Gulf, OCAW tentatively agree

DENVER (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. has reported a tentative agreement with the striking oil workers union that could set a pattern for ending an 11-week strike by 55,000 refinery employees across America.

The Denver-based Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union already had settled with some smaller companies before a Gulf spokesman reported the settlement Sunday. But there had been no contracts with the large companies that traditionally are trend-setters for the rest of the industry.

The union refused late Sunday to confirm or deny that a settlement had been reached, saying only that a news conference was scheduled today by union president Bob Goss.

"That's the only thing I can tell you now. There will be no announcements coming from the union until Mr. Goss appears at his news conference," said OCAW spokesman Jerry Archuleta.

According to sources familiar with the proposal, Gulf has offered a new two-year contract instead of a one-year settlement on wages and benefits for the second half of an existing two-year pact.

Sources said the latest Gulf offer meets the union's demands for immediate hourly wage increases averaging $1 an hour for the current $9.55 average wage, and sets wage increases of 10.5 percent in 1981.

The tentative pact comes closer than previous offers to matching the union request for full payment of medical and dental insurance, sources said.

In Houston, Gulf spokesman Kirk Vogeley said OCAW locals would meet today at four Gulf refineries — Port Arthur, Texas; Cincinnati and Toledo, Ohio, and Santa Fe Springs, Calif. — to discuss the tentative settlement.

"The language difficulty that had arisen over a new proposal has been resolved," Vogeley said, referring to a wording problem that had stalled the OCAW national policy committee's deliberations.

"The situation is positive inasmuch as the major economic issues had already been resolved," Vogeley said.

OCAW contracts are negotiated at the local level, but must be approved by the national bargaining committee, headed by Goss, in Denver before they can be ratified.

Settlements have been reached with 20 independent oil companies since the union went on strike Jan. 8, but talks with the larger companies remained fruitless until Goss went to Houston for two days last week to talk with Gulf officials.

About 55,000 workers still are idled by the strike at domestic refineries owned by more than 100 oil companies.

St. Pat's festivities attract 10,000

With an estimated crowd of 10,000 Irishmen in peaceful celebration at the Shamrock festivities, first place awards were presented to the best of the year.

In the Miss Irish Rose competition, Brenda Gil of Canyon, walked off with the title for 1980. Brenda is the 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Gil of Canyon.

The float competition presented some stiff competition with the winning "Judges' Choice" going to the Pioneer West Museum Float. First place in the commercial division went to Cantrell L. P. Gas Co. of Healdy, the non-commercial prize went to the Shamrock American Legion. The first prize church float was from the Baptist Church in Shamrock.

The St. Patrick's Domino Tournament was won by Kelly Locke and Leroy Jarvis in doubles competition and by Jerry Bob Jernigan in the singles competition.

Shamrock residents say, "Good-bye to all the Leprechauns who were present at the 1980 Irish Celebration. With all good will and the best of Irish Luck, you are welcome again next year."

Republic of Ireland — the three are involved in a seemingly eternal triangle. It would need someone with the powerful personality and persuasive gifts of St. Patrick to create harmony and good will in the troubled North. He would face a monumental task in rooting out the hatred and suspicion caused by economic, religious and political differences.

What are some of these sore points? Northern Ireland officially wants to remain a part of Britain, the Dublin government wants a United Ireland, predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland wants no part of reunification with the predominantly Roman Catholic South, and Irish Catholics in the North charge that they are victims of job discrimination. Dublin's Prime Minister Charles Haughey is urging England to get out of Northern Ireland as a first step toward peace in the British province.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is trying to find some way out of the mess. She has organized a conference of Protestant and Catholic leaders of Northern Ireland in an attempt to alter the political system. Haughey says the conference cannot provide "a conclusive settlement" because reunification has been ruled out by the conferees.

Anytime a settlement plan is suggested, one side or the other refuses to accept some key proposal.

So there you are, St. Patrick. Dare you come back and tackle all that?

Even the Irish saint had a confrontation with the British during his lifetime. The soldiers of Coroticus, a British king, raided Ireland and killed a number of new Christians on the very day of their baptism. Others had been carried off into slavery, and some priests sent by Patrick to England to protest were subjected to ridicule. So Patrick fired off a hot letter to Coroticus demanding a return of the captives and blasting the king. Patrick urged the Christian subjects of Coroticus not to have any dealings with their ruler and his followers until full satisfaction was obtained.

Another story handed down through the centuries tells of St. Patrick's conversion and baptism of an Irish King, Angus, who probably was an O'Brien, O'Connor, O'Leary or an O'Neill — all powerful clans. Patrick, in his full bishop's regalia, performed the baptismal ceremony outdoors at the Rock of Cashel in Tipperary. During the rite, Patrick thrust the sharp iron point of his pastoral staff toward the ground. When the ceremony ended, Patrick discovered to his dismay he had driven the staff into the king's foot. "Oh, why didn't you tell me?" asked the anguished saint. "I thought it was part of the baptism," the king replied. He wasn't injured seriously and presumably became a good Christian except for an occasional skirmish with a neighboring king. There were kings all over Ireland in those days.

Legend has it that Patrick was a man of great good humor. He might have enjoyed some of the Irish jokes floating around today. The Irish like to kid themselves, their politicians and their priests.

Paddy Burke, campaigning for office, was making a speech in a County Cork village. He was giving forth with the usual promises and political baloney, when someone in the crowd shouted,

"I wouldn't vote for you if you were St. Patrick himself!"

"You couldn't vote for me," Burke shouted back, "because if I were St. Patrick I'd be in heaven and you'd be in hell!"

And they tell the one about Father McCarthy of Kilarney in County Kerry. He approached 80-year-old Mike Manon on the street and asked, "Would you be so kind as to buy a raffle ticket?"

"What's it for?" asks Mike in a quavering voice.

