Iran militants celebrate: hostage mark 100th day

By The Associated Press

As some 50 American hostages marked their 100th day in captivity today, tens of thousands of frenzied Iranians celebrated the first anniversary of the nation's revolutionary regime with a victory parade through Tehran. The crush was so great a grandstand collapsed and an unspecified number of persons were injured, the state radio said.

Tehran radio said roads leading to the parade route were filled with people as far as the eye could see, many of them chanting "Allah-o-Akbar" — God is great. Some of them burned incense. Many Iranians were so excited they stormed into the line of march and the radio appealed for them to move back onto the sidewalk. President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr stood in for ailing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on the reviewing stand. He was joined by Khomeini's son Ahmad and Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat as the parade got under way, led by a contingent from the military officers' school, the radio said.

The military parade in Tehran and other marches across the country marked the anniversary of the forced resignation of Shahpour Bakhtiari, the last prime minister appointed by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Khomeini had been scheduled to preside over the parade, but Tehran Radio said his doctors advised him not to attend. The 79-year-old leader of the revolution is still in the hospital, convalescing from a heart attack Jan. 23.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev sent Khomeini an anniversary message stressing the Kremlin's desire for "good-neighborly relations" with Iran, and the Foreign Ministry said the Soviet ambassador reassured Iran that it faced no danger from the Soviet Union. The Soviet news agency Tass said Western reports of increased Soviet military activity along Iran's northwestern border were "slanderous."

Meanwhile, a group of visiting Americans met Sunday with the militants holding the U.S. Embassy and reported a "good exchange of views." But they said they were not allowed to see the hostages.

Some write letters home....

By The Associated Press

"Our hands are tied...Bright lights are kept burning all night...It is almost impossible to sleep."

"Thought I'd send you a line to let you know I'm fine...Have a Merry Christmas and I hope to be home soon."

"We still cannot speak to each other — which is the most unbearable restriction, given the need for human contact."

The letters from the hostages held in Tehran, Iran, tell of despair and of hope. Of feeling abandoned and of feeling comforted.

Some of the messages to family, friends, clergymen and newspapers talk of politics. Some seem genuine. Others, say the recipients, are forced, strange, not like the people they knew.

Robert C. Ode, at 64 the oldest of the hostages, wrote several letters which were received by, among others, President Carter and The Washington Post.

"We feel that we have been abandoned by our government and the American people," wrote Ode, a retired foreign service officer from Falls Church, Va., who was serving temporarily in the embassy when it was seized 100 days ago.

CELEBRATION and cheers marked the mood today in Iran as Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, third from right, raises arms with Ahmad Khomeini, center, son of the Ayatollah, and Iran's President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr in a Tehran street. They were cheered by thousands at a parade celebrating the first anniversary of the revolution. (AP Photo)

Carter carries Maine caucus vote

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — President Carter has beaten Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in their first New England contest, but the challenger claimed satisfaction in second place and his main allies said today that in defeat he had gained momentum for the New Hampshire primary.

The president's men scoffed at the claim, but said it will be difficult to duplicate their Maine victory in New Hampshire's presidential primary election two weeks from Tuesday.

The victory Carter scored Sunday is sure to be an asset in that campaign, for all Kennedy's claims that the president didn't match his expectation in Maine's Democratic town meetings.

"It's clear that the momentum is with Senator Kennedy," said Maine Gov. Joseph Brennan. "We feel very strongly that Senator Kennedy now has momentum to go to New Hampshire and do very well."

He based that claim on the fact that Kennedy did better in Maine than in his landslide loss to Carter in Iowa three weeks ago.

Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III of Massachusetts said he is confident Kennedy will improve on his Maine showing in the New Hampshire primary. He said Carter's momentum had been blocked.

"I happen to think we stopped a train here, a fast-moving train," said O'Neill, son of the House speaker.

Carter gained 45 percent of the Maine vote to Kennedy's 39 percent, with results from about 50 Democratic town caucuses still to be tallied.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. ran third, with 14 percent of the vote, and said that represented a takeoff for his campaign.

But Democratic state Chairman Harold Pachos said it appeared that Brown fell short of the 15 percent required to qualify a Democratic candidate to share in delegates. He said that meant the state convention delegates selected in Brown's name might be released and thus could join either Kennedy or Carter. That would not happen until the state convention May 16 but it could affect the apportionment of Maine's 22 presidential nominating votes.

Kennedy sought to minimize his loss, describing the outcome as a standoff and saying Carter had been expected to win handily.

Handily is in the eye of the beholder. The margin was handy enough for Carter's spokesmen, who emphasized the fact that it was gained in the home region of the senator from Massachusetts.

Still, Kennedy avoided disaster by keeping it close — something he couldn't do in the season's first contest in Iowa, on Jan. 21. Carter won there two-to-one.

"For us, in a way, it was a fight for survival," said Peter Meade, Kennedy's Maine campaign coordinator.

And Kennedy did achieve that goal, surviving to challenge Carter again in New Hampshire.

"So we will head to New Hampshire and all the other states, confident of what the outcome will be," Kennedy said.

Carter, at Camp David, Md., thanked his supporters and workers for the victory, and said he was sorry he hadn't been able to campaign. "I regret that international circumstances made it impossible for me to travel to Maine during this campaign," he said.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter almost certainly will remain in Washington throughout the New Hampshire campaign.

Kennedy issues almost daily demands that Carter join the campaign and debate him, but Powell said the president's absence is an asset to the challenger.

"He's sort of got the field to himself with the president locked up in the White House," Powell said.

He said the loss was a major blow to the Kennedy campaign because it came in the senator's home region.

"We've all known all along that a win by Carter in Kennedy's home court would be a major setback for the loser," Powell said. He said the same rule would apply were Kennedy to defeat Carter in a southern primary.

"He went into the back yard of Sen. Kennedy and he won big," said Robert S. Strauss, Carter's national campaign manager.

And Powell added that if Kennedy "can't win here, when he has everything going for him...then where do you win?"

He stopped short of suggesting that the challenger quit the race, saying he wouldn't presume to tell Kennedy what to do.

With 434 of the 486 Maine town caucuses tallied, the Democratic State Committee reported this outcome:

Carter, 13,660 votes, or 45 percent, and 870 local delegates, or 46 percent of the delegates selected so far.

Kennedy, 12,041, or 39 percent, and 752 delegates, or 40 percent.

Brown, 4,404, or 14 percent, for 252 delegates, or 13 percent.

Undecided, 502, or 2 percent, for 27 delegates, or 1 percent.

Grand jury will look at 'scam' results

By Associated Press

Sixteen political figures from Louisiana and Texas are going before federal grand juries this week to discuss the FBI's so-called Brilab investigation — a "scam" involving alleged kickbacks to influence insurance purchases by government agencies in four states.

Among those called to testify are Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards and Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton. Not all the public officials are believed to be targets of the investigation.

Brilab is the FBI code name for an undercover investigation, or scam, in which agents used the services of a twice-convicted California insurance consultant to make bribe money available to labor and government officials responsible for insurance contracts, sources said.

Clayton has acknowledged receiving "a stack of $100 bills," but he denied it was a bribe. An Oklahoma state Senate leader also was given $5,000 from agents posing as insurance company representatives.

The investigation also involves an attempt to obtain more favorable immigration treatment for reputed New Orleans crime syndicate boss Carlos Marcello, the New York Times said today.

Brilab is the second major undercover FBI investigation to surface within two weeks. Both have been reported before any charges were leveled by the government — drawing sharp criticism.

