Police won't reopen murder case

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police said today they will not re-open the investigation of the December 1979 murder of Stanley Sinclair of Daingerfield.

"No one has brought forward any new evidence, and we made a very extensive investigation at the time of the incident," said Houston police detective W. L. Young.

Sinclair's father, Methodist minister Donald Sinclair, has claimed his son's death is related to the Sunday shootings in the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield, in which a former Daingerfield schoolteacher is accused of killing five.

The elder Sinclair told reporters he believes Alvin Lee King III, charged with killing five and wounding 10 in the incident, put a murder contract out on his son because his son encouraged King's daughter to bring incest charges against King.

He admits he has no hard evidence for his suspicion, but said "It's just that it fits together. Many people are just so convinced of it."

Young said the stabbing death had "none of the earmarks of a hired killing," and that at the time of the investigation no one had raised any such suspicions.

Sinclair said his son dated King's daughter, Cynthia, learned of her father's alleged incestuous advances and urged her to report them.

King was indicted on incest charges in October 1979 and was slated to go on trial Monday. The day before the trial was to open a gunman attacked the First Baptist Church, spraying worshippers with a blast of rifle fire.

Stanley Sinclair was stabbed to death in Houston, two months after the incest indictment was handed down. Eyewitnesses told police two black males in their 20s jogged up to Sinclair, then stabbed him in the chest.

Detective Young said the victim's father was questioned during the investigation, and that Sinclair never mentioned his son's role in King's incest indictment.

"No mention was made of that at all," Young said.

Young said the area where Sinclair was killed was "sort of a high crime area."

"We looked at about 40 cases in the general district (where Sinclair was killed), narrowed it down to 15 that were very similar, and concluded it was one of your run-of-the-mill violent crimes," he said. "It was probably a burglary attempt, but witnesses scared the men away."

Three snapshots of Stanley and Donald Sinclair were found in King's isolated farmhouse near Daingerfield, but Young said the Houston police attached no significance to the discovery.

"They were friends of the family, so we see nothing odd or important about the pictures being in the house," he said.

Daingerfield buries its dead

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — A grieving town paid final tribute to four slain worshippers cutdown by a withering volley of gunfire during Daingerfield's bloodiest day.

Hundreds of mourners traveled to nearby De Kalb on Tuesday to bury 7-year-old Gina Linaam, the youngest of five killed in the Sunday morning attack at the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield.

Grieving friends and family honored Kenneth Truitt, Thelma Richardson, and Gene Gandy at the same sanctuary where the heavily-armed gunman directed his lethal fusillade.

Laverne McDaniel, one of 10 parishioners wounded in the attack, was expected to be temporarily released from a Texarkana hospital today to attend the 2 p.m. funeral for her husband, James Y. "Red" McDaniel, who died trying to subdue the gunman.

The Rev. Virgil Fielden, associate pastor of the 900-member Daingerfield church, wept as he eulogized the Linaam girl before the crowd of 400 to 500 at the 35-minute service in De Kalb.

"I feel hope... Death is not the end," he said. "This precious one whom I loved so much has been taken home to Jesus."

The service was the first of three funerals Fielden conducted Tuesday. The funeral for Mrs. Richardson, a 78-year-old widow, was held in Daingerfield concurrently with the Linaam service.

During the Gandy and Truitt funerals, there was little evidence to remind mourners that such an attack had occurred. The door had been repaired and the bloody carpet removed.

"There are no easy answers to what possesses a man to do something like this," said the Rev. Jim Powell, a former minister of the First Baptist Church who returned to officiate the funerals.

Police estimated a third of the town's 2,800 residents turned out to pay their last respects to Truitt, 49.

"He was a genuine martyr just like any martyr of the New Testament," said Powell.

CAPTURED VIETNAMESE SOLDIERS have their blindfolds adjusted by a Thai soldier in a barbed-wire enclosure near this Thai-Cambodian village of Tab Prik Tuesday. Thai military command estimated that up to 10,000 Vietnamese troops were deployed along the border inside Cambodia to the north and south of the key Thai frontier town of Aranyaprathet, 140 miles east of Bangkok.

'Golden Horseshoe Hunt' begins

Pampa merchants and the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association are sponsoring again this year the "Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt," the annual window painting contest and the sale of bolo ties in conjunction with the 34th Annual Top O' Texas Rodeo July 10-12.

In the "Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt," a golden horseshoe has been hidden in the area, and clues will be given each day to help local residents locate the horseshoe.

The person who finds the horseshoe will receive a $100 savings bond and a box seat to all three rodeo performances. The box seat is valued at $105.

Clues on the horseshoe's location will appear in selected stores in Pampa. Those interested in getting clues a day early will be told the type of store in which it is located. In order to find the clues a day early, a participant may need to go to several stores before finding the clue. The clue will be given the following day through the news media.

The rodeo association and Pampa merchants also will be sponsoring a window painting contest to promote Rodeo Week.

Windows are to be painted between July 2 and July 5 with judging to be conducted Monday, July 7. Individuals or groups may enter the contest. The Top O' Texas Rodeo Association will provide prizes of $25 for first place, $15 for second place and $10 for third place. Various merchants will provide the windows to be used. Window or tempera paints must be used to paint the windows.

Entry forms may be picked up at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. Deadline for entries is Thursday, July 3.

