Mobile homes controversy

City eyes zoning appeal

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

A request for an appeal on a zoning board ruling denying an application for zoning change will be heard by city commissioners Tuesday in the regular commission meeting slated for 9:30 a. m. in city hall.

The recent request to the zoning board to allow mobile homes on a portion of Nelson and Wells streets brought out a number of Pampans both for and against the change.

After denying the application made by Mrs. Bernice Rippetoe of 601 N. Nelson, zoning board members recommended she apply to the city commission for an appeal of the decision.

The reason for the request, Mrs. Rippetoe said, was to place a trailer on the lot at 603 N. Nelson for her recently divorced daughter.

A public hearing will be conducted on the rezoning from single family to allow for mobile homes in an area from Wells to Banks bounded by Alcock and Gwendolyn.

Commissioners will consider accepting a dded to the vacant parkland area consisting of four and a half acres east of Evergreen Street along Red Deer Creek and to the street right of way located by the old Ft. Worth-Denver highway.

Final reading of an ordinance changing the speed limit on Perryton Parkway to Highway 70 to graduate from 35 miles per hour to 55 miles per hour.

First reading will be heard by the members on an ordinance annexing and zoning the Schlumberger Tract.

The 1977-78 and 1978-79 audit report prepared by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Company will be considered for acceptance by commissioners.

A report will be given concerning the appointment of a complete count committee for the 1980 Census. The committee will be responsible for seeing the census report is accurate and in accordance with city records.

March 14 will be considered as the date of a special commission meeting concerning preparation for the April 5 election of city officers.

According to most recent provisions on state election laws, City Manager Mack Wofford said, commissioners are responsible for counting and sealing ballots and election supplies. The amendments stipulate the number of ballots for each voting precinct and for absentee voting must be counted and the range of serial numbers on the ballots must be entered in the minutes of the special session.

In final commission business, members will consider February salary changes and approval of accounts payable.

Father of 31 children killed

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — John Bell Wooden, father of 31 children, was shot through the heart and killed at a surprise party honoring his 53rd birthday, police say, when he intervened in a daughter's dispute with an uninvited guest.

Outraged friends and relatives tackled the teen-ager charged in Sunday's shooting, and the youth's skull was fractured before police rescued him, officers said.

Wooden, a construction superintendent and the father or stepfather of 17 sons and 14 daughters, was shot by an uninvited party guest who quarreled with one of Wooden's daughters when she refused to pose for a snapshot with the youth, police said.

Kevin Yearby, 19, charged with second-degree murder in the shooting, tried to run away, but the crowd of nearly 100 people caught him, authorities said.

"The police saved his life," Miami Homicide Sgt. Mike Gonzalez said. "They and the fire rescue units had trouble getting him away from the scene. A large crowd pressed forward and wouldn't stay back. They were just outraged."

Two of Wooden's sons, Frank, 25, and James, 19, rushed their father to Jackson Memorial Hospital in their car.

"He stopped breathing," James said. "I pounded on his chest and he started to breathe again. I told Frank, 'He's still here.' He's still with us! Let's go!"

He died in the emergency room.

Wooden is survived by his wife, 40-year-old Mary. Some of his 31 children are from their previous marriages. Gonzalez said, Wooden's 30 surviving children — one died at an early age, according to family members — live in Georgia, North Carolina and Miami. They range in age from 3 to 31.

As other relatives and party guests reached the hospital, they saw Yearby being wheeled in on a stretcher.

"They all ran for him," Gonzalez said. "We had a difficult time keeping family members and friends from attacking him in the lobby as we tried to get him into the emergency room. They were just so outraged by this killing."

Perryton residents injured

Three Perryton residents were seriously injured in a one-vehicle accident which occurred north of Pampa Sunday afternoon.

Highway Patrol trooper, Wayne Williams, who investigated the mishap listed the injured as: driver, Jose Fuentes Paredes, 50, of 402 S. Baylor and two passengers, Maria Paredes, 42, and Joaquin Gomez, 21, of the same Perryton address.

The three were taken to Highland General Hospital

Emergency Room for treatment by Metropolitan Ambulance, Williams said, where the driver was treated and transferred to Amarillo Emergency Receiving Center for a broken leg. The other passengers were admitted to Highland General, he said. Gomez suffered a broken pelvis and Paredes with a severely strained neck, he said.

A spokesperson for the Amarillo emergency room said Paredes was treated and sent to High Plains Baptist Hospital to be seen by an orthopedic specialist. His condition is unknown at this time.

Maria Paredes and Gomez are both listed in stable condition at Highland General, hospital spokesman Dalton Stewart said today. Paredes is expected to be released later today, he said.

According to Highway Patrol reports, the accident occurred about 16.8 miles north of Pampa on Texas Highway 70.

Paredes was reportedly driving a 1974 Chevrolet at approximately 1:15 p. m. at a high rate of speed north on the highway when the vehicle veered to the right hitting a reflector post.

It then veered back across the road, Williams said, and hit a tree with the back left side of the vehicle.

The vehicle was totaled, he said, with the left rear and roof caved in on top of the driver and Gomez.

Paredes was cited by officers for traveling at an unsafe speed to avoid an accident.

Oilfield worker found dead in Hemphill County jail cell

CANADIAN — Gerald Raymond Sleeter, a 22-year-old oilfield worker, was found dead early Sunday morning in his Hemphill County jail cell. The body was found hanging from the side of the jail cell by Sheriff's Deputy Gary Pettitt at 7:30 a. m. Sunday.

