Reds crush capital resistance

By The Associated Press
Soviet invaders were reported to have crushed resistance and occupied Afghanistan's southern provincial capital of Kandahar and the eastern city of Jalalabad today as America and its allies prepared to seek U.N. Security Council condemnation of the Russian sweep into the Central Asian nation.

President Carter also was reported ready to ask the Senate to delay indefinitely its consideration of the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass accused Carter of making "bellicose and wicked" statements and of distorting the "essence and meaning" of the Soviet military intervention.

Sporadic gunfire was heard in Kabul Tuesday, but the city was reported quiet Wednesday and today.

Associated Press correspondent Steven Hurst, reporting from Kabul today, said the Afghan capital was quiet overnight and that the only signs of the Soviet presence he saw in the city were a few helicopters flying overhead and three Russian tanks grinding through the streets before dawn.

Travelers from Kandahar, 270 miles southwest of the Afghan capital of Kabul and 50 miles from the border with Pakistan's Baluchistan province, told the Pakistani newspaper Jasarat the Soviets occupied Kandahar City Wednesday after two days of clashes with Afghan government forces opposed to the Russians.

They said the Soviets poured into Kandahar City Monday after landing in Soviet military aircraft. They said for the next two days the Russians battled rebellious Afghan government troops, and that when they routed them pro-Soviet Afghan forces hung garlands of flowers around the invaders' necks.

The newspaper also said the Soviets took control of Jalalabad City Sunday. However, diplomats in Kabul said Soviet troops were airlifted Monday to Jalalabad, in eastern Afghanistan about 50 miles from the border and Pakistan's Kyber Pass, to fight Moslem rebels who have been battling the communist Afghan government since the first of three pro-Soviet coups 20 months ago.

The diplomats also said the Soviets used sophisticated attack helicopters and tanks against the Moslem insurgents in rugged Bamian province about 100 miles northwest of the Afghan capital

Wednesday, and that casualties were heavy on both sides.

The diplomats said other Soviet troops were flown into Herat, in western Afghanistan about 60 miles from the Iranian border, the day the Russians launched the Dec. 27 coup that put their latest proxy, Babrak Karmal, in power, and toppled President Hafizullah Amin, who was summarily executed.

Afghan guerrilla leaders quoted by Tehran Radio said the Moslem insurgents were in control of Herat province, and that they attacked the prison in Herat City and freed the inmates Wednesday.

Karmal said in a speech on Afghan television that Amin was a U.S. puppet and CIA agent.

He said "we may have" to seek help from other valiant nations like Vietnam, Angola, Ethiopia, the Palestinians and Cuba also.

Sources in Washington said the United States and its allies will ask for a U.N. Security Council meeting shortly to demand the Soviet Union withdraw its 30,000 to 40,000 troops.

Sources at the United Nations said Britain, Pakistan and others will join with the United States in asking the Security Council to debate the Soviet Union's intervention, possibly over the weekend.

Local man killed

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

CLINTON, OKLA. - A 22-year-old resident of Canadian was found dead on the railroad right of way northeast of Arapahoe, Okla. by a hunter and his dog New Year's Eve.

According to Custer County authorities, the fully clothed body, including a jacket, of Roger Noel Marsh, an employee of Cactus Drilling Company, was found in waist-high grass about 10 to 15 feet south of the railroad tracks located between Arapahoe and Clinton, Okla. The oil rig worker was lying on his back, they commented.

Marsh was last seen, authorities said, Dec. 24 at his father's home in Clinton. He was believed to have been carrying a large amount of money, "several hundred dollars", a spokesperson for the county said.

No money was found on the body and Marsh's wallet was missing. Sheriff Richard Mueller of the Custer County Sheriff's department said, and he believed robbery was the motive for the killing.

Mueller said a local hunter, Earl Hulin of Clinton, discovered Marsh at about 5 p.m. Dec. 31 when his bird dog ran up to the body while he was hunting.

Hulin went to a nearby house belonging to Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper, Earl Warner. The patrolman then radioed the Custer County sheriff's office in Clinton, Mueller said.

After the initial examination by county authorities, he commented, the body was sent to Oklahoma City for autopsy.

The autopsy report would not be ready for several days, he said Wednesday. No report has been sent to the sheriff's office at this time, he commented today.

Sheriff's deputies searched the grassy area near the body's location, but no new evidence was discovered.

Mueller theorizes due to the state of decomposition to the body, Marsh was probably murdered during the early morning hours of Dec. 26.

Blood was discovered on the back of the head in the preliminary examination, the sheriff commented. He added the body had not been battered or beaten.

Early reports stated the body had been mutilated by the killer, but Mueller said this was not true.

After news of the murder was broadcast on an Oklahoma City television station, the sheriff said he received a call from Marsh's relatives saying "He was missing but he hadn't been reported."

They confirmed to the sheriff the last time they had seen Marsh was during Christmas. They also reported Marsh was carrying a "large amount" of money on his person at that time.

No new evidence in the case has been discovered, Mueller said today. "There are no suspects at this time," he added, and the investigation by Custer County authorities continues into the murder.

The body will be returned from Oklahoma City tonight, a spokesperson from the Canadian funeral home handling the funeral said, adding the funeral director would be driving to Oklahoma to pick it up.

Funeral services for Marsh, who reportedly lived in both Clinton, Okla. and Canadian, will be held at 2 p.m. Friday in the Canadian Church of Christ with pastor Elmer Cater officiating. Burial will be in the Canadian Cemetery under the direction of Stickley-Hill Funeral Home.

Marsh was born September 21, 1957.

He is survived by his mother, Faye Rutledge of Canadian, his father, Denver Marsh of Clinton, Okla., two brothers, Church Marsh of Woodward, Okla. and Mack Marsh of Canadian, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dudley of Pipton, Okla. and Mrs. Nelly Marsh of Altus, Okla.

He's sittin' high, the rat

HOUSTON (AP) - Perched on his master's shoulder, Columbus is a white rat leading a dog's life and couldn't be happier.

"He's a great pet and he's wonderful with kids," says Kelly Dillen, who wants to be an animal health technician and admits a long-standing grudge against rats in general.

"We had a behavioral training project (in school) and most of the class used rats except me," she says. "I used a dog. I just couldn't understand why anyone would want to work with a rat."

But when a classmates decided to release Columbus in an apartment complex after the project was over, the soft spot in her heart for animals overruled her own distaste for Columbus and his brethren.

"Columbus knows me and he knows his name," Ms. Dillen says, even though Columbus is probably a mental midget when compared with the neighborhood pooch.

"Yesterday he was on my sister's shoulder and I came in and he ran straight to me. Of course, I feed him, so he also identifies me through that."

However, Columbus is no ordinary rat and bloodlines count - even in varmints. Columbus, says Ms. Dillen, is a Long Evans Hooded Rat, bred especially for laboratory work.

"It does make a difference," she says. "Lab rats are bred to be better-natured, intelligent and to stand pressure. They are also much cleaner. He washes himself like a cat after I pick him up."

Although she is amused by the adverse reaction many people have to her unusual pet, she says much of people's aversion to rats can be blamed on bad press.

"As a breed, they've gotten a lot of bad publicity from television and the movie 'Willard.' Also, I guess women traditionally have always disliked rodents."

"Mostly, they look at him (Columbus) and say 'Yuck.' One woman I know ran clear across the room when she first saw him," she says. "It's the tail that gets them. It is pretty ugly and gets worse as rats grow older."

"But," she says, "I do think people should realize that there are rats and there are rats."

When she finishes her two-year course at Houston Community College, Ms. Dillen says she would like to take her love for animals on the road and join a circus, but says she would only do it for a year "because I know it would be rough."

It may be lonely, too. A close friend's father recently told her it might be difficult to find a steady boyfriend if she insisted on keeping Columbus perched on her shoulder.

"I told him I just didn't care," she says. "I guess it's gotten down to a case of 'love me, love my rat.'"

'Pepper Belly' feels neglected despite title

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Pampa has a resident celebrity, known throughout the world, yet his own town has virtually ignored him.