Bolo ties are now on sale at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce office and at other locations in Pampa. The bolo ties will sell for 75 cents each and will be part of the official rodeo week dress. The ties are blue and white with the Top O' Texas emblem on them. Only a small quantity of the ties will be available.

TODAY'S CLUE: Clue No. 1 can be located in a feed store all day Thursday, June 26.

Pampa hits a record-breaking 111!

The extreme heat of Tuesday served one memorable purpose — it created a record-setting high.

Topping the thermometer at 111 degrees, a new record was set for Pampa.

The previous record high for June 24 was set in Pampa during 1939 and again in 1953.

The lower humidity conditions Tuesday of 12 percent made the heat bearable for Pampans. Tuesday started with a humidity reading of 40 percent but lowered to the more comfortable 12 percent early in the afternoon.

Relief from the blistering heat may be slow in reaching the Panhandle, as weather forecasts call for the 100-degree-plus temperatures to continue through Sunday.

Electrical power usage in Pampa rose sharply on Monday and Tuesday, according to Joe Gidden of Southwestern Public Service.

"Between 5 and 6 p.m., on days with high temperatures, the power usage usually peaks for residential areas. The combination of the extreme heat and the heavy load generation can cause transformer problems during these hot days," Gidden said.

However, no line trouble has been reported to the Southwestern Public Service.

Many Panhandle wheat farmers are in the fields this week during the first stages of wheat harvest. The extreme heat is not only uncomfortable, but causes the wheat to dry out faster, making it ready for harvest even sooner.

The dry, hot conditions are also taking their toll on the maize and grass.

Paul Jones of the Pampa Fire Department has asked all residents of Gray County to take care if using fireworks during the July 4 holiday. The grasses and wheat fields are more dry than usual and ripe for fire.

Farmers are also asked to call the Pampa Fire Department if they intend to burn wheat stubble. The fire department has received several calls from persons reporting a county fire. The trucks arrive only to find a controlled wheat stubble fire.

Carter seeks to prevent slayings

MADRID, Spain (AP) — President Carter proposed a transitional arrangement for governing Afghanistan to prevent "a mass slaughter" of pro-Soviet elements if Soviet troops are withdrawn, a senior Carter administration official said today.

He said assurances that a slaughter would be prevented and that a staunch anti-Soviet government would not emerge might be necessary ingredients for an eventual Soviet withdrawal, and disclosed that Carter's proposal had been presented to the Soviets last month.

"We recognize that the Soviet Union has a legitimate security interest in Afghanistan not being transformed into an anti-Soviet outpost of some sort," the official told reporters aboard Air Force One, as the president flew from Belgrade, Yugoslavia to Madrid on the next-to-last day of an eight-day European tour that ends in Lisbon on Thursday.

The administration official, who spoke on the grounds that he not be identified by name, also said the United States had received "some reports" that the Soviet Union had increased its number of troops in Afghanistan from 85,000 to "over 100,000" in recent weeks.

The official revealed that Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie had discussed Carter's proposal for a transitional arrangement for Afghanistan with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko when they met in Vienna in mid-May.

He said that Britain and other countries had also had contacts with the Soviets on the matter, but that no negotiations are underway.

Carter, completing a 24-hour visit to Yugoslavia in which he repeatedly praised the non-aligned communist nation and its late leader, Josip Broz Tito, said Tuesday night that the United States would like to discuss a "transitional arrangement" for instituting a new and independent and neutral government in Afghanistan.

In a toast at a banquet given in his honor in Belgrade, the American president renewed a suggestion that apparently fell on deaf ears last February.

The United States hopes it will be taken more seriously this time as it becomes increasingly evident to the Soviet Union that its military forces face a protracted guerrilla war and are unable to gain complete control of the southwest Asian nation.

"We would be prepared to explore a transitional arrangement, to be implemented along with the prompt withdrawal of all Soviet troops from Afghanistan, for the purpose of restoring peace and tranquility in that suffering country," Carter told his host, Yugoslav President Cvetin Mijatovic.

White House officials traveling with the president said Carter had selected Yugoslavia as the site for his proposal on Afghanistan because it is a non-aligned nation and because Tito, before his death last month, had sought to mediate the crisis through correspondence with Carter and other world leaders. Carter clearly hoped his statement would have special appeal in Yugoslavia.

Thai-Cambodian casualty toll rises

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Estimates of civilian casualties rose to between 600 and 1,000 wounded as Vietnamese forces widened their military operations along the Thai-Cambodian border today.

The International Red Cross reported 223 wounded Cambodian refugees at the vast Khao I Dang camp, "several hundred" at the border encampment of Nong Chan, and 350 wounded Thais in Aranyaprathet, 140 miles east of Bangkok.

The Red Cross and the U.N. Children's Fund rushed medical teams and food to several large groups of Cambodians uprooted in the fighting, including 10,000 at Kok Sung, 5,000 at Nong Chan and up to 15,000 in Nong Samet.

Tens of thousands of others were believed to have fled into forested areas or were under Vietnamese control.

The Thai command said more reinforcements were being moved in to sweep away remaining Vietnamese positions inside Thai territory in a 35-mile stretch north of Aranyaprathet.

Most of the Vietnamese troops who struck into Thailand three days ago were back inside Cambodia but apparently dug in along the border and capable of raking Thai positions with small arms fire and artillery.

The Thai command estimated that up to 10,000 Vietnamese troops were deployed along the border inside Cambodia to the north and south of Aranyaprathet.

