Bus skids on rain slick road; 15 airmen injured in wreck

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — An Air Force charter bus skidded off a rain-slick highway and overturned near here Wednesday injuring 15 airmen, none of them seriously.

A second bus, also loaded with airmen bound for Sheppard Air Force Base, left the road to avoid a collision and crashed through a fence. There were no injuries on the second bus.

The injured airmen were admitted to Sheppard Air Force Base Regional Hospital for observation.

"There were a lot of people cut up badly. Every way you looked you could see people bleeding," said Airman James Brook, 17.

Passengers said the first bus rolled over on its side then slid into a mound of dirt, uprighting itself.

"I heard people scream, then the bus swerved off the road and flipped over on its side. We could hear glass breaking and metal scraping along the road," said Airman Rick Huntsinger, 18.

He said the bus slid a short distance before hitting a mound of dirt, tilting it back on its wheels.

Another airman, Cheryl Easley, 23, of Pensacola, Fla., said she was asleep when the accident occurred.

"The bus swerved and woke me up. I heard screams and all I could see was grass. I just crossed my fingers and hung on," she said.

The bus was northbound on U.S. 281 about a mile and a half south of Scotland.

The spokesman said the airmen graduated from Lackland Air Force Base Training Center on Monday. They were en route to Sheppard to start their technical training, he said.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Bruce Tabor said the driver apparently lost control of the bus on the wet pavement, fishtailed, and went off the right side of the highway.

Kennedy's emergence having little impact on Carter's plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's emergence as a likely challenger for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination is having little visible impact on President Carter's autumn political plans.

Carter, according to aides and political advisers, will do little campaign-type traveling before November and will not hasten an announcement of his own candidacy because of Kennedy's moves.

In fact, the one new item added to Carter's political agenda for the coming six weeks was prompted largely by the president's decision to leave heavy politicking for later, as he had planned before the Massachusetts senator moved closer to a direct challenge.

The added item is a get-together here with 150 to 200 prominent Democratic supporters from around the country who, by their presence, will seek to demonstrate that Kennedy has no monopoly on the allegiance of party wheelhorses.

The idea emerged from a meeting of Carter backers Monday night at the Watergate apartment of Robert Strauss, a political ally who is Carter's special Mideast peace negotiator.

Some at the meeting urged that the president, who was not present, hasten an announcement of his candidacy because of Kennedy.

Administration sources who asked not to be named reported Wednesday that White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan and Carter press secretary Jody Powell argued that the president should bide his time, concentrating in the coming weeks on his effort to build a record of legislative success in Congress.

A clear majority agreed, after which the idea of a dinner or similarly well-publicized function for Carter supporters was broached because participants from outside Washington "said they had people who were itching to get going" in support of the president, a White House aide said.

He added that there was general agreement the president should not openly campaign so far in advance of the presidential primaries, the first of which occurs Feb. 26 in New Hampshire.

The function, for which no date has been set, is being organized by Robert J. Keefe, a political consultant and Carter ally.

Another result of the meeting was a move Tuesday by Powell to dispel any doubts about the president's quest for re-election. "I can't imagine that there is any doubt in anyone's mind" about that, he said.

At present, Carter has only two trips on his tentative schedule this fall — to Chicago Oct. 15 for a Democratic fund-raiser and to Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 20.

The Cambridge event will find Carter sharing the platform with Kennedy at the dedication of the John F. Kennedy Library.

Powell told reporters Wednesday that Carter's immediate travel itinerary is so skimpy there are no present plans for him to visit Florida again, in advance of a mid-November non-binding vote among Democratic convention participants on their preference for the 1980 nomination.

Kennedy has said his decision on the 1980 race will hinge on Carter's efforts to ease the current economic situation. He has suggested more forceful implementation of wage-price controls and indicated he believes a tax cut may be called for within a year.

The senator elaborated on those concerns as they relate to energy Wednesday in remarks to the American Newspaper Publishers Association, saying he believes tougher energy conservation requirements would be cheaper and more effective than a major synthetic fuels development program.

Earthquakes rattle through Italy's heart

ROME (AP) — A strong earthquake followed by nearly 300 weaker tremors rattled the mountainous heart of Italy, killing at least five people, damaging buildings in dozens of towns and sending thousands of terrified citizens from their beds into the streets.

"I saw the walls trembling from floor to ceiling," said a nun operating the switchboard at the Vatican outside Rome late Wednesday. "The quake swung a door open and kept it going and banging. My chair slid under me."

Damage was concentrated near Norcia, a medieval town of 7,000 in hilly Umbria 70 miles north of Rome. All five deaths were reported in villages close to Norcia, where St. Benedict was born 14 centuries ago.

In San Marco, three members of the same family died when their house collapsed, and police said two persons were crushed by falling debris in Chiavano.

Authorities evacuated the Norcia hospital, and streets in the town and villages throughout the Nerina Valley were covered with stones, bricks and fallen wall fragments.

The earthquake shook palace and church walls in Rome and the Vatican. Chandeliers swayed and mattresses slid to the floor. Dogs howled and the earth's movement set off thousands of anti-theft sirens on automobiles.

Romans fled into the streets still clad in pajamas and tugging crying children. Similar scenes occurred in dozens of towns and cities, including the port of Naples, where some women took mattresses into the streets and slept in the open with their children.

Tens of thousands of people camped out overnight in Umbria, and widespread panic was cited in other areas not as severely damaged. Most of the 40,000 citizens of Rieti, halfway between Rome and Norcia, took to the streets, and long lines of cars headed for the countryside from nearby Amatrice, Castel Santa Angelo, Leonessa and Montenero.

Police reported some damage in Rome, but said there were no casualties and that architectural monuments such as the Colosseum and the Forum appeared intact. Residents of Florence said they felt the tremors but saw no damage.

In Rieti, chief city of the ancient Sabines, the earthquake knocked down battlements from 13th century town wall, and chimneys and cornices from medieval palaces.

Seismologists said the first quake struck shortly before midnight, and that nearly 300 weaker jolts were registered up to 9 a.m. today. The U.S. National Earthquake Center in Golden, Colo., put the force of the quake at 5.8 on the Richter scale.

Italian experts in Perugia, Umbria, said the epicenter was probably at Mount Tazio, 12 miles to the south.

No evidence against Connally

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Banking Committee says his staff has no evidence that Republican presidential hopeful John B. Connally acted improperly as treasury secretary to influence the granting of national bank charters.

"First of all, neither the committee nor its staff is investigating Mr. Connally," Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Wednesday in a statement delivered on the Senate floor.

"Second, the staff has found no evidence showing that Mr. Connally exercised improper influence in the granting of national bank charters," Proxmire said.

Connally, who served 15 months as treasury secretary during the Nixon administration, also has denied any wrongdoing.

"Being exonerated comes as no surprise," Connally said in a statement released by his campaign headquarters today. "I said from the outset the charge was politically inspired and totally baseless."

Proxmire made his statement following publication of a copyright article Sunday in the Dallas Morning News that said the committee's staff was looking into an "unusual pattern" of national bank charters granted to Texas banks.

The article said seven banks in Texas received charters during Connally's tenure as treasury secretary against recommendation of the staff of the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency and the agency's deputy director. The charters were approved by then-Comptroller William D. Camp, like Connally, a Texan.

The office of the comptroller is a Treasury Department agency responsible for issuing national bank charters. Among the seven banks was one in which seven Connally aides and a son of the former Texas governor were original stockholders.

Proxmire said that in the course of an investigation into chartering practices, the banking committee staff reviewed more than 1,000 applications for national bank charters filed between 1970 and 1977.

On the subject of the seven banks, he said the committee staff "carefully examined circumstances" surrounding the decision to issue charters.

Firefighters battling blazes in heat, wind

A 20,000-acre fire singed the city limits of Ventura as hundreds of firefighters battling hot weather and erratic winds struggled to quell at least 16 blazes consuming 90,000 acres of California brush and timber.

Since Saturday, at least 50 homes have been destroyed or damaged by the fires, which have been fanned by hot weather and erratic winds, running up damage and firefighting costs into the millions of dollars.

However, state fire meteorologists, who work full-time on fire weather predictions, are forecasting a gradual increase in sea breezes that could bring down temperatures to the lower 80s in the Los Angeles basin by the weekend and provide relief from low inland humidity.

Kenneth Hahn, chairman of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, saying "one more fire and we're in big trouble," declared his county a disaster area Wednesday and suggested that supervisors in Ventura and Santa Barbara Counties do the same.

"My people have just about had it," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Dave Blaine of the firefighters who have come from as far as Maine to help control the flames.

Hundreds of people in the Ventura area fled their homes Wednesday when that blaze, which began Tuesday, came within two miles of the city limits. Fire department officials said later the city of 64,800 was in no danger and only a barn was destroyed before fire fighters beat back the blaze.

"It was quite a sight to see — the fire coming up toward the town," said Ventura County Fire Capt. Dick Perry. "It was like a wall of flames."

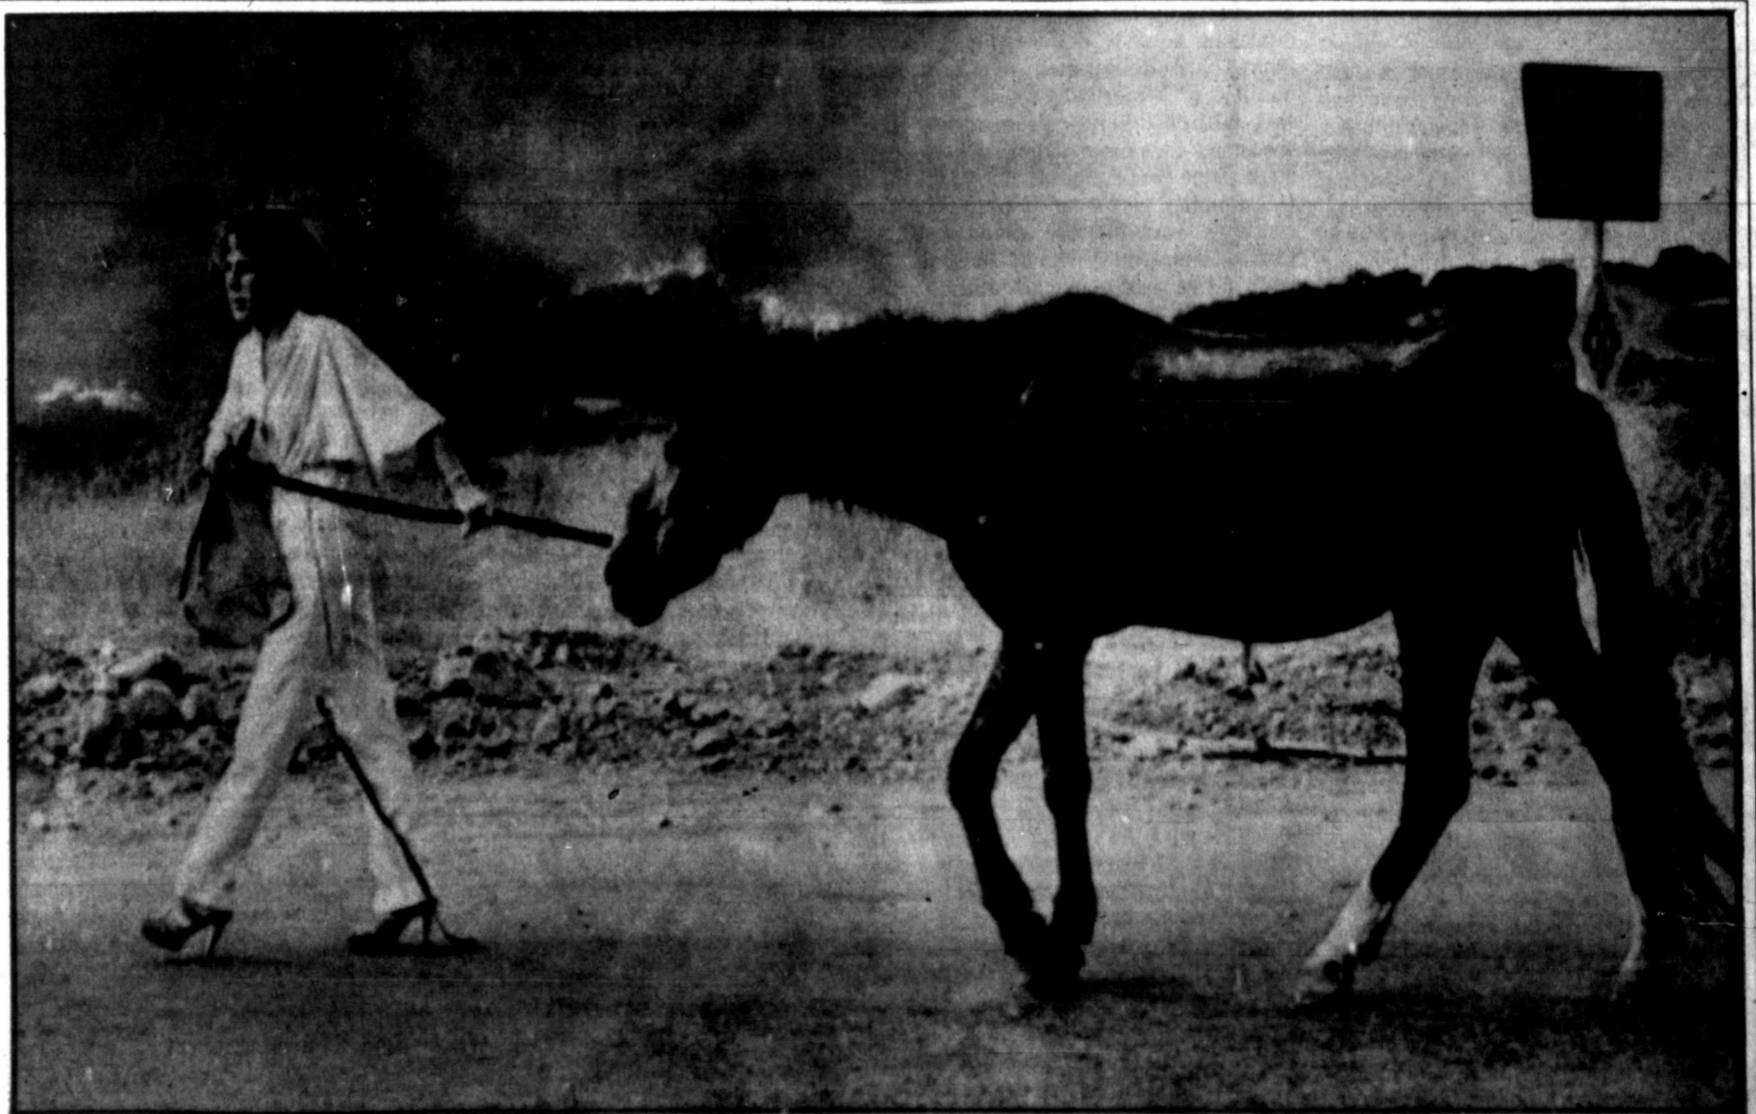

Meanwhile, a half-dozen houses were in ashes near Goleta, in Santa Barbara County 100 miles northwest of Los Angeles, after a 4,000-acre fire roared through Eagle Canyon and into the Los Padres National Forest.

