Israeli baby killed in terrorist attack

KIBBUTZ MISGAV AM, Israel (AP) — Palestinian terrorists attacked a nursery in this kibbutz on the Israeli-Lebanese frontier today, killing an Israeli baby and two adults before troops stormed the building and killed all five Arab raiders and freed at least six hostages, the Israelis said.

The military command said an infant and an adult died in the Arab attack, and the army radio said a second adult also was killed. Four children, one adult and 11 soldiers were wounded, a military spokesman said.

All the Israeli civilian casualties came when the Lebanese-based terrorists shot their way into the hilltop frontier settlement shortly after midnight, the spokesman said.

Once inside the northern Galilee outpost, the Palestinians attacked a nursery where kibbutz children aged 1 1/2 to 3 were sleeping with some of their mothers keeping watch, a member of the collective farm, identified only as Avi, said in an interview with the army radio.

The settlers had rescued a number of women and children from the two-story children's house before the troops arrived at the kibbutz, Avi said.

"Members of the kibbutz took one part of the nursery and freed three mothers and two children," Avi said. "We pushed them (the terrorists) into a second area but some children were left inside."

Avi said the terrorists demanded the release of Palestinian prisoners and a plane to fly them out of the country.

The troops stormed the building at about 10 a.m., Avi said, adding, "It didn't take long and it was a clean job."

In Beirut, Lebanon, the Iraqi-backed Arab Liberation Front claimed responsibility for the attack and said the raiders demanded the release of 50 Palestinian prisoners in Israel. The front, one of eight guerrilla groups in Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, said the raid marked the 33rd anniversary of the Arab Socialist Bath Party.

The attack on Misgav Am came on an Israeli national holiday, the last day of the seven-day Passover observance marking the Israelites exodus from Egypt.

It also coincided with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's departure for Washington for talks with President Carter on the stalled Palestinian autonomy negotiations with Israel.

Israeli radio quoted a Lebanese Christian radio broadcast as saying Israeli air force jets had made warning flights over southern Lebanon following the attack and Israeli naval vessels were patrolling off the

Recount called in trustee race

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

A request for a vote recount for Place VII on the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees has been made by candidate Bunny Nichols, election officials said today.

An informal request has been made, Jerry Haralson said, and official notification will be given by Nichols sometime today.

"I know the election was conducted fairly and honestly," Mrs. Nichols said, "but anytime there is an election as close as this one, I think it would be doing the candidate — in this case, myself — an injustice to not ask for a recount. I am just exercising my right under the Texas Election Code."

Mrs. Nichols said she had verbally contacted the election officials about a recount and intended to officially notify all concerned later today. According to Saturday's election results, Nichols lost by three votes to incumbent board member, Buddy Epperson. Nichols reportedly received 529 votes to Epperson's 532.

Tomorrow, Haralson said, the school board will appoint a recount committee consisting of three registered voters. The recount is to take place in two to four days from designation of the committee on April 8.

The board will probably proceed with installation of the untested board members, Phil Vanderpool and Kenneth Fields in tomorrow's meeting, he said, and they will elect a new president. Position VII will be kept open until the recount results are given.

Officials from area elections report no other recount requests or disputed results.

Area election results unavailable for Sunday have been received.

WHEELER — All candidates were unopposed in the city council, mayor and school board elections. Voting tallies showed incumbent city council members David Cross - 39 and Louis Stas - 38 and Mayor O.B. Burton received 39 votes. School board members, Vida Brown and Richard Brown received 44 votes each. Hospital board incumbent John C. Wise had 39 votes. The only race in the elections showed Paul Brett coming out on top with 26 votes over T. J. Puryear - 19.

MIAMI — Three city council members were elected Saturday from a field of 16 candidates — nine were write-ins. Results show winners as incumbent Tom Strubbling - 264, Randall Gill - 124 and Kay Thompson - 216. Other candidates were Charles Beebe - 57, March Shearer - 30, Marshall Higginbotham - 43 and Bennett McCathern - 68. New school board members will be Jimmy Bowers and Terry Gill with 274 and 198 votes respectively. Kim Bean and Keith Locke received 178 and 82 votes respectively.

CANADIAN — Lynard Schafer, incumbent, and Larry Dortch will be the new school board members. They respectively received 269 and 263 votes. Other candidates were John Ramp, incumbent - 244, Elise Khriebal - 236 and Leo Thompson - 59.

LEFORS — A new mayor and two new city council members will take their places on the Lefors council. Wendell Akins won the mayoral race with 144 votes; opposing candidate J. W. Franks received 57. Ralph Hix and Ed Story are the new council members, while incumbent Royce Gee will retain his position. Voting results showed Gee with 151 votes, Hix - 120, Story - 128, Stephen Mills - 96 and Jessie Baker - 93.

Commission will hear appeal

A public hearing on the appeal of a city zoning board ruling denying a zoning change application will be heard Tuesday during the city commission's regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. in city hall.

Pampa citizens concerned with the application for a zoning change to allow for mobile homes in the 400 to 600 blocks of Nelson, Wells and Summer streets will be allowed to speak their minds concerning the change.

Mrs. Bernice Rippetoe of 601 N. Nelson applied for the rezoning on Feb. 22 to the city zoning board.

Negative responses from residents affected by the change were more numerous than positive ones, according to board chairman Bill Harris. Of the letters mailed out to area, 29 protests and 17 for the rezoning were returned. In total, he said, the board received 39 protests and 24 approvals from the 277 homeowners affected by the zoning.

An appeal was made by Mrs. Rippetoe to the city commission during its regular meeting on Feb. 26.

Two other public hearings will be conducted during Tuesday's meeting on the proposed amendment of Ordinance No. 690 providing for the storage of explosives in the light industrial district by a specific use permit — explosives may be stored only in the heavy industrial district — and a hearing on the zoning change from agricultural to commercial on the Superior Iron Works tract north of Price Rd. and Kentucky.

New city commission members will be installed, Tuesday. Coyle Ford will return to his seat as Ward II commissioner and newly-elected Clyde Carruth will take the Ward IV seat vacated by Linden "Butch" Shepherd.

The awarding of bids for the annual street maintenance program, the heating and cooling system for part of city hall and the police sedans will be considered by commissioners.

First reading of an ordinance concerning the compromise rate increase for Southwestern Public Service Company will be heard by the commission. The ordinance was prepared by the steering committee elected by area cities last fall to study the proposed rate increase.

First reading on an ordinance changing the zoning of the Butler Nursery property to office zone will be heard by commissioners, also.

The commission will consider adoption of a resolution concerning the reconstruction of Hwy. 70 from 21st Ave. to Loop 171. According to City Manager Mack Wolford there will be no obligation to the city should the proposed street improvement bond issue fail. "It is a necessary item in order for the state department to continue its planning," he said.

April 10 will be considered as the date for a special commission meeting. Items proposed on the agenda, Wolford said, will include the opening of bids on a heating and cooling system for Lovett Memorial Library and the final reading of the ordinance concerning the Butler Nursery property.

Other items on the agenda for tomorrow include consideration of salary changes for March and approval of current accounts payable.

Rate-aid packet for Texas cities

AUSTIN — A newly developed municipal assistance packet designed as an "equalizer between Texas municipalities and gas utilities in ratemaking proceedings" was recently unveiled by the state Railroad Commission.

The two-part packet, produced by the Railroad Commission's Gas Utilities Division, provides an overview of procedural steps and financial issues involved in determining gas utility rates. Commissioner Jim Nugent said it is available free of charge to city governments on request to the RRC utilities division.

The information in the packet will permit a city council, city attorney and city management to deal from a position of knowledge and understanding of the procedures and issues involved in setting a proper local burner tip rate, he said.

"Since coming to the Commission," he said, "I have been concerned about the ability of smaller Texas cities to deal on an equal basis with utility companies in establishing fair and reasonable natural gas burner tip rates for its citizens. Often, it seems the company has the upper hand — or the longer end of the lever."

The packet is the result of discussions that he had last summer with consumer representatives across the state, the Texas Municipal League, consultants and city officials to determine how the Commission could assist small communities which seldom have the technical and legal expertise to negotiate on equal footing with major utility companies.

