

Nine die in Ohio motel fire

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio (AP) — Fire swept through a crowded two-story Holiday Inn in this eastern Ohio city today, killing at least nine persons, authorities said. Others escaped by smashing windows and leaping to the ground below.

Authorities at first thought 10 persons had died in the blaze. But Gayle Ogden, a spokeswoman at Guernsey Memorial Hospital, said a woman who suffered a heart attack and was believed dead was brought back to consciousness.

The bodies of four children and five adults were taken to three funeral homes in the area. Officials did not release identities on the victims and said some of the bodies were severely charred.

Six adults and four children died in the pre-dawn blaze, including one man who apparently had a heart attack while trying to escape, the authorities said.

Guernsey Memorial Hospital officials said 61 persons were treated for injuries and 11 were hospitalized with cuts and broken bones.

A baby was found safe in the arms of its unconscious mother, lying in a pool of blood.

In Columbus, Gov. James A. Rhodes this morning called the fire "a tragedy for our state."

Trapped guests were seen banging on windows and screaming after the fire broke out about 3 a.m.

One youth picked up an iron bar and began smashing windows. Passersby found an old scaffold and rescued others.

Only four of the motel's 104 rooms were unoccupied, but the exact number of guests in the motels was not immediately known.

Most of the dead were found in hallways of the 10-year-old brick and wood structure. Fire officials said the blaze apparently started somewhere in the rear of the building.

The building was badly damaged but not destroyed.

Brown Clary, 18, and Rodman Blazvick, 18, were in the motel's lounge playing pinball when Blazvick smelled smoke.

"He told me the hotel was on fire," Clary said. "I thought he was joking."

But when Clary looked down a hallway, he saw smoke drifting along the lights and "an orange glow" in the ceiling.

The two young men sounded a fire alarm. They ran back into the lounge to tell a motel employee to call the fire department.

Then they began alerting the motel patrons.

Shooting probe continues

Two truck drivers involved in a shootout near McLean last weekend remain in serious condition at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, but a nurse said this morning they are improving.

And Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said it will be a few days before he concludes his investigation of the shooting incident, which took place early Saturday evening on Interstate Highway 40.

James Cruse, 30, of Liberty, N.C., and Joe Griffin, 39, of Cincinnati, Ohio, the two men in serious condition, were both shot in the chest during the incident.

Cruse's father, Martin Cruse, was shot in the left leg and is listed in satisfactory condition at Northwest Texas.

According to witnesses, the gunplay stemmed from an argument on citizens band radio between Griffin and the Cruses. The Cruse truck, with the help of other truckers, reportedly forced the Griffin truck off the road.

The shooting started, witnesses said, when James Cruse, carrying a pistol, and Martin Cruse, carrying a club, began walking toward Griffin's truck. Both James Cruse and Griffin allegedly fired several shots. State trooper John Holland, who was called to the scene, found the Cruses lying in the road. Griffin was slumped over inside the cab of his truck.

The men were taken to McLean Hospital, then transferred to Northwest Texas.

Jordan said he will talk with the Cruses and Griffin before he and District Attorney Harold Comer file any charges in the incident. The sheriff said he called the hospital Monday and was told it might be two or three days before he can question the men.

"Right now I really don't have anything to say about it," he concluded.

On new taxing methods

County's options still open question

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

Beginning Jan. 1, 1980, property appraisal for city and school ad valorem tax purposes will be combined under a single appraisal district. Administration of the appraisal district by a Central Appraisal Office should be established later in the year.

But whether Gray County government will join in the consolidation is still an open question.

Senate Bill 621 requires the consolidation of city and school property appraisal functions, but leaves membership for counties optional. County governments are required to pass resolutions by Sept. 15 if they intend to vote in a selection of the appraisal board.

The districts will be roughly established along county lines. They will include a Central Appraisal Office governed by a five-member Board of Directors elected by votes cast by all the taxing bodies in the district.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said Monday he would wait for recommendations from county tax assessor-collector Jack Back on membership in the district. But the county judge said he would include a discussion of a proposal to enter the district on the commissioners court agenda by the Sept. 15 deadline.

Back said Friday he had not yet had an opportunity to study the bill creating the appraisal district.

Although the county is not required to participate in the appraisal district, county tax assessor collectors will be required to follow the general provisions of the new Property Tax Code.

The main modifications of property appraisal practices require appraisals to be brought within a few percentage points of the fair market value of property. Local appraisals have traditionally lagged behind the fair market value of property.

For example, in the Pampa school district last year, single family residential property was appraised at $96,627,855. The total taxable value determined from fair market estimates by the state School Tax Assessment and Practices Board was $144,941,783.

Overall, the appraisal rate of property taxable in the Pampa school district is about 67 percent of the fair market value.

The new appraisal law will also require taxing bodies to assess taxes on the basis of 100 percent of the valuation. Local bodies currently use a ratio of the total valuation.

Pampa school tax assessor-collector Dwan Walker said the primary purpose of the new bill is "to bring about uniform appraisal practices across the state." He emphasized that the taxing powers still reside with the city, state, and school governments.

"They still have the power to raise and lower the rates as they will," he said.

Walker said lowering the school tax rate when property value increases under the appraisal guidelines was an "accepted fact."

The Gray County appraisal district will include nine taxing units, the largest taxing body of which is the Pampa Independent School District.

In a move parallel to the required consolidation of the property appraisal, the city and school district are studying a plan to combine into a single office the city and school tax offices. The consolidation of the two offices is not required by the appraisal district law, but city and school officials say they believe the change could be more economical.

Commissioners meet Wednesday morning

Gray County commissioners court will hear a report detailing the services provided by the Texas Department of Human Resources when it meets in regular session Wednesday at 9:30 a.m.

The briefing will be presented by DHR representative Karl Morris. The state agency now provides approximately $1 million of services to the county, according to Judge Carl Kennedy.

The court will also organize as the board of equalization to set hearings for the industrial tax roll, consider employment of an attorney to handle county bond forfeiture cases, and consider a request for additional funding for Lovett Memorial Library.

Abducted girl rejoins parents in S. Carolina

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — As tears streamed from her parents' eyes, little Caroline Thompson hugged a playmate and smiled at reporters after her rescue from the teen-ager who allegedly abducted her from a hotel parking lot.