Sleeter had been jailed at 4:30 a. m. Sunday, on a charge of public intoxication as the result of a reported disturbance in the hallway of the Hillcrest Hotel. Sleeter had resided at the hotel for most of his two years in Canadian. According to the hotel owner, "he was a good and quiet boy."

Once in the Hemphill County jail, Sleeter apparently took his bedsheet and fashioned a rope like noose. Officer Pettitt found the body and the sheet tied to a cross bar on the side of the cell.

Another prisoner, Ramiro Perez, also being held on a charge of public intoxication, was occupying the same jail cell as Sleeter. Perez was apparently asleep and did not hear any noises during the night. He was awakened as Officer Pettitt entered the jail cell.

Hemphill County Sheriff C.W. Wright believes the death was a suicide, but the case will be submitted to the Hemphill County grand jury for further investigation. Sleeter's body has been sent to Amarillo for an autopsy.

Sleeter had been an oilfield worker since 1978 and a resident of Canadian for two years. He is survived by his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. John Sleeter of Route 2, Wathina, Kansas.

Tax services item for board meeting

The contract to provide tax appraisal services for Gray County will be considered by Pampa Independent School District board members in their regular session at 5 p.m. Tuesday at Carver Educational Center.

The contract for the services — as recommended by the consolidated tax offices committee — will be for $7,000 to be paid by the county in 12 monthly installments.

Curriculum reports will be presented to board members on the gifted - talented program, the semester system, the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills, a self-study report for 1980 - 81 and district-wide goals for 1980-81.

Bids will be awarded on tax office equipment and textbooks for the 1980-81 school year will be adopted.

Members will also consider first reading of the State Board of Education policy revisions. These revisions include changes in policy on religion in schools in such areas as: participation in religious activity, library materials, availability of Bibles and other religious materials, distribution of religious literature, employment, high school Bible classes and religious exercises.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A young Lebanese armed with a toy pistol hijacked a Lebanese airliner today to focus attention on a missing religious leader. He surrendered after the plane landed at Beirut, its destination. The 65 other passengers and crew members aboard the Middle East Airlines Boeing 707 jet were unharmed, an airport spokesman reported.

The hijacker was a member of the Shiite Moslem sect in Lebanon. He told reporters he staged the skyjack to "revive interest in the fate of Imam Musa Sadr," the spiritual leader of Lebanon's million Shiites, who disappear during a trip to Libya 18 months ago.

It was the fifth such hijacking since the disappearance and the third this year.

The jetliner hijacked today was on a flight from Amman, the capital of neighboring Jordan, to Beirut. It landed at its destination 20 minutes after the pilot radioed a hijack message to the airport control tower. The pilot did not discover the hijacker's pistol was a fake until after the plane landed, the airport spokesman reported.

The plane took off from Amman Airport shortly after French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing left there for Saudi Arabia after a two-day state visit to Jordan.

Energy idea revolves to present

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — America is inching toward taking a giant step backward, returning to 50-year-old technology to help ease the energy squeeze of the 1980s.

The technology in question is energy "cogeneration," in which electricity is generated by "fuel" that would otherwise be wasted — industrial steam that spews into the air or wood chips and trash that can be burned to create more steam.

The steam can then be channeled into turning power-generating turbines.

The net effect is almost a doubling in fuel efficiency, from a level of 35 percent to 40 percent in a normal plant to 75 percent to 80 percent with cogeneration. By getting double duty from fuel, half as much is needed.

It's all part of the trend to alternate power sources such as solar and wind power, and experts say cogeneration promises a drastic reduction in U.S. dependence on imported oil and nuclear power.

"It is the immediately available energy alternative to coal and nuclear plants," says Jim Harding of the environmental group, Friends of the Earth.

"It will be energy at bargain prices, compared to building big new power plants," says Bob Burt of the California Manufacturers Association.

"There is a 6,000-megawatt potential in cogeneration in California alone — the equivalent of six 1,000-megawatt nuclear plants," says Claire Dedrick, a member of the state Public Utilities Commission.

Cogeneration is not some new trend being touted only by "California-type" conservationists. The huge Dow Chemical company has taken to cogeneration in a big way, according to Andy Hoch, manager of Dow's plant in Pittsburg, about 40 miles east of San Francisco.

"In all our Dow sites we have gone to cogeneration," he said. "It doubles our efficiency and cuts our costs. You end up using half the fuel."

The Pittsburg plant has been self-sufficient in electricity and steam used in processing since the cogeneration system was completed in 1977 for about $12 million, Hoch said.

In the 1930s, U.S. industry got 25 percent of its electricity from cogeneration. Now cogeneration provides only 4 percent of the country's generating capacity.

Observers say that starting 50 years ago, utilities turned from cogeneration to the "economy of scale," favoring the construction of ever bigger power plants because that was cheaper — until the prices of oil and natural gas skyrocketed.

"It's an idea whose time has come back," says the PUC's Ms. Dedrick, a major supporter of cogeneration.

"If taken to its logical conclusion, cogeneration can make this country self-sufficient in energy — if included with municipal waste use and renewable fuel such as wood and alcohol.

"It has a number of environmental and economic advantages," Ms. Dedrick adds. "It is relatively inexpensive, a conventional technology. Cogeneration plants can be on-line in three to five years, as opposed to 10 years for a large nuclear or coal-fired power plant."

"Properly developed, cogeneration could reduce our dependence on imported oil by 30 percent in three years. And the overall air pollution would be less with cogeneration."

Former Astronaut charged

CONROE, Texas (AP) — The first American in space, a former Houston mayor and a developer have been charged with misdemeanors for allegedly selling subdivision development sites in a floodplain.