One part of the packet — "Summary of "Procedures Involved in Ratemaking" — describes procedural steps from the filing of a statement of intent with the city by a gas utility. It traces steps through final determination at the Railroad Commission, if an appeal should be necessary.

This section details financial determinations involved in arriving at a fair rate of return for the utility. It is intended to serve as a guide to city leaders in deciding a fair rate.

The utilities are familiar with the law, procedures and the applicability of financial issues in rate determination, he said.

On the other hand, he added, "the cost of hiring good expertise is often disproportionate to the amount of increase sought by the utility, and sometimes threatens to cost the city as much as the requested increase itself."

Nugent said the utility customers have a right to adequate representation without fearing such representation will cost more than it saves. Most rate cases expenses are eventually charged back to the customer, either directly or indirectly, he said.

"Fairness is a fine line to be drawn between the company and the city customers. An informed city council can more properly draw this line, saving money for every customer, for the taxpayers of each city and for the state of Texas," he said.

The assistance packet was developed under the authority of Section 25 of the Texas Public Utilities Regulatory Act.

CELEBRATE EASTER— Syrian Archbishop Hilarion Capucci, left, background, and The Rev. Jack Bremer of Lawrence, Kan., conduct an Easter Mass for three of 50 U.S. hostages being held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The unidentified hostages

Hostages in good condition: Carter eyes new sanctions

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ruled today that the 50 American hostages must remain in the hands of the young militants occupying the U.S. Embassy in Tehran until the new Iranian Parliament decides their fate, Khomeini's office announced.

The 79-year-old leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime vetoed President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's proposal to transfer custody of the captives to the ruling Revolutionary Council after a meeting with Bani-Sadr and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh.

In Washington, President Carter, after spending part of the Easter weekend considering the hostage crisis, said he was near a decision on a new set of economic and diplomatic sanctions against Iran. He remarked that the hostages' captors — he called them "terrorists" — had agreed to release their prisoners to the Iranian government "but the government refused." He did not elaborate.

Talking briefly to reporters after returning from Camp David, Md., he was asked whether he was about to invoke new sanctions. "We'll be deciding that in a few minutes," Carter replied, then went directly to his Oval Office to prepare for a meeting with his national security and foreign affairs advisers.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said he did not know if the White House meeting would lead to an immediate announcement of U.S. retaliatory moves.

Although there was no suggestion from Washington that military action was contemplated, two U.S. senators who visited American Navy pilots on a carrier in the Indian Ocean said the pilots seemed eager to bomb selected targets in Iran.

Today was the 156th day in captivity for the 50 Americans in the embassy and three held in the Iranian Foreign Ministry. Three U.S. clergymen invited by the militants to hold Easter services at the embassy reported the hostages were in excellent condition.

The Revolutionary Council met for 4 1/2 hours Sunday. Ghotbzadeh said it reached a decision on Bani-Sadr's proposal to take custody of the hostages. But he said the decision would not be announced until after it was submitted to Khomeini.

Diplomatic sources said Bani-Sadr and other senior Iranian officials submitted two opposing solutions to Khomeini for his ruling.

They said one solution, backed by Bani-Sadr and Ghotbzadeh, would have meant a transfer of the hostages to government custody to assure the United States and the world that the American captives were secure and in good health.

The other position, supported by some other Revolutionary Council members, would have left the hostages in the militants' control, the sources said.

Although Khomeini chose the second recommendation, the sources said he appeared to make a concession to Bani-Sadr's group by saying people will be allowed to check the health and living conditions of the hostages.

Moslem hard-liners on the council rejected the proposal at a meeting last Thursday night because President

Carter had not met Bani-Sadr's demand that he agree publicly to refrain from all comment on the situation until the Iranian Parliament decided their fate. One of the hard-liners, Hojatoleslam Akbar Rafsanjani, met with Khomeini Saturday and afterward told the Tehran newspaper Jomhuri Islami, "The question of handing over the hostages to the Revolutionary Council has been repudiated."

The Tehran newspaper Enghelab Islami quoted Ghotbzadeh as saying he felt the transfer would be in Iran's best interests but some council members changed their minds and opposed it.

Khomeini killed another proposal to transfer custody of the hostages a month ago. He has said repeatedly that the question of their release will be decided by the new Iranian Parliament, which is still in the process of being elected. But the U.S. government believes their transfer to the control of the Revolutionary Council would improve the conditions of their confinement.

Election results to be canvassed

Results of the recent Pampa Independent School Board of Trustees election will be canvassed and accepted during the board's 1980-81 organizational meeting at 5:00 p.m. Tuesday in Carver Center.
 New board members, Phil Vanderpool and Kenneth Fields and returning incumbent, Buddy Epperson will be administered the oath of office by Judge Don Cain.
 Election of new school board officers is also listed on Tuesday's agenda.
 Approval of budget amendment No. 1 will be considered by the board reflecting a total increase of $742,666 in revenue.
 The revenue comes from two sources, according to the amendment summary: 1. $475,775 from County Available funds; 2. $164,480 in an off-set of reimbursement for part of revenue lost in tax exemptions.
 The amendment shows a total increase of $111,227 in budgeted expenditures. Most of the increase comes from the amended budget for the combined city-school tax offices.
 The major part of the revenue increase, the summary states, will be used in the construction-renovation program, as planned and for replacement of classroom furniture.

 The tuition rate for the 1980-1981 school year will be considered by the board. The proposed rate is $960 for an eligible scholastic (one whose average daily attendance can be counted in this school district) and $1,820 for an ineligible scholastic (one whose average daily attendance cannot be counted in this school district).
 The rates would be charged to approved transfers. The amount of school taxes paid in the school district by the parents would be deducted from the rate.
 Last year's tuition rates were $900 for eligible students and $1,680 for ineligible students.
 Designation of the official radio station for the 1980-81 school year will be considered Tuesday. KPDR radio has been asked to take the position and has expressed its willingness to participate.
 In routine action, the board will consider the renewal of the USDA commodity agreement and appointment of the district's representative to the program, the awarding of bids for paper towels and the payment of a supplemental construction bill on gym panels in the amount of $10,800.

TEXAS BRIEFS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Oil and Gas Corp. of Dallas wants a federal judge to expedite its lawsuit against the Interior Department, which recently cancelled 20 noncompetitive oil and gas leases at Fort Chaffee, Ark.
 Cecil Andrus, the department secretary, cancelled the leases because he said Texas Oil and Gas filed application for drilling permits before regulations went into effect opening military lands for oil and gas leasing. However, the action also came after several questions were raised about the government's role in granting the leases without competitive bids.
 The corporation has filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court here seeking reinstatement of the leases. The case is pending.
 James W. McDade, attorney for Texas Oil and Gas, asked Judge Joyce Green for a quick hearing on the lawsuit because he said Andrus and the Interior Department were trying to subvert the status quo on leases.
 The department's Bureau of Land Management has tried to return the $40,434 check Texas Oil and Gas paid for leases on 33,000 acres at Fort Chaffee.

McDade said the leases stipulated that drilling must be limited to the period between Sept. 1 and April 30 because the military reservation is used for National Guard training in the late spring and summer.
 "If a hearing is not expedited, drilling operations will have been delayed for an entire year," McDade said, adding that such a delay could cause Texas Oil and Gas to suffer first-year production losses.
SEDONA, Ariz. (AP) — Coconino County sheriff's deputies continued their search Sunday for the body of 10-year-old James Nuckolls, of El Paso, Texas, who was presumed to have drowned Saturday in Oak Creek Canyon.
 Deputies said Nuckolls and four other youngsters slipped into the waters of Oak Creek near Sedona but that the other four were rescued while Nuckolls was swept away.
 The youngsters are part of a group of 39 Texas students touring Arizona during an Easter break in classes, officials said.