Fires also burned across 41,000 acres in the Angeles National Forest above Los Angeles, including 3,000 acres north of Claremont in eastern Los Angeles County.

In Northern California, 6,800 acres of forest burned near Placerville, 50 miles northeast of Sacramento, and 3,000 acres went up in flames in Plumas County, 100 miles northeast of Sacramento.

Meanwhile, the California Division of Forestry was battling its biggest fire of the year in San Diego County as erratic winds sent flames racing across more than 8,000 acres of brush in rural Dulzura, 30 miles east of San Diego.

Officials said the end was in sight in the Los Angeles National Forest fire which has charred 31,000 acres. Forest Service spokesman Lee Redding placed the cost for fighting the fire at $2.6 million to $2.8 million. Watershed damages should run upwards of $24 million, he said.

Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - One of these days, someone is going to rename Capitol Hill "Cravenheart Crest" in recognition of the congressional penchant for grabbing the shears whenever fish-or-cut-b.it time arrives on the tough ones.

They're at it again up there, it's time over the great balance-the-budget issue which prompted so much repentant rhetoric just a few short months ago when the sting of the 1978 elections was still sharp and calls for a constitutional amendment still clamorous.

By the end of the month, both the House and Senate must decide whether to stand by their previous resolve to achieve a balanced budget within the next two years or abandon the effort in favor of deficits-as-usual. And guess which course they are virtually certain to choose?

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, is waging a valiant but lonely battle to drain some of the red ink from the federal budget in fiscal 1980, which begins Oct. 1, rather than adding to it.

But the power barons who chair other Senate committees are furiously resisting pressure from the Muskie panel to pare by $4 billion various spending proposals they have already approved in order to keep the 1980 deficit below this year's $29.9 billion.

And in the House, not even the Budget Committee itself seems very interested in living up to the earlier promise to reduce the deficit next year and balance the budget the year after.

"What's $4 billion here or there?" one House staffer asked. "No matter what we do, the deficit will go up because of inflation and the deterioration of the economy. So why pick fights?"

Why, indeed? A good many reputable economists claim the deficits which have accompanied every federal budget of the 1970s had little or nothing to do with inflation, the economy's biggest single problem.

And it is indeed true that a recession this coming year will inevitably drive the deficit above the $23 billion Congress projected last spring when first planning the 1980 budget. Even Muskie and his Budget Committee colleagues concede that, allowing for a $28 billion gap between outlays and revenues.

But $28 billion is still less than this year's deficit, and it is movement in the right direction. The deficit has been shrinking, little by little, every year since fiscal 1976 and a deliberate decision to reverse that trend surely ought not be made without a pretty compelling reason.

For the fact remains that regardless of what the so-called experts say, most Americans are absolutely convinced that big federal deficits are the prime cause of the inflation which has ravaged the nation. And they see no good reason to moderate their own wage and price demands, or their increasingly huge debt loads, as long as the government is so blithely spending money it hasn't got.

Congress took heed of this sentiment in adopting its first fiscal 1980 budget resolution last spring — the non-binding version. But now that the deadline is here for the second, and binding, resolution nobody wants to play Scrooge.

In both the House and Senate, the spending committees are coming up with all sorts of excuses about the rigidity of the budget resolution, the change in economic circumstances and the worthiness of the projects they have so cheerfully approved.

What it all boils down to, however, is simple political cowardice. Spending money is easy, a fine way to win friends and influence votes. But cutting the budget takes guts, and a willingness to offend the beneficiaries of particular federal programs that are put to the knife.

Since the political heat for a balanced budget seems to have subsided temporarily, Congress apparently figures no one will care if the federal deficit once again starts climbing.

Today is Thursday, Sept. 20, the 263rd day of 1979. There are 102 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1519, the Portuguese navigator, Ferdinand Magellan, set out from Spain on a voyage to find a western passage to the Indies. One of his ships eventually circled the world.

On this date:

In 480 B.C., the Greeks defeated the Persians in a decisive naval engagement, the Battle of Salamis in the Aegean Sea.

In 1565, Spaniards massacred French Huguenots at Port Royal, Fla.

In 1881, Chester Arthur took the oath as the 21st President of the United States after the death of President James Garfield, who was shot by an assassin in July.

In 1938, a hurricane swept over parts of New Jersey, New York and New England, taking nearly 700 lives.

In 1973, the British-French supersonic airliner, Concorde, made its first landing in the U.S. at the dedication of the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Ten years ago: A Vietnamese airliner and an American Air Force jet collided over South Vietnam, killing 64 Vietnamese.

Five years ago: The estimated death toll was put at 8,000 in northern Honduras as Hurricane Fifi lashed the Central American country.

One year ago: South Africa's Prime Minister John Vorster announced his resignation without giving a reason.

Today's birthdays: Actress Sophia Loren is 45. Fashion designer James Galanos is 55.

Thought for today: I like to see a man proud of the place in which he lives. I like to see a man who lives in it so that his place will be proud of him — President Abraham Lincoln, 1809-1865.

Battery cars on the way

High gasoline prices and the production of an electric car which can travel 75 miles in city driving may change the habits and make-up of the two-car family. A Chicago Tribune story tells of a test vehicle produced by General Electric with Chrysler Corp. as the subcontractor.

Soon there will be 165 of the test cars at five sites where industrial organizations have agreed to use them on an experimental basis. There have already been 10,690 electric cars sold in the United States since 1976. The U.S. Postal Service is the largest user having 350 now in service and with a stated intention of adding 750 more.

The new electric test car is much more advanced than any of the ones in use today. It can accelerate from zero to 30 miles-per-hour in nine seconds. Its highway range increases to 100 miles before recharging and a complete recharge takes 10 hours at a cost of about one dollar.

Mass production of this car has indicated a retail price of about $6,400, cruising speed is 50 miles-per-hour and the car has a passing speed of 60 miles-per-hour.

As near as we can figure it appears that the operation of the electric car will be in the area of operating a subcompact with gasoline at 35 cents per gallon.

It is estimated that a new set of batteries will be needed after about 35,000 miles and that cost would be $800. It is difficult to compare this renewal cost with the depreciation and extra repairs for gas-engine cars but it seems this factor's about equal.

Technology on batteries is moving ahead and we can look forward to the range being lengthened if a major breakthrough occurs.

Even without more efficient batteries, used as an urban car, it could meet nearly 95 percent of automobile use. Going to and from work and other city uses should keep it well within its capabilities. The car is designed to be recharged by simply plugging it into ordinary household current.

For two-car families, one would probably be a long range current gasoline model, at least for some time. However, as the use of the electric car catches on, people might decide to rent a big car, van or motorhome for occasional use on longer trips. If this became family practice, the electric could become the only type cars many people would buy.

We don't think that range increase in the electric car is near as an important factor as the many advantages offered over its gasoline burning counterpart. There is a great decrease in moving parts, no oil changes and far less mechanical repairs for the electric car owner.

As more and more power generating facilities move to coal and nuclear fuel and electric cars come into use, the saving of petroleum would be tremendous. This would be a great stride forward in lessening our dependence on foreign oil sources.

Nation's Press

Well-aimed hostage children

(Wall Street Journal)

For some time now, the American left has been fighting one of its recurrent campaigns against this country's basic social structure. It's not just that the society has specific flaws needing correction, the radical criticism goes; it's that our social arrangements are fundamentally unjust, because they permit too much inequality among citizens.

This accusation has set off a bunch of politically loaded sociological debates. What does the country's income distribution look like, and how much is it changing? More important, how much social mobility do we have, and what are an individual's chances of making it to the top? The critics have used these debates to press their vision of a more egalitarian, more government-directed society. Now they've found a new weapon to use in pushing their case: the issue of children.

Recently the newspapers have been giving a lot of play to a new book by Richard DeLone called "Small Futures: Children, Inequality and the Limits of Liberal Reform." It is not a good book, but it is put out by — and being well publicized by — the Carnegie Council on Children, a group set up by the rich and prestigious Carnegie Corporation to study the position of children in America and recommend policies to benefit them.

Mr. DeLone was associate director of the Carnegie Council, and his book, as its preface says, was "evolved in a dialogue of several years between its author and the members and other staff" there. The purpose of the book is to demolish the "comforting" belief that America's children grow up in an environment of substantial social mobility, where schools and social programs help cancel out the disadvantages that some children bear.

Instead, says Mr. DeLone, our children's futures are determined by the frozen quality of American social structure. Inequalities in American society are shocking. Income distribution has been static since World War II, the top fifth of U.S. families gets over 40 percent of the country's family income while the bottom fifth gets under 6 percent, and only one male in five rises above his father's social status — if the data are "adjusted" in certain ways.

The argument goes one: Our reforms, aimed at giving children the skills to rise out of poverty, have failed to reduce the gaps. We've treated poverty as an absolute state that everyone can be rescued from, instead of recognizing that it is a relative condition, determined not just by absolute levels of wealth but by its distribution. We've put too much stress on improving the capabilities of individual children. We've been governed by psychological theories of child development that only hide the extent to which inequalities in social structure play the prime role in stunting children's growth.

So if we really want to care for our children, what should we do? Why we should redistribute income, of course. Mr. DeLone wants to reduce the income gap between top-fifth and bottom-fifth families to a ratio of four to one, instead of its present eight to one. He suggests a steep negative income tax to do this, and perhaps "direct political and legislative intervention" to require, "in simple but strictly enforced requirements, that social investment and employment goals are met as a precondition for doing business."

There is something rather strange about the empirical part of Mr. DeLone's argument. The authors that he's fond of quoting to show the horrible rigidity of the American class system often say in their own writings, contrary to his interpretation, that they have actually discovered quite a bit of mobility in this country. Christopher Jencks, for one, says he's found "an enormous amount of economic mobility from one generation to the next," and "nearly as much economic inequality among brothers raised in the same homes as in the general population."

But problems like these come from a much more central political fact about the book: Mr. DeLone and the Carnegie Council are spending a great deal of tax-exempt foundation money to push the view that we cannot help our children significantly unless we transform our society. They are trying to enlist the special concern we all naturally feel for children in behalf of a highly partisan political agenda, ignoring the possibility that the agenda may not be good for economic growth vital to future generations.

This is not a new tactic; there has been a regular tendency among proponents of a more powerful government to start their campaigns with the issue of children, whose helplessness makes their need for protection so obvious. But in this instance the Carnegie Council runs a risk. It says that the traditional attempts to fight child neglect and deprivation are relatively insignificant, and that only income redistribution will do. But for those who choose not to redistribute, the council also provides a nice rationale for doing nothing at all.

This is a rather cynical use to make of the children's issue. But it is not the first time in the history of reform that the objects of progressive thinkers' solicitude have been made hostage to their protectors' larger social dreams.

The new way to get rich

The number of American workers working remains at a near record high — more than 96 million.

But the second-quarter jobless rate persists at 5.7 percent.

There is something wrong when our nation carries the burden of 5.8 million unemployed while the number of help-wanted ads in newspapers continues to run more than 150 percent ahead of five years ago.

Many of those jobs begging for workers willing to work are hard work.

And the jobless protest to welfare counselors that they don't know how to be auto mechanics, machine tool operators, typewriter repairmen. Even though those jobs now pay enough to get rich on!

Many of today's jobs are either underqualified or overqualified for work.

Admissions deans everywhere tell me that the new interest, even among freshmen and sophomores, is with "vocational education." That's quite a departure from the campus do-littles of the Sixties.

Additionally, vocational schools are being rediscovered.

For one thing, a trade school education will cost a maximum of $6,400 whereas the cost of going to college now ranges from $13,000 to $22,000.

And the trade school graduate is assured of more prompt acceptance in the present job market.

Of course, there is an overlap. A private college or a state college may also teach agriculture or engineering or computer technology or some such skill.

But the University of Michigan Research Center has conducted a study which indicates that 35 percent of our nation's labor force is now in a job which someone with less education could handle.

These researchers found a carpenter who went back to college to better himself and became a teacher.

When he graduated the best offer he could get as a teacher paid less than $10,000. He went back to carpentering for $20,000.

The advantages of a trade school education are being recognized. The proprietary trade school industry now comprises 7,000 schools and is a $3 billion annual business.

Both class attendance and correspondence schools are now offering courses in real estate, insurance, securities, accounting, medical and dental aide training, secretarial work, and auto mechanics, electronics, drafting, air conditioning and refrigeration, data processing and computer programming.

Watch it! With federal and state tax dollars available, some trade schools have concentrated more on signing up students than on educating them.

Before you sign up for a course, ask for a list of the companies which have employed the school's graduates. Find out what they think of the school.

They used to say a college education was worth 24 percent more lifetime income than a high school education.

Now, for many, there is something more lucrative than either — education for a blue-collar job, many of which pay more than $25,000 a year.

Mineral bonanza

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

If the Carter administration were firmly committed to the national interest, it would be pressing hard for U.S. control over deep seabed areas suitable for undersea mining. Unfortunately, the administration takes a weak position in this, as in other areas.

Billions of dollars are at stake in the endless Law of the Sea conferences. The United States has unequalled know-how in deep sea mining. It has the financial strength and engineering expertise in the private sector to exploit the huge deposits of minerals on the deep seabed. The administration is catering to the undeveloped nations, however, which want a big piece of this pie, though they are unable to pay for it and, in many cases, don't even have coastlines.

Ambassador-at-Large Eliot L. Richardson, who conducts the Law of the Sea negotiations for the United States, refers to the need to "accommodate the interests of the landlocked and geographically disadvantaged states."

In other words, the Carter administration is treating the Law of the Sea negotiations as a global welfare program. No reason exists why Chad or Mongolia, for example, should share in the wealth extracted from the oceans by American, Western and Japanese companies.

The Law of the Sea conferences, however, have produced the concept of an International Seabed Authority for redistributing undersea wealth to "landlocked and geographically disadvantaged states."

This means that American companies, allowed to conduct the deep sea mining, would have to channel profits to countries that contribute not a single dollar or bit of expertise to the ocean mining operations. That's a wholly unjustified transfer of wealth from innovative, resourceful nations to states with backward economies and no maritime frontiers.

