

AMBULANCE ATTENDANTS are shown transporting Michael Ray Martin, 22, of Pampa to Highland General Hospital Wednesday afternoon. Martin was found lying at the bottom of the basement steps at Jay's Lounge, 618 W. Foster, by a lounge employee at 2:10 p.m. Wednesday. He had received serious internal injuries. Police believe Martin accidentally fell down the stairs. He was last seen in the lounge between 11:00-11:30 p.m. Tuesday night. Martin was transferred from Highland to the intensive care unit at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where he was listed in critical condition this morning.

Two charged in IRA bombing

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Two members of the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army — one regarded as a time bomb expert — were charged today with the murder of Earl Mountbatten. They showed no emotion but waved to friends and relatives as they were led away to jail cells to be held for a special court hearing Oct. 2.

Police identified the suspects in the bombing that blew apart the 79-year-old war hero's fishing boat as Francis McGirl, 24, and Thomas McMahon, 31, and said they lived in counties in the Irish Republic adjoining the border with Northern Ireland.

McMahon, a married man with one child, is an upholsterer, but security sources said they regard him as an acknowledged expert on time bomb mechanisms. McGirl is an unmarried farmer. His uncle, John Joe McGirl, was at one time one of the top six men on the Provisionals' Council, its top policy-making body.

Neither man showed any reaction in the tiny courtroom as the charge was read out that "on Aug. 27, in Donegal Bay in Mullaghmore, County Sligo, they murdered Lord Louis Mountbatten contrary to public law."

The two were flanked by policemen, and the suspects' lawyers were present but said nothing during the 4 1/2-minute proceeding.

McGill sat expressionless, wearing a leather jacket and an open-necked shirt. Behind him was McMahon, who wore a parka-style jacket, also with an open-necked shirt.

As they were led by to the cells afterward, each waved to friends and relatives among a small band of spectators in the court.

The two were arrested several days ago, and before the announcement was made that they were being held for Mountbatten's murder they were scheduled to appear in court on charges of possessing explosives.

Instead they were ordered held for a hearing by a special court Oct. 2.

The two suspects arrived at the court in a police van escorted front and rear by army Land Rovers and with sirens blaring. The convoy was driven at high speed through the streets of Dublin and screeched to a halt in front of the court building.

Troops wearing flak jackets and carrying automatic weapons leaped from their vehicles and formed a guard in front of the courthouse as the police van was driven into an enclosed courtyard adjoining the building.

Civilians were barred from the immediate vicinity and everyone entering the court was closely searched. The court is in a side street in West Dublin and is used exclusively for anti-terrorist cases.

The Irish government already had offered a $225,000 reward for information leading to Mountbatten's killers.

McGill and McMahon were picked up Monday morning driving toward Dublin from the west of Ireland shortly before a powerful bomb ripped apart Mountbatten's 29-foot fishing boat in Donegal Bay, on the northwest coast. Police sources said the two men had traces of nitroglycerine and sea water in their clothing.

The bomb, which the Irish Republican Army said it set off, killed the 79-year-old World War II hero and three others. Several hours later and 95 miles to the east in Northern Ireland, 18 British soldiers were killed in a double bombing, the heaviest troop toll in a decade of violence in the British-controlled province.

Deputy Prime Minister George Colley announced after a special cabinet meeting Wednesday that the police believed they knew the identity of Mountbatten's killers but did not have enough information to bring charges.

"I have reasonably accurate information as to their whereabouts — it is in Ireland," Colley told reporters.

He refused to say whether McMahon and McGill were prime suspects.

David batters Caribbean

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Hurricane David regained its strength and lashed the Virgin Islands and the south coast of Puerto Rico with gale winds and torrential rains early today after battering two of the Windward Islands.

Ham radio operators reported heavy property damage on the islands of Dominica and Martinique, but there were no reports of casualties.

Moving west-northwest at 15 mph, the center of one of the most powerful hurricanes to hit the Caribbean this century passed about 80 miles south of St. Croix, the southernmost of the U.S. Virgin Islands, at daybreak.

In its 6 a.m. EDT advisory, the U.S. National Weather Service pinpointed the center or eye of the hurricane at 16.4 degrees north latitude and 65.2 degrees west longitude, or about 150 miles southeast of San Juan. It had been located about 220 miles southeast of San Juan in the midnight bulletin.

The Weather Service predicted it would be within 70 miles of Ponce, Puerto Rico's second largest city on the south-central coast, about noon and then would move on to Cabo Beata, the southernmost point of the Dominican Republic, by late afternoon. The storm is expected to stay on the same northwesterly track for the next 24 hours, the service said.

"When they pass the Dominican Republic, that's the point where they usually turn north toward Cuba or the United States," a member of the Weather Service staff said. "Some go straight west toward Mexico and some just die out, but this one doesn't look like it's going to die out."

With maximum winds back to 150 mph, David roared into the Caribbean between the Windward Islands of Dominica and Martinique on Wednesday. Regular communications channels were knocked out, but sketchy radio reports intercepted by ham radio operators said hundreds of houses were flattened on the two islands.

Louis Block, an amateur operator in Cleveland, said a ham operator transmitting from Roseau, the capital of Dominica, reported "houses all around him are flat — no phones, no electricity."

The broadcast said 200 to 300 houses in the immediate area had been destroyed, but no deaths or injuries had been reported yet, Block said.

David's top winds dropped Tuesday night to 140 mph but picked up again Wednesday, and the Weather Service said conditions were favorable for it to strengthen more.

Ambulance service to continue

BY DAN LACKEY
Of The Pampa News

Metropolitan Ambulance services to Pampa will continue "with no foreseeable changes" despite Metro's loss of the Amarillo market to an Oregon company, Pampa Metropolitan Manager Mark King said this morning.

The ambulance company, which has served Amarillo for 13 years, will discontinue service in that city as soon as Medical Services, Inc., a Eugene, Ore., firm opens its operations there.

The Amarillo City Commission voted Tuesday to award the ambulance franchise to Medical Services.

Metropolitan has six ambulance units in Amarillo, two in Canyon, and three in Pampa. Dismantling of the Amarillo operation has raised questions about whether Metropolitan ambulance, which began here in 1971, will be continued in Pampa.

But King said that the Pampa branch of Metro was "relatively self-sufficient" financially. He said the Amarillo operation's closing could mean some increased revenue for the Pampa units in outlying areas.

While the Amarillo outlet has reported collection problems stemming from a large number of indigent patients, King said the situation is not the same here.

"Pampa is growing. But Amarillo is a unique situation. Things are not on such a tremendous scale here. We can have better collection because our volume is smaller here," Pampa Metropolitan has reported a 60 to 65 percent collection rate locally.

King acknowledged, however, that the company might have to seek subsidy from the city and county in the future.

King noted that the ambulance service has been operating without a contract with Highland General Hospital since August.

Under contract between the hospital and ambulance company, the ambulance charge was included in the patient's hospital bill. The ambulance company then billed the hospital for 75 percent of the ambulance charge.

King said Medicaid discouragement of third party billing by hospitals may mean that "hospital contracts aren't going to be the answer."

Auto insurance rates rise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Insurance Board today ordered a statewide average increase of 8.9 percent in the price Texans pay for insuring their personal or family car.

New rates will take effect with policies written or renewed on Nov. 1.

Board Chairman William Daves Jr. blamed the increase on inflation in the cost of automobile repairs.

The board action will add an estimated $98 million over a 12-month period to the approximately $1 billion that Texans now pay for insuring their automobiles.

An individual driver's actual auto premium and the change in it resulting from the board order will vary widely according to his or her age, place of residence, and use he or she makes of an automobile.

The greatest increase imposed on the typical insured driver will be $39 in Liberty County, where the yearly premium will jump from $335 to $374.

Only one county, Taylor (Abilene), received a decrease.

Courthouse gets face-lift

Wheeler County at century mark

By JOHN PRICE
Of The Pampa News

WHEELER — This year marks the 100th anniversary of Wheeler County, and county employees are observing the occasion by giving the courthouse here a face-lift.

The entire three-story interior of the building is being repainted, and the once-stark ground floor hallway has been decorated with collages representing Wheeler County's colorful history.

The county's heritage — Indians, ranching, agriculture and oil and gas production — is symbolized on the courthouse walls by separate groupings of art and antiques. Modern Wheeler County is depicted by aerial photos of Wheeler and Shamrock.

The decorations are "kind of a mini-museum idea in commemoration of the centennial of the establishment of Wheeler County," said Betty Hennard, secretary to County Judge Wendell Morgan.

Indeed, the courthouse hallway now resembles a museum gallery. Credit for the new look goes to Linda Daltrey, county extension agent for home economics.

"It seemed natural to depict the history of Wheeler County," Mrs. Daltrey said. "After I decided on the theme, there was a concentrated search to find things to fit the theme."

The artwork displayed in the collages was obtained throughout the Panhandle. Mrs. Daltrey said, Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America donated "quite a few items" for the exhibits, she added.

"Almost everyone has been favorable about it," Mrs. Hennard said of the new decor. "We were going to paint anyway, and when we did it looked so bald! So we decided to decorate it."

"We've repainted all the rooms (on the ground floor). We still have the woodwork to go."

After they completed the ground floor, the painters moved up to the second story, which is still under the brush. Next comes the basement.

Along with a fresh coat of paint, the basement will also receive a new ceiling, according to Judge Morgan. Other long-term plans call for replacement of damaged sidewalks outside the courthouse, and renovation of the building's exterior, Morgan said.

Compared to Wheeler County itself, the present courthouse is a youngster. It was built in 1926, and is the third and most durable courthouse to have been erected. At the time the county originated 100 years ago, the county seal was in Mobeetie, not Wheeler.

So it is only fitting that the Old Mobeetie Association will be observing the county's birthday Monday, at the same time Mobeetie holds its annual Old Settler's Day. The Pioneer West Museum in Shamrock will also be conducting activities to commemorate Wheeler County's centennial anniversary.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Going to the dogs

Pampans are up in arms over the condition of the local animal shelter — and with good reason.

The conditions at the shelter are far from adequate — even to the point of being terribly inhumane — but no one has offered any real help in solving the problem.

Animals lovers spend hours on the phone calling and complaining to city officials who are responsible for the shelter, but none offer assistance.

If the people in Pampa are concerned with the well-being of these animals, then it is time they did something about it.

Several cities, some much smaller in population than Pampa, have formed Humane Societies to see to the needs of these unwanted or stray animals.

If the people who spend all the time complaining spent a little time in forming such a group — and helping the group in caring for these animals — there would be no problem.

It is obvious by the high turnover rate of animal control personnel that the city is unable to find a qualified person to fill this position, but someone in Pampa surely could and would do the job if they were approached about it.

A humane society funded by donations would help the animals imprisoned in the pound and would cut city taxes used to maintain the shelter.

It seems that the proper solution to the problem is for the people of Pampa to put a little work behind their mouths and get the problem solved.

Don't depend on government to come up with a solution to the problem. Frankly, dogs are the least of their problems. People doing the right thing to help those who can't help themselves is the only way to solve this or any problem.

Leisure activities

For those people who want to have some input on what goes on in Pampa, a perfect opportunity awaits.

Mayor Ray Thompson has formed a civic committee to look into leisure time activities in Pampa and how they can be improved. And the committee wants your ideas.

The committee, chaired by Vic Raymond, will look into what Pampa has in the form of leisure activities (there aren't many), and research other towns to see what they offer their residents. Then the committee will make proposals on what would benefit the community as a whole and formulate a plan on how to raise money for the activities.

That is where you come in. If you think you have a good idea, watch for a questionnaire that will run in the News. Fill this form out and mail it back. Or if you see a committee member on the street, stop him and talk about what's going on. We're sure they would be glad to talk with you.

Don't just sit there and let this opportunity pass you by. Either put forth your ideas — or quit complaining.

COMMENTARY

Jimmy's fantastic voyage

by don graff

There's no getting around it — Jimmy Carter has a real problem when it comes to upgrading his image as a leader.

As recent events graphically demonstrate.

Here we are racing up on Labor Day, and it seems like only last year that the president and those members of his immediate family with the highest public relations visibility boarded the Delta Queen to the toot of the calliope and the grumbling of a press corps initially preoccupied with its second-class accommodations.

Talk about fantastic voyages! This one covering a thousand meandering Mississippi miles between St. Paul and St. Louis was almost as extensively covered as the Apollo 11 moon mission. To what purpose is still something of a puzzle to landlubbers, who are legion compared to the few thousands actually aboard the Queen or in attendance at its frequent down-river stops.

The excursion was billed as part vacation and part road — pardon, river — trip for the administration's energy program. Undoubtedly the president is far from alone in finding appeal in the conservation of energy by alternately taking it easy aboard an elegant old anachronism such as the Delta Queen and expending some in jogging around the decks or along a pier.

But even taking note of the frequent homilies on the subject delivered to audiences down on the levees, the voyage as symbol had no discernible relevance to energy reality.

Even the White House PR wizards have to acknowledge that there are not many regular commuters between St. Paul and St. Louis. And even were every navigable stream in the country jammed with paddle-wheelers, it would do nothing for the millions sentenced to regular commuting on the dilapidated public transit and auto-jammed highways characteristic of most metropolitan areas.

So much for the Mississippi scene. Meanwhile back at various ranches, all hell has been breaking loose. Say Andrew Young and you've said enough.

True, the traveler did keep in touch by phone. But apparently the schedule made no provision for cutting the cruise short and returning to his desk, as many an ordinary vacationer has been known to do when the situation gets a bit sticky back at the office. Perhaps it would have required too much energy.

Mercifully it's all over at last. Maybe once settled in again in the Oval Office, a first vacationer refreshed from direct contact with some of the people who buckle down to the problems at hand — the comedy of diplomatic errors at the United Nations, for instance; the chaos in the Middle East; the sniping between blacks and Jews that threatens his own political future as well as the credibility of the nation's foreign policy. And, oh yes, energy.

Maybe. Back in July before the entire country, or that portion of it that chose to tune in, Carter pledged a new dedication to his responsibilities as the national leader. Facing us squarely, speaking firmly, he promised this as his personal contribution to extracting us from the malaise he has diagnosed as the national problem.

As a follow-up, his performance in August has not been too encouraging. Giving some of the country an intimate view of a vacationing president, sometimes stripped down and sweaty, is a homey touch. But it's not leadership.

There are a lot of people out here who see Jimmy Carter as capable and well-intentioned, an honorable individual who is in many respects a credit to his office and his country. They sincerely want to believe in him and to see him succeed as their leader.

But someone keeps making it difficult for them. Jimmy Carter.

Can we be liberated from the liberators

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

Those who have read this column before will recall my less-than-enthusiastic response to the self-styled "feminists." It's not that I am opposed to the idea of people developing a sense of awareness of how they have been living in conformity with the expectations of others: quite the contrary. I believe that people should do precisely that; that they come to understand how various institutions manage to get people to restrict the pursuit of their individual interests, and to control themselves in furtherance of institutional objectives.

While it is no doubt true that some of the early voices of so-called "women's liberation" undertook this approach, it is equally true that "feminism," today, has become little more than another "cause" for which people are expected to exhibit the same institutionally serving virtues of "sacrifice," "dedication," and "loyalty." I have known a number of truly "liberated" persons: people who are self-controlling, self-directed, self-responsible, and unwilling to conform to the expectations of others. I doubt very much that any of these people would find the "feminist" movement compatible with their personalities.

Like any cause, "feminism" is premised on changing other people. It is but another expression of Mark Twain's observation that "Nothing needs reforming so much as other people's habits." It assumes that "I cannot be free or happy so long as there is one person, anywhere, who thinks or acts differently from myself."

And how does one go about ensuring that the rest of humanity will conform to one's expectations? Initially, the effort consists of proselytizing; of trying to persuade others to see things your way. In a missionary spirit, "feminists" ran off in all directions at once to change the ideas, the language, the behavior of others. Nothing was spared. Everything from nursery rhymes to "girlie" magazines became the objects of Carrie Nation-style attacks. Even the English language had to undergo modification, as any word containing the letters "man" in succession had to be excoriated in favor of the more neutral "person." Jacobinism with a pen.

