard burn itself out. Then the crude oil still aboard was to be transferred to other tankers.

There was no mention of the pope's upcoming visits to Ireland Sept. 29, and the United States, Oct. 2.

Weather

Texas

By The Associated Press

Clouds covered the rim of Texas today, from the Red River Valley westward through the Panhandle, southward to the Big Bend, along the Rio Grande Valley and upward along the Gulf Coast.

The clouds brought scattered thunderstorms throughout the day, some of them locally heavy with strong, gusty winds.

Early morning haze and fog again covered several parts of north and south Texas, with visibility reduced as low as two miles in some cases.

The possible approach of tropical depression Claudette with the likelihood of stronger winds could end the air stagnation and lessen the haze.

At last report, Claudette remained more than 250 miles southeast of Galveston threatening to intensify and move northward. Forecasters were prepared to issue gale warnings for parts of the Texas and Louisiana Gulf Coast.

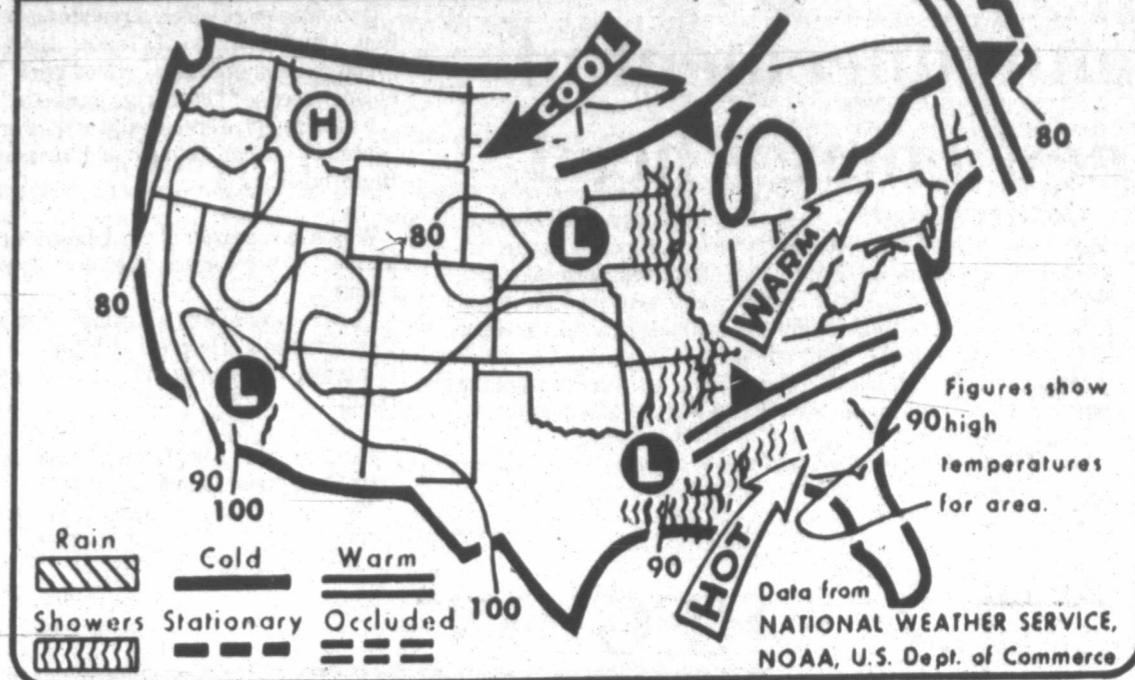

National

Showers and thundershowers were scattered over the east Gulf Coast states, across the South and mid-Atlantic Coast states and in the Ohio Valley today and flash flood watches were posted for some areas.

Just over an inch of rain fell in 15 minutes during a downpour at Rock Cave in Central West Virginia, and parts of north central Tennessee and Kansas were under flood watches early today.

President's leadership capabilities still in question

By The Associated Press

One week after President Carter told Americans the nation suffers a "crisis of confidence," some members of Congress and political figures say they are not so confident of his leadership.

Within days of Carter's address on the nation's energy and inflation problems, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal were out of office — two of the five Cabinet officers fired or allowed to resign in a major administration shakeup.

But what did some of the "average Americans" — people like those the president consulted before he spoke and acted — think?