The amount of wealth involved is colossal. The Manchester Guardian in Britain estimates that a trillion tons of manganese nodules lie on the ocean floor of the Pacific. This and other sources of undersea wealth aren't the "common

Bergland blasts railroads

DALLAS (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says an inefficient use of boxcars forced Texas grain to be stockpiled on the ground in some places and said a "total reshaping" of the railroad industry is in order.

However, Bergland told an audience in Dallas Wednesday — including West Texas farmers who watched grain spill into streets while awaiting delivery two months ago — that the transportation industry is functioning better than generally believed.

The number of boxcars is not the problem, said Bergland. "They're just not efficiently used."

However he acknowledged problems with the railroads.

"I think the time will come when we'll have to rebuild our railroads. It will take 10 to 20 years, but we need to get started," he said.

Inflation and beef imports drew the biggest rise out of the mild-mannered crowd at a plush downtown hotel, dressed more like bankers than farmers.

A Sulphur Springs farmer asked what can be done about inflation that causes sharp increases in the cost of working the land.

"I'm taking steps you won't like," Bergland responded. "A balanced federal budget alone won't do the job. Balanced budgets — plural — will, both in public and in private."

Bergland said he is tightening his department's budget wherever he can, even by attacking waste within school lunch programs. "I have a $67,000 a year salary, but my son Franklin receives a subsidy for his milk at school. I propose we not subsidize my son, Franklin," Bergland said.

Later in a speech before the Anti-Defamation League, Bergland said increased American agricultural production will be an important tool in the fight against inflation.

"The way to control inflation is to produce," said Bergland, adding that Americans should stop depending on government to stop inflation.

"Instead of depending on constrictions and control the incentive should be provided to producers," he said.

Storm spares Houston more problems but authorities fear additional flooding

HOUSTON (AP) — A storm that punished the South Texas coast with hurricane-force winds and torrential downpours, forcing hundreds of persons to evacuate flooded homes, roared past Southeast Texas early today, apparently sparing already flooded Houston more problems.

Earlier forecasts had indicated the Houston area and the upper Texas coast might get an additional 10 inches of rainfall.

Rain was falling in Houston early today, but not as heavy as had been earlier forecast. Forecasts called for the rain to end from west to east across Southeast Texas today.

But authorities feared that bayous filled with water from earlier rains might flood more as the runoff increased.

The storm had been drifting slowly towards Houston, but it picked up speed and moved into Louisiana early today.

But Houston was not without flooding problems. Harris County Deputy Sheriff Frank Balcone estimated that 3,000 persons had to be evacuated from their homes in the county.

Harris County assistant Civil Defense director John Caswell said "We've had more widespread flooding, more requests rescues and opened more shelters than at any time I know of."

Red Cross spokesman Bill Baron of Harris County said 600 persons were in seven emergency shelters in the county early today. He said he did not know how many persons were in the shelters in other counties, but he said the Red Cross has 12 shelters in Brazoria County, 11 in Galveston County, 2 in Matagorda County and one each in Wharton and Fort Bend counties.

Many major Houston streets, including sections of major freeways and portion of Interstate 10, were closed because of high water.

At least 300 Corpus Christi residents and several hundred other area residents were driven from their homes Wednesday by flooding, and water several feet deep was reported in houses and vehicles in parts of the city.

Aransas Pass was drenched by 13 inches of rain Wednesday and Corpus Christi reported eight inches.

Winds gusted up to 86 miles per hour — hurricane force winds are 74 mph or more — as police used high-rise buses to evacuate people.

Cecil Palmer, chief meteorologist for the National Weather System in Alvin, said Wednesday that his office was keeping close tabs on the storm's steady, but slow drift toward Houston, where some area residents already have been forced to flee from rising waters.

The county sheriff's department marine division was using boats to evacuate those who wanted to leave from Scarsdale, a subdivision in southeast Harris County hard hit when heavy rain drenched the area during Tropical Storm Claudette July 26-27.

"We have more Houston streets flooded than I've ever seen before," Caswell said Wednesday evening.

Houston already had received more than four inches of rain by Wednesday night, and some areas had eight inches within a 24-hour period.

Scouts take trip

Several area Boy Scouts from Troop 414 of Pampa recently participated in a mystery campout.

Unaware of where they were going, the scouts were surprised to find that their destination was Wichita Mountains National Wildlife Refuge near Lawton, Oklahoma.

Lacemaker absorbed with work

NORTHVALE, N.J. (AP) - Her hands move quickly but the work goes ever so slowly. No matter. Finishing in a hurry is not Mrs. Gunvor Jorgensen's purpose.

She explained: "It's like reading a good book. You get completely absorbed in it and are anxious to know how it comes out, but it's so enjoyable you hate for it to end."

"Besides," she said, "I don't do it to sell it. I do it because I love it, and to preserve an honorable art."

Mrs. Gunvor Jorgensen is a lacemaker.

Honorable, yes, and more. It is an art as ancient as a pharaoh's tomb, as precise as a spider's web, as romantic as a bridal veil, as innocent as a crib coverlet, and Mrs. Jorgensen, a gift to America from Denmark, is one of its most respected practitioners.

She is also quick to point out to crossword puzzle fans that, no, she does not tat.

"I do some tatting," she said. "I do some embroidery. I do crocheted lace and knitted lace. I do all the different types of lace. But what I do best, and enjoy most, is bobbin lace."

Tatting, she explained, with admirable patience, is done with a single thread and a shuttle.

Bobbin lace is done with dozens of threads, hundreds, and is done with - bobbins: thin spindles about four inches long with thread wound around the top and a bulb at the bottom as a grip.

Some bobbins are simple, functional tools; others are finely carved in wood, or ivory. "The custom in Denmark," she said, "was for the young men to carve the bobbins for their sweethearts. The fancier the bobbin, the more welcome the gift."

She disappeared upstairs and returned with a lacing pillow, a lacemaker's workbench.

Horace Mann to hold open house

The Horace Mann Elementary School PTA will be hosting a parent's night tonight at 7:00 p.m., beginning with a musical program presented by the students.

After the entertainment, which will be held in the gym, the parents will go to their children's rooms while the students remain in the gym.

Each teacher will give a 15 minute talk to the parents about this year's goals for their class. Afterwards, there will be time for discussion between the parents and teacher.

Other area schools will be holding open house in the coming weeks. Steven F. Austin School will be open to parents at 7:00 p.m. Monday.

Travis will have two nights open to parents; next Thursday at 7:00 p.m. for kindergarten through second grade parents, and Oct. 4 will be open for the parents of the third through fifth grades. After a short PTA business meeting at 7:30 p.m. next Thursday, Woodrow Wilson Elementary will open to give the parents a chance to meet their children's teachers.

Motion to revoke probation denied

A motion to revoke the probation of Thomas Etheridge, 19, convicted in 1977 of car theft was not granted Wednesday in 223rd District Court.

The motion was submitted by District Attorney Harold Comer who alleged that Etheridge had failed to report to probation officers since February of this year.

The motion was denied by Judge Don Cain upon recommendation from Comer after Etheridge testified that he had failed to appear because he had been traveling throughout the west as an oil field worker.

Cain, however, ordered Etheridge to serve 30 days in the county jail as an addition to the conditions of his original probation. Etheridge was convicted in August of 1977 of car theft, fined $300, and placed on eight years probation.

During the hearing, Comer noted that Etheridge's travels outside of the county were a violation of the conditions of his probation. But the district attorney said he recommended the probation not be revoked because Etheridge had been employed, had committed no other offenses, and had apparently followed other conditions of his probation.

Pampans asked to review program

Jason Lee Luck, Jr., President, Choir Boosters Club, will conduct the business meeting followed by a short meeting of the executive board.

Preparations underway for papal visit

Film-fam artists in Boston are peddling fake tickets for seats at a papal Mass, and officials in Chicago are piling concrete blocks on a parking garage to test whether it can support the throngs of people expected to attend Pope John Paul II's Mass there.

Meanwhile, squabbles over who will pay for what during the pope's visit next month are being ironed out, and church officials at the Vatican are puzzled over the fuss.

"It's ridiculous," said the Rev. Vincent O'Keefe, an American Jesuit official, reacting to controversy over use of public property for Masses and public money for crowd control and the construction of platforms.

An Italian prelate, who asked not to be identified, said, "It's a classic case of one being unable to see the forest for the trees. The pope is not only a religious leader. He is a world leader and a head of state. I am puzzled why his visit cannot be perceived as a joyous and peaceful occasion that will help bring them together."

In Boston, state Rep. Michael F. Flaherty warned that hucksters are going door to door in some neighborhoods offering for $4.50 tickets to a Mass on Oct. 1, the first day of John Paul's six-day visit to the United States.

"The Mass on the Boston Common is free to everyone," Flaherty said. "These schemes are committing a most heinous crime."

Flaherty said he knew of one elderly woman who purchased a ticket for a "seat of honor" at the Mass.

An crowd that could reach 2 million people is expected for a Mass on Oct. 5 in Chicago's Grant Park. Officials say it is likely thousands unable to get into the park will seek a nearby vantage point, like the roof of the Monroe Street Underground Garage.

In Des Moines, church officials estimate the pope's four-hour visit Oct. 4 will cost about $1.2 million. Aides to the Des Moines Diocese said public money would be used only for security and the church would pay for the rest.

The city of Boston appropriated $750,000 Wednesday for crowd control during the visit.

TEXAS

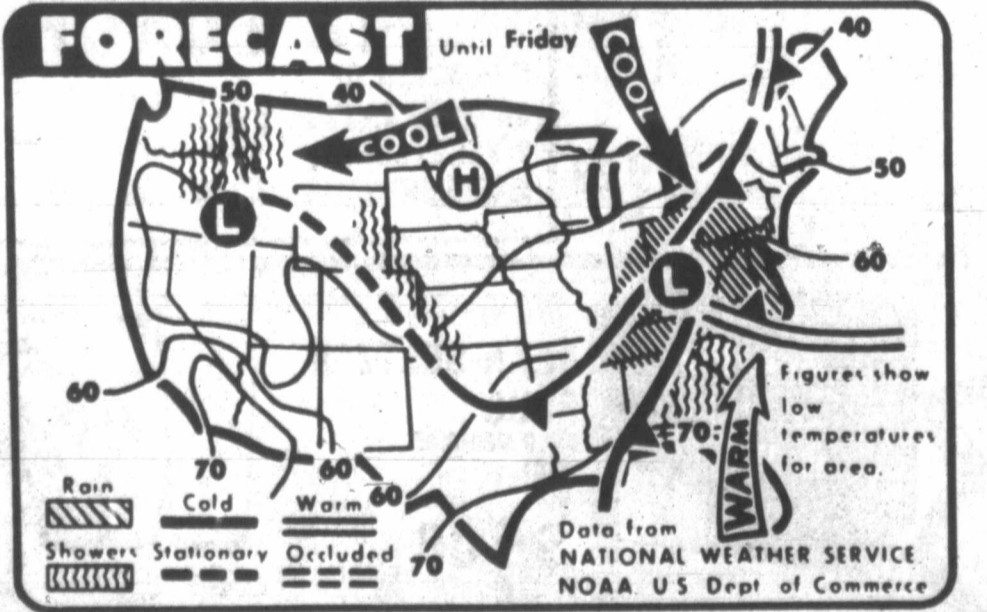

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - A storm that punished the South Texas coast with hurricane-force winds and torrential downpours, forcing hundreds of persons to evacuate flooded homes, moved out of Corpus Christi and was drifting north toward already rain-soaked Houston.

"I think we will see rainfall amounts (at Houston) in the morning much like they had in the Corpus Christi area," said National Weather Service meteorologist Kenneth Crawford. "I would anticipate 10 inch rainfall centers along the upper Texas coast."

At least 300 Corpus Christi residents and several hundred other area residents were driven from their homes Wednesday by flooding, and water several feet deep was reported in houses and vehicles in parts of the city.

Aransas Pass was drenched by 13 inches of rain Wednesday and Corpus Christi reported eight inches.

Winds gusted up to 86 miles per hour - hurricane force winds are 74 mph or more RAIN AND SHOWERS are expected through Friday morning for most of the East. Small areas of showers are forecast for the western Plains and the northern Rockies. Cooler temperatures are expected for the Plains and the Great Lakes. Warm weather is forecast for the Southwest and Southeast.

Purdue picked to upend Notre Dame

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

There's nothing like college football to turn grown, dignified men and women into a babel of banner-waving, horn-toting juveniles. They go into spasms over cleated knights in plastic and synthetic armor who spend three hours wrestling for a result that makes the mob want to tear down the goalposts.

The combatants are distinguishable by their flamboyant colors and weird nicknames. There are scores of Tigers and Bears, plus Trojans, Spartans, Boiler-makers, Spiders and even Webfoots and Buckeyes (a hard Ohio nut with a big brown eye).

But in the final analysis, only mathematics count. Last week our score was a gaudy 41-8. 837 with the Fighting Irish (Notre Dame) and Bruins (UCLA) the surprise specials. Season score: 71-20, 780.

Expect no drastic upheavals this week. Southern California 33, Minnesota 20: How can a Trojan on a white horse be unseated by a Gopher? Alabama 37, Baylor 7: They call them the Crimson Tide. Red Elephants and Scarlet Doom. This one is the Bear (Bryant) vs. the Bears.

Oklahoma 47, Tulsa 13: The always formidable Sooners rely on a wishbone ball-handling Houdini named Julius Caesar Watts. What?

Texas 34, Iowa State 9: The belated debut of the "Hook 'Em Horns" gang. The Longhorns have a hatched man named Hatchett.

Purdue 19, Notre Dame 15: The Boiler-makers will do a little sodering on last week's conquerors of Michigan. Michigan 43, Kansas 3: Speaking of Michigan, they bounce back with B.J. Dickey and a more diversified attack. What's a Wolverine?

Penn State 30, Texas A&M 13: The best team in the East still gives ground grudgingly. Seriously, now, are there any lions in Nittany?

Nebraska 35, Iowa 9: Shhh, shhh, shhh. Not being risqué, but is it true avid Cornhusker fans even wear red unmentionables?

Michigan State 33, Miami (O.) 10: If good things come in clusters, can Spartan gridders match their basketball brothers?

Mississippi 19, Missouri 14: If Mizzou has to be shown, Steve Sloan, Ole Miss' young sideline genius, may have something to show.

Washington 25, Oregon 14: The Huskies have quarterbacks with intriguing names — Tom Porras (porous?) and Tom Flick.

North Carolina 25, Pittsburgh 20: Pitt has a lot of talent that gets slowed in rich Southern tar, whatever that is.