In time, of course, the "feminists" saw that others were not conforming to their expectations. Persuasion was not affecting a universal alteration of mankind (oops, "personkind"), and so the "feminists" followed the path taken by all other causes: get hold of the power of the State. Good heavens, if people who are opposed to the exercise of political power can form a Libertarian Party and seek to use political power to get rid of political power, why should we expect the advocates of "women's liberation" to be any less inconsistent?

Out came the political programs: an "Equal Rights Amendment" to emblazon the "catechism upon the Constitution; laws to prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex by anyone; laws to permit "liberated" women to abort their unborn children whenever it suits them to do so, and laws to force the taxpayer to pay the costs; and now, laws to prohibit "pornography."

It should come as no surprise that the "feminist" movement would embrace the cause of anti-pornography. Actually, every "cause" becomes puritanical: the Russian Revolution enforced a very rigid moral code upon the "liberated" pros; the newly-emerged Iranian government has been imposing very exacting standards of conduct upon those who were just "liberated" from the shah, and has recently passed a law prohibiting anyone from publishing anything deemed insulting to the religious leadership of Iran.

Susan Brownmiller (who has been described as a "feminist organizer," raising the question of why a "liberated" person would need to become "organized") advocates legislation to prohibit pornographic publications. In her view, "pornography represents hatred of women" and is designed "to humiliate, degrade and dehumanize the female body." Perhaps that is so, and while I have no attraction to or defense to make of pornography itself, there is a glaring inconsistency in the suggestion that women should free themselves from living in conformity with the expectations of a male-dominated culture and, at the same time, that we should all be compelled by force of law to live in conformity with the expectations of the "feminists."

What truly "liberated" person could accept this contradiction? What "liberated" person would want to institutionalize "liberation" to make their happiness and well-being dependent upon the political state and upon getting every last soul on the earth to live up to their expectations? What "liberated" person, in other words, would want to control others? And, more importantly, is it even appropriate to talk of being "liberated" until one has, himself or herself, managed to become "liberated" from the ideology, the rhetoric, the bromides, and the desire for power of one's "liberators"?

"Well, I guess we're into the dog days of summer, eh? Er, SORRY!"

"Hey, you in the dress! Come back here and say that again!"

So you're not going to have a baby...

by paul harvey

We have been teasing this young married couple of our acquaintance with variations on the question: "When are you going to have a family?"

However innocently intended, such an inquiry can be impertinent and, under some circumstances, cruel.

It came up again last Father's Day. "Maybe next year, Warren, you will be eligible."

He said, "not next year." And then he explained why not.

And I am going to be more careful with that subject henceforth.

Linda and Warren have been married five years. They have no children.

Warren has a better than average income — before deductions. Linda works as a secretary for a professional association until they can save enough money to repay his educational loan and to pay for the house they are buying.

How long it will be before Linda can quit work and have a baby — she wants her baby to have a full-time mother — depends on things like obligations, interest rates and inflation.

Then there crosses my news desk some reference to a welfare family buying a newly renovated house for negligible monthly payments, ignoring any obligation to repay an educational grant, eating off somebody else's table through food stamps and receiving extra money every time they have another baby.

And Linda and Warren cannot afford to have a baby because they have to help pay for all these other peoples' babies.

Obviously, somehow our value judgement got turned upside down.

Who's to speak for these "poor people?"

"We are supporting a welfare family," says Warren. "we cannot afford one of our own."

From time to time somebody suggests controlled breeding of the human population. When that somebody is merely

Be prepared for Customs

If you're a tourist on a charter flight direct from Mexico City to Memphis don't try to bring back a bottle of tequila.

Your friendly U.S. Customs Service will confiscate it. Not because it's against federal law but because it's against Tennessee law to import liquor for personal use without paying a tax or getting a permit.

Same thing's true if you try to haul a bottle of cognac from Paris to Atlanta, or a jug of Irish whiskey from Dublin to Boston.

Eleven states — Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, North Dakota, Tennessee, Utah — bar direct imports of the quart of liquor you're allowed to bring home with you. The Customs Service enforces state laws in those states.

That doesn't mean that if you go through Customs in Miami, you can't bring your tequila back to Memphis. No one will stop you once you've cleared Customs. But for direct flights — as charters often are — you've got to watch it.

This is one of dozens of quirks in laws and rules the Customs Service wants you to know about in advance. Everyone who comes in must clear Customs.

Last year that amounted to 273 million people, more than half of them U.S. citizens. It seems an incredible figure — until you recall that it includes millions shuffling across the Mexican and Canadian borders repeatedly. In all, Customs' 14,000 employees last year processed 81 million people-laden cars, trucks and buses, 441,450 planes and 211,400 ships. They collected more than $7.5 billion in duties and taxes on $176 billion worth of merchandise.

Charles Warren and Michael N. Ingrisano Jr. are less concerned about those boxcar numbers than about your thinking before you leave the country about what you'll bring back. They're public affairs officers for Customs Commissioner Robert E. Chasen and it's their job to alert you ahead of time, and field your complaints about the 4,000 inspectors who probe your baggage.

Some things you ought to know before leaving the country:

— Since Jan. 1, 1976, GSP has been in a sensationalist author seeking to sell books or a racist seeking to equate intellect with color, or somebody trying to found a new school of psychological theory the suggestion gets little or no serious consideration.

Thus we go on breeding our race horses, our livestock, even our pet dogs with utmost care, while allowing the human race to re-betget itself utterly indiscriminately.

Today an educational psychologist at Bowling Green State University — Dr. Jerry Bergman, a father of two — says he is not promoting it, but he is overhearing with increasing frequency among teachers and psychologists and school administrators the idea that eventually the government is going to have to assume responsibility for the human breeding process.

As we now need a birth certificate at birth, a death certificate at death, a license for driving and a permit for building, eventually we will need a license from the government to have children.

Parents will have to have an IQ of 80 or above. And earn more than $8,000 a year. And have no serious emotional problems. And they will have to know how to care for a baby.

As is, Dr. Bergman says, there is nothing the government can do to prevent the mentally retarded from having as many children as they want. Or those with high intelligence and high incomes but with severe behavior problems.

He believes that unless an overcrowded world is to starve it will have to produce only those babies most likely to become productive.

Clements: Nothing to be gained from lawsuit

New depression could push oil away from coast

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A new tropical depression drifting toward the Texas Gulf coast could reverse the flow of runaway Mexican oil with the southerly swirl of its circulating winds. Air Force reconnaissance flights and satellite pictures detected a tropical depression 475 miles east of Brownsville early today, moving west at 10 mph.

National Weather Service forecasters said the depression, which could reach Texas by Friday, may strengthen into a tropical storm sometime today.

Coast Guard officials have been apprehensive about the impact on fragile coastal breeding grounds by oil splashed over protective barriers by gale-force winds.

But ironically, Coast Guard spokesman Jim McGranachan said Wednesday night that scientists predicted the storm could generate winds that would drive portions of the world's largest oil spill back toward Mexico.

"It is way too early to tell," cautioned McGranachan, who said the National Hurricane Center in Miami was monitoring the depression's advance.

The storm comes on the heels of another tropical depression that fizzled out over northern Mexico Wednesday.

Winds from that depression, which forecasters also feared could become tropical storm Elena, buffeted floating barriers protecting the southerly entrances to the fertile and fragile Laguna Madre.

Tar balls apparently swept over the booms in the storm-churned seas washed ashore on Long Island. But scientist said Wednesday they found no significant environmental damage to the extremely sensitive salt marshes along the island in the Laguna Madre.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements, who has infuriated coastal residents with what they feel is a soft stand on the spill, toured the stained beaches Wednesday and said, "We have a bad situation."

Surveillance flights Wednesday night identified widely-scattered sheen patches extending 300 miles out into the Gulf off Corpus Christi.

Light coverings of oil washed ashore on Mustang Island, areas of Padre Island and on the southern end of San Jose Island. Light areas of sheen also were reported in the sand bays from Aransas Pass north to Cedar Bayou.

However, officials reported Wednesday that a huge offshore slick that had been drifting on a collision path with South Texas beaches appeared to be beaching itself in Mexico.

Floating booms were deployed west of Pass Cavallo Wednesday where scientist have been conducting current studies.

Other scientists have begun sampling biological stations in Corpus Christi Bay and the Laguna Madre to run additional tests on the toxicity of the oil to commercially important marine species that breed in the inland waterways.

Clements, a Republican, founded the Dallas firm that leased drilling equipment for the crippled Mexican offshore well causing the spill. He has steadily refused to support the idea of a damage suit against the Mexican government.

"Nothing is to be gained by beating your breast and making loud noises about suing Mexico. We should look upon a lawsuit as an absolute last resort. Any talk about a lawsuit at this time will only inflame the situation," Clements said Wednesday.

Clements irritated coastal residents three weeks ago when he toured the then-closed tourist beaches and dismissed it as "much to do about nothing." A few days later, he called it a "Chicken Little situation."

Both times, he warned it could become worse, but coastal residents suffering economic damage from the spill remembered only the two controversial terms.

Shortly after the governor made those statements, almost all of the 130 miles of Padre Island beaches were fouled by the oil, dealing a harsh blow to the multimillion-dollar tourist industries on both ends of the island.

Although the government task force has intensified beach cleanup efforts, local officials told Clements Wednesday that tourism is down more than 50 percent and promises to be worse for the traditionally busy Labor Day weekend.

He defended his "much to do about nothing" statement, telling local officials he was attempting at that time to show there was no reason for tourists to stay away from the beaches. "I hope I helped some," he said.

Clements also repeated that he has no conflict of interest because of his connection with the drilling company now run by his son. He angrily told a network television reporter who asked the question, "I consider it derogatory and impertinent for you to suggest that."

Democratic Attorney General Mark White has blasted the Mexican government's refusal to accept liability for damage caused by the spill.

McCrory to take stand next

FBI photographer testifies at Davis trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An FBI photographer has testified he hid behind mirrored glass in the surveillance van while taking pictures of a meeting between Fort Worth industrialist Cullen Davis and informant David McCrory last summer.

George Ridgley told jurors Wednesday that photos were shot through reflective windows in the van that sat less than 100 feet from where Davis and McCrory discussed mass murder.

Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes planned to continue cross-examination of Ridgley today, and prosecutors indicated they would call their star witness, McCrory, to the stand next.

McCrory had been expected to testify Wednesday, but in a last minute change of plans, Assistant District Attorney Jack Strickland called on Ridgley.

The former photographer, now an accountant who has applied to be an FBI agent, told jurors he hid in a borrowed Fort Worth Police Department van on Aug. 18, 1978 while snapping pictures of the first secretly recorded meeting between Davis and McCrory.

Ridgley also was on the FBI team that monitored the pivotal Aug. 20 meeting that led to Davis' arrest.

Prosecutor John Bankston introduced the 35 millimeter black and white photos of Davis and McCrory to the jury through Ridgley.

The Aug. 18 pictures showed Davis getting out of his Cadillac and joining McCrory in a Ford. The Aug. 20 photos showed Davis and McCrory emerging from Davis' car and going through the trunk of the Cadillac.

Prosecutors now seem on the verge of introducing the video and audio tapes that lie at the heart of their murder-for-hire case against the 45-year-old millionaire. Yellow foam headsets and elaborate speaker and video viewing systems have been set up in the courtroom for more than a week.

Davis is charged with soliciting the murder of State District Judge Joe Eidson, the jurist presiding over the drawn-out Davis divorce trial.

The 61-year-old judge played a part in the three-day federal operation, posing in ketchup-stained T-shirt in the trunk of a car while Ridgley took four Polaroid snapshots.

In anticipation of McCrory's appearance, the courtroom has been packed with spectators since Monday.

The 41-year-old, heavy-set informant has been living in another city with a new identity under the federal Witness Protection Program since January.

That month, a Houston jury failed to reach a verdict in the state's first attempt to convict Davis on the murder conspiracy charges. Jurors deadlocked 8-4 for conviction and a mistrial was declared.

McCrory claims Davis ordered him to negotiate the deaths of Eidson and others on an alleged enemies list. McCrory told his story to the FBI agents, who wired him with body recorders to capture the incriminating conversations with Davis on tape.

Davis, however, says he was the target of a sophisticated set-up arranged by McCrory, Davis' ex-wife, Priscilla, and former Fort Worth karate instructor Pat Burleson.

PUC 'doing its best' to avoid rate increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The chief counsel of the Public Utility Commission says PUC staffers are "doing our best" to avoid a $1.55 increase in Texans' monthly telephone bills.

The PUC staff has recommended that the commission give Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. rate increases that would raise Bell revenues by $137.7 million a year.

Bell requested a $145.2 million increase, with two-thirds coming from a $1.55 per month across-the-board hike in residential and business telephone bills.

Hearings on the Bell request start next Tuesday, with the staff, consumer groups and the Texas Municipal League taking on the role of adversaries to the telephone company.

The commission gave the staff until the hearing to recommend where the additional revenue for the telephone company should come from.

"That's the hardest part of the case," said PUC general counsel John Bell. "We are leaving no stone unturned."

Bell said Wednesday the staff would recommend increasing basic residential and business rates "only if there is no place to put it. We are looking at just about everything."

Alternatives, he said, include higher charges for PBX, private lines, pay telephones and various services Bell performs in competition with other businesses in the telephone field.

Town prays for paralyzed girl

CELINA, Texas (AP) — Cindy Morris is 17 today, and residents of this North Central Texas farming community will mark the event with an all-night prayer vigil at the Baptist church.

Cindy — who was finally a high school cheerleader after three years of trying to make the squad — tried to demonstrate a difficult flipping stunt on Aug. 20 from the shoulders of another cheerleader.

The attempt ended in disaster. She landed on her neck, breaking three vertebrae. She is in critical condition at Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas.

Doctors say she probably will never walk or move her hands again.

"There's no blame," said her father, Perry Morris, who serves as superintendent of Celina schools. "She was on the other girl's shoulder, who was her best friend, doing the flip off. She just didn't flip."

"Cindy got robbed," her father said. "Robbed, hell. What hurts as much as anything is that she won't be able to do the things she looked forward to doing."

The paralyzed girl also is fighting pneumonia and is unable to breathe without the aid of a machine.

Celina residents have reacted like those in small towns often do. Prayer meetings and fund-raising efforts were inaugurated.

Last Wednesday, 125 townspeople linked arms around the town square and prayed for their neighbor.

The First State Bank of Celina has collected $900 to help with the medical bills. Banks in Leonard and Sherman are in the process of starting similar funds.

Each night, 40 to 50 Celina residents arrive at Presbyterian to help the family. Cindy's mother, Verna, sleeps on a waiting room couch when she is not at her daughter's side.

Her father said, "Her main questions are whether she's going to die or whether she's going to walk again. We tell her it's a matter of time."

'Me Generation' at root of food stamp woes?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The federal director of the food stamp program traces its political problems to the "Me Generation" and right-wing critics who stir up welfare myths.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Foreman told state and local food stamp administrators Wednesday it is "good business" to support the program.

Ms. Foreman said for every billion dollars that Congress cuts back the program American farmers would lose $140 million.

Texas gets $410 million a year in food stamp benefits, she told a Southwest regional conference. "And I don't think the food industry wants to lose any part" of that money.

"The food stamp program frees up funds for housing, clothing and all of the other needs that a family may have," Ms. Foreman said.

She said, however, she spends much of her time dispelling food stamp myths.

especially, and some plain old conservative editorial pages continue to harp on the myth that the food stamp program is full of fraud and abuse and welfare queens in Cadillacs and other assorted bums," she said.

Also, she said, "It's hard to get people excited about government action in the midst of the 'Me Generation.'"

Morris earns PD promotion

Charles L. Morris, a nine-year veteran of the Pampa Police Department, was recently promoted to the rank of lieutenant.

Morris, 32, had been a patrol sergeant since July 1975. Last month he moved into the department's service division as supervisor.

As head of the service division, Morris supervises police dispatchers, record clerks, traffic control officers and animal control wardens. His duties include conducting background investigations of applicants for police positions, internal affairs investigations and crime prevention programs. He also serves as the department's liaison officer with the news media and the public.

