50c DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Low tonight in mid 30s,
high tomorrow in low 70s. See Page 2 for weather details.

WHITE DEER — The White Deer Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet in regular session today at 6:30 p.m. at the Skellytown Elementary School library.

Topping the agenda is the dedication of Thornburg Gym in Skellytown. Tommy Thornburg was raised in Skellytown and was a long-time coach in the school district before his retirement.

Also on the agenda is recognition of all-A students for the first semester, second reading of a local policy, discussion of board updates, consideration of a contract with Pampa Police Department for drug dog services, review of elementary counseling program, review of graduation requirements and new state requirements, review of roofing needs and consideration of a raise for the maintenance supervisor.

Also on the agenda are reports from Superintendent Larry Johnston and Business Manager Jack Back.

PAMPA — Neil Quattlebaum was elected chairman of the Gray County Appraisal District Board of Directors at the board's regular meeting this morning.

Quattlebaum replaces McLean Mayor Sam Haynes, who voluntarily stepped down from the position.

Lewis Meers was elected secretary of the board, replacing Quattlebaum.

Quattlebaum, Meers and Wallace Birkes were sworn in at the start of the meeting by 223rd District Court Judge Lee Waters. The three were recently reappointed to the board.

The board also accepted a group health, dental and life insurance bid from Bruce Courtney. Courtney represented MetraHealth in the bidding process.

PAMPA — Meals On Wheels will begin to collect items for its garage sale on Feb. 5. The items will go on sale that day.

The sale and collection will run through May 4 from 2-5 p.m.

The garage sale, to be held in the south end of the Pampa Mall, will be only on Mondays in February and March. In April, the sale and collection will be every weekday starting April 8. The final day of the sale will be Saturday, May 4.

AUSTIN (AP) — One ticket bought in Houston correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $8 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 26, 30, 32, 38, 41 and 44.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

Russian forces attack Chechen rebel troops

PERVOMAYSKAYA, Russia (AP) — Russian forces stormed a southern village with artillery, mortar and helicopter gunships today, setting it on fire after Chechen rebels reportedly killed some of the hostages they have held for six days.

A rocket destroyed a school in Pervomayskaya where some of the estimated 100 captives were held. White flashes split the skies of the village, and thick smoke poured from buildings.

Russian authorities said troops killed 60 rebels, captured others and freed nine captives in fighting that continued into the night.

Estimated to number between 150 and 250, the fighters had been guarding the hostages in a school, mosque and private homes.

Various reports put the number of hostages at between 70 and 120, including women and children. Anatoly Zinevich, duty officer of the Interior Ministry in Moscow, said nine hostages were freed, and that 60 rebels and two Russian troops were killed.

There was no word on the fate of the other hostages.

The assault took place on the sixth day of the standoff in Pervomayskaya, a tiny village on bleak fields of the republic of Dagestan, less than a mile from Chechnya.

The rebels, who seized the hostages to dramatize their demand for a Russian troop withdrawal from their breakaway republic, denied killing any hostages.

Gunfire crackled and explosions could be heard every second when the attack began at 9 a.m. Helicopter gunships fired rockets at the village, and artillery and mortar shells thundered.

News reports said there was intense hand-to-hand fighting inside the village, and that the Russians encountered fierce resistance from the rebels.

In the Chechen capital, Grozny, a violent explosion rocked a movie theater today and rebel fighters tried to attack various official buildings. All traffic was banned, apparently to minimize rebel actions.

There were no other details.

"We want the terrorists punished and wiped out," President Boris Yeltsin was quoted as telling the ITAR-Tass news agency.

After months of inactivity while he recovered from heart trouble, Yeltsin's direct involvement in the hostage crisis appears to show he is back in command. The attack could backfire politically if many of the hostages perish, and damage his chances of winning a second term if he runs for re-election as expected in June.

Gen. Mikhail Barsukov, head of the Federal Security Service, made contact with the rebels in Pervomayskaya at 8:50 a.m. and gave them 10 minutes to come out waving white flags or face attack, Maj. Gen. Alexander Mikhailov told reporters.

The rebels failed to appear, and at 9 a.m. the Russians began the assault. By midday, government forces were in the village and there were reports of hand-to-hand fighting.

In a statement, Barsukov said the rebels started killing hostages Sunday.

The captives killed Sunday were two Interior Ministry troops, Mikhailov said. The ITAR-Tass news agency, quoting unidentified security sources, said the rebels shot six more Interior Ministry troops this morning. Another report said the rebels also killed six Dagestani elders who tried to organize talks.

"On the 14th of January at 4 p.m. the terrorists opened fire on federal troops and began to kill hostages. Because the federal powers cannot put up with this illegal act any longer they have been obliged to resort to the use of force to free the hostages," said the statement Mikhailov read.

Jeremy Buck was first runner-up to winner Kerry Turner, right, in the school-level Geography Bee competition at Pampa Middle School Jan. 10. Turner won by correctly identifying which European country recently started testing nuclear weapons in Tahiti. The correct answer was France.

Kerry Turner wins PMS Geography Bee

Kerry Turner, an eighth grade student at Pampa Middle School, won the school-level competition of the National Geography Bee and a chance at a $25,000 college scholarship.

The Wednesday, Jan. 10, school-level bee, at which students answered oral questions on geography, was the first round in the eighth annual National Geography Bee, sponsored by National Geographic World and Chrysler Corporation.

Turner recently completed a written test; up to 100 of the top scorers in each state, the District of Columbia and five U.S. territories will be eligible to compete in their state bee March 29.

The National Geographic Society will provide an all-expenses paid trip to Washington, D.C., for state champions and their teachers to participate in the National Geography Bee national championship May 28 and 29. The first-place national winner will receive a $25,000 college scholarship; the second-place winner at $15,000 scholarship; and the third-place winner a $10,000 scholarship.

Alex Trebek, host of Jeopardy!, will moderate the national finals, which will air Wednesday, May 29.

The National Geographic Society developed the National Geography Bee in response to a growing concern about the lack of geographic knowledge among young people in the United States. A 10-country Gallup survey conducted for the Society in 1988 and 1989 found that people in the U.S. ages 18 to 24 — the youngest group surveyed — knew less about geography than young people in any of the other countries in the survey.

The National Geographic Society, with 9 million members, has as its mission the "increase and diffusion of geographic knowledge." In addition to the bee, the Society sponsors a number of other geography education initiatives, including summer geography institutes for teachers and the Geographic Alliance Network, currently working in every state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and Canada.

Agencies pay homeless to stand in ticket line

AUSTIN (AP) — Many loyal Bruce Springsteen fans who lined up for concert tickets over the weekend were out of luck after ticket agencies paid 100 homeless people to camp out for tickets.

The homeless lined up Friday night and bought most of the $30 tickets when they went on sale Saturday morning. By Saturday night, ticket agencies were reselling them for as much as $400.

"I think it's wrong because I don't think the homeless people understand how bad they're being used," attorney Steve Boney, who waited for tickets Friday, told the Austin-American Statesman. "I think he (Springsteen) would be sick if he saw this."

A major theme of Springsteen's latest release, The Ghost of Tom Joad, is life on the streets.

But Kent Taylor, the Showtime Tickets owner who hired 50 homeless people to buy as many tickets as they could, said he doesn't feel guilty. He gave people a chance to make $50.

POW swaps planned today and tomorrow

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Days before a peace-plan deadline, enemy troops withdrew from front lines over the weekend, and their leaders prepared to swap hundreds of prisoners today.

Bosnian Croats, Bosnian Serbs and the mostly Muslim government army were to release about 900 prisoners today and Tuesday, according to Pierre Gauthier of the international Red Cross.