These are the feelings of Ron Farmer, Guinness world record holder for eating the most jalapenos. He told the Pampa News Wednesday, "I've received calls from places all over the world; radio and TV stations asking me to appear on them."

"I've smeared the name (of Pampa) all over the world," Farmer - wearing a hat with "Pepper Belly" printed on it - commented, "and not one person from Pampa has called me." He said he had not been contacted by the Chamber of Commerce or anyone representing the city of Pampa despite the fact he has helped put the city "on the map" on an international basis.

Farmer broke the Guinness world record for eating the most jalapenos on Nov. 18 at a local restaurant. He ate 100 of the fiery peppers in 14 minutes and 19 seconds, to the cheers of 75 spectators and members of the news media. The previous record - held by a Minnesota man - was 94, eaten in one hour and 51 minutes.

As soon as the story hit the wire service, he was deluged with calls and offers from all over the world, Farmer said.

His most recent offers are to appear on the Johnny Carson show and possibly the Tomorrow Show with Tom Snider. The footage from the actual record breaking will be seen soon on Real People, he believes.

Bill Turner of the British Broadcasting Service in London recently called him, Farmer said, and asked if he would be interested in an international jalapeno eating contest. Turner offered to fly him to London for the event and pay his expenses.

Articles on Farmer's feat have appeared in major newspapers in Boston, Mass.; London, Eng. and Richmond, Va. His record was broadcast over the Texas State Network and other large radio networks.

Magazines like Grit, US and People have mentioned Farmer and the town in which he broke the world's record.

The Tomlinson Lone Star Book of Texas Records told Farmer if he would send a color photograph of the event, it would be printed on the cover of their next edition.

Future plans for Farmer, besides appearing on the television programs, include the breaking of a Texas record: Eating the most jalapenos in 60 seconds.

The most recent record is shared by Juan Olivares of Corpus Christi and Robert Bryant of La Porte. They each ate 30 peppers in one minute.

All we can say is, "Go get 'em, Pepper Belly!"

Sun Oil urges defeat of tax exemption bill

DALLAS (AP) - What may turn out to be a major rift between major oil companies and small independents has been triggered by a letter from executives of Sun Oil Co. to its shareholders and royalty owners.

Theodore A. Burtis, president of Sun Oil, asked the shareholders to write their congressmen and urge defeat of legislation that would exempt the independents from the proposed windfall profits tax.

The letter, sent from Sun Oil's Texas headquarters in Dallas, said if small independent oil producers are exempted from the tax, the larger producers would have to take up the slack, at the expense of the shareholders and royalty owners of the larger producers.

Consequently, some irate independent oil producers have stopped their sales to Sun Oil, the nation's 10th largest oil company.

"It just doesn't make sense to sell to someone who is out to destroy you," said Lew Ward, president of the 1,300-member Oklahoma Independent Petroleum Association.

Ward, an independent oil producer from Enid, Okla., said, "It sure could be the start of a major split between the independents and the majors."

The letter went to Sun Oil's 140,000 shareholders, employees and retirees. Another letter, written Dec. 10 by W.F. Oxford of Sun's Dallas-based production subsidiary, went to the company's 60,000 royalty owners expressing similar sentiments.

The focus of the controversy is an amendment to the windfall tax bill, proposed by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, that would exempt a small oil producer's first 1,000 barrels of oil a day from the tax.

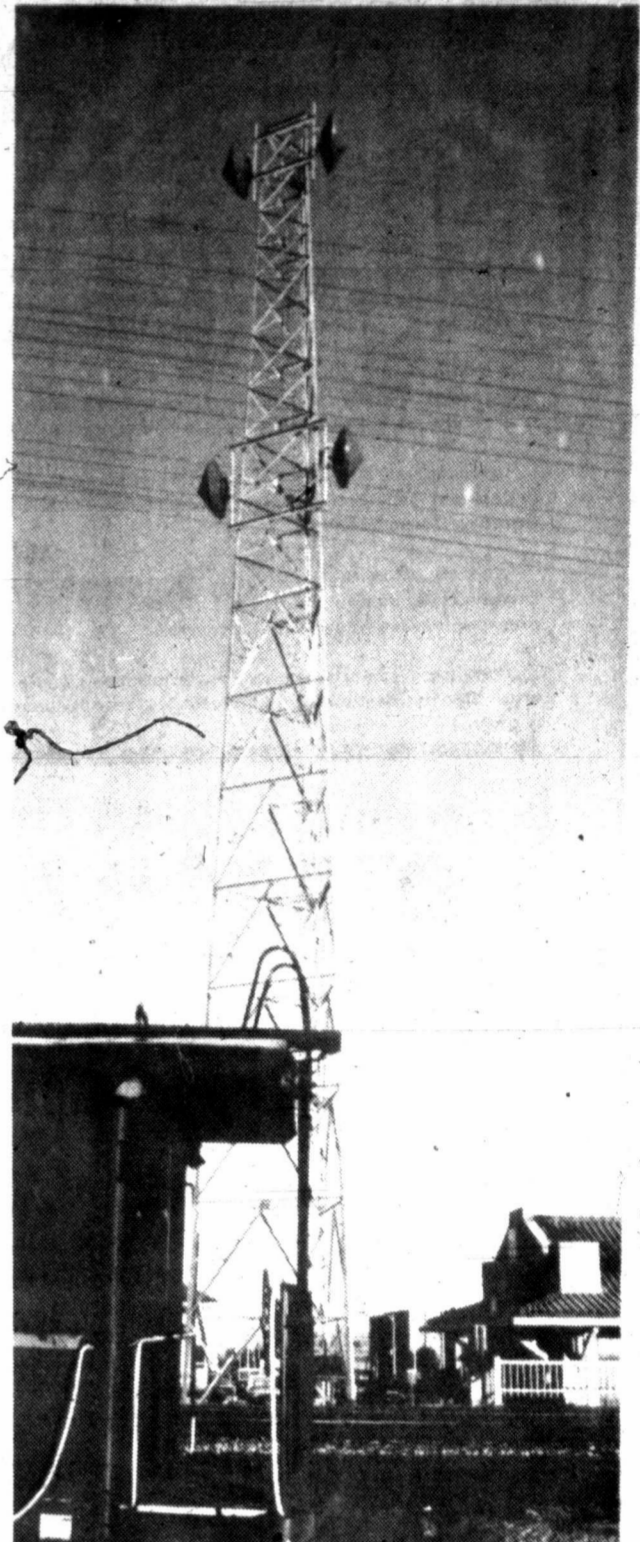

Sun buys so little of its oil from independent producers that a full-scale boycott would not cripple its operation, but company officials were trying this week to defuse the brewing controversy.

Sun spokesman Granville Dutton said, "We're not against an independent exemption. We just want to see it extended to all producers."

John Miller, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, also stepped in trying to calm the situation.

"Our industry has enough political enemies without indulging in intra-industry recriminations over political actions which were beyond our collective influence or control," he said in a Dec. 21 letter.

Independent oilmen say the majors don't care as much about the windfall profits tax because they make money from overseas operations and from refining and marketing as well as from production. The tax is only on domestic production.

THIS NEW COMMUNICATION TOWER has a completion target date in April. The tower's frame has been erected, but will not be functional until extra work has been done. The tower stands less than 200 feet tall and is expected to have a frequency range capable of reaching Los Angeles and Chicago, the two home bases. The tower will replace the telephone system that reportedly breaks down during the winter months from frost and snow. Other data, besides telephone messages, is to be exchanged.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Politicians come up with another scheme

The politicians in Washington seem to have more solutions than there are problems. The latest solution threatens massive increases in taxes — nothing new — and will likely push up the already high cost of medical care.

It is not easy to find an issue emotional enough to blind the public to tax and medical cost increases, but this time the politicians think they've done it. It's going to be done in the name of taking care of the medical needs of children.

