

Coffee, tea or alertness pills?

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

If you receive a card advertising "mental alertness pills" and decide to buy some, you may end up paying over $100 for the same feeling you can get drinking a couple of cups of coffee.

A Pampa local known as "SAM" is passing around business cards for R & K Distributing, with an Amarillo address, advertising the alertness pills.

Pictured on the card are three pills. Two are likenesses of the amphetamines commonly called "black mollies and yellow jackets" and the other is a green and white capsule.

After calling the number on the card, it was discovered the pills — described as "really strong" by a woman who answered the phone — can be delivered to Pampa if the person is willing to buy 200 of them — at $55 per hundred.

L. Roy Denman of the Pampa Police Department said the department was aware of the pills and had had a sample of them analyzed. Not having the exact analysis, he did say they were "mostly caffeine", however.

This R & K Distributing, he said, are believed to be a part of a vitamin agency in Oklahoma City who bought "tons of them — the caffeine pills — for practically nothing."

Harold Comer, district attorney, said unless an analysis proved the pills purchased from "SAM" were amphetamines, the selling of them would not constitute a criminal case.

It would be criminal, however, if you should give the money for the pills and then not receive the pills, he added.

"If you should suffer any damages from having taken the pills," he commented, "then you could sue the company for deceptive trade practices or false advertising." Under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act, you could then receive "treble damages" — three times over the original damages — should you win the case, he added.

"The people should be alerted not to ever, ever buy medicines from any promotional activity like that," Comer said.

The district attorney cautions persons who become involved in "schemes like that" to report them to the Better Business Bureau or the Retail Merchants Association in Pampa.

"I can't understand why someone would intentionally spend their money on something like that," he commented, "but I guess people have the constitutional right to be stupid."

Afghan rebels suffer large losses to reds

By The Associated Press
Moslem rebels in Afghanistan admitted Soviet troops inflicted heavy losses on them, but diplomats in neighboring Pakistan reported the rebels and anti-Soviet troops of the Afghan army were continuing to battle the Russians in at least four areas of the country.

On the diplomatic front, five non-aligned members of the U.N. Security Council circulated a draft resolution calling for the immediate withdrawal of all foreign troops from Afghanistan, and the United States urged the council to denounce the Soviet military intervention. The council's debate on the Soviet action was continuing today for the third day.

A rebel radio broadcast Sunday said the guerrillas battling communist rule for nearly 20 months suffered heavy casualties in fighting near the eastern town of Jalalabad, which Soviet troops occupied last week. Jalalabad is 75 miles east of Kabul, the Afghan capital, and 50 miles northwest of the Pakistani border and the Khyber Pass.

The rebel broadcast vowed a "fight to the finish" to drive the Russians out of Afghanistan and bring down the communist government in Kabul. It claimed the insurgents had been reinforced by "considerable" numbers of Afghan army troops who deserted during fighting elsewhere in the country following the coup in Kabul Dec. 27.

Cabot phasing out U.S. work

"National policies haven't been translated into Cabot's contracts, according to Vic Raymond, vice president of Cabot Corporation.

"There has been an effort of the U.S. government in recent months to increase military strength, including armaments. Cabot is trying to phase out most military contracts. The corporation is trying not to depend on one customer (the U.S. government) who's demands are so varied and with such strong competition in the field, there are other areas to be explored."

The gun division of Cabot in the early years accounted for much of the Cabot business. With sales amounting to more than one billion in 1979, the gun division has made up less than 10 percent of the sales and they are expected to account for only 5 percent in 1980.

A large decrease of government gun contracts started in the early 70's, explained Raymond, "mainly due to the end of the Viet Nam situation and the decision of the government to produce gun tubes themselves."

The Engineered Products Group of Cabot

Corporation manufactures materials and equipment designed to provide specialized performance. This group includes the Pampa Machinery Division's special alloy steels and the lines of mobile oil field drilling and well servicing equipment.

Raymond mentioned "the commercial steel produced at Cabot is being used in many aircraft, including the L-10-11 and the DC7. Cabot provides drill collars (partially forged) and is the largest manufacturer of mobile, drilling rigs and mobile service rigs."

"Commercial steel and drilling rigs are now the mainstays of Cabot Machinery Division," Raymond said.

Cabot is the world's leading producer of carbon black, an essential reinforcing agent in rubber and plastics and a pigment in inks, coatings and plastics. There are 12 carbon black plants, located in eight countries. Five carbon black plants are located in the U.S., including the Pampa division.

Price: embargo awful

By Sheila Eccles
Of The Pampa News
Bob Price, State Republican Senator, today called the grain embargo imposed by the Carter administration "the most devastating thing that has happened to the American agricultural economy."

Price, speaking of the embargo established by executive order Friday night, told The News "food is not a political tool" and predicted "this will cause chaos in the markets, with agriculture bearing the brunt of it."

The embargo has certain pitfalls, according to Price. "Russia may set up dummy corporations and buy what they need through these," he said. This would enable the Russians to keep grain imports stable.

However, Price said that if the Soviets do buy through other countries this may eventually bring the American agriculture market back.

Nevertheless, Price said "It has taken years of meticulous political detante to bring the market to the present status, and in one stroke, the last five years of agriculture accomplishments have been disrupted."

The grain halt amounts to 22 percent of the American export market.

In 1979 the U.S. government permitted the Russians to buy up to 25 million tons of wheat and corn combined. This amount represents 17 million tons more than a previous agreement allowed the U.S.S.R. to purchase. Those 17 million tons are now being withheld.

Chris Chitwood of Chitwood Enterprises, Pampa, compiled from his office the latest national news releases from several sources. According to these sources, "The latest U.S. grain ban is the first in history in which shipments have been stopped to a specific destination. The embargo encompasses much more grain than the one imposed in the early 1970's. The economic impact on U.S. agriculture, the American farmer and its target the U.S.S.R., will be the greatest in history. It is very possible U.S. agriculture will be sent back to a period of large grain stocks held in government ownership in the 1960's. It would seem the American farmer is being sacrificed as a political weapon in world strategy."

Local grain dealers have suspended all trading for two days, and according to Lee Heaton of Wheeler-Evans "I haven't heard anything." The local grain market closed early Friday afternoon, because of the rumored embargo, wheat was trading at $3.91.

Owen Lafferty of White Deer's Wheeler-Evans Elevator Company remarked that "there are just rumors and more rumors."

Several large American grain exporters are in Washington, today, to try and solve some of the problems caused by the announced grain embargo.

According to the President, "With American Farmers in mind, the 17 million tons of wheat marked for export to Russia, would not be allowed to just be dumped on the domestic market, and depress prices."

As far as the grain embargo crippling the Panhandle area, Owen Lafferty explained "everyone is looking for the worse to happen, but no one knows as yet just what is happening, or going to happen."

Can the U.S. government buy the futures from exporters? The grain could possibly be bought and put in storage with the government owning and storing it. The amounts to be considered in this type of move would be 23 million tons of grain, corn, wheat and soybean. Owen Lafferty said "the rumor of such a move is just that, a rumor."

President Carter said, "I am determined to minimize any adverse impact on the American farmer from this action."

Prisoner found dead in cell

Waymon Joe Young, arrested Wednesday for aggravated assault, was found dead early this morning in the Gray County jail by another prisoner.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan said Young apparently took his undershirt, tore it up the back, tied it to a bar and around his neck, stepped off the bench below the bar and hung himself. Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge of Lefors ruled the death as a strangulation — suicide.

Young, 26 of 118 W. Albert, was arrested Jan. 3 by city police in connection with the beating of Herman Malone with a steel pipe at Ruby's Drive Inn. Jordan said Young had been transferred to the county jail early Friday.

Bond had been set at $1,000, which Young had not met. Charges of aggravated assault is a third-degree felony and the maximum punishment carries a $5,000 fine and no less than two years and no more than ten years in prison.

Jordan said at 7:10 a.m., he was alerted by another prisoner who said one of the inmates had hung himself. The discovery came shortly after the jail correctional officers changed shifts at 7 a.m.

Young was found in the day room of the jail. Jordan estimated that the incident occurred sometime between 1:30 and 4 a.m. Monday because of the condition of Young's body.

This is the second suicide at the county jail in the past three years, although Jordan said there have only been two in his almost 30 years as sheriff.

Services for Young are pending with Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors.

He was born in Wellington and moved to Pampa 21 years ago from there.

Survivors include his wife, Joanne, two sons, Aaron and Shaun, two daughters, Tonya and Shelley, all of the home, eight brothers, Dale, Waymond, Robert, Carter, Kelvin, Rodney, Jeffrey and Rayford, all of Pampa, three sisters, Mrs. Doris Tillman, Miss Lena Young and Miss Jennifer Young, all of Pampa, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Young, also of Pampa.

Appraisal suit against Carter dropped

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

Although Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter has not received official notice, other officials involved with the Grandview-Hopkins declaratory judgement suit against Carter involving the district tax appraisal board have affirmed that the case is being dropped.

Tom Adkins of the Grandview-Hopkins Independent School District said this morning the suit has been dropped. George Whittenburg, the Amarillo attorney who is handling the suit for Grandview-Hopkins, was unavailable for comment.

Adkins said he did not know why the suit was being dropped.

Carter said she had been told by state officials to "go ahead" and form the board because board members need to learn what is going on.

"The state is planning to hold seminars on the appraisal matter and the people on these boards need to go and learn about it," she said. "But I still don't have an official word about whether the suit has been dropped or not."

City Attorney Don Lane said by telephone this morning that he had heard the suit was dropped Friday but he does not know the reason either. Because the city was involved, Lane said he would ask officials what they will want to do about their plans for litigation.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said Grandview-Hopkins authorities told him the board needed to get organized because "things are happening that they need to be involved in." He added, however, that some uncertainty still exists as to what will happen with the suit.