There was some concern about government participation in the prisoner swap, Gauthier said. The Bosnian government had linked prisoner releases to a determination of what happened to thousands of people who disappeared when Serbs took the Muslim enclave of Srebrenica.

Human rights organizations, the United States and other governments have evidence and testimony from survivors of a Serb massacre during the July 11 attack.

Today's prisoner exchanges were to happen in Bocac, Tuzla, Sanski Most and Gorazde — all villages between former front lines dividing the Muslim-Croat federation and Serb-held regions. Tuesday's swap was set for Sarajevo.

Under the peace plan signed in Paris in December, enemy troops must free all prisoners of war and withdraw 2 1/2 miles from former front lines by Friday.

Several thousand Bosnian government, Serb and Croat troops withdrew on Sunday from their front-line trenches and bunkers across central and northern Bosnia, according to officials with the NATO-led peace enforcing mission.

British officers said Sunday they were confident that all troops had backed away from both sides of the 112-mile front line that the British police in northwestern Bosnia. Forces withdrew, too, in the U.S.-occupied sector in central and northeast Bosnia and the French sector in the south.

British officers estimated 7,000 to 10,000 soldiers withdrew.

"This is a tremendous beginning," NATO spokesman Maj. Alistair Ross said in Okruglica, a front-line village in central Bosnia. "It's too early to say the peace will hold, but what we're seeing today hasn't been achieved in almost four years of war."

Orange-painted tree stumps and roads and winding stretches of orange wire mark the zones of separation between former front lines, where only military personnel with the NATO-led force are allowed to enter.

Emerging from a clump of beech trees concealed in thick fog, a unit of front-line Bosnian Croat troops beamed at waiting reporters Sunday as they filed across the orange line guarded by British troops.

"I'm going home soon, but in the meantime I'm happy to be four kilometers (2 1/2 miles) away from those Serbs rather than just 300 meters (yards)," said Toni, a young soldier who declined to give his full name.

"This agreement will work if everybody sticks to the rules. We have, and it is your job now to make sure the Serbs don't sneak into our positions," he told a group of British soldiers.

The dawning of ten-digit dialing

DALLAS (AP) — Might as well get a jump on the game and learn how to use that autodialer on your phone. The 10-digit local phone number is inevitable.

The burgeoning use of fax machines, beepers, modems and cellular phones is rapidly eliminating the numbers available with current area codes. So, all those devices that were supposed to make life easier mean new area codes are being implemented in 23 parts of the country through 1996, according to the Federal Communications Commission.

With those new codes will come new dialing instructions and eventually more numbers to punch each time you dial a local call.

"Ten-digit dialing is going to be reality," said Southwestern Bell spokesman Chris Talley.

That doesn't mean people think it should happen now.

Aplomado falcons return to South Texas 40 years later

HARLINGEN (AP) — The bird that didn't hunt in South Texas for more than four decades has become native again.

A breeding pair successfully reared a rusty-chested aplomado falcon chick into flight last year. It was the first time in recent recorded history an aplomado chick has hatched in the wild, said Linda Laack, a biologist for the Laguna Atascosa National Wildlife Refuge.

The chick was hatched and raised in a nest on a telephone pole near the Port of Brownsville, 20 miles south of the refuge.

About 90 aplomado chicks have been reintroduced to the area in the last 10 years from manmade nests at the refuge. Many have survived to hunt the grassy coastal prairies of the Rio Grande Valley.

Search continues for 9-year-old Arlington girl abducted

ARLINGTON (AP) — The search for a 9-year-old girl who was abducted as she rode a bicycle near her grandparents' home continued today.

Officers were searching for a man in a pickup truck in connection with the Saturday abduction of Amber Hagerman, who was last seen near an abandoned grocery store.

Witnesses told police she was taken by a white or Hispanic man driving a black, full-sized pickup.

One witness saw the girl being dragged from her bicycle, Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said.

The witness, Jimmie Kevil, said he didn't realize he was watching an abduction until it was too late.

Turning trees into mulch

A Christmas tree Tommy Dennis of Quail Creek Nursery in Canyon places through a chipper is quickly splintered into mulch Saturday morning as the Chipping of the Greens was under way. Clean Pampa Inc. hired the nursery to chip Christmas trees into three tons of mulch by the end of the day. The trees were deposited at the parking lot of Warner-Horton Supply, 900 N. Duncan, by Pampa residents for the project. Residents interested in picking up any of the mulch for use may contact the Clean Pampa office at 665-2514.

Astronauts play celestial construction workers outside space shuttle Endeavor

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two rookie spacewalkers played celestial hard hats today outside shuttle Endeavor, working with a beam and cables in a 200-mile-high imitation of space station assembly.

"Easy. No problem at all," Leroy Chiao said as he mounted a hinged aluminum beam across the shuttle's cargo bay.

Chiao and Daniel Barry were trying out new tools, evaluating upgraded spacesuits and giving NASA something it badly needs — experienced spacewalkers to help assemble an international space station in a few years.

The two worked together to unfold and mount the 17 1/2-foot beam designed to mimic a cable tray planned for the station.

Chiao then unreeled about 20 feet of cable from a spool and attached it to the beam. The cable rolled off with ease, but winding it back up turned out to be tougher. "It's flopping in every direction," he said.

The two spacewalkers ventured outside on time but soon fell behind in their work because of a misalignment between the shuttle robot arm and a work platform that had to be attached to the end of the 50-foot arm. As it turned out, the rearranged position was easier for Barry — "so I'm not complaining."

Within two hours, they were back on track and at work with the beam. The remaining jobs went so smoothly that the astronauts headed back inside the shuttle about 15 minutes before their scheduled 6 1/2 hours was up.

"Maybe we'll come out again together someday, Leroy," Barry said.

"You bet. There's going to be plenty of work to do for (the) station," Chiao replied.

Even while hustling through their tasks, the pair took every opportunity to soak up the sights and repeatedly remarked at the dazzling view.

"Aw man, what a sunrise," Barry said. "Oh yeah, it's beautiful. Woo. Beautiful."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is trying to get in all the spacewalking experience it can. Assembly of the international station is set to begin in late 1997 but heats up in 1999, when American astronauts alone will have to start performing up to 250 hours of spacewalks per year. Completion is scheduled for around 2002.

Gingrich endorses Laughlin, despite controversy within GOP

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — After campaigning against him in 1994, House Speaker Newt Gingrich planned to endorse U.S. Rep. Greg Laughlin today. Not all Republicans in the sprawling 14th District are happy about it.

Some said Gingrich should remain neutral while Laughlin, a Democrat until last summer, campaigns for the nomination against three other GOP hopefuls.

"As much as we love Newt, his endorsement is becoming cheap," said Bill Waters, Calhoun County GOP chairman.

Waters and several other Republican county chairs wrote Gingrich last fall, urging the speaker not to take sides in the March 12 primary.

"Greg switched to the Republican Party only because the Republicans won a majority in the House. If the Democrats still had a majority, Greg would still be a Democrat," Waters said.

Gingrich was scheduled to endorse Laughlin at a breakfast in San Marcos before attending GOP fundraising events in Houston and Dallas.

Laughlin, the West Columbia lawmaker who switched parties in June, said that receiving Gingrich's backing proves his conservative credentials.

"The speaker was aware of my conservative voting record when he first welcomed me into the Republican Party," Laughlin said.

"His endorsement and visit clearly demonstrate that my voting record has continued to be one that truly reflects the conservative values of the hard-working men and women of the 14th District," the congressman said.

One of Laughlin's primary opponents is Blanco rancher Jim Deats, who netted nearly 45 percent of the vote as the Republican nominee against then-Democrat Laughlin in 1994.

Gingrich campaigned for him in Victoria that year, Deats said, adding, "Obviously, I'm disappointed."