Florida State 32, Miami (Fla.) 10: An intrastate rivalry that should go to the Seminoles. Do they really carry tomahawks?

Arkansas 23, Oklahoma State 7: Lou Holtz's quarterback Kevin Scanlon broke all of Joe Namath's passing marks at Beaver Falls, Pa.

Brown 21, Yale 14: A left-handed quarterback named Larry Carbone should paint Yale's blue bluer.

'Muscles' Gray earns Associated Press award

By The Associated Press
Refugio Coach Ted Gray decided it would be humorous to nickname his 6-0, 140-pound son Ira, "Muscles."

Goliad failed to see the joke last Friday night when Ira "Muscles" Gray wrote himself into the record books with 14 receptions for 186 yards and touchdowns of nine, 60 and 25 yards in a 27-0 victory.

Crosby's Jerome Lockett and Bonham's Bobby Ross, a couple of running backs with real muscles and rushing statistics, also had big games last week to earn mention this week in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

Lockett, a 5-9, 170 senior, rushed 16 times for 303 yards on 16 carries, scored two touchdowns on runs of 75 and 85 yards and had touchdown runs of 41, 9 and 35 yards called back on penalties in a 33-8 victory over Magnolia.

Ross, who can bench press 400 pounds, used his strength to rush 225 yards on 19 carries and score four touchdowns in a 34-14 victory over North Lamar.

Ross ran for touchdowns of 64 and 34 yards, caught a 47-yard touchdown pass and ran 70 yards for another touchdown with a punt. Ross returned four punts 105 yards, returned one kickoff 15 yards and made nine tackles and intercepted a pass as a defensive safety.

Gray's feat equaled the fourth best receiving effort in the history of schoolboy football, surpassed only by Mike Coomer's 16 catches for McCamey in 1970 and 15 each by Bobby Burns of North Lamar in 1974 and Eric Herring of Houston Yates in 1975.

"He cuts and darts on a dime," Crosby assistant coach Ronnie Davenport said of Lockett. "He's so hard to bring down even after you get a handle on him. I'd hate to defend him. He always finds someplace to run."

Lockett had 207 yards rushing at the half and in his first carry of the third quarter ran 85 yards for a touchdown.

"He'd have had more yards but he kept getting the ball too close to the goal line," head coach George Dean said.

Ross is a 9.8 sprinter and member of Bonham's state champion sprint relay team but Coach Jimmie Brooks says his senior star utilizes his strength.

"He's got good speed but he's really just a strong runner," Brooks said. "He only had about 60 yards in our opening game. I think he was just learning to run. He really opened up last week. Now, I look for some more performances like that."

Judge voids Webster award

NEW YORK (AP) — Lonnie Shelton and Vinnie Johnson are professional basketball players without a team.

A federal judge has voided a National Basketball Association compensation award given to the Seattle SuperSonics last year for the loss of center Marvin Webster.

Judge Robert L. Carter of the Southern District of New York ruled that NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien was excessive in his compensation to the Sonics in the New York Knicks' signing of Webster.

O'Brien said he was "appalled" at Judge Carter's ruling and announced that he has directed the league's counsel "to determine the NBA's right of appeal."

Larry Fleisher, head of the NBA Players Association, which took the matter to court, said, in his opinion, Shelton would be returned to the Knicks along with the $450,000 and "Vinnie Johnson, the player Seattle drafted with the draft choice it was awarded."

"I'm not going to waste my time thinking about what could happen," Shelton said. "I have no control over the situation. I'm going to continue to work out."

"I hope they (the Knicks and Sonics) can settle the difference with money and not have to bother with the personal life of the players."

Carter, however, refused to comment on the status of the two players and the money.

National League

Reds increase lead to 2 1/2 games over Houston

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It doesn't take much to get Johnny Bench excited. Just throw him into a pennant race and watch him go to work.

Bench's two-run homer gave the Cincinnati Reds a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres and boosted their lead in the National League West to 2 1/2 games over Houston, which lost to Atlanta 6-5.

"I don't know how he could play any better, unless he got a hit every time up," said Reds Manager John McNamara of his star catcher, who is hitting .282 with 22 home runs and 75 RBI and has been the team's hottest hitter down the stretch.

"He's had a very good year, especially since the All-Star break, when he's hit over .300. And he's done some job catching."

Bench, whose torrid second half of the season places him among the favorites for the NL's most valuable player award, isn't exactly enjoying the grind.

Braves 6, Astros 5

Glenn Hubbard slammed a three-run homer and Bob Horner had a two-run shot to pace the Braves, who had another hero in Gary Matthews.

With the tying run on second and two out in the ninth, Art Howe belted a long drive to right field which Matthews caught over his shoulder while tumbling to the ground.

Pirates 9-5, Phillies 6-6

The Pirates rallied from a 6-1 deficit with eight runs in the last two innings of the first game, then were given a dose of the same medicine by the Phillies in the nightcap. Philadelphia was down 5-1 but took the second contest when rookie Keith Moreland singled in the tying run in the sixth and pinch-hitter Pete Mackanin's fielder's choice delivered the winning tally.

In the first game, Manny Sanguillen's pinch-hit triple broke a 6-6 tie in the ninth. Philadelphia had jumped in front mostly thanks to a grand-slam homer by Mike Schmidt in the seventh. The Pirates got three in the eighth on four singles and an error.

It was the 40th time the Pirates have come from behind to win this season.

Expos 3-4, Mets 1-1

After tough losses to the Pirates Monday and Tuesday, Montreal might have seemed ready to collapse. But strong pitching by Rudy May, who threw a six-hitter in the nightcap, and Ross Grimsley, who won his first game since June 26, boosted the Expos within a game of the East lead.

The Expos won the second game despite a first-inning collision that saw second baseman Dave Cash get cut on the head and right fielder Ellis Valentine bruise his jaw. Both players had to leave the game.

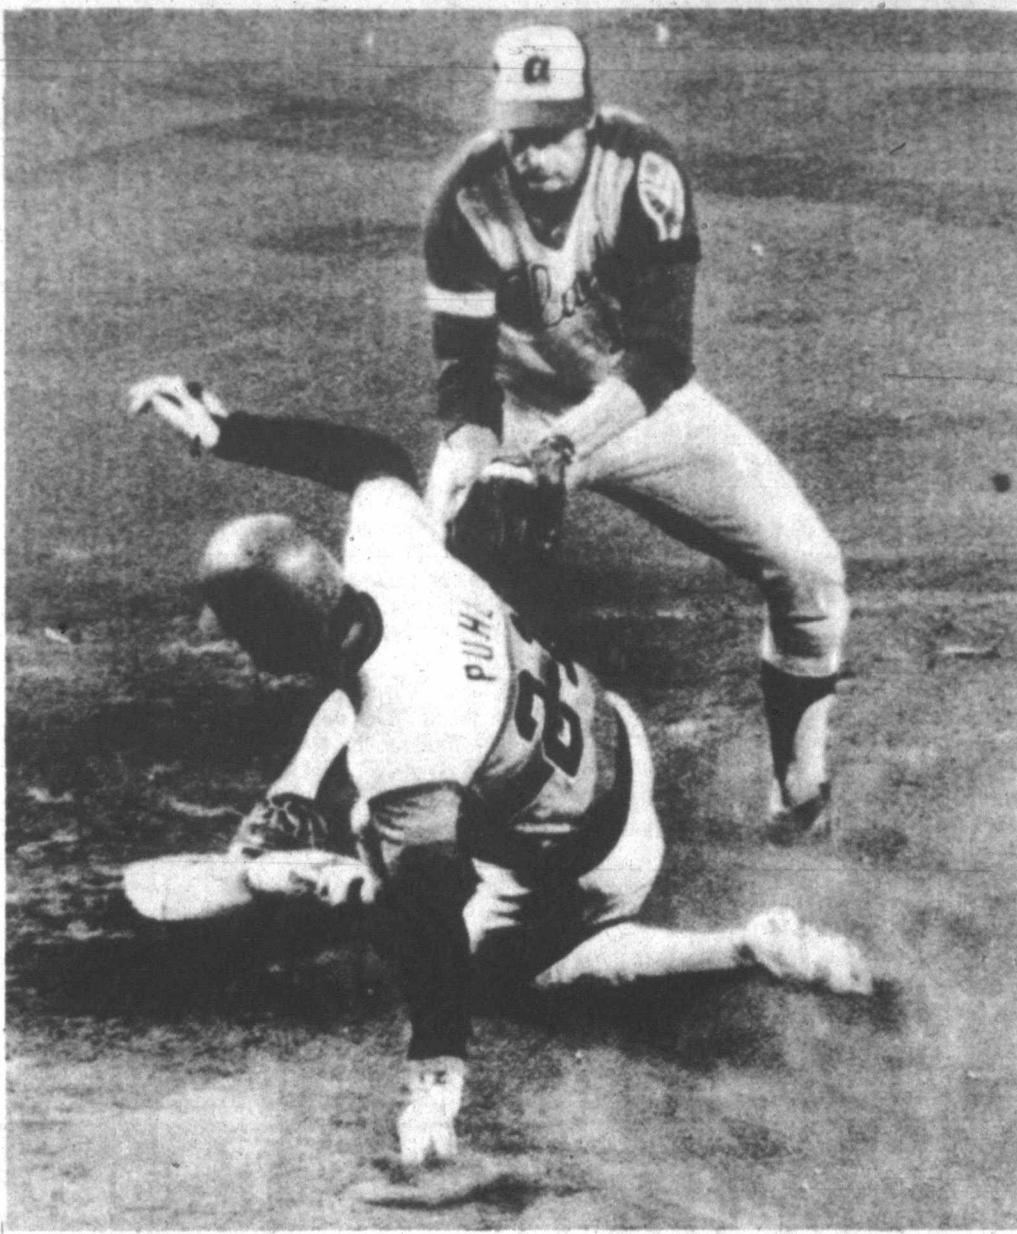

Substitute shortstop Speier and Cash each homered in the nightcap. In the opener, Tony Perez knocked in two runs and scored the other for Montreal.

Cardinals 6-2, Cubs 3-3

Dave Kingman increased his major league leading home run total to 47, but it was a 10th-inning shot by Jerry Martin that clinched the Cubs' second-game victory. St. Louis won the opener as Ken Reitz and Keith Hernandez had two-run triples and Ted Simmons homered.

Dodgers 7, Giants 2

Rookie Rick Sutcliffe won his 16th game — he's lost nine — and Ron Cey had a three-run homer for the Dodgers.

TERRY PUHL of the Houston Astros is forced at second base in the eighth inning of Houston's 6-5 loss to Atlanta Wednesday night. Glenn Hubbard of the Braves took the throw. The loss dropped the Astros 2 1/2 games behind Cincinnati in the National League West.

American League

Royals top California, 6-4

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "The object," said Kansas City's Hal McRae, "is to win this thing — not run away with it." The subject was the American League's West Division title.

McRae and the second-place Royals beat the division-leading California Angels 6-4 Wednesday night, winning for the second time in the three games of this series but remaining exactly where they were when the set began — two games behind.

"I looked up at the scoreboard and suddenly it occurred to me. We're going to play 162 games and we're going to end up in a tie," said Kansas City third baseman George Brett, who had two hits and drove in a run. "I really think there's a chance it will happen."

It happened last year in the East, when the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox decided divisional honors in a one-game playoff. And, since the Royals and Angels meet four times more this season, Brett's prophecy may be realized.

"The only thing that will matter," said McRae, "is who's best in October. If we get into the playoffs, this thing will be history."

Darrell Porter drove in three runs while Larry Gura and two relievers combined on a six-hitter to defeat the Angels.

White Sox 6, Twins 0

Twins Manager Gene Mauch admits he's playing favorites in the battle for the West top spot: he wants Minnesota to win it. But the Twins were shut out a second consecutive time by the lowly White Sox.

The Twins managed just four hits off Ross Baumgarten and now haven't scored in 18 innings. Chet Lemon and Jim Morrison hit two-run singles for the winners.

Tigers 5, Orioles 0

Steve Kemp scored one run and drove in another, backing the four-hit pitching of Jack Morris and carrying the Tigers past the Orioles. The loss, coupled with Milwaukee's rout of Seattle, left at three Baltimore's magic number for clinching the East Division crown.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 0

Butch Hobson cracked a pair of doubles and drove in three runs, backing Bob Stanley's three-hitter and powering Boston past Toronto.

Yankees 2, Indians 0

Tommy John picked up his 19th victory with 8 2/3 innings of three-hit pitching and Reggie Jackson hit his 26th homer of the season to boost New York over Cleveland.

Rangers 9, A's 4

Mickey Rivers' two-run single highlighted the six-run third inning that helped Texas beat Oakland. Jim Sundberg walked twice in the outburst, the second time with the bases loaded.

Brewers 12, Mariners 1

Home runs by Buck Martinez, Ben Oglivie and Sixto Lezcano paced the Brewers' 19-hit attack and kept Milwaukee mathematically alive in the East race.

Trip to Moscow Olympics to cost athletes $2.4 million

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Some 528 athletes and another 138 staff members will comprise the United States Olympic Games in Moscow, a U.S. Olympic Committee spokesman says.

The cost of sending those 666 persons is estimated at $2.4 million, which includes transportation, processing and housing.

"We'll be able to cover that cost through our fund-raising efforts," Mike Moran, assistant director of communications for the USOC, said Wednesday.

Moran said the USOC quadrennial fund-raising campaign for the period from 1976-80 had reached $20.2 million by the end of August, and another $9 million was expected from corporate participation. Donations generally aren't earmarked for a specific event or Olympic function.

The USOC has a total budget of $25,750,000 for the four-year period, which includes the cost of the Moscow Games and an estimated $950,000 for the Winter Games in Lake Placid.

Not included in that budget figure is the cost of staging the National Sports Festival and operating the USOC training centers.

"Our main concerns now are in paying for the Festival and the training centers," Moran said. "All our other expenses appear to be covered."

Moran explained that the 138 staffers who will go to Moscow include coaches, managers, team physicians and "a very few U.S. Olympic House people — maybe a half dozen from the headquarters here in Colorado Springs."

He emphasized that all non-athletes will serve in some administrative capacity, such as coordinating press services, transportation, housing, tickets or food.

The American entourage will assemble and be processed somewhere in West Germany about two weeks prior to the start of the Moscow Games, Moran said, and the athletes and staff then will go to Moscow in shifts depending on the schedule of athletic events.

Out-of-shape course greets 84-woman field

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — A field of 84 professionals and three amateurs teed off this morning in a 72-hole, $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Tournament on a course most contestants say is not in the best of shape.