The suit was filed in October to determine the validity of the seven-man tax appraisal board resolution that Grandview-Hopkins had passed earlier. The creation of the tax board arose out of Senate Bill 621, which states the district is responsible for appraising property in the district for ad valorem tax purposes of the state and of each taxing unit other than the county that imposes ad valorem taxes on property in the district.

The bill initially provided for a five-man board. But several months ago, local taxing entities outside of Pampa presented a resolution, as allowed in the Senate bill, which would change the number of board members to seven as well as the method of selecting them.

In Section 6.03, subsection (1) of the bill, the governing bodies of three-fourths of the taxing units that are entitled to vote on the appointment of members of a district's board of directors may change the number of members on the board or change the method of selection of such members.

Before the resolution was presented, Pampa would have had four of the five posts on the board. With the resolution, Pampa would only have three members on the board, with the other three places going to the other areas.

Adkins has said that such a seven member board provides Pampa with three members and one member from each of the other communities in the county. Those other representatives are the City of Lefors and the Lefors School Board, the City of McLean, the Alaneed School Board and the Grandview-Hopkins School Board.

Carter signs billion dollar loan for Chrysler

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Carter is signing into law legislation giving $1.5 billion in loan guarantees to Chrysler Corp., the future of the financially strapped automaker still hinges on crucial decisions by its workers and bankers.

The legislation, which the president was signing at an afternoon ceremony today, makes the federal guarantees contingent on $462.5 million in wage concessions from Chrysler's hourly workers and other private help including $500 million in bank loans.

The latest concession, amounting to $243 million in lost wages, is yet to be approved by members of the United Auto Workers union, which represents all but about 4,000 of Chrysler's 105,000 unionized employees.

Representatives of 184 UAW locals meet tomorrow on whether to endorse that concession, which union bargainers and the company agreed to Saturday. A rank-and-file ratification vote should be complete by the end of the month, officials said.

Saturday's agreement "stinks," said Joe Zappa, chairman of the union bargaining committee and head of a Detroit local. But he predicted UAW members would approve the pact anyway "to save their jobs."

About 90 percent of the new UAW concessions would come through eliminating 17 paid personal holidays scheduled in 1981 and 1982. In addition, a pair of 3 percent annual wage increases were delayed several months and a day's bonus pay in December was eliminated.

The UAW members had earlier agreed to $203 million in wage concessions. The bill also requires white-collar workers to give up $125 million in expected wage increases. Chrysler in turn is required to turn over $162.5 million in stock to its workers.

Chrysler must still raise a total of $1.43 billion from selling its assets and from its banks, suppliers and the states and cities where it has plants.

Chrysler representative Richard Muller said talks were continuing with bankers, who refused during congressional hearings to say whether they would come up with the money necessary to trigger the loan guarantees.

Muller said meetings also were being held with state and local officials, who are down for $250 million under the financing plan. Some of this aid, Muller said, would require action by state legislatures that are not yet in session or would have to await legal opinions by state attorneys general.

Chrysler, which lost $1 billion in 1979, hopes that by the end of the month it can have the financing package assembled and thus qualify for the federal loan guarantees, Muller said.

Congress approved the guarantees Dec. 21. Without such aid, the firm said, it would run out of money this month. But company officials said over the weekend they now have enough money to keep going into February.

Ivory was taken to Highland General Hospital by Metropolitan Ambulance where he was admitted for multiple injuries. The Director of Nursing at the hospital said Ivory is in satisfactory condition today.

A 1973 Ford driven by Letha Meaks Gilbert, 41, of 1004 Fisher was reportedly northbound on Cuyler when a 1971 Buick driven by 32-year-old Diana McGill of Box 575, Panhandle started backing from a parked position. The two vehicles collided at the intersection of Cyler and Decatur.

A 1971 Ford pickup driven by Mark Jason Qualls, 17, of 2201 N. Zimmers was northbound in the 900 block of Duncan when it drove left of the center lane and struck a 1970 Pontiac driven by 17-year-old Samuel Joseph Edwards of 2624 Comanche. Qualls was cited for driving left of center.

Witches murder trial underway

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — Two years of tension have ended for Loy Dean and Louise Stone, self-professed witches accused of the Halloween 1977 slaying of a Dimmitt teen-age girl.

Attorneys for both sides began the grueling process today of selecting a panel to hear the case from more than 200 persons subpoenaed as possible jurors.

The trial was moved to Plainview, 43 miles away, after 15 of 16 witnesses told a state district judge the Stones would not get a fair trial in Dimmitt, a sleepy Panhandle town that has been shrouded in tension since the fatal Oct. 31, 1977 night when 15-year-old Roxanne Casas was slain.

Sheriff Granville Martin said some of the witnesses "got scared" and left the area. But after two delays, prosecutors managed to round up most of them, including Arthur Herrera, the driver of the pickup in which Miss Casas was killed.

Nearly 50 persons have been subpoenaed to testify, and defense attorneys James Doores and Travis Shelton predicted the trial would last at least two weeks.

Herrera, Miss Casas and the three other teen-agers in the car cruised past the Stones' house on Easter Road, a few miles outside town.

Two weeks before Halloween, the Stones appeared on an Amarillo television station to announce a witchcraft seminar. On that Halloween night, traffic on Easter Road was thick with horn-honking, yelling teen-agers.

The sheriff already had been called to the Stones' house once that night to chase away carloads of teen-agers.

But Martin already had left when Herrera and his passengers drove into the Stones' gravel driveway, past a concrete block wellhouse.

The pickup was turning around in the driveway when two shotgun blasts hit the bed of the truck and the passenger window, striking Roxanne, Maria Trevino, 15, and Carlos Garza, 18.

Herrera and 15-year-old Andriana Rangel, another passenger in the vehicle, were not injured.

About an hour later, Roxanne was pronounced dead at Plains Memorial Hospital, 7 1/2 miles away.

Kenyan police suspect Adamson death murder

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The Kenyan police announced today they believe Joy Adamson, the conservationist-author of "Born Free," was murdered and are questioning three persons about her death last week.

Commissioner of Police Ben Gethi said in a statement that the death of Mrs. Adamson is being treated as a murder case following new information on the circumstances surrounding the death. He gave no details.

First reports from police and her co-workers indicated she was mauled and killed by a lion. But the Sunday Standard newspaper reported the police reopened their investigation after receiving reports that there was little blood at the site where Mrs. Adamson was reported killed, that there were no claw marks on her body and that her car had been stolen.

President Daniel Arap Moi ordered a full investigation into the death, and police officials returned to the isolated camp Saturday.

DHR office space issue in board meeting

Nathan Martin, regional administrator of the Department of Human Resources, will address the Gray County Child Welfare Board in a called session Jan.

to discuss Title XX funds and building space for local offices of the DHR.

The board will convene at 7 p.m. in the meeting room of the Gray County Annex.

City commission, school board will look at bids

Commissioners will consider appointment of three members to the City Traffic Commission in Tuesday's meeting of the city commission to be held at 9:30 a.m. at city hall.

According to City Manager, Mack Wofford, Tom Kelly, supervising engineer for the Texas Department of Highways; W. C. Bass, manager for Dunlap's Department store and Claude Wilson, a member of the board of directors of PAM Apartments have been recommended by the traffic commission for appointment as members of the body.

A request will be heard from Fire Chief Paul Jones, Wofford said, on the purchase of a rescue tool for the fire department. Due to a question concerning specifications for the tool, he commented, Jones is expected to ask commissioners to refuse the bids opened in the last meeting on Dec. 27 and start over with new specifications.

Final reading will be heard on an ordinance amending the zoning of the 400 block of Purviance from multi-family to retail.

Pampa Yellow Cab Company will make a request to the commission on a revision of cab fares.

A report will be given to commissioners on Burdette Park, the city manager said. The park, he said, is located near the Hughes Building and was built by the Cabot Corporation. It was understood when the park was built, Wofford commented, that the city would eventually be responsible for the park's maintenance. This report simply concerns the changeover of responsibility of the park's care, he added.

In other business, the commission will discuss salary changes for December, 1979 and consider approval of current accounts payable.

Members of the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees will hold a regular meeting Tuesday at 5:00 p.m. in the Carver Educational Center.

Agenda topics up for consideration by the board include approval of supplemental bills, policy revisions and awarding of bids for library tables.

The supplemental bills, Schools Superintendent Bob Phillips said, "mostly" concern the construction on the vocational wing at Pampa High School. He said they are bills that were late to be presented to the board and need to be paid immediately.

About 50 policy revisions have been sent to the district, Phillips said, from the state school board association. He explained they were revisions made by the state legislature while it was in session.

Board members will also discuss personnel and possibly go into executive session.

Watergate named top news story of decade; energy crisis second

On June 17, 1972, five men were arrested attempting to rifle files at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee. Two years and 53 days later, Richard Milhous Nixon became the first president of the United States to resign.

The events set off by what Nixon press secretary Ron Ziegler described as "a third-rate burglary," the scandal generically known as Watergate, has been voted overwhelmingly the top news story of the 1970s by Associated Press editors and broadcasters.

Nearly 80 percent of the 700 voters picked it as the story of the decade and it had a 10-1 edge over its nearest competitor — the energy crisis. The end of the war in Vietnam finished third, recent events in Iran fourth, and 1978's Jonestown massacre fifth.

Watergate often seemed more fiction than fact. It had moments of tragedy and pathos, but it also had its comedy.

It spawned a notable glossary of words and phrases — "stonewall," "smoking gun," "enemies' list," "I am not a crook," "18 1/2 minute gap," "at this point in time," "inoperative," "twist slowly, slowly in the wind," "Deep Throat," "deep six," "Big Enchilada," "expletive deleted," "The Saturday Night Massacre," "the plumbers," "a cancer on the presidency."