Former astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr., former Houston mayor Louie Welch and Houston developer Jack Coogan were named in the misdemeanor complaints. None were available for comment Sunday.

The trio has been charged with recording subdivision plats without first obtaining permission of county commissioners, as required by state law. The charges carry maximum penalties of 90 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Residents in the subdivision claim the land is predicted to flood an average of once every 100 years.

"We've still got an ongoing investigation and we're checking for other possible violations," Montgomery County Attorney William J. Benardino said. He said he began looking into the development a month ago after receiving complaints from about 15 landowners.

Benardino said the three men were involved in a Conroe development called "Shepard's Landing."

Residents who paid from $4,000 to $5,000 per acre for their lots claim the subdivision is inside a flood plain and that part of it is in the floodway of the West Fork of the San Jacinto River.

Italy's Democratic group under cloud

ROME (AP) — A new wave of scandals has erupted in Italy, casting dark clouds over the ruling Christian Democratic party, the corner savings bank and even some of the country's adored soccer players.

"Povera Italia!" — "Poor Italy!" — said the banner headline in one newspaper.

In the past few weeks:

- Three construction tycoons fled the country in their private jet ahead of arrest warrants, allegedly leaving behind unpaid debts of 160 billion lire ($190 million). A Cabinet minister quit under fire after admitting he accepted campaign funds from the builders for the long-dominant Christian Democrat Party.
- Police roused 38 bank presidents and businessmen from their beds at dawn in nationwide arrests for allegedly lending money to friends or political allies without obtaining adequate guarantees.
- Italians are used to political scandals. President Giovanni Leone resigned in 1978 because of press allegations of tax evasion and other financial irregularities. A former defense minister went to jail in the Lockheed payoffs scandal. Last December, Saudi Arabia halted an oil deal after published reports that the Italian state energy group made a payoff of $115 million to secure the contract.

Kidnap plot clues sought by investigators

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Police say they are almost certain the man charged with kidnapping 5-year-old Timmy White recruited an accomplice from among his drinking buddies. But they don't expect to arrest anyone soon.

The boy told authorities under hypnosis last week that Kenneth Parnell, who is charged with the kidnapping, and another man took him off a street near his Ukiah home on Valentine's Day.

"The police feel the key is right here," said bartender Jim Bertain of the Samoa Club, where Parnell drank regularly. "We don't have anyone in mind who could be an accomplice, but there are a few guys that are on welfare and could have used some extra money."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Bribery investigation could prompt reform

Faced with a bribery investigation that may ensnare at least one U.S. senator and seven members of the House, Speaker Tip O'Neill is lamenting the damage to the "institution" of Congress. Where organizations or institutions are concerned, bad conduct by a few reflects upon the whole.

Everybody is aware of that. What should concern O'Neill and his colleagues is that the Congress of the United States has failed miserably as an institution to engender respect for ethics among its own members. Goodness knows it has had the opportunity.

Congressional committees that pounced on the Watergate scandal in the executive branch are open to accusations of hypocrisy. Congress has never pursued suspicions of wrongdoing by its own members with half the zeal it displayed in demanding the truth about Watergate.

The chance was not long in coming for the House and Senate to show they could be as morally righteous when the shoe was on the other foot. The parties, gifts and cash lavished on Capitol Hill by Korean businessman Tong Sun Park confronted Congress with its "Koreagate." Had the House and Senate ethics committees demanded public explanations from all those who had been swept up in Park's influence-buying spree, it would have discouraged such breaches of ethics, if not violations of the law, in the future.

As it was, the 18-month "investigation" of Koreagate produced bribery indictments against two former congressmen, but no lasting discomfort for current members of the club. Three sitting congressmen received "reprimands," the mildest form of House discipline, while the Senate Ethics Committee found no grounds for even a mild scolding of any present or former senator. Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut resigned from the Senate Ethics Committee midway in the process, saying the truth was being lost in "a maze of parliamentary evasiveness."

It now turns out that in 1978, when the strategy to contain Koreagate was still being worked out in the cloakrooms, the FBI was building its case for the new scandal now breaking.

The FBI agents posing as representing Arab sheiks to get the goods on members of Congress and other federal and state officials suggests an episode from a television series — and raises the question of whether the federal agents might have been guilty of "entrapment," the legal term for inducing an unwilling subject to break the law. Not enough is known at this point to say how willing or unwilling the alleged bribe-takers in these cases might have been.

As an institution, Congress has preferred to split hairs on ethical questions, blurring what should be a sharper distinction. This latest development may finally prompt some authentic changes for the better. But we should remember that power and corruption tend to be bedfellows.

Americans trading in twilight zone

It is interesting to observe the fast-paced twilight or underground system of exchange that is rapidly rising to a universal acceptance in America.

It may be anti-establishment, so far as the federal government is concerned, for that matter, but, then, government has created the climate for its thriving.

We are referring to the barter system in which little or no "money" — is used. There is a vast amount of trading going on, the exchanging of goods for goods.

One sees a growing disdain in America for the legal tender of the nation in this era of government-created super inflation. One sees the withdrawals from savings accounts by masses of people who are putting their cheap dollars that draw cheap dollars in interest into tangibles, very often metallic, that appreciate faster in value than savings. And then they barter the intangibles among themselves.

One observes retailers who offer goods for dimes and quarters and half-dollars and dollars, and silver, coinage that the government abandoned in 1965, and a consumer may obtain an item worth a "dollar" or more in today's cheap money for a dime in the pre-1965 coinage.

Despite the broad fluctuations in the prices of gold and silver, one sees many still investing savings in those precious metals, and even using the metals as a medium of exchange rather than the junky "cash of the realm."