In Kansas City's first professional women's tournament since 1975, the contestants were allowed to play the ball "up," or wipe their balls off after bad lies on soggy fairways. Ordinarily, professional tournaments are played with the ball "down," and untouchable after it's struck.

"It's a good layout," said Sandra Post of the Brookridge Country Club course. "But it's in very bad condition."

"The whole course could be in better shape," said Judy Rankin, a St. Louis native. "But being from Missouri I know what summers can do to a course."

Five of the top 10 money winners from the LPGA tour are on hand, but tour leader Nancy Lopes Melton is among the missing. Post, the No. 3 money winner this year, is making her first appearance in a month. Others among the top money winners are Jane Blalock, Amy Alcott and Donna Caponi Young.

Four 18-hole rounds will be played Thursday through Sunday on the par-73, 6,273-yard layout in suburban Overland Park.

The official name of the tournament is the ERA-Kansas City Classic, with proceeds going to the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Other top attractions include Jerilyn Britz, U.S. Open champion; Pat Meyers, winner of the Baltimore Classic; Kathy Whitworth, an 80-time winner on the LPGA tour and Carol Mann, who's won 38 tournaments.

Tournament officials said they were not altogether surprised that Melton withdrew.

View from the plains

LUBBOCK — Sportsmen participating in the sandhill crane hunt, which opens Oct. 30 in Zone A (west zone) and Dec. 4 in Zone B will need a crane permit.

The free permits can be obtained by writing the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, Wildlife Division, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744. Each applicant must include his or her name, address and county of residence.

The crane season in both zones will continue through Jan. 30, 1980. The daily bag limit for cranes is three and the possession limit has been set at six.

Firearms restrictions for crane hunters are similar to waterfowl hunters, which allows shotguns (10 gauge and smaller) plugged to a three-shell capacity (including the magazine and chamber) or longbows and arrows.

Even though the cranes are migratory game birds, they are not classified as waterfowl and, consequently, crane hunters will not be required to carry a federal migratory game bird conservation stamp.

Lubbock district game wardens have already spotted sandhill cranes on some of the South Plains playa lakes. This could be an indication of an early fall since the cranes are not normally seen coming into Texas until the middle of October.

Above-average rainfall on the South Plains has left the playa lakes in good shape for the birds. However, a survey near the better known playa lakes indicates less grain and more cotton, which will affect the crane's movements during the fall and winter months.

Panhandle DU Chapter Active

HEREFORD — The Hereford Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will hold a turkey shoot to raise funds for this prominent waterfowl conservation organization Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Hereford Gun Club, east of the Hereford airport.

"The shooting competition is being hosted by the Hereford Gun Club, which has provided its facilities free of charge for the DU fund-raiser," said Jim Steiert, Hereford DU chairman.

The turkey shoot winners will receive hams and turkeys as prizes for each round of competition. The turkey shoot fees will be $3 per five-shot round.

A special drawing for a 20-gauge "Greenwing Special" shotgun, a number of wildlife art prints and two free subscriptions to "Waterfowler's World" magazine will also be held.

One of the premier events of the Hereford fund-raiser will be a drawing for a set of Armatele plates, commemorating the national Ducks Unlimited "One of One" edition Browning Superposed shotgun.

The local winner of the plates will have his name in the running with the plate owners from each of the approximately 1,600 DU chapters across the nation for the "One of One" shotgun.

DU supporters at the fund-raiser will have a chance to bid on top art prints by Harry C. Adamson, artist of the year, along with waterfowl artists David Maass, Ralph J. McDonald, Dr. Allen Hughes and James F. Landenberger.

All proceeds from the Hereford DU fund-raiser will go to Ducks Unlimited for its continued work in preserving the vital waterfowl nesting habitat on the Canadian wetlands, where 70 percent of North America's waterfowl population is hatched and reared.

Additional information about the Hereford Ducks Unlimited fund-raiser can be obtained by calling Jim Steiert at 364-2030 or 364-1855.

Antelope permits up

LUBBOCK — West Texas landowners have an opportunity to obtain approximately 1,633 antelope permits from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department as the annual antelope season opens for nine days starting Sept. 29.

Prospective antelope hunters should find good to excellent range conditions this year, which usually contributes to good hunting opportunities and a more enjoyable hunt.

Above-normal rainfall in most areas of West Texas has provided the antelope with ample browse and the animals should be in excellent condition.

Hunters are reminded to contact the antelope permit holders in advance of the hunt scheduled to open next week.

Set so realistic actors feel it's real

NEW YORK (AP) — This sleepy Arab village set in a desert is a set for a Christmas television special that the cast of Nazareth 2,000 years ago stays with the actors when the cameras stop rolling.

You learn your character easily when you walk off the scene," said Miss Baker, who plays an over-the-hill rabbinical wife, Mary and Joseph. A Love Story.

You see you are where Jesus walked, and you know you're really in the Holy Land here," Duffin said during a break in filming.

Miss Baker is the starring role of Mary, found that Arab companies still called her Mary when she trudged the village lanes from sleeping women to wardrobe trailers.

It's great to do it in this location — Bible stories so often are done in a studio or in a hall. This place is inspiring to actors," said Miss Baker, who won an Emmy for her portrayal in NBC's "Holocaust" of the Weiss family daughter who was raped by the Nazis.

In the Nazareth village of 5,000 people in the Judean hills 15 miles northwest of Jerusalem, needed only a few touches to make it look like the Holy Land of Jesus' time. It has no electricity and there are no TV antennas — a vexing problem for the art director of any period production.

When scenes were shot in a dusty but picturesque courtyard of 50 feet square surrounded by three-story buildings of worn limestone, with stone arches and outside stairways leading to rooftops.

Director Kirk Tull surveyed the scene. "The only thing we had to do with this courtyard was hang some greenery to camouflage a pipe."

A pipe is about to be shot. A half-dozen goats graze atop a low stone structure in the center of the courtyard where village women were told to bread that probably has changed little in millennia.

With the eye. Action: the camera follows Mary as she leads her husband and other relatives down a flight of stairs. Two men pick up a young boy with the body of her father, who had been executed by the Romans. Mary draws near to him and says coldly, "Why aren't you not looking for the killers of my father?"

Was 2 minute none of this in the scriptural accounts of the events leading to the birth of Christ. What will viewers be seeing — scenes from the Holy Land locations — when they tune in NBC's "Nazareth" special Dec. 23?

The idea, said producer Gene Corman, was to take a "human element" of the story of Mary and Joseph, objects of so much religious veneration. Corman saw them in terms of "stare-crossed" like the Romeo and Juliet.

ABC's new shows fall short of mark

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC kicked off its 1979-80 prime-time season with a week of new shows, but the early start — though a strong start — left some doubts about the front-running network's new shows.

Of ABC's premiering programs in the week ending Sept. 16, only "The Love Boat" was among the 10 highest-rated. No. 6, while "Detective" finished 39th, "440 Robert" 32nd, "The Lazarus Syndrome" 40th and "Out of the Blue" 57th.

On the other hand, it was hardly a bad week for last season's No. 1 show. ABC listed 10 of the first 11 shows ranked by the A.C. Nielsen Co. with "Charlie's Angels" No. 1 followed by "Love Boat" and "Three's Company."

NBC and CBS began their fall programming, officially, the night of Sept. 17, but both sought to counter ABC's early start with some immediate shows.

For NBC the effort was something of a disappointment. The network's three-hour "Bob Hope on the Road to China" telecast was third in the ratings in its slot Sunday night, 28th overall. Add the rerun of "Holocaust," the prominent four-part miniseries of last season, was only moderately successful in, the "Hogan's Men" in the repeat was No. 31 in the ratings.

ABC did well however with a Sunday night made-for-television movie, "The Youth Month," starring Carol Burnett. It finished the week 18th, ahead of NBC's Hope special and the first network broadcast of Woody Allen's film, "Annie Hall," on ABC.

ABC overall registered a rating for the week of 20.9, with CBS at 21.2 and NBC 19.4. The networks say that means in an average prime-time hour, 20.4 percent of the TV homes in the country were tuned to ABC.

The rating for No. 1 "Charlie's Angels" was 28. Nielsen says that means all of the homes in the country with TV, 28 percent saw at least part of the show.

It was a good week for newsmagazines — ABC's "20/20" was fourth in the ratings, while CBS' "60 Minutes" was the only non-ABC show in the Top 10, ninth.

In addition to ABC's "Out of the Blue," No. 57 for the week, the season five included "Bender" on CBS, No. 53, followed by "New Family" on ABC, and two CBS shows, "Working Stiffs" and "The Bad News Bears." "Working Stiffs" is a new show this season.

Americans to remain in Sinai

WASHINGTON (AP) — American civilian technicians will remain in the Sinai Desert for three years and U.S. reconnaissance flights will be stepped up to monitor the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The formula, announced Wednesday by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, hinges on congressional approval.

But serious opposition is considered unlikely given the U.S. stake in supporting the peace treaty signed March 26 on the White House lawn.

The initial idea, to use a U.N. Emergency Force, was aborted under threat of a Soviet veto.

Vance, flanked by Egyptian and Israeli officials, made clear his displeasure with the Russians. "If the U.N. force had been able to stay there, the problem never would have arisen," he said.

The solution, reached in two days of intensive negotiations, was to give Egypt and Israel the primary responsibility for monitoring the treaty.

Mixed patrols, supplemented by up to 200 American civilians and stepped-up U.S. reconnaissance flights, will supervise Israel's withdrawal over a three-year period.

This is the same number of civilians assigned to monitoring stations in the Sinai under a 1975 agreement that provided for a partial Israeli pullback.

Vance said he saw the new formula "merely as an extension of the role which the Sinai field mission has been playing in the past."

But other U.S. officials said privately the Americans will have a broader role than in the past, moving beyond the monitoring stations to verify or dismiss claims of treaty violations.

Initially, the American surveillance operation was supposed to close down, with the U.N. Emergency Force taking on the job.

"We are going to work together," Dayan said. Egyptian Defense Minister Kemal Hasan Ali smiled his approval.

ROSH HASHANAH

Jewish New Year

This Sunday, September 23, is the first day of autumn in the Northern Hemisphere. But for millions of Jews around the world, this weekend means more than the start of a new season. It's the start of a new year. The Jewish New Year festival is called Rosh Hashanah. Jews consider it a day of judgment. It signals the start of a 10-day period called the High Holy Days, a time for people to pray, reflect on their past actions, and repent their sins. As Jews gather to observe Rosh Hashanah this Saturday, they will be celebrating the start of the new Jewish year 5740.

DO YOU KNOW — What Jewish holiday marks the end of the High Holy Days?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — John F. Kennedy was the most recent president to die in office.

Carr joins draft Kennedy move

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Democratic National Committeewoman Billie Carr, saying Americans have "lost hope" in President Carter, has joined the growing movement to draft Sen. Edward Kennedy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"This has not been an easy decision," Ms. Carr, the leader of liberal Texas Democrats, said Wednesday by phone from Houston.

"I have the utmost respect for President Carter. I feel he has made some important contributions to our country. I also hoped he could be a two-term president," she added.

"However, I feel it is time to face facts. Support of the president is at an all-time low. People have lost hope. It would take a major miracle for the president to get re-elected to a second term," said Ms. Carr.

The addition of Ms. Carr and her followers gives added strength to the grass roots Kennedy organizations that have sprouted across Texas in the past six weeks.

Kennedy organizations, registered with the Federal Election Commission, have been formed in San Antonio, Dallas and El Paso to urge the Massachusetts senator to challenge Carter for the 1980 Democratic nomination. Similar organizations are forming in Austin and Houston.

Members of the State Democratic Committee who lead the Dallas and San Antonio groups say they are attempting to secure thousands of signatures on petitions urging Kennedy to run.

The groups also plan to begin constructing a campaign organization, working at the precinct level to pinpoint supporters and secure delegates to the 1980 state and national conventions.

State Democratic Committeeman Richard Solo, co-chairman of the Texas for Kennedy-North Texas group in Dallas, said that if Kennedy becomes a formal candidate the organizations would then be turned over to his campaign leaders and serve as the foundation for Kennedy's Texas campaign organization.

Kennedy has given indications in the past month that he might become an official candidate.

Ms. Carr said Wednesday she became convinced Kennedy would run after his family recently agreed to his candidacy. Although she acknowledged that she is a longtime Kennedy supporter, Ms. Carr said she planned to support Carter for a second term and didn't think Kennedy would run.

"I've had two problems with a Draft Kennedy program," she said. "First, I have never felt a candidate for public office should have to be drafted. I like candidates to make their own decisions. Second, I hesitated because of a keen sensitivity and respect for his family's concerns and feelings."

Mexico demanding equal treatment from the United States

EDITOR'S NOTE — Mexico is demanding equal treatment from the United States, refusing to continue its role as the poor neighbor. This third part of a five-part series on Mexico looks at the issues surrounding U.S.-Mexican relations today.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — A newly emergent Mexico is sending powerful signals to its neighbor Uncle Sam that times have changed and that it won't be pushed around anymore.

From its decision to burn off the natural gas at its rich Reforma fields rather than sell it on U.S. terms, to its refusal to pay compensation for oil spill damage in Texas, and its search for new foreign markets, Mexico is serving notice that it no longer is a poor, weak relative on an otherwise affluent continent. It wants equal treatment in Washington's economic and political councils.

The dominant figure for so long, Uncle Sam is not fully aware of Mexico's newly found self esteem, according to officials, businessmen and intellectuals interviewed "south of the border."

But Mexico is counting on these developments to gain Washington's full attention.

—Mexico's massive oil potential make her a partner worth courting. And she is using the revenue to fuel an ambitious development plan that financial experts believe will increase two-way trade with the United States as much as eight-fold — to $80 billion — in the next decade. That would put Mexico up with Canada and Japan as one of the United States' biggest trading partners.

—Mexico already plays host to the largest U.S. investment community outside the United States, with its lobbying power in Congress escalating as investments are increased, particularly by the Big Three automakers. But intense counterpressures will likely be exerted by U.S. farmers and businessmen already smarting over Mexico's export of fruits, vegetables and textiles into the United States.

—Not until the turn of the century is any end in sight to the vast flow of illegal Mexican workers across the 2,000 mile border, even though arrests are up to a million a year. Rioting, violence, drownings and shootings have accompanied the exodus.

Other potentially explosive issues "that are unique in their variety and number" according to a senior U.S. official, include a chronic dispute over tropical tuna quotas, serious border problems of crime and smuggling, and pressures on land, water and natural resources as Mexicans are drawn more to border cities because of their nearness to the United States.

Diplomats see Mexico soon making a renewed bid for the attention of the third and developing world, with oil the lure, putting Washington on the diplomatic defensive. A similar tilt to the left shocked the United States, but it ended in 1977 when Mexico needed massive U.S. aid to bail out a faltering economy.