"The raffle is for the poor young widow Kelly."

So Mike wheezes, "And what would I be doing with the young widow Kelly?"

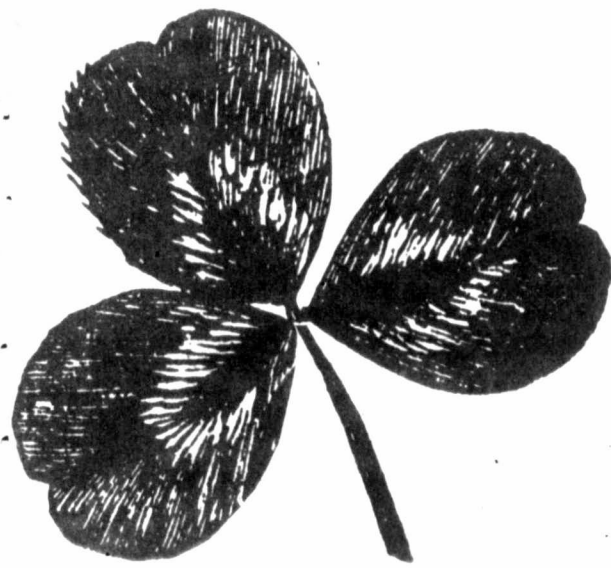

In closing, here's a prayer based on one written 15 centuries ago by St. Patrick:

May the wisdom of God instruct you.
May the eye of God watch over you.
May the ear of God hear you.
May the hand of God defend you.
May the way of God guide you.

Dublin celebrates
DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Green-clad girls dancing jigs and reels, and 23 bands from five countries paraded today as 250,000 Dubliners turned out in gray, chilly weather to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

Prime Minister Charles Haughey, alluding to celebrations around the world, said the observance of St. Patrick's Day is "a tribute to our people everywhere."

More than 4,000 people marched, danced and rode past the central Dublin reviewing stand — far short of the tens of thousands who join New York's parade.

Weather

The forecast calls for generally cold weather today with diminishing winds but colder tonight. It will be clear and quite cold tonight sunny and warmer Tuesday. The high for today will be in the mid 40s the low in the mid 20s and the high for Tuesday will be in the low 60s.

No arrests in Vega dogfight raid

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — District Attorney Roland Saul for Oldham and Deaf Smith counties today debated filing charges in what investigators said was an illegal dogfight conducted Saturday night.

Texas Department of Public Safety Troopers accompanied investigators for the U.S. Humane Society in raiding a machine shop six miles east of Vega, in Oldham County.

There were no arrests, but the investigators took the names of about 40 people inside the machine shop and seized three pit bulldogs found in the building.

"It was obviously built for two purposes," investigator Rick Collard said of the building, "a machine shop and a dogfight pit."

Collard, with the Humane Society's offices in Washington, said he could not determine who owned the dogs. The animals were treated for superficial wounds by an Amarillo veterinarian and were to be held for evidence at a possible trial.

A local humane society investigator, Dale Morrison, said he got a tip last week that there would be a dogfight Saturday, and helped organize the raid.

Conducting a dogfight is a Class A misdemeanor under Texas law. However, Collard said if the dogs were transported across state lines, the dog owners could be penalized under provisions of the U.S. Animal Welfare Act of 1976.

He said he does not know who owned the dogs seized in Saturday's raid, but said he took names and addresses of several persons from out-of-state, some as far away as Kansas and California.

Kidnap victim remains missing

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Despite hundreds of phone calls to the FBI offices in Dallas and here, investigators said late Sunday there weren't any new developments in the kidnapping of an 88-year-old woman.

A two-state search for Ella Shelton of The Village, an Oklahoma City suburb, continued Sunday. An FBI spokesman said she was the abduction victim in a kidnap-extortion plot that netted her abductors $25,000.

Ed Pistey, special agent in charge of the FBI in Oklahoma, said Mrs. Shelton was taken Thursday from the home she shared with her daughter. The residence had been burglarized, he said.

The daughter, Jewell Shelton, paid a $25,000 ransom for her mother's release Thursday night in Denton, Texas. An FBI spokesman said Jewell Shelton didn't receive any communication from her mother's abductors after the ransom was dropped.

Jewell Shelton is a vice president at Fidelity Bank in Oklahoma City.

Sometime after 10 a.m. Thursday, the daughter received a call indicating her mother had been abducted. The caller demanded a ransom of $25,000 for her mother's safe release. The woman had a series of phone calls at various locations with the kidnapper.

At about 6:30 p.m. Thursday, approximately eight hours after the first call, the ransom was dropped and picked up in Denton, Pistey said. Agents went door-to-door interviewing residents of the drop area.

Officials refused to speculate on her condition. But, Pistey said, Mrs. Shelton, if released, could be lost or disoriented because of medical problems, her age and shock stemming from what she was put through.

FBI officials said there probably was more than one kidnapper. A source close to the investigation in Dallas, said Mrs. Shelton's daughter, accompanied by an FBI agent, dropped the ransom money near the North Texas State University golf course close to Interstate 35.