"I think Laughlin's trying to run a top-down campaign, and he's had very little success getting to the voters in the district. I think the vast majority of the Republican leaders in the district think the people of the 14th District should be making this decision," Deats said.

Another Republican candidate, former U.S. Rep. Ron Paul of Surfside, purchased advertisements in the San Marcos Daily Record in advance of the speaker's visit.

Headlined "Newt Gingrich speaks out against Greg Laughlin," the ad reprinted a November 1994 Gingrich quote: "The question is whether or not Bill Clinton needs more friends in Washington. Greg Laughlin has a 78 percent voting record with Bill Clinton; that tells you where he stands."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Senate majority leader wimps out

Enough is enough? Some Republican voters might feel the same way.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole didn't do his party or his presidential campaign any favors earlier this month. Whether encouraging the Senate to provide yet another temporary funding measure so government workers could go back to their offices for a while would have gotten an overall budget agreement any sooner is anybody's guess. The House quickly rejected the idea, so the only impact was to highlight Sen. Dole's eagerness to do something - almost anything - to get government workers back on the job.

This senatorial solicitude for government workers who might have to miss a paycheck or two - with the implicit understanding that they'll eventually be paid for their time off, thereby getting extra days of paid vacation - was especially curious coming the same day that telecommunications giant AT&T announced it will be laying off some 40,000 workers over the next few years.

It's not that the AT&T downsizing is likely to be all that tragic - indeed, it might spur middle managers to entrepreneurial activity, to their benefit and society's. But the vague notion that government workers are somehow entitled to lifetime job security without a hint of inconvenience or interruption - when the economy around them is undergoing enormous change - is the essence of old-style establishmentarianism.

Some have said that one purpose that might have been served by yet another temporary funding measure would have been to put the spotlight and the responsibility for the budget crisis squarely on President Clinton. That might have been a laudable goal, but it is difficult to see how Sen. Dole's plan would have accomplished it.

The fact is that President Clinton is almost solely responsible for the impasse right now and has been the major impediment to progress toward a balanced budget all year. It took a previous government shutdown to get him to agree even to the modest goal of a balanced budget in seven years, and he has been trying to wiggle out of it ever since he signed the law mandating it back in November. The administration had yet to submit a balanced budget by 2002 (as scored by the Congressional Budget Office), as it is required to do under the agreement that ended the first government shutdown.

So the ball is already in the president's court. If most of the inside-the-Beltway media have failed to report this story in a blame-Clinton mode up to now, one more concession from congressional Republicans is unlikely to change that situation. If anything, it might embolden the administration to continue and intensify its policy of dragging its feet, fudging its figures and peddling phony scare stories, figuring that the other side had begun to blink.

Congressional Republicans have submitted at least two balanced-budget-by-2002 plans this year. The Clinton administration, finally bowing to pressure, has submitted one. The partial government shutdown - causing more people every day to wonder whether we need those "nonessential" services at all or to remember that having the federal government involved in so many activities might cause problems the involvement was originally supposed to solve - doesn't hurt congressional Republicans.

Any president still has the power, in the absence of a two-thirds majority against him, to stymie any budget and resist any reform. The only leverage the Republican Congress has - unless it can cobble together a veto-proof budget resolution, which might not be a bad idea if feasible - is the government shutdown, which obviously makes the administration very nervous. Congress shouldn't give up that leverage.

Network game of triangulation

Throughout the budget struggle between Bill Clinton and Congress, the networks have played their own clever game of triangulation, blaming both sides and pressuring both sides to come to an agreement. How? With the wretched bread and butter of TV news: hanky-waving sob stories of the shutdown's "victims."

Five days into the last shutdown, ABC's Jack Smith mourned: "Monuments and national parks are shut. So are museums. A long-awaited rare exhibit of the Dutch painter Vermeer at the National Gallery, eight years in the making, is closed. And the shutdown now has a human face. Joe Skattleberry and his wife, Lisa, both work for the government. Both have been furloughed. They can't afford a Christmas tree."

Please. Would Smith really have us believe a couple that must earn more than $50,000 a year suddenly can't afford a Christmas tree after a furlough of five days?

Speaking of having a hard time working up sympathy, the Dec. 22 "CBS Evening News" told the heartbreaking story of upper-middle class folk being deprived of their usual Christmas stay at a hotel inside Yosemite National Park. The hotel's annual performance of Old English songs was on hold. Whined one choir singer: "For three months, I've driven seven hours every single Monday to practice to sing at this dinner." That's a shame - but nothing more than that.

It's a curious new set of victims for the network news. The holidays usually feature pictures of the homeless, but this year, it was upper-crust choir singers. One read a poem: "So please, cross your fingers, your toes and your knees that Newt the Slime Bucket and Bill Clinton the Slezee will come to a meeting of minds, as they say, and open

L. Brent Bozell

Yosemite for our Christmas Day." Reporter John Blackstone followed with a lecture: "A reminder to politicians who like to talk of family values: Christmas in Yosemite is something many families value." The networks did not emphasize that Bill Clinton vetoed the Interior Department appropriations bill Congress passed that would have kept the park open - they happily blamed both parties from their all-knowing perch above society.

On Jan. 2, CBS returned to form with reporter Scott Pelley playing the role of guest lecturer: "In April, terrorists tried to kill them. Today, politicians stopped their paychecks. In Oklahoma City's Social Security office, they're being ordered to work for nothing ... The bomb broke Beverly Rankin's ankle - politics is breaking her bank." Pelley loaded his story with angry federal employees making their most literate case: "Why don't you bunch of dummies get on with it?" For effect, Pelley took the panic another step: "The budget breakdown that appeared to affect only bureaucrats is now spreading to private companies. Federal agencies are fast running out of money to pay suppliers and contractors." That same night, NBC's Tom Brokaw mourned: "Far from the marbled halls of Congress and the elegant furnishings of the White House, this government shutdown is about a lot more than politics. It's about people and their real needs. NBC's George Lewis tonight is at an Indian health clinic in San Diego that is running out of money and will close shortly if this is not resolved."

Lewis warned: "At the Free Indian Health Clinic in San Diego, they're holding an emergency meeting tonight to figure out how much longer they can keep the doors open. The clinic's executive director, Ron Morton, says the money is running out rapidly because of the lack of federal help ... Two-thirds of the clinic's budget, $95,000 a month, comes from the federal government. Without that money, the clinic can't meet its payroll. The people who run this clinic fear that if it has to close its doors, many of the 4,000 patients who seek treatment here will not look elsewhere. Ron Morton says traditionally, Native Americans do not like to accept handouts." But didn't Lewis just tell us that the clinic is two-thirds funded by the federal government?

Morton, the clinic operator, clearly has the panicked language of network victimology down pat: "Indian folks come to an Indian program like ours because they can trust it. They feel like they can come here and not have to worry about other motives by the federal government. But the bottom line, I think, is that if this budget's not signed, there are people who are going to die."

The networks must be licking their chops. If the Republicans back down and the federal government grows as usual, they'll be happy. If the Republicans succeed in getting some reductions in growth, they'll have "cuts" to wait about for the next seven years.

In 1870, the Democratic Party was represented as a donkey for the first time in a cartoon by Thomas Nast in Harper's Weekly.

In 1919, pianist and statesman Ignace Jan Paderewski became the first premier of the newly created republic of Poland.

In 1943, work was completed on the Pentagon, headquarters of the U.S. Department of Defense.

The record catches up with Hillary

In April of 1994, swathed in feminine pink sweater set, Hillary Rodham Clinton performed spin control on the Whitewater affair at a special White House news conference.

Responding to questions about her legal representation of Madison Guaranty and specifically about the Castle Grande deal, Mrs. Clinton claimed that her legal role in the matter had been "minimal," that most of the work had been performed by a young associate, and that "this was not my practice area." Asked to provide billing records to support her contention, the White House responded - for two years - that the billing records were missing and could not be found.