The command reported fighting between "Free Khmer" anti-communist guerrillas and Vietnamese troops in the northern Cambodian province of Oddar Mean Chey and said the guerrillas sought temporary refuge in Thailand's Surin province.

The command also said Vietnamese troop movements were detected to the south of Aranyaprathet where the guerrillas of ousted Premier Pol Pot are concentrated and that fighting had broken out between the Vietnamese and Pol Pot troops at Nimit, a key village 10 miles inside Cambodia on the major highway leading from the Thai border to the provincial city of Battambang.

A command spokesman said more elements of the Thai air force had been put on alert and that jet fighter-bombers were used to support Thai ground forces in fighting along the border.

The three-day old border fighting has been concentrated along a stretch of frontier north of Aranyaprathet, but the Thai command said more Vietnamese forces appear to be heading southward inside Cambodia, possibly to strike at guerrillas who have been battling them since the Vietnamese invaded Cambodia 18 months ago, ousted Pol Pot and installed a pro-Hanoi regime.

The Vietnamese struck across the Thai border Monday, apparently to punish the pro-Western Thai government for allowing the Free Khmers to stage raids against the Vietnamese in Cambodia from Thai territory.

But the official Vietnam News Agency said this was a "blatant allegation" aimed at diverting public opinion from U.S. and Chinese support for "Khmer reactionaries" bent on disrupting the security of Cambodia.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
More record-breaking heat was expected across almost all of Texas today as the state remained under the influence of an upper atmosphere high pressure system.
The high pressure system, forecasters said, kept the state under a virtual "dome" and prevented other, weaker weather systems from moving in with cooler, moist air.
Much of Texas had 100-degree plus readings Tuesday and more of the same appeared certain today.
Forecasts called for sunny skies and continued hot temperatures. Highs were to range from the middle 90s to near 114 except along the immediate coastal area where readings were to top out in the upper 80s.
El Paso has had more than its share of heat with today expected to be the 16th consecutive day when the mercury moved above the 100-degree mark.
Some of the readings around the state Tuesday included 111 at Wichita Falls, 106 in Lubbock, El Paso and Dallas-Fort Worth, 107 at Wink and 104 at Amarillo and Midland.
Some clouds were reported before dawn over eastern and southern sections of the state, but most of Texas was under clear skies.
Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s. Extremes ranged from 65 at Marfa in the mountains of Southwest Texas to 88 at El Paso.

Mass grave discovery hikes India fighting death toll

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The discovery of a mass grave in the village of Athara Card has pushed the death toll in violence between local tribes and immigrant Bengalis in northeastern India to 2,000, the Indian Express newspaper reported today.

Officials from neighboring Bangladesh reported sighting the victims, members of the Hindu Bengali community, emigrated to India from predominantly Moslem Bangladesh. An extremist faction of a Tripura political organization led the attack, aimed at punishing the Bengalis for creating unemployment and housing and food shortages in the impoverished state, the newspaper said.

The report said police discovered 12 rotting corpses at the entrance to Athara Card, adding that the attackers apparently threw hundreds of bodies into a nearby river.

Petty crime in youth halts man's bid for U.S. citizenship

NEW YORK (AP) — Still haunted by the petty crimes of his youth, a 56-year-old man has apparently lost his fight for U.S. citizenship because he stole olives and some tree bark to feed and warm his family in war-torn Sicily.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday told Michele Chiaramonte it sympathized with him but could not overrule the Immigration and Naturalization Service's denial of his citizenship application.

"We are not unmindful of the seeming harshness in turning the petitioner away because of two minor criminal escapades committed in his youth," wrote Judge Thomas J. Meskill.

"The regulation of immigration is a matter entrusted to Congress and we are not free to substitute our judgment for that of the national legislature merely because the statutory scheme dictates a severe or unfortunate result in a particular case."

"He was not unkindly clear whether Chiaramonte, who has been seeking U.S. citizenship for nine years, could be deported. That would mean saying goodbye to his sprawling family, bidding farewell to his brand new granddaughter."

"His family is all here," Tony Chiaramonte said for his cousin, who speaks no English. "I don't feel like this is right."

Chiaramonte said in his court papers that he was convicted by a court in Partinco, Sicily, of stealing 60 pounds of olives in late 1943. He was jailed for 15 days and fined. He said he stole the olives because his family needed food.

Doctors deny rampage suspect sought hospital admission

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Doctors say he was "quiet, polite," and did not beg for admission to the hospital. His family says he pleaded to be put in the hospital before he killed someone, and the hospital refused him.

Both hospital officials and family say they are talking about Willie Robinson, a 42-year-old former ice cream factory worker who allegedly fatally stabbed a 5-year-old boy and wounded five others in a bloody hospital emergency room rampage Monday.

Police said they would charge Robinson with murder and assault once he is released from a hospital where he is recovering from chemical burns allegedly received in a separate incident at his home.

"He was asking for help," his sister, Edna Hooks, said of Robinson's visit to the Springfield Hospital unit of the Baystate Medical Center on Sunday, the day before the emergency room attack. "We think if the hospital had done something Sunday, all of this could have been prevented. Those people would have not been hurt."

New bill aimed to cut American independence on foreign petro

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move aimed at cutting American dependence on foreign oil, the Senate has passed a $4 billion measure to help utility plants convert from oil to coal. The bill is part of President Carter's national energy package.