Because of its highly marketable purpose — what ogre opposes children's health? — HR 4962 is gliding toward congressional adoption and the creation of a Child Health Assurance Program (CHAP). The multi-billion dollar measure federalizes Medicaid eligibility standards for children and pregnant women and vastly expands the current program's coverage.

The bill, if passed, would further centralize power in Washington — eligibility standards are now set by the states — and would cost the taxpayers a minimum of $5.5 billion within 5 years.

CHAP is what is called an entitlement program. It creates eligibility requirements and all of those who can maneuver themselves into those parameters can collect. Similar legislation has cost tens of billions more than predicted, which is the only thing one can accurately predict about any federal legislation. When the cost begins to skyrocket, big spenders label it "uncontrollable," suggesting once people are receiving the benefits it is impossible humanely to cut them off.

This bill includes nothing to prevent the cost escalation which has plagued similar entitlement legislation. On the contrary, the measure encourages the states to spend more by giving bonuses to those states that heavily use the program. It is, more importantly, an open-ended program with an astronomical cost potential.

CHAP is likely to affect the cost of everybody's medical care. When taxpayers pick up the tab, hospitals and patients have little incentive to keep cost down. Just as in Medicaid, tests and services that would otherwise be considered nonessentials are considered routine. Children, for example, who might spend the day in bed because of a cold, end up going to see the doctor. All this bids up the price the rest of us pay for those services and the doctor's time.

This bill may be seen as another step toward federal assumption of responsibility for all children, not just the ones from poor families covered by HR 4962. This bill is a threat to the institution of the family.

The Child Health Assurance Act is the kind of legislation that created the bureaucratic monster now sitting in bloated condition on the banks of the Potomac. In the long run the best thing that can be done for children is to build a healthy American economy and keep government's nose out of areas best left to the family.

Threat of porn

D.R. Segal

Somebody — I think it was Clarence Darrow — said every time he heard someone mention birth control he remembered he was the eighth in a family of nine. I have a similarly subjective view of pornography.

Years ago I hired on as a writer for a Hollywood studio and fell into the habit of taking lunch (noon until 3) with a pride of literary lions in the same line of work. The reason we took such long lunch hours was that nobody missed us and, in fact, when we encountered a production executive in the halls he would inquire crossly of his gopher, "Who in hell is that?" It is great to be famous in Hollywood.

Among my associates at the round table was a fellow who had written a bestseller and presently was being paid an enormous sum by the studio to write the movie script, a job which was being done by someone else whom he had never met. Out of boredom and ennui, we hit upon a dandy scheme. We would write a pornographic novel which he would prevail upon his publisher to print under the nom de plum "Helen Harlotte." He said his publisher would handle anything if there was a buck in it.

It was contagious. They could hardly wait for us to show up at noon to discuss the newest touches they'd dreamed up. They'd get into arguments among themselves as to whether it was physically possible to accomplish the feats of sexual prowess they'd suggested. The more it went on the funnier it got — and the less pornographic. It turned out not to be pornographic at all. It was bedroom slapstick with strong overtones of Olympic quality gymnastics.

We wrote about 150 pages of this stuff and everybody laughed so hard we figured we had a very funny book in the making. But in those days the atmosphere was not right for merchandising sexual hilarity, so we gave it up. We also got kind of sore because we did not intend to write a funny book. It just turned out that way because we were not such hot writers of that genre, although Lord knows our hearts were in it.

It taught me that pornography is a very small island wash in a sea of high comedy. I guess that's why I never figured it to be a serious threat to the Republic.

By William Steif

On July 11, 1977, Jim Sykes, (not his real name) bought a six-year certificate of deposit at what looked like a fantastic interest rate, 7.75 percent.

Jim, a 42-year-old salesman, had worked hard to save money. So had his wife, a clerk in a Washington, D.C., store.

They had saved $10,000, feared investing in the stock market, didn't want to buy more property and sought a better interest rate than the 5 percent passbook savings account then paid.

So they bought a 7.75 percent CD at a local savings and loan association.

They, of course, had no way of knowing that the U.S. economy's inflation rate would reach double-digit figures. Like other Americans who bought CDs in the mid-1970s, the Sykes family was locked into an interest rate too low to prevent erosion of their money's value.

Until last summer, when the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates S & Ls, made it possible for them to get a better deal.

You & your nest egg

Before last summer, if you wanted to cash in your CD prior to its maturity date, you would lose three months of interest completely, and all the rest of your interest would revert to the regular passbook savings rate.

Last summer the FHLBB changed the rules. Result: Sykes could cash in his CD by taking a penalty of only six months' interest if his S & L agreed.

That's what he did in mid-December, 1979. He reinvested the sum he'd saved and within 21 months will make up all the loss and get a much higher interest rate thereafter.

By cashing in his six-year CD, Sykes lost $393.96.

He reinvested his nest egg in a four-year "money market" CD which pays 9.85 percent annually. In the next six months Sykes' nest-egg will earn $504.83, compared to less than $400 it would have earned at 7.75 percent. If Sykes had reinvested in a six-month treasury "bill," paying an annual interest rate of 11.767 percent, he could have earned even more in six months — $594.87. But he wouldn't have been protected on the "down side" after six months, so he preferred the 9.85 percent guaranteed over four years.

You may not think the Sykes family is typical. After all, how many Americans have $10,000 squirreled away in CDs?

"Millions," says an FHLBB economist. As of Oct. 31, he says, the total amount in S & L savings and time-certificates amounted to $454.6 billion. The total breaks down this way:

—$119 billion in traditional passbook savings accounts

—$143.6 billion in "jumbo" CDs, amounts of $100,000 or more whose interest rates are negotiated with the S & Ls.

—$311 billion in all other types of CDs; $114 billion of this in six-month "money market" CDs, the other $197 billion in longer-term CDs.

"The new penalty rules favor people who've held onto their CDs for a while," says an FHLBB official. But he cautions that anyone holding a CD, and considering the switch that Jim Sykes made, must find out:

—What penalty his S & L is going to impose for cashing in his CD before its maturity date.

—What categories of CDs his S & L applies the new penalty rules to.

For instance, some S & Ls have applied the new, lesser penalty across-the-board, while others apply it only to four, six or eight-year CDs. It's up to you to find out exactly what your S & L's rules are, and to ask your S & L to figure out whether or not it's to your advantage to cash in your CD prematurely and reinvest the proceeds at a higher interest rate.

If you want help from the FHLBB directly, write or phone Kathleen E. Topelius, care of Federal Home Loan Bank Board, 1700 G. St., NW, Washington, D.C., 20552. Her phone number is 202-377-6444.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 3, 1959, Alaska became the 49th state.

On this date:

In 1777, General George Washington's army routed British regulars in the Battle of Princeton, N.J.

In 1961, the United States severed relations with Cuba.

In 1967, Jack Ruby, the convicted killer of Lee Harvey Oswald, died of cancer.

In 1974, Kuwait reached agreement with Gulf Oil and British Petroleum for a 60 percent takeover of their operations in the Persian Gulf state.

In 1977, the biggest loan in the 30-year history of the International Monetary Fund — almost $4 billion — was made to Britain.

Ten years ago, a Brazilian plane hijacked by Brazilian revolutionaries arrived in Cuba after stops in Peru and Panama.

Five years ago, the recession deepened as the government reported the highest American jobless rate since 1962.

One year ago, Iran's new Prime Minister, Shapour Bakhtiar, promised a gradual dismantling of martial law, and hinted that the shah would soon leave Iran.

Something old, something new

by paul harvey

Youngsters at 15 know everything. Thereafter they become absolutely certain about less and less.

Professional newsmen are likely to undergo a similar metamorphosis: a kind of "reverse enlightenment."

Paul Harvey was much more dogmatic in his fledgling years.

In recent years I have turned more and more to you—for the answers which elude me.

Perhaps you can help me now to understand a dichotomy which refuses to explain itself.

I see old cars abandoned on side streets and side roads because they are not worth salvaging.

I see truckloads of old cars headed for the squashing machine to be recycled for whatever their melted metal is worth.

Am I not entitled to conclude that any rusty old outdated car is not worth repairing?