Then, the other day, the records were found in the White House residence (this administration has a peculiar habit of storing official records in the living quarters). What President and Mrs. Clinton were doing in possession of law firm documents has never been clarified (billing records are the property of the firm, not the individual lawyers), but what the records show is that Mrs. Clinton indeed performed extensive work for Madison, billing more than $6,000 and meeting or speaking with one of the Castle Grande partners, Seth Ward (father-in-law of HRC's former law partner and convicted felon Webster Hubbell) no fewer than 14 times in a seven month period.

According to Rep. Jim Leach, who is investigating Whitewater, the records also reveal that Mrs. Clinton discussed legal matters with Madison Guaranty's owners, Jim and Susan McDougal, on 16 occasions and participated in 28 conference or phone calls with lawyers in the Rose firm to dismiss legal issues affecting Madison.

What's the big deal? ask Clinton supporters. Well, for one thing, Mrs. Clinton's firm was also representing the Resolution Trust Corp. during this period, presenting a conflict of interest that could be a disbarment offense for a lawyer. Second, the incompatibility between Mrs. Clinton's statements (some sworn) and the documentary record could amount to perjury. Third, the Castle Grande deal is widely viewed by government investigators as a sham transaction that was designed to permit McDougal's savings and loan to circumvent federal rules.

There's more. The other document belatedly released by the White House recently reveals that Mrs. Clinton also may have lied about taking no part in the firing of the White House travel office employees. A contemporaneous memo written by David Watkins, then in charge of White House management and administration, to former Chief of Staff Mack McLarty reads in part, "We both know that there would be hell to pay if we failed to take swift and decisive action in conformity with the first lady's wishes." Her wishes were that the seven employees be fired summarily so that the business could be handed over to an Arkansas cronie.

Mrs. Clinton has quite a history of firing people for trifling reasons. She fired the White House chefs, claiming that their cuisine was too high in fat. She fired the White House usher, who had served several administrations loyally, because he was keeping in touch with Barbara Bush (helping her learn to use a laptop computer).

If Hillary Rodham Clinton were a Republican, she would be taken apart piece by piece by the press. She would be the dragon lady, scourge of little people who cross her (there is a reference in the Watkins memo to her fury when a story about throwing lamps in the White House was leaked to the press), profiteer off her husband's power (did Tyson chicken magnate Jim Blair provide cattle futures investments to all his friends?) and, most of all, hypocrite who railed against the greed of the 1980s but seems to have accepted every sweetheart deal that came her way.

Different rules apply to liberal Democrats. Perhaps more offensive than anything else about the first lady is her patronizing and at the same time self-justifying explanation for her reputation. She has let it be known that she isn't sure the country is "ready" for an independent, strong woman as first lady. Accordingly, each time the records begin to contradict her on some key point, Mrs. Clinton dons the mantle of cookie-baking, child-oriented mom.

It's a shameful act. What the country is not ready for is a dissembling first lady whose word cannot be trusted.

Hooray for Congressional freshmen!

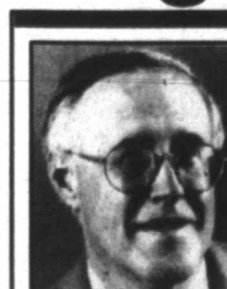

Up rose President Clinton to damn once more the House of Representatives for keeping the government partially shut down. The nerve of these guys, insisting on fiscal restraint!

So it goes. With the media's eager acquiescence, the Democrats are putting out the message that except for all these ideologues in the House, the government would go back to work full time, the poor would be fed, the homeless housed and the birds would be inspired to resume their sweet songs. The hardest licks are directed at the 73 freshman Republicans - the supposedly uncontrollable block that tells Newt and the others what to do and where to go. Oh, what a bunch of bad guys!

Permit me to put another spin on the matter. Oh, what a bunch of heroes - and heroines! The House freshman - those Republicans elected in the 1994 sweep - are indeed holding Congress' feet to the fire on this matter of budget balancing. This is not, as has been widely advertised in the media, an act of political vandalism. It is a sound and overdue public service. Would that Congress were blessed with another 100 or so "hard heads" like the freshmen. We might start to get somewhere.

That we have gotten to this promising stage - President Chameleon moving closer and closer to the budget balancing position - is due in large measure to the freshmen, who came to Washington scornful of business as usual.

One of them, Michael P. Forbes of New York, notes that "the old ways of Washington are that when the heat gets to a certain point, you run."

William Murchison

He was speaking about Robert Dole's willingness - rebuked firmly by the House - to reopen the government while budget negotiations go forward. No way! said the freshmen. Running when the heat gets turned up gets you where we are now: saddled with hard choices, and hard choices only, in terms of budget balancing.

It's no fun doing what the freshmen are doing - making the tough decisions and taking the heat. Make constituents mad? Why, goodness, that's the way to get defeated for reelection. The freshmen listen blandly to such assertions. So? What if you do get defeated, having made the right and tough choices for America? There is more honor in such an outcome than in decades of soporific service that ignores the country's gnawing problems. "Better to be slain for a lion than a lamb," might be the operative slogan.

The disillusion with politics is predicated on widespread perception that politicians are in it for themselves. What do they care about the public weal, whatever that is, while they have their junkets and press conferences? Americans have asked that searing question again and again.

A few who have asked it may not have thought through the implications - to wit, if you hire genuine public servants, their judgment and discretion may be employed sometimes in nettlesome and controversial ways. The freshmen sometimes displease. Oddly - for politicians - they acknowledge the people's right to be angry. What they mean to do, pending the next election, is to address unaddressed problems.