Return of paper 'is whole ballgame'

SANTA FE (AP) — The trial of a lawsuit seeking the return of The New Mexican of Santa Fe to its former owner, Robert McKinney, entered its third week today before U.S. District Judge Santiago Campos.
 McKinney faces cross-examination this week by attorneys for Gannett Co. Inc., which he claims has not lived up to promises made in his 1976 transfer of the newspaper to Gannett. The New Mexican Inc. is a co-defendant.
 McKinney's complaint asks return of the newspaper and $25 million, or both. But his lawyer, Victor Marshall, said it's the newspaper McKinney wants.
 McKinney and Allen Neuharth, the president and chief executive officer of Gannett, were the only witnesses in the first two weeks of the trial before a six-member jury.
 Under questioning by his attorneys, McKinney spent six days testifying about negotiations that led to the merger in which The New Mexican became a member of the Gannett group in February of 1976 and the disagreements that prompted him to file the lawsuit in September 1978.
 Attorneys for Gannett and The New Mexican Inc. are expected to begin questioning McKinney late Monday or on Tuesday.
 "Return of the newspaper is the whole ballgame," Marshall said last week. He said McKinney is willing to account to the newspaper group for the 300,000 shares of Gannett stock, valued at $11.7 million in 1976, that he received in the transaction.
 Campos, who has set aside five weeks for the trial, announced at the outset that he will decide whether McKinney should get the paper back. The jury will decide what, if any, damages should be awarded.

 In addition to recovery of the newspaper, McKinney seeks punitive damages, breach of contract damages and money for harm he contends Gannett has done to the newspaper, which as of March 28 had a circulation of 16,547 on weekdays and 20,312 on Sundays. The New Mexican is the state's second largest afternoon newspaper.
 The daily figure is several thousand less than the number McKinney testified was the circulation when he transferred the paper.
 The crux of the dispute is an employment contract that made McKinney chief executive officer, editor-in-chief, publisher and chairman of The New Mexican board of directors for five years after the merger.
 McKinney contends The New Mexican Inc., at the inducement of Gannett, usurped his authority by taking personnel actions without clearing them through him and by publishing two editorials over his objection.
 Gannett and The New Mexican contend that terms of the contract have been met and that actions taken were lawful steps by The New Mexican board of directors, a majority of whom are Gannett employees.
 Much of the testimony, which has been interrupted frequently for legal arguments outside the hearing of the jury, has been on pre-merger negotiations and events surrounding the termination of McKinney's general manager, Stephen Watkins.

Strangled woman feared intruders father says

DALLAS (AP) — For most of her life, Debera Martinson lived in fear of strangers — hiding behind locked doors and refusing to open them to visitors she did not know.

The 28-year-old nurse and mother pushed furniture against the doors at night and often slept under the bed when her husband, Don, was away, according to neighbors.

Friends said they had to telephone in advance if they wanted to drop by to visit her. She was taught from childhood to let no strangers in her house, and she grew up determined to make herself safe from intruders.

"My daughter would not admit a total stranger to her home," said Debera's father, John Monroe Woodson. "She would not open a door (to a caller) unless she could see him or knew him."

Her precautions were wasted. Last week, she was found dead on the floor of her bedroom, a macramé plant holder wrapped tightly around her neck.

A message had been scrawled on her mirror in rosy pink lipstick. It said: "Now we are even Don." Her clothes had been folded neatly, and placed to form a trail leading to her nude body.

There was no sign of forced entry. "She had a horror of dying like this," said a close friend who requested anonymity. "Debbie Martinson would open a door to nobody."

Don Martinson, 32, a civil trial lawyer, found his wife's body when he returned home after a day on jury duty. Their infant son, David, was crying in his crib but unharmed.

Martinson said he had tried to call his wife at 5 p.m. and again at 5:30 p.m. There was no answer. He has yet to give police a detailed statement. A partner in his law firm said Martinson was distraught and under sedation.

"There's not a whole lot we can do on this case until we get some information," said Sgt. Bill Parker, head of the police investigating team.

On Friday, however, noted criminal defense attorney Phil Burleson — retained as a "consultant" in the case — said Martinson was ready for questioning. Burleson was one of the attorneys who successfully defended Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.

Police say they have no evidence linking Martinson to the crime, and they have ruled out robbery as a motive. The couple had no known enemies and investigators said the lipstick message may have been designed to throw them off the track.

Medical examiners said Mrs. Martinson had been dead four to eight hours when her body was found, placing the time of the killing between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

An assistant district attorney recognized Martinson during jury questioning from 9:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. The panel returned at 1 p.m. after a lunch break. Martinson was marked present at the 3:30 p.m. roll call.

San Juan Shrine to open April 19

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — McAllen air traffic controllers received a bizarre radio message Oct. 23, 1970 — evacuate all Catholic and Methodist churches and schools in at least nine towns of the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Before local fire departments could call all units, a former high school teacher had crashed his rented, single-engine plane into a Roman Catholic shrine in San Juan.

More than two dozen priests and 40 worshippers were inside when the plane plunged through the roof and spilled fuel over the stone structure.

Everyone inside escaped. Frank Alexander, the pilot, died in what later was ruled a suicide.

Alexander, a 52-year-old father of four, quit his job the previous year and unsuccessfully tried to found a church of his own, located seven blocks from the shrine.

Fire destroyed the shrine and a nearby school cafeteria, where 130 children escaped without injury.

Two priests saved a statue of the Virgin Mary from the burning building. The statue and the shrine's bell tower were all that remained of the fire.

Almost 10 years later, the statue will be carried to a new, $5 million home built largely with small contributions from the faithful. Insurance on the old building covered $1.5 million of the cost.

Bishop John Fitzpatrick of Brownsville says he expects 100,000 people for the two days of ceremonies April 19-20.

Cardinal Humberto Medeiros of Boston, former bishop of Brownsville, and Archbishop Jean Jadot, papal representative, will celebrate one of seven Masses that weekend.

Medeiros preached his last sermon in the Rio Grande Valley at the old shrine only a few weeks before the crash.

Devotion to Mary, the mother of Jesus, is widespread among Mexican-Americans who make up more than 80 percent of the Valley's population. The original shrine was built in 1954 as a parish church but later was designated as a shrine as devotion to the Virgin grew.

The history of La Virgen de San Juan del Valle can be traced to the 17th Century Spanish missionaries who brought a statue of Mary to Mexico.

Texans vote; results show diversified preferences

Galveston voters want their superport, Austin voters do not want forced school busing, residents of Florence want their reluctant mayor to stay on the job and those in Laredo do not know what they want.

Those were some of the results as most Texas cities opened the polls for local city, school and bond election issues during the weekend.

Galveston residents rejected a plan to limit the size of oil tankers that could approach Galveston Island. The failure of the fire code amendment kept alive a planned supertanker terminal.

That proposed $350 million superport, to be developed by the city and a private corporation, would require dredging the Galveston Ship Channel to 50 feet to allow 250,000-ton tankers.

In Austin, voters picked anti-busing leader Dr. Peter Werner to the school board over incumbent DeCourcy Kelley.

Two other school board posts will be decided April 26, in runoff elections that match Steve Ferguson against June Brewer and Ed Small against Dennis Bauerle.

The board resisted race-based busing for a decade, but finally was forced by court orders to implement crosstown busing of approximately 13,000 students.

"In a sense, the only way people could register their protests was by voting against me, and that's what happened," said Ms. Kelley.

Werner, a neurologist, said he doubted voters believed his election meant the desegregation plan would be changed.

"The only relief is that they will have a clear voice. Their point of view will be heard on the board," he said.

In Williamson County, Florence Mayor Foy Hayden was re-elected for the second time, even though his campaign slogan was: "If elected, I refuse to serve."

Hayden won with 53 of 94 votes — all write-ins since no one filed for the post in the Central Texas town.

He said Sunday he would fill the post "at least temporarily," but conceded that probably meant until the next election, two years hence. Hayden said the job is "a lot of trouble with no pay."

Two Laredo school board candidates split 6,066 votes right down the middle — with 3,033 each.

Residents may have to vote again to decide whether incumbent Francisco Lara or challenger Ricardo Garza takes the spot, voting officials said.

"It was very interesting in that we made history," Garza said. "It was a tie — something that has not been seen here ever."