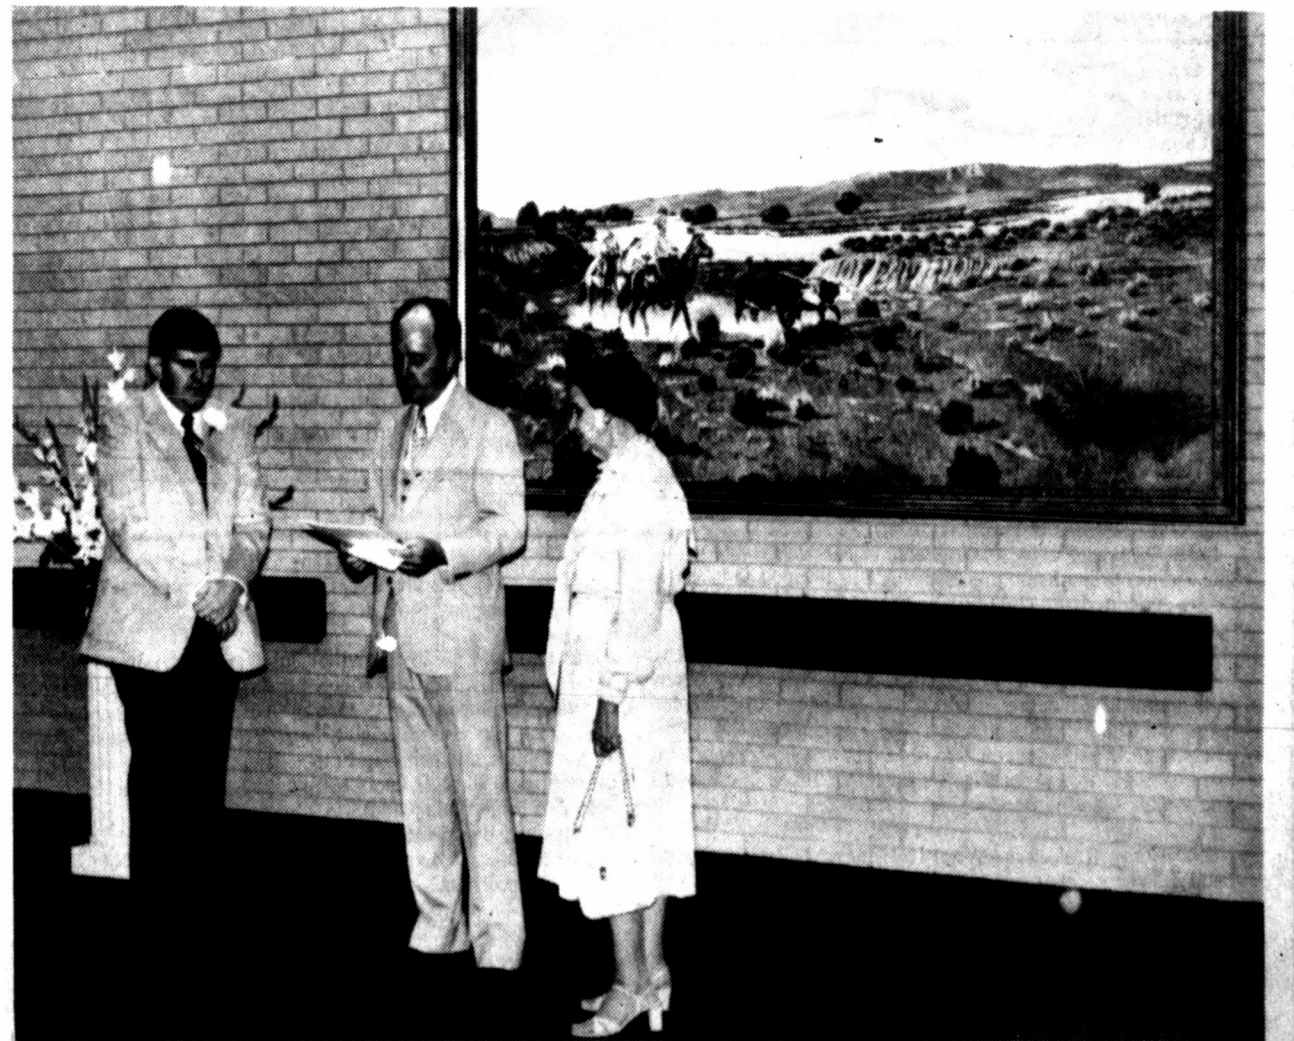

Warren declined to say if the man who picked up the money had been watched, but he did say, "You might surmise that from the fact we got the description."

Asked if there had been a mixup in an attempt to arrest any suspects at the drop site, Warren said, "That's not necessarily the case."

FBI spokesman John Warren said the bureau usually follows the wishes of relatives and agents sometimes can't get as close as they would like.

The FBI released a composite drawing of a man who may have picked up the ransom Saturday afternoon. The man is described as being a white man, 20 to 30 years of age, with a dark complexion and dark hair down to the middle of his neck. He had full bushy sideburns and was driving a late-model Chevrolet sport pickup, Pistey said.

Mrs. Shelton is described as a white woman, about 5-feet-5, with a slight build and weighing about 100 pounds.

from the Texas legislature. The oil by Arlington artist Roy Lee Ward was dedicated to the memory of John T. Bowers Sr. who died in 1972 and depicts a scene on the Bowers ranch south of Pampa.

Gas, Kansas holds legacy of a boom town gone bust

GAS, Kan. (AP) — Here in Gas, you can get a free cup of coffee at the service station. Gasoline? Well that goes for more than $1 a gallon and is trucked in a couple of times a week. But free low-pressure natural gas is as near as your backyard, the legacy of a boom town that went bust. Nearly a century ago, Gas was born atop the largest natural gas field in the world. Experts thought the field would last 100 years. They were wrong. The gas pressure began to drop, and Gas faded and dwindled. Now a residential community of about 500, Gas clings to busy U.S. 54 for its life. And people in