The blue-eyed, blond 5-year-old clung to her father as she left the Myrtle Beach, S.C., police station where she had munched contentedly on a hot dog and asked for a chocolate milkshake following the ordeal that ended in that resort city Monday.

"She's fine," said Rachel Thompson, her voice cracking and her eyes red from crying, who along with her husband Russel was flown by chartered jet to Myrtle Beach where they were reunited with their daughter and met some neighbors who had been vacationing there. "She wanted to have her picture in the newspaper a while back but we didn't know it would be like this."

James Keith Tucker, an 18-year-old High Point, N.C. man whom officials said was on parole for an earlier auto theft conviction, was arrested Monday evening and charged with kidnapping and car theft. Tucker was to be arraigned in Florence, S.C., today before a U.S. magistrate.

FBI Special Agent David Brumble of Jacksonville, Fla., said before the rescue that authorities believed the man only meant to steal the car, and did not plan to abduct the girl.

The Thompsons returned to Daytona Beach several hours after Caroline was found and were whisked by police to the Holiday Inn where the incident began Saturday — hoping finally to begin their vacation.

The parents had remained at the hotel in Daytona Beach until word came that their daughter was safe.

At a motel news conference on their return, Mrs. Thompson said she was thankful that the abductor took care of her child.

"He didn't hurt her in any way and tried to comfort her by telling her that he was taking her to her mother and daddy at home," she said.

Asked how Caroline reacted when she saw her parents again, she said: "She was just as normal as ever and is just beginning to understand that many people have been looking for her."

Caroline, cradled in her father's arms, appeared sleepy and said nothing.

The Dunwoody, Ga., family's two-day ordeal ended when Donald and Edith Howell of Goldsboro, N.C., told FBI agents they noticed a man and Caroline as they checked into a Myrtle Beach motel Sunday.

But it wasn't until the couple saw pictures of a suspect and Caroline on television Monday that they realized she was the missing girl.

The Howells quickly notified police, who spotted a man driving the Thompsons' late model Oldsmobile station wagon near the motel.

RACHEL THOMPSON (left) flashes a big smile as she and her husband, Russel, and their daughter, Caroline, face reporters early Tuesday on their return to Daytona Beach, Fla.

The Thompsons flew to Myrtle Beach, S.C., Monday night to be reunited with their child, kidnapped from a Daytona Beach motel Saturday afternoon.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE Withdrawal Process

In a recent article in the Arizona Daily Star William H. Dresher, Dean of the College of Mines and Director of the Bureau of Geology and Mineral Technology at the University of Arizona revealed some startling facts about how the government is in virtual control of our nation's energy industry.

Since gas and oil is the very essence of life for most of the people in Pampa and the Texas Panhandle the facts rolled home especially hard.

Dresher, who is a widely published author of U.S. mineral development, starts his article by saying that approximately one-third of the mainland United States is in control of the government. He lists that bureaucrats control 96.4 percent of the land in Alaska, 86.4 percent of the land in Nevada, 66.2 percent of Utah, 63.7 percent of Idaho, 52.3 percent of Oregon, 45 percent of California and 43.9 percent of Arizona.

The lands that Dresher refers to are often called "federal lands" implying that they are the property of government and not necessarily of the people.

The management of these lands, like so much of the federal government, is spread into the hands of more than 70 government agencies.

If the ownership of this land was not startling enough 50 percent of all known U.S. energy resources are contained in these lands: 40 percent of all U.S. coal, 70 percent of all low sulfur coal, 75 percent of all U.S. oil shale, 85 percent of all U.S. tar sands, 15 percent of all U.S. developed oil reserves, 15 percent of all U.S. discovered oil resources, 33 percent of all U.S. estimated oil resource base, 20 percent of all U.S. developed gas reserves, 25 percent of all U.S. gas resource, and 43 percent of all U.S. estimated gas resource base.

In spite of all this potential energy only 10 percent of all U.S. energy production came from these lands.

By holding these lands out of production for the American people but threatens the actual existence of the industry that maintains the way in which people in Pampa and Texas earn their living.

The "withdrawal process," which has been used to declare the majority of these lands off-limits to energy production, was originally devised for withdrawal and reservation of these lands for certain uses, such as Indian reservations, trading posts, pony express stations, lighthouses and military bases. Today it is being used for preservation purposes, on the greatest scale ever conceived by man.

Unfortunately, the bureaucracy has allowed itself to lower its guard on the subject of land withdrawal.

Besides withdrawing public land, the federal government is making leasing of these lands more difficult.

The shelf - wells (offshore wells) are by far the largest producers of energy in the U.S. In 1976, in spite of the fact that only three percent of U.S. wells are located offshore, these wells produced 20 percent of the nation's oil and gas.

So far, only four percent of federal offshore holdings on the continental shelf have been developed for oil, and this is nearly all off the producing states of Texas and Louisiana.

At present, the Department of Interior estimates the minimum lead time requirement for first production of new wells in the gulf of Mexico, off the California Coast, off the Atlantic Coast, and the Gulf of Alaska, to be three, four, six and eight years, respectively. However, they also estimate the present and proposed federal regulation will increase this time requirement by an additional two to four years.

Last year the Chase Manhattan Bank analyzed the cash flow of 30 major oil companies. These 30 companies had collectively made $13.5 billion in profits, $5 billion of which was distributed to the shareholders as dividends. They have invested $27.8 billion in new projects and they had paid $65.2 billion to governments. Thus, in 1976, payments to governments by these 30 oil companies were 13 times dividends and five times profits.

The evidence is mounting that the policy of the federal government is to withhold America's energy resources from our use.

This policy is dangerous not only to the oil and gas industry that makes up the economic heart of Pampa but also poses a threat to the very existence of our way of life.

Dr. Peter Flawn, president of the University of Texas at San Antonio said "As in all wars, we are seriously threatened both nationally and individually. Losing the war will result in a profound economic depression with attendant massive unemployment, crippled industry and an agricultural system unable to feed, at anything like its accustomed level, a population with greatly reduced mobility. Democratic institutions are not likely to survive the kind of social unrest that losing this war will produce."

So we the people that depend on this industry must not only protect ourselves against the price of the commodity but make sure of continued its supply.