A native of central California, Morris joined the police department in October 1970. He has attended several police schools, and will receive his advanced certificate in October.

TELEVISION

Times reporter hired for nightly news

NEW YORK (AP) — Charlayne Hunter-Gault recalls the day she was hired as a correspondent for "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report," public TV's nightly news and analysis program.

"Al Vecchione, the producer, was very pointed in commenting to me," she says, now two years later, "that I was being brought in not as a black woman who knew a lot about civil rights and teen-age unemployment, but as a journalist and a substitute for Robin and Jim."

"I'm consulted on stories like that," she says, "but there's never been a situation that I was given a story only because of my special interest in the subject."

"Some people have asked me why I didn't do a particular story, like the time Robin and Jim interviewed (John) Vorster, the president of South Africa. They asked me, 'Wouldn't it have been poignant.'"

"Well, I'm not here for poignancy."

Ms. Hunter-Gault had been eight years at the New York Times, covering the urban black community, and she liked Vecchione's description of the new job.

"It required that I become more of a generalist," she says, "that I expand my own horizons, my own basic knowledge of the world."

"And that was part of the challenge," the 37-year-old correspondent says, "to develop a greater interest in economics and foreign affairs and energy and so on."

"And I could do that while maintaining my own interest in things I felt were important, like civil rights, not only because I felt they were important, but because the media tends to go with what is fashionable at the time.

"It was civil rights in the mid-'60s, then the Vietnam war, now nuclear power, and we tend to give less coverage to the others. My background would have me insist that we continue to cover the subjects I feel important."

Ms. Hunter-Gault was born in South Carolina, the daughter of an Army chaplain. She attended Wayne State University in Detroit for a year and a half, then became one of the first two black students to enter the University of Georgia. She was graduated in 1963 with a degree in journalism.

She worked for The New Yorker magazine, and spent a year as co-anchor for the local evening news on WRC-TV, NBC's affiliate in Washington. She joined the Times in 1969. Her background includes a year as a Russell Sage Fellow at Washington University, and 15 months — on leave from the Times — as co-director of the Michele Clark Fellowship Program for Minority Journalists at Columbia University.

Consumers given some relief

August brought a little bit of relief at the supermarket meat counter, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which showed widespread pre-Labor Day sales on barbecue favorites like frankfurters.

The lower prices for meats were about the only bright spot in the grocery picture. The overall marketbasket bill went up again last month by nearly 1 percent, as coffee prices took another big jump.

The AP drew up a random list of food and nonfood items and checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1979. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. The original list included 15 items, but chocolate chip cookies were dropped when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The latest survey, just before the start of the holiday weekend, showed that the marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in eight cities, rising an average of 3.4 percent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in five cities, down an average of 3.1 percent. On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill at the checklist store was nine-tenths of a percent higher at the end of August than it was at the beginning.

The encouraging news for consumers this month was that several cuts of meat were cheaper. Prices for livestock — cattle and hogs — declined some time ago, but the decreases were not widely reflected at the retail level until now.

The AP survey showed that the price of a pound of frankfurters declined at the checklist store in eight cities last month. As of the end of August, the average price for the frankfurters checked by the AP was $1.64 a pound. That was the cheapest average recorded since Jan. 1, when hot dogs were selling for $1.60 a pound.

There also were scattered declines in the price of chopped chuck — down at the checklist store in five cities — and pork chops — down at the checklist store in six cities.

Coffee prices continued to climb. Prices for green beans have been rising every since spring when bad weather in Brazil dashed hopes of a surplus. By the end of the month, the average price for a pound of coffee at the checklist stores was $3.24, up from $3.03 on Aug. 1.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease. The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, N.Y., Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

FOREIGN BRIEFS

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Fire badly damaged Austria's national bank building today, but officials said the government's gold and monetary reserves were safe.

Fire chief Karl Abulez told reporters he hoped that the two lower floors of the building could be saved. The three upper floors of the five-story building were practically lost.

The fire broke out on the third floor.

Some witnesses said they heard a small explosion, but officials said they believed the fire was caused by welding work done in an elevator shaft Wednesday night.

LONDON (AP) — Short-wave radio transmissions from the Israeli Embassy were the cause of a radiation scare in the fire station next door, a team of scientists concluded.

Kenington Fire Station, adjoining the heavily guarded Israeli Embassy, was closed Wednesday to allow scientists from the Greater London Council and the National Radiological Protection Board to conduct tests.

"The conclusion of the scientists is that the radio transmitter is the cause," said Matt Gaines, a spokesman for the team.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is trying to keep Beneficial Corp. of Wilmington, Del., the fourth largest independent loan company in the country, from taking over two smaller finance companies.

Two related suits filed Wednesday in Chicago by the Justice Department seek to block Beneficial from acquiring Capital Financial Services Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, the nation's 21st largest loan company, and Southwestern Investment Co. of Amarillo, Texas, the 24th largest. The government said the acquisitions "could substantially lessen competition in making direct cash loans."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration does not want to sell weapons to the new revolutionary government in Nicaragua and hopes any request along those lines will be limited to such items as trucks, jeeps and medical supplies, according to sources.

The administration sources, who asked not to be named, said Wednesday the government is reluctant to sell arms to Nicaragua because it feels that after two years of civil war, there are enough weapons already there to equip any reasonably sized army and because an arms sale would be likely to generate adverse reaction in Congress and elsewhere in Central America.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokeswoman for Lederle Laboratories says a mislabeled medicine bottle — one containing a cancer treatment rather than a glaucoma treatment — appears to have been an isolated incident.

The New Jersey firm started a recall of 8,181 bottles of the glaucoma drug Neptazane Aug. 16 after a Pennsylvania pharmacist reported finding the cancer drug Methotrexate in one bottle supposedly containing the glaucoma treatment. Lederle spokeswoman Dorothy Peterson said Wednesday that all but about 400 of the 8,181 bottles involved in the recall have been returned and that none of those returned thus far was mislabeled.

Israeli Embassy officials said that apart from an X-ray machine for inspecting incoming mail, they have nothing that could emit radiation. But there is a powerful short-wave radio transmitter used to maintain communications with Jerusalem.

— RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Brazilian political prisoners have begun leaving jail under a new amnesty.

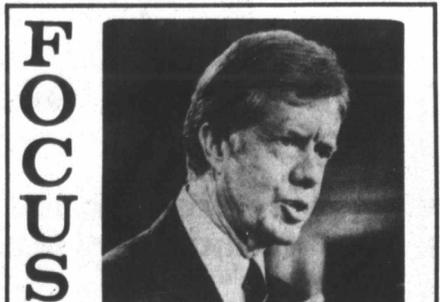

The amnesty was published Wednesday, a day after President Joao Figueiredo signed it.

Brazil has been under a military dictatorship since a 1964 coup, and harsh repression of the left during the late 1960s and early 1970s led to the imprisonment or exile of thousands of Brazilians.

Government sources estimated some 5,000 political prisoners and exiles will benefit from the amnesty, drawn up by Figueiredo as part of his pledge to return the country to democracy.

— OTTAWA (AP) — The annual number of murders in Canada has almost doubled in the last decade, but there was a slight drop last year, the government statistics agency reported.

The agency, Statistics Canada, said there were 315 murders in 1968, compared to 624 in 1977, but that the figure dropped to 590 in 1978.

A Wider Appeal

Presidents sometimes win important votes in Congress by getting out of Washington, D.C. Today President Carter is scheduled to discuss his plans for creating new sources of energy with students and faculty at the Georgia Institute of Technology, where he once studied. Like other chief executives, Mr. Carter has often campaigned for public support to persuade Congress to vote for his proposals. Last week, he promoted his energy program while riding a steamboat down the Mississippi River. When congressional committees begin to meet again next week, the president will learn whether this trip to his home state increased his chances for getting his energy proposals passed.

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Oil from the damaged well in the Gulf of Mexico reached Texas first.

Rabbit story remains mystery

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are fish stories and then there are rabbit stories. This is a rabbit story.

It also is a president story, which is why there isn't any puzzled picture of the rabbit. Or the president. More on that later.

It seems that President Carter, fishing near his home in Plains, Ga., last spring, was attacked by a swimming, hissing rabbit, which made for his canoe.

He beat the beast back with a canoe paddle.

Carter was unharmed. There was no word on the fate of the rabbit.

The rabbit, which the president later guessed was fleeing in panic from a predator, actually swam toward the canoe from which Carter was fishing in a pond.

It was hissing, teeth bared and nostrils flared, as it headed straight for the president. Carter drove it off with the paddle.

But when Carter told the tale of the aquatic attack rabbit, some of his closest aides scoffed. "Everybody knows rabbits don't swim," said one former skeptic.

The president had proof. A White House photographer had made photographs of the president fishing and fending off the bunny last April 20.

Carter ordered a print of the photograph to show the doubters. Even that didn't convince them at first.

"You could see him in the canoe with his paddle raised, and you could see something in the water," said the doubter. "But you couldn't tell what it was. It could have been anything."

So the president ordered an enlargement of the photo. "It was a rabbit, all right," said the staff member, after looking at the enlarged photo.

Another aide agreed. "It was a kill-rabbit," this aide said. "The president was swinging for his life."

The White House has refused to release the photograph. "There are just certain stories about the president that must forever remain shrouded in mystery," said deputy press secretary Rex Granum.

Rabbits aren't the only animal troubling the president. Mice have reappeared inside the White House after a protracted bureaucratic hassle that eventually reduced the population significantly earlier in Carter's term. There even have been reported sightings of rats recently in the executive mansion.

Homeowners have interest in suit

Warriner

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Millions of homeowners across the nation have a stake in a court suit here challenging the right of lending institutions to collect escrow funds without paying interest.

If the eastern Virginia homeowners who filed the suit win it and survive subsequent appeals, a strong legal precedent could be established as it would be the first major decision in a federal court. It also would involve hundreds of millions of dollars.

Most lenders, in a practice that began in the 1930s, require monthly payments for taxes and insurance from people who take out mortgage loans, besides payments to reduce the principal of the loan.

Seldom is the borrower given the option of paying the tax and insurance bills on his own. Instead, the lender holds the money in escrow, invests it and earns interest between tax payments.

Lenders insist they have a right to protect the security of their loans. Without such payments, they say, many borrowers would default on their taxes — and a tax lien would be slapped on the property.

But while the banks and savings and loan associations earn investment income from escrow funds, they rarely pay interest to the borrower. And some say the income barely covers the costs of administering the funds.

Since 1972, however, at least 10 states have responded to court pressure by requiring lending institutions to pay interest or make other concessions on escrow funds.

Most federal cases involving escrow funds have been settled out of court, usually with the homeowner gaining the right to earn minimal interest or to pay their own taxes and insurance.

The Virginia case, filed almost two years ago by 14 mortgage holders in the Norfolk-Virginia Beach area, names 38 lending institutions as defendants.

As described by one lawyer, it has become "a paper war" with thousands of pages of motions, counter-motions, depositions and interrogatories.

A motion by the defendants to dismiss the case awaits a ruling by

U.S. District Court Judge D. Dortch Warriner.

The homeowners charge a violation of numerous federal laws through a conspiracy by the defendants to make escrow payments a condition of a loan.

They maintain also that the failure to pay interest on this money actually inflates the stated rate of interest on the loan.

One lawyer said Warriner has a wide range of alternatives if he decides in favor of the plaintiffs.

He could order the lending institutions to stop making escrow payments a condition of a loan, or to pay interest on escrow funds voluntarily paid, or both.

Lawyers and the plaintiffs were reluctant to comment on the case while it is still before the court.

Taylor Cousins of Richmond, a real estate man and member of the board of the Consumer Congress of Virginia, said that while his group has no official position he personally feels borrowers should be given an option.

"It is obvious these lending institutions are getting free use of people's money. If they can give away dishes or luggage to attract business, why can't they use escrow interest as a competitive tool?"

Robert Miller, a Richmond homeowner, said his escrow payments total over $1,000 a year.

"I'm perfectly capable of paying my own taxes and insurance and I would have more money to do it with if I could earn interest on what the bank takes from me every month," he said.

But lenders say they should receive the payments for protection, and that not many homeowners feel the way Miller does.

"Most borrowers like the idea of taking care of their loan, taxes and insurance all in one payment," said Edward Brooks of Richmond, president of Security-Federal and vice president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

John B. Cutter, president of Citizens Savings & Loan, said the escrow practice saves the customer from having to pay a whopping tax and insurance bill at the end of the year.

Farmers may seek additional land to grow crops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless there are some remarkable breakthroughs in plant breeding or how wheat is grown, American farmers might be seeking, within 20 years, additional land on which to produce enough of the grain to meet world demands.

One problem, according to a new Agriculture Department report, is that huge gains in U.S. wheat production during the past 30 years may be leveling off.

The situation is not confined to the United States. Wheat production in other leading areas also has more than doubled since 1950, and that rate of gain, too, appears to be winding down, the Agriculture Department report said.

"Projected increases in world population and wheat demand suggest that world consumption could double in 20 to 25 years," it said. "Although some new technological breakthrough could result in higher yields, much of the increase in U.S. wheat production necessary to meet world demand will depend on added acres."

Nearly all the nation's best cropland is already being used. Thus, some farmers — if the report is correct — may have to switch from other crops to meet the growing demand for wheat over the next two decades.

The report, issued Wednesday by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service, was by Walter G. Heid Jr., an employee of the agency at the U.S. Grain Marketing Research Center in Manhattan, Kan.

"The wheat industry faces a relatively stable domestic demand and a growing, but highly unstable export market," the report said. "It also faces a growing worldwide population with unprecedented demands."

If the global population doubles in the last 25 years of this century, the demand for wheat as a food item "will greatly increase" from current levels, it said.

Put another way, the analysis said that if the population forecasts are borne out, "the world's farmers will need to produce as much additional food in this 25-year period as they were able to produce in 1975 with all the techniques learned from the beginning of time."

Average U.S. wheat yields remained nearly constant until the 1930s but have more than doubled since then. The average yield exceeded 20 bushels per harvested acre for the first time in 1956, and 30 bushels in 1969.

But the upward trend of larger yields has moderated in recent years, and "some evidence suggests yield levels have reached a plateau, although it is too soon to speculate that a new trend is emerging," the report said.

Several reasons were cited, including:

- Technological benefits of commercial fertilizers have nearly reached their limits.
- The rate of fertilizer application to wheat fields has declined slightly because of high costs for fertilizer and other inputs, and low wheat prices in relation to costs.
- Natural gas used to produce nitrogen fertilizer is in increasingly short supply.
- Marginal land called into production is subject to erosion.

But the report added that if recent production trends do continue, U.S. wheat output could edge higher to 2.2 billion bushels in the early 1980s and to about 2.5 billion bushels in 1985.

Comparatively, this year's U.S. wheat harvest is estimated by USDA at 2.13 billion bushels, the second largest on record, exceeded by the crop of more than 2.14 billion bushels in 1976.

"If wheat prices are favorable relative to competing crops and cost of production, more wheat will be produced," the report said.

Wheat output dropped to about 1.8 billion bushels in 1978 when farmers reduced their plantings, partly because of federal acreage set-aside requirements aimed at curbing a buildup in supplies.

Those acreage restrictions have been removed for the 1980 wheat crop because of the expected large demand for U.S. grain.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's cotton stockpile is expected to increase about 42 percent in the coming year, due mainly to the much larger 1979 crop and some decline in exports and domestic mill use.

Current Agriculture Department estimates put the 1979 cotton harvest at 13.7 million bales, up nearly 26 percent from the small 1978 harvest of 10.9 million bales.

Cotton stockpiles on Aug. 1, the beginning of the new marketing year, were drawn down to 3.8 million bales, compared with 5.3 million a year ago.

But the new crop, along with diminished requirements, will rebuild the cotton carried over next Aug. 1 to around 5.4 million bales, officials said Wednesday.

In all, cotton "disappearance" in 1979-80 was estimated at about 12.2 million bales, compared with 12.6 million last year.

Exports are expected to be about 6 million bales, down from 6.2 million last season, which was up sharply from 5.5 million in 1977-78.

"Economic conditions in the textile-producing and consuming nations which use U.S. cotton are expected to be only slightly weaker in the coming months," the department's outlook board said.