The Associated Press asked seven Americans what they thought of the president's speech. A week later, the AP went back to six of those people — one man was on vacation — and asked what they thought of Jimmy Carter now.

A coal miner

CHESAPEAKE, W. Va. (AP) — Coal miner Grant McGuire says President Carter stopped cleaning house too soon. "I think we need to clean house at the White House all the way from the doorkeeper to the head honcho," he said. McGuire, 52, a miner for 33 years and a lifelong Democrat, had said he was encouraged by the president's decision to limit oil imports. But now he's discouraged. The president has said little about his plans for coal and has endorsed nuclear power.

A retired businessman

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "I think this business with the Cabinet is strictly a political move to show his strength," said Marriott Nadler, 69, who retired here from New Jersey in 1975.

The president, Nadler said, is trying to show people he can be strong because he has been criticized for weakness. But he gives Carter low marks for the effort, particularly his decision to name Hamilton Jordan the White House chief of staff.

A gasoline dealer

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — "What's showing now is his inability to be president. The pressures are bringing it out," said Charles Matties, past president of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers.

Matties said he thinks the president's Cabinet changes were designed to weed out independent thinkers, and he called the appointment of Hamilton Jordan as chief of staff "an insult to the nation."

A Missouri farmer

OSAGE CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jim Hofmann was initially pleased with the president's energy-inflation speech, but now he's having second thoughts — particularly about an Energy Mobilization Board that Carter proposed to speed up energy programs.

"I guess the one thing that didn't hit me that night was he is getting the government deeper into the energy program," said the Osage County farmer who raises cattle, corn and alfalfa on a 500-acre spread. "I'm a little disappointed that the government isn't turning this over more to private industry."

An oil executive

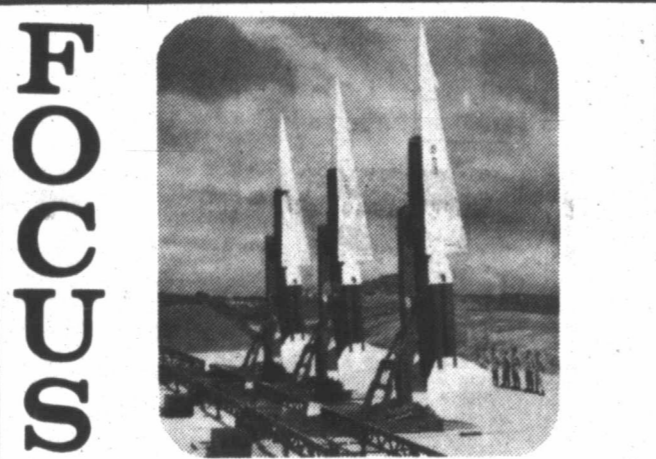

LOS ANGELES — "Carter talks about image and confidence, things like that, when the real problem is substance," said David Button, manager of economic planning and policy for the Getty Oil Co.

The president, he said, lacks substance. And what is "incredible" Button said, is that Carter asked for advice at Camp David, acted on the advice, then fired many people who gave him that advice.

A Baptist theologian

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The Rev. Kenneth Cauthen says the Cabinet shakeup was "a jarring note that created some disharmony" with Carter's energy message.

Cauthen, an American Baptist theologian at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, said after the speech that Carter "was right in seeing the problem of energy in the larger context of a crisis of spirit ... That was one of the more important things about the speech, and needed saying."

News Word: Verification

One word that comes up repeatedly in news stories as the Senate debates the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union is "verification." Verification is the act of proving the truth about something. Some senators fear the Soviets may try to break some of the rules of the SALT treaty. They want to be sure the United States can prove, or verify, that the Soviet Union is obeying the treaty's terms, which set limits on the number of missile launchers and large bombers each country may deploy. President Carter says the United States will be able to do this. But in the Senate, the "verification" debate goes on.

DO YOU KNOW — What does SALT stand for?

Ron Allen Chambers of 703 N. Frost reported someone entered his garage while he was on vacation. Nothing was stolen.

Clinton McCord of 933 Wheeler reported the windshield on his motorcycle was broken and the left saddle bag was removed. Damage to the motorcycle was estimated at $50.