Too few women at arms

The Army has a problem. It is not meeting its recruitment quotas for women. What makes it worse is that the Navy and Air Force are.

The brass concerned with the problem thinks the glamor of sea duty and piloting planes may have something to do with it. It's difficult to meet that competition with your basic Army activity — slogging through the mud under a heavy pack.

True, but have they considered eliminating KP?

Competition protects consumer

By OSCAR COOLEY

Thirty-three million manufactured products were "recalled" in 1978 to remedy some fault, in most cases trivial or imaginary. Recalls have greatly increased since the enactment in 1966 of a law which greatly broadens the manufacturer's liability for his goods.

Latest to be recalled are 500 heart pacemakers which the government claims dangerously change the rate of heart beat. Too bad, but if you harbor one of these indicted life-givers, look for the surgeon and his scalpel to be along any day.

Recalls are one result of the vast increase of government regulation over producers. How did any of us survive in earlier days when every consumer was a helpless victim of the unregulated producer, selling us his lethal goods, unconcerned whether we lived or died? What did we do before our political protectors came on the scene?

Perfection is unattainable. Consumers must settle for something less than perfect. Just how much error will we stand for? It is altogether possible that our government regulators are demanding unreasonably high quality of goods and that this striving for perfection is what has multiplied the recalls.

Whether or not this is true, I question the theory, so widely held, that government can be depended on to protect the people as consumers from producers who are careless and cut corners. The fact is that private firms, producing goods and services, are responsible for their quality. When government regulates, as through the Food and Drug Administration, it takes over some of that responsibility, lightening the urge on the producer and weakening his motivation.

In a primitive society, where everyone produces for his own use, the consumer is protected by his very natural desire not to poison himself. But we do not live in such a society. We live in a modern, cooperative society, where everyone produces a specialty and sells it to others to consume. Here the consumer's protection is the competition of several, often many, producers, each trying to satisfy him best in order to get and hold his trade.

I repeat — competition of producers is the only effective protection that consumers in a mass-production economy have. If a given product is sold by only one firm, the consumers are helpless. They must buy from him or do without. In such a circumstance, the producer has little motive to please the consumer.

To substitute government regulation — political fiat — for competition is futile. It disarms the consumers, just as taking a machine gun away from a soldier and arming him with a sling-shot would do.

To see this, it is necessary to compare the motivation of the government regulator with that of the private, competing firm. Whether the government official inspects and regulates well or ill, he receives his same salary. If something goes wrong and a shoddy product results, he adeptly shifts the blame. He is an inviting target for bribery. Even if he is a sincere public servant, desire to serve the public is hardly as strong as desire to avoid bankruptcy would be. The producer, on the other hand, is constantly under the urge to make his business a financial success, and to increase his own income so that he may live on a higher level and save for old age. In fact, he is moved by the most powerful biological urge, the desire to survive. His entire future hangs upon his serving the consumer well.

Producers sometimes try to lighten this responsibility by marketing their products anonymously, unbranded and unidentified as to maker. Such goods are less reliable than branded goods, which bear the name of the producing firm.

It is only human nature to produce a lower quality item to be sold anonymously than one that you know will be identified as your own product. Trademarks pin responsibility: "It pays to advertise" — but it is risky. The advertiser — producer lowers that risk by taking utmost care to produce a good that will be uniformly good and will satisfy.

Private firms, operated for profit, are not out to poison and destroy, or even deceive and injure, the consumer. They are powerfully motivated, by the desire for profit itself, to serve him honestly and well.

The theory that private, profit-seeking firms must be regulated by political authorities is a fallacy. The mounting cost of such regulation is money wasted.

Today in history

Be Be Glad for Vietnam

by paul harvey

U.S. meddling in the internal affairs of its neighbor nations is unbecoming, ineffectual and wins for us more enemies than friends.

Yet we continue. In our home hemisphere we injected ourselves into Nicaragua's civil strife and there ended up on the side of Cuba!

Americans can be glad for Vietnam — for without that resounding kick in our rear, by now American troops would be fighting everywhere.

The Somoza family ruled in Nicaragua for 46 years the only way a Latin American nation can be ruled for generations — sometimes ruthlessly.

Those opposed to Somoza mobilized under the name of the Sandinistas, named for the general who fought against our Marines in the 1930's. They were and are altogether as Communist as Castro.

Dictatorship on the right is little different from dictatorship on the left, and worldwide — including in Latin America — an undisciplined majority, not ready for self-rule, is forever caught in the crossfire between military militants and militant minorities.

The Sandinistas have help from Cuba and Panama, and indirectly from Russia.

For us it was a no-win situation either way. For the most part we stayed out of it. Not altogether. Repeatedly the Carter Administration called for the resignation of President Somoza. That did not help him any. And our protestation that his nation should be ruled instead by a constitutional council did not satisfy the Sandinistas. So, as I say, it was a no-win situation for us from the beginning.

Yet our Latin experts in the State Department might well have been demanding deployment of United States troops there — "in the interests of area stability" — had it not been for the fact that all of us can still taste the bitter hemlock of our recent misadventure in Vietnam.

There, also, we sought to intervene on behalf of one dictatorship against another dictatorship and ended up wasting 50,000 American lives.

In this worldwide power struggle, Russia is using Castro as a hit man.

Castro's Cuban troops go to Africa — to Angola and Ethiopia — while his "military advisers" go to a dozen other African nations.

Brown men are less suspect than white men to black men who have not yet learned that they are "red" men.

In Africa and Latin America especially, brown men are less suspect than white men, even though they are Communists who, once in power, rule utterly ruthlessly.

If it sounds noble for an American President to pronounce an American policy in favor of human rights and self-determination for all people everywhere... it's as impractical as hitching a wagon to a team of unbroken horses.

Inevitably, the result is a broken wagon and horses that are wilder than ever.

The nations of the world which have remained most stable and most solvent — and they may be as small and vulnerable as Switzerland — are those with no foreign policy beyond being a "good neighbor." And the prerequisite of being a good neighbor is to mind your own business.