This is a political year — and one cannot expect the depressing inflation to disappear, for the "in's" seeking re-election may see it as their roller-coaster back into office, and there likely will be no more than token effort to stay it.

In the underground exchange of goods, all regulations and rules heaped on trade by government may be ignored. This is the action of a large number, that is growing, of citizens who have lost faith in the government that taxes heavily, and regulates severely.

The situation cries loudly for a solution, but what is it? The solution lies with government's sharp turning to conservatism, its ending immediately the reckless, wasteful spending that calls for the printing of more and more cheap dollars, and the dissolution of the federal bureaucracy that now is even bigger than its mother-government and is the tail wagging the dog.

It is now a time for a sober study of what is happening. Is the turn to a separate private system of exchange in America a symptom of the debilitating socio-economic disease that will prove fatal to the Republic if the cure is not applied immediately? Will those in government never awaken to the knowledge that what is going on is a citizenry grasping for the economic security of free trade, unhampered by a manipulating government that thrives on inflation?

Rotary celebrating 75th year

By Oscar Cooley
Now and then, somebody has an "idea whose time has come." Such a person was Paul Percy Harris, who in 1905 had the idea of the Rotary Club.

Paul was a lawyer in Chicago. Not a big shot, just a small-town lawyer in a big town. After a boyhood in Wallingford, Vt., he found the Windy City a bleak place. To get business, you had to have friends.

He noted that Silvester, the coal dealer, sold Harry Ruggles, the printer, his coal, and Harry handled Silvester's printing needs. The more friends a young lawyer made, the more cases he got.

So, one day in 1905 — it happens to have been Feb. 23 — Paul had lunch with three of his acquaintances, an engineer, a tailor and a coal merchant, and proposed that they form a club of men like themselves, each striving to build up a business. Why not organize this mutual "back-scratching," said he.

The club would accept as members only one man of each calling — one lawyer, one doctor, one tailor, one haberdasher, one department store manager, etc. Thus each would have his own exclusive classification, and in getting business from other members of the club would have no competition.

It goes without saying that one was not under obligation to patronize fellow club members, but meeting them regularly and becoming friends, one would naturally do so. During early years each member gave the club's "statistician" a weekly report on the amount of business transacted with other club members. This reciprocal trade played an important role in the growth of the first Rotary club.

Some will say this savors of commercialism. Is this all that Rotary is about?

Of course it is not. Rotary organizations are "service clubs." They serve their communities in dozens of ways. But Paul Harris' original plan was mutual service among businessmen of the community. Later the service motive was broadened. However, the classification idea is still carried out by Rotary clubs, and though it is seldom mentioned, reciprocal trade among the members undoubtedly is still a motivating force. (It is also among the members of other clubs, secret orders, fraternities and even churches.)

To bring about this reciprocity, acquaintance is necessary, and so it became the custom to meet weekly and eat together. To lend point to the gathering, a speaker or other program was provided. Out of these frequent gatherings, friendship grew. Rotary became a social institution, a magnet that drew the business community together.

That such an organization, made up of able and substantial citizens, should do things for the community was a natural.

The first service project of the Chicago club was to provide a comfort station in the city hall. Practical, eh? From that to giving a cow to a needy farmer in Pusan, Korea, may seem a long jump. Rotarians are versatile that way.

Rotary is 75 years old this year, indeed last month. From Paul Harris' little club of Chicago tradesmen it has grown to 18,374 clubs, small and large, in 153 countries of the free world. They have some 853,000 members.

To detail their activities would require a book. These seem to concentrate on two areas: the local community and youth. Rotary projects are designed to make the club's town a better place in which to live. In the youth area, the Rotary Foundation has helped hundreds of young men and women go abroad to further their education. To finance the foundation Rotarians are invited to give it a gift of $1,000, which makes one a "Paul Harris Fellow" for life.

Rotary has two youth auxiliaries: the Interact clubs which enroll both boys and girls aged 14 to 18, and Rotaract clubs for those 18 to 28. These are sort of embryonic Rotary clubs. They, too, generate and carry out service-to-the-community projects. There are some 3,500 Interacts, 3,260 Rotaracts, each sponsored by a parent Rotary Club.

There are no Rotary clubs in Soviet Russia. This is not because Rotary International forbids them but because Rotary consists of men who are in business associated with profit-making, and Moscow takes a dim view of such activity. A club of profit-makers would have difficulty getting members in a country where profit-making is a crime.

Further, Moscow discourages spontaneous, community meetings of any sort. Such a meeting might hatch up a revolt against the dictatorship of the proletariat. Rotary is anathema to the statist. It is identified with freedom, democracy, cooperation and mutual aid. Don't look for Rotary clubs to spring up in Siberia right away.

Rotary International will celebrate its 75th by returning to Chicago for its convention, June 1-5. Paul Harris started something.

School or work

by Paul Harvey

Unemployment rolls are overloaded with high school dropouts.

Worse, those ill-equipped for honest jobs are likely to gravitate toward dishonest ones.

One of the big city's big problems is that a boy or girl is not going to flip hamburgers for $25 a day when he or she can make $500 a day pushing drugs.

President Carter is trying to attack the problem of "youth unemployment" with more government money.

That's one way.

There's a better way.

President Carter is asking you for $4 billion to try to make illiterate young people literate enough to get and keep a job.

Also to bankroll more job training for untrained young people.

In the new Department of Education there will be a program established called Basic Employability-Skills Training.

In public education it will re-emphasize reading, writing and arithmetic.