Relations between the continental neighbors are entangled in myths and shadowed by history. "Many Americans still believe Mexicans laze around drinking tequila and shooting off guns — the bad Mexican movie myth," said newspaper publisher Enrique Ramirez y Ramirez. On the other hand, "Many Mexicans think all Americans are gringos who come south for girls, for spying or for oil."

Beyond these stereotypes are historical realities. "There were two U.S. invasions of Mexico this century, so there is understandably a degree of mistrust and resentment," said U.S. Ambassador Patrick J. Lucey.

The differences have been intensifying for the past decade, fueled first by the anti-American policies of the previous president, Luis Echeverria. Vociferous, intensely nationalist elements in the Mexico City press are quick to question U.S. policy, too.

Now all political groups seem to have united around the energy issue and the government's determination to sell oil beyond the United States to a wider market.

Prosecutors rest in murder trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors have rested their murder solicitation case against millionaire Cullen Davis, paving the way for defense attorneys to begin their tale of conspiracy and elaborate subterfuge.

Defense attorneys would not say who their first witness would be, but subpoenaed Davis' ex-wife, Priscilla, late Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Davis was the first defense witness to take the stand at an earlier murder-for-hire trial in Houston.

*That proceeding ended in a mistrial when jurors deadlocked 8-4 for conviction. Davis is accused of concocting a scheme to buy the murder of his divorce judge, Joe Eidson.

Davis contends he was the victim of an elaborate frame devised by his ex-wife, former Fort Worth karate instructor Pat Burleson and key prosecution witness David McCrory.

At 12:18 p.m. Wednesday, prosecutor Jack Strickland announced suddenly that "the state rests its case."

Judge Gordon Gray later denied a routine motion by defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes for an instructed verdict of innocent and adjourned.

Over the last five and a half weeks, prosecutors have woven their case against Davis through the testimony of eight witnesses.

Strickland, however, hinted that there may be more surprises in store from the state.

"Anybody who thinks this case is over is in for a nasty surprise," he said.

The state took only three weeks to present its case in Houston, and the length of Strickland's case renewed speculation that this trial could last until Christmas.

*Davis, 45, told reporters the state's case "is in shambles."

"I'm just glad they finally stopped," he said.

Dim view taken on world farming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite prospects that U.S. farm exports will continue growing, the Agriculture Department has a fairly grim view of how things are going in the world at large.

Other federal agencies, including the State Department, may have more to say about U.S. policy abroad, but USDA has to keep an eye on happenings overseas for their effect on the Iowa corn crop, for example.

Put simply, if foreign buyers don't have the cash to buy U.S. grain, soybeans, cotton, tobacco or other commodities, farmers in Iowa and elsewhere will suffer because surpluses build up and prices go down.

Such an extreme isn't happening right now, but a new analysis by USDA's outlook board indicates that many countries are suffering a severe crunch from inflation and other economic factors that eventually will have an impact on farmers. The report, released Wednesday, is a summary of a more detailed analysis due in a few weeks.

"A slowdown in world economic expansion is likely in 1980," the report said. "Lagging investment and chronic inflation, exacerbated by the sharp oil price rises, have reduced growth prospects in many developed countries."

"Inflation rates are likely to remain high through 1980," it continued. "The higher import bills will worsen trade and payments deficits."

Moreover, in the poorer, developing countries, "economic prospects... are also deteriorating," the report said. Current deficits of those countries "are expected to rise sharply in 1979 and further in 1980," which could force some food-importing countries to rely more heavily on U.S. concessional sales under aid programs.

On the brighter side, the report noted earlier projections that U.S. farm exports, estimated at a record value of about $32 billion in the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30, are expected to rise to $35 billion to $40 billion in 1979-80.

Much of the expected increase may come from higher prices for some commodities, but the overall volume of shipments also is expected to go up by about 14 percent in the year ahead.

The report said harvest shortfalls in the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe and some other countries "will cause substantial growth in grain trade" worldwide in 1979-80, probably a gain of about 10 percent.

"Because of limited supplies and transportation difficulties in some other exporting countries, the United States will provide much of the forecast increase," it said. "The U.S. share of world grain trade is expected to increase from 51 percent to 55 percent."

The report said "early prospects point to additional substantial increases" in the world output of soybeans and other oilseeds in 1979-80.

Output of high-protein oilseed meal is expected to increase by 13 percent, following a gain of 6 percent last year. Production of oils and other fats is expected to rise by about 9 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has formally recommended setting up a national beef research and promotion program financed by cattle producers.

Officials said Wednesday the "recommended decision" to establish the program was based on evidence gathered at public hearings earlier this year.

Under the plan, authorized by Congress in the Beef Research and Information Act of 1976, producers would be assessed up to 0.2 percent of the value of cattle sold. After that, the rate could be changed but would not be allowed to exceed 0.5 percent of the cattle's value.

A beef board made up of producers would collect the assessments.

Witness talks about McInnis

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The intended target of a murder-conspiracy plot allegedly arranged by Hidalgo County District Attorney Oscar McInnis wiped away tears Wednesday as he testified McInnis once claimed to be the real father of the man's daughter.

Noe Villanueva took the witness stand in the first day of testimony at McInnis' civil disbarment trial. He returns today for further questioning.

The district attorney faces loss of his law license because of allegations by the State Bar of Texas that he violated professional standards of conduct.

The bar alleges McInnis harassed Villanueva using his official capacity while representing the man's ex-wife in a civil child custody battle. The district attorney allegedly filed unfounded criminal charges against Villanueva and caused his repeated arrest merely to find the child in the custody fight, says the bar.

McInnis allegedly tried to obtain a hit man to kill Villanueva in Reynosa, Mexico, the bar says in another portion of his formal complaint.

"He told me Patricia (Villanueva's ex-wife) was very lovely and he asked me if I knew who she was going out with," the witness said. "He told me his daughter was very pretty."

"Mr. McInnis referred to your daughter as his daughter?" asked State Bar lawyer Jerry Zunker.

"Yes," Villanueva replied.

The bar's witness said he talked with McInnis Oct. 10, 1976, after being arrested for violating a court order that gave his ex-wife custody of the child.

Villanueva admitted he took the child from his former spouse and went to Houston for more than a year until he was arrested on Oct. 6, 1976.

Cedric Reynolds bridge builder

SOUTH BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — The last beam in place, Cedric Reynolds steps back amid piles of sawdust and unused lumber to admire his completed work.

The arch of the trusses and the pattern of the lattice are just part of the art of covered bridges that continues to impress Reynolds, even after building more than 100 of them.

His bridges have a remarkable record. None has collapsed under the strain of a Vermont winter or from the weight of a heavy truck, an even more notable record when you consider they are held together with common, household glue.

Clearly, these are not your standard covered bridges. For what the 71-year-old South Burlington man has created is Vermont's version of the ship-in-a-bottle: scaled models of the state's covered bridges.

The miniature models fill his home like his love for bridges fills his life.

"You know, the bulk of Vermont's covered bridges were built by barn builders," he says. "Some of them couldn't read or write."

Nevertheless, they were not unskilled, he says, pointing with awe to the Fisher bridge in Hardwick that has held up under the weight of years of train traffic.

Reynolds' love for the symbol of times gone by dates to his youth, when he and others used to swim by a covered bridge in North Westminster.

His fascination led him 40 years ago to begin photographing covered bridges as he traveled through Vermont as an engineer for the New England Telephone Co.

Over the years, Reynolds and his wife, Hope, have criss-crossed the state a number of times, compiling pictures of every one of its covered bridges.

"We took a complete set of color and black-and-white photographs with an old camera," Reynolds says. "Then my son got a 35 millimeter camera we liked so much that we started all over again."

"Our kids thought we were nuts," Mrs. Reynolds adds. But in 1960, Reynolds went to a convention of covered bridge enthusiasts and found that his photographs are as common as the bridges are rare.

So Reynolds turned his attention to building bridge models.

Pay raise battle still simmering

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House's latest rejection of a pay raise for members of Congress and high-level bureaucrats may not be the last blow in the battle.

New life was breathed into the proposal Wednesday through an oversight by opponents of the pay increase, even though the House voted 219-191 to kill the measure.

As a result, the bill — which would add $4,025 a year to the $57,500 congressmen now get — remained technically alive on the House floor and could be brought up again today if supporters want.

There was no indication supporters would attempt to reverse the vote. But the possibility existed until tonight's House adjournment.

To get the bill brought up again, supporters must find one opponent willing to ask that the vote be reconsidered, a request likely to bring that congressman under fire from his constituents.

And then the supporters must either:

- Find enough new supporters willing to go on record in favor of a pay raise to overturn the defeat.
- Or, find opponents who secretly want the pay raise but fear political repercussions if they vote for it. Then, they must persuade those congressmen that Wednesday's vote put them on record as opposing the pay raise and persuade them to stay away from the floor if the bill is brought up again.

The reason the bill remained alive is that no one asked that a motion to reconsider the vote be prohibited, normally a routine request. As a result, a motion to reconsider was allowed until the close of business today.

The House rejected the salary increase on a roll call vote on the legislation to which the pay raise was attached.

Earlier, the House had approved, on an unrecorded 156-64 vote, an amendment that would give a 7 percent raise to congressmen and senators and to all federal judges and bureaucrats making at least $47,500 a year.

It was the second time this year the House approved a raise only to kill it at the last minute. In June, it accepted an amendment to increase its pay by 5.5 percent but then killed the bill to which the raise was attached.

Wednesday's rejection killed not only the raise, but also a resolution needed to provide emergency money for a variety of federal departments after Oct. 1. The House has not approved the regular legislation needed to finance those departments after that date, the start of the 1980 fiscal year.

A 1975 law authorizes a cost-of-living hike of up to 12.9 percent this year for legislators and top bureaucrats. But no raise can go into effect unless Congress appropriates the money to pay for it.

Glass artwork by Amarillo duo

A husband and wife team from Amarillo, reviving an old skill in the art world, will join some 80 artists and craftsmen Oct. 13 and 14 during the Pampa Fine Arts Festival.

Jane and Don Sharp, who create stained and leaded glass artwork, will exhibit their pieces at M.K. Brown Auditorium during the two-day festival, sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

The Sharps, who operate the Glass Gallery in Amarillo, create stained and leaded glass windows for today's homes, as well as small stained glass hangings for accent pieces.

The stained glass picks up the sun's reflections, displaying an array of color into the room.

Mr. and Mrs. Sharp also complete custom window orders and repair old windows.

Hours for the festival, in its 13th year, are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 13, and 12 noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Other festival features include a kaleidoscope for youngsters and a gourmet booth.

DR. LAMB

Friend concerned about obstruction

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please send me some information on hiatal hernia. I have a friend who is supposed to have one. He can't have a meal without getting up to release some of the pressure. Sometimes it's so bad he eats very little and goes directly to the bathroom to throw part of it up and then he comes back to eat some more. It's especially bad when he's not feeling well.

He works seven days a week and long hours which gives him very little rest so he's always in a rundown condition. He has lost 35 to 40 pounds in six months and I'm worried it could be something else. When a doctor is mentioned he always says there isn't time.

Could you tell me what kind of food he should eat and what he should stay away from. He lives alone and doesn't fix proper food but I'm sure he will try if it comes from you. Could it be a rupture that causes this discomfort? Many times he will have to get up at night to relieve himself and he says it's an air lock.

DEAR READER — I wish there was an address on your letterhead because your friend should go see a doctor at once. Those are not the usual symptoms of a hiatal hernia.

Your letter sounds like you're describing an obstruction to the normal passage of food into the stomach. That could be because he's had an old hiatal hernia and the acid contents of his stomach have irritated the lower part of the esophagus, ultimately causing scarring and obstruction. But no one can tell that without a careful examination.

I'm concerned for fear he might have an obstruction caused by cancer or some other serious problem. Certainly that much weight loss with those symptoms requires immediate examination. Anyone who has difficulty swallowing or retaining the food they have eaten must be examined immediately.

There is a rare medical condition of spasm and obstruction of the lower part of the esophagus that prevents passage of food. This can be due to scarring but there's too big a risk that it could be something more serious and whatever the condition is, it should be treated.

I would have sent you The Health Letter number 4-8 on Hiatal Hernia if you had included your address. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O.

Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Many people who have a small hiatal hernia have no symptoms at all. Most of them do deserve at least some intelligent management such as change in life style to prevent the possibility of developing scarring and obstruction in the lower part of the esophagus.

Although I do not know what your friend has, and no one can tell without an examination, it is true that people who have a hernia of a portion of the stomach through a hole in the diaphragm are most prone to trouble while lying down. The hernia affects the closure mechanism between the esophagus and stomach and if the stomach is full, its contents tend to leak into the esophagus. That is why propping up the head of the bed in such cases helps.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

O.J. and vitamin C

By Joe Graedon

Q. For the past year or so I've been drinking orange juice every day because of the vitamin C content and because I think it's good for me. A friend of mine says that OJ doesn't really have much vitamin C and I'm wasting my money. Who's right?

A. While we won't go so far as to say you're wasting your money when you buy orange juice (being juice lovers ourselves), your friend is pretty close to the mark when he says it doesn't contain much vitamin C.

The experts for Consumers Union discovered that a standard 3 1/2-ounce serving of orange juice (frozen, canned or bottled) only provides about 36 mg of vitamin C and many brands significantly less. Since the recommended daily allowance (RDA) for an adult is 45 mg, you can't rely on that small morning glass of OJ to meet your needs.

Although most people believe that orange juice is really good for them, the people from Consumers Union concluded that it "has little nutritional importance." Unless you supplement your diet with extra vitamin C you may be less well off than you think.

Foods that are high in vitamin C include broccoli, brussels sprouts, strawberries, grapefruit, tomatoes, collard greens, cauliflower, cantaloupe and cabbage. If you don't eat one or two of these foods every day you may want to add ascorbic acid tablets to your morning regimen just to be on the safe side.

Orange juice is a tasty beverage and, as the ads say, "it isn't just for breakfast anymore." But if you expect it to satisfy your need for vitamin C you had better drink a pretty large glass or plan to supplement with some other source.

Q. To my dismay, I'm almost two months pregnant. I can't afford an abortion — but I certainly can't afford a baby, either.

A friend tells that Pennyroyal oil is effective in causing abortions. I've checked out the health-food stores and it comes in teeny little bottles. How many should I take? And is it safe?

A. To answer your last question first, NO! According to Dr. Julian Gold of the Center for Disease Control, "There is no specific dose known to be safe."