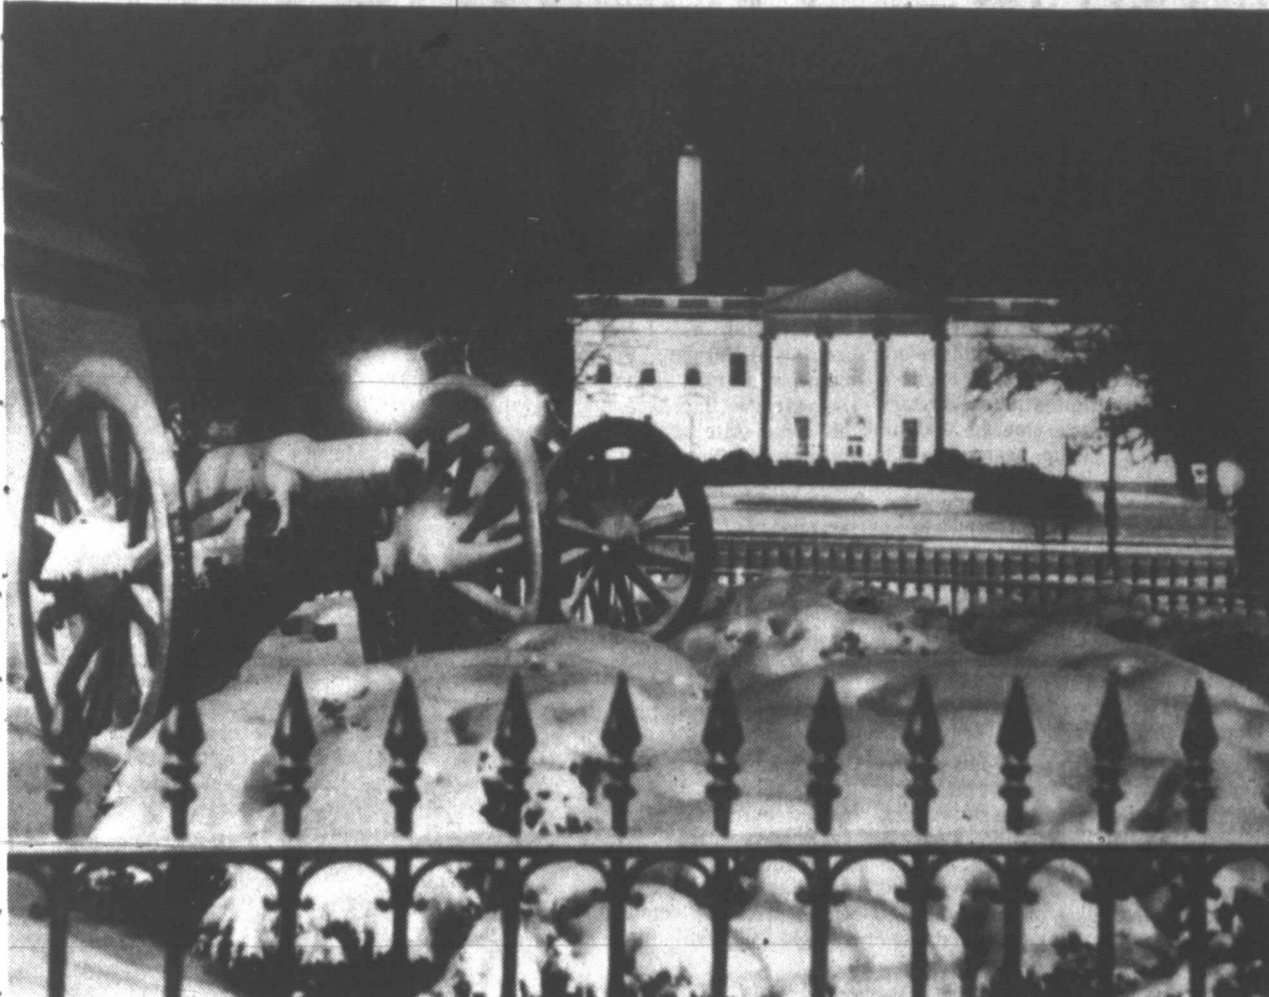

And it spawned a memorable cast of characters:

- The mysterious spies: G. Gordon Liddy, E. Howard Hunt and the four Miamians known as "the Cubans" (Goetzales, Martinez, Barker and Sturgis);

- The mysterious informer, James McCord;
- The stern judge, John J. Sirica;
- The gumshoes, Anthony Ulasevic and John Caulfield;
- The fatherly Southern senator, Sam Ervin;
- The intrepid reporters, Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein;
- The run-of-the-mill politician become statesman: Peter Rodino;
- The loyal secretary, Rose Mary Woods;
- The loyal press secretary, Ron Ziegler;
- The martyr, Elliot Richardson;
- The insiders: Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell and Dean; Colson and Magruder and Kalmbach and LaRue and Higby and Strachan and Sloan and Porter.
- And the victim, Richard M. Nixon, who wanted to go down in history as an international statesman; who went down instead the most disgraced president in American history.

The opening scene is the burglary; it was in fact the opening scene for the definitive Watergate movie — Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman as Woodward and Bernstein in "All the President's Men."

The second scene is the 1972 election: the various activities that later came to be known as the "White House horrors" covered up as Nixon sweeps triumphantly to re-election over Sen. George McGovern.

Dollars marked to aid tourism

ARLINGTON (AP) — The state of Texas plans to pump almost a million dollars into tourism to help overcome a series of disasters that cut into the industry last year and may hurt in 1980.

Frank Hildebrand, executive director of the Texas Tourist Development Agency, said icy roads, spring floods, tight gasoline supplies and the world's worst oil spill conspired to cut attendance at Texas attractions by 4 percent in 1979.

"It was not a particularly bright year for the Texas travel industry or the nation as a whole," Hildebrand said, during an energy and tourism conference.

Hildebrand said Six Flags over Texas here and Aquarena Springs in San Marcos came through 1979 in good shape only because of extensive promotion and advertising.

In 1980, the tourism agency will use $925,000 in state funds for advertising — a 123 percent increase over last year's budget.

The money will be used to highlight Texas and its four adjacent states in an attempt to offset energy shortages and inflation, Hildebrand said.

There will be a "substantial falloff in the number of motorists using cars for pleasure purposes," Hildebrand said, predicting gasoline prices would jump to $1.50 a gallon by the end of the year.

In addition, he predicted inflation will drive air fares up. In 1979, fares increased an average of 23 percent, and the travel price index rose about 14 percent, Hildebrand said.

Finally, he said, the black oil that clogged onto Texas beaches will return after Gulf currents reverse in about 60 days.

Despite the gloomy forecast, Hildebrand said he expects tourism in Texas to fare better than in other states.

"The image of Texas causes Texas to be high on the list of must-visit places" for foreign visitors, he said. Direct flights from European capitals and the Far East are pending, and direct flights from England are already in service.

3 face porno charges

HOUSTON (AP) — The parents of half a dozen young boys were surprised to discover the three men who gave their children candy and took them to ballgames also paid them to pose for nude photographs, according to police.

"There could be another 100 kids involved as far as we know," said juvenile officer John Freeman, after officers questioned six boys aged 9 to 14.

Charges of indecency with a child were filed Saturday against Golden Preston Hatcher, 54; Frederick Keller, 34; and Jon J. Johansen, 64.

Bond for Hatcher and Keller was set at $35,000 apiece. Johansen, whose bond was set at $30,000, was still being sought late Sunday.

Officers said they arrested Hatcher early Saturday in his apartment, where they found photographic equipment and pictures of nude children, plus jars filled with candy, cookies and "anything a kid would like to have," according to Sgt. R.R. Benestante.

Keller was arrested about 30 minutes later as he drove into Hatcher's driveway with three boys he had taken to a wrestling match.

Drug traffic, highway deaths, DPS priorities

AUSTIN (AP) — Col. Jim Adams, new chief of the Texas Department of Public Safety, says his two most immediate concerns are curbing organized drug traffic and reducing highway deaths.

Adams, 53, the first lawyer to head the DPS, said in an interview his plans also include stepped-up legal training for troopers and investigators.

"I hate to see a good case built up and then lost because of a faulty search warrant. ... One of my freaky buttons is to make sure our people know the law," he said.

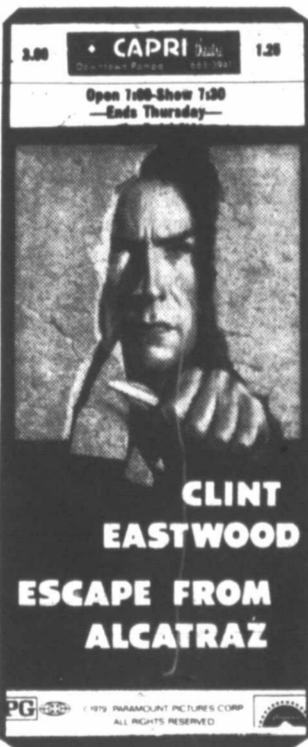

Adams, former No. 2 man in the FBI, became chief of the DPS on Jan. 1, the day after former director Wilson Speir retired.

His office decor includes autographed pictures of former President Gerald Ford, GOP presidential hopeful George Bush and former Attorney General Griffin Bell. Hanging on the paneled wall is his license to practice law before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Adams said he still is working out detailed priorities for his administration but drugs and traffic deaths are the top two problems on his mind at the moment.

Drugs can't be considered apart from organized crime, and Adams said that can involve outwardly respectable businessmen as well as the rank-and-file pushers and smugglers.

Adams said the DPS "can do the job within existing laws, subject to minor modifications by the Legislature."