James Bassett Herd, 39, of Pampa was arrested in the 100 block of South Cuyler and charged with driving while intoxicated and running a red light.

The items were recovered by police and the juveniles were released to their parents.

Larry Darby of Midland reported a red metal tool box was stolen from the bed of his El Camino truck while it was parked at the Coronado Inn, 1101 N. Hobart. The box contained several sets of hand tools and electrical tools. Other tools were stolen from another box sitting in the bed of the truck.

The People's Pharmacy

by Joe Graedon

It's no secret that cigarette smoking is hazardous to your health. Everyone has heard that smoking causes heart disease and cancer. It can aggravate peptic ulcers and if you smoke during pregnancy it can affect the well-being of the fetus. What is not so commonly known about cigarettes is that they can profoundly affect how drugs will work in your body.

Smokers may react differently to medications because of the way their bodies have adjusted to cigarettes. Nicotine and other substances in smoke can stimulate the liver, which is responsible for the metabolism and deactivation of many drugs and chemicals. Just as your hands develop calluses after hard work, the liver adapts to cigarettes by adding protective enzymes and increases its ability to neutralize foreign substances.

Because it is more capable of metabolizing a variety of chemicals, including drugs, they are eliminated faster from the body. Consequently, medication levels in the bloodstream of smokers may not get as high and may not last as long as in nonsmokers. In some cases therapeutic benefits can be substantially reduced. What starts out as a protective reaction to the toxicity of cigarette smoke may turn into a problem for someone who needs drug treatment.

Ironically, as bad as it may be to suffer with drugs not performing at adequate concentrations, smokers who quit cold turkey without informing their doctors can also find themselves in deep trouble. As the liver returns to normal and drug metabolism slows down, medication levels may increase. One study showed that drugs lasted 25 percent longer in patients who stopped smoking than they had before these people quit. In some cases, this could produce a sudden increase in blood levels of the drug, with dangerous side effects resulting.

What does all this mean in practical terms? Well for one thing it means that if you smoke, the drugs doctors prescribe may not perform according to regular rules. Take pain relievers for example. Darvon (Propoxyphene) and Talwin (Pentazocine) have been reported to be less effective in relieving pain for smokers than for nonsmokers.

People who are psychologically depressed and who smoke may also have an extra cross to bear. The reason is that their antidepressant medications like Imipramine (Tofranil, Presamine, Janimine) and Desipramine (Nopramin and Pertofrane) may be less effective. This could mean a slower recovery from psychological depression. Even drugs like Valium (Diazepam) and Librium (Chlordiazepoxide) can be metabolized more rapidly by smokers.

Asthma patients have no business smoking in the first place. If they do, research suggests that an important medication used in the treatment of their ailment may be less beneficial. Theophylline, a major ingredient in Elixophyllin, Marax, Quibron and Tedral, was eliminated twice as fast by smokers as by nonsmokers. This might mean that some asthma sufferers would have to take larger doses or use their medicine more frequently.

Even caffeine levels can be affected by smoking. Doctors in the Department of Pharmacology and Therapeutics at McGill University in Canada discovered that people who smoked more than 20 cigarettes per day eliminated caffeine from their bodies almost twice as fast as nonsmokers. Instead of the usual six hours for normal volunteers, smokers were able to excrete the caffeine three hours faster.

It is interesting that smokers tend to drink more coffee than nonsmokers. While this could be due to many factors, it is tempting to speculate that smokers consume more coffee in part to compensate for reduced caffeine levels.

The fact that smoking tends to decrease the therapeutic benefits of some drugs may make life difficult for patients. Unless doctors take smoking into account and adjust the dose of their prescriptions accordingly, there may be some therapeutic failures.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of nine boys. Their father is dead. Rudy, 23, is my oldest. He married Agnes, a 15-year-old girl, because she said he got her pregnant. Their baby is 2 now and is the picture of the fellow Agnes went with before Rudy married her.

Their marriage is on the rocks because she is pregnant by a sailor she met when she went to visit her mother in Seattle. Rudy won't take her back because he's in love with a 21-year-old girl who has two babies and is expecting a third by a fellow who isn't her husband although she's still married.

Rudy gets unemployment. He runs all night and lies around my house all day. He acts real crazy. I never know if he's on drugs or just drunk. All right, so much for Rudy.