But THEN I learn that thousands of Americans are tediously renovating old cars until they are mint condition again—and that the old cars are selling now for more than they sold for new.

How come?

Re-newing the 1938 Nash Lafayette coupe in which Angel and I had our first date, in which we honeymooned and in which our son rode before he was born—renovating that old car has acquainted me with the fact that there is a national organization of old Nash collectors. Indeed, there are regional organizations—so regional that there is one for Northern California and another for Southern California. Each has its own publication, each conducts its own annual convention and members swap information on the availability of parts.

And there is as much or more interest in many other makes and models. Many individuals are interested in Corvettes—in Cords of the Forties and Fords of the Twenties.

These are not the so-called "classic" cars, many of which auction for tens of thousands of dollars. Most any old convertible is worth fixing up. These collectors of old cars scrounge for authentic parts, paying premium prices even for original rubber wiring (as opposed to the new plastic kind).

Tens of thousands of renovators of old cars prize old tail lights, old horn buttons, old ammeters, old-style rivets which can be de-rusted and reused.

Therefore, I have trouble understanding why these other truckloads of cars from the Fifties are selling for scrap or decaying in ditches.

A doctor acquaintance of mine is having professionals strip an ancient pickup truck to its chassis, clean grimy parts shiny, sand off layers of paint down to bare metal, patch rust holes to perfection, reassemble, rewire and reupholster that old pickup at a cost of $4,000. Brand-new it cost less than half that.

And it's not a classic; you'll see dozens of that model Ford pickup in the junkyard.

So—as I say—I don't know.

A test for rights of the unborn

By Butler D. Shaffer

I have just returned from a three-day conference, at which a paper was presented on the question of whether future generations have "rights." The concern of the speaker, as he presented it, was for the future effects of present activities. For example, if we were to "waste" resources (whatever that means), or create harmful conditions (e.g. dumping nuclear wastes) that might cause death or injury to people not yet born, we might be violating their "rights."

While, on first impression, this proposition represents a commendable sensitivity to the lives of others (albeit future others), it raises a very difficult question: in what way can it be said that our actions, today, can be violative of the "rights" of someone who does not exist? And, if those who are not yet born have "rights," what about those who are already dead?

The speaker's approach to the general issue had to do with the duty of the parent to provide for the wellbeing of his children, and the "rights" of the children to have the parents live up to these expectations. "But," I asked, "if your reasoning is sound, shouldn't children be obliged to live according to the expectations of their parents? After all, Edmund Burke declared that society is a contract among the living, the dead, and those yet to be born. Perhaps the actions of our children and grand-children will violate our 'rights' long after we have departed this life."

The speaker was not impressed by what I am sure he must have regarded as my cynicism. And so, I pressed on. Since the speaker had, in his paper, quoted favorably from another article of a woman to have an abortion, I could not resist asking the obvious question: "Could you please explain how future generations can have 'rights,' but unborn fetuses do not?" He was noticeably shaken by the question, and asked me to clarify what I meant. "It seems to me," I continued, "that defending the 'rights' of persons yet unborn, but denying the 'rights' of fetuses is a gross inconsistency. It seems to me that what you are saying is that future generations have 'rights' UNTIL they come into existence. Once they do come into existence, they are no longer members of the 'future generations' class and, hence, lose their 'rights.' In other words, you only have

'rights' for as long as you do not need them."

"Well," he stammered, "I only meant to point out the problems associated with things like nuclear wastes. If we dump nuclear wastes and future generations end up dying because of it, I think that's wrong."

"You may be correct," I replied, "but how does killing off future generations with nuclear wastes differ from killing them-off with a surgeon's scalpel?" He had no answer.

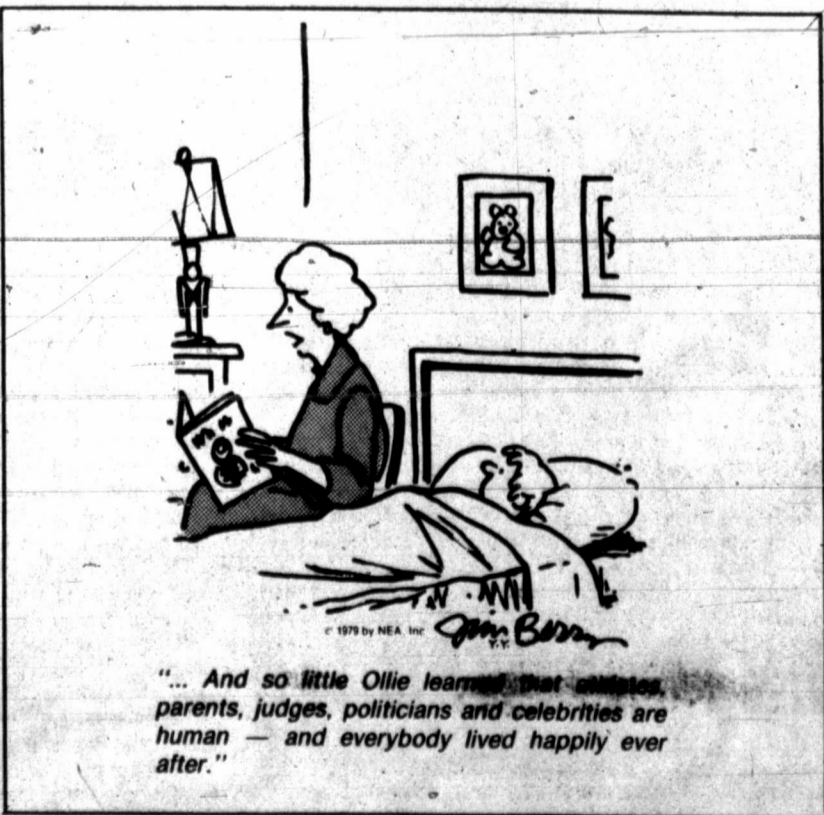

Far too many intellectuals tend to confuse the products of their conscious minds with "reality," and to assume that whatever their minds can conceive and believe can be implemented without regard to the consequences. The abortion issue, for example, is a classic exercise in intellectualization. Philosophers, lawyers, physicians, judges and others, are immersed in the ludicrous game of trying to DEFINE when one becomes a "person." Some argue for a "moment of conception" standard, while others insist upon the actual birth as the dividing line. The "moderates" have assumed that "person" status is conferred at the point in fetal development when the baby could survive outside the womb.

But, all of this is a purely nonsensical approach. It assumes that such questions as "What is life?" are answered by reference to philosophical or moral standards or to legal definitions. As long as we believe such fundamental issues are to be resolved through ideas, or by logic, or the reasoning process, we shall forever be plagued by such absurdities as the person who can, at one and the same time, devote his or her energies to saving baby seals or protecting sea turtle eggs, while advocating the "right" of pregnant women to kill their OWN babies.

When people can become sensitive to the reality — rather than just the idea — of life, then perhaps they will come to an understanding of what conditions are conducive to life. When they reach that level of understanding, they will discover they no longer experience conflict over such questions as rights of the living and the rights of the unborn. They will discover the manner of living that is appropriate to ALL life.

Austin busing plan draws fire from Mexican-NAACP factions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An attorney who says he represents some 5,000 Austinites predicts the busing plan being considered by a federal judge will chase whites from the local school district to the suburbs.

"If there is anything that is reasonably foreseeable it is the virtual certainty that these plans will convert the AISD into a predominantly black and Mexican-American school district in a relatively short time," said William Bednar Jr.

U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts Wednesday received a proposed ruling hammered out by AISD officials and minorities in a 10-year-old desegregation suit. A spokesman for Roberts said the judge planned to rule today on the proposed consent decree.

The case was filed by the U.S. Department of Justice, which was joined by the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund and the NAACP.

The plan includes two schemes for doing away with one-race schools. Plaintiffs said they would be satisfied with either plan.

Both plans include reassignment of some 15,000 students — 13,500 of whom would be bused. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered immediate implementation of a plan, but the plaintiffs agreed to postpone its start until the fall semester.