Family can 'rest in peace' now

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The deaths of Colett MacDonald and her two children turned the members of her family into bitter adversaries. "We can rest in peace now," her father said after Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald was convicted of murder.

A jury of seven men and five women deliberated for six hours Wednesday before convicting MacDonald, a former Green Beret, of one count of first-degree murder and two counts of second-degree murder in the deaths of his pregnant wife, 26, and their daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2. The deaths occurred in 1970 when the family was stationed at Fort Bragg.

"I have said before and I will repeat again that I never for one instant ever believed that 12 jurors would say he was innocent," said Albert Kassab, Colette's father, as MacDonald was led away to begin serving three consecutive life sentences.

MacDonald's attorneys said they would begin filing appeals today. U.S. Marshals took the 35-year-old Huntington Beach, Calif., resident to the federal prison at Butner Wednesday night.

Kassab and his wife, Mildred, of Cranbury, N.J., pursued prosecution after the Army found the charges against MacDonald "not true," taking their case to the Justice Department until a grand jury indicted MacDonald in 1975.

"We feel vindicated. We can rest in peace now," Kassab said. "Sir, I'm not guilty," MacDonald told U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. before sentencing. "I don't think the court has heard all the evidence. That's all I have to say."

The jury returned verdicts of second-degree murder in the deaths of Mrs. MacDonald and Kimberly MacDonald was convicted of first-degree murder in the death of Kristen.

Inmate faces additional charges

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 20-year-old man awaiting execution at the state prison here now faces another murder charge for the stabbing death of a fellow Death Row inmate.

Anthony Pierce of Harris County was charged with murder Tuesday by Lloyd Roark, justice of the peace in Dodge, Texas, said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Rick Hartley.

He identified the dead man as Edward Lincoln King, 36, of Dallas, who came to the prison on Aug. 4, 1977, after a conviction in the death of Dallas policeman Leslie T. Lane.

Lane, 25, a four-veteran, was shot and killed March 2, 1974, when he attempted to arrest a man driving a car taken from an off-duty Dallas policeman attacked earlier that night.

Hartley said Pierce was sent to Death Row March 20, 1978, after his conviction in the killing of Houston fast-food restaurant manager during a robbery.

The TDC spokesman said King was stabbed in the chest just outside his cell and was pronounced dead on arrival at the prison hospital.

Political change needed to assure female equality

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations surveyed the state of the world's women in 1979 and reported today that they can only be raised to equality with the male half of the population by "political, social and cultural change on a scale unprecedented in human history."

Most of the more than 2 billion women "have never had the opportunity even to ask for an improvement in their situation," said the report issued today by the U.N. Center for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs. "Such an improvement has to come through changes in the whole society."

The center is headed by Assistant Secretary-General Helvi Sipilä, the only woman in the top echelon of the U.N. secretariat.

The report, titled "The State of the World's Women 1979," said the cultural, social and economic situation of women "is one aspect of an unjust socio-economic order which also enshrines and perpetuates such values as the 'superiority' of one race over another, of capital over labor, of the healthy over the sick, of the 'normal' over those who are 'different.'"

It estimated that women make up a third of the world's labor force, put in nearly two-thirds of the work hours but get only a tenth of the world's income.

According to the report, the International Labor Office estimates that in the United States the gap between men's and women's wages nearly doubled in the past two decades. It said in 1976 white women were getting 43 percent less than white men and non-white women 35 percent less than non-white men.

This inequality, said the report, "provides a strong motive for the mobilization of all women," and so "the women's movement will remain one of the most creative and dynamic of our times — a force for change through which the emancipation of both men and women may one day be realized."

"At a time when the concept of a New International Economic Order is being translated into action," it continued, "a new social order must also be included so as to eliminate the exploitation of the majority of the world's people."

"The time has come to ask: how long can we afford to continue the present waste and discrimination which affects human society as a whole, now and in the future?"

Kurds reject Khomeini proposal

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A Kurdish spokesman repudiated a reported agreement to admit Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's forces to Mahabad, the rebel stronghold in northwest Iran, and said "not one person is willing to agree."

"I am certain the goodwill delegation has not agreed to the army entering Mahabad; not one person in Mahabad is willing to agree to the army entering the city," the spokesman said by telephone Wednesday.

The spokesman, an official of the outlawed Kurdish Democratic Party who refused to be identified, said Tehran Radio, which broadcast the alleged agreement, was "distorting reports of the negotiations."

"We do not hold much hope for the negotiations in Tehran," he added.

The Kurdish delegation arrived in Tehran Sunday, one day after Khomeini's troops crushed a three-day uprising in Saqqez, 50 miles south of Mahabad, then marched to within 19 miles of the rebel stronghold of 100,000.

An undeclared truce went into effect and the delegation held several days of talks with Khomeini's representatives in the capital. On Wednesday, Interior Minister Hashem Sabaghian told Tehran Radio the Kurds "had agreed that the army has to enter Mahabad and take hold of the city's security."

Sabaghian promised the army would leave the Mahabad garrison within a reasonable period of time after security was restored, convert the garrison into a university and that the troops would then be based outside the city.

Sabaghian also said rank-and-file members of the Kurdish Democratic Party would not be prosecuted, that revolutionary guards would be selected from the local population after security is restored, and that development projects would be implemented for Kurdistan.

Before Khomeini's forces overthrew Shah Mohammad

Reza Pahlavi's regime in February, the monarch kept a strong military presence in Kurdistan to suppress the Kurds' age-old dream of independence and their own nation.

But the drive for self-rule erupted anew one month after the revolution when the Kurds concluded the shah had been replaced by another despot and that their aspirations would not be tolerated.

Homeowners have interest in suit

Warriner

RICHMOND, VA. (AP) — Millions of homeowners across the nation have a stake in a court suit here challenging the right of lending institutions to collect escrow funds without paying interest.

If the eastern Virginia homeowners who filed the suit win it and survive subsequent appeals, a strong legal precedent could be established as it would be the first major decision in a federal court. It also would involve hundreds of millions of dollars.

Most lenders, in a practice that began in the 1930s, require monthly payments for taxes and insurance from people who take out mortgage loans, besides payments to reduce the principal of the loan.

Seldom is the borrower given the option of paying the tax and insurance bills on his own. Instead, the lender holds the money in escrow, invests it and earns interest between tax payments.

Lenders insist they have a right to protect the security of their loans. Without such payments, they say, many borrowers would default on their taxes — and a tax lien would be slapped on the property.

But while the banks and savings and loan associations earn investment income from escrow funds, they rarely pay interest to the borrower. And some say the income barely covers the costs of administering the funds.

Since 1972, however, at least 10 states have responded to court pressure by requiring lending institutions to pay interest or make other concessions on escrow funds.

Most federal cases involving escrow funds have been settled out of court, usually with the homeowner gaining the right to earn minimal interest or to pay their own taxes and insurance.

The Virginia case, filed almost two years ago by 14 mortgage holders in the Norfolk-Virginia Beach area, names 38 lending institutions as defendants.

As described by one lawyer, it has become "a paper war" with thousands of pages of motions, counter-motions, depositions and interrogatories.

A motion by the defendants to dismiss the case awaits a ruling by

U.S. District Court Judge D. Dortch Warriner.

The homeowners charge a violation of numerous federal laws through a conspiracy by the defendants to make escrow payments a condition of a loan.

They maintain also that the failure to pay interest on this money actually inflates the stated rate of interest on the loan.

One lawyer said Warriner has a wide range of alternatives if he decides in favor of the plaintiffs.

He could order the lending institutions to stop making escrow payments a condition of a loan, or to pay interest on escrow funds voluntarily paid, or both.

Lawyers and the plaintiffs were reluctant to comment on the case while it is still before the court.

Taylor Cousins of Richmond, a real estate man and member of the board of the Consumer Congress of Virginia, said that while his group has no official position he personally feels borrowers should be given an option.

"It is obvious these lending institutions are getting free use of people's money. If they can give away dishes or luggage to attract business, why can't they use escrow interest as a competitive tool?"

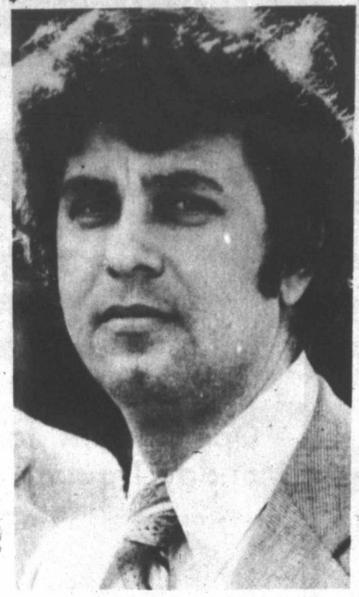

Robert Miller, a Richmond homeowner, said his escrow payments total over $1,000 a year.

"I'm perfectly capable of paying my own taxes and insurance and I would have more money to do it with if I could earn interest on what the bank takes from me every month," he said.

But lenders say they should receive the payments for protection, and that not many homeowners feel the way Miller does.

"Most borrowers like the idea of taking care of their loan, taxes and insurance all in one payment," said Edward Brooks of Richmond, president of Security-Federal and vice president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

John B. Cutter, president of Citizens Savings & Loan, said the escrow practice saves the customer from having to pay a whopping tax and insurance bill at the end of the year.

Farmers may seek additional land to grow crops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless there are some remarkable breakthroughs in plant breeding or how wheat is grown, American farmers might be seeking, within 20 years, additional land on which to produce enough of the grain to meet world demands.

One problem, according to a new Agriculture Department report, is that huge gains in U.S. wheat production during the past 30 years may be leveling off.

The situation is not confined to the United States. Wheat production in other leading areas also has more than doubled since 1950, and that rate of gain, too, appears to be winding down, the Agriculture Department report said.

Projected increases in world population and wheat demand suggest that world consumption could double in 20 to 25 years, it said. "Although some new technological breakthrough could result in higher yields, much of the increase in U.S. wheat production necessary to meet world demand will depend on added acres."

Nearly all the nation's best cropland is already being used. Thus, some farmers — if the report is correct — may have to switch from other crops to meet the growing demand for wheat over the next two decades.

The report, issued Wednesday by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service, was by Walter G. Heid Jr., an employee of the agency at the U.S. Grain Marketing Research Center in Manhattan, Kan.

"The wheat industry faces a relatively stable domestic demand and a growing, but highly unstable export market," the report said. "It also faces a growing worldwide population with unprecedented demands."

If the global population doubles in the last 25 years of this century, the demand for wheat as a food item "will greatly increase" from current levels, it said.

Put another way, the analysis said that if the population forecasts are borne out, "the world's farmers will need to produce as much additional food in this 25-year period as they were able to produce in 1975 with all the techniques learned from the beginning of time."

Average U.S. wheat yields remained nearly constant until the 1930s but have more than doubled since then. The average yield exceeded 20 bushels per harvested acre for the first time in 1956, and 30 bushels in 1969.

But the upward trend of larger yields has moderated in recent years, and "some evidence suggests yield levels have reached a plateau, although it is too soon to speculate that a new trend is emerging," the report said.

Several reasons were cited, including:

— Technological benefits of commercial fertilizers have nearly reached their limits.

— The rate of fertilizer application to wheat fields has declined slightly because of high costs for fertilizer and other inputs, and low wheat prices in relation to costs.

— Natural gas used to produce nitrogen fertilizer is in increasingly short supply.

— Marginal land called into production is subject to erosion.

But the report added that if recent production trends do continue, U.S. wheat output could edge higher to 2.2 billion bushels in the early 1980s and to about 2.5 billion bushels in 1985.

Comparatively, this year's U.S. wheat harvest is estimated by USDA at 2.13 billion bushels, the second largest on record, exceeded by the crop of more than 2.14 billion bushels in 1976.

"If wheat prices are favorable relative to competing crops and cost of production, more wheat will be produced," the report said.

Wheat output dropped to about 1.8 billion bushels in 1978 when farmers reduced their plantings, partly because of federal acreage set-aside requirements aimed at curbing a buildup in supplies.

Those acreage restrictions have been removed for the 1980 wheat crop because of the expected large demand for U.S. grain.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's cotton stockpile is expected to increase about 42 percent in the coming year, due mainly to the much larger 1979 crop and some decline in exports and domestic mill use.

Current Agriculture Department estimates put the 1979 cotton harvest at 13.7 million bales, up nearly 26 percent from the small 1978 harvest of 10.9 million bales.

Cotton stockpiles on Aug. 1, the beginning of the new marketing year, were drawn down to 3.8 million bales, compared with 5.3 million a year ago.

But the new crop, along with diminished requirements, will rebuild the cotton carried over next Aug. 1 to around 5.4 million bales, officials said Wednesday.

In all, cotton "disappearance" in 1979-80 was estimated at about 12.2 million bales, compared with 12.6 million last year.

Exports are expected to be about 6 million bales, down from 6.2 million last season, which was up sharply from 5.5 million in 1977-78.

"Economic conditions in the textile-producing and -consuming nations which use U.S. cotton are expected to be only slightly weaker in the coming months," the department's outlook board said.

Family can 'rest in peace' now

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The deaths of Colett MacDonald and her two children turned the members of her family into bitter adversaries. "We can rest in peace now," her father said after Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald was convicted of murder.

A jury of seven men and five women deliberated for six hours Wednesday before convicting MacDonald, a former Green Beret, of one count of first-degree murder and two counts of second-degree murder in the deaths of his pregnant wife, 26, and their daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2. The deaths occurred in 1970 when the family was stationed at Fort Bragg.

"I have said before and I will repeat again that I never for one instant ever believed that 12 jurors would say he was innocent," said Albert Kassab, Colette's father, as MacDonald was led away to begin serving three consecutive life sentences.

MacDonald's attorneys said they would begin filing appeals today. U.S. Marshals took the 35-year-old Huntington Beach, Calif., resident to the federal prison at Butner Wednesday night.

Kassab and his wife, Mildred, of Cranbury, N.J., pursued prosecution after the Army found the charges against MacDonald "not true," taking their case to the Justice Department until a grand jury indicted MacDonald in 1975.

"We feel vindicated. We can rest in peace now," Kassab said. "Sir, I'm not guilty," MacDonald told U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. before sentencing. "I don't think the court has heard all the evidence. That's all I have to say."

The jury returned verdicts of second-degree murder in the deaths of Mrs. MacDonald and Kimberly. MacDonald was convicted of first-degree murder in the death of Kristen.

Inmate faces additional charges

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 20-year-old man awaiting execution at the state prison here now faces another murder charge for the stabbing death of a fellow Death Row inmate.

Anthony Pierce of Harris County was charged with murder Tuesday by Lloyd Roark, justice of the peace in Dodge, Texas, said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Rick Hartley.

He identified the dead man as Edward Lincoln King, 36, of Dallas, who came to the prison on Aug. 4, 1977, after a conviction in the death of Dallas policeman Leslie T. Lane.

Lane, 25, a four-veteran, was shot and killed March 2, 1974, when he attempted to arrest a man driving a car taken from an off-duty Dallas policeman earlier that night.

Hartley said Pierce was sent to Death Row March 20, 1978, after his conviction in the killing of Houston fast-food restaurant manager during a robbery.

The TDC spokesman said King was stabbed in the chest just outside his cell and was pronounced dead on arrival at the prison hospital.

Prosecutors contended MacDonald killed his wife in a rage and may have hit his eldest daughter with the initial blow. They argued he stabbed his youngest daughter and then himself in an effort to cover up his actions, and invented his story that four drug-crazed intruders killed his family and stabbed him.

MacDonald contended he awoke the night of the killings to find four people — one of them a woman chanting "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs" — in his home.

Few jurors would talk about their verdict, which came after three ballots and a restroom conference between three who had initially voted for acquittal, according to some jurors.

"We just couldn't have come back with a hung jury after nine years. We had to have a verdict," said one juror who asked not to be named.

Shortly after the verdict was announced, MacDonald was fired as director of emergency medical services at St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., where he had worked since 1971.

Political change needed to assure female equality

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations surveyed the state of the world's women in 1979 and reported today that they can only be raised to equality with the male half of the population by "political, social and cultural change on a scale unprecedented in human history."