Jody is my 20-year-old. He got a 17-year-old girl pregnant but won't marry her because he says he's not ready to settle down yet.

Abby, I've been a church-going Christian woman and a good mother and I don't know how I could have turned out kids like these. If they hang around the younger boys, they will be a mess, too. Please help me.

A MOTHER WHO FAILED

DEAR MOTHER: Don't feel guilty. If you've been a good mother, you haven't failed, your kids have. Let the older boys know they can't lie around your house all day. Your problems are too heavy to carry alone. You need to talk to an understanding, supportive person. Your clergyman is ready when you are.

DEAR ABBY: When would you say a person has reached middle age?

FORTY AND CURIOUS

DEAR FORTY: When he (or she) climbs out of the bathtub and is glad to find the full-length mirror all steamed up!

DEAR ABBY: I have a lazy teenage daughter who has to be reminded over and over again to write thank-you notes for gifts she receives at Christmas, her birthday and, more recently, for her high-school graduation. Now she has a new cop-out. She thanks people for their gifts by telephone. Her grandparents live 1,500 miles away and so do most of her aunts and uncles, so the calls aren't exactly free. She says she will pay for the calls herself, but so far I haven't seen a penny.

Her father was furious when she told us she was planning to thank everyone for her graduation gifts by phone, but we both agreed it would be better than not thanking them at all.

Daughter argues that a phone call is much more personal and gives her a chance to ask how they are and tell them what she is doing, how the family is, etc.

Do you think a telephoned thanks is proper?

MOTHER OF A TEEN

DEAR MOTHER: A written thanks is better. But a phone call is better than no thanks at all.

Outdated laws still on record

Think twice before you discard that banana peel. Modern-day littering laws notwithstanding, it has been illegal since 1911 to throw a banana peel on the street in Tennessee. The law prescribes a $50 fine.

The banana-peel law is one of many unusual or undated statutes on the law books in Tennessee.

A 1939 state criminal law says marathon dancing and other endurance contests can't last more than eight hours. It says those involved in the contest must take a 48-hour break before competing again.

It is illegal to call another person a coward if he refuses to participate in a duel. The law, dating to the 1800s, carries a two-year prison term.

The law also calls for a 10-year prison term for persons involved in a duel.

The sale of logs that have been hollowed out and plugged at the ends with a piece of wood has been illegal since 1901.

The owner of a dog which has chased, bitten or wounded a goat or sheep is subject to a $25 fine.

Persons who handle dangerous snakes violate a 1947 law which carries a maximum $150 fine and a six-month jail sentence.

A law which makes it illegal to "interfere, disquiet or in any way disturb pupils of any school or college for females" should give males intent on raiding sorority houses some reason to reconsider.

Steamboat racing carries a $50 fine and a six-month jail term.

Barbers are prohibited from cutting hair on Sunday, and other types of work on Sunday except in emergencies or for charity work are also illegal. Persons who hunt on Sunday are subject to the same penalties as those who work on the Sabbath -- a $10 fine.

Moscow gearing up for presentation of Games

MOSCOW (AP) — In the morning, a breeze skittles down out of the Lenin hills above the city and ruffles the fir trees along the Moscow River. The men and women are out early, cleaning the streets, sweeping sidewalks, picking up every scrap of yesterday.

They polish the windows and open the shops of this historic old city, where in 1917 the world was rocked by the revolution that was to produce a new culture and divide the world into two ways of thinking about life.

Next summer, after one more inevitable, unyielding Russian winter, they will show the world what they have wrought. The world will come to Moscow on the neutral field of sport for the 22nd summer Olympics.

This week, the city is holding its dress rehearsal during its seventh Soviet sports festival. For the first time, athletes from other nations have been invited to participate in the games that start at the school and club level all across this massive land of 263.4 million people and culminate in a show of unmatched athletic force and pride.

In the Soviet Union, the ideal role is that of an integral part of a group rather than that of an individual standing out as unique among his peers. That philosophy stunned Western observers when it was graphically demonstrated Saturday in the precision with which thousands of Soviets of all ages participated in the opening ceremony of the Spartacade Games.