Two sides agree Robinson came to the hospital Sunday for emergency room treatment. A "senior member of the emergency service staff" examined Robinson for a medical problem, said Dr. Paul L. Stagg, chairman of the hospital's department of ambulatory cases, in a statement released Tuesday.

"Robinson was quiet, polite, and appeared to be in control. He expressed no violent intentions and did not ask to be admitted..."

Dr. Benjamin M. Ianzito also said in the statement that Robinson was given no psychiatric consultation during the examination.

"In the case of Robinson," he said, "there was no history of previous violence or evidence that might have suggested a risk for erratic behavior."

The doctor who treated Robinson was identified previously as Malcolm Fairweather. He refused comment on the case.

A similar version of the bill has passed the House. It now goes to a House-Senate conference committee to iron out differences.

The United States has huge reserves of coal and a number of energy experts said switching power plants from oil to coal would help decrease America's dependence on foreign oil.

While the Senate was approving conversion incentives, the House rejected the advice of its Appropriations Committee and voted 254-151 to add $107.4 million in energy technology money to its $11.8 billion energy and water development appropriations bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The money added Tuesday to the Department of Energy includes $49 million for solar energy, $20.8 million for magnetic fusion research and $27.6 million for other energy research.

WORKERS TO BE QUESTIONED IN TOWER FIRE
NEW YORK (AP) — Some 1,500 employees of offices in a Park Avenue skyscraper were returning to their jobs today after a blaze that fire officials say appears to have been accidental.

FIREWORKS IN TOWER
Fifty fire companies and some 250 firefighters battled the blaze for nearly three hours before it was declared under control. About 200 cleaning personnel and late-working employees in the building were either evacuated or left by stairs or elevators.

THREE FIREFIGHTERS
Three firefighters, described as suffering from chest pains that mimic heart attacks, remained hospitalized Tuesday night. The three were among 125 people treated for smoke inhalation and minor injuries. Seventeen of 116 firemen treated were admitted to area hospitals and released.

CHIEF FIREFIGHTER
Chief John J. Fogarty, Manhattan borough commander, said the heat from the blaze was so intense that when firefighters opened a door on the 20th floor a ball of fire shot out and melted an aluminum railing.

Congress preparing to give Carter funds for draft program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearing the end of a long and heated battle over peacetime draft registration, Congress is preparing to give President Carter enough money to sign up an estimated 4 million young men in the weeks ahead.

The House was expected to give final congressional approval today to a measure appropriating $13.3 million to take the Selective Service System out of "deep standby" and conduct registration for the first time since 1975.

Even opponents conceded it would be passed and sent to the White House for Carter's signature. The only remaining step then would be for Carter to issue an executive order directing born in 1960 and 1961 to register, and telling them when to report, perhaps as early as late July.

Selective Service officials have said they will start the program four to five weeks after the money is received.

Young men will be required to go to a local post office to sign a registration form. The program will be spread out over two weeks, with young men born in 1960 registering the first week and teen-agers born in 1961 registering the second week.

Failure to register is a felony carrying a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

While the president has authority to order registration, he would have to win approval from Congress to bring back an actual draft.

Women are not required to register. Despite Carter's initial request to include women in the program, Congress made it clear it would not go along with that and the administration did not push the matter.

The American Civil Liberties Union has promised to file suit challenging the constitutionality of an all-male program.

Registration opponents vowed to conduct nationwide demonstrations that could tie up the post offices during the program, and also to protest at the Republican and Democratic national conventions this summer.

Opponents, led by the Committee Against Registration and the Draft, said they would distribute gummed labels to attach to registration forms, saying, "I am registering under protest."

They also are organizing a campaign to "register against the draft" — inviting Americans to print the words "I am registering against the draft" on a post card and to send it to the organization in Washington.

Carter and his allies argued registration would save 90 to 100 days in mobilizing recruits in an emergency.

But critics of the plan noted that a Selective Service report said registration would save only seven days. Selective Service officials disavowed the report's conclusions after Carter endorsed registration.

The House vote, coming on the heels of Senate approval June 12, marks the end of a chain of events that began Jan. 23 when Carter told a joint session of Congress the United States must renew registration as a signal to the Soviet Union of U.S. resolve in the aftermath of the Russian occupation of Afghanistan.

Bombs rock Spanish vacation spot

ALICANTE, Spain (AP) — Hours before President Carter was to arrive in Madrid today, bombs set by Basque separatists demanding that 19 comrades be freed from prison exploded in two tourist lodgings in Spain's southern Sabin Alicante province. Police said there were no victims.

Police had earlier evacuated hundreds of foreign tourists, mostly West Germans and Scandinavians, from hotels and restaurants in the provincial capital of Alicante, 225 miles to the southeast of Madrid.

The evacuation followed new threats from Basque separatists to set off bombs in tourist areas here. The threats were telephoned to news agencies about midnight Tuesday.

Carter, visiting Spain after earlier stops in Yugoslavia and Italy, was not scheduled to come anywhere near this popular resort area.

One bomb exploded in a luxury hotel in Alicante, the provincial capital, while the other went off at a country house at a tourist complex in Javea, a fashionable resort 45 miles northeast of here. Both came about 90 minutes after an 8 a.m. deadline set by the Basque separatist organization ETA.

Police said two rooms of the 547-room Hotel Melia, in Alicante's southern area, were destroyed by a powerful blast on the fifth floor.

The bomb was believed to have been placed in an empty room some days ago.