Most of the more than 2 billion women "have never had the opportunity even to ask for an improvement in their situation," said the report issued today by the U.N. Center for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs. "Such an improvement has to come through changes in the whole society."

The center is headed by Assistant Secretary-General Helvi Sipilä, the only woman in the top echelon of the U.N. secretariat.

The report, titled "The State of the World's Women 1979," said the cultural, social and economic situation of women "is one aspect of an unjust socio-economic order which also enshrines and perpetuates such values as the 'superiority' of one race over another, of capital over labor, of the healthy over the sick, of the 'normal' over those who are 'different.'"

It estimated that women make up a third of the world's labor force, put in nearly two-thirds of the work hours but get only a tenth of the world's income.

According to the report, the International Labor Office estimates that in the United States the gap between men's and women's wages nearly doubled in the past two decades. It said in 1976 white women were getting 43 percent less than white men and non-white women 35 percent less than non-white men.

This inequality, said the report, "provides a strong motive for the mobilization of all women," and so "the women's movement will remain one of the most creative and dynamic of our times — a force for change through which the emancipation of both men and women may one day be realized."

"At a time when the concept of a New International Economic Order is being translated into action," it continued, "a new social order must also be included so as to eliminate the exploitation of the majority of the world's people."

"The time has come to ask: how long can we afford to continue the present waste and discrimination which affects human society as a whole, now and in the future?"

Kurds reject Khomeini proposal

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A Kurdish spokesman repudiated a reported agreement to admit Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's forces to Mahabad, the rebel stronghold in northwest Iran, and said "not one person is willing to agree."

"I am certain the goodwill delegation has not agreed to the army entering Mahabad; not one person in Mahabad is willing to agree to the army entering the city," the spokesman said by telephone Wednesday.

The spokesman, an official of the outlawed Kurdish Democratic Party who refused to be identified, said Tehran Radio, which broadcast the alleged agreement, was "distorting reports of the negotiations."

"We do not hold much hope for the negotiations in Tehran," he added.

The Kurdish delegation arrived in Tehran Sunday, one day after Khomeini's troops crushed a three-day uprising in Saqqez, 50 miles south of Mahabad, then marched to within 19 miles of the rebel stronghold of 100,000.

An undeclared truce went into effect and the delegation held several days of talks with Khomeini's representatives in the capital. On Wednesday, Interior Minister Hashem Sabaghian told Tehran Radio the Kurds "had agreed that the army has to enter Mahabad and take hold of the city's security."

Sabaghian promised the army would leave the Mahabad garrison within a reasonable period of time after security was restored, convert the garrison into a university and that the troops would then be based outside the city.

Sabaghian also said rank-and-file members of the Kurdish Democratic Party would not be prosecuted, that revolutionary guards would be selected from the local population after security is restored, and that development projects would be implemented for Kurdistan.

Before Khomeini's forces overthrew Shah Mohammad

Reza Pahlavi's regime in February, the monarch kept a strong military presence in Kurdistan to suppress the Kurds' age-old dream of independence and their own nation.

But the drive for self-rule erupted anew one month after the revolution when the Kurds concluded the shah had been replaced by another despot and that their aspirations would not be tolerated.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Skin tests given in Florida's prison system over the past three months show nearly one of every four inmates has either dormant or latent tuberculosis, authorities say.

State health and prison officials said Wednesday that more than 4,700 of 19,308 convicts given the tests showed positive reaction. That is a 24.4 percent rate, or double that of the corresponding age group in the state's general population.

Dr. Florian Yandel Jr., chief of health services for the Florida Department of Corrections, emphasized that such positive reaction does not necessarily indicate active infection. Follow-up X-ray exams and drug therapy have been started for about 1,800 inmates.

Rollins may be appointed to PUC commission

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University of Texas finance lecturer Henry Moak Rollins apparently will be appointed to the Texas Public Utility Commission, the Austin American-Statesman said today.

The newspaper said that Gov. Bill Clements' office has let it be known to Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, that the governor is considering Rollins for the post.

"It was confirmed to us that he is who they are considering," said Nancy Williams, an aide in Doggett's office Wednesday.

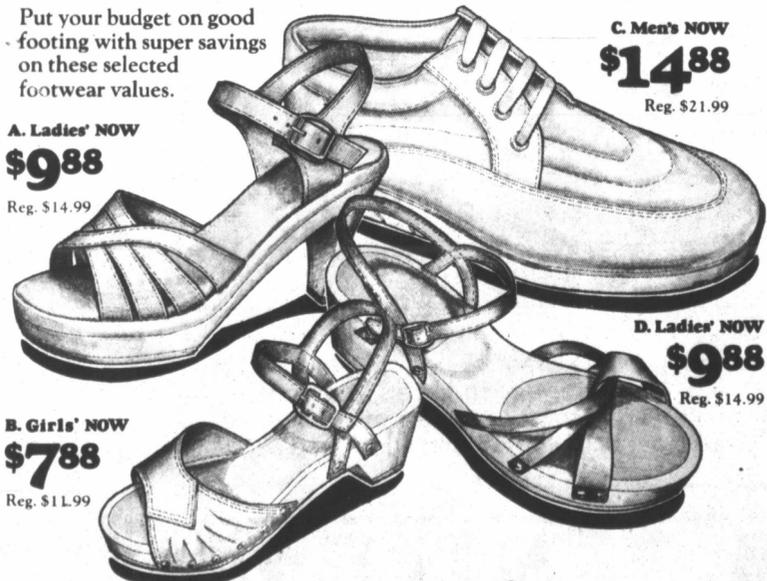

Rollins was not available for comment. Clements' office said today there were no appointments ready to be announced but there might be some later today.

Clements said earlier in the week he would fill the vacancy on the three-member utility commission before it starts hearings Sept. 4 on a Southwestern Bell Telephone rate increase request.

Clements leaves Saturday for a three-week travel trip to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Escapee Pays His Bills

YERINGTON, Nev. (AP) — A jail escapee who apparently got a big inheritance has offered to pay for more than $500 in damages caused when he fled July 31, Lyon County Sheriff Red Kingsley said.

Kingsley said Wednesday a caller identifying himself as Michael Watson made the offer and said he would call back later to get the exact amount before sending in a check.

Watson and Mace Fruchette, both in their early 20s, tore up the ceiling and roof of the jail in making their escape. Both still are at large.

Kingsley said he understands Watson came into an inheritance while in the State Prison in Carson City and has "a lot of money." Watson was shifted to the Lyon County jail for security purposes.

It's not the first time Watson has offered to pay for his damages. Kingsley said the inmate broke a door glass and caused other damages in an earlier, unsuccessful jailbreak try and then had his lawyer send a check for $300 to cover those damages.

Watson had been serving time for a robbery in Clark County.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Skin tests given in Florida's prison system over the past three months show nearly one of every four inmates has either dormant or latent tuberculosis, authorities say.

State health and prison officials said Wednesday that more than 4,700 of 19,308 convicts given the tests showed positive reaction. That is a 24.4 percent rate, or double that of the corresponding age group in the state's general population.

Dr. Florian Yandel Jr., chief of health services for the Florida Department of Corrections, emphasized that such positive reaction does not necessarily indicate active infection. Follow-up X-ray exams and drug therapy have been started for about 1,800 inmates.

READING, Pa. (AP) — Metropolitan Edison Co. has announced the resignation of Walter M. Creitz, president of the utility during the crisis at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant.

Creitz, whose resignation was effective Wednesday, will be on special assignment to the president of GPU Service Corp., the locally based services wing of Met Ed's parent company, General Public Utilities, spokesman Blaine Fabian said.

Metropolitan Edison operates the Three Mile Island plant, the scene of the nation's worst nuclear accident March 28.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — An estimated 5 million bees and about 13 tons of hives, beeswax and honey have been stolen in a wave of thievery that has struck Minnesota's bee industry, agriculture officials say.

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler reports that its cars carrying $400 rebates sold more than twice as well during a three-day period last week as the same cars did during the same days in July.

Dealers sold 5,521 of the rebated models from Aug. 21 to 23 compared with 2,455 from July 21 to 23, the financially troubled automaker reported Wednesday.

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) outspent its opponents 48 to 1 in a successful campaign last year to win approval for its now-shelved oil terminal and pipeline project in California.

Rollins may be appointed to PUC commission

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University of Texas finance lecturer Henry Moak Rollins apparently will be appointed to the Texas Public Utility Commission, the Austin American-Statesman said today.

The newspaper said that Gov. Bill Clements' office has let it be known to Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, that the governor is considering Rollins for the post.

"It was confirmed to us that he is who they are considering," said Nancy Williams, an aide in Doggett's office Wednesday.

Rollins was not available for comment.

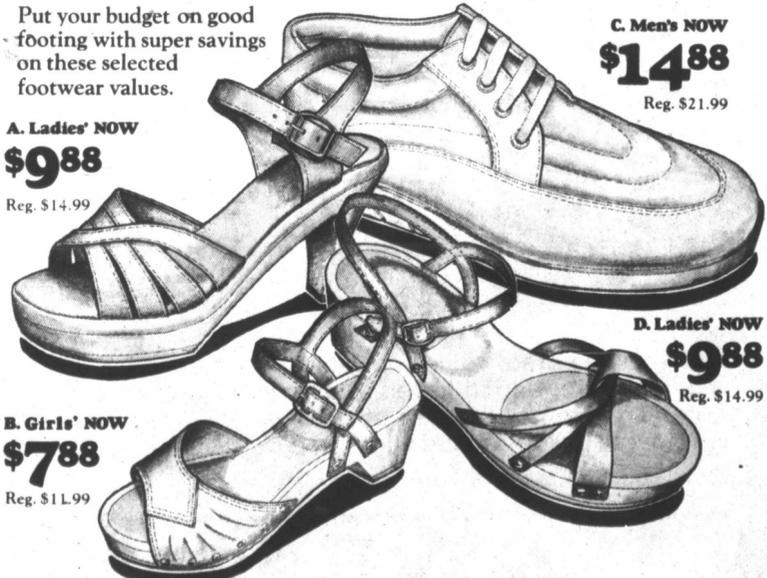

Clements' office said today there were no appointments ready to be announced but there might be some later today.

Clements said earlier in the week he would fill the vacancy on the three-member utility commission before it starts hearings Sept. 4 on a Southwestern Bell Telephone rate increase request.

Clements leaves Saturday for a three-week trade trip to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

MONTREAL (AP) — Actor Elliott Gould had some uninvited guests at his 41st birthday party. While Gould was partying on a movie set here, some thieves were busy ransacking his van dressing room.

A publicist for the film said nothing of value was stolen. Wednesday's party was attended by the crew and cast members, Kate Jackson and Arthur Hill. The movie? "Dirty Tricks."

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Gov. George C. Wallace's new post carries no official duties, responsibilities or authority — and pays $18,000 a year.

Wallace has been appointed by his successor to a newly created position of "governor's counselor." His appointment to the post by Gov. Fob James became effective last Saturday, but was not officially announced until Wednesday by James' press secretary, Jon Ham.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former congresswoman Bella Abzug and feminist Gloria Steinem rowed along the lake in Central Park and waved a sign: "Fed up with inflation? Send your bills to Congress."

The women say Wednesday's nautical demonstration launched a nationwide grass-roots protest against inflation.

Women USA is calling on women in this country to send their housebills to Congress and the president after they've paid them along with a letter calling for the restoration of oil price controls and control of high prices, said Ms. Abzug.

She said the $3 boat ride was to demonstrate that "while President Carter was on a showboat on the Mississippi, Americans were left up the creek in the fight against rising prices."

SUIT NECKLINE is cowled with a scarf of pure silk crepe de chine in a truly suitable shape and size. Measuring 36 inches square, featuring an overall motif of willow leaves and bordered in a spatter print, the scarf is folded on the diagonal, draped loosely over the collarless jacket neckline for a soft touch to a strictly tailored suit, and lightly knotted at the back of the neck. The cowl is equally effective worn inside a suit neckline as a fill-in in lieu of a blouse.

The suitable scarf accents fall scene

Fashion's love affair with the suit has spawned a bevy of '79 fashion collaterals, most important among them the suit-able scarf. So Glentex, long famous for its scarves and other top accessories, for the coming season offers a collection of scarves created for them by Cacharel and designed to tie up the suit in fashion.

Recognizing that the suit look spans the hours, the collection plays the game of scarf suit - ability with a potpourri of shapes, sizes, fabrics, patterns and colors.

In every scarf rests the potential of a suit-able accessory, be it for a companion blazer or cardigan, a daytime tweed, all-occasion leather or after-dark satin and velvet. Natural softeners to the strictly tailored suit and equally compatible with the itself - soft evening suit, the scarves offer delicious ways to diversify the look of a suit and allow it to capitalize on its multiple wear-way abilities.

Squares in the collection range from small to giant size, lend themselves to such suit-oriented tie-ways as the neckline-filling cowl or the inside-a-collar wrap-and-loop stocktie. Oblongs, straight cut or with their ends on the bias, are perfect in partnership with any suit jacket tied as ascots, Western loops or bowed, while a tiny bias cut mini oblong is natty accenting particularly as a spark of color against monotone wools.

Fabric, like shape, is selected for its suit-ability with a soft draped hand the ultimate requirement. Thus pure silk crepe de chine, silk and chiffon appear in all of the shapes, as does a gentled wool challis that is equally drape-able.

In the typical Cacharel manner are the autumn interpretations of flowers, spattered bouquet-fashion across both solid and texture-printed backgrounds, bordering other motifs or solid centers and boldly emblazoned in one corner of a square or at one end of an oblong.

Foulards and paisleys, too, enjoy the same touch, with flowers bordering a mini foulard or an occasional large blossom intermingled within a paisley motif.

Color throughout takes a fashion stance, reflecting the current season's love of brights through the use of such hues as red, jade, violet, royal and curry in combination with deep lush shades of wine, forest green and the ink navys and browns. And marvelously subtle tones flicker across many scarves as background, warmed into richness by an occasional brilliant accent color in the design.

SOFT TOUCH to strictly tailored blazer jacketing is this bias cut oblong created by Cacharel for Glentex. In a mini foulard imprinted on soft wool challis and bordered in autumn flowers, the scarf is worn here in a Western loop, achieved by folding it once and pulling both ends through the loop.

DR. LAMB

Uterus transplants still in future

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband and I have a question. I'm 22 years old and have had a hysterectomy. I was five months pregnant and had a miscarriage. They took me to surgery and found that the afterbirth had grown around the outside of the uterus. I guess the baby had attached itself half in the tube and half in the uterus. It was just a freak accident. I still have my ovaries and tubes and they just took out the uterus. Now my question is, has there been anything like a uterus transplant? They transplant hearts and other parts of the body so I was wondering if this has been done.

I'm perfectly healthy in all other respects and my husband and I were looking forward to having children.

DEAR READER - You must be describing an ectopic pregnancy, meaning that the fertilized egg was implanted outside the main body of the uterus. Providing the circulation to your ovaries was maintained, in spite of the surgery you should continue to have normal hormonal function, even though you don't have a uterus.

No, uterus transplants have not been done and I seriously doubt they ever will be, at least on a practical basis. Remember there's been a lot of trouble in avoiding rejection of transplanted organs. It's a fairly complex problem. The medicines that most people have to take to avoid rejection just aren't compatible with a pregnancy.

Perhaps at some future date as more is learned about how to prevent rejection, something of that sort might be contemplated but I would think that if that ever comes to pass it will be a long way off.

If you want to compare the situation to research that's been done in animal reproduction, there is only one real possibility. That would be to produce a test tube baby from an ovum released by your ovaries and your husband. The fertilized ovum would then have to be implanted in some other woman's receptive uterus to serve as an incubator.

Things similar to this are done in the cattle industry. For example, the fertilized ovum from a very expensive well-bred cow can be transferred to the uterus of a cow of lesser quality and she is literally used as the incubator for the pregnancy.

There are lots of moral questions about whether these things should or should not be done which I won't attempt to answer but will restrict my comments to what the scientific facts are.