'Battle for Britain' raging with airlines

MIAMI (AP) — A new "Battle for Britain" is raging among 10 U.S. airlines. To the victor will go the lucrative air route between Miami and London, now served by National Airlines.

National, however, is merging with Pan American World Airways, effective today, and a condition for approval of the merger was that it surrender its busy Miami-London flight.

Air Florida, American, Braniff, Delta, Eastern, Republic, Trans World Airlines, Western and World Airways have jumped into the fray, claiming they could best serve the route.

But Pan Am and National — which when merged will be known simply as Pan Am — say they won't give up the route without a fight.

Pan Am formally applied to take it over, saying the National route was one of the reasons it sought the merger. National employees pooled resources to buy full page newspaper advertisements and went to Washington to lobby for their cause.

Air Florida, meanwhile, launched its own campaign for the route and says it will undersell all competitors. As part of its effort, Air Florida has introduced bumper stickers, buttons and other paraphernalia exhorting Floridians to join the "Battle for Britain."

Air Florida's effort got a boost Friday when a staff bureau within the Civil Aeronautics Board — the Bureau of International Aviation — filed a brief in Washington favoring that airline for the route.

The brief, which makes the bureau a party to the case, said four carriers — Air Florida, Delta, Eastern, Western and World — each would provide "substantial benefits" to consumers if given the route. But it gave preference to Air Florida, with Eastern ranked second.

CAB spokesman Alan Pollock said the brief would play a minor role in deciding the route case, because other bureaus are expected to file recommendations as well.

Air Florida chairman C. Edward Acker said his company would offer "unrestricted, low cost air transportation" if it wins the route.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

From collection plate to gun barrel

The leftwing machinations of many prominent American clergymen never cease to surprise politically unaware Christians. Clearly, some activist-ministers are motivated by the message of peace found within the scriptures; others seem to be responding less to the Bible than to current political slogans. The actions of these politically-motivated churchmen, whatever their motives, are in many cases damaging to the Christianity that is supposed to be the basis of their philosophy.

During the Vietnam conflict religious activists were swept up, and rightfully so, in the controversy of the conflict. It was more than conscientious objection, a factor present in all American wars. Many of those clergymen who submerged themselves in a moral fight against the Vietnam war were politicized by the ordeal. Now some may be using their religion as a method of achieving political goals, instead of the other way around. This politicization bears a bitter fruit.

A recent book entitled 'Amsterdam to Nairobi: The World Council of Churches and The Third World', authored by Ernst Lefever, details the aid given by the World Council of Churches (WCC) to violent revolutionaries in the Third World. It is the sorry record of an ostensibly Christian organization. Of course the WCC has been attacked since the 1950s for its overtly leftwing position. Now, with a new breed of politicized clergymen at the helm of many of its member churches, the WCC is, according to Lefever, worse than ever.

Lefever's book offers some horrifying accounts of the WCC's "liberation theology" that extracts money from unsuspecting American congregations and channels it to blood-thirsty guerrilla movements. In the case of WCC aid to Rhodesia, no provisions were made to make sure the funds given to Patriotic Front guerrillas were not used to pay for guns and ammunition. In fact, when Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa decided to lay down his arms and seek a peaceful transition to black majority rule, he was cut off from lucrative WCC support. The money instead was given to a Marxist-oriented group which, among other acts of mayhem, according to Lefever, "deliberately killed 35 foreign missionaries and their children in Rhodesia."

Interestingly, one of the three ministers selected by the Ayatollah Khomeini to conduct Christmas services for the hostages was the Rev. William Howard, president of the National Council of Churches (the U.S. branch of the WCC). One of the other clergymen selected by the Iranian demagogue was the Rev. Sloane Coffin. Coffin has rarely found it possible to side with America in times of crisis. It was the Rev. Coffin who likened President Carter's handling of the Iranian situation to the bombing of North Vietnam. That bit of politically-inspired garbage was proclaimed from the pulpit of his church. Showing that he really knows how to grab a headline, before leaving on his trip to Tehran, the ranting reverend told reporters that Teddy Kennedy's remark about the shah had likely saved the lives of the hostages.

Who is to blame for this leftist manipulation of American churches? The sincere Christians who sit still for it must accept responsibility. A significant number of American churches continue to maintain membership in the National Council of Churches — thereby helping to finance WCC support for terrorism. The Rev. Coffin is the minister of a large church in Manhattan. His congregation sits there Sunday after Sunday letting him get by with outrageously political statements. Christians consider themselves gentle, but even a sheep knows when it is being sheared. It is about time American church-goers quit letting their religious institutions be used to support activity that makes a mockery of their faith.

Thin line between liberty & license

A judge in a California libel case has restated the argument for freedom of expression with a telling reminder of what the alternative would be.

The case before the court was typical in that the charge of libel was brought by a candidate for public office, but it was not so regular in the particulars: The candidate was a physician running for a seat on a community hospital board.

A more seasoned campaigner in a more typically political office very likely would have understood, whether or not he like it, that name calling is part of the political process. It has ever been so since the first political campaigns in America.

Presiding Justice Robert Gardner, writing an appeals court decision affirming a lower court's summary judgment in favor of the defendant, pointed out that "Washington was called a murderer, Jefferson a blackguard... (and) Henry Clay a pimp."

That may be small comfort to the doctor; but, said the judge, "since the essence of liberty is freedom of expression in the political arena, the law recognizes the reality of intemperate, ill-considered and rash attacks upon all of us in seeking office."

In even stronger language the judge declared, "It is an essential part of our national heritage that an irresponsible slob can stand on the street corner and, with impunity, heap invective on all of us in public office. At such times the line between liberty and license blurs."

And then Justice Gardner zeroed in on the main point. He said the dedication to basic principles of liberty and freedom of expression will tolerate nothing less than the widest freedom of political comment. "The alternative," he said, "is censorship and tyranny."

Shift to alternate sources

Inasmuch as it takes a couple of months for oil tankers to get to America from the Persian Gulf, it may be early next year before we feel the impact of the cutoff of U.S. oil imports from Iran. How severe that impact will be depends on a number of factors — from the effectiveness of conservation measures, to progress in shifting energy production to non-petroleum sources.

From the Atomic Industrial Forum comes a calculation which suggests the impact can be short-lived. There are nine newly-built nuclear generating units up for final licensing by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in 1980. The nine units have an aggregate generating capacity of 9,350 megawatts.

To generate 9,350 megawatts in oil-burning power plants consumes approximately 400,000 barrels of oil a day, says the AIF. That happens to be the amount of crude oil the United States has been importing directly from Iran.

How serious an energy shortage develops from the trouble in Iran may depend, then, on how far we want to go with the current moratorium on the licensing of new nuclear power plants.

How much of a moratorium is really necessary to answer the safety questions about nuclear power? The Three Mile Island plant was shut down safely in spite of some goofs in the control room. We might conclude that the

Stand still and be robbed

by Charles D. Van Eaton, Ph. D.

In the literature of economics, as far back as one may read, there is general agreement on the idea that capital will tend to move into those industries and geographic regions where its rate of return (i.e. profit) is high and move out of those in which it is low. If any moral judgment attached to this phenomenon at all it was always one of approval — recognizing that through the process of free capital movement, overall labor income and employment could be expanded while at the same time production costs and prices minimized in the long run.

However, when firms seek to relocate from one region to another or, in what amounts to the same thing, when new funds for capital investment flow away from regions and industries which are less promising there is a fall in the demand for labor in the declining region and an increase in the demand for labor in the expanding region. But, higher unemployment rates in the declining region are only temporary since the resulting improvement in economic efficiency will generate greater employment overall. Those who live in the declining region or are employed in the declining industries obviously don't like this and certainly aren't interested in the economists' comments. The losers (whose loss is short-run) aren't above using government to interfere with the natural process of capital relocation. This is exactly what is happening.

Bills have been introduced by Senators Riegle (Democrat, Michigan) and Williams (Democrat, New Jersey) and Representative Ford (Democrat, Michigan) at the Federal level which would severely restrict the ability of a company to relocate from one part of the United States to another. Under these bills before a firm could move it would have to give a year's notice to the United States Secretary of Labor, local governments, and all affected unions. Public hearings would have to be held. If the firm is permitted to move it would have to re-settle all workers who wished to go (something which many firms do anyway although they have not been required to do so) and pay 85 percent of a year's salary and fringe benefits to those who do not. In addition the firm would have to pay (bribe?) local governments 85 percent of lost tax revenues. In effect the bills deprive firms' owners of their property rights.

As the Wall Street Journal puts it, "the purpose of these bills is to give politicians and unions property rights in the existing distribution of jobs and business activity... instead, the firm's assets are to be kept in place where they can be pillaged by the featherbedding of the antiquated work rules of union shops and forced to pay the bills run up by vote-buying politicians."

Similar legislations have been presented to the Michigan state legislature — an act which is not surprising given the power which the unions have over politicians in a state which has been systematically ravaged by government. Annual business taxes are so high in Michigan that it costs twice as much to employ a worker than it does in South Dakota. The father of one of my students at Hillsdale College has opened a branch of his manufacturing firm in South Dakota rather than expand his operation in his home state of Michigan due to this difference. Now that anti-relocation legislation is pending here, he may move out entirely before it's too late. The Michigan workers who lose may thank the brilliant politicians who are making it almost impossible to employ workers. If Riegle, Williams and Ford have their way at the Federal level, relocation will be foreclosed everywhere.

Two fundamental errors are at the base of these "stand still and be robbed" bills. First, only a tiny fraction of the job loss suffered by the "tax-belt" states, 1.5 percent between 1969 and 1972, has been caused by firms relocating while 98.5 percent was caused by the death and contraction of firms that stayed, according to studies by Professor Richard Machenzie of Clemson University. If these bills succeed, jobs will diminish rather than expand since economic death and contraction will be hastened.