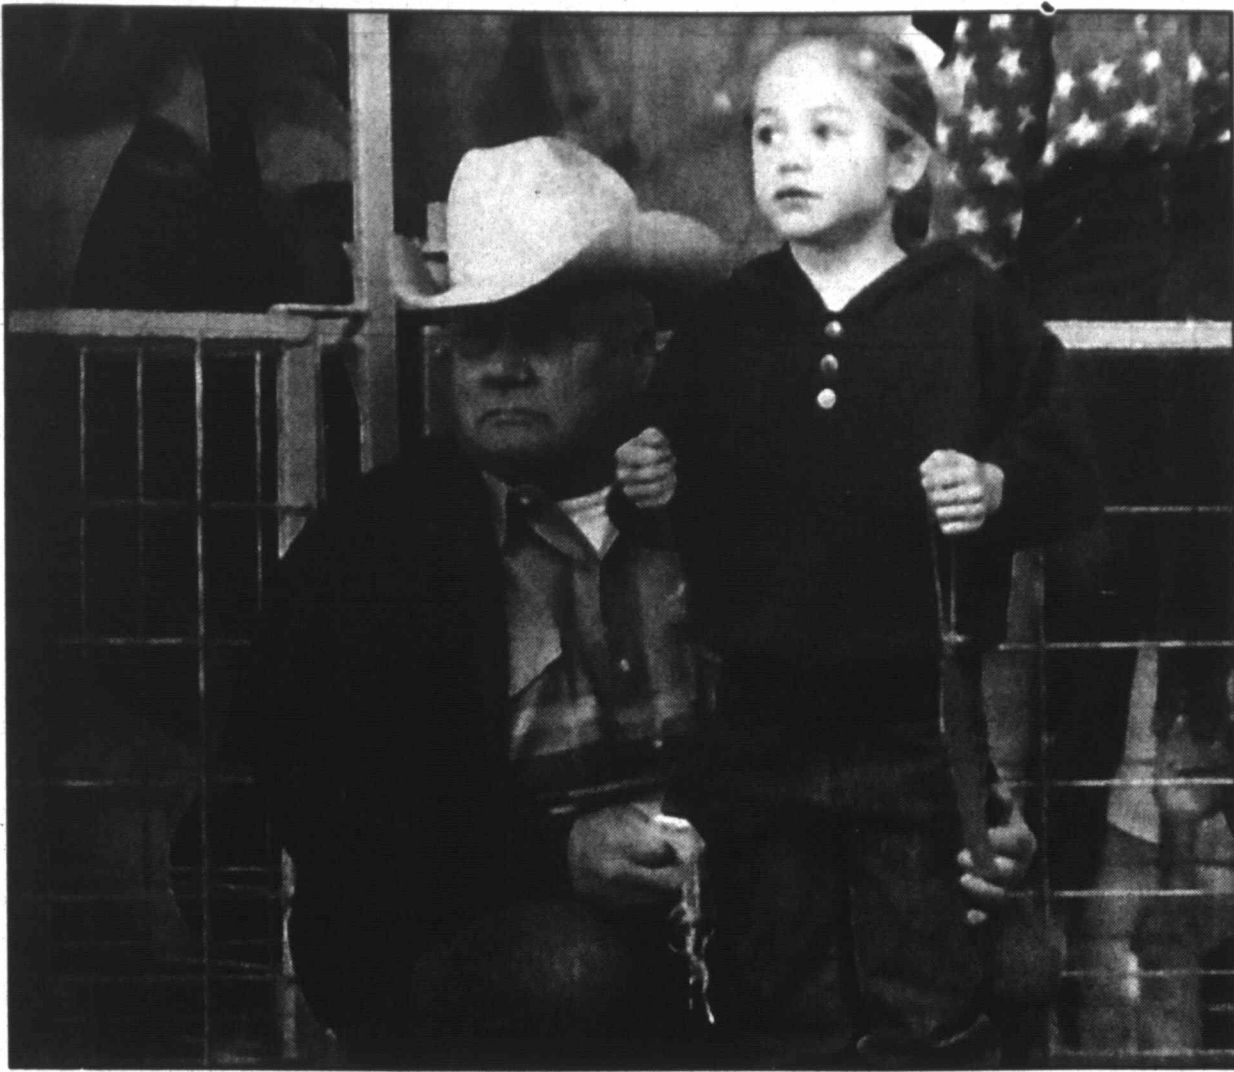

How will it all come out? No one can see to the end of this particular tunnel. But it seems relatively clear that courage and stubbornness are paying dividends. A seven year budget balancing plan, based on the assumptions of the Congressional Budget Office, seems likely. No such plan would have issued from the Clinton White House. Of that, we may be sure.

As is always the case in politics, the plan will not do everything the freshmen think the country needs and deserves. It will do more, nonetheless, than would have been the case without those freshmen in the foreground, pulling, prodding, tugging.

The cynical saying is: No good deed goes unpunished. The next election may plow under some of this lively crop of heretics - but fewer, perhaps, than the Clintonites would prefer. Doers of good deeds reap not only death but, at key moments in history, rich reward. For heroes like these freshmen, the title of Congressional Medal of Honor takes a wholly new, and delightful, meaning.

Awaiting the judging

Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show President Jim Greene awaits the judge's ruling along with five-year-old Keeley Reid, who presented ribbons to the winners of the different breed contests at the livestock show Saturday. Judging Saturday included steer, heifer, lamb and rabbit events. The show wrapped up Sunday with judging in the barrow show.

Republican from Utah says it's premature to subpoena Hillary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Issuing a subpoena for Hillary Rodham Clinton to testify before Congress about her role in the Whitewater real estate deal would create "a political fiasco" that should be avoided for now, a leading Republican said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said Sunday the Senate committee investigating Whitewater should gather as much information as possible from the White House and other sources "before we even consider doing something like that to a first lady in this country."

"I don't think the first lady should be subpoenaed under present circumstances. ... It would just make it a political fiasco," Hatch said during an appearance on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Still, Hatch said, "we need to have more candid responses from the White House, from the Clintons," in order to end the probe quickly. "I think she ought to just tell the truth on this," he said.

Persistent questions about the extent of Mrs. Clinton's involvement in Whitewater — and in a separate matter, the firing of seven White House travel office employees in 1993 — created a credibility problem for her in recent weeks and caused her popularity to slip.

The questions arose after the White House said it had discovered old records detailing Mrs. Clinton's work as a partner in the Rose Law Firm in the 1980s for Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, the failed Little Rock, Ark., thrift that is at the center of the Whitewater probes.

The first lady's supporters suggested Sunday that the questions represent a "witchhunt" designed to undercut the first lady solely to create political controversy for President Clinton.

"There is a fine line sometimes between legitimate investigatory inquiry and harassment. ... I hope the Republicans are not guilty of crossing it," White House chief of staff Leon Panetta said on CBS.

The records, which had been subpoenaed two years earlier, show that Rose billed Madison for about 60 hours of legal work by Mrs. Clinton over a 15-month period.

Now, the Senate Whitewater Committee wants access to more documents, particularly electronic mail messages between some White House staffers, to see whether they contain "uncensored, very candid observations" that could aid in the investigation, said Michael Chertoff, the committee's Republican counsel.

"Our job is to get at the truth," Chertoff said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

That led Richard Ben-Veniste, Democratic counsel to the Whitewater committee, to accuse the GOP of conducting a fishing expedition for the sake of "political quibbling." "Yes, this is fishing," Ben-Veniste said on ABC. "We're not fishing with hooks here, we're fishing with dynamite."

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said the GOP queries now are so convoluted that they serve little purpose beyond keeping the controversy alive for political reasons.

"I really believe this is a political witchhunt," Gephardt said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." "We've been at this for three years now ... and there's been no wrongdoing found."

Even Mrs. Clinton herself said the Senate Whitewater Committee and others appear to be searching for scandal. "This is not about finding out the truth," she told the Los Angeles Times in an interview Friday.

In spite of that, the first lady will cooperate with the investigation, said Mark D. Fabiani, the White House lawyer designated to deal with Whitewater and related matters.

Saturday, Fabiani took exception to the newspaper's early characterization that Mrs. Clinton "rejects" the idea of appearing before the Senate. Her comments during the Times interview, Fabiani said, "are consistent with her long-held position that she will cooperate and do whatever is necessary to answer legitimate questions and bring this matter to an end."

Peanuts Can Be Deadly For Woman With Allergy

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your column on the danger of food allergies.

I have had a lifelong allergy to peanuts, but only in recent years have I seen anything in print about this problem. Well-meaning but ignorant people have told me I am "spoiled" and "fussy," and it's only my imagination! Adults and children alike have tried to persuade me to eat peanuts, or even worse, have tricked me into eating them.

My allergy has become much more acute as I've grown older. At one point, I suffered a full-blown anaphylactic reaction. Your readers might find a chronology of the symptoms of an allergic reaction educational.

Here's what happens (usually within minutes). It is a true medical emergency, and every second counts: Your mouth starts to feel "funny" inside, then your wrists and hands begin to itch, followed by your armpits, then your croch. That's just the beginning.

Your eyes and lips begin to itch and swell, then hives start to puff up and itch over your entire body and — the really dangerous part — you begin to wheeze because your mucus membranes are also affected, and your lungs begin to fill up. Then, your blood pressure begins to fall, and your body attempts to compensate for the drop in pressure by increasing the heart rate to 200 beats a minute (65 to 80 is normal).

At this point, you are close to cashing in your chips unless you can get a shot or two of epinephrine. And, even if your blood pressure doesn't dive, if your throat swells shut, you're in serious trouble because only an emergency tracheotomy (a hole in your windpipe so air can reach your lungs) can save you.

Abigail Van Buren

You will probably hear from other readers about the danger of food allergies. Thank you for making people aware.