American Heartland

By Anthony Harrigan

MT. PLEASANT, Iowa: This is a town that truly lives up to its name. Set in the gently rolling countryside of southeastern Iowa — some of the richest farmland in the world — Mt. Pleasant is a community with shady, tree-lined streets, handsome old Victorian houses in the steamboat Gothic style, an attractive college, and a comfortable economic base in farming and a variety of small industries.

At a time when American life is full of dislocations and discomforts — gasoline shortages, truckers' strikes, and perilous international economic problems, it is cheering to find communities that offer the good life. Iowa has many of these communities.

Iowa is part of the great American heartland — the region that produces a vast abundance of corn, wheat, soybeans, and meat products. Iowa, then, is very much at the center of American prosperity — our agricultural abundance, our nation's vast capacity in food production is its greatest strength at this time. No other nation on this planet can produce food on the scale of the United States. This asset will become increasingly important as the world's population moves toward the six billion mark in the 21st century.

The early settlers chose well when they settled here in the 1830s. Iowa contains one-half of the world's best soil. At this season, the land around Mt. Pleasant is a picture of abundance — green fields, tractors at work, acres of farm machines in sales lots outside the towns and the tall storage towers. Everything here is dominated by agriculture.

The early settlers also built well. Many of their homes, stores, and public buildings survive. The town's principal hotel began its existence as a home constructed by one of Abraham Lincoln's closest friends, the first president of Iowa Wesleyan College. The college, with its fine old buildings and efficient modern structures, continues to play a major role in the life of town and state.

It's unfortunate that Easterners don't have a better understanding of Iowa and other Midwestern states. They think this region uninteresting and rush to Europe or the Caribbean for vacations. However, there is great beauty in this farming region, and a miracle of productivity unequalled elsewhere in the world. So few people are to be seen in the fields, and white farmhouses and barns often appear deserted. They are marvels of economy and utility, however, as evidenced by the rich harvests.

Mt. Pleasant, one of the county seats of this region, is not only a comfortable place, but a community with traditions and culture. It is strong in its knowledge of itself, in its understanding of its identity.

Americans beyond this farming region ought to have greater appreciation of this heartland that sustains the entire nation. While the U.S. finds it necessary to import almost half its oil, it is wholly independent in food production — a colossal advantage. Food is a great national asset in international relations.

While the land is very rich, the soil alone isn't responsible for agricultural success. Ultimately, agripower is derived from the people, who plant crops, and from the economic and cultural system they have created.

In the current country music song about crude oil and food, there is a popular recognition of the importance of American agriculture. Long after OPEC's oil has ceased to be a major factor in world affairs, the food produced in America's heartland will be decisive in a crowded world.

"A table for two, please!"

Increases in city revenue will not match inflation

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff
Revenues, though increased, will not keep up with inflation. That is what City Manager Mack Wofford told Pampa City Commissioners at a budget study session Monday night. Wofford outlined the city's financial condition for the commission, which is helping him put together a new budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year.

"In general terms it appears we will have an increase in revenue of approximately $170,000 without changing our fee schedules and tax rates," Wofford said. The increase results from growth and inflation, he added.

Of the city's three significant revenue sources, two are primarily responsible for the $170,000 increase. Wofford noted. He projected an approximate nine percent increase in combined gross receipts and sales tax returns, from $1,024,800 in the current budget to $1,127,000 next year.

Wofford also estimated that ad valorem, or property, tax revenues will increase 7.5 percent next year, to $895,000 from the current figure of $867,000.

"These two areas are really the only ones of significant increase" and are tied to inflation, Wofford said. Some of the property tax increase results from new buildings and land annexed by the city, he noted; but most of the raise is brought about by property re-evaluations.

The city's third important revenue source, water sales, will show "very little" increase.

Wofford predicted. "Our water production is way off because of the rainfall we've had," he told the commission. "Not many people have been watering much, and certainly that has cut into our revenue."

Other revenue sources, such as licenses and permits, should show a slight increase, Wofford predicted. For example, a recent raise in the health card fee, from $3 to $15, should bring in an additional $6,500, he said.

Wofford predicted at least one source, court fines, will decrease due to the state's termination of Pampa's Selective Traffic Enforcement Program. Under the program, police officers work overtime spotting traffic violations.

Turning to expenditures, the city manager said a study of the consumer price index in relation to Pampa shows a cost-of-living increase of about 10.6 percent.

Comparing that figure to the estimated nine percent revenue increase, Wofford said, "I think it's evident that our sources of revenue are not escalating at the same rate as inflation."

The new budget should include expenditures for the city's annual street maintenance program and water line replacement, which Wofford said is about 50 percent complete. Equipment in several departments needs to be replaced, he said, which will mean thousands of dollars.

The city's involvement in the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority also will cost more next year, Wofford said. Pampa's share of CRMWA operation and maintenance costs will increase from $48,000 to $58,000, and variable chemical and pumping costs will go up from $115,000 to $140,000.

Wofford said the city's conversion to a container waste collection system should eliminate 16 jobs in the sanitation department, but he recommended hiring at least four more people for various departments.

"If we're to maintain our current level of services, I'm convinced there are some areas where we do need some more people," he said. But to pay for the new container equipment, he added, "we're going to have to hold our people down to a real minimum."

Wofford said it will cost $162,000 next year to implement the container system. The commission hopes to pay part of the equipment debt with money saved from labor cutbacks in the sanitation department.

Noting that cost-of-living salary hikes will be necessary for city employees, Wofford advocated a new system of raises based on merit and productivity, "rather than automatic across-the-board increases."

The city manager will meet again with commissioners at 7 p.m. Wednesday to discuss salaries and capital outlays in detail.

Scientists watching oil slick movement closely

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Preliminary toxicity tests taken from the oil slick approaching Texas waters are expected today, and scientists plan to test the currents to determine where the slick is headed.

An overflight Monday revealed the northernmost patch of oil was 90 to 100 miles south of Brownsville, he said. "That was two isolated ribbons and some sheen, but not what you would consider as a slick," said Coast Guard spokesman Richard Griggs.

Members of the federal-state tracking team will drop current probes, which release dye into the water, he said. By watching the dye, scientists can calculate speed and direction of the oil.

A team of scientists rode the Coast Guard cutter Point Baker into the Gulf Monday to take samples of some of the oil. The scientists, part of the Environmental Protection Agency response team, also dropped a buoy about 155 miles southeast of Brownsville. A satellite will monitor movement of the buoy to show which way the currents are running, Griggs said.