Terminally woman wants dignity

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Jacqueline Johnson can't predict the day or the hour she will die, but she knows it will be soon. And she is ready.

"It's not that I've given up. I just decided I would use what time I had," said the 65-year-old Martinsburg woman, terminally ill with cancer.

As one of four patients involved in a recently created hospice program at City Hospital in Martinsburg, Mrs. Johnson has been given medical care along with the psychological support to choose how she will live her final few months.

Hospice programs, designed to ease the mental and physical pain accompanying terminal illness, stress home care with support from trained and volunteer medical teams.

The first step is acceptance of death.

For Mrs. Johnson, that acceptance came last fall when a doctor confirmed her suspicions with his diagnosis of cancer.

"I knew what was wrong with me before I went to the doctor," explained Mrs. Johnson, a microbiologist who worked in hospitals for 44 years. "I have a tumor in my esophagus. I'm going to die of starvation eventually."

Her physician, Dr. Timothy Bowers, describes Mrs. Johnson as a "remarkable woman."

"Not every patient can accept this kind of program. Some persons cannot accept the fact that they have a terminal disease and are going to die," he said.

"The essence of the hospice program is to make that remaining time as useful as it possibly can be, to concentrate on living, not dying."

Mrs. Johnson said she is putting her remaining time to good use. "Some people have heart attacks and strokes and don't get a chance to say goodbye," she said. "I've made a will now and I'm working on a little bit of the family history."

While there is life, she said, neither she nor her son, who lives nearby, will mourn death.

"I think I made as good a choice as there is," she said. "There's no really good solution, and I've made my turn in the road. It's no use looking back, I'm too far gone."

Chasm sides crumble; sinkhole slowly grows

KERMIT (AP) — The huge chasm discovered three weeks ago near the sleepy town of Kermit continues to nibble on West Texas dirt.

"It's slowed down, but it keeps caving on," said Winkler County sheriff's deputy Glenn Vandiver.

The giant sinkhole, a tourist attraction of sorts, is partially filled with "avocado green" water about 70 feet deep, Vandiver said.

"You could call it the guacamole sinkhole now, I guess," he added. At an early point in its short, voracious life, the sinkhole was filled with bubbling black muck.

An analysis of the olive drab liquid conducted by Midland chemical company Petro Lewis showed the water to be "better than what the city of Midland is drinking," a company spokesman said.

Scorching summer heat has not driven off the tourists, who still drive out to view the hole's progress.

"They're still coming, and I tell you, it's hot out," Vandiver said. "The day it was 114 out there, there was a mob of 'em. That's people for you."

Police search after body parts found by teenagers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The discovery of a withered hand and foot in small concrete-filled ice chests has prompted a grisly search of a San Antonio creek for the rest of the dismembered body, authorities said.

"I was walking along with some friends when I spotted the hand," said Tracy Warden, 16. "Man, I was scared."

The four flagged down a car and told Army Capt. Ronald Gamache, who called police.

Four youngsters walking along the Salado Creek in northeast San Antonio on Tuesday made the gruesome discovery. Each body part was cemented into a small plastic foam ice chest, authorities said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Income tax ordeal— Is there a better way?

"The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived..."

Thus says the 16th Amendment, proposed by the Congress and ratified by the states in 1913.

Congress had attempted to levy a tax on incomes earlier, only to have the law declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Perhaps we should reassess this country's 67-year experience with income tax.

It has depended upon a system of self-collection, and citizens have shown remarkable willingness to pay up. Few other nations are able to make such a system work.

But over the years the system has become intolerably complex. It takes a five-foot shelf of books to hold all the tax regulations. Instead of serving simply as a system to collect money, it has become the instrument of various social and political causes. There are signs that compliance is beginning to crumble.

Wealthy taxpayers hire experts to find loopholes. Tax crusaders proclaim the virtues of tax avoidance. Cheating is said to be widespread among the middle class. Cash and barter are used more and more as a means of avoiding taxation. Criminals hide vast sums from the collector and even respectable businessmen have Swiss bank accounts. An army of bureaucrats can't cope with all this.

Early in this century, there was no more important item on the government's agenda than the establishing of an income tax. But like most governmental endeavors, it has not lived up to expectations.

There is little hope that Congress can improve the situation. Every time an attempt is made in Washington to reform the income tax, a horde of lobbyists descends upon the Capitol. That hallways are crowded, and every lobbyist has a loophole he wants to defend or create in the law. Inevitably the result is more complex, less equitable legislation. The Internal Revenue Code comes to resemble Swiss cheese in texture and Limburger cheese in odor.

It is perhaps time to consider reducing reliance on the federal income tax. A federal sales tax or value-added tax is a possible alternative. Such a tax at least would not discourage investment and saving by taxing interest and dividends. It would tax consumption. It would be easy to collect, hard to evade. Even criminals would pay their share, on their purchases of luxury cars and houses.

It would be difficult and could be impossible to use such a tax system for any social purpose, however worthy, other than the collection of revenue to operate the government.

The argument that such a tax would fall heavily upon the poor is invalid. Studies have shown the spending of the rich usually conforms to their income, and taxing at the point of sale nicks the big spenders who can avoid income tax.

The tax would be simple to pay, simple to collect. As long as we are saddled with the idea of taxation to bankroll government, it makes sense to find the fairest, least destructive tax.