It will increase the amount of practical vocational training available.

For high schoolers who are not going to college anyway, the schools will offer an alternative to dropping out.

For 10 years, commissions, foundations and government agencies have been recommending that American education be streamlined.

During the war years when thousands of draft-eligible young people were hiding in the ivy, they were allowed to neglect basics in favor of slide-by courses.

Thus we graduated generations of incompetents.

This is an attempt to undo that.

A woman Chicago calls "The Miracle Teacher" — Marva Collins — who teaches the unteachable in her two-room schoolhouse in the ghetto, is unconvinced that public education is workable.

She says, "I have never seen so much waste as when I was a teacher in public schools. They figured that more money meant more education. Instead, the 'more money' was spent on theoretical courses, audiovisual equipment and fancy buildings."

Mrs. Collins says, "Things don't teach, teachers teach."

The students of her Westside school, ages 4 through 13, are far ahead of national norms in the three-R's.

Also, they are familiar with Sophocles and Cicero, Shakespeare and Longfellow and Tolstoy. They memorize poetry and snatches of Latin — for fun. They can tell you about Pythagoras, also.

But first-reading and vocabulary.

They love school so much they refuse recess and holidays!

And her students — individuals previously headed for unemployment and crime — are now headed instead for worthy jobs or advanced schooling.

Mrs. Collins says the price of making our public schools work again is not money. The price is to make them "uncomplicated."

And that would involve pain and hurt and disciplining students and discharging incompetent teachers and she doubts we're ready for that.

Opposition for operators

By Robert Walters

HAMPTON FALLS, N.H. (NEA) — The future of commercial nuclear power, an unexpected but significant issue in New England's early political contests, could become the object of a nationwide debate during this year's presidential campaign.

Plans to carry the issue into other states throughout the country already are being made by the two organizations that have met with surprising success in their efforts to focus attention on the subject in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

Those groups are the campaign organization of California Gov. Edmund (Jerry) Brown, Jr., a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination and the Campaign for Safe Energy, a Boston-based citizens' organization.

One of the country's best known and most outspoken critics of nuclear-powered generating stations to produce electricity, Brown has made the issue a cornerstone of his early campaign in the Northeast.

Although he finished third in the New Hampshire primary and in Maine's precinct caucuses, well behind President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Brown displayed considerable strength along the seacoast, where opposition to nuclear power is concentrated.

In a reversal of his performance elsewhere in Maine, Brown was the most popular candidate in Lincoln County, home of the state's only nuclear generating station, the Maine Yankee plant near the coastal community of Wiscasset.

Here in New Hampshire, the Brown campaign distributed thousands of copies of an elaborate four-color poster carrying a "Stop Seabrook" headline and portraying the governor speaking in front of a massive "No Nukes" banner.

"Seabrook" refers to the two-unit, 2,388-megawatt generating station under construction near the coastal town of Seabrook, less than five miles south of here. Demonstrations mounted there by opponents of nuclear power have attracted national attention to the facility.

Prominently displayed in Brown's basic campaign leaflet here was a statement of strong support for those protesters: "If I'm elected the next president, I guarantee you I'm not going to license Seabrook — but you're going to get safe, efficient, economical alternatives. That's my pledge."

In a day-long campaign tour along New Hampshire's seacoast, the governor repeatedly criticized nuclear power. At a rally here, for example, he charged that "Seabrook and nuclear power are very basic symbols of the excesses and irresponsibility in our country."

Brown's strategists plan to press the issue as the primaries move into the Midwest and West — a strategy shared by the Campaign for Safe Energy, whose leaders have eschewed the confrontation politics and radical tactics that have produced only limited success during demonstrations at Seabrook and other nuclear facilities.

Instead, that organization has dispatched articulate young representatives to politely but firmly question the various candidates about nuclear power during their scheduled campaign appearances.

"We want to have a presence all the way through the primaries," says Douglas Phelps, a leader of the organization. "We know that many people, all across the political spectrum, are concerned about nuclear power even though there's no reason to believe they're going to change their voting patterns — their candidate support — because of the issue."

Phelps' group expects to mount a major effort against nuclear power during the primary campaigns in Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and California. Similar campaigns will be undertaken in Illinois and Florida if additional funds can be raised to support them.

Because considerable skepticism about nuclear power already exists in many of those states, the planned campaign could have a profound impact on how the public views the controversial issue in the future. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

Q I'm a model and needless to say, I have to keep my weight down. Lately, I've been using water pills to shed some extra pounds before big photographic sessions.

They seem to work just fine, but when I stop taking them I swell up. Would there be any harm if I just continue using the pills regularly?

A Diuretics, also called water pills, are very useful therapeutic agents. They can lower elevated blood pressure and remove excessive fluid buildup that may be associated with heart, kidney and liver failure. Used carefully, these drugs are remarkably safe and effective.

This does not mean, however, that they should be used casually. Employing a diuretic in order to lose weight is not a wise idea, especially since the loss is transitory at best. Often, when the water pills are stopped, they may actually lead to fluid accumulation and a rebound weight gain which may persist for a week or longer.

Continual use of a diuretic which is not medically necessary can cause a disruption in the body's mineral balance. Loss of potassium is the most serious consequence and a vicious cycle of water buildup can occur everytime the drugs are discontinued.

We can appreciate the need to keep your figure under control because of your work. Nevertheless, relying on diuretics to lose weight can, in the long run, actually make matters worse.

If you do experience occasional fluid retention or bloating you may find that restricting your salt and carbohydrate intake can be effective in relieving these symptoms.