Meanwhile, two truckloads of oil containment equipment are headed for Texas from North Carolina, he said, adding that scientists will use the equipment offshore when it nears Texas waters.

The Coast Guard, which has been flying over parts of the Gulf in a C130 daily with special electronic surveillance equipment, spotted oil on a flight 180 to 240 miles south of Brownsville.

Griggs said from 110 to 180 miles south of Brownsville, the team observed "a lot of sheen, ribbons of oil, as well as some ribbons of oil a little bit farther north of that. But there was no significant amount of oil any farther north than we had expected."

JOSEPH FISCHER, a paroled convict who has told police he killed 21 people in the past year, will be quizzed by Oklahoma authorities about a woman who was found beaten to death in a closet.

Bailey finishes course

FORT KNOX, Ky. (AHTNC) — Cadet Rhonda L. Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bailey, 2319 Fir, recently completed six weeks of training in fundamental military skills at the Army ROTC basic camp at Fort Knox, Ky.

The basic camp is designed to give junior college graduates and college sophomores who have not taken ROTC courses the chance to enter the program. The camp also qualifies high school graduates for the ROTC program at any one of the nation's six military junior colleges.

During the encampment, cadets received training in basic rifle marksmanship, military drill and ceremonies, communications and individual and small unit tactics.

A 1978 graduate of Stinnett High School, Bailey is a student at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Problems stalling energy experiment

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — An experimental attempt to use gas derived from oil and coal to replace natural gas at a South Texas power plant has been stalled by technical problems.

A Central Power and Light project engineer said Monday the gasification process was shut down in June a few days after it began operation. Mike Shropshire said the $10 million project may be delayed until September while repairs are being made.

CP&L is testing the feasibility of making gas from low quality oil and coal. The resulting gas will be tried as a substitute for increasingly expensive and scarce natural gas at the La Palma power station here. The station's boiler has used natural gas since its opening in 1946.

Shropshire said the major problem was in the "cyclone," a mechanical process used to purify the gas derived from the thick oil and East Texas lignite.

The utility company paid $5 million for the construction of the experimental facility. Foster Wheeler Energy Corp., of New Jersey was granted a $5.7 million federal contract to handle the engineering.

Donations pour in for old woman

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — City officials want to know why destitute 91-year-old Mattie Schultz was forced to remain in jail overnight last week after being arrested for stealing $15 worth of food from a local supermarket.

Meanwhile, donations totaling nearly $2,000 have poured in from across the country after the case received national publicity.
 Mrs. Schultz, a widow who had been swindled out of her $5,000 life savings in 1973 and was living on about $200 per month in pensions, said she took the ham, sausages and butter July 24 because she was desperate and hungry.

She had qualified for a personal recognizance bond, but Night Magistrate Mary Elizabeth Ladd — often criticized for being too lenient on criminals — refused to release her and set a $400 bond Mrs. Schultz was unable to pay.

Mrs. Schultz was released from jail the next morning after being confined for about 24 hours on theft charges. She is now "resting comfortably" in a local hospital, where she was admitted last Friday from the exhaustion brought on by her sudden celebrity status.

The supermarket has dropped the misdemeanor charges, which carried a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.
 The investigation, requested by Mayor Lila Cockrell, began Monday.

Texans begin to recover from Claudette

HOUSTON (AP) — Damage appeared more extensive than first believed, but areas of Southeast Texas are beginning to recover from the floods that inundated that area last week. Gov. Bill Clements said after a helicopter tour Monday.

"The people have just shown enormous courage in the way they have responded," Clements said. Many families were drying their possessions outside, he said, and working to repair the damage.
 Clements said he will ask the federal government to add three counties — Hardin, Liberty and parts of Matagorda — to the list of disaster areas created by Tropical Storm Claudette last week.

President Carter earlier declared disaster areas in six metropolitan Houston counties: Harris, Galveston, Chambers, Brazoria, Jefferson and Orange.

Weather

Texas
 By The Associated Press
 Heavy thunderstorms pounded West Texas during the night and early morning hours. There was no damage reported but just before midnight Dalhart clocked winds of 59 miles per hour.
 Satellite and radar spotted very heavy rains from the storms, especially in the Plains east of Lubbock and in the Big Bend area. There also were reports of brief, local flash flooding.
 Some of the storms continued past dawn from the Panhandle eastward to Wichita Falls and Abilene.
 The rest of the state was generally fair, except for low clouds throughout East Texas.
 The state remained warm, with dawn readings in the middle and upper 70s. El Paso was still reporting 83 degrees about 6 a.m.
 In contrast Amarillo, under the cloud cover, reported 61 degrees just before sunrise.

National
 Two weeks after the first tornado in the history of Cheyenne, Wyo., struck, sirens sounded again — warning of twisters spawned by a weather system that battered communities from Montana south to Colorado with hail, rain, thunder and funnel clouds.
 Cheyenne again was threatened, but escaped serious damage this time.
 The National Weather Service said at least three tornadoes were reported on the north and west fringes of the city Monday afternoon.

SHOWERS ARE EXPECTED for Texas and from the upper Mississippi Valley to the Northeast in the forecast period lasting until Wednesday morning. The West will be mainly clear, and warm weather is expected for most areas.

Column aimed at teenagers

Finally, someone with the experience, know-how and concern for teenagers is writing a column strictly for and about teenagers.