Constitution reform next for Canadians

With their nation saved from possible fragmentation by the recent vote in Quebec, Canadians apparently will get on with the overdue task of reforming their constitution to eliminate some of the discontent that caused many Quebecers to think of independence.

The proposal by Quebec Premier Rene Levesque to negotiate independence, retaining a special economic association, was rejected by nearly 60 percent of the voters. Even French Quebecers were opposed, and the near-unanimous opposition of English-speaking voters increased the margin of defeat. For Quebec, the certainties of remaining in the Canadian confederation weighed more heavily in the voting booth than the uncertain appeal of an economically risky independence.

The vote does not lay to rest the grievances of many French Quebecers, however, who regard association with English Canada as a blight upon their cultural and economic hopes. Indeed, many of the disaffected Quebecers who voted for separatism are among the most talented and dynamic people in the province — people whom English Canada must reconcile if Quebec is to remain an asset to the federation.

Nor are the grievances confined to Quebec. The central government at Ottawa has long projected an image of stodgy incompetence. And many Canadians dislike the overweening influence of populous and industrialized Ontario upon the federal system.

These long-standing resentments have been compounded in recent years by the agitation of the richer provinces for control of their natural resources. Alberta, particularly, has pressed for the right to sell its oil to the nation at world prices, a demand resisted in Ottawa. Newfoundland has similarly sought control over its rich fisheries and offshore oil development, while British Columbia is so isolated by distance and geography that it feels little commonality with Ottawa.

Premier Pierre Elliott Trudeau used the promise of constitutional reform to good effect in blunting Levesque's separatist drive. Now Trudeau must make good on his pledges. The resulting talks are likely to find him, an apostle of federalism, using all his considerable political wiles to dilute the demand for decentralization.

Constitutional revision has become the central issue in Canada partly because Levesque has assailed the federal structure. Unproductive national conferences on reform in 1978 and 1979 only added to the frustrations of the provinces. Canadians may owe a debt to the Quebec separatists for forcing them at last to come to grips with a very real problem.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - If an epitaph now must be written for George Bush's bid for the presidency, let it be dated that he campaigned with a measure of distinction, honor and integrity seldom seen in politics.

The Bush campaign was a class act in a vaudeville show crowded with performers who couldn't match his accomplishments, talent or perseverance.

With the exception of Ronald Reagan, Bush was the only candidate in the contest for the Republican presidential nomination to emerge victorious in any of the primaries or precinct caucuses.

Bush accomplished that feat no fewer than seven times — in Iowa, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia — despite the fact that Reagan, a presidential contender for more than a decade, has become almost a living legend in the Republican party.

Indeed, one of Bush's failings was his inability to develop and articulate a coherent rationale for his candidacy as an alternative to Reagan's bid for the nomination.

Personality differences also worked to Bush's disadvantage. Reagan successfully projected an image of a likable, charming man while Bush too often was perceived as tense and uneasy.

But on matters of substance, Bush's positions were the product of a sophisticated thought process. A fiscal conservative and a national security "hawk," he nevertheless was difficult to pigeon-hole philosophically because he came down on the liberal side of various domestic social issues.

Reagan, on the other hand, offered little more than the politics of nostalgia — the unfulfilling promise to return the nation to the supposed glories of the 1950s when the federal government was benign, the post-war economy was booming and the United States was virtually unchallenged as a military superpower.

Moderates traditionally have fared poorly in primaries, and Bush's problems were compounded because he was forced to play the role of the ideological man-in-the-middle, trapped between the conservative Reagan and the liberal Rep. John B. Anderson.

While Anderson was laying the foundation for an independent presidential campaign and Reagan was peddling stale nostrums, Bush was offering sensible proposals — but logic and common sense never have been especially saleable commodities in presidential campaigns.

If others are to be judged by the friends they make, politicians can be assessed by the staffs they assemble. Attracted to Bush's cause were many of the most able and talented people in contemporary politics — campaign manager James Baker, political organizers David Keene and David Sparks, press aides Peter Teeliey and Susan Morrison and scores of others.

On the strategic level, Bush's great strength — and great weakness — was the decision to place most of his political eggs in two baskets: Iowa and New Hampshire, the states where the selection process began early in the year.

That strategy succeeded beyond even Bush's expectations in Iowa, where he was catapulted ahead of everyone else in the crowded field after winning that state's precinct caucuses. But he never fully recovered from a devastating loss to Reagan in New Hampshire.

The ensuing months were difficult for Bush, as Reagan methodically picked up delegate support, widened his lead and forced other opponents to abandon the race. But Bush carried on the fight while displaying courage, persistence and grace under pressure.

"Nobody ever said it would be easy," he joked on more than one occasion, "and nobody was right."

Bush's campaign ended as it had been conducted — with honor and dignity, devoid of complaints or recriminations. Perhaps the greatest compliment that can be paid to him is that he consistently was — and remains — a professional.

WHO SHOT J.R.

There will be a telephone in your car

by Paul Harvey

On the news beat we have experimented for years with mobile telephones.

From hand-held walkie-talkies to central station similar to what police use.

Not until now has there been one that works the way it should.

And the FCC could — and surely eventually will — make it available to you.

Until a year ago the best mobile telephone suitable for use in your car required that you lift a receiver, wait for a clear channel, try to get the attention of an operator, identify yourself by code number and the callee by phone number.

Maybe you would get through. If you did, reception would sound like a relayed communication from the moon.