The second error is the notion held by so many economically illiterate politicians that a firm is nothing more than a legal construction which can be bent, shaped, altered, pushed and shoved, etc., at the bidding of lawmakers with no unintended economic consequences which need be of any concern to anyone. Nothing could be further from the truth. A firm comes into existence for pure economic reasons, not legal reasons — a firm is nothing more than an instrument designed to reduce the cost of combining inputs to produce goods and services. Pass laws which reduce the efficiency of this activity and firms, especially small firms, will die.

How can such legislation be seriously considered? There is no basis in sound economic theory. It must have something to do with political power — power to reduce the personal economic freedom of the many for the benefit of the few. But no one can win if the Senators, the Congressman, and their union backers succeed. Everyone loses. How stupid! How tragic!

Holiday economics

What do Martin Luther King Jr. and Christmas Eve have to do with each other? Absolutely nothing — take it from Washington.

In the matter of the late civil rights leader, a move to make his birthday, January 15, a national holiday recently stalled in Congress. The primary argument of opponents was that adding yet another day off with pay to the public holiday list would be too costly, hitting the federal payroll for an estimated $194 million and private business for possibly billions.

In the matter of Christmas Eve, President Carter has declared Monday, December 24, a holiday for federal workers. Nothing new in this since every president since Dwight Eisenhower has given the multi-million bureaucracy a bonus day when Christmas falls just before or after a weekend.

No further comment.

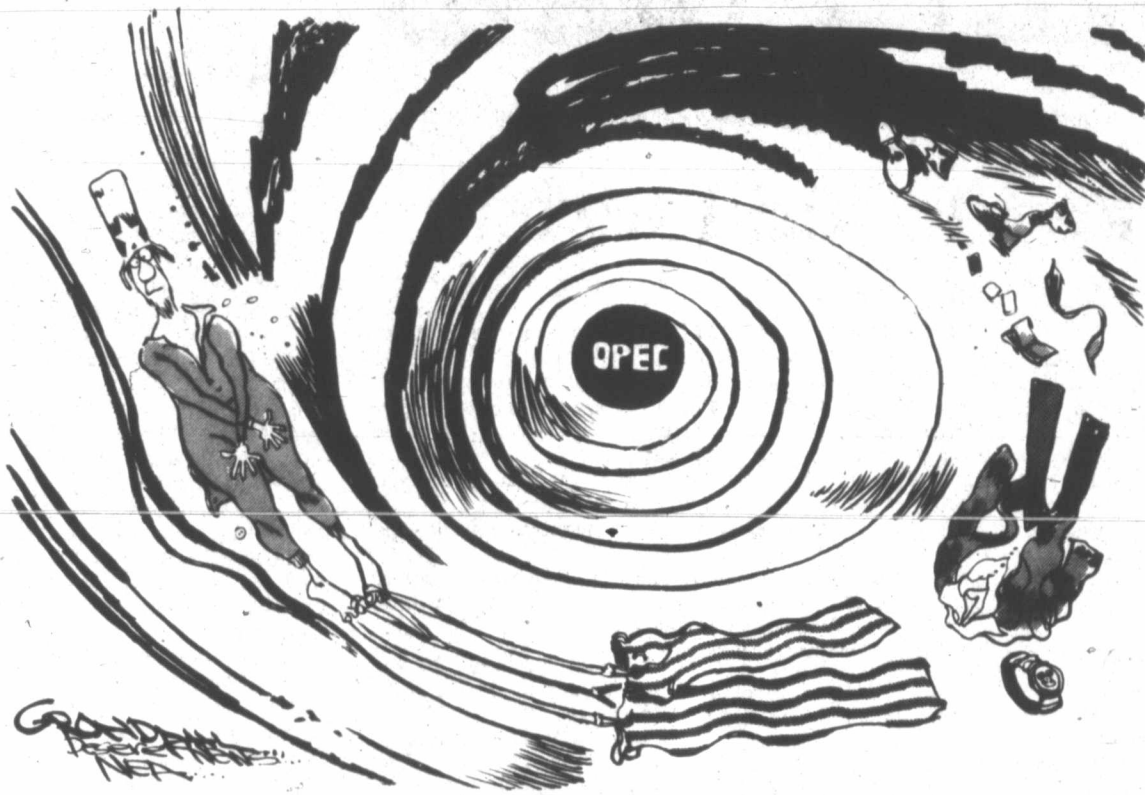

The end is not so near

A recent report from the science front suggests that things may be both worse and better than previously thought.

A new theory of physics has it that far from being indestructible, all matter is destined to decay. Ultimately its components — the protons and neutrons and all the other particles that form atoms — will simply vanish, leaving an empty universe.

E-Day is, however, still a long, long way off — on the order of 10,000 billion, billion years, which is much more remote than postulated in other theories of the life and death of the universe.

A lot of things can happen in that time. Iran might conceivably even get its revolutionary act together and come up with something resembling a government the rest of the world could deal with.

THE BLACK HOLE

Third world friends

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—The Third World Flea Market was a beehive of activity.

Bangambi from Gambia went over to Ahmad, the oil merchant, with his tin can. "May I have a quart of oil?"

"Of course, my friend," said Ahmad, "that will be $10 in gold."

Bangambi searched his pockets. "Last week it was $7."

"Ah," said Ahmad, "that was last week. But this week we have had to raise prices because the First World is trying to take advantage of us."

"But I am of the Third World," Bangambi said. "I can't afford to pay even $7 a quart."

"Well, you can blame it on the greedy Western merchants who are driving up the price every day. We Third World merchants have to stick together or the imperialists will have us by the throat."

"Excuse me, Ahmad, I don't mean to be rude, but it seems to me that YOU have us by the throat. If you and I belong to the same world, why can't you sell me your oil at a more reasonable price?"

"Have you gone mad, Bangambi? Do you realize that the colonialist power brokers would love that? If we charged you a lower price than we charged the West, they would look at you as a second-class citizen from the Third World. The only way you can get any respect is to pay the same price for oil as the major industrial dealers."

"I see your point, Ahmad, and forgive me for questioning your logic, but we are running out of gold very fast, and pretty soon we will be unable to buy even one cup of oil. Without oil won't the industrial dealers think even less of us?"

"Bangambi, all the oil merchants are aware of the hardship our prices are causing to our brothers in the Third World. We have agonized over it at length."

"And what conclusion did you come to?"

"We shouldn't put a cut-rate price on our friendship. If we charged you less than we did a Swede, you would think we were patronizing you. The fact that we make everyone pay the same shows we respect you as much as we do a West German imperialist."

"You are very kind to think of us as equals. But that doesn't seem to solve the problem of how we can pay for your oil. Perhaps since we are of the same world you could give me credit until I can get on my feet."

"Now you have made me angry, Bangambi. You think just because we're both brothers of the Third World that you can take advantage of our friendship? We have a strict cash-and-carry policy. Now do you want a quart of oil or don't you?"

Bangambi handed Ahmad his last $10 in gold. "What choice do I have?"

"Here is your oil. If you come back tomorrow bring $12 in gold."

"You're raising the price tomorrow?"

"We have to eat, too."

Bangambi picked up his quart of oil and started to walk away from the stall.

Ahmad said, "Are you coming to the meeting tonight?"

"What meeting?" Bangambi asked.

"We're having a rally to protest the exploitation of the Third World people by the racist, money-grubbing industrial merchants who are holding all of us in economic bondage. Your support means a lot to us."

'Neither party' the choice

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The good news for Republican party loyalists is that the GOP appears to have recovered from the damage inflicted by the Watergate scandal.

The bad news is that the party's support among rank-and-file voters still hasn't returned to the levels enjoyed by the GOP in the 1950s and early 1960s, when 25 to 30 percent of all voters identified themselves as Republicans.

Those figures dipped down to the 20-25 percent range in the late 1960s and early 1970s — but the party didn't reach the nadir of its popularity until late 1974, after Republican President Richard M. Nixon resigned in disgrace.

In a nationwide public opinion survey completed only four months after Nixon was forced out of office, only 18 percent of those questioned identified themselves as Republicans.

Market Opinion Research, the highly respected Detroit-based survey research firm that conducted the 1974 poll for the GOP, has just completed another survey that shows 22 percent of those questioned labeled themselves as Republicans.

More encouraging to party officials are the shifts in voter attitudes in response to questions about which of the two major political parties could best handle specific problems or issues.

For example, those surveyed in 1974 chose the Democrats by a 39-19 margin when asked which party would do the best job in controlling government spending. In the new poll, the situation is almost reversed, with the Republicans preferred by a 39-22 margin.

Public opinion on controlling inflation went from 48-12 Democratic in 1974 to 33-25 Republican this year. In the issue of reducing unemployment, the Democrats currently are preferred by a 39-18 margin, but in 1974 the split was a far wider 54-8 in favor of the Democrats.

Probably the most intriguing results of the just-completed survey illustrate the extent to which an increasingly sophisticated and cynical electorate believes neither party is capable of resolving contemporary problems.

The survey didn't offer "neither party" as a choice, but 18 percent volunteered that answer when asked which party could control inflation, while 21 percent gave the same answer on the issues of insuring adequate energy supplies and holding down taxes.

The drill went thataway

A sign of the energy-conscious times: Rustlers are thriving again in the Southwest, only they aren't interested in what's on the hoof, but what's in the ground.

The rush to seek new oil sources plus the expense and short supply of drilling equipment has created a black market for stolen drill bits, pipes and other parts, The Wall Street Journal reports. Whole rigs are being dismantled and carted off.

Industry and law authorities are developing a special "branding" system for equipment to thwart thieves, but it's a sticky proposition.

PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

By Joe Graedon

Cortisone is an amazing drug. It can provide almost miraculous relief for conditions as diverse as arthritis, poison ivy and asthma. However, unless it is used with respect and appropriate caution this "wonder" hormone can cause disastrous side effects. If ever there was a double edged sword, this is it.

Although we often speak of cortisone as if it were some unusual substance created on a chemist's laboratory bench, that is not the case. Rather, it is made by the outer layer or "cortex" of the human adrenal gland, hence the name cortisone or corticosteroid.

Steroid hormones are crucial for good health. They are responsible for regulating protein, carbohydrate and fat metabolism and they help maintain the proper balance between water and salts like sodium and potassium. In addition, cortisone seems to play an important role in enabling the body to deal with stress.

Since cortisone is a naturally occurring chemical and because it plays such a crucial role in maintaining good health you would think that it wouldn't cause any problems when used medically. But that's not the way it works.

When cortisone, or one of its chemical cousins like Hydrocortisone or Prednisone is given as a drug the dose is much higher than that which is produced by the human adrenal gland.

It is only at these elevated levels that patients experience real relief from their symptoms. And that relief can be dramatic. Not only can cortisone-type drugs reduce the inflammation of arthritis, bursitis and tendonitis but they can rapidly blast away the symptoms of allergy and asthma.

These drugs have also been extremely useful in treating lupus, ulcerative colitis, rheumatic fever and a number of unpleasant skin disorders like eczema or hives. They also suppress the immune system and reduce the likelihood of tissue rejection after organ transplants.

Despite all this, corticosteroids rarely cure anything. They merely provide temporary, symptomatic relief. Sometimes, that is all that's necessary. A short course with these drugs can buy you a little breathing time. Given an opportunity to recover, the body may do the necessary repair work and get you back on your feet in short order.

But cortisone is so effective that often there's a great temptation to keep using it indefinitely. And therein lies the rub. The drug may become a dangerous crutch. And it can have serious side effects when taken in large doses for long periods of time.

Not only does it suppress the immune system and make you more susceptible to infections, it can also lead to thinning of bones (osteoporosis) and muscle weakness. Other complications include stomach ulcers with bleeding, fluid retention, unattractive hair growth, acne, cataracts, and mood changes. Some people become nervous, experience insomnia and develop suicidal tendencies.

Before anyone accepts a prescription for a cortisone-type drug they should make sure they are fully aware of ALL the benefits and risks of treatment. And they should know exactly how long to take the medication.

Most important of all they should know how to stop the drug. Cortisone should never be discontinued abruptly since it can lead to failure of the adrenal gland. A slow tapering off over weeks or months under a doctor's supervision is essential.

Cortisone is both a "wonder" drug and a "dangerous" drug. When used carefully it can be a marvelous tool. When used carelessly it can be a disaster.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I will be straight with you. I am 13 and smoke pot, but I am no pothead. A dude has been telling me about angel dust. He says it gives you a super-cool high. Some kids I hang out with who do drugs say angel dust can mess up your head worse than acid. What is the story? Please don't use my name.

CHICAGO

DEAR CHICAGO: I have just completed some extensive research on drugs for my new booklet, "WHAT EVERY TEENAGER OUGHT TO KNOW," and I can tell you that angel dust is one of the most dangerous drugs on the street today. The following is a quote from my booklet:

PCP (OR ANGEL DUST)

"The boy woke up with a badly gashed hand. He found his mother in another room, stabbed to death. He had no memory of what had happened. But police said he had written on a wall with a red marking pen: 'I love my mother and didn't mean to kill her.'"

That is from the files of the New York police. They said the boy had smoked two 'nickel bags' of angel dust - phencyclidine, or PCP, also known as peace pills, white powder, superjoint, busy bee, hog, elephant tranquilizer, crystal and green tea.

By any name, it's a mind-destroyer, one of the deadliest drugs on the street. And, alarmingly, the most widely used among teenagers, who mistakenly think it's just another form of pot. It's not!

"That's the tragedy of the drug," says Dr. Mitchell Rosenthal, head of the Phoenix House drug rehabilitation program. "The country has gone soft on grass, so kids think angel dust is not dangerous, that it's just a kind of superjoint. It's readily available and cheap. Many who sell it aren't aware of how dangerous it is."

Angel dust brings on hallucinations, paranoia and violence. There is evidence that those who use it might suffer long-term brain damage.

DEAR ABBY: I have a solution for the woman whose husband had a habit of getting a little drunk on Saturday night and inviting everyone within earshot to come to his home on Sunday morning for Bloody Marys and brunch:

I ran into the same situation a number of years ago in Annapolis, Md.

We were at a club when Mr. B. started issuing invitations. Mrs. B. simply went to all within earshot and quietly inquired, "Have you seen my husband's calling card?" Then she handed us each one, upon which his name was in the usual place, but on the back it read: "Don't believe anything I say tonight unless you hear it from me in the morning!"

We all had a quiet chuckle. No one's feelings were hurt, and Mrs. B. was off the hook!

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Teens: The 1970s have seen an epidemic of teen pregnancies in America, with 1 million pregnancies occurring each year among 15- to 19-year-olds, and 30,000 among girls under 15. This means that 10 percent of U.S. teens get pregnant each year with 6 percent giving birth.

"Individual stories of these unwanted pregnancies may vary, but all those concerned have one thing in common — the need to resolve who is responsible for what no one wanted," observes writer Judith Wax of Seventeen magazine. "It's important, then, to re-examine the mistaken attitudes that can cause these unhappy circumstances, to ask such questions as 'What should a sexually active girl expect from her partner in the way of accountability?' and 'What does she owe herself?'"

It's the unfortunate truth that many teen-age boys feel pregnancy is entirely a girl's responsibility.

"Studies show that the vast majority of teen-age boys only pay lip service to responsibility for pregnancy," says Gail Cantor, a Planned Parenthood counselor of pregnant teens. "They may sincerely say they can be depended on if something goes wrong, but rarely do they stick around if a girl gets pregnant."

"Very few boys are sensitive to what a girl has at stake," confirms a male teen counselor. "There's little emotional understanding on their part. Most of the guys I talk to say things like, 'No matter how much I pressure a girl, she doesn't have to have sex with me.'"

Among those teens who have decided to have sex, studies show that the usage of contraception has increased in recent years. Nevertheless, teens still have a long way to go toward achieving responsible use of birth control.

Statistics show that although more teens are sexually active than ever before, more than half of America's teens have not had intercourse. In fact, more and more young women, realizing the risks involved, are discovering the right to say no. As one female college freshman says, "A lot of us have misunderstood what liberation is all about. I mean, what's liberated about always being available? I finally realized that I didn't owe anything to anybody but myself."

One of the ways a boy can be responsible is by trying to understand this "No" and respect it. And a girl who is responsible won't give one message when she really means another.

Overall, there's no single answer when it comes to questions concerning responsibility. But as Rhonda Alter, a former peer counselor at a youth health service, suggests, "One of the first responsibilities anyone has is to his or her growth as a person. In a good relationship, responsibility begins the first time you say hello to each other."

Dallas police puzzle death of sniper

DALLAS (AP) — A city park sniper who died in a hail of police gunfire as he drove toward a roadblock may have killed himself, officers said.

An autopsy was ordered today to determine the cause of death for Jose Angel Vargas, 29, of Dallas, described as an illegal alien by authorities.

Police spokesman Bob Shaw said Vargas began firing a .22-caliber rifle at random inside the large, busy park just south of downtown Sunday afternoon.

"He was shooting in all directions," said eyewitness Joe Christopher, who lives across the street from the park and called police with the shooting report. "It's just by the grace of God that he didn't hit somebody. There were a lot of people over there."

When police dispatchers received word of the shooting, a squad of tactical and patrol officers sped to the park and set up a command post about 100 yards from Vargas, said Shaw.

"I think the sniper fired somewhere in the neighborhood of a dozen shots after police went to the scene," Shaw said. "I don't know how many he fired before that."

Shaw said when officers established their command post, Vargas turned his rifle on them, and Christopher confirmed that account.

"The first cop that arrived pulled into the park, got out of his car and got on the speaker, telling the guy to come out," Christopher said. "The guy started shooting at him. I thought he (the officer) did a super job. He was very 'in command' of the situation."

Vargas then got in his car and drove toward the police roadblock, and tactical officer Ronnie Woods fired at him three times, Shaw said.

One bullet hit the car window, another struck Vargas in the abdomen, said Shaw. There was a third bullet in Vargas' head, but Shaw said it was not immediately known who fired it.

"He suffered a head wound, but there were powder burns on the forehead and he was holding a .38-caliber pistol in his hand," Shaw said. He said authorities had ordered an autopsy to determine whether Vargas died from a police bullet or one of his own.

Legislators 'back to school' in Mississippi capital

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Workmen have been scrambling for months to prepare the deserted red brick building in downtown Jackson for the thousands who will meet in its rooms and huddle in conferences in its halls. The Mississippi Legislature is going back to school.

When the gavels bang Tuesday for the opening of the 1980 session, the old Central High School will be the focus of Mississippi's government. Lawmakers will occupy the building for three years as the capitol one block away undergoes a $112 million restoration to its 1903 grandeur.

Bill Gartin, secretary of the Senate, said some former Central students are now legislators or capitol employees — and have found their new quarters unsettling.

"Some of them remark in jest that they feel like they're going back to school," Gartin said.

"It's along the lines of having an eerie feeling, like they're being sent to the principal's office."

The 122 members of the House will meet in the school auditorium. Upstairs, the 52 senators will conduct business in what used to be the library and adjacent rooms.

The Legislature purchased the school for $1.2 million, and spent another $1.2 million to remodel it. Paint cans and office furniture littered the halls as the deadline neared, but legislature officials said almost everything would be in working order for the opening day of the four-month session.