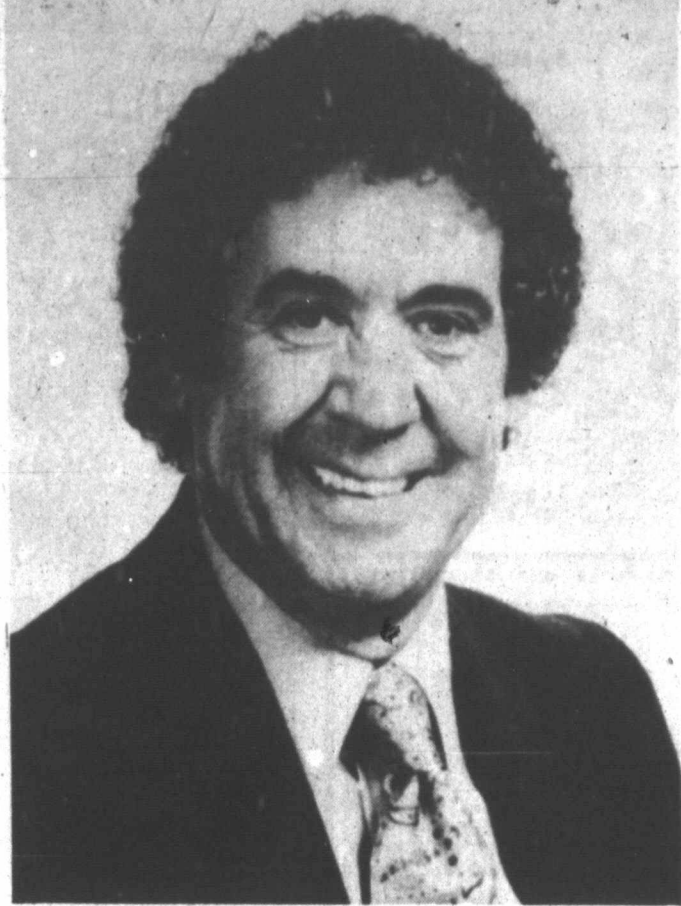

"Tween 12 and 20", written by Dr. Robert Wallace, high school administrator and college teacher, offers a direct, sincere approach when dealing with the concerns of teens.

The column will appear daily in the Pampa News beginning with today's issue.

While the column will deal exclusively with the desires, goals and needs of teens, everyone will enjoy the fresh, honest responses.

"Too many times communication between adult and teen results in one-way communication: adult to teenager," he says.

"Tween 12 and 20" will respond to teens, their problems, goals and needs. It will praise, scold, encourage, criticize and — above all — help the troubled teen.

Dr. Robert Wallace

TWEEN 12 AND 20

College gal should set curfew

By Robert Wallace, Ed.D.
Dr. Wallace: I'm an 18-year-old girl who is a college freshman but I live at home. I'm also engaged to be married in two years.

My problem is that my parents say I can only date my fiance on Friday and Saturday nights and that I must be home at midnight — no exceptions. If I'm late coming home, I'm grounded.

I'm a good student and a very level-headed and trustworthy daughter.

What do you think about my situation?
Dolly, San Mateo, Calif.

Dolly: I know many adults will argue with me, but I think you should be able to set your own curfew until such time that your grades are affected or you totally disrupt your family's lifestyle.

You are old enough to make this decision. Teens: Summer is here and you have just landed the job you wanted.

And naturally you'd like to put your best foot forward right from the start. If you're a little apprehensive about making a good first impression, you might profit from the following tips.

— Don't charge in as if you have your eye on the boss's job (even if you really do). Give yourself time to learn the job.

— Ask questions. Most people will appreciate your interest. Don't, however, be inquisitive about personal matters — whether someone is married, or if the mailgirl or boy is really a fox. You'll give the impression that you'd rather gossip than work.

— Dress appropriately. Watch that your wardrobe is in keeping with the appropriate style.

— Project a friendly attitude. When you first arrive, don't get on your soapbox for health food, religion, or whatever you feel strongly about.

— Prepare for the job. Learn as much about the company as you can. Take note of the routine and find out who's in charge.

If you show an interest in your company, your company is likely to show an interest in you. And that's the first step in getting ahead.

Send questions to Dr. Robert Wallace, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, Calif. 92112. For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair", send a large, 28-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Wallace at the above address.

More than $ 10 million aids orchestras

WASHINGTON (AP) A total of $10.8 million in grants to benefit symphony orchestras throughout the country has been announced by the National Endowment for the Arts.

The 121 grants are for the support of orchestras during the 1979-80 performance season. Livingston L. Biddle Jr., chairman of the endowment, says "the year's funding is an increase of $1.6 million over that awarded last year by the Music Program's orchestra category."

The hazel-eyed 17-year-old, sponsored by the Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau, will perform Aug. 18 during pageant activities in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Miss Roach, who has studied dance for several years, will be a senior this fall at Pampa High School. She plans to continue her education in the same area after high school graduation.

Her other interests include modeling, swimming, fishing and boating, as well as basketball, football, baseball and tennis.

Future ambitions include teaching in her own dance studio. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roach, 2700 Navajo.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

Silence can help in stormy marriage

By Louise Pierce
In the husband-wife relationship, silence can be either a joy or jeopardy. Not speaking to each other, after some petty quarrel, can drive you apart for days or weeks or forever, especially if you are among us older-weds. I've preached communication between spouses for years, as has every counselor I know. "Talk it out," we advise. And that is as true as ever, in most situations.

But I had a marvelous lesson in the value of silence, not long ago. My husband is a patient man, holding his temper remarkably well in situations that normally provoke frustration and fury and foaming at the mouth. Oh, he's railed at himself for missing puts on the golf course — and once he threw a club into a tree, where it stuck; he had to climb high to retrieve it, much to the enjoyment of his buddies. But he's gone slow on me, even when I did frightfully stupid things. However, I hadn't tried his patience in a long time — until last week.

As my placid spouse snored in his easy chair after dinner, I did some overdue cleaning. In moving a two-quart jar of juice, I dropped it (it was glass, of course — aren't they always?), and the bits scattered all over the kitchen linoleum, swimming in sticky goo that I prayed would engulf me and fly me away. I closed my eyes and it didn't happen. I opened them — and Otis was standing in the doorway, his face a study in consternation, his lips as tight as a sealed tomb and every bit as somber. We were expecting company the next day and I knew he had visions, as I did, of visitors in bare feet picking up glass and suing us for whatever we possessed for the rest of our lives. He asked, "Did you spill it all?" I didn't answer. I didn't need to. I was in fruit juice up to my shoe tops.

I berated myself bitterly and waited for him to join my indictment. But he turned and went back to his nap without another word, though his lips were still grim. I thought, he's gathering ammunition to shoot at me when I go in there, all about mouse-minded wives who prefer typewriters to housekeeping. He'll say his say the minute I join him. But when I sat down by him (after sopping, mopping, sweeping, vacuuming and bandaging two cut fingers), he was smiling. I said, "If you'd yelled at me, you could have alienated me forever." And he said, "I know. But what's a messy floor compared to an unsteady marriage?"