Superintendent Jack Davidson said it would be "physically impossible" to begin busing now.

Bednar, former lawyer for the Texas Education Agency, presented a petition signed by 5,477 persons, most of whom live in affluent, predominantly white Northwest Hills.

"The people who submitted these statements are not racists," he said. "If there is to be busing, let it be for shorter times and distances, even at the expense of involving more students."

Mrs. Don Gentry, mother of three AISD students, vowed to take her children out of school if they face busing.

"My husband won't allow that. I guess I'll have to go down and see what I have to do to teach them myself," she said.

Mrs. Gentry told Roberts she "resents" the court using her children to desegregate an elementary school. She said her family lives in an integrated neighborhood and the school is integrated (69 percent Anglo).

"Why should this school be torn up? We live together. We like each other and our children go to school together," she said.

Texaco boosts prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. announced rapidly rising crude oil costs had pushed its wholesale home heating oil prices up 6 cents a gallon, as Mexico declared it was raising the price of its crude 30 percent.

Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, raised its price to an average of 73 cents a gallon effective Jan. 1 and announced the move Wednesday.

The increase was the first since last fall, when Texaco's average wholesale price in its 43-state marketing area was 67 cents a gallon. Texaco spokeswoman Marilyn Povotador said the wholesale price increase probably would be passed on to consumers.

Vincent Sgro, editor of the industry newspaper

Oil Buyers Guide, said retailers typically mark up wholesale home heating oil prices by 14 to 15 cents a gallon. But with this increase, Texaco is "just catching up to everyone else" in the industry, he said.

"Several of the leading oil-exporting countries have raised crude oil prices retroactive to Nov. 1," Texaco said, adding, "other increases have been made by various OPEC members either before, during or after" the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' recent meeting in Caracas, Venezuela.

The increases boosted the average price of a 42-gallon barrel of OPEC oil from $22 to $26 and have resulted in recent gasoline price increases by several companies of 1 cent to 6 cents a gallon.

Tax relief bill cuts school money

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The 1978 Tax Relief Amendment as implemented by the Legislature saved Texans $114.3 million in 1979 school taxes, says the State Property Tax Board.

Kenneth Graeber, the agency's executive director, certified the saving to the state education commissioner.

Under a 1979 law, the state will reimburse school districts for part of their revenue losses. The Property Tax Board certifies the revenue loss, and the education commissioner calculates the amount a district will receive. No district will receive less than 45 percent of its revenue loss.

Graeber said mandatory homestead exemptions cut property tax collections by $107.6 million. Another $6.7 million was saved in school districts that moved voluntarily to assessment of rural land on its productivity.

Galveston nixes dump

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — City Council members voted Wednesday to reject any effort by the Department of Energy to make the city a site for the dumping of high-level radioactive wastes.

The move came after council member Jane Coggeshall said DOE is considering Galveston, along with several other cities, as a possible site for nuclear waste disposal.

"I would like to see the council oppose it (the site) so we can get Galveston eliminated now," she said. "Then we won't have to go through it later."

Two local men sentenced to state pen

Two men were sentenced to the state penitentiary and one man was placed on adult probation during a hearing Wednesday in 223rd District Court.

James Gerald Hunt, 20, formerly of 424 Pitts, was sentenced to ten years in the state penitentiary by District Judge Don Cain after his probation for a forged conviction two years ago was revoked.

Hunt had been convicted March 23, 1978 of forgery and was placed on ten years' probation. District Attorney Harold Comer filed a motion Oct. 29, 1979 to revoke Hunt's probation for subsequent offenses that occurred while he was on probation.

In Wednesday's hearing, Comer showed that on July 30, 1979, Hunt was convicted in Potter County of possession of marijuana. Comer also showed that on Oct. 17 Hunt delivered 2.8 ounces of marijuana to an undercover agent in Gray County for $150.

Louie Hooper, 63 of 116 1/2 W. Foster, was sentenced to two years in the state penitentiary by Judge Cain for offenses committed while he was on probation.

Hooper was convicted of a felony driving while intoxicated offense Nov. 1, 1979 and placed on probation. Three days later, on Nov. 4, he was arrested for public intoxication and on Nov. 5 was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

Comer had filed a motion to revoke Hooper's probation Dec. 6.

Cleatus A. Frailey, 28 of Sacramento, Calif., was assessed five years' adult probation and received a $350 fine after being convicted of theft by checks.

He reportedly wrote four checks, totaling $203.09, to Gibson's

Center in August and September, 1978. Of that amount, $75 was for cash and the rest was for merchandise. The complaint by Gibson's was not submitted to the DA's office until June, 1979.

He was extradited from St. Joseph, Missouri where he had been stopped on a minor traffic infraction Oct. 22. A police check indicated he was wanted in Gray County on the hot check charge. Comer said Frailey refused to waive extradition and Gray County had to undertake extradition procedures. He was returned to the county last week, Comer added.

Frailey pled guilty to the charges. A condition of his probation included that he make restitution to Gibson's for the bad checks and that he pay Gray County for the plane fare to return him from Missouri.

TEXAS

Showers and thundershowers were forecast for East Texas today, but most of the state was to have clearing skies and cooler temperatures.

A Pacific cool front moved southeastward along a line from Texarkana to Laredo during the early morning hours.

Highs were to range from the 40s in North Texas to the upper 60s in extreme South Texas.

Showers were reported in East Texas ahead of the front during the pre-dawn hours.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 30s in Northwest Texas to the 60s along the gulf coast. Extremes varied from 30 at Dalhart to 65 at Brownsville.

NATIONAL

A heavy snow warning was posted early today for extreme southwestern Missouri, where up to 3 inches of new snow accumulated, and snowfall and freezing drizzle also prompted travelers advisories for parts of Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Dense fog also made driving dangerous in the California Central Valley and San Francisco Bay area, and new accumulations of snow and freezing rain coated northwestern Ohio roads.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 16 below zero at Warroad, Minn., to 67 at Brownsville, Texas.

Some other reports: Eastern United States — Atlanta 39 cloudy, Boston 27 clear, Cincinnati 29 cloudy, Cleveland 29 snow, Detroit 26 snow, Miami 52 clear, New York 34 clear, Philadelphia 36 cloudy, Pittsburgh 28 snow, Washington 36 partly cloudy.

'Deal' denied by Clayton

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton laughed off a story Wednesday that he and Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, had cut a deal to design a congressional district for former Speaker Gus Mutscher.

Austin American-Statesman columnist Larry Besaw quoted unnamed sources Tuesday as saying Clayton and Moore were willing to work for a district for Mutscher if Mutscher would support Moore for re-election this year.

Moore, chairman of the Senate State Affairs Committee, has an opponent in the Democratic primary, Bryan lawyer Kent Caperton.

"What was I supposed to get out of the deal?" Clayton laughed. He said the first he heard of the supposed arrangement was "yesterday when I read the paper."

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE By Louise Pierce

A friend who has been a marriage counselor for many years tells me that the reason she hears most often for pending divorce among older couples is the wearied worry, "We've grown apart."

It comes, she says, not only from couples whose jobs or life styles have kept them apart but also from mates who have shared bed and board every day in the last 40 to 50 years. That doesn't sound reasonable or even possible, does it? But apparently it is both.

If you no longer feel any rapport with your mate, it may be because you do not share any activities or interests any more. You can change that by deciding to take up gardening or dancing or church work together, thus learning to walk the same path hand-in-hand once more.

But you can have diverse careers and still suffer no permanent apartness or even desire for separation.

A neighbor once told me, "I'm, plumb tone-deaf. But I'm sure proud when Mama plays the organ for church every Sunday." Later she said, "My thumbs will never be green. But I brag more about Papa's flower and vegetable gardens than he does."

Their statements said more than words to me. They said joy in each other's accomplishments. They told me that the difference in their skills had not come between them and never would. I'd hate to try making a living in Otis' field of selling. And I think he'd shy away from eight hours a day at the typewriter. But we are so proud of each other's work that our friends say we have to be kidding, which we definitely are not.