"We're kind of in the first stages of McCarthyism," said Senate Ethics Committee member Richard Pryor, D-Ark., whose home state is among those involved in Brilab.

The other probe, called Abscam for Arab scam, allegedly involves eight members of Congress as well as businessmen and politicians in several states who took money from undercover FBI agents purporting to buy influence — for special immigration treatment and investments — on behalf of Arab investors.

Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, a Republican presidential candidate, said Sunday on the ABC News program "Issues and Answers" that the Abscam disclosures are a "searing sword in my side," raising questions from voters about the integrity of all members of Congress. Baker has not been implicated.

Meanwhile, Edwards acknowledged over the weekend that he has been called to appear this week before a grand jury in New Orleans. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Fitzmorris and 11 other state officials also have been summoned, the Baton Rouge Sunday Advocate reported. All deny involvement in Brilab.

Afghan rebels retake towns

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan rebels retook two towns in the rugged mountains of Badkhashan Province in northeastern Afghanistan and battled the Soviets for control of the provincial capital and another town, a Pakistani newspaper reported.

The Moslem insurgents recaptured the towns of Tashkan Arbo and Bagh in bitter fighting, and seized arms, ammunition and food from fleeing Soviet troops, the newspaper Jang reported Sunday.

It said the rebels also laid siege to the provincial capital of Faizabad, 200 miles northeast of Kabul, and were fighting for Zebak, 60 miles to the southeast.

There was no independent confirmation of the fighting in the remote mountain province, a key stronghold of the rebels who are fighting a 21-month-old war against a string of pro-Soviet communist governments in Kabul, the national capital.

The Soviet Union has poured an estimated 90,000 troops into Afghanistan since Christmas Day to crush the rebellion and prop up the latest Marxist strongman, Babrak Karmal, who was installed in a Soviet-engineered coup Dec. 27.

The Kremlin renewed charges Sunday that the United States was responsible for the fighting in Afghanistan.

"It is not fortuitous that now they are talking loudly in Washington about bringing together the (rebel) gangs smuggled into Afghanistan and turning them into some sort of an army," the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda said.

Zbigniew Brzezinski's trip to Pakistan, his talks with Pakistani authorities and backstage collusion with Peking — all this clearly shows they intend, despite everything, to broaden their thrust into Afghanistan," Pravda commentator Yuri Zhukov wrote, adding: "Facts go to show that they in Washington do not want to part with their designs."

"As for the Soviet Union," Zhukov wrote, "it retains its usual self-control, watching the development of events and leaving open the door to a return of common sense" in U.S. policy.

Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, visited Pakistan last week to discuss U.S. economic and military aid for the nation, which feels threatened by the Soviet thrust along its northwestern border.

Kremlin press reports made no direct mention of Carter administration claims last week that the Soviet Union may soon begin a "cosmetic" withdrawal of some of its troops from Afghanistan.

Pravda repeated its contention that Soviet troops will be called home when foreign "interference" ceases, but it indicated the Russians do not foresee an early end to the Moslem rebellion.

Donald McHenry, America's U.N. ambassador, arrived in Kuwait Sunday on the first stop of a seven-nation Mideast tour in which he said he would work "with other U.N. members...to secure the fundamental rights for all peoples to achieve their religious, cultural and political rights without any foreign intervention." The statement apparently referred to the Soviet drive in Afghanistan.

Down in Texas we call it 'chew'

By Sheila Eccles
Of The Pampa News

Men have waxed lyrical messages about Texas from the earliest memories of cowboys, bandits, rangers, and miles of land, land, land. One slogan most colorfully displays the character of this land: "Don't walk barefoot in Texas."

Not referring to the sage and brush, the verse refers to the accumulated miles of natural spittle. Now chewing and dipping are not exactly a Texas tradition, but they are regarded as more a pleasurable occupation on a rainy, sunny, dark, foggy or any other type of day.

Fifty years ago it was known as "Chaw" but thanks to the efforts of men like Terry Bradshaw and his muscular cronies, it has become known as "Chew" and definitely respectable. That little pouch just seems to make Terry's day, and who can argue that Terry hasn't had some good days.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan has some ideas on the real treasures of a good tobacco. "It isn't the chewing that makes it pleasurable, it is what you are doing at the time," he said. The large, well used spittoon in his office marks the truth of what he says, or nearly marks it.

Jordan explained, "You could always tell just what a man did by the kind of chew he used. Those cable tool drillers chew one kind, and cowboys chew 'plug,' the old mule skinner chewed 'Brown Mule,' pipe liners chew 'Mail Pouch,' and cigarette smokers are thumpers."

One unidentified 19 year old Texan admitted to trying "Skool" herself. "I liked it, but it just didn't look nice, rather tacky," she said. "But it gave me something to do while I was driving," she added.

Texans seem to like having all the necessary accoutrements to their dipping and chewing. A wide range of these necessities are available to the tobacco connoisseur. A look into the nearest western wear store will provide every type of spittoon one would care to own.

Pampa's best seller is a plastic model priced at $10.95 and a bargain for what it offers. Not an ordinary spittoon mind you, this one offers a weight in the bottom to prevent those messy highway accidents, a metal screw, also in the bottom, allows it to be screwed to a dashboard, bicycle, skateboard, motorcycle, or rocking chair.

More extras in this $10.95 model include a special cardboard adhesive for those who can't make up their minds where they want to chew or dip. It is made of easily cleanable plastic, and the bowl itself has an inverted funnel, just in case. The bright round lid hides a compartment for deodorizing the vapors. This lid is twofold in purpose, it also can be used to hold a beverage can. A bargain indeed!

Brass spittoons have the corner on status symbols for the chew and dip crowd. The right size brass can cost $30 or more, but just try to keep the Mrs. flowers out of it.

Never forgetting the ever-present good-old beverage can type of spittoon, retail has found a way to glamorize even this last vestige of primitive chewing.

Yup, there is an accessory available that fits over the top of any beverage can and makes a colorful, exciting, simple to use, virtually spillproof, quick and easy to clean, $3.00 plastic wonder, so the advertisement says.

The way it looks, anyone can chew or dip, but that just isn't so. You must be able to delicately balance the spoon of your choice. Of course, running and tennis are out. Pickup trucks can be driven.

There is one sure way to tell a tried and true dipper, "ring around the pocket" yes indeed, those rings are dead giveaways. Now some people have reason to believe that those clothing articles have been washed and ironed with the tell-tale can in place. A good idea, but hard to prove.

A rumor around town intimates that some men of means and profession have taken up the pleasures of the chew. Though also hard to prove, there seems to be an extra inch in the jaws of some of Pampa's finest.

Wife waits for hostage husband

WAITING WIFE, Elisa Moeller, whose husband, Staff Sgt. Michael Moeller, is one of the American hostages in Iran, holds the family's Siamese cat as she talks of her husband and her faith that he and the other hostages will soon be freed. (AP Photo)

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Bright yellow ribbons are tied to the trees outside an apartment where a woman and two little girls wait for their Marine sergeant husband and father, held prisoner in Iran.

Elisa Moeller wasn't a hometown girl six months ago when she brought 4-year-old Celeste and 2-year-old Lindsey to Caruthersville while Staff Sgt. Michael Moeller, a nine-year veteran, went to Tehran.

But when word of the U.S. Embassy takeover by Iranian militants reached the Missouri Bootheel on Nov. 4, the 7,500 people in Caruthersville took it personally because of the Moellers.