ELIZABETH A. CURRAN

DEAR ELIZABETH: Almost every year there is some mention in the media about an allergy-related tragedy or a close call experienced by someone who was not as fortunate as you. Food allergies are not the only problem. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm one of the many people who are highly allergic to perfumes. We seem to be an expanding circle, because I know nine other people with the same affliction.

I avoid crowds, do my shopping in the early morning hours, and try to sit away from others at funerals and weddings. One exposure leaves my nose congested and my lungs filled with fluid. I cough for days.

Why do people insist on drenching themselves in perfume? I was taught that restraint is important: A tiny drop on the wrist or neck is sufficient. No one is supposed to bathe in the stuff.

I recently attended a funeral, sitting well to the back and off to the side with my nonscented friends. Halfway through the service, the door opened and a wave of perfume wafted across the church. I was ill the remainder of the day.

Some advertisers place perfume samples in magazines, scenting the entire mail system. If this were my kingdom, perfume offenders would be relegated to isolated sections in public, and perfume bottles would require a warning label: "This product may be hazardous to the health of others."

Those who use perfume should have an honest friend check them out. The user's ability to judge the amount that should be used may be dulled from sensory overload.

DORIS VOSS, TACOMA, WASH.

DEAR DORIS: Thank you for reminding my readers that an allergy is nothing to sneeze at.

BASKETBALL

PAMPA — Both the Pampa Lady Harvesters and the Caprock Lady Longhorns will be seeking their first District 1-4A win when the two teams face off at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Caprock Activity Center.

Pampa is 0-5 in district play and 11-10 for the season. Caprock is 0-5 and 7-16.

The Lady Harvesters came close to picking up their first district win last Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse. Borger hung on for a 58-53 victory.

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — Massachusetts center Marcus Camby was reported in stable condition and was being evaluated in a hospital where he was rushed Sunday after collapsing minutes before a game against St. Bonaventure.

Camby, one of the top players in the country for the top-ranked Minutemen, was accompanied to Olean General Hospital by UMass coach John Calipari after leaving St. Bonaventure in an ambulance.

Camby, a junior from Hartford, Conn., collapsed after warmups and was taken by ambulance to the hospital. A hospital spokesperson would not speculate on what caused Camby to collapse six minutes before tipoff.

Massachusetts public relations director Bill Strickland said hospital officials told him Camby was conscious and alert.

An eyewitness, Ed Baron, the brother of St. Bonaventure coach Jim Baron, said Camby "was hurting" after he fell.

"His eyes were open," Baron said. "He looked more scared than anything."

A source at the hospital said Camby underwent a CAT scan.

FOOTBALL

DALLAS (AP) — Green Bay wide receivers coach Gil Haskell remains in the intensive care unit of a Dallas hospital today after sustaining a head injury during Sunday's NFC championship game.

Haskell was taken to Baylor University Medical Center, where he was being evaluated today. The Packers lost to the Cowboys 38-27 Sunday.

"Gil Haskell is listed in serious condition with a head injury and is still in (the intensive care unit)," said Baylor spokeswoman Jenny Henson.

No further information was released.

But another Baylor hospital spokeswoman, Jennifer Cole, said yesterday that Haskell had a fractured skull.

Haskell's head struck the artificial turf at Texas Stadium when Cowboys safety Darren Woodson blocked flanker Robert Brooks out of bounds and into the Packers' 51-year-old assistant late in the second quarter.

The game was delayed for about 10 minutes while medical personnel placed Haskell in a neck brace and onto a stretcher. He was conscious and responsive on the way to the hospital, accompanied by his wife, Nancy.

TENNIS

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Defending champion Andre Agassi, usually a wizard on the tennis court, almost suffered a humiliating first-round loss in the Australian Open today because of a misstep off court.

His little known Argentine opponent, Gaston Etis, was two points away from victory at 5-3 in the fourth-set tiebreaker, so close to an upset that he said, "I wanted to call home to Buenos Aires. I wanted to call my father, my mother, my coach. But now ..."

Now second seed Agassi has a 3-6, 7-6 (7-2), 4-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3 victory.

"I'm still in the tournament and I've got 48 hours" before the next match to nurse the right knee he hurt stumbling on a spiral staircase in his hotel room on the eve of the first round, he said.

"Triplets" lead Cowboys back to Super Bowl

DALLAS (AP) — Call them "the Triplets." Call them Emmitt, Troy and Michael. Call them the reason the Dallas Cowboys are back where they think they belong every year.

The Super Bowl. With Emmitt Smith, Troy Aikman and Michael Irvin doing what they do best, the Cowboys overcame the tenacious Green Bay Packers 38-27 Sunday and now head for Tempe, Ariz., to play Pittsburgh in quest of their third NFL championship in four years.

They met in two previous Super Bowls, both won by Pittsburgh after the 1974 and 1976 seasons. This time, however, Dallas is an early 12 1/2-point favorite to become the 12th straight team from the NFC to win the NFL title.

"We're going home," said Irvin, who had seven receptions for 100 yards and two touchdowns Sunday. "We let someone else rent it last year, but we're taking it back."

But while Dallas will bring back a lot of familiar faces, there will be two notable new ones — Barry Switzer and Deion Sanders.

"They tell me it's a lot of fun," said the coach who's been under fire since Jerry Jones chose him to replace Jimmy Johnson after their well-publicized falling out in April 1994.

Sanders, on the other hand, will be back for the second consecutive season, but his first with Dallas.

Last season, he won his first ring with San Francisco, then signed on with the Cowboys for $35 million. His main contribution Sunday was on offense rather than defense — a 35-yard reception, on which he demonstrated his high-stepping strut, to set up Dallas' first touchdown.

This was not an easy game for the Cowboys, although they held the ball for four seconds short of 39 minutes.

They got 150 yards and three touchdowns on 35 carries for Smith and an efficient 21 of 33 day for Aikman, who threw for 255 yards and 4- and 6-yard TD passes to Irvin in the first period.

And it wasn't a pleasant one. There were numerous scuffles and three unsportsmanlike conduct penalties following an injury to Green Bay nose tackle John Jurkovic on a legal chop block by Erik Williams. In fact, the Packers complained all game about the officiating — they thought a pick was thrown on Sanders' reception.

And Gil Haskell, Green Bay's receivers coach, was knocked unconscious when he was hit on the sidelines by the Packers' Robert Brooks, who had been shoved out of bounds by Darren Woodson. Haskell was taken to Baylor University Hospital where he was listed in serious condition with a head injury.

"It's hard to keep going when you see your friend lying there unconscious," said Packers coach Mike Holmgren.

The Packers played hard. The Cowboys just played better.

Among the keys for Dallas was defensive tackle Leon Lett, who always seems to show up (positively or negatively) in big games. His interception of a Brett Favre screen pass set up the second Aikman-Irvin hookup to give the Cowboys a 14-3 lead with 2:20 left in the first period.

But, 21 seconds after Irvin scored, Brooks raced untouched into the Dallas end zone after taking a slant pass from Favre on a play that covered 73 yards. Somehow Larry Brown was left alone to cover the entire side of the field against Brooks, who caught 102 passes in the regular season.

Brown would later atone with an interception that sealed the game, but the Favre-Brooks play was typical of the resilience by Green Bay, which last week upset San Francisco, the reigning champion.

Favre, the NFL's MVP during the regular season, missed his first six passing attempts and completed only two of his first nine. But both of those were for touchdowns, the second a 24-yarder to Keith Jackson 39 seconds into the second period that gave the Packers a 17-14 lead.

"I was a little too pumped up," said the 26-year-old Favre, who was in the biggest game of his career.