Gas, like people everywhere, complain about gasoline prices. "Most people think they're being ripped off," says Ray Pershall, who helps his son run the local filling station. "But the high prices are deterring purchases. Now we can use that extra money to develop more energy for this country." Unlike people everywhere, residents of Gas still have a huge natural gas field. Plenty of backyard wells produce natural gas in pressures too low for commercial use but just right for household use. Some residents have had their own wells since 1910. In these days of skyrocketing energy prices, still other residents are talking about drilling wells. A hardware store owner in town who recently drilled a $9,000 well uses the natural gas for two business buildings and his home. "You don't even have to pump it," says Pershall, a retired oil and gas distributor. "Hell, it flows." In the boom-town days, the gas was a plentiful nuisance. Drillers burned it to get at more valuable resources like coal, oil and water. "Those flares would light up the whole town, 24 hours a day," says Gladys Boeken, whose father told her about Gas boom days. "Everybody thought it would never run out." By the turn of the century, Gas offered unlimited free natural gas to industry and the town had its own natural street lights. By 1907, there were nine zinc smelters in the area, making it the zinc smelting center of the world. But three years later, the pressure dropped, and the zinc works, smelters, brick plants and iron works began closing. "We've been trying to clean up the scars and evidence of those boom days ever since," Pershall says. "There's still acres and acres of land yet to go." One remaining symbol of Gas' energy heritage is a 100-foot tower, painted red and inscribed, "GAS KAN." Unfortunately, it contains only water.

GAS KAN IN GAS. This bright red water tower remains this eastern Kansas community's link with its energy heritage. The town was born nearly a century ago atop the world's largest natural gas field. But the gas pressure dropped. Gasoline sells for more than a dollar a gallon here, but many residents look no further than their backyard for low pressure natural gas for their stoves. (AP Photo)

Nuclear plant accident hospitalizes 3

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — Three construction workers remained hospitalized today — one of them in critical condition — following in a gas explosion at Consumers Power Co.'s nuclear plant construction site near Midland, officials at a Saginaw hospital said. The explosion occurred Saturday in the auxiliary building at the plant, while construction workers for Bechtel Corp. were checking a leak in a "Napp" gas line, said Consumers spokesman Thomas Cook.

The gas was used for steel-cutting construction equipment, and is similar to that used to fuel an acetylene torch, Cook said. He could not be more specific.

Rare microbe cause young boy's death

ATLANTA (AP) — Doctors and researchers are puzzled by a rare disease, caused by microbes found throughout the environment, that has killed only about 20 persons in the United States in 32 years. The latest victim is a small boy who lived on the Fort Bliss

Army reservation at El Paso, Texas, the national Center for Disease Control reported. The disease, a rare form of amoebic meningoencephalitis, is caused by amoebae, organisms which are found in lakes, ponds, the air and soil. The microbes are ubiquitous, occurring throughout the world, but the infections are exceedingly rare, said Dr. G. Alexander Carden, a medical epidemiologist. Carden said it has not been proven, but a brain biopsy indicates that the child somehow was infected with the rarer of two forms of amoebae. He said tests indicate that the 2½-year-old boy is believed to have been killed by Acanthamoeba, listed as the cause of death for only 20 persons in 32 years.

Afghan rebels claiming success

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan rebels today claimed to have inflicted considerable losses on Afghan government troops in fighting in three provinces. A statement by the Afghan National Liberation Front issued in Islamabad, Pakistan, said the government forces and the Soviet troops helping them suffered 50 dead and an undisclosed number of wounded in a rebel attack on a military base at Barri in the eastern province of Paktia on the Pakistan border. The statement said the base was still under siege and claimed rebel losses in the fighting so far were two killed and nine seriously wounded. Another squad of National Liberation Front rebels attacked the military base at Kufry in the eastern province of Kunar, also on the Pakistan frontier, the statement said. "After heavy fighting, two officers and many soldiers were killed," it said, adding, 75 Afghan soldiers surrendered to the rebels. At Shoonkrai, also in Kunar, the rebels clashed with government troops, inflicting

"heavy casualties on them," the statement said. It did not give the number of government casualties, but said six rebels were killed and three were seriously wounded. Like most reports of fighting in the 23-month-old Afghan war, these accounts could not be independently confirmed.

Farm scene

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has been knocked out of what looked to be a sure bet as the No. 2 foreign customer of American farmers by President Carter's partial embargo of further grain sales this fiscal year.

Meanwhile, China is edging higher on the list as a buyer of U.S. farm commodities and may rank in the top 10 in terms of dollar value of purchases, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

The export dollar figures used to rank major foreign customers of American farmers are based mostly on fiscal year statistics. Currently, those are for the year that began Oct. 1.

According to the latest USDA projections, farm exports to all countries in 1979-80 are expected to be about $37 billion, a record for the 11th straight year. They totaled about $32 billion in 1978-79.

The Soviet Union, prior to Carter's embargo action on Jan. 4, was expected to buy at least $4 billion worth of U.S. farm products this year, but that now has been scaled back to an estimated $1.3 billion. Purchases totaled $2.2 billion last year.

Most of the Soviet purchases involve shipments made before Carter's embargo, but also include part of the grain exempt from the suspension because it was pledged under a previous agreement.

If the Soviet Union had been allowed to continue purchases — reaching the $4 billion mark — it probably would have ranked behind only Japan as the leading single-country market for U.S. agricultural products.

Japan, the perennial leader, is expected to purchase around $5.6 billion worth of commodities this fiscal year, up from $5.1 billion in 1978-79.

China, meanwhile, may buy around $1.3 billion worth of U.S. commodities this year, just slightly less than what is projected for the Soviet Union. Exports to China in 1978-79 were valued at $917 million.

No official ranking has been published by USDA for this fiscal year, but here is how the top 10 shaped up in 1978-79, rounded off to approximate values:

Japan, $5.1 billion; Netherlands, $2.4 billion; Soviet Union, $2.2 billion; Canada, $1.7 billion; West Germany, $1.5 billion; South Korea, $1.4 billion; United Kingdom, $1.1 billion; Taiwan, $977 million; Mexico, $972 million; and Italy, $927 million.

As a region, Asia is expected to continue as the leading market for U.S. farm commodities, with exports projected this year at $13.8 billion, up from $11.7 billion in 1978-79.

Western Europe is next, with exports to it expected to be about $11 billion, compared to $9.7 billion last year.