"What would you do?" asked Ralph Clayton, editor of the river town's two weekly newspapers. "Just because she didn't grow up here doesn't mean we can ignore her or what the Iranians are doing to her husband."

In six years of marriage, the Moellers had never been separated for more than a month or so. Mrs. Moeller was with her husband in Karachi, Pakistan, where he was assigned to embassy duty until last summer. But because of tensions in Tehran, they decided that she and the children would return to the United States.

Although she grew up in New Mexico, Mrs. Moeller decided to move to Caruthersville, where her mother, Grace Nasci, had been living for two years. They moved into a neat townhouse apartment on the town's west side.

The Rev. Ralph Currie, pastor of the Presbyterian church Mrs. Moeller attends here, was at a meeting in Arkansas when he heard about the hostages.

"I called her as soon as I heard about Michael and I tried to offer my sympathy and support," Currie said. That call set off a chain reaction of prayer, petition campaigns and offers of assistance for the young Marine wife.

A surgeon who belongs to Currie's church helped Mrs. Moeller find a job as a surgical technician in a nearby hospital. Other townspeople offered to mind her children, shop for her or help out in other ways.

Last month, the Caruthersville Jaycees began the yellow ribbon campaign, based on the popular Tony Orlando song of a few years back in which a returning prisoner watches for a yellow ribbon tied to an oak tree as a sign of his girlfriend's love.

Mayor B.F. Rogers presided when yellow ribbons were tied around trees at the Pemiscott County Courthouse, where more than 700 townspeople showed up for a rally Jan. 19. Yellow ribbons soon showed up on trees, mailboxes and telephone poles all over town.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR READERS: Recently I published a poem sent to me by the participants of the Long Beach, Calif., Senior Day Center. Its message, I thought, was worthy of sharing with my readers. The essence, and closing lines, are: "Just give me one flower today, pink or white or red. I'd rather have one blossom now, than a truckload when I'm dead."

The author was unknown, and I asked if any of my readers knew who had written it.

Are you ready for a random sample of my mail today?

DEAR ABBY: I read the poem in the Macon Telegraph News, and recognized it immediately as the poem written by a prominent Macon, Ga., dentist. He was R. Holmes Mason, now deceased 84 years. Dr. Mason was dedicated to his family, church and profession.

E.H.: MACON, GA.

DEAR ABBY: The author of the poem you published in the Los Angeles Times was written by my brother, Herman B. Stokes, now deceased. The name of the poem is "A Rose." It was set to music by Hallmark about 10 years ago. I was deeply touched when I read it.

THELMA STOKES: L.A., CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I read in the Tulsa Tribune the poem whose real title is "A Flower for the Living." It was written many years ago by my mother, Lela Snider, who lives in Okmulgee, Okla. She sent it to her sister, Mrs. Myrtle Acoek, who lives in Ramon, Calif. Myrtle had copies made and sent it to her friends. Since then we have seen it published several times, always with "Author Unknown." My mother is 76, has had many strokes and is confined to a wheel chair. She never misses your column. Her eyes are bad, so she has someone read it to her.

AUTHOR'S PROUD DAUGHTER: TULSA

DEAR ABBY: My husband noticed the poem in your column in the State Paper of Columbia, S.C. The version you printed is slightly different than the original, titled: "Kindness Through Life." It was written by Austin K. Snyder. According to my husband, Snyder was a professor at the U.S. Naval Academy, and this poem appeared in "Shipmate," a publication of the U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association in Sept., 1977.

VIRGINIA MCMILLAN: MYRTLE BEACH, S.C.

DEAR ABBY: You can quit hunting for the author of that poem printed in the Sioux City Journal. The correct title is, "I'd Rather," and it was written by William Nick Gikas. He was a 32nd Degree Mason who lived in Everett, Wash. Dad, who is now 91, is a Mason and Shriner. He subscribed to the lodge publications, and Mother was always cutting out poems and putting them in her scrapbook. That poem has been in Mother's scrapbook for years.

MRS. ARTHUR L. SCHMIDT, SIOUX CITY, IOWA

DEAR ABBY: In the mid-40's I cut out the poem you ran in the Pocatello Idaho Tribune. The title is "The Stained Glass Window." And it was written by Anna Mae Armstead, a local lady.

W. A. OGLE: POCATELLO, IDAHO

DEAR ABBY: The poem you printed has been around for as long as I can remember and I am in my 60s. It was written by none other than the beloved, homespun, folksy, philosopher-poet, Edgar Guest. I am sure I saw it in a published collection of Edgar Guest's poems. I don't have the book anymore because I foolishly let someone borrow it, and I can't for the life of me remember who.

C.C.K.: CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: The poem you published was written by my mother, Mrs. Nelia Thompson, in 1961. She called it "Life's Roses." It was never copyrighted, but she did send copies to several of her friends, and the next thing we knew it was printed in a magazine with "author unknown" under it. My mother died in 1966, and it always hurt me that my mother never got credit for her beautiful poem.

MRS. DORIS BRANSBY

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a postcard which I have had since 1930. On it is the poem you ran with "author unknown."

The postcard was "designed" by four nobles of Medinah Temple (Shriners) who were called the Four Horsemen, namely, Billy Jackson, Charley Kuhn, Charley Wackerhagen and Fred Raven.

"Losing Hair? Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc. will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail.

Q. About 12 years ago I started taking Valium for nerves. I have read recently of the dangers of this drug, so six weeks ago I stopped taking the pills—cold.

My doctor says no one could have been addicted on the amount I was taking — 5 mg three times a day. But the severe reaction I had on stopping makes me think I was addicted. My hands shook, and I had no appetite. I've had a terrible time sleeping and I'm still very nervous.

Is there some way to avoid these unpleasant reactions and still get off Valium?

A. Addiction is a term medical scientists try to avoid because it has very emotional overtones and does not distinguish between psychological and physical dependence.

Doctors used to think that Valium produced physical dependence only in very high doses over many years. But recently a number of cases similar to yours have been cropping up in the medical journals, alerting us to the possibility of physical dependence of Valium even when the person is taking normal doses.

The symptoms you experienced are typical of the withdrawal reactions some people have had going "cold turkey" off Valium. Other common symptoms include nausea or vomiting, numbness, faintness, weakness, changes in mood and lack of energy. Some folks experience severe headaches or sudden and dramatic weight loss.

By now, doctors prescribing Valium (or any other anti-anxiety agents like it) should be aware that this drug can produce physical dependence, with potentially serious withdrawal reactions.

Dr. Richard Crout, director of the Bureau of Drugs for the Food and Drug Administration, has stressed that this can occur at therapeutic doses and warns that it is more likely in people taking the drug for longer than four months.

Slow and steady, then, is the way to discontinue Valium. Cutting the dose only 30 or 50 percent a week over six weeks or so should minimize the risks of an unpleasant reaction.

In your case, this would have meant skipping one of your 5 mg tablets every other day the first weeks, and going to two tablets a day during the second week. After five or six weeks you could be down to half a tablet daily, and eventually drop it entirely.

It's always a good idea to increase exercise and outdoor activities while gradually decreasing the drug dose. Learning other ways to cope with stress, such as mental relaxation techniques or biofeedback, is also smart.

With these precautions, others trying to get off Valium should not have to suffer, as you did, the very real consequences of abrupt withdrawal.

Q. When I was a child, we never had any seasoning in our food at home except for a little salt and pepper. Lately, I've been eating food with Accent in it every day. I get a lightness in my head and feel I want to clamp my jaws shut. Is there any chemical in the seasoning which could cause this?