School board attorney Honore Ligarde said a recount will be made before deciding whether to conduct another election.

Corpus Christi voters approved a city charter amendment to reduce city property taxes.

The amendment, known as Proposition 14, would reduce the rate of assessment from 74 cents to 68 cents per $100 valuation. It also would put a 6 percent ceiling on the amount the city could increase a home's taxable value annually.

In Gainesville, residents voted to give police and firefighters a 45 percent pay raise. The issue would raise base pay from $811 to $1,175 a month by the end of the year.

Seeking new solutions to child stealing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — At age 3, Christopher Ascarte has been kidnapped twice.

His mother, Lorie Kesler, is accused of snatching him at a California supermarket and spiriting him away to the little Utah town of Beaver.

Three months later, two men grabbed the boy out of her car on Main Street.

With police in pursuit, the men sped four miles to an air strip and jumped in a plane that Christopher's father, Max Ascarte, had kept idling. The police car, siren blaring, chased the plane down the runway, coming within 10 feet of the aircraft.

It was "right out of the movies," says Earl Dorius, who is handling the case for the Utah Attorney General's office. Both parents face criminal charges of child snatching — he in Utah and she in California.

But with as many as three child snatches in Utah in one month alone, and national estimates of 25,000 to 100,000 each year, authorities in several states are trying to find civil rather than traditional criminal remedies for what is sometimes called custodial interference.

"There's been quite a dramatic increase in the last five years of child-stealing extraditions. It's a rather common occurrence and a widespread problem in the country," said Dorius.

"We're trying to work out a harmonious solution without trying to put two parents in jail," he said. "They get really ugly. A lot of emotions run very high."

The states' efforts to solve the problem seem at variance with a bill currently under congressional consideration. The measure would make child snatching a federal crime, with a penalty of six months in prison for parents who kidnap their children.

The Carter administration opposes the bill because of the cost — an estimated $200,000 a year for investigators from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare — and because it would put the FBI in the midst of domestic squabbles.

Utah has joined 17 other states in passing an act that establishes uniform criteria for "which is the best court to resolve the issue of custody," Dorius said. "It requires courts of different states to work together rather than have this battle of judgments with spouses going to court in different states."

Tina Falvo, extradition secretary for Gov. Scott

Matheson, said the case of Christopher Ascarte was already in the criminal courts, with both states seeking extradition, when Matheson stepped in and sent letters to both parties.

"I am personally opposed to the use of the extradition process in criminal proceedings to resolve what I perceive to be a highly emotional, domestic dispute," the governor wrote. "The preferred remedy of course would be a full hearing of the issue of custody where both parents are present and can testify. Criminal prosecution of each parent would hardly be in the best interests of the children."

In another case — this one resolved — A Colorado woman snatched her 12-year-old daughter who had become "distracted and despondent" living with her father, Dorius said.

The mother "snatched the child from school, pulled up roots and came to Utah and settled here," he said. The father sought extradition of his former wife, but Utah authorities explained the "mother's side of the story" to the Colorado prosecutor, who then withdrew criminal charges.

$1 million in heroin confiscated

DALLAS (AP) — A telephone tipster led Dallas County authorities to 10 bags of heroin — valued at $1 million — found hanging from trees and lying on the ground near a southwest Dallas airport, officers say.

The small containers containing 23.5 ounces of the narcotic were discovered Sunday at an area three miles west of the Red Bird Airport inside the city limits of Duncanville, said Sgt. Larry Forsyth of the Dallas County sheriff's department.

"From the looks of it, it definitely fell out of an airplane," Forsyth said. "It was either contained in a larger bag that broke or someone became awful scared and dumped it."

A preliminary test showed the substance to be white heroin of a "fairly high purity," he added.

A private citizen called the sheriff's office Sunday and reported finding the bags, according to Deputy Raymond Hamilton.

"He said there were bags of white powdery substance in little plastic bags lying on the ground and hanging in trees," Hamilton said.

Jimmy Carter's judiciary

There's more significant news on the judicial front than our front page story this week about federal judges getting a 12.9 percent pay raise instead of 5.5 percent. It concerns who's filling those prized positions on the bench, not how much they're making.

According to a recent NEW YORK TIMES article, President Carter by the end of his current term will have filled about 40 percent of the federal judiciary. This extraordinary figure — representing 265 circuit (appellate) and district (trial) positions — is possible because of a major expansion in the ranks of the U.S. bench authorized shortly after Carter took office. The president is not only replacing judges who step down, but appointing 152 to newly created posts. All these judges — circuit and district — have the power to strike down acts of Congress and of federal agencies and to halt moves of the executive branch, subject to reversal by higher courts.

The impact of Carter on the federal courts is similar to the one Gov. Brown will have made in California by the time his eight years are mercifully up. An important difference is that Carter's appointees are empaneled for as long as they wish: they need never face confirmation at the polls.

This job permanence becomes especially important when one examines, as THE TIMES did, the type of attorneys Carter is selecting.

According to Sheldon Goldman, a University of Massachusetts professor, Carter's selections are overwhelmingly classified as "moderate to liberal Democrats," the same philosophical bent as most of the activist judges who've been rewriting the law since the Earl Warren era.

After 16 years of research into the U.S. bench, Goldman concludes that "the popular image of the judiciary as political neutrals is hogwash." There tends to be a correlation between a person's partisan political background and his decisions as a judge, he finds.

With that in mind, consider that the judicial selection process in Washington is in the business of processing Democrats — this during an administration that promised early on to reward merit and not politics in staffing the courts. The selection of district judges remains the domain of U.S. senators, most of whom — especially the senior ones — are Democrats. Carter supposedly created an independent mechanism for picking the circuit jurists, but a study for the American Judicature Society found "the Circuit Judge Nominating Commission may simply represent a form of merit selection of Democrats, by Democrats." According to the report, partisan influences permeate the selection of nominees.

Probably making matters worse is the increased role played by the Senate Judiciary Committee, chaired by Edward Kennedy since its former conservative head, James Eastland, stepped down. Kennedy's panel has the power to confirm or reject presidential nominees. So far it has outrightly turned down only one — a political hack from North Carolina — but its pressure has forced the withdrawal of others. We suspect that, as is often the case in government, an individual's political inclinations have a lot to do with how diligently his past is screened at confirmation time. That means that Kennedy, whose philosophical preference for judicial activism is probably greater even than the president's, is positioned to make matters yet worse for Americans already fearful that the law increasingly punishes all but those who merit it.

The drastic changes taking place in the federal bench will be felt for years to come. Although Jimmy Carter, should he be removed this fall, may not have the chance to fill a Supreme Court seat, his packing of the rest of the federal bench will leave a legacy that none of us is likely to be free from.

Just a few good handouts

Not long ago the idea of finding a Marine family on food stamps was unthinkable. Of all the branches of the military the United States Marine Corps has always stressed self-reliance. So, it is a sad day when a major general in the corps suggests that his men apply for federal assistance originally intended to help the destitute.

A few weeks ago Maj. Gen. Joseph Koler Jr., base commander of El Toro, and Maj. Gen. Leo LeBlanc Jr., head of the 3rd Marine Air Wing, issued a statement to their men supporting the efforts by those who were eligible for the federal food stamp program. The generals said food stamps are not charity and compared the program to social security. They suggested that many situations develop in military life that require "outside help."

Has the whole world gone haywire?
If the food stamp program is not charity, then what is? Food stamps are subsidies by the taxpayers of the food bills for those able to get their hands on the stamps. It was intended as charity and it is charity. The eligibility of Marines for food stamps calls into question the standards of the food stamp program, the pay level of the Marines, or both.

A news story focused on one Marine Pfc. Jimmy Garza, who qualified for food stamps. Pfc. Garza has a $750-a-month income, a pregnant wife, and an 8-month-old daughter. After all their living expenses are taken out, the Garza family has only $100 left. Food stamps will increase that figure to $150.