Almost no marchers were out of step. No flag bearer allowed his standard to droop. No member of the 6,000-strong card section in Lenin Stadium was a second off in flipping the cards that, collectively, produced vast murals of Misha, the cuddly Russian Olympic bear; the male and female sprinters who adorn the Spartacade symbol, and finally Lenin himself — Lenin, who started it all.

But Westerners have difficulty understanding why this same precision is not carried over to the area of everyday amenities.

The Soviets explain that their priorities are different, but it is impossible to explain why a waiter says there is no hot food while hot meals are being delivered at the next table. Or why the visa process for visiting newsmen dragged until the last minute. Or why you can't easily call a taxi.

At the same time, there are pleasant surprises. One Western visitor discovered that in changing money at a hotel, he had not received the proper amount of rubles. He returned the next day, explained the problem, and the money was promptly handed over.

Everywhere one goes in Moscow he is reminded that it is the city of the 1980 Olympics. There are Olympic signs in the Cyrillic alphabet, souvenirs such as miniature samovar pots with the Olympic symbol, and everywhere the smiling face of the Olympic mascot, Misha.

There are no more of these trappings than there were in Montreal a year before the 1976 Olympics, but they stand out because there are few signboards of any kind on Moscow streets, and you have to look for shops. This is the farthest thing from a consumer-based economy.

GARY MATTHEWS of the Atlanta Braves digs his shoulder into the dirt at second base as he attempts to break up a double play by upsetting Chicago Cubs shortstop Ivan DeJesus in the first inning of their game this weekend in Chicago. He was too late, as DeJesus had already thrown to first baseman Bill Buckner to complete the play. Atlanta's Rowland Office had grounded to Buckner to get the play under way. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S. Seeking dominating sprinter

MOSCOW (AP) — "We used to have sprinters that the world feared," said U.S. men's track coach Jimmy Carnes Sunday. "We don't have that anymore."

"We're looking for someone to break out of the pack between now and 1980," Carnes added.

"We can pick any three of 20 sprinters in the United States and come up with three good ones and place two in the finals here. But nobody dominates. We need that someone for the Olympics."

Carnes made his comments before the 100-meter dash at the Spartacade Games at Lenin Stadium.

"Maybe Houston can be the one," Carnes said, referring to Houston McTear, the one-time Florida schoolboy sensation who tied a world record for the 100-yard dash in 1975.

But McTear failed to withstand a closing rush by Cuba's Silvio Leonard in Sunday's 100 and was nipped at the wire. Leonard, a double gold medalist at the recent Pan American Games, was timed in 10.30 seconds while McTear registered 10.39.

Oswaldo Lara, another Cuban ran third in 10.41 and Rich Edwards of the University of Houston was fourth in 10.43.

"Leonard may be the world's fastest human," said Carnes, who added that he had expected a faster time for the 100.

McTear, who attended two junior colleges and now lives in Santa Monica, Calif., has been bothered by pulled leg muscles in the past, which cost him an Olympic berth in 1976.

"Everybody has always expected a lot of me," said McTear. "I'm not a machine, but I'm always trying my best. This season really isn't important to me. Next year means a lot because I missed 1976."

Again Sunday, McTear showed his ability to get off to a quick start but failed to sustain it, giving way to Leonard's powerful kick over the last 30 meters and barely holding on for second.

"All sprinters have a fear of pulling (muscles)," said Carnes before the race. "and that could be McTear's problem. He's strong in the 60 and 100 yards indoors and then something's missing when he increases it to 100 meters."

Carnes, who will coach the U.S. men's track team at the Moscow Olympics, said his top sprint prospects for next year could come from among Harvey Gance, James Sanford and Steve Williams, who has been out of action for more than a year with a leg injury.

Cardinal tight end dies during workout

ST. CHARLES, Mo. (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals were in mourning today following the sudden death of tight end J. V. Cain, presumed to be a perfect physical specimen, due to cardiac arrest suffered in practice.

Cain, a sixth-season National Football League veteran, collapsed Sunday night while running a pass pattern drill at Lindenwood College, the team's training camp site. He died about 90 minutes later despite cardiopulmonary resuscitation efforts.

gentleman and a superb athlete. It's a terrible tragedy," said Bidwill. "He was a man we will all miss, more than anything as a person."

Cain, who missed all of the 1978 NFL season following surgery to repair a torn Achilles tendon suffered in training camp, reported early for this year's drills and passed a physical examination with flying colors.