A. Yes, indeed. Accent is one brand of monosodium glutamate (MSG), a chemical used to enhance the flavor of foods.

It is the principal active ingredient of the seasweed used for centuries in Japan to spark the taste of all kinds of foods. It is also a natural component of soy sauce.

Because the substance is used liberally in Oriental cuisine, the reaction has been nicknamed "Chinese restaurant syndrome."

The symptoms of an MSG reaction include tightening of face and neck muscles, giving the sensation of pressure, burning sensations throughout the body, headache, chest pains and nausea.

MSG is found not only in Chinese food, but also in many processed foods and, of course, in Accent and other flavor enhancers.

If you banish the flavorizer — and read labels carefully to avoid eating it — the symptoms you describe should disappear.

DR. LAMB

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm writing to you in desperation. To put it plainly, I can't remember I am serious. I can't. I've gone to writing things down. At times I say, "Oh, I won't forget that," but I do. I would be too embarrassed to go to my doctor. He would probably snicker anyway. My husband becomes perturbed with me. I am young and on no medication. What can I do?

DEAR READER — You refrained from telling me what your age is but it really doesn't matter because people can have memory problems at any age. It is not necessarily a sign of old age. That's why we have to be careful about deciding that an older person who has trouble remembering things has this problem simply because of age. There are a lot of reasons for such difficulties.

Since we do see this rather commonly in people as they get older, though, we tend to associate it with age. I included quite a bit of information on this problem in The Health Letter number 14-2, The Aging Mind. I am sending you a copy that has some suggestions in it about what you can do in reference to your memory. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station,

New York, NY 10019.

Some people seem to be able to remember things more easily than others but a lot of this is training. If you've never learned to play the piano, you may not do very well if you sit down to play. The same thing is true in training the memory. If you haven't made any real effort to train it, it may not work so well.

I often think one of our best examples of this is some of our great musicians who have lived to quite old age and still are able to remember and play musical scores with unequalled skill. That's because they trained their memories and continued to work the memory system so it continues to function for them for years.

I would suggest that you start a regular program of exercising your mind and developing your memory. Start learning to remember lists of things. I have included in The Health Letter I've sent you the idea of using word associations. Start memorizing poems, quotations or other things. Try to picture things as you see them. In fact, you might be wise to go by the bookstore and pick up a good book on memory training.

I do think it's very important for people to start training their memory when they're young. The higher the development of their memory and mental faculties, the longer they will serve them well as they get older.

I often think one of our best examples of this is some of our great musicians who have lived to quite old age and still are able to remember and play musical scores with unequalled skill. That's because they trained their memories and continued to work the memory system so it continues to function for them for years.

Basically, the mind is a lot like muscles and it can be trained in almost everyone. Sometimes it's easier to train the mind of some people than it is others, just as it's easier for some people to learn to become a skilled musician than it is for others.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm grounded because of my low grades. I don't want to lose my boyfriend so I sneak out with him whenever I can.

I really do love my parents and I want them to trust me. If I should get caught, do you think I'd lose this trust? What I mean is mom and dad were young once and they would understand. Wouldn't they? — Holly, De Kalb, Ill.

Holly: I'm very aware of De Kalb High School. I did my student teaching in physical education there about 18 years ago. I'm sure things haven't changed in some respects. Teens still have grade problems and parents "just don't understand."

And let me assure you that if they discover you're sneaking out with your boyfriend they won't understand. May I ask how you expect your parents to trust you when you blatantly defy their rules?

Dr. Wallace: I would like to comment on your answers to Kelly from Newark, Ohio, and Susie of San Rafael, Calif. They both were asking about popularity and you said that teens were popular because of their personal traits.

Well, that sounds good but at my high school, all the popular girls are good looking and into cheerleading and student government while the popular boys are cute athletes.

I'm not saying you're wrong but maybe we have a different idea of popularity. — Lisa, Valparaiso, Ind.

Lisa: I think we do. When I was in high school, Alex Karras (former Detroit Lion football great) was the most popular guy in school. I'll admit he was an athlete but Alex wouldn't be considered handsome. I've seen gorillas who have better looks.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coving Commandment.

Teddy's solution? Outlaw inflation

Teddy Kennedy, desperate to shore up his foundering presidential campaign, is offering to take away freedom in order to provide the public with a sense of security. Sensing the magnitude of public concern about inflation, Kennedy is suggesting state control of the economy and Kennedy control of the state.

His solution to American dependence on foreign oil is no less a threat to freedom. More frightening than this attempt to play to the fears of the mob is the realization that public opinion experts likely advised Sen. Kennedy on what he should say to achieve maximum support.

State controls always appear to be an easy way out of a bad situation. Unfortunately, they don't work. If the American people have learned any lesson over the last two decades it should have been that politicians offering the easy answers are suspect. Kennedy's solution to inflation is simply "outlawing" it. That's right, one of Washington's super-spenders is now suggesting we outlaw inflation. What he really means is that the activity people use to compensate for government-caused inflation should be outlawed. Kennedy calls it wage and price control; more accurately, it is economic fascism.

The Massachusetts Democrat, essentially, is blaming the American people for nearly 15 percent inflation ravaging this country. This man has done more to stimulate inflation than the accumulation of every wage earner who asked for a raise during the nearly 20 years he has held public office. His policies of spend, spend, spend, and his rhetoric offering the voters something for nothing, created the problem. Now he seeks to concentrate more power in the hands of the federal bureaucracy in order to solve the problem.

The call for gas rationing is no less repulsive. Economist after economist has pointed out that government policy attacking the power of the oil companies is actually encouraging the use of foreign oil. Kennedy and his Washington gang have been kicking the oil industry in the teeth for years and now, when we really need the oil industry, the senator wonders why the United States is not energy self-sufficient. The only way for this nation to be energy self-sufficient is to make it profitable for someone to do the work necessary to accomplish it. And to Sen. Kennedy, profit seems to be a dirty word.

The things Kennedy suggested in his speech at Georgetown University would dramatically alter the American economy for the worse. Does anyone believe that peacetime gasoline rationing will ever end once the government hires the bureaucracy necessary to administer the program? And what about wage and price controls? Kennedy proposes nothing less than a federal arrogation of the right of every citizen to make his own economic decisions. The only thing more outrageous than Kennedy's speech was the applause he received.

There have been few times in this country's history that our economic problems have seemed so perilous. It is not time to junk an economic system that worked in the past; it is time to examine why the economy of the United States used to work and why it is not working now. After such consideration it will be clear that men like Teddly Kennedy should not be looked to as oracles of economic good sense.

Another ally heard from

As a matter of fact there is. Britain has been every bit as firmly, if not so spectacularly, supportive of American moves. In her American visit last December, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher promised renewed attention to Anglo-American cooperation and she is delivering.

Mrs. Thatcher is a formidable not to say forbidding woman whose smile at times appears to have more to do with air conditioning than good humor. It is affixed rather than flashed and capable of lowering the temperature of an encounter by a good 10 degrees.

But there has been nothing chilly about her performance in the current crises. She has affirmed in parliament total support for U.S. responses to the Iranian and Afghan challenges and has moved unilaterally to sever commercial links with the Soviets.

It has the appearance of a revival of the old special relationship between the two great English-speaking powers nurtured in two world wars, an interpretation she would be the last to question.