The life of a Marine Pfc. has never been an easy affair. That is the reason most young Marines hold off marriage until their rank and pay has increased. Clearly the choice of having a wife and a family was made by Pfc. Garza, and if that means he has only $100 left at the end of the month, that was part of the choice he made. We do not argue with his choice. Instead, we suggest there is something seriously wrong with the program.

There are those who argue that this country's armed forces are drastically underpaid. They contend that many men and women in the military could make more money by becoming civilians and going on public assistance. That may be true, but that is not a justification for encouraging Marines to go on food stamps. Perhaps the welfare system, including food stamps, provides too much money and eligibility standards are too low. Whatever the answer, it is not a good idea to have military families supplementing their incomes from the public dole.

The military lately has been having a hard time attracting and keeping good men and women. Formerly — although the pay was low — people looked at the military as an option they could take for a few years while deciding what to do with the rest of their lives, serving their country at the same time.

Until recently the option of not working was not available, so many young people opted for the military. Some liked it so much they decided to stay in. If people today are going to leave the military to go on welfare, it isn't time to give the military welfare. It's time to take a second look at welfare — including food stamps. Maybe if it weren't so easy to live without working there would be less of a military recruiting problem.

By the Honorable John Rouselet
United States Congressman, (R)
28th District, California

In the period following the seizure of our American embassy personnel in Iran by Islamic terrorists on November 4, 1979, U.S. foreign policy has been thrown into turmoil as we reap the wages of a policy of weakness.

The chaos and terrorism in Iran and the Soviet conquest of Afghanistan are situations which could have been avoided. Both deserve a stronger response from the United States government.

For some years, the U.S. has pursued a policy of acquiescence and appeasement. Fearful of involvement, we have refused to stand up for American interests and the interests of our allies. Hopeful of currying favor with often hostile Third World nations, we have stood by as Cuban mercenaries roamed freely across Africa. Desiring peace at any price, we have allowed American military strength to atrophy and we've closed our eyes as the Soviets furiously built the most powerful war machine the world has ever known.

We are now paying the price!

The Shah of Iran was a strong ally and a valuable supplier of oil. Whatever his misdeeds, they pale in comparison to those of the Ayatollah. Yet we pushed the Shah from power and persuaded his army to do nothing.

For our efforts, our embassy personnel were taken hostage, another situation which could have been avoided. The American embassy was seized in February, 1979, as well as November, and we knew the likelihood of a second seizure. But our policy was — and still is — that our embassies should not defend themselves. That policy should change.

Failing to avoid an avoidable situation, we compounded our error by responding inadequately to terrorism. It is my belief that the U.S. should have swiftly moved to rescue the hostages from the sprawling 27-acre embassy compound. Even short of a rescue operation, immediate and strong reprisals should have been instituted. The time for economic sanctions and a naval blockade was last November. If Vietnam taught us nothing else, it should have been that gradual escalation does not work very well.

We have instead appealed to the United Nations, an organization of diplomats which can't even bring itself to help fellow diplomats held hostage. The U.S., though it now condemns the Soviet Union for aggression, has taken no effective action to prevent one member nation from invading another in clear violation of the U.N. Charter.

The invasion of Afghanistan seems to have come as a surprise to the Administration. It shouldn't have. The Soviet spider has been drawing that country into its web for many years. Meanwhile, we have done nothing.

Our response since the spider pounced has been little more than "stern rhetoric," despite the President's State of the Union Address. What about providing arms and aid to the struggling Afghan partisans? A little direct action seems in order.

At the very least, the U.S. should hold firm: without compromises, to our announced intention to pull out of the summer Olympics in Moscow. "Sports as usual" would only legitimize and encourage Soviet aggression; much as the 1936 Olympics in Berlin legitimized and encouraged Nazi aggression.

A policy of appeasement only feeds aggression and ultimately makes war, not peace, more likely. The United States must abandon appeasement and be prepared to stand up for itself and the Free World!

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, April 7, the 98th day of 1980. There are 268 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 7, 1976, Chinese first Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping was deposed and Hua Guofeng named premier.

On this Date:

In 1878, Congress organized the Mississippi Territory.

In 1947, auto pioneer Henry Ford died at the age of 83.

In 1971, the Peking government invited an American table tennis team to visit Communist China — opening what soon became known as "ping-pong diplomacy."

In 1978, President Carter announced his decision to defer production of the controversial neutron warhead.

Ten years ago, a grand jury in Edgartown, Mass., returned no indictments in the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, who had drowned nine months earlier when Sen. Edward Kennedy's car plunged off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island.

Five years ago, a South Vietnamese plane attacked the Saigon palace of President Nguyen Van Thieu, but he was unharmed.

Last year, 200 demonstrators were arrested outside a shipyard in Groton, Conn., as first lady Rosalynn Carter attended the christening of the nation's first Trident-armed nuclear submarine.

Today's birthday: Actor James Garner is 52.

Berry's World

I was raised on country music

by Paul Harvey

I was reared on country music. My first job in radio at the age of 14 was at KV00, "The Voice of Oklahoma," in Tulsa.

Chores included announcing, selling, reading news, sweeping out at night. And, on those occasions when a senior staffer got sick, I was allowed to announce a live music program: Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys, Johnny Lee Wills, the Alabama Boys — those were the popular performers of that era — so you can see this was a few "wagon greasin's" back down the road.

They were not called "country musicians"; they were just "hillbilly bands."

They never presumed to label themselves "artists"; they were just singers and fiddlers and guitar pickers.

They did not perform "concerts"; they just "played for dances."

And they did not sing dirty.

Am I wrong to be concerned about what's happened since? Historically, country music reflected apple pie patriotism, virtue, boy-girl romance. Much of today's potage is downright porno.

Chicago critic, Gary Deeb, calls country music "the most sensuous form of American popular music." He says, "For sheer sensuality and overt appeal to sexual interests, there's nothing more rancid on the air."

To quote in evidence some of the more raunchy lyrics is not necessary; any school-ager can.

With contemporary jockstrap jungle music utterly uninhibited and with cable television racing toward us with hard-core porn, it may seem that any criticism of country music is misdirected.

Yet class c country music always spoke to the heart and I guess I just don't want to admit what's happening to America's heart.

Also, history tells me that excesses ultimately, inevitably invite reaction. Any individual, any art or any industry which does not discipline itself eventually, one way or another, will be disciplined. Nashville could OD on its own excesses.

Some defend dropping the seventh veil, saying that the music industry is only "giving people what they want."

Yet, we don't allow anybody to divert his sewer over your yard — just because he might want to.

In a sardine society, where our interests necessarily overlap, each of us has to respect others' prerogatives in order to keep any of ourselves.

When this potential for pollution is as wide as the sky, the obligation is singular.

So before the bureaucracy descends on us with any more regulation and regimentation "in the public interest," some of us who cherish the freedoms our media have been allowed have to do what we can to keep our singing towers from spitting.

By now this has to sound to some as though Paul Harvey wants all cowboys stripped of their rhinestones and all cowgirls to look and sound like Minnie Pearl.

No, I didn't say that. But I'll settle for that — if the alternative is for our splendid showcase for country sunshine to become instead a Hustler magazine of the air.

Fighting inflation?

By Anthony Harrigan

If President Carter is serious about budget cutting and not simply making cosmetic cuts for political purposes, there is much more that he can do.

U.S. Rep. Bill Young of Florida has pointed out that Mr. Carter could make large cuts in foreign aid. "It seems to me," he said, "that if we are going to ask the American people to cut back, we certainly ought to ask those who run our foreign aid programs and in particular the World Bank and other multilateral development banks, to cut back as well."

If the U.S. is in desperate straits, there is no justification for giving billions of dollars to foreign countries, many of which are hostile to America. If Saturday mail delivery is to be eliminated, how about eliminating payments to the World Bank which enable that institution to loan money to communist countries.

There's no indication, however, that the Carter administration will slash domestic and foreign giveaway programs. No one in the administration is talking about making real cuts in the so-called "entitlement" programs, such as the food stamp program, that represent the heart of the welfare state. Indeed the administration pulled out all the stops to enact the so-called "windfall profits" tax which will provide more than $50 billion in energy subsidies.