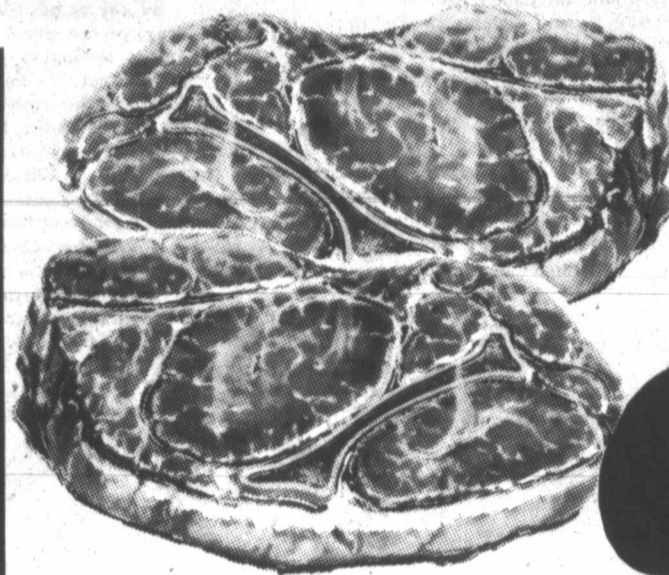

"We don't anticipate problems other than people walking over each other," said Bud Thigpen, director of the House Management Committee.

Woodstoves make comeback as status symbols

Once upon a time, owning a woodstove was all the evidence necessary to indicate you were a rugged individualist living in the backwoods.

Today, you could own a woodstove and be from anywhere. The energy crisis and the high cost of home heating have helped make woodstoves status symbols for suburbanites and city dwellers. The number of woodstoves has escalated to the hundreds.

And the look of stoves can vary widely. Some models closely resemble the old, 19th-century Franklin stoves. Others look like miniature furnaces.

The popularity of woodstoves is not hard to fathom when you realize they are far more efficient producers of heat from wood than fireplaces. The newer, airtight models are capable of heating a home efficiently without any additional source of heat.

On a scale of 100, for example, fireplaces could register at zero while a properly installed woodstove could be extracting as much as 80 percent of the total combustion energy available in the wood.

Fireplaces, it has been shown, actually draw already-heated, warm air from the room up the chimney to provide combustion for a burning log. To maximize the amount of heat delivered, it would be necessary to install an airtight woodstove.

For a family that already has a fireplace and a chimney, installing a woodstove is quite simple. It's merely a matter of buying the stove and hooking it up to the chimney.

If there is no fireplace, a stove must be installed with proper clearance from combustible walls and a chimney and flue must be built.

People who object to losing the pleasure of watching an open fire can opt for a combination stove and fireplace unit, known as a combi-stove, which, though airtight when the doors are closed, allows for viewing the fire through open doors when the occasion warrants it.

Among other advantages of a stove over a fireplace is that it uses fewer logs, burning for as long as 12 to 14 hours on one load of wood. A number of the newer models are capable of taking either wood or coal as fuel. And a few models convert to oil heat as well.

Many wood stoves are used primarily for heating; others are used primarily for cooking. But some stoves combine the two functions in one unit.

Prices for stoves vary widely, depending on the size of the unit, the ease of cleaning it, heating capacity and durability. One dealer estimated that the prices range from a little over $100 to about $1,000. The majority of stoves appear to be in the $300 to $600 range, he said, not including installation.

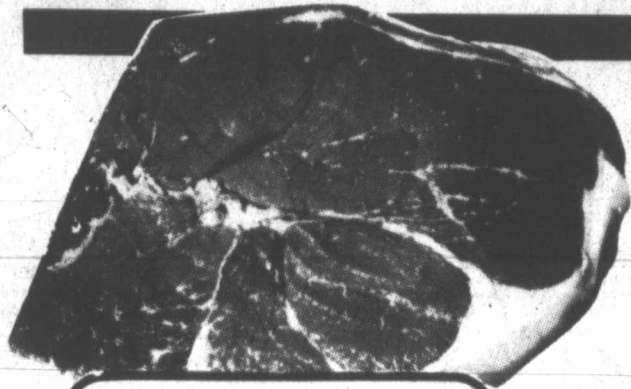

The question of whether to purchase a steel or a cast-iron stove is debated on both sides. Each material has its adherents. But most authorities agree that cast-iron stoves are longer-lasting and less subject to the warping that plagues steel stoves. In all cases, the better stoves are lined with firebrick to protect them from deformation in the case of steel or cracking in the case of cast iron.

Although there are many American woodstoves, this is one product line where imports have achieved major distribution. The European stoves, which often feature a raised design and bright, porcelain-enameled colors, have attracted many consumers.

No matter what kind of stove is used, the importance of proper chimney maintenance cannot be overemphasized. Creosote deposits are more likely to build up inside the chimney with woodstove operation than they are under normal fireplace usage. Consequently, switching to a woodstove is likely to lead to a fire hazard unless more attention is paid to maintaining a clean chimney.

Before making a final purchasing decision, it is wise to consult several retailers and to do some reading on your own.

One of a number of books on woodstoves is "Modern and Classic Woodburning Stoves," by Bob and Carol Ross (Overlook Press, 1976).

Controversial call stands, Houston falls to Pittsburgh 27-13

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The controversial call stands, the gutsy Houston Oilers have fallen, and maybe the Pittsburgh Steelers should just list the Super Bowl on their schedule.

"This WAS the Super Bowl as far as I'm concerned, Pittsburgh is going and they're going to win," Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini said Sunday after he had a potential touchdown pass erased by the officials and Pittsburgh won the American Football Conference title game, 27-13.

The actual Super Bowl comes Jan. 20 in Pasadena, Calif., when first-time-finalist Los Angeles meets a Pittsburgh team aiming for its fourth title in six years.

Can the Rams beat Pittsburgh? "Who knows? We haven't beaten them yet," said Terry Bradshaw, aware the Steelers are 0-3 against Los Angeles in the past decade.

Meanwhile, the question of whether Houston is the second best team in the game is a matter for debate — just like one of Pastorini's passes was until the referee settled things by way of the back judge, side judge and field judge.

"One thing for sure, the score stands," Steeler cornerback Ron Johnson said after the ruling that receiver Mike Renfro did not have control of the ball while inbounds on an apparent scoring pass.

The play came with Pittsburgh leading 17-10 in the third quarter of the title rematch between the two Central Division rivals.

"A TD would have changed the whole complexion of the game," said Renfro.

"There was clearly a lot of pressure on us at that point. They had gained the momentum," said Pittsburgh's Joe Greene.

Earlier, Bradshaw had a first-quarter pass stolen and returned 75 yards for a touchdown by safety Vernon Perry, who worked defensive magic in the Oilers' semifinal upset of San Diego.

Bradshaw countered with touchdown tosses to John Stallworth and Bennie Cunningham to give Pittsburgh a 17-10 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, Houston had first down at the Steeler six and a chance to tie.

Pastorini lofted the ball to Renfro in the corner of the endzone. "We had you on that one," Pastorini later told Johnson.

Renfro leaped and grabbed it. He had the ball as he tumbled beyond the endline. "I thought right away that he was out of bounds," said Johnson.

"I knew I was very close," said Renfro.

Line judge Donald Orr did not signal touchdown. Renfro jumped up to appeal. Orr signalled an incompletion.

After a conference among the officials, referee Jim Tunney upheld the ruling. He cited Orr's claim that Renfro was juggling the ball as he went out. Replays showed Renfro touched both feet inbounds, but they did not reveal whether he juggled the ball.

"He did not have possession," said Tunney.

The Oilers settled for a field goal, and Pittsburgh put the game away with a 10-point fourth quarter.

Bradshaw watched the Renfro play from the sideline.

"When I first saw it, I thought it was a touchdown," Bradshaw said. "But I didn't care. If they scored, we were gonna score again. They had to stop us — and they didn't."

On their first drive of the fourth quarter, the Steelers moved 55 yards before Matt Bahr kicked a 39-yard field goal. After Guido Merkens fumbled on the next Oiler series, Pittsburgh went 45 yards for a touchdown that came on a 4-yard run by Rocky Bleier with 54 seconds left.

The Oilers never threatened after the Renfro call.

"That was the key play right there," said Pastorini. "A touchdown there might have turned things around."

But Oiler Coach Bum Phillips didn't complain, just as he didn't here last year when Houston lost 34-5 to Pittsburgh in the same title game played in freezing rain.

"Even after I look at the films, I'm not going to blame the officials," he said. "They're human. We had 59 other minutes in the game to beat Pittsburgh and we didn't."

Pittsburgh held NFL-rushing leader Earl Campbell to 15 net yards on 17 rushes. He had just two net yards in the first half.

"I think the two best teams in the National Football League went at it today, no doubt about that," said Campbell, who sat out the previous week with a groin pull.

The Rams will have something to say about that.

"A lot of people have a tendency to say the Super Bowl was today," said Bleier. "That means there will be added pressure on the Steelers because we go in with a no-win situation. We're supposed to win."

Greene's view: "Getting there is not our goal ... if we're not successful in the Super Bowl — it was all for nothing."

Meanwhile, Greene admitted the taste of victory had been tainted by the controversial call.

"I was hoping it was a correct call, but I asked after the game and I was told ..." Greene said, his voice trailing off.

He didn't say who he asked but the inference was that he had been told the decision was in error.

"I can't take any satisfaction in that call. That's what I'm saying," said Greene. "What do we say? Do we say 'Things like that happen. I mean how do you explain that to the Oilers?'"

"Don't get me wrong. I feel damn good that we won. But I'm not in a celebrating mood yet. It'll come. I'll get happy — later."