The statements from London are in sharp contrast to the equivocal mummings in Bonn and Paris. And that suggests there may be a price to be paid in Britain's relations with her European Economic Community partners, with whom she is already feuding on a number of issues. And even in NATO, Charles deGaulle's complaint of an Anglo-Saxon elite reducing other members of the alliance to subordinate roles may be heard again.

But for the time being, it is almost like familiar if not always good old times — the United States, Britain and Canada.

TV oil ad rejection

Mobil Corp. recently wanted to run a commercial on the three TV networks that pointed out that the networks are more profitable than Mobil Corp.

But the networks wouldn't hear it. They turned Mobil down flat.

NBC said that under NBC policy partisan viewpoints on important issues, such as oil company profits, are presented in news and public affairs programs, and not in paid commercials. ABC said it had a similar policy. CBS said its refusal to air the ad "had nothing to do with our profits." No further elaboration.

Here's part of the commercial: "To get profits in perspective," the man in the commercial says, "business analysts look at percentages, just as you do when you open a savings account. Over the years, Mobil has earned about the same profit percentage on money invested as the average for all manufacturing industries — and less than for ABC, CBS, and NBC." Mobil says that it earned 20.8 percent on shareholders' equity in 1979, up from 13 percent the previous year. In 1978, the return figures for ABC, CBS, and RCA, which owns NBC, respectively, were 21.6 percent, 21.0 percent and 17.4 percent. The 1979 figures are not yet available.

Mobil has a right to complain. The way some TV and radio announcers have screamed over oil profits you would think they had been garroted. What they didn't point out in most of their stories is that much of those profits will be plowed right back into discovering new oil. And if profits are small, there will be little discovery.

Figures compiled by Business Week magazine show that Mobil's profits have been at or below the national average of industrial companies.

They indicate Mobil earned more than the average in 1974 and 1975 and less than the average in the next three years.

We see no reason why the TV networks wouldn't want that kind of information disseminated, especially if it's paid for.

Understanding inflation eludes Jimmy

By Oscar Cooley

Does Jimmy Carter know inflation from Plaster's ash horse? He did not indicate such knowledge in his State of the Union message.

Inflation, he said, "is the direct result of economic problems that have been building, virtually without letup, for over a decade."

But what is this result? And of what economic problems? Apparently the result Carter referred to is the increase of the price of this and that. At one point, he mentioned the increase of the price of oil by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries; at another the increase of the cost of hospital care. At no point did he mention the vast increase in the nation's money supply, which is the true cause of inflation proper.

To the average person, inflation means "the high prices I pay" — high prices in general, not the high price of oil, of hospital care, and so on, but the high prices. Period.

Even the president can see that the special climb of the price of oil is not the same, percentage-wise, as the rise in the price of a hospital room, and that therefore the cause of one of these is not the cause of the other. Each commodity's price rise has its own special cause.

For example, the OPEC noted what a vast and ever-increasing quantity of oil the world, especially American, was consuming, and it reasoned that the consumers want oil so badly they would be willing to pay more per barrel for it and still consume practically as much. So OPEC jacked the price of oil. In other words, demand, insistent and mounting, pulled the price up.

In the case of hospital care, a somewhat different force caused demand to be strong. Call it sick people's ability to pay, or their evaluation of good health. Combined with this perhaps was an increasing tendency of doctors to send patients to hospitals for treatment. So many of the hospital beds were occupied so much of the time that the hospital administrators concluded people would pay higher rates without cavil. Up went the rates, and this conclusion was vindicated. Hospital profits rose (and no "windfall profits" tax was proposed).

Plainly, the cause of the price rise of oil was different from the cause of hospital care's price rise. Two entirely different classes of consumers were affected, and two quite individual sets of motives were involved.

This is not inflation. It is merely the rationing or parceling out of the particular good concerned to the consumers according to their willingness to pay. When sellers put prices on their goods, they try to charge all the consumers will pay but not charge so much that so many will not buy that the seller's profit will be reduced.

Carter is quite wrong when he describes the OPEC boost in the oil price and the rise in hospital prices as inflation. Inflation is a general price rise, but these are merely individual price rises due to changes in the market for oil on the one hand and for hospital care on the other hand.

It is important to make this distinction, because market price changes are healthy and desirable. They serve to keep the supply of each commodity equal to the demand, so that neither a shortage nor a glut develops. Inflation, on the other hand, is not desirable, as stated, by an over-production of money. But people do not share and share alike in this abundance of money. Some are hurt badly when the prices they must pay all go up due to the over-supply of money in circulation but their own purses are not oversupplied. Some enjoy increased wealth, while others suffer from decrease.

How can this be remedied? How can overproduction of money be avoided?

Modern money is bank credit. It is produced when commercial banks make loans to borrowers, and is destroyed as the loans are paid off. This kind of money is over-produced by excessive bank borrowing, that is, by borrowing which does not result in production of a dollar's worth of goods for each dollar borrowed. Thus there are a lot of extra dollars floating around, and they get circulated only through increase in prices.

It is the United States government which is the chief culprit in the excessive borrowing of unproductive dollars. Heavy borrowing and spending by the U.S. government generates the excessive money which results in inflation.

President Carter at times seems to sense this. His message reiterated his intention to reduce government spending — and therefore its borrowing and inflating — during 1980. His intent is good, but alas, it is not likely to be fulfilled, for at least two reasons; the United States must increase spending for war purposes because of the Soviet threat, and 1980 is a year in which the president will be powerfully moved to spend public money freely to bring about his reelection.

Therefore, our double-digit inflation will continue. Indeed we will be fortunate if, within two years, the first of those digits does not double.

'O Canada my Canada

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—As soon as the news broke about the Canadian rescue of the six American diplomats in Tehran, everyone who had a friend in Canada wanted to pick up the phone and thank them personally.

I called my pal George in Toronto. "On behalf of all the people of the United States, I want to thank you for what you did to save our diplomats. You may have lost an embassy for a while, but you've gained a friend for life."

"Don't thank us," he said. "we thank you."

"How can you thank us when you were the people who stuck your necks out while the rest of our friends kept insisting the hostage situation was an 'American problem'?"

"If you'll forgive me, you Americans don't really understand what makes another nation feel good. For years you people have been going around the world aiding other countries for self-serving or altruistic reasons. All you've gotten in return is resentment and envy. No self-respecting country enjoys being on the receiving end of someone else's largesse."

By doing something for you we have restored our national pride.

"I assure you," he continued, "that after our recent adventure, the Canadians are twice as pro-American as the Americans are pro-Canadian."

"But you can't be. Your act of bravery, in one of our darkest hours, has every loyal American—man, woman and child—in your debt."

"Exactly," said George. "that's why we feel so pro-American. For years Canadians have been in America's debt and frankly it's been a pain in the ass. For the first time we don't feel inferior to you."

"I see what you mean," I replied. "But still you people went beyond the call of duty. Did you see Foreign Minister Ghotbzadeh on TV? He was fuming and said Canada will pay dearly for smuggling out the diplomats. He called it a 'flagrant violation of international law, a betrayal of Iran and a brutal act of espionage.'"

"It was the icing on the cake for us. Ghotbzadeh is a twit."

"All the same, you people didn't have to do what you did. Iran had no quarrel with you."

Fire going out of smoking

By Don Graff

Everyone — well, a lot of us who didn't have to suffer through the experience — got a chuckle recently out of the story of the Washington-New York flight grounded in Baltimore to hold off a passenger inspection sparked by a non-smoker's objections to being seated in the smoking section.