Q I once had a fungus infection in my toenail, and the doctor removed it surgically as part of the treatment. One of my fingernails now has a similar kind of problem and looks dreadful.

A few months ago I read about some compound being used instead of surgery to remove the nail. What is the medicine? Do I need a prescription for it, and how safe is it?

A Surgical removal of a diseased nail is still part of the standard treatment for many conditions, including fungus infections. Last year, however, doctors at the Department of Dermatology at Stanford University reported on the use of a "plaster" or ointment containing urea for removing nails.

Dr. Eugene M. Farber, chairman of the department, discovered the urea treatment on a trip to the Soviet Union, where it has been in use for years. He and other doctors tested the drug on 35 patients with excellent results.

The urea ointment is applied to the diseased nail and kept perfectly dry and airtight for about one week. After that exposure, the affected nail lifts off easily, without the need for anesthesia, antiseptic precautions, or any days missed from work because of postoperative pain.

Urea is a natural compound which seems to attack only abnormal nail. It does not, apparently, affect the tender skin underneath. The Stanford physicians were impressed with its effectiveness and safety.

You can't buy the urea ointment at your corner drugstore and remove the nail yourself, though. There aren't any commercial preparations available. But the pharmacist can make up an ointment to fit your doctor's prescription.

Since nail removal is only one step in the treatment of your problem, the entire therapy should be supervised by a physician.

VIRGINIA MAYO signs autographs after opening night performance of "Move Over, Mrs. Markham."

'Move Over, Mrs. Markham' may not meet expectations

By KAYLA PURSLEY and Lynn Hunter
Of the Pampa News

Are you bored with TV or would you just like a change of scenery? May we recommend the Country Squire Dinner Theater in Amarillo.

"Move Over, Mrs. Markham" starring Virginia Mayo is now playing through March 29. It is not one of Broadway's better known plays, but it is an hilarious English comedy filled with adult British "puns" and double entendres.

The play opens with the Markhams' plans for an evening out. Joanna Markham, portrayed by Miss Mayo, gives her married friend Linda Lodge, played by Dorothy McDonald, permission to use the apartment to meet her secret "date." Walter Pangbourne, portrayed by the only non-professional actor, Amarillo businessman Hal Mayfield, Linda's husband, played by Daniel Crotty, also gets permission to use the apartment to entertain his secret "date" from writer-publisher Philip Markham, played by Art Kassul, who appeared in a beach scene in the current movie hit "10".

In the meantime, the Markham's Swedish maid Sylvie, portrayed by Jamie D. Gourley of Nashville, Tenn., makes her own "date" to use the apartment with the Markhams' interior decorator Alistair Spenlow, portrayed by Larry Randolph, a former Texas Tech professor.

With everyone on the scene, along comes the famed spinster writer of children's "Bow-Wow" books, Olive Harriet Smythe, portrayed by Vivian Brown of Los Angeles.

Miss Smythe's repulsion towards pornography prompted her to offer her works to Markham, and the hilarity peaks as the players take on "respectable" roles for her benefit.

Opening night in Amarillo was Miss Brown's first stage performance since opening night of this play in Las Vegas. Miss Brown said she fell leaving the Las Vegas stage after her last lines in the show, breaking every bone in her foot and almost losing the foot. Because it is the same show in Amarillo and her first time on stage since her fall, she said, "it is doubly gratifying to be here."

The play seemed a bit-stilted, lines seemed memorized, instead of spontaneous. Some of the jokes in the play didn't "come off" on opening night, and the play's timing was off. But it was learned from Director Joe Baronne, that the players had only one week of rehearsals together before opening night and only two days on the set. These professionals will gain solidarity after several more performances.

Miss Mayo's lacked luster opening night, or perhaps did not meet one's expectations of this veteran actress. But to the average viewer seeing this professional in action would be enjoyable.

Art Kassul, Hal Mayfield and Vivian Brown's performances were outstanding.

Miss Gourley said after the performance, she learned various Nordic accents from a Swedish naturalized citizen who became an immigration officer.

The set was designed by Dan Schloss who is also the stage manager. The set seemed confusing, in trying to remember that actors in the bedroom could not be overheard by actors in the living room, a few feet away. The bar seemed more of a closet to these viewers, than a place where drinks would be prepared.

Kassul said after the show, the bar — where actors and actresses hid from other players — was intended as a "hiding place" for the characters. He said actors hoped the audience wouldn't have time to think about the set's incongruity but would be wrapped up in the hilarity and action of the play. Opening night, we found time to think about it.

Plaudits should go to the local people and merchants who donated time and materials to build, decorate and set it up in 60 hours.

We also found time to think about the incongruity of certain of Miss Markham's costumes. Costume design shouldn't have been a factor, since the action of the play takes place in the present and other actors' and actresses' costumes were stylish. We noticed several pairs of outdated shoes and several dresses which didn't seem to fit the character of the fashionable "always out shopping" Mrs. Markham.

Pre-show entertainment was by the Country Rogues, West Texas State University students who doubled as waiters and waitresses. The service was good, and we expect these entertainers to gain polish with experience.

Dinner is served from 6:30 to 7:45 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday nights with a matinee on Sunday. This show might not be enjoyed by the young ones, so plan a night out for yourselves. It's worth the drive to Amarillo.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Dr. Wallace: The other night I was walking home from school when some boys I know came up behind me and grabbed my hands. Since I knew them, I didn't think anything about it.

Then one of those hands went up and over my mouth. They dragged me behind this house and tried to take off my clothes.

Now I'm scared because I see these boys every day. Please tell me what to do. I'm 13 and the boys are 14. Maybe I should just keep quiet. — Nameless, Galesburg, Ill.