Still, it was Smith and the offensive line that wore down the Packers in the 78-degree weather — 94 degrees warmer than in the most famous Dallas-Green Bay playoff game, the 1967 "Ice Bowl" at Lambeau Field.

Soccer battle

Pampa's Bobby Hendricks (5) battles a Lubbock Monterey player for possession of the ball during a high school soccer match Saturday at Harvester Stadium. The Harvesters play San Angelo Central Tuesday in Lubbock.

No. 6 Harvesters go to Caprock

PAMPA — Amarillo Caprock is expected to be Pampa's toughest District 1-4A foe yet, even though the Longhorns were handled easily by Hereford last Friday night.

The two teams meet at 7:30 Tuesday night in the Caprock Activity Center.

The Harvesters are 18-3 overall and 4-0 in district play after routing Borger, 87-47, last Friday night. Caprock, 7-16 overall, had won its first district starts before losing to Hereford, 64-39.

The Longhorns are led by 6-0 junior guard Jimmy Lopez, who made the all-district team a year ago. Six-foot junior Fernando Vitela, who made the honorable mention all-district team last season, is at the other guard spot. Michael Soria, a 6-3 sophomore post, provides rebounding strength.

The Harvesters are moving steadily toward their eighth straight district championship under coach Robert Hale. Five players, led by Rayford Young's 23 points, scored 11 points or better in the easy win over Borger. Coy Laury had 18 points, Jason Weatherbee 13, Devin Lemons 12 and Lynn Brown 11. Lemons collared 11 rebounds to lead Pampa in that category.

Pampa and Hereford are deadlocked for the lead at 4-0. Caprock and Randall are tied for second at 2-1 while Dumas and Borger are both 0-3.

Pampa and Hereford meet this Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Harvesters maintained their No. 6 ranking in the weekly Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll.

Steelers end Colts' miracle run

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — This time, the Pittsburgh Steelers found what they needed late in a championship game. So, finally, they are headed back to the Super Bowl, ending the Indianapolis Colts' miracle run — with the ball rolling loose in the Pittsburgh end zone on the final play.

Faced with a fourth-quarter deficit for the second consecutive AFC title game, the Steelers didn't fall three yards short. Still haunted by their failure against San Diego, they got a 37-yard completion from Neil O'Donnell to Ernie Mills to the Colts 1, followed by Bam Morris' short charge into the end zone with 1:34 left for a 20-16 victory Sunday.

But erasing demons never is easy, and the Steelers and their fans had to wait through an excruciating final play before they could celebrate.

Jim Harbaugh, who regained the starting job and became the league's most efficient passer this season, got the Colts to the Pittsburgh 29. With five seconds to go, his pass into a crowd in the end zone reached Aaron Bailey as he tumbled to the ground. The ball was tipped and bounced around, slowly rolling across Bailey's chest and left arm and finally touching the ground incomplete.

The Colts couldn't believe it. "I thought he caught it," Harbaugh said to one of the Steelers.

The Steelers, their long-frustrated fans cheering wildly and waving their trademark yellow towels, stormed the field in celebration.

"Incomplete. Great play. We're going to the Super Bowl," O'Donnell responded.

It was a spectacular ending to a relatively dull, often sloppy game that's not likely to strike fear in the hearts of the NFC champ.

It took moments such as 9-yard pass from O'Donnell to Andre Hastings on fourth down that kept Pittsburgh's winning drive alive.

Those were the plays the Steelers couldn't make in their upset loss to the Chargers a year ago, when a last-gasp pass from O'Donnell was batted down at the goal line. And they marked a return for Pittsburgh, which won all four of its Super Bowl appearances when it dominated the NFL in the 1970s, to the big game for the first time in 16 years.

The Steelers will face the NFC champion, either Dallas or Green Bay, on Jan. 28 at Tempe, Ariz.

Until the late heroics, it looked like the Colts were headed for their first Super Bowl in a quarter century. Harbaugh, their Comeback Kid, connected with Floyd Turner for a 47-yard touchdown with 8:46 to go, a play eerily reminiscent of the long pass that lifted San Diego to victory a year ago. And linebacker Quentin Coryatt dropped an easy interception on Pittsburgh's winning drive.

But just like last year, this one wasn't over, not until the final play, a play that seemed to go on forever.

When it was over, nearly the entire Steelers team gathered on the field, hugging and slapping hands, waving Terrible Towels and talking about the franchise's first Super Bowl trip since the Steelers' dynasty ended with a victory over the Rams in the 1980 game.

"Even though we've only accomplished half of what we want, this is for the fans of Pittsburgh," coach Bill Cowher said as he addressed the crowd. "One more to go, guys."

Pittsburgh's jubilation was matched by Indianapolis' stunned disappointment.

The Colts, who made the playoffs once in their first 11 years in Indianapolis, were more often a laughingstock than a title contender. They were minus their only real star, running back Marshall Faulk, out with a knee injury.

They lived up to their slogan and "Let 'er rip" on one play. Turner got behind safety Darren Perry for the go-ahead touchdown midway in the final period. Harbaugh, who dislocated his right middle finger on the last drive, knelt down as if in prayer, then flashed his index finger in the air as he joined the celebrations.

Throughout the season, when Indianapolis went 9-7, needing a victory over New England in the season finale to grab a wild-card berth, the Colts weren't considered a legitimate championship possibility. Yet, suddenly, after they won at San Diego, then at Kansas City where the Chiefs were unbeaten, they appeared headed to the Super Bowl.

Instead, the Steelers displayed the fortitude they lacked a year ago. This group got serious — no rap videos, no cellular phones in the locker room, no distractions — midway through the season, when Pittsburgh was 3-4. It won eight in a row to take the AFC Central crown.

Faced with their biggest challenge, in the most dire situation Sunday, the Steelers came through.

"Deja vu, all over again," linebacker Greg Lloyd said, noting there was a major difference in 1996. "We waited for one whole year to get this trophy. It means so much."

Rookie sensation Kordell Stewart sparked the Steelers' first TD drive and Norm Johnson kicked two field goals for Pittsburgh, while the Colts got three field goals from Cary Blanchard.

West wins Shrine tilt

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
AP Sports Writer

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Just by showing up to play in the East-West Shrine Classic, Heisman Trophy winner Eddie George scored points with at least one NFL observer.

"I'm thrilled he played," New York Giants general manager George Young said as he watched Heisman runnerup Tommie Frazier rally the West squad to a 34-18 win Saturday over the East squad that included George.

"So many of the other highly rated players, because of their agents' advice or whatever, didn't play in this game. But George did. I think every Shriner will remember Eddie George came to this game. That impressed me as much as anything."

Snowbound in New York for two days, George didn't arrive in California until Wednesday and had limited preparation for the game, a showcase for senior all-stars that also benefits the Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children.

"It was for a great cause. It was for children," said George, who gained 1,826 yards and scored 24 touchdowns for Ohio State this season. "But really, I had only a day and a half to prepare, learn the plays and try to get my timing back. I just wanted to go out there run hard and have fun."

George didn't break loose, carrying 11 times for 32 yards, but it wasn't like he had anything to prove, either.

"It was cool. I didn't expect to come out here and rush for 200 yards," George said. "I really wasn't looking to get anything out of the game as far as for me personally."

Nevertheless, he said he did learn and gain experience by playing in the all-star game and he believes it helped him take another step toward the NFL.

"When I went from the high school ranks to the college ranks, you had to learn, and right now I'm at the next transition," George said. "It's going to be a tough one, but it's something I'm looking forward to, just like any other kid in America who wants to play in the NFL."

Young said George has already shown plenty and has to be considered among the top NFL prospects in the draft. George averaged 6.0 yards per carry and had three 200-yard rushing games this season. He also set an Ohio State record for receptions by a running back with 44.

"He's a player. He's a runner. It wasn't his offensive line that gained all those yards for him," Young said.