Whenever a couple realizes that growing apart threatens their happiness, they need, in my opinion, to do two important things.

First, they should consciously seek something to admire, to praise, to discuss, in each other's fields. Next, each should put forth a genuine effort to make his consuming interest so enjoyable and so exciting that he can't wait to share the details with the one person who, above all others, will surely echo his enthusiasm if it is rightly conveyed. Nobody can resist joining a mate's love of his work if excitement and desire to communicate are present.

DEAR LOUISE: B.R. and I haven't been on the same wave length in years. We used to think alike and do things together but now we never do.

I cook at the Senior Center and stay all day because my friends are there. B.R. takes out after breakfast for an old pal's basement to play cards and sing silly barbershop quartet songs. I heard them once and they're awful. But he thinks they're terrific.

I don't want a divorce and neither does he. But we bore each other to death any more. Can we avoid separation? Mrs. B.R.

DEAR M.B.R.: You certainly can — and easily, I believe. The Senior Center could be the ideal spot for the rejoining of your hands and hearts.

Get him to come to the Center for a late lunch that you can eat with him. Cook him the kind of meal you gave him as a bride. The foods you know he enjoys, dishes that will keep him coming back to eat there with you again.

Then get up programs for the retirees and have B.R.'s group join the performers. What does it matter if they sing off-key sometimes? They'll be loved anyway. And they might practice enough to improve. Whether they do or not, brag on them heartily and sincerely.

If he gets interested in your cooking at the Center, and if you show pleasure in his singing — which you can both do by putting out just a little effort — you'll be able to get back on the same wave length. Then stay on it.

Always remember that anything that has grown apart can also grow back together. That means longtime marriage most of all.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 19065.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

Parents don't like daughter's affair

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, our 19-year-old daughter (I'll call her Ellen) went to work in a large office. Six months later, a woman phoned, saying Ellen and her husband (I'll call him Don) were having an affair!

Don is Ellen's boss. He is 36 and has 3 children. My husband and I were stunned.

We confronted Ellen with this. She admitted that she and Don had been seeing each other, but that he didn't love his wife, so she didn't feel responsible for breaking up his marriage.

Don moved out of his house and into an apartment. Ellen, who had been living at home, rented an apartment near his. We found out that they are living together, and Ellen only keeps her apartment for appearances sake. Don's wife told us that although her husband has had other affairs, she still loves him but has no alternative, so she's filing for divorce.

We were heartsick about what our daughter is doing. She isn't aware that we know she is living with Don. She also doesn't know that we found out she has had a pregnancy and abortion since this affair began.

She comes home occasionally, and I know she loves us. I want to tell her to stay away, but a counselor advised us not to shut her out — that it would only drive her closer to this man. I think if we tell her we don't want to see her while she's involved with Don, she might realize that she needs her family, and that this man is just using her.

Should we tell her we know about the pregnancy, her living arrangement, etc., and not to come home until the affair is over? Or should we play dumb and be cordial to her?

We love her very much but are torn about what to do.

HEARTSICK IN TEXAS

DEAR HEARTSICK: Your counselor is right. If you shut your daughter out, you'll drive her closer to Don. All parents want desperately to protect their children, but some grown children must make their own mistakes and learn the hard way. (P.S. You'd gain nothing by letting Ellen know what you dug up about her private life.)

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in my encyclopedia that wheat germ contains a male hormone. Since some people take wheat germ as a dietary supplement, is it possible that this hormone will further stimulate primary and secondary male sexual characteristics in these people? In other words, would it result in a deeper voice and an increase in body hair? If wheat germ does not have this effect, are there some foods besides this that do?

DEAR READER — I think it might be stretching it a little bit to say that wheat germ contains a male hormone. It's true that the vitamin E which is abundant in wheat germ is essential to fertility in animals. That's how it was discovered: Rats that were on a vitamin E deficient diet were unable to produce offspring. Similar effects have not been noted in primates which includes human beings.

Animals and man have different metabolic systems.

Just as man cannot manufacture vitamin C, even though most animals can, it appears that many animals need vitamin E whereas man does not need large amounts. Possibly this is because his metabolic system is able to use other substances in place of the vitamin E.

San Antonio officials attempt to promote city

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A new San Antonio alliance of public, private and government groups, armed with an advertising budget of $860,000, has launched this sedate city's most extensive nationwide push to attract new industry.

The "United San Antonio" campaign was unveiled Wednesday and got under way with a full-page advertisement in that day's editions of the Wall Street Journal.

It was the first of 20 planned ads extolling San Antonio to the national business community, said USA co-chairman Robert McDermott.

McDermott said the search for new businesses is stressing San Antonio's status as a major Sun Belt city with a good labor force, good location and climate and a fine quality of life.

The campaign marks the first time city leaders have been able to unite all of the city's factions, some of which have scared off potential new industries in the past with their political bickering, USA officials said.

"The key ingredient which must be added to that mixture is a broad front of community support to let industry around the nation know that this city, which like all cities has its internal squabbles, nevertheless is united in the effort to bring new industry and new jobs to San Antonio," said McDermott.

The new USA push includes Mexican-American groups and the powerful Roman Catholic Church. The campaign officials are attempting to head off internal squabbles by including all of the city's factions.

Turmoil between the political pressure group Communities Organized for Public Service and McDermott's Economic Development Federation in 1977 frightened away a potential major employer and nearly chased away another, USA officials noted.

McDermott noted that San Antonio, the nation's 10th largest city with more than 800,000 residents, remained "largely undiscovered" as Dallas, Houston, Atlanta, San Diego and Phoenix boomed during the 1970s.

Internists gain favor in report

"The implications of these differences for the cost and quality of primary care need further study," the researchers concluded.

The study, written by Dr. Jay Noren of the University of Wisconsin Medical School, was published in this week's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Internists concentrate on diagnosing illness. However, both internists and general practitioners give routine checkups and treat such common complaints as colds, stomach aches and sore backs.

Overall, the researchers found that internists spend 18 minutes with each patient, while general practitioners give patients 13 minutes. However, there were greater differences among specific kinds of treatment.

For instance, when people went to their doctors requesting general medical examinations, internists spent 37 minutes going over the patients, while general practitioners spent 20 minutes. The internists also spent considerably longer on patients worried about fatigue, shortness of breath and high blood pressure.

The researchers said the differences between the two groups could not be attributed to the internists seeing more new patients or treating more new problems.

General practitioners far outnumber internists in the United States. In 1975, the year the statistics were gathered, Americans paid 235 million visits to general practitioners and 62 million to internists.

The study found that internists ordered laboratory tests for 73 percent of the people who made office visits, compared with 34 percent by general practitioners. The internists also required three times as many X-rays.

The researchers commented that this tendency "must be questioned from a cost-containment standpoint."

BOSTON (AP) — Internists and general practitioners both treat people's routine aches and pains, but the internists devote 40 percent more time to looking at each patient, a new study says.

The study, based on the medical habits of nearly 1,000 physicians across the country, stops short of taking sides on the question of which group provides better care.

While internists, who are specialists in internal medicine, spend more time with each patient, they also are more expensive, because they order far more tests and X-rays, the report said.

Booze, sad songs boost bar sales

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The down-home twang of Willie Nelson, Kenny Rogers and Waylon Jennings — singing of lost loves, lost lives and too much booze — may cause bar patrons to drink more.

Too much more, says Dr. James Schaefer, head of the drug and alcohol abuse program at the University of Minnesota. Schaefer studied saloons in western Montana in 1977 and 1978 while on the staff of the University of Montana in Missoula. But he says bar atmosphere everywhere affects drinking habits, and some atmospheres are more risky for those who might drink too much.

Country music, dim lights, macho decorations, a small dance floor, an unequal distribution of the sexes and a tolerance for drunken, disorderly behavior encourage bar patrons to overconsume, Schaefer says.

Saloons that don't encourage overdrinking are generally better lit, have other forms of entertainment, have large dance floors that will accommodate more dancers, have a balanced number of men and women and will not put up with rowdy behavior, Schaefer says.