Actually, the swift descent of that plane may have been indicative of more than increasing public truculence on the smoking issue.

It also suggests the direction in which the cigarette business is going — down.

Cigarette sales increased a super-light 0.07 percent during 1979 for a fourth straight year of declining growth, according to a recent Business Week magazine survey of the industry.

"There is now little question that the industry is teetering at its peak, poised for a steady decline in sales," the magazine observes and predicts that the industry's "future past 1984 is murky indeed."

Paradoxically it would seem, the slowdown and forecasts of downturn come as the cigarette sellers are more active than ever. There are a record 176 brands on the market, with 55 of them introduced during the past three years alone.

But the story behind the impressive numbers is a large part of the industry's problem. The focus has switched from winning new smokers to poaching on the competition's share of a virtually stagnant market through a proliferation of variations. Further, most of those being introduced are low-tar, less-nicotine cigarettes.

In fact, a Federal Trade Commission report just out notes that for the first time more than half the brands on the market are low-tar varieties — 103 out of the 176 brands. That is 59 percent of the market, up from 40 percent a year ago and 31 percent two years ago.

The trend can be taken as an indication of the long-term impact of the anti-smoking campaign begun 15 years ago with the landmark U.S. surgeon general's report linking smoking to lung and heart disease. But in seeking to join what they have been unsuccessful in opposing head on, the cigarette makers have compounded their own problem.

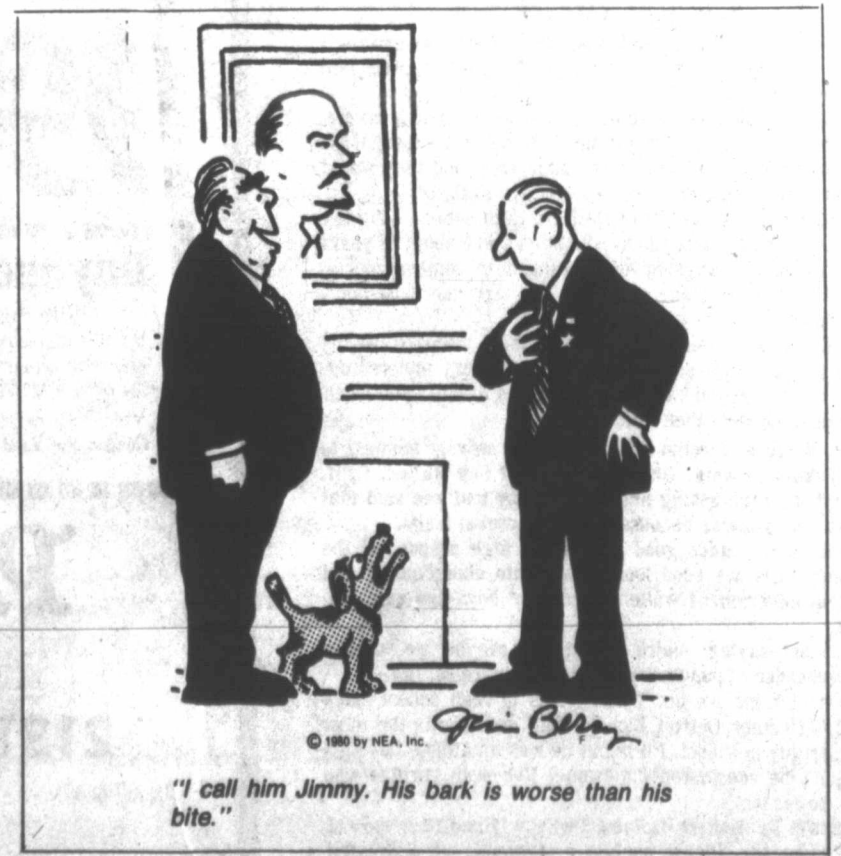

As smokers switch down to low-tar, less nicotine brands, it becomes easier for them to break the cigarette habit altogether.

As many are. The current surgeon general, Dr. Julius Richmond, recently noted that in 1964 54 percent of adult American men were puffing. The current proportion is 38 percent.

However, that downward trend has been offset to a considerable extent by an upward one in respect to women. Some 30 percent are now smokers, and the rise has been accompanied by an increasing incidence of smoking-related ailments. The prediction now is that by 1982 lung cancer will exceed breast cancer as the leading cause of death from malignancy among women.

The anti-smoking forces may indeed be gaining ground. But it would appear that far from the war being almost over, the main front has merely shifted.

Heiden wins fourth sprint title

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Eric Heiden, proving again why he is hailed as the greatest speed skater ever, primed for an assault on five Olympic gold medals by winning the World Sprint Championship an unprecedented fourth straight time Sunday.

Heiden, of Madison, Wis., favored by many to win all five events he will enter in the Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y., starting Wednesday, won convincingly in both the men's 500 and 1,000-meter races Sunday.

Heiden, anchor of the powerful U.S. Olympic team, lost his first race of this two-day world class event Saturday when unheralded Olympic teammate Tom Plant of West Allis, Wis., won the men's 500. But Heiden, second in that race, stormed back to win Saturday's 1,000 and re-establish himself as the meet favorite.

Anyone winning three of four events here automatically is a champion.

Karin Enke of East Germany, virtually unknown until she swept both women's races Saturday, clinched the women's championship by winning the women's 1,000-meter race Sunday in 1 minute, 27.19 seconds.

Defending champion Leah Poulos-Mueller of Dousman, Wis., won Sunday's women's 500 in 42.25 seconds, with Enke second. However, Poulos-Mueller finished only 12th in the 1,000.

Heiden won Sunday's men's 500 in 38.61 seconds, with fellow Olympian Dan Immerfall of Madison second and Gaeten Boucher of Quebec City, Canada, third.

Heiden won Sunday's 1,000-meter men's test in 1:17.98. Boucher stamped himself as a strong Olympic contender by placing second and Plant was third.

Dianne Holum, coach of the U.S. Olympic team, said the showing of its members here exceeded her high expectations.

Heiden said he hasn't felt added pressure because of widespread expectation that he will win five gold medals at Lake Placid. The record for gold medals won by one athlete in one Olympic games is seven by swimmer Mark Spitz in 1972.

Heiden finished with 154,905 points for the two days. Boucher was second overall among men with 157,920 and Plant was third with 158,960.

Among the women, Enke had 171,120 points. Poulos-Mueller had 174,585 and Beth Heiden, Eric's sister, was third with 175,130.

Poulos-Mueller, a silver medalist in the 1,000 in the 1976 Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria, said she wasn't overly disappointed at having lost her sprints championship.

The surprise of the meet clearly was Enke, 18, a student who took up speed skating just two years ago after arm surgery hampered her figure skating ambitions.

Bradshaw's basket gives DePaul a 65-63 victory over Dayton

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Clyde Bradshaw typifies the swaggering, no-sweat attitude on the DePaul Blue Demons. Among the players, that is.

Asked Saturday night about his game-winning shot against Dayton with three seconds left, the DePaul guard remarked:

"Our plan was to run the clock to nine seconds and I was supposed to take the last shot. I just threw the ball up, but I wasn't worried. I knew that if I had missed, the game would have gone into overtime — and we would have won."

The coach of this team thinks differently, however.

"We got the scare of our lives," said Ray Meyer after the 65-63 victory that kept DePaul's perfect record intact at 20-0.