If such human experiment were to be achieved successfully, the baby that would be born would genetically be from the woman who provided the ovum and the man who provided the sperm, regardless of what woman's uterus served as the "incubator" for the pregnancy.

Readers who want information about one of man's oldest problems can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for The Health Letter number 13 - 12, Hemorrhoids: New Treatments for an Old Affliction. Send your request to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Plastic surgery patients pampered as recover

The neighborhood kids call it "The Mummy House" because they frequently catch glimpses of people with their faces swathed in bandages.

But to the folks inside, it's a place they can go to be secluded and pampered while they recover from plastic surgery.

A growing number of such halfway houses - from the spartan to the deluxe - have sprung up to cater to the whims and needs of plastic-surgery patients who don't want to burden their family and friends, as well as those who simply don't want to be seen.

"I can understand why patients like it," says Mel Grussing, a health-facilities investigator. "It's anonymous. They're cared for. Everybody thinks it's great until a patient runs into trouble and dies. With any type of surgery you run that risk."

Health officials are less than pleased with this new industry that is growing up virtually unregulated. The homes are not licensed, the attendants frequently have little or no medical training.

At the least, the homes provide patients with ice packs to reduce swelling, watch for infections and chauffeur patients to the doctor's office. At the most, the homes try to ease the pain of recuperation by offering such creature comforts as luxurious rooms, crystal bud vases on meal trays and fine linens.

Patients turn to the halfway houses for a variety of reasons. Some housewives and businessmen, the operators say, are as secretive as movie stars about revealing their encounters with the beauty knife and prefer not to be seen stitched, swollen or fitted with drainage tubes. Others wouldn't think of subjecting a friend or relative to 24 to 48 hours - or more - of continuous care to watch for postoperative complications.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

Too much vitamin A can cause harm

By Joe Graedon
Q My hairdresser told me vitamin A was good for my hair and skin (I've got psoriasis), but someone else said vitamin A affected the brain. Can you please tell me the good and bad about vitamin A?

A It's all a question of amount. In ordinary doses, the sort you'd get from eating liver once a week, vitamin A is safe. In fact, it's necessary for healthy hair and skin.

In large doses, however, vitamin A can be very dangerous. If you were to take a high potency supplement - say 50,000 IU daily over a period of months - it could build up in the liver causing damage similar to cirrhosis.

Even before the damage to your liver or other unpleasant symptoms may appear - dry cracking skin, severe throbbing headaches, poor appetite, hair loss, joint pain, anemia, insomnia and lethargy. Now that's a bundle of trouble.

When your hairdresser said that vitamin A is good for psoriasis she hit the side of the barn but missed the target. There is some exciting new research being done on synthetic vitamin A - like compounds called retinoids. These "man-made" drugs are effective against skin problems such as psoriasis or severe acne in doses which cause fewer, less severe side effects.

Since these drugs are still in the experimental phase, your dermatologist probably won't be able to prescribe them unless he's affiliated with a research center.

What's more, they are not quite the miracle cure many psoriasis sufferers would like to see. Most of the tests so far have only found good responses in about half of the severe-psoriasis patients.

As with any drugs, these compounds can cause side effects. Most people will develop cracks at the sides of their mouths and their lips and tongues will feel dry. A few even lose some hair, temporarily. But the synthetic retinoids seem to be less toxic than some of the other drugs being used for severe psoriasis.

Good old vitamin A is certainly necessary for health. But if you overdo with a high potency supplement you could cause yourself serious harm. Fortunately, its new synthetic "cousins", the retinoids, are safer and hold some hope against the heartbreak of psoriasis and severe acne.

Q I'm taking Aldactone (Spironolactone) for my high blood pressure. My doctor told me to cut back on the salt so I'm using one of those salt substitutes. I also take a potassium pill I bought in a health food store because I heard that blood pressure drugs increase your need for it.

When my doctor got the results of a routine blood test last week he scolded me for taking too much potassium. He said it would interact with my medicine in a dangerous way. What's the story?

A Potassium can be tricky. Too little can be dangerous and too much can be deadly.

Most blood pressure medications "waste" potassium, and without replacement, can lead to symptoms of potassium depletion. Warning signs include muscle weakness, cramping and twitching, fatigue, lethargy and ultimately, irregular heart beats.

There are, however, a few drugs, such as Aldactone, Aldactazide (spironolactone with hydrochlorothiazide), Dyrenium (triamterene) and Dyazide (hydrochlorothiazide with triamterene) which "spare" potassium, helping the body retain it in adequate quantities.

A person who makes the mistake of adding extra potassium to his diet without a doctor's approval is courting disaster.

There are no warning signals of potassium poisoning. An abnormal electrocardiogram, irregular heart beats, or even cardiac arrest may be the only signs that something is terribly wrong.

Your doctor was justified in giving you a tongue-lashing. Salt substitutes may seem safe on the supermarket shelf, but they really should be used only with your doctor's supervision.

Crafts imported from Third World countries

PLAINVILLE, Conn. (AP) - Clare and Burges Smith probably would have gone into the business of importing crafts from the world's developing nations even if they hadn't been arrested in Haiti on suspicion of being Cuban spies.

But that's another story.
 "No one looked less like Cuban spies than Burges and me with our sporty clothes and tennis rackets," recalled Mrs. Smith, who with her husband operates "Primitive Artisan", an unusual importing firm that specializes in crafts and curiosities from Third World countries.

But as a result of their accidental arrest while on vacation, and their subsequent detention in Haiti in the early 1960s, they made a number of friends on that Caribbean island and that led them to their present business.

Today, with 15 years of experience behind them, the Smiths scour the back country in some of the world's most remote lands looking for handicrafts to bring back to the old mill that houses their business here in central Connecticut.

"They are traditional skills, all of them," says Mrs. Smith, referring to the crafts-filled warehouse. "We are providing a market for their skills."

Three or four times a year, the Smiths make buying trips from southern Mexico to Sri Lanka, stopping in between in places like Thailand, the Philippines, northwest Pakistan, Fiji and the Solomon Islands.

The Smiths buy crafts on the local level from self-help groups, village cooperatives and church groups.

The crafts they are seeking, which the Smiths wholesale to dealers, boutiques, and department stores in the United States, are not usually a central part of the economy in the countries where they are made.

"Everything we deal in are crafts and crafts are not a major part of the economy. It's what they do between crops," she says.

She notes that large orders of one particular type of handicraft from a village had been known to result in the villagers' abandoning their crops.

Traveling baker teaches class

A traveling salesman is rather typical in the business world today, but this week one Pampa business can boast about its traveling baker.

Vernon Cornelius, Sr., is a technical consultant with Rich Sales Co., a large manufacturer of frozen doughs. He has been in Pampa this week showing eight new bakers at Wil - Mart how to transform the frozen basic recipe into an assortment of tempting baked goods.

"I'm a baking instructor who comes with the product program of the company," says Cornelius, who travels throughout the Southwest and just returned from an instruction seminar in Puerto Rico.

"I come into the store to show them how to professionally make up the dough, work it, mold it, and add ingredients," he explains.

Before Wil - Mart opened its doors, store owners Jerry and Susie Wilson flew to Fresno, Calif., for a training session in one of Rich's model bakeries.

Then Cornelius came here to help the new bakers adapt what they learned to their own facilities and equipment.

"They have to learn how to use the dough and make up basic bakery products, including white bread, French bread, cookies, cinnamon rolls, doughnuts, dinner rolls, fancy cakes and brownies."

Made daily, the bakers have been instructed in a variety of some West Texas specialties, including Jalapeno bread, nacho rolls, ranch bread and garlic pull - apart bread.

"We do everything that a scratch bakery does except the yeast - eggs steps," says Cornelius.

Those steps - producing the basic recipe - are carried out in Rich's four manufacturing plants across the United States. Then the dough is cut into specific weights, conforming to state weight requirements for bakery items, and boxed for shipping.

Since the dough contains no preservatives, it must be frozen. Cornelius says it's handled like ice cream, transported by trucks with freezer units to the businesses using the frozen - dough program.

"This method gives the bakers uniformity in their dough and convenience, and has labor - saving aspects," he says.

Just last week, the eight Wil - Mart bakers were all inexperienced in the bakery business. "She could be a housewife last week doing an angel food cake in her own kitchen and then this week learn how to do this."

By tomorrow, when Cornelius leaves, the bakers will be turning out fresh baked goods on a daily basis.

The daily procedure includes thawing the frozen dough, letting it rise by subjecting it to heat and humidity, working the dough into the desired product and then baking it.

After the item comes out of the oven, it goes to the cooling racks, then is bagged, labeled, and displayed for sale.

Cornelius doesn't desert his bakers after the initial training session, but returns about every six months for an update session. In preparation for holiday seasons, he'll stop in to show the bakers some special techniques.

The bakers will attend training seminars to keep them posted on ideas from San Francisco to Boston, adds Cornelius.

One of Rich's 23 technical consultants, Cornelius instructs bakers in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, New Mexico and Louisiana. A native of Ohio, he started out in the grocery business, working four years as a supermarket meat manager and seven years as produce manager for a different chain.

"I was training and thinking I was going to become a store director," says Cornelius. "But an in - store bakery came into our store and they asked me to be in - store manager."

"I got caught up in the fascination that we'd never bake all the recipes around," he says. "I've found my first love."

As bakery manager, Cornelius attended one of Rich's seminars and was impressed. Wanting to show how he'd developed ideas in his bakery, he interviewed with the company, which is based in Buffalo, N.Y. He's been with the company eight years.

Cornelius last week returned from Puerto Rico, where with the aid of an interpreter, he conducted sessions in six Spanish - speaking bakeries.

He and his wife, who travels with him, live in Irving.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been going with Lenny for 25 years. When we fell in love we couldn't marry because he had an invalid father to care for and I had a sick mother.

He's in the entertainment business, knows interesting people, and we've had some great times together. (I pay my own way because I'm in better shape financially than he is.)

His father died recently, and so did my mother. I inherited a nice sum of money which I invested on the advice of my attorney and accountant. I have a nice income and a job that pays well.

Lenny says he wants to marry me and take charge of my investments. I'm not in favor of that because he hasn't been very successful with his own investments, and I think I'm better at handling money than he is.

He says if I don't accede to his wishes, it will be "goodbye." I'm in my early 50s. I love him, and it could be a lonesome life if I let him go. On the other hand, I don't want to lose my financial security, which I fear will happen if I turn my money over to Lenny. Help me.

NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW: If Lenny refuses to marry you unless he can handle your money, say goodbye. There are worse things than being lonely. Like being lonely and broke!

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I worry constantly about my husband. He's in construction work and I have this terrible fear that he will get hurt or even killed on the job.

I know that worrying won't change anything, but I can't help it. We've been married for 12 years and have a very good marriage. Everything would be wonderful if I didn't have this awful fear. Do you think it's normal?

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NAME: A certain amount of concern over your husband's safety is normal, and even healthy. But constantly dwelling on it is neither normal nor healthy. I recommend professional counseling. Inquire at the mental health clinic nearest you. Therapy could resolve your problem. It's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: A girlfriend and I have a difference of opinion concerning tipping. (I'll call her Jean.)

I recently took her to breakfast in a good restaurant. Jean received her order and I was told that mine was coming "momentarily." I told Jean to go ahead and start eating while hers was hot, so she did. In the meantime, only part of my order came.

I watched Jean eat, and just when she was finishing, the rest of my order came. It was cold. Evidently, the waitress had forgotten to pick it up when it was hot.

Needless to say, I left no tip. I did not complain about the poor service. Jean left a tip, contending that the service she received was just fine.

I explained that she was out of line for two reasons: first she was my guest and I was paying the bill. Also, the service was not good, since both meals were not served at the same time.

Jean acknowledges that I am the best tipper she's ever known, so I am not cheap. What is your opinion?

S.C.

DEAR S.C.: You're right. Jean was wrong. But I think you should have complained to the management.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

False parts accepted in comfortable marriage

By Louise Pierce

On our wedding nights, 25 to 30 years ago, my middle-aged couples would probably have been shocked if our spouses had removed false teeth, glass eyes, wooden legs or other unexpected accouterments. Isn't it a comfortable feeling, in our later years, to understand and accept bodily rearrangement - to remember when and where they occurred and to be grateful that medical science has developed the capacity to keep us looking normal, no matter what false attachments we carry around? The parts of us that wear out don't affect our ability to think, to achieve or to enjoy life. Time was when a man was old at thirty. Nowadays we can be young in attitude and pleasure in our sixties and seventies and older.

It's fine for all if the spouse who wears a false something - or - other is careful not to let it bother the other one. Now me, I have one false tooth. But it happens to be in front where it shows every time I smile - and I smile a lot. When a dental problem made the removable bridge necessary, I wouldn't have dreamed of removing that tooth until the very last minute before tumbling into bed in the dark. But that was five years ago. The last few months I've dropped the tooth into its all - night bath when I brushed my real teeth right after dinner. I didn't realize that Otis had to look at a "one - tooth - less" wife while we watched TV or worked at our desks. Last week I asked, "Do you love me without my bridge?" He nodded. I pursued, "Do you like looking at me without it?" He hesitated and finally answered, "We - e - ell, let's say you're more attractive with it than without it." I took the spelled - out hint.

In our grandparents' day teeth didn't always fit perfectly and people seemed to accept the fact that those who chose to wear their uppers and lowers only to church and other public functions were normal. I had a dear old aunt who got her false teeth at 50 and wore them to her death at 93 - but only when she was forced to by pretentious circumstances. In day - to - day living, she gummed it. If unexpected company threatened, we had to stand guard at the door while she fine - tooth - combed the premises for the missing grinders. Sometimes the visitors stood on the porch a long time.

Not so today. False teeth usually fit well and perform perfectly. We have no excuse for going without them, even in the privacy of our husband - and - wife relationship at home. If we do, we're like the woman I once knew who planned a surprise party for her husband but was horrified when he said to the guests, "I knew something was up because she cleaned house today for the first time in a month - and she had on her shoes when I got home, instead of going barefoot like she usually does!"

A friend named Meg had a similar experience with her husband of 30 years. She told me, DEAR LOUISE: L.V. won't wear anything decent when we're home alone. He goes around the house looking like a bum.

Sometimes he's only half - dressed when company drops in, say maybe in just ragged old pajama bottoms with no socks or shoes on. He won't shave more than every 3 or 4 days unless we're going somewhere. He says your wife and good friends will accept you any way you are - and that other people don't matter. I say it's everybody's duty to be spruced up a little all the time, even when nobody's home but the two of you. Who's right? Clean Wife.

DEAR C.W.: You are. But you are not as far apart in your thinking as you seem to be. L.V. seems to sulk up as much as you do when you go out, so you're halfway in agreement. As for his appearance at home, you might give him a dose of his own medicine - try going dowdy around the house and see if he notices your uncombed hair and faded slacks and holey house shoes.

If he calls that fine, then try to find somewhere to go every night so he'll have to dress up and look nice for both of you. If he tires of going out and still looks a fright, tell him you love him most when he's neat and natty. If that fails too, just love him as he is. He could have worse faults.

AN OLD BENCH and a folding picnic table help Charlie Jones of Tampa, Fla., display the fruits and vegetables he has for sale at his tiny roadside produce stand. Shoppers can help themselves and leave the money behind in an empty coffee can.

Vendor relies on honest customers

Amid the hand - lettered signs at Charlie Jones' tiny roadside stand is one which says it all: "Self - Serv Market. I Trust You."

Often, an empty coffee can with a slit in the plastic cover is the only cashier for shoppers wanting fruit or vegetables.

Jones, 68, believes in the honor system. Sure, he says, he's been ripped off, but not often, although kids make off with a bagful of fruit every now and then.

For a fruit and vegetable lover, Jones thinks his place is the best deal around.

"Look at this," says the wiry vendor, scooping up a handful of okra that had been in his garden only hours earlier. "I'm selling this at three pounds for $1, and that's cheap. I sell everything cheap, and it's also self - service."

Jones' stand sits a stone's throw from his mobile home, just a couple of blocks from a busy Tampa intersection and not far from a huge, modern supermarket. His garden is out back. The orange groves across the street belong to a neighbor who lets Jones take whatever he needs.