Frazier, meanwhile, lifted his NFL stock by showing off his passing arm during the West's three-touchdown rally in the fourth quarter.

UMASS keeps No. 1 ranking intact

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Massachusetts remained the No. 1 team in the college basketball poll for the fourth straight week today, while once again there were multiple changes at the bottom of the Top 25.

The Minutemen (14-0) received 62 of the 64 first-place votes and 1,598 points from the national media panel, with Kentucky (13-1) holding the runner-up spot for the fourth straight week, this time with 1,519 points.

Cincinnati (11-0) and Kansas (12-1) swapped third and fourth with the Bearcats receiving a first-place vote. Connecticut (14-1) received the other No. 1 vote and moved up one spot to fifth.

Wake Forest, which jumped two spots, Villanova, Georgetown, Memphis and North Carolina rounded out the Top Ten. Georgetown, which lost to Pittsburgh during the week, fell three places in the only other change among that group.

Virginia Tech jumped from 15th to lead the Second Ten and was followed by Syracuse, UCLA, Penn State, Utah, Iowa, Purdue, Arizona, Clemson and

White Deer posts cage victories

WHITE DEER — Justin Brown scored 32 points as White Deer rolled past Allison, 84-54, last Friday night.

B. Dukes led Allison in scoring with 26 points.

Chris Mize added 11 points for the Bucks, who are now 4-12 on the season.

White Deer also won the girls' game, 50-46.

Krissy Cone paced White Deer in scoring with 17 points, followed by Amanda Freeman with 10.

Yowell was high scorer for Allison with 29 points.

Fort Elliott tops Adrian

BRISCOE — Fort Elliott picked up their 12th win of the season, slipping by Adrian, 47-44, Friday night.

The Cougars (12-6) were led in scoring by Donnie Barr with 17 points. Collin McCurley and David Helton added 10 points each.

"We got ahead in the second quarter and hung on for the win," said Cougars' head coach Curtis Smith. "We played some good defense and made some timely shots."

Hall had 12 points and Garrison II for Adrian.

Adrian downed Fort Elliott, 55-42, in the girls' game.

Cindy Perrin had 18 points and Jennifer Bromman followed with 15 to lead Adrian in scoring.

Amanda Shields had 10 points and April Purcell 7 to lead Fort Elliott.

World briefs

China to change laws to improve rights protection

BEIJING (AP) — China plans to amend its laws to expand human rights protections, including setting limits on police detentions and giving lawyers greater access to defendants.

The revisions are being discussed by the standing committee of China's national legislature and may be enacted by August, officials of government research institutes told reporters today.

However, the changes described by the officials appeared unlikely to do much for Chinese political prisoners such as Wei Jingsheng, who was sentenced Dec. 13 to 14 years in prison for allegedly seeking to overthrow the government. Convicted prisoners are denied a broader range of rights that are not up for discussion by the committee.

Taiwan art lovers protest museum's U.S. tour

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Several dozen art lovers and students concerned that rare objects bound for a U.S. museum tour might get damaged in transit continued a sit-in today to pressure the government to send replicas instead.

For the second day in a row, about 50 people occupied a park outside the education ministry office in downtown Taipei to protest the inclusion of 27 scrolls of paintings and calligraphy — the core of the 13-month exhibition.

All of the 475 items slated for the tour were sent to Taiwan by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek before his Nationalist troops lost a civil war to Communist forces on the Chinese mainland in 1949.

Last victim of American Airlines crash found

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The remains of a 9-year-old New Jersey boy who had been missing since an American Airlines crash killed 160 people in southwestern Colombia have been recovered.

Rescuers on Sunday found the body of Michael Claros, of Hillsborough, N.J., on the Andes mountain ridge where the Boeing 757 crashed Dec. 20 as it descended toward Cali. Four people and a dog survived.

The dead included Michael's mother and sister.

Rescuers found most of the bodies during the first few days after the crash. In some cases, they found only body parts. Ricardo Zea, a Red Cross paramedic on the scene, provided no details on the condition of Claros' body.

Gun lobby fights 'canned hunts' reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's most powerful gun lobby has a new cause: fighting legislation that would bar sportsmen from killing captive exotic animals for living room trophies.

"The bill," says the National Rifle Association in the current issue of its American Hunter magazine, "is the first federal foothold by animal-rights extremists whose fondest dream is to abolish sport hunting."

Although the legislation wouldn't affect the hunting most sportsmen enjoy — shooting native species of deer, ducks and other animals — it has sparked debate among hunters and their clubs.

Big-game hunters in need of an exotic bear, rare deer or sheep head for their trophy collections often travel hundreds of miles and spend thousands of dollars to bag pent-up prey in "canned hunts." The ranches vary from huge spreads in Texas hill country to a few fenced-in acres in some eastern states.

Some of the animals that end up on ranches have been tamed by hand feeding in petting zoos, such as upstate New York's Catskill Game Farm, and most are accustomed to being around people. Often the hunter approaches the animal in a truck or Jeep, ambles up to the prey and shoots it point-blank with a rifle or bow and arrow.

Legislation pending in both the House and Senate would ban canned hunts at operations of 1,000 acres or less. Larger ranches, where animals have a far better chance of avoiding hunters, would be exempt.

Several states, including New Jersey, California and Wyoming, have already banned canned hunts. Lawmakers in New York, Florida and other states are considering bans.

Rep. Bill McCollum, a Florida Republican and chairman of the House crime subcommittee, says he'll hold hearings on canned hunts by spring.

"I certainly don't have a problem with hunting," said McCollum, an opponent of gun-control legislation. "What I do have a question about is whether we should be bringing in wild animals ... and putting them in a confined area for the purpose of letting people pay a price to bag a trophy. I don't think most Americans think that's the way you go hunting animals."

The NRA, better known for trying to overturn the federal ban on assault-style weapons, and the Safari Club International, an organization of big-game trophy collectors, are vowing a full-blown assault on the bill.

Safari Club President John J. Jackson III, a New Orleans lawyer, calls the proposed legislation "very dangerous."

"We are now having the national government dictating hunting ethics?" he asked incredulously during a telephone interview. "We would have federal agents ... going into the states and making subjective determinations."

Jackson argues that the big money people are willing to spend for the privilege of blasting away at confined animals actually promotes conservation by making exotic species a valuable commodity to breed, raise — and then kill.

Exotics are animals not native to the United States, generally coming from Asia or Africa. Canned-hunt clients pay $800 or so to bag a gazelle and as much as $5,000 to add a Cape buffalo to their trophy collections.

But no matter how fine a specimen the trophy gatherer collects, it won't get into the official record books of the Boone and Crockett Club. The Missoula, Mont.-based group, founded by Theodore Roosevelt and naturalist Aldo Leopold, doesn't count animals shot on hunting ranches.

"It's not a hunt, it's a killing experience," says the Rev. Theodore Vitali, chairman of St. Louis University's philosophy department, a Boone and Crockett member and lifetime hunter.

"From a moral point of view, I believe that hunting of big game animals, trophy hunting, has to entail fair chase," says Vitali. "The hunter's greatest experience is to have hunted well as a predator in conditions that are natural to the animal. That's the thrill of it — engaging the animal on its own turf."

Gregg Gutschow, a spokesman for the North American Hunting Club in Minnetonka, Minn., says, "We encourage our members to only take part in fair chase hunts. We're interested in going on deer, elk and antelope hunts, not going down to a ranch in Texas and hunting fenced animals."

Yet for NRA lobbyist Tanya Metaska, the question of canned hunts is not one of morals and ethics, but of fundamental rights and freedom.

"The language used in this bill is nothing more than a thinly veiled attempt to erode the hunting heritage of our nation's sportsmen and women," she says.