Close calls have been a trademark of the nation's top-ranked college basketball team this year, hardly conducive to a coach's peace of mind. Four of the Blue Demons' victories have been fashioned on two-point margins. Plus, there has been one three-pointer and three others by five.

DePaul's latest triumph was gained a bit differently from the others. In many of their past games, the Blue Demons squandered big leads and just managed to hold on. This time, they had to come from behind.

"This was the first time we really had to come from behind and somehow, won a game which we probably didn't deserve to," said Meyer. "It was great to see us come back like that."

While DePaul just managed to escape with a victory, other Top Twenty teams weren't as lucky over the weekend.

In Saturday's action, seventh-ranked Maryland was beaten 90-81 by 16th-ranked Clemson; No. 9 Notre Dame lost to North Carolina State 63-55; No. 12 Purdue dropped a 74-59 decision to Iowa; No. 18 Virginia lost to Georgia Tech 62-61, and Illinois routed No. 20 Indiana 89-68.

In a Sunday game, 10th-ranked Duke lost an 80-77 decision to Marquette.

Elsewhere, No. 2 Syracuse walloped St. Bonaventure 105-80; No. 3 Louisville stopped Providence 79-73; fourth-ranked Oregon State tripped Arizona 73-63; fifth-ranked Kentucky turned back Alabama 72-63; No. 6 Louisiana State beat Georgia 96-77; No. 8 St. John's whipped Fordham 78-60; No. 13 Ohio State stopped Michigan State 71-59; No. 14 Brigham Young edged Utah 83-82; No. 15 Missouri whipped Kansas 88-65; No. 17 Weber State defeated Montana State 94-83 and No. 19 Arizona State routed Oregon 88-65.

Both Bradshaw and Meyer saw positive points from the close triumph.

Lanier scores 23 points in debut with Milwaukee

By the Associated Press

Bob Lanier and the rest of the Milwaukee Bucks are red-hot while Bob McAdoo is warming the bench in Detroit.

A week ago, Lanier and McAdoo were teammates with the Pistons. But Lanier was traded to Milwaukee and scored 23 points Sunday to help the Bucks win their third consecutive game.

"He played a super game," said Brian Winters, who made a three-point basket and a game-tying layup before Marques Johnson's jumper with two seconds left enabled the Bucks to nip the Phoenix Suns 109-107. "He moves so well in there and he does the little things that mean so much. He can score, get a rebound, block a shot."

Meanwhile, McAdoo watched from the bench as the Pistons bowed to the Boston Celtics 128-111.

"The guy's unhappy here," said Coach Richie Adubato. "Last night in New York he had a good first half and then stated he didn't want to play here. He feels disheartened and that we have a bad team, so there's no sense in playing the guy."

In other National Basketball Association action, the Philadelphia 76ers nipped the Los Angeles Lakers 105-104, the Seattle SuperSonics trimmed the New Jersey Nets 122-107, the Kansas City Kings edged the Washington Bullets 108-106 in overtime, the Atlanta Hawks overtimed the Golden State Warriors 98-96, the San Antonio Spurs crushed the Utah Jazz 148-128 and the Chicago Bulls defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 123-117.

Milwaukee fell behind Phoenix 105-98 but Lanier's four points helped set the stage for Winters' three-pointer. Then Lanier got his hand on an errant pass, leading to a steal and the layup by Winters that made it 107-111.

Celtics 128, Pistons 111
The lowly Pistons led the Celtics by as many as six points in the second period. However, newly acquired Pete Maravich came off the bench and scored 10 points in just six minutes, sparking Boston to a 57-57 halftime tie. Larry Bird, who scored 24 points, took charge in the third period as the Celtics pulled away.

76ers 105, Lakers 104
Julius Erving and Maurice Cheeks made two free throws apiece down the stretch, enabling the 76ers to overtake Los Angeles despite 38 points by the Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, including a streak of 10 consecutive baskets. Erving scored 22 points, Bobby Jones 21 and newly acquired Lionel Hollins made his Philadelphia debut with 13.

SuperSonics 122, Nets 107
Dennis Johnson scored 29 points and backcourt partner Gus Williams added 21. The outcome was decided by a 19-1 Seattle spurt midway through the third quarter that gave the Sonics a 97-72 lead.

Roger Phegley led the Nets with 26 points while Maurice Lucas, acquired from Portland on Friday, played 17 minutes, scored six points and grabbed five rebounds for New Jersey.

Kings 108, Bullets 106, OT
Otis Birdsong scored 32 points, including four in overtime, to pace Kansas City. The Bullets had a 98-93 advantage with 42 seconds left in regulation time but Phil Ford, who scored 26 points, made a jumper and Reggie King deflected a Washington pass and Ford picked it up and went in for a layup. He was fouled and made a free throw to tie it at 98.

Washington also blew a 106-102 lead with 2:07 left in overtime. The Kings reeled off the next five points and Birdsong put Kansas City on top for good with a shot from the corner with 42 seconds left.

Hawks 98, Warriors 96, OT
Dan Roundfield sent Atlanta ahead with a slam dunk in the final seconds of the overtime period and then blocked a shot by John Lucas at the buzzer.

The Hawks trailed by 22 points late in the first half and by 15 with four minutes remaining in the fourth quarter.

Soviet skaters accused of infractions on ice

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The Cold War is heating up on the ice, too — courtesy of a cagey figure skating coach who is not adverse to using some psychological warfare to aid the gold medal chances of his champion American pair at the Winter Olympics.

John Nicks, who has coached Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner for the past 10 years, dropped a little bombshell during a Sunday practice session. He said he wrote a letter three days ago, in which he claimed that Tai and Randy's strongest rivals — Irina Rodnina and Aleksandr Zaitsev of the Soviet Union — were guilty of at least four technical violations during their last skating competition.

If the alleged infractions are repeated in the pairs event next Friday and Sunday nights — and the judges consider them illegal — the Soviet duo could be docked crucial points in their expected tight duel with Babilonia and Gardner. The California couple won the world crown last year when the longtime Soviet world champions took maternity-paternity leave.

"I'm doing what I think is right," said Nicks. "The Russians have dominated things for so long, but I wouldn't want them to think they can continue to dominate by taking advantage of the rules."

Nicks contends that Zaitsev held his wife by the leg when hoisting her off the ice during three of their eight lifts at last month's European Championships at Gothenburg, Sweden. Nicks said the International Skating Union (ISU) rules clearly state that the man cannot place his hand below the woman's hip during a lift. Also, Nicks said that on one of the lifts, Zaitsev raised and spun Rodnina in the same movement another ISU no-no.

"I expect our association to take whatever action they think is best," said Nicks.

Sports hall to open in 1981

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Golfer Byron Nelson will gouge a divot from the turf with a pitching wedge Tuesday, but he won't be asked to repair the damage. It's part of a ground-breaking ceremony for the Texas Sports Hall of Fame.

Construction on the $3.5 million project, financed by bonds issued by the Grand Prairie Park Board of Trustees, is scheduled for completion by spring, 1981.

The two-story building, located on I-30 between Dallas and Fort Worth, will house artifacts, photographs, mementoes, and movies and other audio-visual displays highlighting the lives and careers of the state's hall of famers.

So far, 117 sports figures have been inducted into the state hall of fame, including Nelson, who will attend the 11 a.m. Tuesday ground-breaking ceremonies, former Texas Christian quarterback Sammy Baugh, golfer Ben Hogan, and football players Doak Walker and Bob Lilly.