Exports to Latin America, a rapidly growing market the last few years, are projected at $4.5 billion, up from $3.4 billion in 1978-79.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 45-year-old publication by the Soil Conservation Service has been scrapped in favor of a new monthly "news magazine" the agency says will be more attuned to the 1980s.

The SCS, an agency of the Agriculture Department, is observing its 45th anniversary this year. It provides farmers and other landowners with technical help to conserve the nation's soil and water.

Each month since August 1935, the agency has issued "Soil Conservation" as its official publication. Its main readers are agency employees throughout the country and officials of local conservation districts.

Clayton scheduled in Brilab probe hearing

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors directing a Houston grand jury Brilab investigation today prepared questions for one of the key figures in the probe. Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton.

Clayton has told reporters he will answer all questions asked of him by the grand jury, despite advice from his attorneys that he invoke the 5th Amendment.

The grand jury met in February and listened to testimony from 14 witnesses, including several labor union officials and three Houston city councilmen, then recessed for a month.

Clayton had been subpoenaed to appear at the original sessions, but U.S. Attorney Tony Canales granted him a delay.

Clayton has admitted receiving $5,000 during a Nov. 8 meeting with L.G. Moore, regional director of the Operating Engineers International Union, and Joseph Hauser, an FBI informant posing as an insurance company representative.

The three reportedly discussed the state's $70 million employee health insurance policy.

The speaker said Moore gave him the cash in "a stack of $100 bills" as a campaign contribution.

Clayton said he put the money in a safe place so he could return it the next time Moore was in Austin.

He is seeking a record fourth term as speaker but has said he will withdraw "if I am indicted and couldn't get a trial to vindicate and clear myself before the beginning of the next session of the Legislature (January 1981)."

The grand jury also is to hear from Moore, whose attorney successfully delayed an appearance in February with several legal actions.

In the February session, attorney Michael J. Hinton, representing James Middleton, secretary-treasurer of Laborers International Union Local 18, said Hauser and Houston Port Commissioner John Garrett offered his client a substantial sum of money to change the local's insurance policy, but turned it down.

The day Middleton appeared, Hinton told reporters, "There was one small offer to Mr. Middleton and one large one."

When asked to name the amount, Hinton said, "I can't tell you, but it was extremely large, it was up there."

The FBI undercover operation, code-named Brilab, began in Louisiana and then spread to Texas.

Documents filed in a Los Angeles federal court indicate government agents posed for 10 months as independent insurance agents and paid thousands of dollars in bribes.

Sherman Fricks, business manager for the 8,000-member Pipefitters Union Local 211 in Houston, said he once was offered money by an FBI informant, posing as an insurance representative.

Fricks said, "I am convinced I was being set up to talk about money."

The labor leader said Hauser "talked about the mayor's race in Houston and said he would give us some front money for our candidate."

Fricks said he refused the offer.

Clements, Portillo ignore oil well leaks

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements spent two days talking to Mexican president Jose Lopez Portillo, but avoided one of the biggest issues involving the two governments — a leaking offshore oil well.

The only public mention of the Ixtoc I oil well blowout came as the talks concluded here Saturday. The director of Pemex, Mexico's government-owned oil company, said any judgment rendered by U.S. courts concerning the well might be ignored.

"Any claim made against Pemex should be within Mexican law in the courts of Mexico," said Gen. Jorge Diaz Serrano.

Clements and Mexican officials avoided discussing the sensitive issue during their talks.

After the well blew out June 3, an estimated 30,000 barrels of oil spilled into the Gulf of Mexico daily.

Some of the crude oozed northward and stained miles of South Texas beaches in August and September, cutting that area's annual tourist business in half, tourism officials said.

Pemex and Texas-based SEDCO are defendants in federal lawsuits seeking almost $500,000 in restitution for damages to Texas beaches.

SEDCO, founded and formerly headed by Clements, has served notice it will file a third-party lawsuit to shift damage liability to Pemex and Pemargo, the Mexican-owned drilling firm that operated the well using SEDCO equipment.

Diaz Serrano contends the Mexican courts are the only proper channels since Pemex operates as an arm of the Mexican government. He also says only Mexican courts have authority over the company because there are "no internal standards fixing responsibility for this kind of accident."

He said his company would not comment on the threatened SEDCO action "until they come to us through the proper channels, then we will give answers."

A year later, nuclear industry fighting mistrust

EDITOR'S NOTE — The nuclear age exploded into popular consciousness on March 28, 1979, with the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant. This first part of a four-part series — "TMI Plus One" — examines what TMI has meant to the nuclear power industry.

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One year after the accident at Three Mile Island the nuclear power industry is fighting a legacy of mistrust that it finds hard to shed.

"Now enemies of nuclear power the world over have a memorable symbol — Three Mile Island — of the sort they have long craved," Fortune Magazine said shortly after the accident.

W. Wilson Goode, then-chairman of the Public Utility Commission of Pennsylvania, where the accident occurred, said last November, "Beyond those plants now under construction, we should not count on nuclear as a generating source."

Even after Three Mile Island, the nuclear industry has been embarrassed by mishaps that defied its high technology: a transformer short that shut down Salem One in New Jersey; a shutdown at San Onofre, Calif., when an electrician accidentally hit a switch; an accidental release of radioactive water at Quad Cities in Illinois because too many valves were opened and a hose was connected to the wrong pipe; the disabling of a vital emergency system at Beaver Valley in Pennsylvania when two valves were shut in violation of the rules.

Critics say each new mistake is a reminder of the ignorance and complacency which led to the Three Mile Island fiasco.

When TMI Unit 2 "tripped out" on March 28, 1979, it was a type of accident the industry and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission had never planned for, and plant operators were not trained for.