He's occupied the corner for the past few years, filling the produce needs of scores of nearby apartment dwellers.

When he's not farming on those six acres of his, he's propped in an easy chair under a shade tree next to his trailer with his television set on. Life on a farm is familiar to Jones. He spent most of his life growing crops. He once even attended agricultural school, he said.

He was an electrician at one time, too, but gave that up because "I like farming," he says.

When the harvest is bountiful, Jones says he earns $20 - 25 a week. Once, he even picked up that much in a single day, selling grapefruit, tangerines and oranges. For all last year, he put his losses at about $50.

"A lot come by who don't have the money and they'll leave a note and their phone number," he says. "One wrote down that he'd stop by tomorrow with the money. The next day it was there - all of it."

"A lot of people will give me a tip," says Jones. "If something sells for 75 cents, they'll put in a dollar. Sometimes I get calls for fruit - they'll ask me to have some oranges on a certain day. I always try to oblige."

But there are a few people who don't pay. "A fella came by in a van one time and stole three bushels of oranges. I got his tag number but I figured he might have needed them, so I forgot it."

"And one time I had a guy take my bag full of oranges and leave me a penny," Jones says.

But he adds, "I'll say 95 percent of the people are honest."

Pigeons replace human spotters

Some pigeons are roosting pretty high these days because the U.S. Coast Guard recently found they have a talent for spotting the bright orange used on life jackets.

The pigeons ride in special hammocks rigged in the bubble compartments underneath search helicopters. When the birds spot the emergency orange in the water below they peck on a signal bar, actuating a submarine switch. The signal alerts the pilot, who promptly sends a succulent reward down a tube to the feathered lookout.

The Coast Guard says the pigeons are twice as quick and three times as reliable as human spotters.

Guy's habits don't show love for girl

By Robert Wallace, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I have been dating a certain guy for quite some time and I really love him. He says that he loves me and wants to marry me, but let me tell you about him.

1. He says that he wants me to meet his family but I never have.

2. I keep getting letters from various girls stating that he loves them.

3. He calls and says he will be right over but he never shows up.

4. My mom had to pick him up at 3 a.m. because he was drunk and had nowhere to go.

He has improved his habits slightly since I've been seeing him and there is always the chance he will improve.

I'm 18 and he is 23. Do you think he loves me? - Kay, London, Ontario, Canada
Kay: No, I don't, and besides, you deserve much better than this louse. Tell him to "shove off."

Dr. Wallace: I'm a physically mature 15-year - old girl. About two years ago my father started touching my body. When I told my sister what happened, she wouldn't believe me.

Not too long ago he approached me and told me not to be ashamed to come to him for sex. I'm afraid to be alone with him. He has ruined my entire attitude toward boys.

Now he is making excuses to get into our bedroom while I'm taking my bath.

I believe in God and I know my dad isn't supposed to be doing these things, but I'm afraid and don't know what to do. Please help. - Nameless, Rock Island, Ill.

Nameless: Your dad is ill and needs treatment now. First, tell Mother what is happening. If for any reason she doesn't act immediately, talk to a clergyman and tell him everything.

Dr. Wallace: I've got a problem. I'm a girl but when I graduate from school I want to be a police officer.

Whenever I mention this, my friends laugh at me and I get discouraged and don't know what to say.

I know an officer's work is hard, but I also know the job is one of honesty, loyalty and friendship. Can you help me? - Carol, Fullerton, Calif.

Carol: The best thing I can tell you is that local police departments are hiring women police officers.

Keep your goal and don't worry about your friends. Remember, they laughed at the Wright Brothers, not to mention Christopher Columbus.

Foot Notes

By RANDY LIGHTFOOT
News Sports Editor

This is the weekend we have been waiting for all through the hot days of summer...the first full weekend of the fall sports calendar.

Of course, everyone knows Sunday marks the first day of the National Football League regular season, but on the home front, the Pampa Harvesters will be sending the varsity to Canyon and the junior varsity to Miami Friday night for a pair of scrimmages in what will be their first (and only) real test before the season starts. Both scrimmages will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Harvesters held an intrasquad scrimmage last Friday after only one day in pads and the results were about as had been expected.

"Nobody graded out well on the film (of the scrimmage)," first-year head coach Danny Palmer said. "That's not to say they didn't play well though. We didn't have good grades because we were making a lot of mechanical mistakes. Both offensively and defensively, the first move we made was straight up. We're going to correct that."

When grading the films, each player receives either a plus or a minus on every play. Then at the end of the game, the number of pluses is divided by the total number of plays to get the individual player's grade.

"Defensively, we are better (than offense) right now, but the offense at times is above average," Palmer stated. "The defensive secondary was a big surprise in that we didn't think they would look that good this early."

The Canyon scrimmage will be run in two halves. In the first half, the two teams will play under gamelike conditions with the only difference being the lack of kickoffs. In the second half, the two teams will play four series of 20 downs and alternate on offense and defense.

Starting on their own 30-yard-line, a team will have 20 plays. If they are unable to make a first down in four plays or if they score, the ball will be returned to the 30.

Also on Friday, the 42nd Annual Top O' Texas Golf Tournament will get underway with practice rounds and the tournament proper will begin Saturday and run through Monday at the Pampa Country Club.

Defending champion Ladd Larson will be on hand to defend his title and local favorite Wiley McIntire is also in the field as he attempts to gain the title which eluded him after five holes of a sudden death playoff last year.

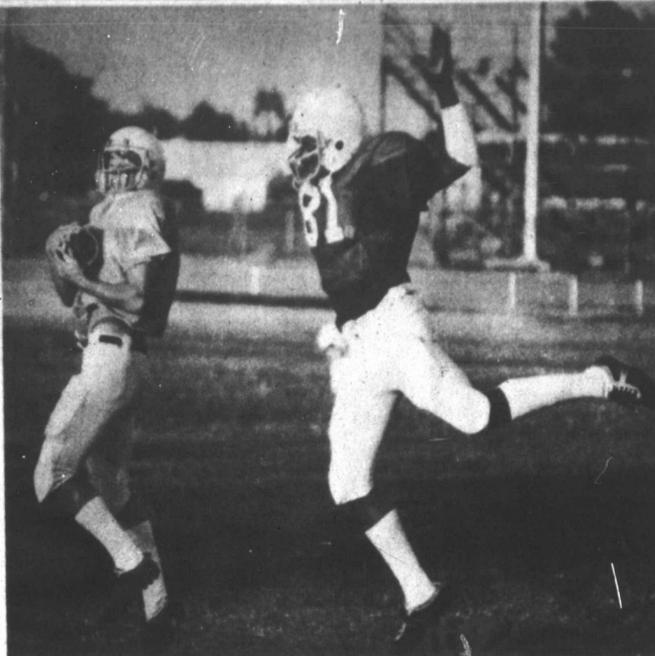

"This is the last of invitational tournaments," PCC pro Hart Warren mused. "There used to be several of them around, but except for maybe a few back east, just about everybody else has gone to partnership tournaments."

In the climatic finish of last year's championship flight, McIntire had come from four strokes off the pace at the start of the final day's 36 holes with his rounds of 69-66. In fact, Larson was forced into sinking a birdie on the final hole of regulation play just to force the playoff.

The inaugural running of the Pampa News Marathon will get underway at 7 a.m. Monday and there are already nearly 100 entries in for either the marathon, half marathon or six mile run.

Entries for the run will be taken until 6:30 a.m. Monday and the registration fee is $5. All proceeds from the marathon will be donated to the United Fund.

Aid stations will be situated every three miles and they will be manned by volunteers from the Pampa Jaycees, Kiwanis, and Optimists.

Cowboys to gamble in season opener against Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys say their offense may be forced to gamble when they take on the St. Louis Cardinals in a National Football League opener here Sunday.

"It can create a lot of problems for some plays and bust open some others," Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach said Wednesday of a 3-4 St. Louis defense.

"We played against two teams in preseason that played it pretty well," Staubach noted. "The Cardinals like to blitz a lot off it. You have to pick up the stunts and the blitzing. It's nothing new. It gives a (defensive) team more flexibility. It's got advantages and disadvantages."

Staubach, who passed for 289 yards the last time the National Conference East rivals met, made known his views during a telephone news conference.

Further Dallas problems might be caused by a heavy toll of injuries, including a broken toe which has sidelined star running back Tony Dorsett since July 28, he said.

"He's supposed to try and work out, so it's very questionable right now," Staubach said of Dorsett preceding an afternoon Cowboys drill in Dallas. "Tony's something special. You like to have in there if he's not hurt."

Dorsett also expressed hope of a Sunday return but admitted, "I haven't tried anything yet."

The only thing they would let me do is walk around.

"The toe's feeling pretty good," Dorsett added. "I'm going out and see how much it bothers me. If it doesn't bother me a lot, I'll probably play."

If Dorsett is not ready, Staubach said he will have no second thoughts in handing off to either Preston Pearson, a veteran, or Ron Springs, a rookie, as his replacement.

"Preston, of course, is reliable. And Ron Springs is an excellent receiver," Staubach said. "We'll have somebody in there. If that running area of our game isn't working, we'll have to try something else."

While Staubach's thoughts were directed to the St. Louis

Nastase, McEnroe meet in U. S. Tennis Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Nasty vs. the Brat. Ilie Nastase, the fiery Romanian whose court antics have enraged officials and enthralled spectators for more than a decade, against John McEnroe, tennis' latest Peck's Bad Boy.

It's the kind of match promoters dream about, and it will take place in the second round of the rain-plagued U.S. Open tennis championships.

When those fireworks will occur depends largely on the weather, which played havoc with Wednesday's program of first round matches.

After McEnroe and Nastase posted victories early in the day, rain halted play three times, the last at 4:13 p.m. After a wait of more than two hours, tournament officials finally decided to suspend the 10 matches that were already under way and postpone the 17 other afternoon matches that were never begun. The four night matches were also postponed.

Today's schedule was to open one-half hour earlier than usual, at 10:30 a.m. EDT, with the completion of matches begun Wednesday. Among them will be a first-round pairing between fifth-seeded Evonne Goolagong Cawley of Australia and 21-year-old Kay McDaniel, which was suspended with Goolagong leading 6-7, 6-4, 2.

McEnroe, the mercurial 20-year-old who is seeded third, whipped Pavel Slozil, of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 6-2, 6-4 in his first-round match. Nastase, now 33 and unranked but still capable of flurries of brilliant shot-making, was leading 7-5, 7-5 against Leo Palin when the Finnish player was forced to retire because of a pulled muscle in his right thigh.

That set up the second-round confrontation that is certain to produce some fireworks. Nastase was close to his best behavior against Palin, pausing only occasionally to chat with his racket or stare off into space — or at a linesman. It was a far cry from the Nastase whose behavior was a cause celebre at past Opens, and whose list of fines and suspensions is almost as long as his tournament triumphs.

He did, however, offer a few harsh words concerning the playing conditions at the National Tennis Center.

"This is the craziest tournament I've ever played," he said. "You have airplanes, trains, heat, humidity, crowd noise — you don't know what to do. It's so hard to concentrate...even for me, and I never concentrate."

McEnroe also found the conditions distracting. "You just have to decide to play through the noise," he said. "You never get used to it, but you kind of accept it."

While his actions, particularly in questioning calls by linesmen and umpires, have served to egg on crowds at some past matches, McEnroe insisted he doesn't try to be flamboyant.

There were no major upsets on Wednesday's abbreviated program.

Among the men, seventh seeded Harold Solomon beat Jose-Luis Damiani of Uruguay 6-4, 6-0, 6-3 and No. 9 Eddie Dibbs survived a five-set squeaker against Tim Wilkison 4-6, 2-6, 7-5, 6-2, 6-3.

Murray solves 'mystery' of Metropolitan Stadium

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

In nearly three seasons with the Baltimore Orioles, none of Eddie Murray's 72 homers had been hit in Minnesota. Three swings later, the Metropolitan Mystery was solved.

"All I know is, I hadn't hit one in this ballpark before," said Murray, who hit three homers in the second game of a double-header sweep over the Minnesota Twins Wednesday. "The Twins have been tough on me. I haven't had too many hits here of any kind."

The 23-year-old switch-hitting slugger had a sacrifice fly in the 4-0 opening-game victory and then knocked in all of Baltimore's runs in the 7-4 second-game triumph with his three homers, two from the right side and one from the left.

Murray has built a reputation as a hitter you shouldn't throw fastballs to, but on Wednesday he said he "decided to sit on some slow stuff for a change."

Royals 18, Brewers 5

Milwaukee fell eight games behind Baltimore in the AL East and Kansas City moved within one-half game of California in the West with a 19-hit attack.

Pete LaCock drove in four runs and Amos Otis three and the Royals got homers from LaCock, Otis and George Brett as they scored 17 of their runs in the first four innings. Infielders Sal Bando and Jim Gantner and catcher Buck Martinez combined to pitch the last five innings for the Brewers, allowing three runs.

Gorman Thomas had two homers for the Brewers, tying him with Fred Lynn for the league lead with 36.

Tigers 2, Angels 1

Slumping California lost its seventh game in the last eight and 11th out of 15 as Detroit's Steve Kemp knocked in Lou Whitaker with a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning.

Jack Morris, 13-5, got the victory with hitless relief the last two innings by Aurelio Lopez.

Indians 5-2, Mariners 4-1

Floyd Bannister was cruising along with a three-hitter and a 4-0 lead in the opener when Cleveland erupted for five runs in the ninth to win. The Indians then captured the second game on Toby Harrah's two-run homer and a combined six-hitter by Rick Waits and Victor Cruz.

Andre Thornton hit his 21st homer, a two-run shot off Bannister, for the first big blow of the first-game rally, then a single by Gary Alexander and a walk set up a two-run double by Mike Hargrove off Shane Rawley that tied the game. Rawley then gave up a long single to Rick Manning that ended the game.

Yankees 7, Rangers 5

Ron Guidry won his eighth straight start to up his record to 14-7 and George Scott, acquired only last Monday, hit a three-run homer in a five-run second inning as New York beat Texas.

Buddy Bell, who had three RBI, doubled home a run in the ninth to deprive last year's Cy Young Award winner of a complete game, but Rich Gossage got the last two outs to preserve the victory.

A's 6, Blue Jays 4

Mario Guerrero had three RBI and Mike Norris scattered 10 hits in a complete-game victory for Oakland. Guerrero had a two-out single in the first inning that gave the A's a 1-0 lead and brought home two more runs with a bases-loaded single in the third when Oakland scored four times.

WILLIE RANDOLPH, New York Yankees second baseman, is unable to spear a hard hit grounder off the bat of Texas Rangers Al Oliver in the ninth inning of the two teams' clash in Arlington Stadium Wednesday night. Oliver was held to a single on the hit and the Yankees held on to win 7-5.

Houston's slump continues; Astros now 1 1/2 games behind Reds

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Ellis Valentine has been in and out of hot water with the Montreal Expos of late.

Wednesday night, he was just plain trouble for the Houston Astros.

Valentine, a controversial figure because of his sometime lackadaisical play, didn't appear to be too sluggish while running out a three-run homer in the Expos' 5-3 victory over the Astros.

"All that hot-dogging is over," said Valentine. "I just want to help the ball club win."

Valentine's 21st homer of the season in the sixth inning wiped out a 2-1 Houston lead and helped Bill Lee win his 13th game for the National League East contenders.

Reds 7, Phillies 6

Reliever Doug Bair pitched four scoreless innings and Johnny Bench blasted a two-run homer to help Cincinnati beat Philadelphia and record its eighth straight victory.

Bair came on after Rick Auerbach put the Reds in front with a sacrifice fly in the sixth inning to break a 6-6 tie. Bair gained his 16th save in relief of winner Mario Soto, 2-2.

The victory improved Cincinnati's lead in the NL West to 1 1/2 games over the Astros.

Padres 3, Cubs 1

Kurt Bevacqua singled, doubled and drove in two runs to help Gaylord Perry snap a personal five-game losing streak as San Diego defeated Chicago, Perry, 11-11, who had not won since July 20, limited the Cubs to six hits and walked one batter as he improved his lifetime record against them to 20-14. The complete game was his 10th of the season.