As a practical matter, taxpaying citizens know that these energy subsidy checks are being used for all sorts of personal liberties.

The worst aspect of Mr. Carter's latest anti-inflation plan is that he proposes to balance the budget by increasing taxes. For example, he wants to use an oil import fee to boost gasoline prices 10 cents a gallon. That's a new tax under another name. The only meaningful way to balance the budget is to dismantle the welfare programs that mushroom since the 1960s. The only way to beat inflation is to reduce the unconscionably high cost of government.

The Carter anti-inflation program has a number of features that would adversely effect business activity. For example, the proposed withholding tax on dividends would limit capital formation. Accelerated corporate tax payments would create severe cash flow problems for business.

To increase the nation's productivity, which is the best way to fight inflation, there should be real relief for taxpayers. Without such relief, business won't be able to invest in the tools that account for gains in productivity.

For years, the federal government has built its spending and tax proposals around favors to the special interest welfare constituency. It has followed the old New Deal formula of "spend and elect." That formula and the underlying economic philosophy has reduced the United States to a shadow of itself. Saving and investment have been discouraged. Indeed the entire liberal program is one of disincentives for productive people.

While our national situation worsens month by month — a fact which the man in the street now understands, the administration and the liberal majority in Congress remain determined to protect their political sacred cows — the welfare constituency and the recipients of foreign aid.

The taxpaying constituency now has what may be its last opportunity to speak out in protest so that the White House and Congress will respond in a constructive way.

Role of music is important

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The antiseptic and dehumanized future often described in science fiction could become a reality if that future world is planned by a generation deprived of the beauty of music in schooling today, says a Syracuse University dean.

Douglas M. Soyars of the School of Music says the tendency of school districts to discard music programs as "frills" because of tight budgets could develop into a major national problem.

"If the current threat to eliminate music from school programs are carried out on a broad scale, the future could look pretty bleak," warns Soyars. "Imagine a generation that has grown up without cultural education now offered in the public schools, and you can see the sensitivity to be lost."

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

By Joe Graedon

Men and women are biologically different. So what else is new? Unfortunately, these sex differences are often ignored when it comes to drug therapy. Doctors usually prescribe the same dosages for both male and female patients and this may lead to ineffective treatment or unexpected adverse reactions.

Metabolism and hormonal variations as well as differences in weight can all influence the way in which a drug works in the body.

Obviously, the dose of a medication that is appropriate for a 220-pound lumberjack would most likely be totally unsuitable for a 94-pound grandmother. But other differences between men and women may have a more subtle effect on drug utilization.

Various studies have shown that the commonly prescribed antibiotic erythromycin often does not reach the same blood level in women as in men. This may be because the drug is absorbed less completely from the digestive tract or is metabolized more rapidly.

If these factors are not taken into account an inadequate dose might be prescribed and this could lead to a therapeutic failure.

Anticonvulsant drugs like dilantin (Phenytoin), Mysoline (primidone) and phenobarbital which are used to treat epilepsy are also metabolized more completely by women because of hormonal influences. In some cases this may lead to reduced blood levels and could be responsible for poor seizure control.

Women may also be more susceptible to toxic drug reactions than men. A number of researchers have reported that female patients are more susceptible to side effects like jaundice and rashes from the antipsychotic drug Thorazine (chlorpromazine). Females may also be more sensitive to antidepressant medications.

Anticoagulant drugs like heparin, which are often prescribed after strokes and heart attacks, appear to cause more bleeding in women than men and unless extra caution is taken when this drug is prescribed they may be more likely to experience an adverse reaction.

Once upon a time it would have been easy for a physician to take sex differences into account. Since the pharmacist prepared many drugs in a mortar and pestle the doctor could specify exactly the dose he wanted for each individual.

Today the pharmacist rarely formulates medicine himself. For the most part he takes pills out of big bottles and puts them into little ones.

Feminists have long complained that doctors don't give women adequate attention. Many health professionals thought that was mostly rhetoric, but a study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association confirms that the participating doctors tended to take illness more seriously in men than in women.

Even though the male and female patients in this investigation experienced such symptoms as fatigue, chest pain, headache and dizziness with equal frequency, the men received a more thorough workup and the physicians seemed to pay more attention to their complaints.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 38-year-old woman, living with my parents (I am all the family they have.) Last year my mother (64) had a stroke which left her partially paralyzed. She walks with a cane and is confused at times, but she's cheerful and uncomplaining. My father, 67, is a practicing physician, but he is no help at all. Over the years he has paid very little attention to Mother or me. He comes home, eats, reads the newspaper, watches TV and goes to bed. If Mother needs the bedpan he comes looking for me to take care of it. When I go out, he forgets to give Mother her medication. We have a woman come in five days a week to stay with Mother until I get home from work.

I'm engaged to be married this fall. It will be my second marriage and his first. We will be living only 10 minutes from my parents, so it's not as though I'll be deserting them. Although I realize that I do have a life to lead, I can't help feel a little guilty getting married with the situation like this. I'm not young anymore, and want to have a family while I'm still able.

Please advise me.

S.O.S.

DEAR S: Proceed with your marriage plans, and don't feel guilty. You'll live near enough to your mother to look in on her often. And I beg you to ask your father to please show a little more concern and compassion for your mother. I wish you joy. You deserve it.

DEAR ABBY: I have been told that in Hawaii when a girl wears a flower over one of her ears, it means that she is "taken" (has a boyfriend), but if she wears a flower over the other ear, it means that she is "looking," or available. I am going to the islands soon and would like to know which ear is which.

DEAR RAY: A flower over the left ear (same side her heart is on) means, "I'm spoken for." A flower over the right ear means, "I'm unattached." A flower over both ears means, "I'm spoken for, but let's negotiate."

DEAR ABBY: When I was growing up, my mother drummed it into my head that I had bad breath, so I took to chewing gum because I was always self-conscious about my breath.

I learned how to chew gum inconspicuously. I could keep it in my mouth for hours without chewing it.

I still chew gum (I'm married now) but my husband hates it. He says it gets on his nerves. I never crack it, and I'm careful not to chew it a lot in company, but he still doesn't like it. He says it's offensive, ill-mannered and childish. What do you think?

LIKES TO CHEW

DEAR LIKES: I think it's refreshing, good exercise and a bit of a treat if done in private. But if it irritates your husband, your gum-chewing may not be as inconspicuous as you think it is. Chew in private, and don't stretch your luck.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: Just a few days ago I read in your column about a 14-year-old girl who was afraid of losing her boyfriend unless she had sex with him.

I am also a 14-year-old girl who had the same problem. My boyfriend said that if we had sex together that our love would last forever. I told him to get lost and broke up with him.

Now I date a boy who cares for me and we have agreed that sex is out of the question. I really like this guy and we have a fabulous relationship.

Any girl who submits to a guy just so she can keep him is making a decision that she may later regret. — C.B., Anaheim, Calif.

C.B.: Thank you for taking the time to share your experience with us. You are a wise young woman. Please read the next letter from Cindy.

Dr. Wallace: Please print my letter. I want to talk to the girls who read your column so they won't make the same mistake that I did.

I'm 14 and let my boyfriend talk me into having sex with him to prove our love. Before we did, we promised each other that we would not tell a soul about it. The next day he told his best friend and now the whole school knows.

I feel used and cheap and every day I cry my eyes out but nothing helps. Maybe writing this letter will. I hope so.

Girls, let me warn you. If he promises not to kiss and tell, don't believe him. Better yet, don't do anything that will give him an opportunity to tell, because tell he will. — Cindy, Michigan City, Ind.

Cindy: Thanks for sharing your story with our teen readers. I receive many letters each week similar to yours.

Dr. Wallace: My parents don't trust me anymore. I'm 16 and have gotten into a lot of trouble but I want my parents to trust me again. Please help. — Sara, Vancouver, Wash.