Sometimes, as in our case, silence itself is the best form of communication. Bereaved friends or relatives seldom want an hour's review of the deceased's life; they usually prefer the touch of your hands, the brush of your lips on their cheeks. A man fired from a job wants no queries about whether he or his boss was at fault; he wants only your handshake, your nearness that assures him you understand his feelings. And don't forget Lincoln's Gettysburg address which he called a failure because it received no applause. Only later did he learn, as have Americans since, that the awed silence was the greatest possible tribute.

Recent letters agreed with my calling some silences golden.

DEAR LOUISE: I had a bad temper as a child and nobody spanked me for it, which they should have. So I took it into marriage and screamed at G every time he made me mad. When he retired, he was home most of the time and offended me a dozen times a day. I ranted about it and he ranted back and we slept apart and geared up to scream again the next day. Then, at a party, I saw one of my friends bite her lips when her husband called her an idiot for something or other she did. He set his chin and waited for her to lay him out, but she didn't. And her silence calmed him down. So I've been trying to get G and me to stop fighting about our silly nothings. I haven't answered him back for a week. And I can't believe how much less often he's fussed at me. Last night we even watched a ballgame on TV and cheered for the same team. I thought it would never again be fun to live with him, but it's beginning to be wonderful. He hasn't said so but I think he feels the same way. He's gone back to kissing me hello and goodbye, which he hadn't done in 20 years. Tell the other retirees about us, will you?

G'S WIFE
DEAR G'S WIFE: I have. Thank you. Write your problem to Louise Pierce, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

New federal regulations give small savers a break

Small savers have been getting a "break" since July 1, according to Nancy Granovsky, a family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

Savings accounts now can pay one-fourth of a percent more, and high-interest certificates are easier to obtain — all because of new federal financial regulations.

PASSBOOK SAVINGS ACCOUNTS AT BANKS — Maximum rates on these now can be up to five and one-quarter percent.

PASSBOOK SAVINGS ACCOUNTS AT SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS — Rates

now can be up to five and one-half percent.

CERTIFICATES OF DEPOSIT — Both banks and savings and loan associations now can issue new four-year certificates that could earn up to 8.56 percent a year at a savings and loan association and 8.28 percent at a commercial bank.

INTEREST CERTIFICATES — Another change permits pooling.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago I lent my brother $1,000 because he was in a tight spot. (I was married at the time and so was he.) I didn't ask him to sign an IOU. Neither did I ask for interest on my money.

He promised to pay me back within a year, but never did. I would have been satisfied if he had paid me a few hundred dollars at a time just to show good faith, but he ignored the debt as if he never owed it. In the meantime he bought his wife a new car. Now they are buying a boat!

I called him up and reminded him that he should pay his honest debts before buying luxuries. He replied by saying if he had known I was that hard up he would have managed to repay me before this. I am not hard up and he knows it. I lost my cool and said, "It's not the money — in fact, you can skip it; it was worth $1,000 to me to find out how lacking in character you are!"

Now my brother claims he doesn't owe me anything because I let him off the hook by a remark I made in anger. Does he owe me or doesn't he?

BIG-HEARTED SISTER

DEAR SISTER: When you told him he could "skip it" you let him off the hook, verbally. But, morally, he still owes you.

DEAR ABBY: How about a repeat on undressing in the closet? My wife undresses in the closet and always has. When we make love, it's lights out and under a sheet.

POOR ME IN ESTHERVILLE

DEAR POOR: No. Try the beach.

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a New York man on vacation. He told me he had lost his wife three months before. (I've been a widow for four years.)

We had a lot in common and hit it off immediately. It was wonderful! For the next two weeks we spent all our time together. He asked me to marry him in about a year. I accepted.

After I arrived home (Chicago), he came to meet my married children. They adored him.

My problem: He also has married children, but doesn't want to tell them about me yet. He says it's "too soon". I don't mind waiting a year to be married, but I think the longer he waits to tell his children about me, the harder it will be.

I love him very much, Abby, and am willing to wait a full year, but his stalling about telling his children bothers me. What do you think?
SECOND TIME AROUND

DEAR SECOND: Don't be hurt. He knows his children better than you do. But suggest that if he holds off too long in telling them, they'll assume he's marrying a woman he knows only slightly.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Aug. 1, 1979

You'll have wonderful opportunities to achieve financial and material accumulation this coming year. However, you must pay special attention so that you're neither wasteful nor complacent.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might be banking too heavily on what you think is an ace-in-the-hole. If you don't take things more seriously, your ace could easily be trumped. How to get along with other signs is one of the sections you'll enjoy in your new Astro-Graph Letter that begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't believe everything you hear today. Someone with unscrupulous motives could be setting you up as his next pigeon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Investigate fully any undertaking requiring you to put your hard-earned money on the line. You're much too eager today to leap on anybody's bandwagon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Underplay your self-interests today. Go along with the will of the majority. Even if your ways are better, others won't appreciate any interference.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be on guard today. You're likely to commit a major oversight that will have to be rectified quickly, or a large headache will result.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have a tendency to look at things through rose-colored glasses today. It's wiser to let hard-earned experience guide your actions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If an agreement isn't all you were told it would be, don't hesitate to immediately renegotiate. If you don't stand to come out the loser.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is one of those days when you could jump into things without thinking, then skid around corners trying to make everything right again.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Only the sweat of your brow will accomplish necessary tasks today. You'll be disappointed if you depend upon pals to help you out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't turn a deaf ear to advice or suggestions made by others today. If you're willing to face some hard facts, things will work out fine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You had better take your work seriously and not depend upon a lick and a promise to get you by today. Otherwise, there'll be the dickens to pay.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your well-planned budget might just as well be a scrap of paper today. You'll ignore it completely in favor of your whims of the moment.

Oerter strikes blow for middle age at Festival

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — John Powell won the discus at National Sports Festival II, but Al Oerter continues to strike blows for anyone who ever spent a glum 40th birthday.

However, youth also had its day at the Festival Monday.