Music with a fast beat and lyrics that are happy is generally safer than slow songs about people who feel they don't have control over their own lives, he adds.

A bar's decorations also affect drinking patterns, Schaefer says.

"The macho bars with action pictures of calf-roping and champion cowboys seem to encourage men to act like hard-drinking cowboys," and create a higher risk for problem drinking than a bar with a richer, modern decor, Schaefer says.

The study does not go into why certain atmospheres cause people to drink too much. "That's something we need to look into in further studies," he says.

Schaefer's pilot study was published in the Journal of Studies on Alcohol.

"Alcoholism is an extremely expensive problem in America," Schaefer says, estimating it costs taxpayers between $50 million and $80 million annually.

"Treatment costs money. Let's try reversing the trend. Instead of catching downstream tragedies, let's try to catch them upstream," he says.

"All of the people responsible for a bar — the owner, the bartender, the barmaids — are doing what they think the people want. There is a feedback, an accumulation of style," Schaefer says.

"It's conceivable to me that with a better knowledge of what types of environments lead to alcohol abuse, bar owners might want to change some things," he says.

Banks, state will aid Chicago schools

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago bankers and the city and state have agreed to provide millions of dollars to keep the nation's third-largest public school system from closing for lack of money to pay teachers' and suppliers, according to reports published today.

Under the agreements, major Chicago banks would lend money to the city, and both the city and state would buy notes from the 475,000-student school system, which has been shut out of money markets since its huge deficits were revealed late last year.

The Chicago Tribune reported a tentative agreement had been reached to enable bankers, the city and the state to advance emergency funds to the school system to enable it to meet Friday's $41.5 million payroll.

The Tribune said the bailout could total as much as $300 million.

Teachers, who went unpaid Dec. 21, voted overwhelmingly Wednesday — 19,154 to 2,358 — to ask the school board to shut down the system if it cannot meet Friday's payroll. A shutdown would enable teachers to collect unemployment.

The president of the Chicago Teachers Union would not say what action would be taken if the board ignored the request.

Alabama number one

Time marches on, but the Alabama Crimson Tide rolls along in the same place — No. 1 in The Associated Press final college football poll for the second year in a row.

Alabama won the national championship following the bowl games last year, beating Southern California in a hotly disputed vote. This year's balloting, also seriously challenged on the West Coast, finished with Alabama No. 1 and Southern Cal again in hot pursuit.

Coach Bear Bryant's Crimson Tide received 45 outright first-place votes to 20 for Southern Cal from a nationwide panel of 67 sports writers and broadcasters Wednesday. Two voters split their ballot between Alabama and Southern Cal, giving the Crimson Tide 46 first-place votes to 21 for the Trojans.

Oklahoma finished third for the second straight year, followed by Ohio State and Houston.

Alabama began New Year's Day in second place, 1 1/2 points behind top-ranked Ohio State and 8 1/2 points ahead of No. 3 Southern Cal. But the Crimson Tide, the only major college to finish with a perfect 12-0 record, convincingly beat a pesky Arkansas team, 21-9, in the Sugar Bowl.

Then in the Rose Bowl, Southern Cal, which had a tie with Stanford as the only blemish on its record, squeaked by Ohio State 17-16.

In total points, Alabama received 1,317 out of a possible 1,340, while Southern Cal had 1,289. In contrast to the final regular season poll, when eight voters kept Alabama out of the top three, only two board members had the Tide as low as third this time. It was Alabama's fifth national championship — all under Bryant — since the AP poll began in 1936.

The Tide received all 21 first-place ballots from voters in the South, 2 1/2 of the 12 ballots in the West, seven of eight in the Southwest, nine of 16 in the Midwest and 6 1/2 of 10 in the East.

The 66-year-old Bryant, college football's winningest active coach with 296 victories, said he was "highly pleased, but not surprised" at the final rankings "because I thought all along we had a good chance of finishing first. I decided not to worry about it one way or the other."

Robinson, who said after the Rose Bowl that he considered his Trojans No. 1, said Wednesday: "Certainly, as you look over this year and last, the two best teams in the country are Alabama and USC. We'd have been happy if someone voted us No. 1, but I can't be angry if someone voted Alabama No. 1."

Oklahoma, 11-1-0, moved from fifth to third after routing previously unbeaten Florida State 24-7 in the Orange Bowl Tuesday, totalling 1,163 points. "Alabama definitely should be the national champion and Southern Cal No. 2," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer.

Pampa girls visit Lubbock

Pampa's Lady Harvesters travel to Lubbock Monterey tonight to begin the second half of the 1979-80 basketball season.

The Lady Harvesters (5-10) will be out to snap a three-game losing streak. Their last outing was in the West Texas Tournament at Slaton where lower altitude problems bothered the Pampa girls.

"We seemed to have trouble breathing which caused us to play sluggish," said Coach Mary Thomas after losses to Lockney and Abilene Cooper. Gametime is 7:45 p.m.

Speed skating team experienced

LAKE PLACID, N.Y.—The United States will field what many consider to be its strongest speed skating team in Olympic history at the 1980 Winter Olympic Games Feb. 13-23 in upper New York state...the site of the team's previous greatest glories.

In 1932 at Lake Placid, the U.S. men's team captured all four gold medals in a startling performance. Now, 48 years later, the Olympic Games return to this "sleepy" hamlet where a U.S. squad, led by three-time World Champion Eric Heiden, aims for the 27 medals to be awarded to the world's fastest speed skaters.

"We're setting our sights for medals in all nine events," says George Howie, president of the United States International Skating Association (USISA).

"Past performances indicate our goal is within reach. The U.S. national team last winter captured 27 gold medals out of a possible 24 in the top six men's and women's international competitions.

"This 1980 U.S. Olympic Speed skating team will also be blessed with experience," he states.

Many team members competed in the 1976 games in Innsbruck and will include medal winners Leah Poulos Mueller, Peter Mueller, and Dan Immerfall. Moreover, Eric Heiden and his sister, Beth, are world champions. Leah Mueller is world sprint champion, Kim Kostron is a former junior world champion, and Nancy Swider is a former world record holder in the 3,000 meter events.

Under the direction of Olympic coaches Dianne Holmlita former gold, silver and bronze medalist herself, and Peter Schotting, the U.S. team will enter three skaters in each of nine events: the men's 500, 1,000, 1,500, 5,000, and 10,000 meters. The ladies skate 500, 1,000, 1,500, and 3,000 meters.

Team berths will be determined at the Olympic trials held in West Allis, Wis. in late December and starting positions will be set after special "skateoffs" are conducted in Davos, Switzerland in late January.

Why has the United States suddenly assumed the favorite's role in a sport dominated in previous years by the northern European countries such as Norway, the Soviet Union, and the Netherlands?

"A lot of hard work by the individual skaters," answers Howie. "Their training is rigorous, a year-round effort. This is especially needed here in a country where, before the new oval at Lake Placid was completed in 1977, only one speed skating oval existed...in West Allis, Wis., a suburb of Milwaukee."

Coach Holm agrees with Howie's assessment.

"The Europeans previously were surprised at our sudden emergence as a speed skating power," she says. "They said, 'We train as hard as you do.' But after watching us for a couple of days, they changed their opinion."

Oilers prepare for world champs

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston Coach Bum Phillips says the Oilers will have to stop a double barreled offensive attack Sunday in the American Football Conference title game against Pittsburgh.

The Oilers, despite crippling injuries, stunned the pass-oriented San Diego Chargers last week to advance to Sunday's AFC championship game for the second straight year.

The pace gets tougher Sunday however, as the Oilers return to Three Rivers Stadium where they were beaten 34-5 in last year's conference title game.

"You have to stop the run and the pass against Pittsburgh," said Phillips. "I don't think San Diego's running game is nearly as good as Pittsburgh's."

Houston's running game also likely will get a boost with the return to the lineup of NFL rushing leader Earl Campbell, who missed the San Diego game with a groin injury.