Sara: Parents give teens trust — that is, until the trust is betrayed. From then on, trust must be earned.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

April 8, 1980

Listen carefully this coming year to tips given you by pals who know how to make money. A friend who is on to something good may cut you in on the action.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Associates will be watching you closely today to see if you're doing things for selfish reasons. Avoid any types of action which could tarnish your image. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph Letter that begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be more of a listener than a talker today, especially if you're discussing subjects in which you are not well versed. Pretending to know something you don't may prove embarrassing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be called upon today to unravel a mess in which a friend got involved. Straighten matters out without tying yourself up in the process.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Dealings today may require all the diplomatic tact you can muster. Show a willingness to cooperate and compromise if you expect others to do the same.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Tasks you can almost do by rote may prove more difficult than usual today. Setting too fast a pace may cause you to make mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're cautious and practical in financial and business matters, but today you may be tempted to toss discretion to the winds. Gambles could misfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You and your mate could be poles apart on a major issue today. One of you will have to be a peacemaker. Assume the role.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take great care today not to blurt out things to others that they may deem offensive, even though this isn't your basic intention. Loose lips cause confrontations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Impulsive spending today could do your budget a great disservice. You know the limit of your resources, so try to live within your means.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Having too many irons in the fire today will prove self-defeating. Keep your priorities in order. Don't take on more than you can manage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be very careful today about jumping to conclusions before all the facts are in. Premature judgments are apt to be erroneous.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be helpful to others today, but confine your aid to nonmaterial ways. Sound advice will do more good than dipping into your purse.

Sonics blast Trail Blazers, to win series

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"Nobody blows out the world champions," said Seattle's Dennis Johnson, responding to a prediction made by Portland's brash Billy Bates regarding Sunday's deciding game of their playoff mini-series, and he was right.

The Sonics, defending National Basketball Association champions, raced to a 25-point third-quarter lead and breezed to a 103-86 victory over the Trail Blazers to win their first-round series 2-1.

Next on the agenda for the Sonics, who are bidding to become the NBA's first repeat champions since the Boston Celtics of 1968-69, are the Midwest Division champion Milwaukee Bucks. That best-of-seven second-round set opens in Seattle Tuesday night.

"Milwaukee has a much better outside dimension than Portland," said Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens. "We're gonna have to be ready for that."

One second-round series got under way Sunday, with the Philadelphia Flyers rallying behind Julius Erving in the final period to beat the Atlanta Hawks 107-104.

The other second-round matchups were determined Sunday when the Phoenix Suns and Houston Rockets won the third games of their respective mini-series. Phoenix beat the Kansas City Kings 114-99 and will next face Los Angeles, while Houston won its Texas showdown with the San Antonio Spurs 141-120 and will take on Boston. Those series open in Los Angeles Tuesday and Boston Wednesday. Sonics 103, Blazers 86.

Gus Williams led Seattle's balanced attack with 21 points as the Sonics took command early and never relinquished it. Seattle led 71-46 early in the third quarter and 80-65 going into the final period, saw Portland close within nine but turned aside that challenge with a 12-2 spurt in a span of 3½ minutes for a 94-75 lead.

Bates led Portland with 26 points, while John Johnson added 18 points for Seattle. 76ers 107, Hawks 104.

Philadelphia scored 37 points off its fast break, compared to 10 for Atlanta, in winning the series opener. Julius Erving led the Sixers with 28 points, including 11 in the final period.

The Sixers trailed Atlanta 87-81 with nine minutes to play, but Erving drove for a three-point play that started a 12-0 surge that put Philadelphia ahead to stay.

Lowrey, Stewart place at Plainview

JoLinda Lowrey of Pampa took third in breakaway roping with a time of 5.361 at the Plainview Tri-State High School Rodeo last weekend.

Lena Stewart, also of Pampa, was fourth in breakaway roping (5.513) and fifth in goat tying (12.917).

Little League signup this week

Little League baseball signup starts at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Pampa Optimist Club building.

Players eight through 12 years of age are eligible to participate this year.

On Tuesday and Thursday, youngsters (9&12 years old) register while on Wednesday and Friday, youngsters (10&11 years old) sign up. Eight year olds may sign up any of these days.

To play on a team this year, all youngsters must personally sign up. If a youngster is unable to do so, his parents should contact an Optimist Club official. After he signs up, a youngster will be placed on a team roster.

Stadler wins Greensboro title

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Craig Stadler, a six-shot winner of the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament, turned his attention to Augusta, Ga., and this week's Masters.

And Stadler liked his prospects.

"My confidence couldn't be higher," said the chunky man who carries 215 pounds on a 5-foot-10 frame.

"I know I'm playing well. I know I can score well. I just want to get out there on the golf course and play more golf right now. I just want to keep it going. I want to work on this string as long as I can."

He goes to Augusta with credentials he wouldn't have dreamed of possessing four months ago.

At that time, just before the 1980 season began, Stadler was a non-winner in four years of PGA tour activity.

He won the first tournament of the year, the Bob Hope Desert Classic. With this latest victory, secured on a 4-under-par 68 that left him without major challenge over the last 18 holes, he ranks with Tom Watson as the only men to score multiple triumphs this season.

The $45,000 he collected off his 275 winning total, 13 shots under par on the 6,984 yard Forest Oaks Country Club course, vaulted him into second place on the season's money-winning list with $117,611.

Only Watson, the outstanding player in the game for the past three seasons, is ahead of him. Watson, who did not compete in Greensboro, has $140,275.

Stadler's victory on a bright Easter Sunday came with something approaching ease.

He started the final round with a 2-stroke lead, built the advantage to four with birdies on his first two holes and still had a three stroke advantage after he'd finished No.7, which he considers the toughest hole on the course.

After that, it was easy.

"It turned into a lot of fun," Stadler said. "A walk in the park. I really enjoyed myself for once."

There really wasn't a strong challenge and he settled any lingering doubts with consecutive birdies on the 14th and 15th holes, on putts of 8 and 10 feet.

The only thing remaining was to settle second place, which eventually wound up in a four-way tie at 281 between Jerry Pate, George Burns, Bill Kratzert and Australian Jack Newton.

No one else was within eight shots of Stadler, whose victory margin was the largest of the year.

Young collects biggest paycheck

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Donna Caponi Young, in her 16th year on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, has never gained the recognition of a Nancy Lopez-Melton or JoAnne Carner, or even Jan Stephenson.

But Sunday, she reached a new pinnacle in her already successful career by winning the richest and most prestigious women's tournament, the $305,000 Winners Circle.

"It's probably my greatest day in golf," a beaming Young said after collecting $37,500 for the victory, biggest payday of her career.

Young, with putting the strongest part of her very steady game, shot a 1-under-par 71 for the final round over the 6,242-yard Mission Hills Country Club course to hold off Amy Alcott by two strokes.

Alcott, who had begun the day a stroke back of Young, had a closing even-par 72 as she struggled to a 38 on the back nine after taking the lead momentarily on No.10.

Young's 72-hole total of 13-under-par 275 was a Winners Circle record, one stroke better than the standard set by Sandra Post last year.

Jane Blalock, with a final-round 68, finished third at 279, while Pat Meyers was fourth at 281, Sally Little fifth at 283, Carner next at 284, and Lopez-Melton and Beth Solomon two strokes further back at 286.

The 35-year-old Young, who had won the LPGA's Las Vegas tournament two weeks ago and now has 16 career victories, credited her putting with making the difference in the Winners Circle, and credited Dave St. against Muhammad Ali.

"The rest of the money has to be delivered for it to be official," Arum said Saturday by telephone from Houston about what he called an $8 to $10 million purse put together by him and Murad Muhammad, a New Jersey promoter and former Ali bodyguard, for an Ali-Weaver fight in July. "I expect it all to be tied up next week."

Arum said the fight would be a closed-circuit television show in July in South America but would not name the site. A source said it would be the 165,000-seat Mercado soccer stadium in Rio de Janeiro.

King said Friday that he had talked to Ali in Los Angeles last Wednesday and that the retired three-time champion had said: "I want Holmes, I want Holmes."

But Saturday night by telephone from his Deer Lake, Pa., camp Ali was shouting: "I want Weaver the Beaver. That's the one I want. I'm the four-time champion. After watching the fights last Monday night it encouraged me that I didn't make a mistake in coming back."