Tracee Talavera, a 4-foot-9 12-year-old who at 74 pounds weighs about 200 pounds less than Oerter, captured gold medals in the balance beam and uneven parallel bars after winning the all-around women's gymnastics title earlier.

"I thought I would do OK here, but not as well as I've been doing because I haven't worked on my routines that much," said Talavera.

Oerter, a veritable track and field fossil at 42, came out of retirement three years ago after not touching the discus for eight years. No matter that he had won four Olympic gold medals — his was a pipe dream, many said.

Since then, Oerter, who has two daughters in college, has thrown farther — over 219 feet — than he ever did in his 20s and 30s, and placed second to Powell Monday with a strong 211-8 heave.

Powell, who won with a toss of 214 feet, was himself retired before Oerter's success fueled his resolve to return. The 32-year-old former San Jose, Calif., policeman said

Oerter "should give everyone over 40 a little hope." As for himself, Powell said, "I know I won't be throwing when I'm 40."

Talavera was the instant darling of the over 7,300 persons who packed the Air Force Academy fieldhouse Monday night to watch the women's gymnastics. In the balance beam, she fashioned a near-perfect 9.8 performance, the same score she had in the preliminaries. She tied for first in the uneven bars with 17-year-old Susy Kellem of Costa Mesa, Calif. Both whirled to 9.8 judges' scores.

Jackie Cassello, 13, posted an evening-best 9.9 on her second vault to tie Christa Canary, 17, for the gold medal.

Cassello did not compete the rest of the evening, however, after jamming her foot on her medal-winning vault.

The 400-meter relay team of Florida State's Mike Roberson, Harvey Glance of Auburn, Bill Collins of Houston and Mel

Lattany of Georgia logged the best performance on the last day of the track competition.

The quartet blazed to a 38.30-second clocking, fastest time in the world this year.

Rangers acquire Rivers from NY

CHICAGO (AP) — Mickey Rivers' moodiness and propensity for lateness and missing team flights apparently led the New York Yankees to trade him to the Texas Rangers for three minor leaguers and another player to be named later, a team official says.

The official said Rivers was AWOL at least 10 times in the last 3½ years and that the team always covered for him. Even when the fleet center fielder showed up, the Yankees never knew if he was ready to play, the official added.

Rivers, often called the man who "makes things happen," for the two-time defending world champions, was traded to the Rangers Monday for outfielder-first baseman Gary Gray, outfielder Mike Hart, infielder Domingo Ramos and a player to be named later.

General Manager Cedric Tallis said the move was made to "make it easier for (Manager) Billy Martin.

"The trade is in the interest of trying to create an atmosphere of discipline," said Tallis. "The trade is a forward and constructive step."

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said, "Rivers was a great player for the Yankees, but I think it's time for him to go somewhere else. He might help the Rangers win the pennant. I hope so. I wish him luck.

"We're not writing off this season," Steinbrenner added. "We're not out of it yet — we'll make a run at them. But now the future looks bright for the Yankees."

Oliver unhappy with results of arrival

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Al Oliver, who will be replaced as the Texas center fielder as soon as the newly-acquired Mickey Rivers arrives, blasted the Rangers front office Monday, saying: "This trade disrupts the team regardless of how good Rivers can play."

Oliver, who has been told he must shift to left field after tonight's game, said: "I am tired of being moved around. This team had all winter to trade for a center fielder."

The Rangers put Oliver in center field to start the season after they traded Juan Beniquez to the New York Yankees. The Rangers got Rivers as an exchange for three minor leaguers and a player to be named later.

Oliver said if he is made the team's designated hitter, "I'm going to be that player to be named later. I'm not going to designate-hit for any team at the age of 32."

Oliver, his eyes flashing, held court in the Rangers clubhouse. He said, "There are a few people (in the Rangers front office) that I would like to jack around physically, but the fact is that that would get me put out of baseball."

Oliver asked, "Who's next?" then stormed into Manager Pat Corrales' office.

Ten minutes later, Oliver came out of the office saying, "Well, you're going to see me play my last major league game in center field tonight. Watch close. It's going to be the last time I'll ever play center field for this team."

He said he told Corrales, "I'm tired of the continuous shuffling. I'm tired of moving."

Oliver hurt his throwing hand diving for a fly ball six weeks ago and has spent time on the disabled list.

"Even with my throwing hand hurt, I still can throw the ball better than Rivers can," Oliver said.

Minnesota deals All-Pro end to Seattle

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — "Football is football. It doesn't surprise me at all," said veteran defensive end Carl Eller after learning the Minnesota Vikings had traded him to Seattle.

The Vikings traded Eller, 37, plus an undisclosed draft choice to the Seahawks Monday for defensive tackle Steve Niehaus, Vikings spokesman Jeff Diamond said.

Eller, a five-time All Pro during his 16-year National Football League career, says he will miss his teammates and miss being a Viking.

But Eller, who failed to show up when the Vikings opened training camp last Wednesday, said he's also happy to leave.

"It relieves me quite a bit," Eller said. "I did have problems with (Vikings General Manager) Mike Lynn and I knew having to play this year with those feelings was going to be very tough. My dealings with him have become a very big factor in everything."

Eller said he was happy to be going to Seattle because the Seahawks' coach is Jack Patera, a Vikings assistant from 1969 to 1975.

Cowboys reduce roster

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys reduced their roster to 76 Monday by trading two free agent rookies and releasing four others.

Al Pitts of Michigan State was traded to the Chicago Bears for an undisclosed draft choice, and wide receiver Mike Kirtman of San Jose State went to the Buffalo Bills also for an undisclosed draft pick.

Pitts was a sixth-round draft choice by Cleveland last year, but was released by the Browns.

Defensive back Ken Randle of Southern Cal, running back Adger Armstrong of Texas A&M, defensive lineman Mike Beal of Kansas and middle linebacker Paul Suhey of Penn State were placed on waivers.

Randle was drafted by Cleveland in 1977 as a wide receiver, but was cut and signed by Dallas last year. He was injured in training camp and spent last season on the injured reserve list.

NFL teams must shave their rosters to 60 by the first mandatory cutdown date Aug. 14.

The Cowboys resumed two-a-day workouts at their training camp at California Lutheran College here Monday.

The Cowboys return to Dallas Saturday night for their pre-season opener against the Denver Broncos.