They overlooked an open valve spilling cooling-water; ignored signals of soaring heat; disregarded evidence of crumbling fuel rods; turned off an automatic emergency cooling system.

The reactor was ruined and within an hour of melting before one operator closed a valve that stopped the leak, and even then he apparently did not realize he was saving the reactor from meltdown and the Harrisburg, Pa., area from mass evacuation.

Radioactive gas was inadvertently leaked to the outside air. A hazardous hydrogen bubble developed, but it too was a surprise and there was no vent to release it. Members of the NRC, responsible for reactor safety, feared that the bubble might burn or explode but it took days to figure out they were wrong.

Since then, the Three Mile Island accident has been combed through by the NRC staff; an NRC-hired investigating team, and a presidential commission, among others.

The NRC has issued dozens of directives and regulations based on the "lessons learned" to make nuclear power safer.

Some of those lessons have already proved valuable. When the Crystal River nuclear plant in Florida malfunctioned last

Feb. 26 its operators, "sensitized" by Three Mile Island, quickly blocked off a stuck-open valve and kept emergency cooling on until they were sure the plant was safe.

But even before TMI, the nuclear industry was stagnated by rising construction costs, sagging electricity demand and regulatory red tape. Only two nuclear plants were ordered in 1978, none in 1979.

The accident's costs have pushed General Public Utilities, parent of TMI's operating company, to the brink of bankruptcy.

Other utilities have canceled or postponed new atomic plants or talked of converting them to coal.

New plants already built have been barred from starting operation while the NRC painstakingly reviews their equipment and procedures.

On Feb. 28 the NRC granted the Sequoyah plant in Tennessee the first new operating license in eleven months, but it allowed only testing at no more than 5 percent of full power.

Its back to the wall, the nuclear industry is fighting back.

Consumer guidelines on how to save

Battered by bills and double-digit inflation, U.S. families are spending more and saving less these days.

The U.S. League of Savings Association says that in the last quarter of 1979, savings totaled only 3.3 percent of disposable income — the lowest rate of any time since World War II.

In January, the Consumer Price Index increased at an annual rate of 18 percent. Even the high-interest certificates of deposit pay less than 18 percent a year. An ordinary savings account pays less than 6 percent annually. There is less incentive to save when your dollars are not even earning enough to keep up with inflation.

Efforts are under way in Congress to encourage savings by providing a tax deduction for part of the interest earned. There also are proposals to remove the ceiling on interest rates on savings accounts.

For most people, saving is a day-to-day, dollar-by-dollar activity and economists at Citibank, the nation's second largest commercial bank, have some advice to make it easier.

Establish goals. Figure out how much you need on hand in case of an emergency. "Experts suggest that in today's economic climate, an emergency fund should, with the help of unemployment insurance, be large enough to carry you for six months ... if you should lose your job," says a recent Citibank newsletter for consumers. Decide how much you can realistically expect to set aside on a regular basis and set a target date for bringing your emergency fund up to par.

Once you develop a master plan, you'll have to find the money to make it work. Here are some suggestions from Citibank:

—Pay yourself first. When you get your paycheck, put part of it — even if it's only a few dollars — into a savings account before you do anything else. If you wait to see what you have left after paying the bills, the chances are you won't have anything.

—Collect coins. Put loose change into a jar or jars. When you have enough, get coin wrappers from the bank and deposit the money in a savings account.

—Put refunds to work. When you get a refund for a supermarket product, put it in the bank instead of in your wallet. If you have business expenses for which you are reimbursed, put the company payments into a special savings account.

—Take advantage of a debt repayment.

Suppose you've been paying off a bill at the rate of $25 a month. You're used to setting aside the $25. When the bill is paid, continue to set aside the $25, but put it into savings instead.

—Break one habit to start another. Do you really need that Danish pastry you eat at work every day? Are you trying to stop smoking? Put the money you normally would spend on habits like these in a piggy bank and periodically transfer the contents to a savings account.

May's mushers claim prize

NOME, Alaska (AP) — After two weeks on the old gold rush trail, Joe May and his 10 dogs mushed over the finish line here to claim a $14,500 prize and set a record for the 1,150-mile Iditarod "Sled Dog Race."

The race was marked by tragedy when three members of a Spanish film crew and their Alaskan pilot were killed in the crash of a Cessna 185 on Friday near the village of Shaktoolik, where they were filming the competition.

May lopped seven hours off the old record, finishing 14 days, 7 hours, 11 minutes and 51 seconds after leaving Anchorage March 1. Emmitt Peters had set the record of 14 days, 14 hours, 43 minutes and 45 seconds in 1975, but that race did not include a 24-hour rest stop now required of mushers.

With his closest competitors hours behind him, May mushed casually over the finish line Saturday night in this old gold rush city on Norton Sound.

"It looks like the dogs are counting the house," said one of the hundreds of observers.

Joe Redington of Knik, who started the annual race in 1973, praised May's dogs, which are one-quarter Irish setter, as "happy" dogs, not too sensitive to trail conditions.

Herbie Nayokpuk of Shishmaref came in second, crossing the finish line 13 hours and 20 minutes behind May. Ernie Baumgartner of McGrath was third with a time of 15 days, nine hours, nine minutes and 59 seconds.

Rick Swenson of Eureka, the defending champion and the only person to have won the Iditarod twice, was fourth with a time of 15 days, 10 hours, 12 minutes and 49 seconds. Susan Butcher of Knik was fifth with a time of 15 days, 10 hours, 17 minutes and 6 seconds. Roger Nordum of Kotzebue came in sixth after 15 days, 10 hours, 34 minutes and 14 seconds.

Other mushers were still on the trail. In all, 62 mushers started the race, 23 scratched, and one was disqualified.

Carter, Reagan go into primary as front runners

CHICAGO (AP) — The news is good for President Carter and Ronald Reagan as they look for another big boost toward their party presidential nominations in the Illinois primary on Tuesday.