A Colorado woman died after taking just one ounce. Other women who have taken smaller quantities have been hospitalized with digestive tract irritation and bleeding, kidney or liver failure and seizures. And there's no good evidence it's an effective way of terminating a pregnancy.

Permanent liver or kidney damage is a mighty high price to pay for an ineffective, "low-cost" abortion. We recommend you get in touch with your local Planned Parenthood chapter or county health department to discuss some other alternatives that may be available.

Q. A doctor recently prescribed Indocin for my husband for some minor aches in his shoulder and hip. I've heard of some serious complications from this medication.

Could you explain this drug and just what it does? Will it heal or just kill the pain?

A. Indocin (indomethacin) is a potent anti-inflammatory agent that is prescribed for moderate to severe arthritis or gout. According to the drug company it "is not a simple analgesic (pain reliever) and should be used only in patients uncontrolled by an adequate trial of aspirin and rest."

Although Indocin can relieve symptoms of inflammation, it really can't cure the underlying problem. And the drug can cause some pretty unpleasant side effects.

The worst problem is stomach irritation. Common complaints include loss of appetite, indigestion, heartburn, nausea, diarrhea and gas. Bleeding ulcers can occur also. These symptoms may be reduced if you take the drug with or immediately after meals.

Other unpleasant side effects include headaches, dizziness, confusion and blurred vision. Driving or work that requires concentration could be hazardous.

Indocin is a useful drug for some people. It should be reserved for moderate to severe arthritis. If your husband's complaints are minor you might want to see if some other, less heavy-duty drug won't do the trick.

THE STREETS of Pampa are the mission field for Kevin King (left) and James Grant, elders in the The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints or Mormon Church. The two young men, who have been here for several months, are serving a two year "mission," working daily to gain converts to the church.

Regular guys pursue religious calling

By DAN LACKEY
Of The Pampa News

James, 20, from Long Beach, California, and Kevin, 19, from Provo, Utah, are such "regular guys," such All-American fellows, that it seems almost impossible for a peer to address them, respectively, as Elder Grant and Elder King.

Dressed daily in dark, conservative suits and ties, hair cut short, walking in stride through neighborhoods and city streets, the two young men have been for several months a steady fixture in the everyday life of Pampa.

Catching a glimpse of Elder Grant and Elder King, here and there, amidst the bustle of the day, brings a sense of continuity, a sense that everything is in its place, that life is a lot like a well-staged movie -- that things are as stable as the bells in the church towers.

Yet Elder Grant and Elder King are such clean-cut figures, they occasionally strike a passerby as odd.

"Some people have mistaken us for members of a cult," says Elder King. "But mostly people have been very hospitable. You can tell which ones are going to listen to you and which ones are going to be friendly."

Elders Grant and King are Mormon missionaries. And their mission field -- although they could have chosen a site in Africa or South America or almost any country on earth where the government permits them -- consists of Pampa, Wheeler, Shamrock, Miami and Canadian here in the Texas Panhandle.

With one year at Long Beach City College behind him, Elder Grant will return to school to pursue his goal of becoming a Certified Public Accountant. Elder King, who completed a year at Brigham Young University, hopes to become a medical doctor in an as yet unchosen specialty.

In the meantime, the two will pound the pavement nine hours a day in search of converts to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Nine hours of door-to-door and on-the-street evangelism almost every day is part of a schedule which the young men (literally) follow religiously.

They rise between 5 and 5:30 a.m. at their Sumner Street apartment and exercise until seven. Between seven and eight, they share a religious devotional time known as "companion study." At eight, they eat breakfasts which, according to Mormon convictions, never contain coffee or tea, two instances of abstinence often regarded by non-Mormons as trademarks of Mormonism. (Also prohibited are alcohol, tobacco, and harmful drugs.)

From 8:30 until 9:30 they retire for separate periods of study before embarking on their daily coverage of Pampa neighborhoods-- door to door evangelism which they call "tracking."

With hour meal breaks, the two will usually work until 9:30 p.m. as "proselytes," preaching to gain new believers.

"We feel people are more apt to let us in their homes if we're dressed this way, rather than more casually," Elder King says, explaining their commitment to the suit-and-tie regimen.

The two young men say they do not "date" while in the service of "their mission."

"It is against the policy of the church to date while doing your mission," Elder Grant says. "It's not that it's bad, it's encouraged when you aren't on your mission. It's just that we don't have that much time on our hands. We don't read the newspapers or watch TV either."

Their lives, to an outsider, appear like the compromise between life in a monastery and service with the U.S. Government's V.I.S.T.A. program.

Yet even the most sacred callings have practical techniques, and Elder Grant describes types of initial calls on potential converts as "door approaches."

"In one of our door approaches," says Elder Grant, "we might say, 'We're sharing a message about Jesus Christ's visit to the Americas.' Most people haven't heard about that and that's a good opener."

Elders Grant and King say that a belief in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints requires an acceptance of the idea of the existence of modern-day prophets "like Moses or Ezekiel."

The church follows the Christian theology of belief in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, but believes, for example, that the contemporary President of the Mormon Church, Spencer W. Kimble, is a prophet.

Some historians believe that this assertion of divine commissioning largely accounted for the persecution of the early adherents of the Mormon faith in the middle of the 19th century.

The "founder" of the church, Joseph Smith, and early Mormons travelled from New York to Ohio to Missouri and back to Illinois where Smith was killed in an incident of mob violence. The present-day Mormons were led to Utah under the second prophet Brigham Young and were responsible for most of the settlement of that western territory.

In placing their church in the context of fundamentalist Christian religion, Elder Grant says "Jesus Christ is the head of the Church. We don't worship the prophets, but we do believe that they are called by God to lead the church."

Elder Grant says a common assumption is that the church's Book of Mormon is a Mormon "addition to the Bible. But it's a completely different book."

The book is an abridged record of certain ancient American prophets and peoples, translated by Joseph Smith. The two missionaries say the text is used "as a conversion tool. 'If you believe the Book of Mormon, then you'll believe in modern-day prophets and the church,'" says Elder Grant.

But before the subject of theology is broached, the two missionaries say they try to get acquainted with the people they are witnessing to.

"We try to get to know people a little, try to become your friend. Then we might say we have a message we'd like to share."

The church has no professional clergy, the two missionaries point out, and is virtually dependent on lay ministry. A Pampa Mormon church of about 250 members meets Sundays at a building on the corner of Kentucky and Sloan Streets, but Elders Grant and King say they aren't essential to its ministry since individuals members share responsibility for the services.

Despite the "monastic" devotion the two men show to their work, they say they don't feel deprived of a social life.

"Actually our social lives are a lot greater," says Elder King. "We've learned to learn a lot about a person in six seconds. You can just tell, you know, by a look in the eye whether they want to talk to you or not."

"We see so many people, rich, poor, black and white," says Elder Grant. "It's safe to say that no one will ever come out of his mission shy."

The two, who have about a year and a half of service remaining, say the work has been a sacrifice but a great experience. Part of the sacrifice involves only two calls a year home -- to avoid homesickness -- although the young men try to write home weekly during the Monday afternoons they take off to do such chores as laundry.

But about those names? Don't they ever go by James and Kevin?

"First names are much too personal," Elder Grant explains. "We don't want people to be baptized (into the church) because they like us, but because they believe in what we're saying."

TWEEN 12 AND 20 Teens say play now

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Jim, 17, from Ogden, Utah, needs to make a decision on whether to work or play high school basketball and asks the teen guest writers to help make up his mind. Lorna Weiss, 17, from Vancouver, Wash., and Pete Wacker, 18, from Colorado Springs, Colo., will do the honors. Welcome.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a good student and a fair athlete. This summer I have found a really neat job as a waiter in a nice restaurant. I make good money and I enjoy the job. The problem is that I am also on the basketball team and my boss wants me to quit the team because basketball practice will conflict with the hours I work. I know that I would not be a starter on the team, but I would be sixth or seventh man. I do enjoy basketball but I also like my job. Would you please be so kind as to have your guest writers also add their views. — Jim, Ogden, Utah

Jim: I'm sure my views will be slanted. I was a head basketball coach in high school in Illinois, Arizona and California. My thoughts are that you should stay with the team. You've got the rest of your life to work. — Dr. Wallace

Hi Jim: I talked to my dad about your problem because he knows a lot about athletics and he also owns a restaurant.

He said that he had to quit football when he was in high school because the family needed money. He also said that he is very sorry that he did not get the chance to play his senior year.

So, he said for you to play basketball your last year and that he will hire you in his restaurant when you graduate. — Good luck, Lorna, Vancouver, Wash.

Hello Jim: I can relate to your situation. I almost quit athletics because my dad said he needed me in his business (he really didn't), but my coach talked to my dad and the final decision was that I could play football.

I graduated in June and will play football in a junior college this fall with high hopes of playing for a major university. If I were you, I'd definitely play basketball. — Pete, Colorado Springs, Colo.

If you would like to be a teen guest writer, write to me in care of this newspaper stating your sex and age. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FOR PEOPLE ON THE GO.

1340 N. Hobart Open 6 a.m. to Midnite

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago, when I was 16, I began a pen-pal relationship with a boy (my age) in Liverpool, England. We corresponded faithfully, exchanged pictures, and you might say we "fell in love" through our letters.

Derek's letters indicated that he was intelligent, well-read and romantic, and I couldn't wait to meet him.

Last week he came to visit me, Abby. I can't believe he is the same person who wrote those letters. Although he LOOKS like his pictures, he is like a stranger to me. He's painfully shy, hardly ever looks me in the eye, and when he talks he stammers. I did my best to make him feel comfortable and open up, but it was useless.

Last night he said he is in love with me and wants a physical relationship. Although I expressed my love for him in my letters, I have absolutely no romantic feelings for him in person. I just can't have a physical relationship with him, Abby.

How can a person who writes so eloquently be so totally inarticulate and unappealing in person? Please tell me how to handle this. I hate to hurt him.

LET DOWN IN CONN.

DEAR LET DOWN: Be gentle but honest. Tell Derek that the chemistry is not right for a physical relationship. He will be hurt, but he'll be hurt more if you give him false hope.

Many shy people can't cope with social situations, so they retreat into solitary activities such as reading and writing. Consequently they never develop the art of verbal communication. Don't totally reject Derek because you have no romantic interest in him. He desperately needs your friendship and understanding.

DEAR ABBY: Carla, our 15-year old daughter, is our problem. She's boy crazy. She's very mature (physically) for her age and has been wearing a 38 bra since she was 14.

Last semester she failed two subjects so we sent her to summer school to make them up. Well, she had such a busy social life with the boys that she failed both subjects again!

This year we have laid down the law. Instead of letting her stay out until 11 p.m. on school nights and 1 a.m. on weekends, we told her she has to be in the house by 10 p.m. on school nights and 12:30 on weekends. Now she has her dates pick her up at 6:30. Isn't this too early for a girl to be going out? Carla says since she has to be in by 11 she has to get an early start! What is your opinion? CARLA'S MOM

DEAR MOM: I think Carla is getting an "early start" for an earlier finish. In my opinion, a 15-year-old girl with failing grades should not date at all on school nights, and midnight should be curfew on weekends.

Adair sees position as diplomatic role

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

The new director of nursing at the Leisure Lodge in Pampa is an attractive woman of white hair, gray eyes, and an easy smile accented with a wink.

Mary Adair's cheerful office, with a plant in the window and a poster of kittens on the wall, instantly puts one at ease.

"You've got to be diplomatic," she answered when asked what her job entailed. As if on cue, the daughter of a Leisure Lodge resident came in to see what could be done about her mother's squeaky wheelchair.

After telling her that it would be oiled as soon as possible, Adair turned back and continued, "It's a responsibility. People live longer and private nursing homes are a necessity."

Her other duties include the staffing and counseling of nurses and learning the residents' special needs. Adair is also on call most of the time because she must make many final decisions on the physical care of the residents.

There isn't much time for leisure activities in Mary Adair's life although she likes sports, an interest she developed while her four children were in school. However, now that they are not as involved in them, neither is she.

Does she consider being a director of nursing her career? "It's got to be now," she answered. "When you are on your own or something, you need a career."

She occasionally gets personally involved with her patients — "you can't help it" — but Mary feels it's better not to.

She says she likes to be objective and give her residents the best care possible.

Mary Adair was director of nursing at Pampa Nursing Center for almost three years before coming to Leisure Lodge. A 1951 graduate of St. Anthony's School of Nursing, she has been in nursing most of the time since her graduation.

Nursing is her career, says Adair, and she's happy with it.

Wildlife photos on display in Panhandle

On display in the Square House Museum in Panhandle is the wildlife photography of Roberta Currie of Amarillo.

The exhibit is set up in the Mary Moody Northern Art Gallery. "The purpose of my wildlife photography is twofold," says Currie, who uses Palo Duro Canyon as the site of many of her photographs. "One is to show wildlife in its natural habitat. I want to share my enthusiasm for the wonders of nature which to me are far more exciting than man-made things of life."

The second purpose is to stop some of the accelerating destruction of certain species which could become extinct.

"Wildlife needs the same things that we humans do, clean air and water," she explains. "As long as we can see a bird sitting on a fence, we know the air is clean enough for him and so is clean enough for us."

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

Weight loss can mean upset

By Louise Pierce

The May 20, 1979, issue of Family Weekly stated that, according to psychiatrists from the universities of Wisconsin and Kentucky, many marriages either break up or suffer severe turmoil if one partner changes from vastly overweight to reasonably slender. That was contrary to all my data (polls, lectures and letters), because my readers had frequently reported that they were issuing ultimatums to their obese mates to reduce if they wanted to stay contentedly married. I could not believe that any loving spouse would resent a better appearance in the better half. If I develop a little roll of fat around my middle, Otis mentions it several times a day until I lose it. I do the same for him, needing him about his paunch that, hopefully, will protrude no farther as he ages.

In fairness, however, I read the rest of the article and took note of the reasons given for separation following weight loss. The writer stated that a formerly insecure fatty often lost dependence on the spouse when he or she lost weight. Other reasons included less time at home because the slimmer - down one got a job or made new friends, causing the other partner to be disturbed or jealous.

I still wasn't convinced. I remembered ever so many couples I'd known who were fat - wife - thin - husband or vice versa. When I was growing up, we had a neighbor who weighed well over 200 pounds and had a husband whose weight couldn't have been a hundred. I used to watch them walking home with his arm only half way about her shoulders because that was as far as he could reach. When she lost half her weight on an ulcer diet and regained her girlish figure, it didn't seem to affect their relationship in any way. But that was a long time ago. Temptations were not plentiful. Couples mostly stayed together, no matter what. Things aren't that simple today. I admitted the logic of the FW article when a couple of letters reached me regarding weight loss.