Quarterback Dan Pastorini, who also missed the game with a groin injury, was back in harness for Wednesday's workout and likely will play in the title game.

"You know what San Diego will do," Phillips said. "Their history has been to throw the ball. They use the pass to set up the run. Pittsburgh can go either way. They are just as likely to pass a bunch of times and then run a bunch."

Five other players were named Wednesday on the Oiler injury list including starting tight end Mike Barber, questionable with a right knee strain; running back Rob Carpenter, questionable with an ankle sprain; nose guard Ken Kennard, questionable with an elbow strain; wide receiver Ken Burrough, questionable with a groin injury and back bruise and kick returner Rich Ellender, out with a broken foot.

"The Oilers had renewed their hope of an all-Texas Super Bowl between Houston and Dallas. The Oilers lost out last year and the Cowboys were beaten Sunday by Los Angeles and Phillips lamented the Dallas loss.

"At the risk of aggravating (outspoken center Carl) Mautz I was pulling for the Cowboys to win," Phillips said. "Then we could have moved the game to Austin."

Asked if Texas was ready for an all-Texas Super Bowl, Phillips replied.

"I don't know about Texas but the world is not ready for it."

Miss America host fired

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Perennial Miss America pageant host Bert Parks says pageant officials pulled a "shabby trick" by firing him after 25 years of singing "There She Is" to tearful beauty queens.

"You've got to be kidding me. I'm absolutely shocked. I know nothing about this at all," Parks said when told of his dismissal late Wednesday night.

"I think it's their loss. I never thought they'd pull a trick like this," Parks said. "This is a little shabby, isn't it?"

Albert A. Marks Jr., the pageant's chief executive officer, said Wednesday that Parks "has not been invited back to be the emcee next year."

Marks said he told Parks in a letter two weeks ago that he would not be rehired to his traditional one-year contract. Marks would not give a reason for Parks' dismissal.

Parks, 65, reached at home in Greenwich, Conn., said he had not received the letter.

"I am really, honestly, so stunned. I really wish Al Marks had called me personally, I'm very sad. But if it's true, it's true. That's the way life is. I've loved every moment that I've done it."

Parks has been the pageant's television master of ceremonies since 1955, the second year of its nationwide telecast.

Marks said Parks earned $18,500 for his services last year, which included rehearsals and three nights as host of preliminary competition in addition to the two-hour television show.

A pageant source who asked not to be identified said Parks was fired because he was getting too old and "too powerful" for the non-profit pageant organization, led by dozens of Atlantic City area businessmen and civic leaders.

The source said the pageant's television sponsors — Kellogg's, Gillette and Campbell's Soup — supported the dismissal.

"Look, the guy's 65 years old," the source said. "A younger face is needed for that slot."

Marks would not say who would be host of the pageant's 27th national telecast on Sept. 4. The New York Daily News reported that pageant officials were considering singers John Davidson and Mac Davis, talk show host Merv Griffin and actor Gavin MacLeod.

Dorothy Benham of Pittsburgh, Miss America 1977 and co-host of the 1979 pageant, said she had been invited to return as co-host this September.

"It'll be different without him," she said when told of Parks' firing. "He's a great man. He's done a lot for the show. ... The Miss America pageant is a tradition. It's part of America. He is known as a part of that tradition."

Parks, an Atlanta native called "Bertie" by many in Atlantic City, is a former Broadway actor. He was the nation's top game show host in the 1950s when he was chosen for the pageant. Parks was host of such 50s TV shows as "Name That Tune" and "Break the Bank." His last network series was in 1963 when he hosted "Yours for a Song."

Parks took over the job from Bob Russell, a television producer who emceed the first televised pageant.

Police order ousted by Federal court

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A federal judge, ruling that "Hispanic" is not a racial category, has barred the city from promoting a policeman of Mexican descent under an anti-discrimination plan.

U.S. District Judge Gerald Weber made it clear Wednesday that only blacks and women are included in his order forcing the city to award preferential promotions to minorities on the police force.

Weber extended his temporary restraining order against the promotion to sergeant of Edward A. Villalpando, 40, who was to be sworn Dec. 19 with 35 other newly appointed sergeants.

Villalpando was certified Hispanic by the Civil Service Commission.

Oregon statesman tries for transit system

WASHINGTON (AP) — As mayor of Portland, Ore., Neil Goldschmidt built one of the best mass transit systems in America. As secretary of transportation, he is trying for mass transit on a grand national scale.

President Carter passed the transportation baton to Goldschmidt in September, and he's been running hard ever since. His goal: Get Americans out of their autos and into buses, trains and carpools.

The program he is shaping is a key part of Carter's move to cut dependence on foreign oil. Goldschmidt says it could save 350,000 or more barrels of oil a day by 1990.

"Transportation accounts for 53 percent of all petroleum consumed in the United States, and the national agenda demands full attention to the close relationship between transportation and energy," he says.

Goldschmidt has numerous duties as transportation secretary. They range from highway maintenance to aviation safety to urban grants to overseeing the Coast Guard. But his major thrust has been on Carter's proposal to spend $50 billion on mass transit programs in the 1980s, three times the amount spent in the 1970s.

The transit programs also are intended to support the revitalization of America's cities.

"The energy crisis is gnawing at our economy and chewing at our pocketbooks," Goldschmidt says. "It's a personal assault on our freedom to seek our own economic destinies, both as individuals and as a nation."

In his running start as the new secretary of transportation, Goldschmidt has tackled other issues confronting his department.

He scrapped a proposed merger of the Federal Highway Administration with the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, ordered an investigation of Federal Aviation Administration safety procedures, moved to restore needed rail service to grain-producing states and is working to assure that a viable rail network emerges from current bankruptcy proceedings involving two Midwest railroads.

When Brock Adams quit the transportation job under fire during last July's Cabinet shakeup, he complained he did not have access to President Carter. Goldschmidt says he doesn't have that problem.

"When I want to see the president, I see him," says Goldschmidt, who commands the sprawling Transportation Department with its eight agencies and 112,000 employees.

Carter and an independent Adams often were at odds on policy, and Adams was frozen out of administration deliberations on energy. Goldschmidt is very much a part of those deliberations.

Adams was never enthusiastic about Carter's aim of reducing federal regulation of the transportation industry. Goldschmidt has set deregulation of the trucking and railroad industries as major goals for 1980. He also hopes that Amtrak can bounce back as an efficient carrier of rail passengers.

Goldschmidt first came to the attention of transportation experts around the country — and eventually the White House — because of a controversial decision he made to develop a mass transit system in Portland.

When he took the mayor's office in 1972, the city was divided on whether to build two interstate highways through Portland, one going to Mount Hood. Goldschmidt killed both projects and, with the help of changes in the federal highway law in 1974, he spent much of the money earmarked for the interstates on other transportation-related projects.

Public Notices

Sealed bids for roof repair on various buildings in the McLean School System will be received at the McLean School Business Office, Box K, McLean, Texas, 79057, until 10:30 A.M. on January 14, 1980, and then publicly opened and read. The McLean ISD may award bids on the individual buildings or on the total project. The McLean School Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Bids will be taken on the following repairs:

Field House and Concession Stand - Roof with 40 squares of 245 lb. T-Lox shingles. New roof to be placed over old roof.

High School Building - Replace flashing on firewall on the auditorium portion of the building, 240 feet of 90 lb. base flashing to be installed.

Elementary School Building - Scrape gravel and felt back 18 inches from the east and west edges of the main building, 523 feet by 18 inches. Put down 2 ply of 15 lb. felt and re-gravel. Replace 80 lb. base flashing on cafeteria portion of building, 170 feet of 90 lb. base flashing to be installed.

Gymnasium - Completely re-roof with selvage type roofing. New roof to be placed over old roof. Lapped half of roofing to be nailed with tin caps and nails staggered at approximately 18 inches, in addition to being stuck, 124 squares of selvage roofing to be installed.

Any questions may be directed to: Carl A. Dwyer, Supt. McLean ISD, Box 69, McLean, Texas, 79057. Dec. 31, Jan. 3, 10, 1980