Nameless: Don't keep quiet. If you do, these boys will try it again and again, each time getting a little bolder. Tell Mother what happened immediately and then tell your principal. The school has a responsibility for you on your way to and from school. These boys are heading down the wrong path and need a good job to get them straightened out. Better they learn at 14 than 18.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Help! Last year my husband asked if I would mind having his recently widowed father come to stay with us "for a while," giving him a chance to meet new friends, become familiar with our area, and get a fresh outlook on life away from sad memories of an ill wife and her death. I agreed.

It has been a year since Dad arrived, and he makes no mention of finding a place of his own. Our privacy is gone, a child gave up his room, Dad expresses no gratitude, and he's not all that clean! In fact, his room is smelling up the house.

I've told my husband that I'm very unhappy with this setup. Our family doctor says Dad is healthy and strong, and we as a young family deserve our privacy. I know deep down that my husband feels as I do, but he refuses to anything about it because he feels sorry for him.

I sometimes question my right to want Dad out of our house; I came into this marriage with children from a previous marriage. My husband adopted them and has been a wonderful provider. Now I feel guilty because I can't do the same in his father's case. However, my husband knew I had children when he married me, but I didn't know our marriage would include a father-in-law. Is there a solution?

MISERABLE

DEAR MISERABLE: Would a marriage that included a father-in-law who expressed his gratitude occasionally and didn't smell up the house be tolerable? If so, your husband should speak frankly to Dad. If your resentment at having lost your privacy is what is really gnawing at you, you must discuss it calmly and candidly with your husband. Unresolved anger seldom disappears with time. It grows, and erupts eventually.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with this guy for a year. I'm 20 and he's 22. We get along really well and I'm in love with him. I'm the only girl he dates, and he's the only guy for me. We've been intimate, and there's no problem there. The problem is that he's never said, "I love you."

He's not cold or anything like that. He's very affectionate, and he's told me he thinks I'm "the greatest." He's paid me lots of compliments, so I know he really cares for me, but he seems to carefully avoid saying those three little words I want to hear.

I haven't told him I love him yet because I've been waiting for him to say it first.

Abby, how can I get him to say "I love you," and why do you think he's been holding back?

NO I LOVE YOU'S IN VEGAS

DEAR NO: I don't know about your guy, but most guys are reluctant to say "I love you" because they aren't ready to make a commitment.

DEAR ABBY: I have worked for 10 years for the same company. I am going to be married in June and, as you know, wedding invitations are very expensive.

My fiance and I both have large families and intend to send invitations to all our aunts, uncles, cousins, etc.

There are 500 people in my department at work, all of whom are located on six floors of the main building.

It has become a custom for each employee who gets married to place an invitation on the bulletin board of each floor. I was told that this was very tacky. Is it?

DON'T USE NAMES

DEAR DON'T: If you can't afford to send an invitation to all the people you know and want, invite them verbally. But tacking up an invitation as a general public announcement for 500 people (most of whom must be strangers) seems tacky to me.

Buzzard, Bradford win at Amarillo meet

Pampa finished in fifth place in the Amarillo Track Meet Saturday after leading the pack going into the afternoon events.

Danny Buzzard won the shot put with a 51-0 1/4 toss and took second in the discus (155-0) to help the Harvesters collect 34 points in the field events.

"We were the leaders at the lunch break, but we didn't have anybody in the finals of the running events," Pampa coach Mike Brent said. "That really hurt us."

Also giving Pampa a boost in the field events was Kyle Bradford, who won the high jump with a 6-6 leap. Doug Kennedy took third in the discus at 146-4.

"I was real proud of our field event people," Brent said. "Kyle had been out for only two weeks and Danny really came through for us. One of our bright spots is that if we can get some sprinters out this week I think we have a good chance of winning district."

Mike Wheeler was clocked at 4:39.4 in the 1600-meter run to finish third. Pampa's 400-meter relay team (James Borchardt, Jeff McDougall, Randy Slaybaugh, Steve Kotara) was fifth at 45.8.

"He led all the way until the last 300 meters. I just kind of threw our 400-meter relay team together. They had a couple of bad handoffs and still finished with a good time."

Pampa also placed fifth in the girls division with 41 points.

Kellye Richardson was Pampa's only first-place winner with a 15.3 clocking in the 100-meter hurdles.

Also placing for Pampa were Penny Harbin, discus, fourth, 104-1 1/4; Vicki Green, sixth, 800, 2:34.6; 800 relay, fourth, 1:53.5; Shelly Thompson, 100, fourth, 15.1.

In the junior varsity boys division, two Shockers placed. They were Roy Britt, high jump, second, 5-8, and Raymond Mendoza, 800, third, 2:13.1.

Whitney Kidwell was almost a one-woman team for Pampa in the junior varsity division. She won the shot put with a 30-3 toss, placed third in the long jump (15-4 1/4); and second in the long jump (4-6). The 400-meter relay team was third with a 54.6.

Both Pampa boys and girls participate in the Hereford Meet Friday and Saturday.

Pampa splits baseball doubleheader with Altus, Okla.

ALTUS(Okla.)—Pampa launched an 11-hit attack and Andy Richardson threw a five-hitter as the Harvesters belted Altus, Okla., 9-1, Saturday in the first game of a twinbill.

Mark Jennings led the Pampa assault with a pair of doubles while Monty Covalt and Greg Quarles had one two-bagger apiece. Quarles also had a triple.

After giving up a run in the second inning, Richardson pitched shutout ball the rest of the way.

Leading 2-1, the Harvesters exploded in the sixth inning for five runs.