DEAR LOUISE: What can I do about my sixty-year-old wife who lost a couple dozen pounds and thinks she's too skinny and pretty for me any more? We've been married thirty-seven years. Every time I eat two helpings of anything, she twits me about how fat I am and says she'd like to be free to find a man as thin as she is. I tried to tell myself she was kidding. But last week she went to her Thursday night bridge club and a slim-jim widower brought her home. Is she so far out of my reach, since I haven't lost any of my 205 pounds, that I'd just as well let her go? M.D.W.

DEAR M.D.W.: Nothing you still have is out of your reach. Maybe she's doing it to shame you into taking off a few pounds. Since you apparently like to eat, it won't be easy. But if holding your marriage together is important to you, you'll do it. Lay off the second helpings — and don't make the first ones too generous. Consult your doctor about a good reducing diet — and follow it to the letter. If he says you should cut out fried foods and hot rolls and dessert, do it. I'm sure your wife will cook whatever will bring down your poundage. And she's not likely to stray if she finds out she's getting a slim-jim at home. At least it's worth a try.

DEAR LOUISE: I need to air my feelings to somebody. My husband used to be fat but he lost so much weight in the last year that he wants to go some place every night and show off his new figure. Women are crazy to dance with him at the Golden - Oldies parties. And two neighbor widows come over and talk to him whenever he works in the yard. They laugh and flirt and act like fifteen instead of over fifty. I'm not ugly, but I get so mad that I don't care how I look. If he wants a divorce, shall I give it to him? Sal.

DEAR SAL: He hasn't asked for a divorce, has he? So don't assume that he wants one. Dancing and visiting don't add up to the desire for separation. His new shape has given him fresh interest in getting out with friends and enjoying life once more. But if you go on neglecting your own appearance, he may start going without you because he's ashamed of you. And aloneness is bad for a marriage. So spruce up.

If you have problems, write them to Louise Pierce, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — October nominations for the purchase of Texas crude oil total 2,698,493 barrels a day, an increase of 9,073 barrels daily from September, the Texas Railroad Commission reported Tuesday.

The commission meets Thursday to set the statewide oil allowable for October.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas operators reported 31 wildcat oil wells and 33 gas discoveries during the first half of September, the Texas Railroad Commission announced Tuesday.

In 8½ months, the commission said, operators have reported 346 oil discoveries; 23 more than in the same period last year. There have been 865 gas discoveries, 86 more than in the same period last year.

Wildcat oil wells in the first half of September included eight in West Central Texas; four in the Refugio area; three each in the San Angelo area, South Texas, and North Texas; two each in the Lubbock area, Southeast Texas and East Central Texas; and one each in East Texas, the Panhandle and the San Antonio and Midland areas.

Gas discoveries in September included nine in Southeast Texas; six in West Central Texas; five in the Refugio area; four in South Texas; three each in East Texas and North Texas; two in the Panhandle and one in the Midland area.

Operators reported drilling 204 dry holes in the first half of September.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A proposal that all new Austin subdivisions and apartments include a percentage of low- and moderate-cost housing will go before the city council on Thursday.

The Austin American-Statesman quoted Janna Zumbun of the Human Relations Commission as saying the commission's proposed housing policy would permit the city to become more active in combating segregated housing patterns.

"Austin doesn't have an overall housing policy," she said. "What we're suggesting is that the city consolidate present policies and add our recommendations. We realize there are a lot of loaded recommendations, and I don't think we're asking the council to put them into effect tomorrow."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austin school Superintendent Jack Davidson has announced he will resign when his current contract ends Aug. 31, 1980.

Davidson, a former county school superintendent in Florida, was hired here in 1970. He gave as his reason for resigning a lack of support from school trustees.

Jerry Nugent, vice president of the school board, said, "The only thing I can say is that he's been here a long time and maybe it's time for a change. You just want to move forward in a different direction."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton has named a Dallas Republican as chairman of a special House committee on the problems of Texas cities.

He appointed Rep. Lee Jackson to head the Select Committee on Urban Issues, the only special House committee created for a between-sessions study.

"There are a great number of issues that are creating problems in the urban areas of the state, and it is the Legislature's responsibility to search for answers that will provide relief," said Clayton, a farmer from Springlake.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Health Department says Texas had 829 reported cases of rabies through August and people are "going out of their way to expose themselves to rabies."

For instance, the department said, there was the family that smuggled a two-month old puppy from Mexico in a hollowed-out watermelon. The puppy later became sick and died. Tests showed it was rabid. Eleven young people are now taking rabies shots.

IBM battles for monopoly right

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is a battle of leviathans, the federal government versus International Business Machines Corp., the seventh largest corporation in America.

It is lasting longer and costing more than any government antitrust suit in history. More than 10 years and close to $20 million so far, and they're still in round one.

The government argues that IBM holds an illegal monopoly over the computer industry and must be split into smaller companies. IBM, not surprisingly, frowns on that notion.

The case could go a full three rounds, through the trial court, the appellate court and the Supreme Court, with perhaps another decade of incredibly complex arguments twisting through the stratosphere of computer technology, high finance and economic theory.

"There was no way we could have imagined it lasting this long," says Ramsey Clark who filed the government suit on Jan. 17, 1969, in virtually his last act as the Johnson administration's attorney general.

Six more attorneys general have come and gone since then, and the current one, Benjamin Civiletti, promises to push the case aggressively.

But the key figure — the man who pulls the switches in the legal process and who must ultimately rule for the government or for IBM — is David Edelman, the strong-willed, 70-year-old chief judge of the U.S. District Court in New York.

Edelman himself has become the latest issue. IBM attorneys are accusing the judge of bias and trying to remove him from the case. Edelman last week denied the IBM request that he disqualify himself.

But IBM appealed, and the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals during a hearing last Friday scheduled the question for argument Oct. 16.

Remarkably that the trial is "lasting longer than World War II," Circuit Judge William Mulligan suggested that the two sides ought to talk about a compromise settlement. IBM attorney Thomas Barr said he would seek a meeting with Civiletti.

Although both sides say they're willing to consider a compromise, serious talks have never gotten off the ground. "There have been a couple of approaches in the past...but we were never on the same wavelength," said a government source who requested anonymity.

Government attorneys, who themselves have chafed under some of Edelman's rulings, were stunned by the IBM attack on the judge. Generally, they give him high marks.

"He's taking God's own sweet time to do everything," remarked a government lawyer who asked that he not be named. "He is crossing all the t's and dotting all the i's. But he knows that to the extent he doesn't do it, it will come back to bite him."

Nevertheless, this attorney and other sources say mistakes of management and judgment made by the court, the government and IBM have prolonged the battle.

"I think the Nixon administration didn't really prosecute it. It lay dormant in the Justice Department for years," Clark said in an interview.

A government antitrust official during the Nixon years said there were delays but not because of department reluctance.

Judge Edelman was quite annoyed at the Nixon administration because they hadn't filled a number of vacancies on the court in New York. This source recalled, "So he refused to appoint a judge to handle all IBM proceedings until the administration filled those vacancies."

Finally, Edelman appointed himself to the case in 1972.

Three more years passed, largely consumed by what lawyers call "discovery." That means that each side demands reams of documents from the other, hoping the information will prove incriminating.

But what was being discovered was that this lawsuit was becoming so unmanageable that people began comparing it to Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, the estate case in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House" that became so protracted and expensive that lawyers' fees used up the estate.

Department officials say the government has spent around $8 million on the case. IBM won't say what it has spent, but its lawyers earn more than government attorneys so it undoubtedly exceeds $8 million. The cost to both sides, plus court expenses, approaches $20 million.

Finally, after six years of maneuvering, the trial began with the government presenting its side. After three years, 52 witnesses and 71,857 pages of transcript, a department attorney intoned, "The government rests."

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of American Motors Corp. says one reason AMC is in good shape is because it is concentrating on certain segments of the auto market "rather than slugging it out head-to-head across the board with the bigger automobile companies."

Gerald C. Meyers told the National Press Club Tuesday that AMC's solid financial standing also stems largely from its new working agreement with Renault. On another matter, Meyers said a federal bailout of Chrysler Corp., an AMC competitor, is not justified from a philosophical standpoint. But federal aid is justified on social grounds, he added, because "hundreds of thousands of peoples' livelihoods" are at stake.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional report says about 40 percent of the $50 billion Americans spend annually for car repair is wasted.

The conclusion of the report issued Tuesday by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce subcommittee on consumer protection and finance is identical to earlier estimates by the National Highway Traffic and Safety Administration. Rep. James H. Scheuer, D-N.Y., subcommittee chairman, said "a little bit more than half" of the wasted costs is due to mechanics' incompetence or negligence and the rest due to fraud. The most common unnecessary repairs, the report said, are brake work, tune-ups, front-end work such as replacement of shock absorbers and ball joints, and transmission repairs.

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Five more persons exposed to a rabid kitten earlier this month have begun rabies shots, bringing the total to 16 receiving the inoculations.

As many as 90 persons came into contact with the kitten between Sept. 6 and Sept. 9 at an old Nike missile base, now used as a North Texas State University observatory, city and county health officials said Tuesday. The exposed persons were at the observatory to watch a lunar eclipse.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The 40-foot-long, meat-eating allosaurus has edged the woolly mammoth in a poll to choose Utah's state fossil.

In recent voting sponsored by the Utah Historical Society at the Utah State Fair, the allosaurus got 111 votes to 108 for the mammoth. Now the nomination goes to the Utah Legislature for confirmation hearings.

OVERSEAS

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard has seized four and a half tons of gift-wrapped hashish and arrested 22 people following the pursuit and capture of a ship and a series of raids in the London area.

The operation Monday and Tuesday smashed the biggest drug smuggling ring ever to operate in Britain, said Detective Chief Superintendent John Smith, head of Scotland Yard's drug squad.

"It is certainly the largest single haul ever in Britain," a Scotland Yard spokesman told The Associated Press. He said the hashish, made from concentrated resin of the marijuana plant, would have sold illegally on the street for up to $21.6 million.

TOKYO (AP) — A truck loaded with kerosene burst into flames on a crowded Kowloon street and injured nine persons while damaging a grocery store, two apartments, and a print shop, police said.

Police gave no immediate cause for the start of the fire Tuesday, but said none of the injured were seriously hurt.

CAGAYAN DE ORO, Philippines (AP) — A week-long military operation aimed at wiping out a leftist insurgent training camp in the southern Philippines has ended without a shot being fired, the government said.

Authorities reported finding a few abandoned barracks, but did not find any of the 700 to 800 anti-government insurgents reported to be training in the area, about 450 miles south of Manila.

Israelis tighten security for Jewish New Year

JERUSALEM (AP) — Troops, police and bomb disposal teams fanned out through crowded streets today to protect Israelis shopping for the Jewish New Year after a Palestinian bomb ripped through a Jerusalem mall, killing at least one person and injuring 42.

Israeli state radio said a second person died in the blast Wednesday but police said the victim was so badly mangled they thought at first he was dead, then realized he was alive and in critical condition. Four other victims were reported in serious condition.

Police said the bomb was hidden in the hollow frame of a bicycle left leaning against the wall of the popular Aino Cafe in the crowded Ben Yehuda Street mall.

The blast hurled metal from the bicycle and slivers of glass from the cafe's windows into the sidewalk crowds, splattering the streets with the victims' blood.

"I was sitting in the cafe, and didn't see anything unusual," said Maya Shalmiel. "Suddenly the lights blinked out and I heard the explosion. What a blast — it was maddening."

Customers poured out the back way in a scene of "pandemonium — shouts, hysteria," said Leor Avital, 17, who was making a telephone call from a nearby phone booth when the bomb exploded.

Police said a second bicycle bomb was spotted and was detonated by a bomb disposal team without causing injury. Authorities said a number of Arabs in the area were taken in for questioning.

The bombing came only three days before the Rosh Hashana New Year's holiday begins at sundown Friday — a time when Israeli's stores and markets are jammed with pre-holiday shoppers.

Wednesday's blast was the worst of 27 Arab terrorist bombings in Jerusalem this year. The highest previous toll was on March 23 when a bomb killed one person and injured 14 at a taxi stand in Zion Square in the heart of the city.

The Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility for the bicycle bomb. Wafa, the PLO news agency, said the blast killed "at least 50 Zionists," and that the Al Fatah guerrillas who planted it returned "safely to base."

State witness could not identify slaying suspect

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Paul Potter, an Oklahoma City used car salesman, testified Wednesday that he did business with a man named Richard Green the day a Springdale policeman was shot.

But Potter could not identify Harold Davey Cassell as the man who traded a 1971 Chrysler for another vehicle Dec. 21, 1975.

Cassell, 32, of Denison, Texas, is being tried on capital murder charges in the death of John Tillman Hussey, the Springdale policeman.

Potter said the man had a full beard that partially hid his face. The used car salesman said James Ray Renton accompanied Green.

Prosecutor Kim Smith of Fayetteville contends Green is an alias used by Cassell. Smith claims Cassell drove to Oklahoma City and to trade in the car.

Two FBI agents testified they took the tires off the Chrysler for evidence. The agents said they believe the tire markings match tire rut plaster casts made near a Rogers clothing store. The Campbell-Bell store was burglarized several hours before Hussey's death.

Smith contends Cassell and another defendant, Renton, came from Texas to northwest Arkansas to burglarize the store. He claims Hussey was murdered after stopping a vehicle driven by one of the men in Springdale.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — A utility research group says blocked air lines may have caused a valve failure that contributed to the Three Mile Island nuclear accident.

Director Edwin L. Zebroski of the Nuclear Safety Analysis Center of the Electric Power Research Institute in Palo Alto, Calif., addressed a hearing on nuclear safety Wednesday before the House subcommittee on energy research. Asked why auxiliary cooling water failed to flow to the reactor for eight minutes after the main cooling system failed, he said bits of resin, water or oil may have clogged a tiny valve opening in the plant's air system. He said about two dozen contributing factors to the accident could be identified.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. ambassador to Colombia says the United States commitment of $3.8 million this year to combat drug smuggling from that country is "useful and interesting but minimal."

Ambassador Diego Asencio said Colombia is believed to produce about 70 percent of the marijuana and cocaine brought to the United States. He estimated total U.S. anti-narcotics funding at $1 billion, and said Colombia's small share "just does not make sense." He told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee Wednesday that trying to stop smuggling at U.S. borders should be only a last resort. He said there should be more emphasis on international cooperation, and urged additional funds for equipment and training in Colombia.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee has approved reforms intended to prevent abuses like those exposed during the investigation of alleged financial misconduct by Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga.

The Senate Rules Committee agreed by voice vote Wednesday to require documentation for all Senate expenses over $25.