"His injury had come along just great," said Steve Curran, a team spokesman. "The doctors were really surprised at how well he'd come along. He was a physical fitness buff. He was in great shape."

Curran said Cain collapsed at about 8:30 p.m. while the Cardinals were engaged in a no-contact drill watched by hundreds of spectator fans. The 6-foot-4, 225-pound athlete, St. Louis' top draft choice in 1974, had just completed a no-contact pattern, he said. When he fell to the ground, Dr. Bernard Garfinkel of the team's staff went to his aid and began administering the cardiopulmonary procedure until joined by a life support team.

"When they (players) saw that CPR was started, it just got dead silent," Curran said. "A lot of people on the sidelines bowed their heads in prayer. At one point, Coach (Bud) Wilkinson had the players on a line in prayer. They kept yelling, 'Come on, J. V., come on, J. V.' There were tears. It was very emotional."

Curran said the Cardinals chartered a jet aircraft to fly to Houston, Cain's hometown, to pick up the dead athlete's wife, Jeanne, and his father, who are among survivors.

Cain's death came on his 28th birthday. The former all-Big Eight star at Colorado had 76 career pass receptions for 1,014 yards and nine touchdowns.

His best year was 1976, when he snared 26 for five touchdowns.

Weibring claims Quad Cities Open title

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — The first PGA victory is always special, but it had greater meaning for D.A. Weibring, who dedicated his triumph in the $200,000 Quad Cities Open to his ailing father who taught him the game, and the golfer's pregnant wife.

"I dedicated the win to both of them," said Weibring after firing a sensational 65 in Sunday's final round to stave off a charge by Milwaukee Open winner Calvin Peete and finish the tournament with a record 266, 14-under par.

Moments after paring the 18th hole to assure the victory, Weibring turned to his 62-year-old father, who had suffered a heart attack a week ago, and said: "I tried hard for you, Dad."

The elder Weibring grinned broadly and exclaimed, "This is the biggest thrill of my life."

The 26-year-old blond pro said the victory was also special for his wife, Kristy, who is five months pregnant with the couple's first child.

One of the day's highlights came when ageless wonder Sam Snead, who had made PGA history Friday by becoming the first man on the tour ever to shoot his age — 67 — topped the remarkable achievement Sunday by carding a 66, making him the first PGA pro ever to shoot below his age.

Brett powers Royals over Texas

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — George Brett says if he goes to the plate trying to hit a home run, it doesn't happen.

But the Kansas City third baseman admits it was on his mind in the eighth inning Sunday night after he had already slammed three out of the park in a 7-6 victory over the Texas Rangers.

With one out and a runner on second, Sparky Lyle walked Amos Otis to get to Brett, and the Rangers got him out for the only time all night when he flied to center.

"I wasn't trying to hit a home run. I just wanted to hit it hard somewhere. But when you've already hit three home runs, you don't think of a line drive to left field or a ground ball between first and second. That's impossible. You want another home run," Brett said.

The 26-year-old Brett, who has been named to the American League All-Star team the past four years, hit 2-run homers in the first and fourth innings off Ranger starter Steve Comer, then returned to boom a solo homer in the seventh off reliever Bob Babcock.

Richie Zisk countered with two RBI singles and a solo homer for Texas and the game was tied 6-6 going into the ninth.

But Willie Wilson lined a bases-loaded single to center to give Kansas City the win, its first after eight straight losses on the road. The decision kept Texas two games behind California in the Western Division.

"I'm not a home run hitter," said Brett, whose last homer before Sunday night was June 24th. He now has 12.

"When I go up there trying to hit home runs, I don't hit them. I hit 22 in 1977, but that was without trying to hit any of them."

Brett's only other three-homer game came in last season's American League playoffs at Yankee Stadium, and all of them were solo homers.

"Most of my homers are solo. For 80 games this year I've been first or second in the batting order. Tonight I'm hitting fourth and people are on base."

To hit three homes in a game "is a big thrill, but to hit three in a playoff game is an all-time thrill. I'll always remember these two games, but this one was very sweet because we came back to win. It was a super win, very emotional," Brett said.

Dan Quisenberry, 1-0, Kansas City's fourth pitcher, got the