Then Ma Bell went to work on the problem and developed the niftiest mobile telephone you can imagine.

It's called AMPS — Advanced Mobile

Phone Service. I'm told it "sub-divides service areas into cells, each containing a low-powered transmitter."

As a mobile phone user drives through one "cell" and into another — calls in progress are switched automatically and without interruption.

You hold in your hand a single-piece, touch-dial telephone into which you speak and through which you hear with the clarity of a local house-to-house call.

The previous best mobile system allows only a dozen or so callers simultaneously to make calls in New York City.

With the AMPS system, 100,000 customers could be talking at the same time on a no-wait, low-cost, land line quality telephone service.

Then why aren't they? I don't know.

The Federal Communications

Commission is sitting on AMPS, for some reason.

It is the FCC which allocates radio frequency bands to such specific uses as police, fire services, commercial broadcasting and mobile telephone service.

That is a lot of responsibility and I suppose phones in cars get lesser priority.

It has been my observation and experience, however, that the car phone is more than a convenient working tool. AMPS trial customers in the Chicago area report impressive gains in personal and professional productivity, savings in time and in fuel. Multiply those benefits and savings nationally, and our country becomes more efficient.

Won't telephones in cars distract drivers? No more than dialing a car radio distracts the driver. He learns to use each convenience sensibly and safely.

Americans recently have seen so much electric gadgetry that it is difficult to use and expensive to maintain that it is refreshing to be able to welcome from Bell Labs a device that does what it is designed to do, reliably and inexpensively.

The FCC has promised a decision before the end of this year; you'll have a phone as efficient as your home phone in your own car — maybe next year.

How to start a riot

By Julian Bond

Let's incite a riot!

There's no danger of your being arrested for looting, arson, or for encouraging your neighbors to form an angry mob.

I'm going to tell you how to do it without fear of prosecution, persecution, or any lingering guilt. You'll be free to walk away.

In fact, you can blame theories of government. Or you can lay responsibility squarely at the bottom line of the American economic system.

There will, however, be victims and lives lost.

Most of the latter will be nameless members of the urban black underclass, mourned only by their families and friends.

A few more will be jailed, but for many of them it won't be the first time. Others will be released after a few hours behind bars.

Others will lose their businesses or property — lifetime investments in homes and small stores. Most of these aren't worth much anyway. Many others will lose their jobs when the businesses where they work are torched.

Despite post-riot government assistance, only a few of the propertied victims will re-establish themselves at their pre-riot standard. Hundreds will be homeless.

There will also be a large bill to pay, but not by you. Not directly, at any rate. Extra salaries will have to be paid to the firemen and policemen who'll work around the clock for several days. Hospitals will require extra shifts for nurses, doctors and ambulance drivers.

For the duration, schools and public transportation will close down. The school system will lose money when its average daily attendance drops 100 percent for several days.

That's enough about the results. Here's your plan:

First, place the rioters in the most crowded and least attended section of the city.

Give them a 300-year-old history that begins with kidnapping them and transporting them in chains from a familiar culture to a foreign one.

Separate them from family, religion, language and custom. Punish them if they try to retain cultural ties with their past.

Require them to become property. Destroy their attempts to form new families by selling husbands away from wives. Make educating them a criminal offense.

Have leading scientists and most of the clergy certify their bestiality. Breed them for endurance and strength, as you would other domesticated animals.

End their slavery when it threatens to destroy the cooperative economic unity of the nation's states. After their personal liberty has been established by bitter sectional war, re-establish economic slavery and introduce legal segregation.

Let this simmer for 100 years. Then, in response to the peaceful mass petition of the enslaved population, declare illegal the statute that relegated this despised population to life's discards.

Construct a war aimed at eradicating this population's poverty. After a few dollars and a few years, convince the public that the war has been lost, and must be abandoned.

Require their unemployment rate to hold at twice the national average.

Encourage sporadic warfare between them and their local police forces.