Pirates 4, Dodgers 1

Phil Garner's two-run double keyed a four-run eighth inning, triggering Pittsburgh over Los Angeles, Bert Blyleven, 11-4, pitched the first seven innings for Pittsburgh and Kent Tekulve worked out of an eighth-inning jam to preserve the victory with his 24th save.

Loser Jerry Reuss, 4-12, restricted the Pirates to only three hits for seven innings, and had a 1-0 lead on Steve Garvey's 21st home run in the third inning before Pittsburgh rallied in the eighth.

Cardinals 5, Giants 1

John Fulgham pitched a five-hitter and Garry Templeton slammed a two-run triple to lead St. Louis over San Francisco. The Cardinals scored an unearned run in the second inning and George Hendrick hit his 13th homer of the season in the fourth for the second tally off loser Vida Blue, 10-12.

Blue, who allowed 14 of the Cardinals' 15 hits, gave up three more runs in the eighth, including two on Templeton's triple.

Fulgham, a rookie called up from the minor league two months ago, improved his record to 7-4.

Braves 5, Mets 4

Jeff Burroughs drove in two runs and Rick Matula gained his first victory since June 29 as Atlanta defeated New York. Burroughs put Atlanta ahead 2-1 in the third inning with a run-scoring single and drove home the last Braves' run in the seventh with a groundout after a triple by Jerry Royster.

'Kong' meets 'Senor Sack' on Texas Tech practice field

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Awestruck players call him "Senor Sack."

He is 6-3 and 300 pounds — and runs 40 yards in an amazing 4.9 seconds.

He has tackled James "Kong" Hadnot, the Southwest Conference's leading rusher, with his back.

The name to be remembered is Gabriel Rivera, who was a Parade Magazine All-American end at San Antonio Jefferson High School.

Rivera has been moved to noseguard by Texas Tech Coach Rex Dockery, who says, "He is going to be some kind of football player before he leaves Texas Tech."

Rivera stunned coaches with his speed in the first week of workouts when he ran the 40 in 4.9. Coaches made him run it again. He ran it in 4.9 again.

But the real eye-catcher was in practice this week when Rivera was spun around at the line of scrimmage. The 225-pound Hadnot bore down on him like a train, smashed into Rivera's back, and dropped like a rock at the line of scrimmage.

Tech quarterback Ron Reeves said, "It's really bad when a guy outweights you 90 pounds and outruns you, too. We just call him "Senor Sack" around here."

Dockery said during the summer Rivera gained 25 pounds in two weeks.

"He said that he couldn't leave his mama's cooking alone, and also ate 14 hamburgers one day because he was bored."

Rivera, who has a waist size of 44 and a size 20 neck, was asked his favorite food by writers on the Southwest Conference press tour.

"Everything," said Rivera.

Dockery has Rivera on a diet and says when he gets down into the 280-pound range, he should be a potential all-conference player.

"This guy is incredibly smart, and never blows an assignment," Dockery said. "I have just never seen anyone who is that quick at that size."

Rivera was asked about his collision with Hadnot while he was looking the other way.

"I felt something hit me, and I turned around and Mr Kong was on the ground," said Rivera.

Norval Pollard, the sports editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, said, "I was watching Rivera in a scrimmage when he shoved his blocker and tackled Hadnot with one arm."

World 880, mile record holder through for rest of year

LONDON (AP) — The next time Sebastian Coe will run competitively, he says, will be next year when he begins his buildup for the Moscow Olympics.

Coe withdrew from a track meet at London's Crystal Palace following an argument with a policeman which interrupted his training session for Friday night's meet.

"He must have got cold, because when he started running again he was hit by calf muscle trouble," explained Alan Pascoe, as organizer of the meet in which Coe was to have attempted to break American Rich Wohlhuter's 1,000-meter world record of 2 minutes, 13.9 seconds, set five years ago.

The policeman had informed the 22-year-old economics graduate that he was causing an obstruction on a narrow road in Richmond Park, a vast open space southwest of London.

Coe, who dodged an invitation to compete in a 1,600-meter relay at the Crystal Palace last weekend, had set the world record for the mile and 800 meters on July 5 in Oslo, Norway before breaking the mark for the 1,500 meters two weeks ago in Zurich, Switzerland.

But track officials were cautious about the possibility of Coe establishing his fourth record because of ankle trouble. That concern became academic with Coe's decision Wednesday.

"He was making this his last meet of the season because he doesn't want to make his ankle worse," Pascoe said. "It's not exactly an ankle injury, but more of a tired ankle after all the running he has been doing."

Coe's withdrawal from the Crystal Palace meet leaves the way clear for his rival, Steve Ovett.

ABC enters 10th season of Monday night football

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle had a vision 10 years ago. He saw a day when the pro football weekend wouldn't end with Sunday nights but would be extended to Monday nights and even early Tuesday mornings.

Rozelle took his idea, "Monday Night Football," to CBS and NBC simultaneously because "I felt ethically bound to offer them the first crack." Those two networks were showing the NFL on Sunday.

CBS, which was No. 1 in the ratings in 1969, said it wasn't interested, even though CBS had tried five Monday night games in the mid-60s, drawing tremendous ratings. According to Rozelle, NBC "took a late, but hard look" before deciding to reject the prime-time football idea.

That left third-rated ABC, which had been desperately looking to get into the lucrative pro football world, and the Hughes Sports Network. At ABC, Rozelle met with Rooney Arledge, who had been steadily raising ABC Sports by its bootstraps.

Arledge's hardest selling job was his own network, which believed in sports on the weekend but was uncertain how successful it could be in prime time. "They said night games would be different than day games," Arledge said. "Women and children control the sets at night."

But Arledge finally sold his bosses on the idea by scaring them. "I told them what would happen if we didn't take it. Some independent network would, and we'd lose 100 stations on Monday night. They came around."

And so has the nation, which has contributed to one of TV sports' biggest breakthroughs by making "Monday Night Football" a huge ratings success. Embarking on its 10th season this Monday night with the New England - Pittsburgh game, ABC will not change one bit the mixture of entertainment and sports that has made its football so special.

Once again, Howard Cosell will be provoking audiences and his colleagues, play-by-play man Frank Gifford and color man Don Meredith. And for six games, Fran Tarkenton will sit in for Meredith, who couldn't agree on a contract extension when the NFL went to 16 regular-season games and ABC added one Sunday night and three Thursday night broadcasts to its schedule.

"Regardless of what we think of sports, its appeal is limited rather than broad," said Rozelle, referring to the seers who predicted a top share of 24 percent for "Monday Night Football."

A 30 percent share of sets in use is a hit, and ABC's football has scored in the 30s from the very beginning, including that initial game on Sept. 21, 1970. Cleveland's 31-21 victory over the New York Jets. One reason is that Arledge altered the traditional way of broadcasting football to reach non-traditional football viewing audiences.

"We had to build an announcing staff that was an attraction," said Arledge, who demanded and got from Rozelle the total authority over his announcers. The NFL had approval over the NBC and CBS announcers.

"The first one I hired was Cosell," said Arledge. "I thought he brought a dimension that wasn't on many telecasts before — the hot stove kind of stuff. We couldn't treat football like a religion and we looked for controversy."

"Cosell didn't fit the traditional role of a color man, so we needed three announcers."

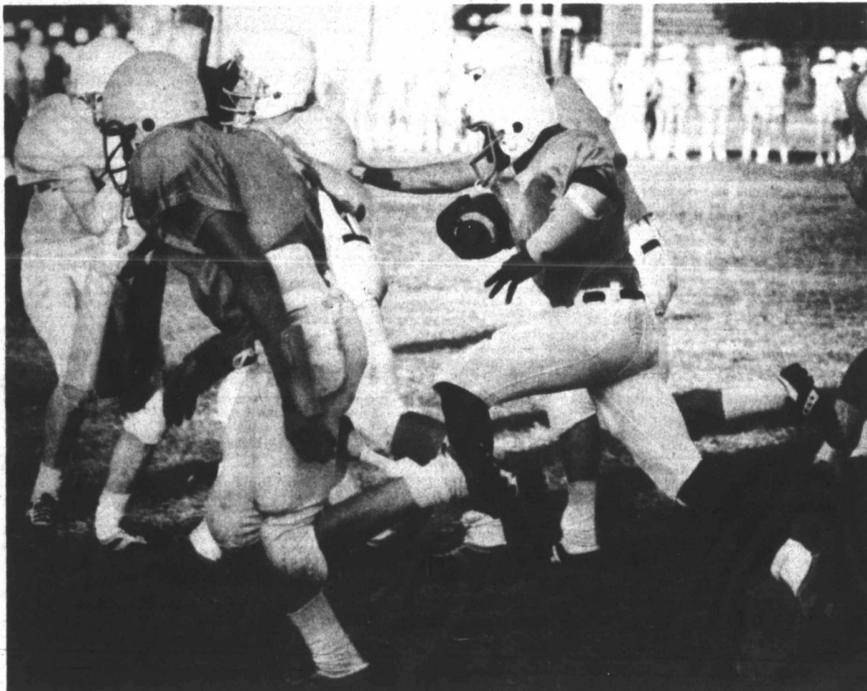

For play-by-play, Arledge wanted Curt Gowdy, then with NBC and now with CBS. But NBC wouldn't let him do it and threatened to sue. He then approached Vin Scully, a baseball announcer then who now does football and other sports for CBS. Scully wanted to stick with baseball. One guy who wanted the job was Frank Gifford, but he was still tied to CBS. So Gifford recommended Don Meredith to Arledge.

"Meredith was just out of football. He was broke and working on his second or third divorce," Arledge said. "I had never met him, but we set up a lunch and talked football. I hired him on the spot."

"That left us with two strong personalities, so I decided to change the role of play-by-play announcer and make him a little more than another stadium announcer. His role was to set the stage and let Don and Howard do the talking. I knew most of the top play-by-play guys wouldn't be willing to lay back and be the minor guy in the booth, so I picked a guy who was our fifth or sixth announcer at the time — Keith Jackson."

When Gifford, another lure for the ladies, became available the next year, Arledge replaced Jackson. "I told Keith that this would make him a star. There would be controversy over it."

Jackson is now ABC's top play-by-play announcer, and "Monday Night Football" is the most successful sports series in history.

No rivalry between Niekro boys

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The kid still is threatening to show up his big brother, but you don't get any yelps out of Phil Niekro.

"We, Joe and I, have never had any personal rivalry — not even when we go against each other," said the 40-year-old knuckleballer of the Atlanta Braves, who notched victory No. 17 by beating the New York Mets Tuesday night.

Joe Niekro, five years Phil's junior, already has passed the No. 17 plateau, though he was foiled in his bid for his 19th victory against Montreal Wednesday night. They're baseball's most illustrious pitching brothers since the Dean boys, Dizzy and Paul, toiled for the St. Louis Cardinals in the 1930s.

"I don't think the Deans had 20 the same year," the elder Niekro commented during the Braves' get-away game Wednesday in Shea Stadium. "That's the reason I'd like for Joe and me both to get 20 this year. It's within reach and we'd be the first brothers in the National League to do it."

Phil Niekro is up on his diamond history. For all the glamor that surrounded the Dean brothers, Paul never reached a 20-game season although he twice got to 19 in the 1930s when Dizzy scored 30 and 28 triumphs.

Despite the gap in their ages, the knuckleballing Niekros have had virtually paralleling careers. Except for Joe's brief tenure in the American League, they have been National Leaguers.

"We have faced each other five times," Phil recalled with a touch of relish. "Joe's won three and I've won two. The one that got to me most was two years ago in Atlanta when Joe hit a home run to beat me."

"He's never let me forget it. Now every time our teams go against each other, there's Joe over in the dugout swinging five bats, acting like Babe Ruth itching to get to the plate."

The Niekros grew up around Martins Ferry, Ohio, the only boys in a family that included an older sister. Because of the difference in age, Phil was more like a father to Joe, who idolized his big brother.

Phil Niekro is one of baseball's most phenomenal athletes — a member of the "Golden Oldie Club" that has refused to fade away. The exclusive clique includes such 40-and-over stars as the Giants' Manny Mota and Willie McCovey, each 41; Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, St. Louis' Lou Brock and San Diego's Gaylord Perry, all 40. Of this group, only Brock has indicated that 1979 will be the end of the line.

The elder Niekro attributes his longevity — a 15-year record of 213 victories and 188 defeats — to no magic formula or training technique but to luck and hard work.

"I don't run. I don't lift weights. I don't gobble vitamins. I just throw a lot. I'm always throwing. I even pitch batting practice."

course," the Carmel, Calif., resident said. "There's nothing sure in match play. You just have to have a little bit of luck."

Gove, who played collegiate golf at Weber State, said, "I think match play is tougher. The times you get in trouble are when you start watching your opponent. But, at the same time, you're always aware of who it is you're playing."

The top half of the qualifying field was paired with the bottom half today, with the first round scheduled for the morning and the second round to follow in the afternoon.

Two more rounds are slated for Friday, with the semifinals on Saturday and the 36-hole finale on Sunday.

The cut came at 146, with a 13-man playoff for 12 spots. Among those who survived the brief sudden death playoff were 1978 quarterfinalist Griff Moody of Athens, Ga., and British Amateur winner Jay Sigel of Berwyn, Pa.

Wednesday at Shaker to finish with a two-day total of 134, two strokes better than the record set in 1946 by Robert "Skeet" Riegel.

First-day leader Tim Graham of Baton Rouge, La., came up with a 73 at Canterbury and a 138 total, while Walker Cupper Mike Gove of Seattle, Wash., came in with 139 and Cook and Hoch both totaled 140.

"The guys who did well in qualifying have to get a lot of credit because the courses were tough with the wet conditions and the wind that came up today (Wednesday)," Hoch said. "But anyone in this field could win it."

Clampett, who is trying hard to put the notoriety of his banishment from last month's U.S. Open — for resorting to trick shots — behind him, agrees that no one really is the favorite at this point.

"The only thing you've got to play is the U. S. Amateur begins match play today

CLEVELAND (AP) — The 79th U.S. Amateur Golf Championship entered its match play phase today, bringing pangs of trepidation to even the top performers in the 36 holes of stroke play that preceded.

"It takes a lot of skill, but more luck to win in match play," said 1978 runnerup Scott Hoch of Wake Forest. "It's more the luck of the draw."

Hoch, who lost 5 and 4 last year at Plainfield, N.J., to John Cook of Ohio State, figures the tournament as a toss-up, despite the fact that Bobby Clampett of Brigham Young University broke the 36-hole on-site Amateur qualifying record.

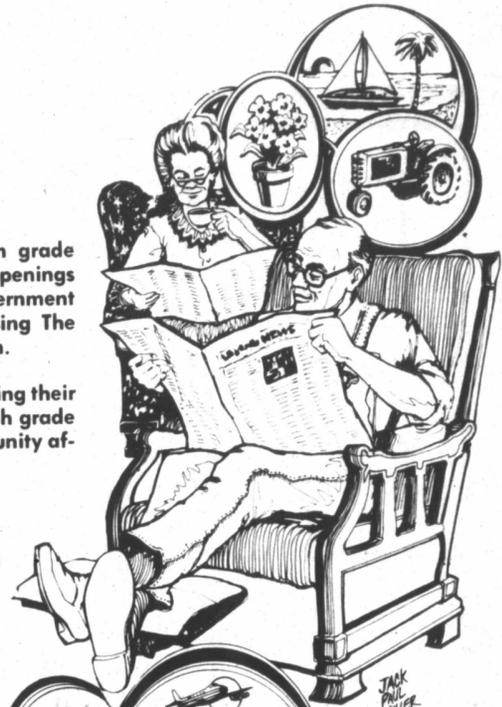

The original field of 282 was cut to 64 after 18 holes of stroke play Tuesday and Wednesday, split between Canterbury Golf Club and Shaker Heights Country Club. The four days of stroke play will all be at the longer and tougher Canterbury course.

TP&W adopts new hunting regulations

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Parks and Wildlife Commission adopted a split season Wednesday for ducks and coots except in West Texas and the Panhandle.

It also opened six Southeast Texas counties to canvasback and redhead duck hunting after having prohibited the hunting of those ducks in the counties last year.