Altus won the second tilt, 3-2, by scoring the winning run in the fifth.

Clifford Anderson hit a homer for Pampa. Keenan Henderson had a double.

Losing pitcher was Sam Edwards, who dropped his first decision of the season.

Pampa (4-2) hosts Hereford at 4 p.m. Tuesday afternoon at Optimist Park.

Lamar sneaks past Beavers

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Oregon State basketball Coach Ralph Miller had complained before the start of the NCAA West Regional playoffs about No. 1 DePaul and Ohio State being sent to strengthen a region Miller said was already strong.

But as it turned out, unranked Clemson from South Carolina and Lamar from Texas were the surprising interlopers in the first two rounds of the West Regional, knocking off three Top Twenty western teams between them, including Miller's fifth-ranked Beavers.

UCLA and Ohio State, winners of Sunday's second round games in Tempe, will play in the third round Thursday in Tucson.

Oregon State, No. 12 Brigham Young and 17th-ranked Weber State all went down, while Clemson, 22-8, will meet Lamar, 22-10, in the West third round Thursday in Tucson, Ariz.

Miller was miffed when asked if his Pacific-10 champs had overlooked Lamar, which upset Oregon State 81-77 Saturday at Weber State's Dee Special Events Center. "Anyone with a brain in his head looking at their record would respect this team," Miller said.

Lamar Coach Billy Tubbs didn't make Miller feel any better.

"To tell you honestly, the two toughest games we've played this season were McNeese State and Southwestern Louisiana in our conference," Tubbs said afterward.

The free-shooting Southland Conference champs from Beaumont, Texas, edged Weber State 87-86 Thursday night.

Guard Billy Williams was the catalyst for sixth-seeded Clemson, scoring 22 points in the Tigers' 76-73 win over Utah State Thursday and 24 in a 71-66 upset of third-seeded Western Athletic Conference champion BYU, 24-5. Clemson finished fourth in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Tenth-seeded Lamar refused to be intimidated by the taller Beavers, led by 6-foot-11 center Steve Johnson.

Before the game, 6-7 Lamar center Clarence Kea said, "Oregon State was looking down from the other end of the floor at us like they were gonna kill us because we only have 6-7 and 6-8 guys, but me and (forward) B.B. (Davis) have played against bigger guys all year and this is something I've been working for for four years."

Tubbs said taller opponents bring out the best in his Cardinals. "We play a little better against the big teams," he said. "We figure if we're outmanned, that's no excuse to lose."

Davis, Kea, Mike Olliver, Alvin Brooks and Cestrakiah Lewis all scored in double figures as Lamar never trailed after the 13:55 mark of the second half.

Johnson scored a game-high 24 points and had 18 rebounds, but fouled out with three minutes to go when the Beavers, trailing 75-71, needed him most.

BYU Coach Frank Arnold said his Cougars were "just not used to playing against 6-10 quick players with long arms," referring to Clemson's John Campbell, Larry Nance and Horace Wyatt.

BYU center Alan Taylor had 27 points and 12 rebounds, but the Cougars' leading scorer, guard Danny Ainge, had only two points in the second half and finished with 13.

Houston Kashmere wins state title

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Plano basketball coach Mike Bishop now knows the truth of an old sports cliché, that speed and quickness can make up for a multitude of other shortcomings.

Houston Kashmere took its third Class 4A basketball title Saturday, beating Bishop's Wildcats 70-69. As a layup by Alfred Godine fell through the net with only eight seconds on the clock, Plano kissed its championship good-bye.

"They were too quick," Bishop said. "That was the difference. I feel we were a better team in every department ... except they out-quicked us."

There were other heart-stoppers during the championship tournament.

Beaumont Hebert took the Class 3A title with a record-setting 88-83 rout of Snyder. Hebert broke a 3A championship-game scoring record of 87 set by San Marcos in 1965.

Abernathy won the 2A championship with a 64-58 victory over Boling and Gladewater-Sabine edged Bartlett 69-68 for the Class A title after both teams blew big leads in the game. And in the last Class B championship ever held, Snook dropped a 13-point lead in the fourth quarter, but a basket with no time on the clock handed them a 56-50 victory over Petty West Lamar.

Next year, the divisions will be class from A to 5A.

Bridges was complimentary of the Kashmere team.

"This is the best team we've played this year," he said. "They just kept coming at you. A player would get a couple fouls and another one would come off the bench."

Kashmere Coach Frankie Brazos said he was finally able to break the Wildcats with a man-to-man strategy.

"We just kept pressing," he said. "Then when we used the man-to-man, that did it. We knew Plano would have problems with it."

Snyder was able to stay close to Beaumont Hebert in the first quarter, but early in the second, Hebert opened up and finished the half with a 44-22 lead. Snyder was never able to come close in the second half.

Boling trailed Abernathy by as much as 14 in the third quarter, but was able to pull to 53-52 in the fourth. But Abernathy's hot free throw shooting in the fourth pulled them ahead for the win.

Sabine and Bartlett played some see-saw basketball, both giving up comfortable margins before Sabine's height, muscle advantage and clutch shooting helped them eek out the winning lead.

For Snook, Saturday's game was a repeat of last year's championship. For the second year in a row, Snook took the Class B crown by a single point and without the services of high-scorer Mike Junek, who broke his ankle in regional play.

West Lamar hustled past Snook's 13-point lead and pulled ahead 58-57 with 33 seconds left on the clock. But West Lamar's Gary Dean missed three free throws in a row and Billy Felder pulled it out of the fire for Snook, banking the ball off the glass and through the net with no time left.