A poll published today by the Chicago Tribune showed Reagan moving ahead of Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, while Carter held a large lead over Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Carter also got a push by winning the popular vote in Puerto Rico's presidential primary Sunday, gaining 21 of the island's 41 delegate votes at the Democratic National Convention.

And it appeared the president would pick up at least 64 delegate votes in victories over Kennedy in Democratic party caucuses over the weekend in Mississippi, South Carolina and Wyoming.

The latest Illinois poll gave Reagan 36 percent, Anderson 34 percent and George Bush 12 percent among people who said they intended to vote in the Republican presidential primary. A week ago, Anderson led with 33 percent to 31 for Reagan and 20 for Bush.

However, the Tribune poll carries an error factor of plus or minus 5 percent, meaning that Reagan's and Anderson's positions could be reversed or Reagan could be farther ahead.

On the Democratic side, Carter had 56 percent and Kennedy 23 percent. Carter's percentage dropped from 61 a week ago while Kennedy's support was unchanged.

With the exception of Carter, who is continuing off the campaign trail, the major candidates were in Illinois on the final day before this first test with the voters of a large industrial state.

Reagan was addressing the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, while Kennedy planned to march in Chicago's St. Patrick's Day parade. Bush and Anderson were to visit several cities across the state.

With 96 percent of Puerto Rico's precincts reporting, Carter had 52 percent of the vote to 48 percent for Kennedy.

Based on preliminary percentages from caucuses Saturday, Carter is expected to gain 30 of Mississippi's 32 Democratic convention delegates and 27 of South Carolina's 37 delegates.

Carter victory in the Wyoming caucuses should give him 13 of the state's 18 delegates and Kennedy the other five. But since Wyoming actually will have only 11 convention votes — as opposed to delegates — this means something like 7.9 votes for Carter and 3.1 for Kennedy. While Reagan has opened a sizeable lead over the Republican field as a result of two primary victories in two New England and four in southern states, he is locked in a battle in Illinois with Anderson.

Anderson, whose views are in sharp contrast to other GOP candidates, has attracted support from independent and Democratic voters crossing over to vote in Republican primaries. But Anderson's reluctance to declare he would support any GOP nominee, including Reagan, has drawn fire for alleged disloyalty.

Reagan told a news conference Sunday he thought Anderson ought to ask himself if he might be more comfortable as a Democrat. Reagan, himself a former Democrat, said he wasn't going to "read anyone" out of the party but noted:

"An individual must take a look and say, 'Am I more sympathetic to the views enunciated by the people in the other party?'"

Anderson responded by saying at one campaign stop, "I am proud to be a Republican."

Reagan also got good news over the weekend when former President Gerald R. Ford announced he would not enter the presidential race. Ford had said he was considering running because he feared Reagan was too conservative to win the general election in November.

Ford's decision must have been a "very hard" one, Reagan said, adding, "He wanted to get in, I know that."

The California governor also hinted that he expects soon to have the support of John B. Connally, who dropped out of the race for the nomination after losing to Reagan in South Carolina.

At an appearance in Schaumburg, a questioner asked Reagan if he expected to have Connally's help in the Texas primary. "I believe 'Big John' is going to cooperate quite warmly," Reagan replied.

BRIGHT AND BRIEF

CARRABASSETT VALLEY, Maine (AP) — There was no place for skin and bones at the 12th annual World Heavyweight Ski Championship at the Sugarloaf USA ski resort.

The winner, John J. Truden, of West Springfield, Mass., weighed in before Sunday's contest at 482 pounds. Truden has claimed the distinction of being the fastest "big boy," as the resort calls the competitors — winning four times in 11 years.

Truden compared himself to heavyweight boxer Muhammad Ali, who is training to make his fourth comeback from retirement.

"I've done it, so now Ali can do it," Truden said, waving his poles and skis in victory after his second and final run down the 10-gate, dual slalom course.

But Ali might find the training regimen at Sugarloaf a bit unorthodox.

To help competitors shape up for the event, the resort throws a "Heavyweight Banquet" the night before and an "eat-in" the morning before the race.

Then the contestants are weighed — on cattle scales — to determine their handicap.

New Village residents put the sun to work

By EARL BOHN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — With a hand on their bootstraps and an eye to the future, 50 families are building a town where homes won't have furnaces and "Thou shalt not block thy neighbors' sun" is the 11th Commandment.

Taking shape on 200 acres of cornfields and forest about an hour's drive southeast of Pittsburgh is New Village, a low-energy community where moderate- and low-income families can afford solar living.

The future residents say they can save money by designing and building their own homes. The experiment also could help shorten the path to U.S. energy self-sufficiency.

Other communities have aspects of solar technology," says Charlotte Stevens, a planning consultant. "But New Village is unique in that it has such a strong ingredient of self help."

The project was fostered by the private, nonprofit Institute on Man and Science of Rensselaerville, N.Y., which specializes in helping communities help themselves.

The Institute combined $250,000 of its own with a $750,000 grant from the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation to provide interest-free seed money for New Village.

"Our goal is to provide a model for the nation," says Hal Williams, president of the Institute. "If we can show that this project can be done at a low price, our hope is many other homebuilders will do it. That would sure as hell make us far less dependent on foreign oil," he says.

The New Villagers are using technology patented by Ed O'Hanlin, a Clifton Park, N.Y., inventor who decided homes could be as well insulated as the meat freezers his company makes. He says homes built with his technology use about 90 percent less purchased energy than existing homes but cost about the same.

New Villagers, mostly local residents, hope to keep the cost of a three-bedroom home to $28,000, instead of $60,000 a contractor would charge.

Community members, who must repay the institute's seed money, can work off part of their debt by digging sewers, building roads and serving on planning committees.