Several things for which you have planted seeds in the past, but which failed to produce a harvest, are likely to bear fruit this coming year. Lady Luck will play an important role in making things happen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Hunches and perceptions you get today regarding ways to handle business matters should be heeded. Your intuition is tuned in on what your logic may overlook. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph Letter which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Dare to be hopeful for big things today. Your optimism could produce some pleasant surprises by making that which you wish for a reality.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your greatest luck today will be with your larger and more important projects. Give top priority to accomplishments that really mean something.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to stop and take stock of yourself and your plans. Better concepts can be devised to get you where you want to go.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This should be a profitable day for you, owing to your imagination and cleverness in business and financial matters. Put all your smarts to work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have the ability today to take the ideas of others and turn them into something much greater in scope. Listen sharply for interesting tidbits of information.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Possibilities for gains today could come from two sources: One is your own efforts, the other is something somebody else initiated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're more than a good leader today — you're also a splendid manager. Use your organizational abilities in group endeavors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is a good day to complete important matters. You have the added ingredient of luck to help you make endings turn out as you'd like them to.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) One of the things that will make you so popular with others today is your knack for making everyone feel very important.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Whether it is turning a small profit or a large one today, you should be equally adept. Where money is concerned you have the Midas touch.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are a good salesman as well as a capable teacher today. Others will benefit from your ideas and wisdom, so don't be reluctant to say what needs saying.

Getting your day in small claims court

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of consumers are taking their complaints to small claims courts and efforts are under way to improve the system.

Legislation recently approved by Congress is designed to help state and local governments establish or upgrade dispute-settlement programs, including small claims courts. The bill, called the Dispute Resolution Act, includes a provision for grants and research contracts and sets up an information clearinghouse in the Department of Justice.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has been urging an overhaul of the small claims system for several years. In 1976, the chamber proposed a Model Consumer Justice Act designed to simplify court procedures and make it easier for individuals to sue for damages and to collect judgments.

Critics of the small claims system charge that court hours are often inflexible and locations inconvenient.

They also say that individuals who win their cases have a hard time collecting; one study showed that more than four of 10 judgments were never received.

Small claims courts handle everything from tenant-landlord arguments to disputes between customers and stores over goods or services. The atmosphere is informal. You can present your own case to the judge. You do not need a lawyer and, in some areas, may be prohibited from using one. There is no jury.

Esther Peterson, special assistant to the president for consumer affairs, notes that "small claims courts are not for everyone."

First, she says, "the amounts involved must be relatively small, sometimes as low as $100... In addition, only money is at stake, not property or merchandise."

The Chamber of Commerce has recommended that small claims cases be limited to a maximum of $1,000. The same limit would apply to counterclaims filed by defendants.

The chamber also says that regular judges should be assigned to small claims courts, on either a temporary or permanent basis. Courts should be open during normal court hours, plus at least one evening a week and one Saturday morning a month.

Mrs. Peterson has some advice for consumers planning to use small claims courts. Among her suggestions:

— Find out what the court is like by visiting it during a session. Check the phone book under city, county or state government for listings under "small claims" or "people's courts."

— While you're at the court, ask for the necessary forms to fill out. Usually your case will be heard within two weeks after you indicate you intend to sue.

— Be ready to state your case clearly and briefly. Rehearse your remarks ahead of time. You will have only a short time in which to explain your problem and it's important to make the most of it.

— Be sure you appear in court on the day scheduled unless you have made arrangements to have the date changed.

HARDCOVER BOOKS
NEW YORK (AP) — Warner Books, the paperback-publishing division of Warner Communications Inc., says it will begin hardcover publishing in the spring of 1980.

William Sarnoff, chairman of the publishing division, says the new division, also to be called Warner Books, will complement "the company's mass-market and trade paperback divisions."

Warner entered mass-market and trade paperback publishing in 1973.

Charismatic leaders seek unity

DALLAS (AP) — Leaders of the nation's Christian charismatic churches went home from a weekend conference here to try to achieve reunification by working on a local level.

However, David duPlessis, a 75-year-old Oakland, Calif., pastor known as "Mr. Pentecost," said unification could be difficult because "we don't know what is dividing us, really."

Organizers of the first Charismatic Leadership Convocation agreed the meeting opened lines of communication among the various charismatic groups.

Their eventual goal is a single, worldwide Christian community; the conference was designed to work around political and traditional differences that block reconciliation.

To set the tone of unification, duPlessis announced he and Bob Mumford of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and head of the Covenant Church, had settled a long-standing dispute. DuPlessis had been criticized by several in the Pentecostal community for his work with the Roman Catholics.

DuPlessis said he called the conference because "I had a fear that we were drifting apart."

"I felt I personally was losing some of the elements in the charismatic movement," said the honorary chairman of the conference.

The charismatic movement arose, within existing denominations, in the 1970s, and has aligned with the earlier Pentecostal movement.

Like the Pentecostals, charismatics stress use of "gifts" such as speaking in tongues and healing, although gifts were mentioned only in passing at the conference.

"We need more (than speaking in tongues)," duPlessis said. "Everybody has emphasized our scriptural basis of spirituality."

The Rev. Dennis Bennett of Seattle, who helped begin the charismatic movement in the Episcopal Church, said he came only because "when David says come, we come." But, he said, lines of communication "definitely" were opened.

"Reconciliation isn't something that comes to pass at a distance. It is a very personal thing," duPlessis said.

The conference was judged a success by most of the ministers, who also acknowledged that unification is not a speedy process.

A summarized report of the workshops urged the ministers to begin unification with other churches at a local level and admonished them to avoid competition with others. They were told to spend more time developing spiritual relationships within communities, with emphasis on growth rather than experience.

Ron McConnell, senior vice president of the John 17:21 Fellowship, which sponsored the conference, said he was "astonished" by the strides made at the three-day conference.

"We were fearful of being seen together or linked together. This has led to a scandal," he said. "From this conference, we believe there will be a new coming together."

Courts to decide draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — The courts likely will have the final word in draft registration for women, and legal scholars say that probably means women will be signing up for service.

Congress seems cool to the idea of registering women, a concept supported by President Carter and his advisers.

But Thomas Emerson, a professor of constitutional law at Yale University, says, "Whichever way it goes (in Congress), there will be a suit filed. There's no way that the courts can avoid it."

David Landau, a staff attorney at the American Civil Liberties Union office here, vowed, "The day that the president signs (male-only registration), we will be in court."

Carter announced Friday he wants to register men and women 18 and 19 years of age, saying, "There is no distinction possible, on the basis of ability or performance."

White House officials said a major factor in his decision was the prospect of court challenges if women were excluded. The Supreme Court has yet to hear a draft case, but lower court decisions since 1974 have tended to open new avenues for women in the military.

Phyllis Schlafly, a leading opponent of the Equal Rights Amendment, said, "There's no way Congress will register women. She plans to focus on Congress in her battle against registration for women, although she does not rule out court action if she is unsuccessful."

"The doctrine of military necessity clearly requires the exclusion of women from the draft and combat," said Mrs. Schlafly, a lawyer.

But Martha Field, a constitutional law specialist at Harvard, said that would apply only if women were unable to perform in the military and added, "I can't think of any constitutional principle that someone would come up with so that the inclusion of women (in registration) would be wrong."

A number of experts on constitutional law said when the male-only draft was in effect, various court challenges were rebuffed on grounds that military necessity and national defense outweighed the issue of sexual equality.

But "the whole court position on differentiation of men and women has changed...the court now is looking much more carefully at discrimination," said Emerson.