LA Rams end six years of frustration

By DAN SEWELL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The battered Los Angeles Rams praised the Lord, passed the gauze and didn't stop until they had ended six years of frustration, leaving the Tampa Bay Buccaneers tending to their wounds at the end of a Cinderella season.

The upstart Bucs, who made it to their first National Football Conference title game with the same starting lineup that opened the season, lost all-Pro defensive end Lee Roy Selmon and linebacker Cecil Johnson to ankle injuries, quarterback Doug Williams with a torn bicep and defensive end Wally Chambers with a knee injury during a 9-0 loss to the Rams Sunday.

Severe injuries weren't enough to stop the inspired Rams.

"It's hard to conceive what we've accomplished here today," said end Jack Youngblood, who played despite a hairline fracture in his left leg.

"That's the most injuries we've had all year, but I would just say the Rams out-hit us," Bucs' Coach John McKay said. "We tried to knock a couple of them out, but they'd limp out and limp back in."

Placekicker Frank Corral booted second-quarter field goals of 19 and 21 yards and a fourth-quarter clincher of 23 yards — despite a hamstring pull suffered in his kicking leg last week. Halfback Wendell Tyler, who gained 86 yards rushing on 28 carries, played despite twisting a knee that underwent surgery last year.

"All year, everybody's been playing injured on this team. We've got a lot of guys who are going to need operations when this is over," said linebacker Rich Saul, who climbed out of a hospital bed with a raging fever the previous week to play in the Rams' 21-19 upset of Dallas.

The Rams, shedding themselves of a hard-luck chokers' image that dogged them through playoff losses the last six seasons, were subdued after the game.

"We've had so much frustration," Saul said. "We've had great teams who couldn't do it. Nobody thought this team had a chance, but we kept the faith in the Lord, and we feel he showed us what we should have realized before — that we couldn't do it on our own."

"The Lord wanted us to win," said wide receiver Preston Dennard. "In all those past years, he was just testing us. Today, he gave us our reward."

Youngblood sucked in breath sharply as he maneuvered through the locker room. Grimacing with pain, he said: "I think it's the type of thing where if you're strong enough you can block it out. I honestly believe the good Lord blessed me with some kind of healing power that let me play today."

"When you see Jack Youngblood making those big plays, it helps us. He just played as long and as hard as he could," defensive tackle Larry Brooks said as he watched Youngblood hobbling.

Third-year quarterback Vince Ferragamo, displaying veteran poise, hit Dennard for a 35-yard gain to the Tampa Bay 4 to set up a first-and-goal late in the first quarter, but the Rams settled for Corral's 19-yard field goal.

Olympics in 1980s, 'goodwill' reminder

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Another Olympic year, and Russian tanks and troops cross a border to invade another nation.

What else is new?

It happened in 1956 in the case of Hungary while Olympic flags were fluttering in far-off Melbourne, Australia. It happened again in 1968 in Mexico City in the case of Czechoslovakia while Olympians were mouthing "international goodwill" in Mexico City.

This time the scene is Afghanistan, thousands of Russian soldiers fighting Afghan rebels, even as Moscow is preparing to host the 1980 Games.

The question again arises: Will there be a 1980 Olympics in Moscow?

The answer: Very likely. The stale refrain of the Olympic hierarchy never changes: "There is no place in the Olympics for politics. Let the Games go on."

Politics? Who said this is politics? It's war. It's invasion. Not that Uncle Sam or anyone else has been free of such a violation. We're still bleeding, physically and emotionally, from Vietnam.

Maybe the West German delegate to the recent NATO conference was correct when he suggested an international boycott of the Moscow Games, adding: "If countries had done it in 1936 in Berlin we might have been spared World War II."

At that time, the Nazi madman, Adolf Hitler, had whipped the German people into a fanatical frenzy. His black-shirted disciples and goose-stepping legions were on the march. He already had begun his personal vendetta against German Jews, offending the sensitivity of the world.

Least of Hitler's offenses were his bleats about the superiority of the Aryan race and his official actions against Jewish athletes — throwing them by the thousands out of the German sporting clubs and depriving them of the chance to compete on the German team.

At a meeting of the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union on Nov. 21, 1933, the delegates voted to boycott the Games unless Germany changed its attitude toward Jewish athletes. Avery Brundage, then president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, concurred.

Later Brundage made a trip to Germany. He was dazzled by German order, prosperity and hospitality. He returned with the announced conviction that Germany was observing the letter and spirit of the Games: He gave his okay.

Controversy in America continued on the subject, however. The president of the AAU, Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney, a Catholic deeply troubled by the paganism of the Nazis, formed the Committee on Fair Play in Sports to protest Nazi atrocities.

Baseball training begins with cold war

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Spring training is only eight weeks away, but major league owners and the Players Association are locked in a cold war over a new basic agreement.

A memo outlining initial demands by the owners and the players, and made available to The Associated Press, indicates the two sides are about as far apart as the United States and Russia.

Imagine a player such as Claudell Washington earning the same pay as sluggers Jim Rice and Fred Lynn for their first five years in the major leagues?

That's one of the owners' proposals.

Imagine players with the right to demand to be traded after just three years with a club?

That's one of the players' demands.

Initial demands in labor negotiations often are exaggerated, but some by both club owners and the players this time around appear preposterous.

The owners have built a war chest, reportedly about $1.5 million. And the association, led by hard-nosed negotiator Marvin Miller, is showing no fear, determined to add to the many concessions obtained at the bargaining table in the 1970s.

No one in baseball wants to talk about a strike, such as in 1972, or a lockout, but more than a few club executives are worried about a possible shutdown of spring training camps unless progress is made in negotiations.

Miller told The AP in a telephone interview that the 12-page memo he sent to the union's members, generally is a report on a meeting of the association's executive board Dec. 4-5 in New York while baseball held its annual winter meeting in Toronto.

"The minutes were mailed to about 1,000 association members, so they hardly can be considered confidential or secret," Miller said.

Miller said he didn't think it "appropriate" for him to release a copy of the memo. However, The AP gained access to a copy through another source.

Most of the memo, mailed by Miller's office Dec. 14, consists of a report on various discussions by individual club player representatives at the executive board meeting. However, it also contains what the association claims are both the initial demands of it and the owners.

Rose, Wilson combine for Shrine Game

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Brigham Young's All-American quarterback, Marc Wilson, and little-known Joe Rose of California proved to be a winning combination in the 55th East-West Shrine Game.

Wilson, who set several national collegiate passing records this past season, hit on 19 of 29 attempts Saturday to help the West win 20-10.

His main target was Rose, the second-team All-Pacific-10 tight end from Cal.

With many National Football League scouts watching, Rose snared seven passes for 102 yards, earning the game's Outstanding Offensive Player award.

Lineman Jacob Green of Texas A&M was named the top defensive player. He made 11 tackles, and West teammate Brad Vassar, a linebacker from Pacific, was credited with 13.

One of the biggest crowds in East-West Game history, 71,000, was at Stanford Stadium.

Strong defensive all-star games just aren't that exciting and Texas tackle Steve McMichael and Oklahoma State linebacker John Corker for the West and Michigan linebacker Ron Simpkins and Oklahoma linebacker George Cumby for the East did their jobs well.

McMichael, who won the game's most valuable defensive player award, made unassisted stops on the East offense nine times and was in on five other tackles.

He and Corker, who has six unassisted and five assisted stops, helped restrict Oklahoma's Heisman Trophy winning running back Billy Sims to just 57 yards rushing, allowing Auburn's Joe Cribbs only 56 and Dennis Mosley of Iowa 29.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — No more Mister Nice Guy.

Winston-Salem Coach Billy Hayes decided to play it that way for the second half of the Black College All-Star Bowl, and almost brought his East football team to victory.

Hayes explained that it was a question of priorities, not players. After the West team held on for a 27-21 overtime victory Saturday.

The East roared back from a 9-0 halftime deficit, scored 21 points in the second half, and put the game into overtime.

But a 2-yard touchdown plunge by Alcorn's Otis Womley 12:15 into overtime brought the West victory before fewer than 5,000 spectators in the 72,000-seat Louisiana Superdome.

HONOLULU (AP) — To the fans, Saturday's 34th annual Hula Bowl, in which the East topped the West 17-10, was not the exciting matchup of top senior collegiate all-stars they had expected. And four players are much to blame.

Sports briefs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The crack guard of the San Antonio Spurs, James Silas, says he prefers playing on the road rather than at home.

"At home, the fans expect you to be perfect," Silas said. "On the road they don't expect too much. If talent is equal, there is much more pressure on the home team. I like road games. It's easier to get rest on the road. When I'm home, everyone comes by and there are always so many things to do."

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Tom Jones of Tulsa, Okla., was the pacesetter among 27 players who successfully completed the PGA Tour Fall Qualifying School at the Waterwood National Country Club.

Jones had a 73-hole score of 288 to top a field of 120 pro aspirants. He was the only man to post two sub-par rounds in the four days of competition, scoring 70s on the first and third rounds.

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — When Arizona State meets Utah State in football, spectacular plays are a dime a dozen... well, almost.

In their meeting last Oct. 27, quarterback Mark Malone of Arizona State ran 98 yards for a touchdown, which put him in a tie for fifth place for longest in major college history. But Utah State quarterback Craig Bradshaw passed 96 yards to Fred Fernandez for a score. And then Guy McClure of Utah State got off a punt that sailed 75 yards.

ELMHURST, Ill. (AP) — Linebacker Rick Green of Elmhurst College is a paradoxical punter.

On the football field last fall, the 6-2, 215-pound senior was a ferocious tackler who shaved his head for a more formidable appearance. But off the field, he had a 3.5 average in his studies and he did volunteer work in a hospital in Ottawa, Ill. His specialty was physical therapy.