New Villagers may choose their own home designs, provided they are 90 percent more energy efficient than existing homes in the area. But planners expect most members to copy the O'Hanlin-designed.

From the ground up, the structures will have these features:

- A mass of heat-storing material buried in the basement to hold the energy collected from the sun.
- A simple post and beam frame instead of 2-by-4 studs, thick insulating, with windows and doors sealed air-tight.
- The largest windows face south, where the sun is brightest in the winter. In the summer, the roof overhang shields the windows from the sun's higher arc.
- Two 4-by-8 foot solar collectors on the roof of an average, 1,400-square-foot home.

There's no fee for joining New Village, but there is a price to pay. "Everybody works for the community. That's part of the obligation of membership," says John Hemmington, the group's attorney.

Each family must attend four of every six weekly meetings during the planning stages. And when home construction begins, no one will be allowed to block a neighbor's sunlight.

Villagers are learning how to do everything from excavate to insulate. "I can't drive a stick-shift car, but I can drive a front loader," says Linda Nichol, who learned to handle earth-moving equipment when land preparation began recently. "Before this I was a housekeeper. Now I'm running a front-loader and shoveling cement."

The Fitness Fact Book

Sweat has become stylish

By Theodore Berland
(First of 14 parts)

Everybody's doing it. Getting in shape. Getting fit.

A 1977 Gallup Poll indicated that 47 percent of Americans participate in some form of physical exercise daily. That is double the proportion who told pollsters they did so in 1961.

According to Gallup, the exercising population includes about as many women as men and about as many marrieds as singles.

Roughly equal percentages of the rich, middle-class and poor exercise. However, more college-educated, middle- and upper-income people are exercising today than before.

Perspiration was declared 50 years ago. But today sweating is in.

It's not easy to pinpoint where and when the new emphasis on exercise started.

This newspaper series will explain many of the basics you need to know about getting in shape through diet, exercise and sports. More detailed information is contained in my "Fitness Fact Book." For your copy, send $1.95 plus 50 cents postage and handling to "Fitness Fact Book" in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Engaging in exercises and sports can be good for you. But it will not cure anything — not obesity, nervousness, boredom or any of a score of ailments for which it is recommended.

In the long run, you will be healthier and feel better. In the short run, you will be miserable until you get into shape. Those already in shape rarely tell you that.

There are no guarantees. Exercising your heart is usually good for it, but there are those who collapse of heart attacks on jogging paths and racquetball courts. Nor can rigorous activity be undertaken without threat of injury — from a sprained ankle to a face smashed by a backhand.

You will discover once you have started, however, that you will feel strange when you don't exercise. You will find yourself packing jogging shoes, tennis racket or swim attire as you embark on a trip.

That says you are addicted to exercise.

Today, exercise-sports is the most widespread physical addiction in our land. If it sustains, Americans will step into the 21st century far more fit than were their ancestors who welcomed the 20th.

But President Carter won with 171 votes, Kennedy had 96 and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. tallied 42.

Kennedy told reporters he had been staying with his drug counselor Donald Juhl in Sacramento for several weeks. He had been hospitalized last year for an inflammation of the heart lining.

Gossip is an art in England

EDITOR'S NOTE — Gossip ... idle talk ... rumors. It's all brought to the state of an art in England, where gossip has been part of the heritage for centuries.

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Pssst. Wanna hear the latest? Princess Margaret and Roddy. Prince Charles and Lady Jane. Divorcee Jane or commoner Sabrina. David Frost and Anyone.

Britain has a seemingly insatiable appetite for gossip. Every day, the lives of royalty, politicians or just plain millionaires are exposed without mercy for the pleasure of the public. It's all big business on Fleet Street, where tabloids wage a Name in the News war to sell millions of newspapers.

Who are the gossipers?

Undoubtedly the best known is Nigel Dempster, the Daily Mail columnist who admits to wrecking many a romance or reputation.

Dempster claims his prose is read every morning by Princess Margaret as she breakfasts in bed "because she gets a giggle out of it."

"There would be no such thing as British gossip without the class system," says the 38-year-old writer.

"The reason people read me is because they demand information about people they can never hope to meet or see, but would like to know about because they — in some small way — affect their lives."

Dempster and his staff of four assistants work in a small, grimy office buried in back of the Daily Mail newsroom. The telephones ring incessantly.

Dempster's wealthy background and marriages to a countess and a descendant of King Edward VII give him an edge, for he moves in the same trendy circle as the people he writes about.

While other gossip columnists are reduced to bribing butlers or posing as waiters to get into Smart Set parties, Dempster is usually on the guest list.

His rivals accuse him of writing too nicely about the aristocracy. Even his employer, Lord Rothmere, has described Dempster's writing recently as a "an old cold fried potato." Dempster is leaving the Mail on April 3 after a prolonged contract dispute.

Dempster says that American gossip writers are "too bloody tame." He says he would have exposed U.S. Congressman Wilbur Mills' alcohol troubles long before the Fanne Fox affair.

"If only someone had written about it before, he might have saved himself," Dempster maintains.

"It's in the public interest to report when politicians have drinking problems or girlfriends."

What does the future hold in store for gossip?

"The next two events will be Prince Charles' marriage and Princess Anne's divorce. I don't think Capt. Mark Phillips can put up with her much longer. I give them at most five years."

As for Prince Charles, "he's become rather boring, like an overworked mine. There's not much left there."

Names in the news

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — David Kennedy, in a rare public appearance since beginning drug counseling, stumped for his uncle Edward M. Kennedy at a high school "convention," but the Massachusetts senator lost the student vote.

Kennedy, 24, son of the late Robert F. Kennedy, on Saturday attended a "presidential nominating convention" of the California Junior Statesmen of America, composed of high school students.

He made the nomination speech for his uncle, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for president, stressing that "My uncle believes the government must intervene and establish (wage and price) controls."