Weaver, who won the title with a 15-round knockout of John Tate in Knoxville, Tenn., last Monday, said Sunday from Houston: "I rather not fight him (Ali) because he's always been an idol of mine. Then he added: 'I'll fight anybody for $2 million.'"

That's the neighborhood Weaver's purse will be in if his fight with Ali is finalized.

Cuevas stops Volbrecht

HOUSTON (AP) — World Boxing Association welterweight champion Pipino Cuevas of Mexico tinkered with South Africa's Harold Volbrecht through four rounds Sunday until he found the left hook he needed.

Then, from somewhere south of the border, he delivered it to the jaw of the unsuspecting Volbrecht, who had become overconfident from earlier success, and the game challenger never saw what hit him.

Volbrecht, who had taken the fight to Cuevas in the first three rounds, went to the canvas at 1:19 of the fifth round, becoming Cuevas' 11th victim since he won the WBA crown July 17, 1976.

Cuevas' knockout cleared the way for a glamorous title match against World Boxing Council champion Sugar Ray Leonard, who was at ringside for the nationally televised fight.

"The man hits like a heavyweight," Leonard said. "When I fight him I'll have to use my speed and agility."

Although Cuevas battered Volbrecht in a corner early in the fifth round, Volbrecht said he was not hurt until Cuevas' deadly left hook took him by surprise.

"I was hitting him in the earlier rounds and I just got over-confident," said Volbrecht, 146½. "I started throwing punches wildly and he finally just took advantage of it."

For Cuevas, who prides himself in his knockout record (10 knockouts in 11 title defenses), it was a change in tactics.

"I had said I would try to knock him out in the first round," said Cuevas, 146½. "But I let him get confident in the first few rounds and then he started to get careless."

"We made a mistake," Volbrecht said. "I had planned to fight him through eight rounds and then box. But it didn't work out that way."

Volbrecht, 23, came out of a clinch with a small cut over his left eye in the first round, the result of a butt.

Polo was an Olympic sport five times, from 1900 to 1936, and great Britain won three times with Argentina taking the gold medal twice.

(12th of 14 parts)

We continue our evaluations of popular sports and exercises by considering cycling, dancing, golf and jogging-running.

Remember, each activity is awarded from zero to five points overall and in each of nine categories: 1-A more efficient heart. 2-A slimmer, firmer body. 3-Bulging "macho" muscles. 4-Greater strength. 5-Power and endurance. 6-Flexibility and suppleness. 7-Improved sports skills. 8-Convenience. 9-Sociability.

-CYCLING-

Cycling is good for your heart, for slimming and for building endurance. You can set your own rate and increase it as you become more fit.

Except for having to drag the bike out every time you want to ride, it's very convenient. You can cycle down the street or along a path. Or use an exercise cycle at home or at the gym.

OVERALL SCORE: 2.88.

-DANCING-

Active dancing - not the kind where you just stand there and sway - is very good exercise. Of course, the faster the tempo, the more you have to move. And the better exercise it is.

Ballet, square dance and disco are the best forms, since you are moving almost constantly.

-GOLF-

At best, golf is a mild walk. If you use a cart, it is reduced to hitting a ball. Other than relaxation and sociability, the best that can be said for golf is that it slightly helps the arms and shoulders.

Caution: Warm up before you step onto the links and before every swing.

-JOGGING-RUNNING-

Running can cause problems for ankles and knees. Also, it is a lopsided exercise, stressing mainly the muscles on the backs of the legs. Jogging or running should be complemented by activities for the upper body and arms, such as swimming or calisthenics.

Faster running isn't better except for competition. Longer runs extend your endurance. Minimum running time should be 12 minutes.

Shades of 'Green Acres'

The tale of a boy and his pig

By Cheryl Scutt

KIRKSVILLE, Ind. (NEA) — Remember Arnold the pig who starred on television's "Green Acres" from 1966 to 1971?

He has nothing on Rona. Rona, a 6-year-old China-Duroc cross, does not appear on television. Neither does she go into the rural home of Ira and Memmie Presslaff.

But the 700-pound porker is a star nonetheless. After all she is perhaps the only pig to have convinced her owners to build her a home of her own just so she could be nearer to them.

The similarities to "Green Acres" do not stop there. You may recall that the show centered on the misadventures of a New York couple (played by Eddie Albert and Eva Gabor) who moved to a farm.

Well, both Presslaffs are native New Yorkers. Yet, they are living happily on 32 acres in the hills of southern Indiana.

Growing up together in New York, the couple often dreamed of "someday" having a farm.

But that didn't seem to be in the cards for them and their four children, who now range in age from 18 to 10. Presslaff's work as a textiles engineer called for urban settings.

About six years ago, however, he left that field to become manager of the Indiana division of an insurance company.

The Presslaffs admit they had never thought of living in Indiana.

"Indiana was always one of the places you had to go through to get somewhere," says Presslaff. "But this is the greatest place in the world."

They liked it so well that Presslaff left the insurance field to avoid being transferred. Now he is a salesman for the local Valhalla Memory Gardens.

The purchase of the farm was the culmination of a dream not only for the adult Presslaffs but also for their 12-year-old son, Frank.

Long before becoming a farm boy, recalls Mrs. Presslaff, Frank had adored pigs. That adoration was most noticeable when the family made trips to fairs.

"He just always wanted to FAMILY PORTRAIT: Rona, perhaps the world's most pampered porker, is flanked by her family, including Pat holding Walter Pigeon, Mrs. Presslaff, Randy with her horse, Presslaff, Frank, Kippy and several chickens.

be with the pigs," Mrs. Presslaff reports. "So, I told him, 'Son, if we ever get a farm, you can have a pig.' Of course, I never thought we'd have a farm."

But when they got one, Mrs. Presslaff was true to her word. Frank got his pig and loved her as much as he thought he would.

"He walked her on a leash," says Mrs. Presslaff. "She was just like a dog."

"The pig would go swimming with the kids (in the family's pond)," adds Presslaff. "And you can ride the pig."

"Backwards is best," chimes in Frank. He explains that this allows the rider to hold onto Rona's curly tail.

It did not take long for the pig to capture the heart and fancy of the entire family, despite competition from its growing menagerie that now includes four horses, five dogs, a goose named Oops, two ducks, two nanny goats and their offspring and numerous chickens, all with names.

And perched in a cage on top of the refrigerator is a one-winged pigeon named, of course, Walter Pigeon.

"He can't act very well, but then he can't fly either," jokes Presslaff.

say the Presslaffs and she'll let you know if she's unhappy. Like when she jumped the four-foot fence that the family put up to keep her in.

Then there was the time when Mrs. Presslaff left Rona alone after scolding her for misbehaving.

Apparently wanting to make amends, Rona headed out in search of Mrs. Presslaff, who the pig mistakenly assumed had taken off in the truck.

Rona made a frantic dash after another pickup that was passing on the road, undoubtedly surprising the unsuspecting driver.

When Mrs. Presslaff realized what had happened, she went to the road and called for Rona. The pig turned and trotted home.

"She stays here because she wants to," says Mrs. Presslaff while petting Rona. "She could easily get out if she wanted to, but she likes it here."

But she did not like being kept in the barn, which is a long way from the house.

"She wouldn't stay in the barn," says Mrs. Presslaff. "She wanted to be near the family."

she has a condo," laughs Presslaff. Whatever the name, Rona keeps her home very neat and clean.

Rona has had two litters of pigs, some of which were eaten by the family.

"They were delicious," smiles Mrs. Presslaff. "We fed her some scraps and she ate them, too. She doesn't like pigs."

She does like people, chickens (some have slept with her) and horses. When daughter Pat works her horse over jumps, Rona often follows along, knocking over the jumps as she goes through the course because she cannot go over them.

"I think she's as smart as any dog," says Mrs. Presslaff.

Maybe even smarter. After all, any pig that can get a house built for herself must know something.

EARLY RETURNS from Iran's protracted parliamentary elections do not look encouraging for President Abol Hassan Bani-Sadr. The majority of seats in the new parliament seems likely to go to his conservative clerical rivals.