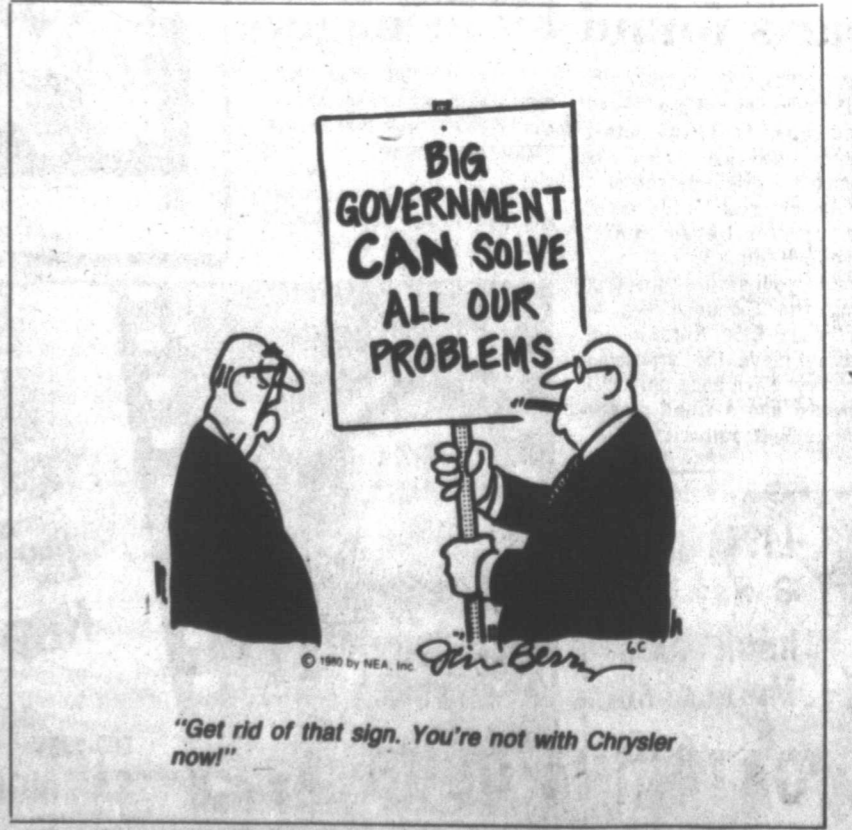

Shift responsibility for their condition from genetics to motivation. Blame them for choosing to be poor.

Dismiss the federal assistance to their schools, housing and employment.

Stand back. You're an innocent bystander, but riots don't respect innocence. It's possible — but improbable — that you could get hurt, too.

Teenagers tell jury of parents' murders

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — The second day of testimony was scheduled to begin here today in the first-degree murder trial of Glen Burton Ake, charged in the fatal shootings of a Baptist minister and his wife.

The teen-age children of the late Rev. and Mrs. Richard B. Douglass testified Tuesday how Ake and Steven Keith Hatch allegedly entered their rural home on Oct. 15, bound and gagged them, then methodically shot each family member as they lay helplessly on the floor.

Brooks Douglass, 16, and his 13-year-old sister, Leslie, calmly told a Canadian County jury in separate court appearances how Ake allegedly fired the fatal shots after Douglass testified Ake announced, "There was nothing wrong with wanting to shoot people."

The two teen-agers were both badly wounded during the ordeal. Both testified Ake and an accomplice, Steven Keith Hatch, tried unsuccessfully to rape the Douglass girl after looting the family's rural Okarche home.

Both teen-agers pointed at the sullen Ake as the man who shot them in the back as they were bound with rope.

In other testimony, a former girlfriend of Ake's told how the burly, 24-year-old suspect gave her the wedding rings worn by the Rev.

Douglass and his wife, while she, Ake and Hatch were traveling through Texas a few weeks after the shootings.

"They said they got it in Oklahoma from some people they killed," Virginia Keefe said.

Prosecutors also summoned a fingerprint expert on Tuesday who linked to Ake a palm print taken from one of the telephones jerked from the wall of the Douglass home.

A judge ordered mental treatment for Ake on April 5 after a three-man panel ruled him mentally incompetent to be tried.

The 26-year-old Hatch, a former brother-in-law of Ake's, was convicted of similar charges and sentenced to death.

Prosecutors summoned 15 witnesses to the stand Tuesday in an attempt to tie a legal knot around Ake, who was arrested with Hatch in Colorado on Nov. 21 after a multi-state crime spree.

The Douglass children testified Ake and Hatch entered the family's home on the pretense of using the telephone.

Allegedly brandishing a pistol and a shotgun, they then bound and gagged the family members and shot them.

Ake and Hatch are wanted in Texas on capital murder charges in connection with the fatal shooting of an oil field worker at his home near Beaumont.

Clements wants state job cuts

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he is both pleased and disappointed at the pace of state government job reductions.

He reacted Tuesday after his budget director, Paul Wrotenbery, presented figures showing there are 1,000 fewer full-time employee equivalent state jobs now than a year ago.

Clements' short-term goal is elimination of 8,000 jobs by Aug. 31, compared with when he took office in January 1979. It became clear Tuesday the goal would not be reached.

Clements said it was "no mean accomplishment to stop that growth (of state employment) and start having a net reduction," though falling short of the goal.

"I'm disappointed, yes, but also pleased," he told reporters who attended a meeting of his Management Effectiveness Council, consisting of the heads of the 12 largest state agencies.

Wrotenbery attempted to close the meeting to reporters, but newsmen and newswomen refused to leave on the ground they and the public had a right to be there under the Texas Open Meetings Act.

The governor's lawyer, David Dean, arrived with a law book, but no further effort was made to evict reporters.

Clements took no part in the dispute.

Wrotenbery said projections indicate state employment could rise this summer to more than it was when Clements took office.

"We need an extra effort to make sure that does not happen," he told the agency heads.

Clements told reporters the reduction that has occurred is particularly significant because the state's population has grown. He said the number of employees per 10,000 population has dropped, "which is the right criteria."

The governor said he had not changed his belief that state employment is excessive nor that it should be reduced by 25,000 jobs by the end of his first term in 1983.

"It's swollen, it is fat, it does need paring down," he said.

Ken Clapp, one of the three commissioners of the Texas Employment Commission, objected when Wrotenbery chided the TEC for hiring more workers.

He said he had "tried 100 times" to explain to Wrotenbery that TEC jobs must increase when unemployment rises because there are more benefit claims and job applications to process.

Cheaper Mexican gas curtailed by Pemex

REYNOSA (AP) — Border-crossing American drivers seeking to fill up on cheaper Mexican gasoline won't be able to get more than a quarter of a tank for their trouble in the future, officials of Mexico's oil monopoly say.

Pemex, the Mexican national oil company, says increased demand from Americans has depleted northern Mexico gasoline supplies. So, an order was issued last week limiting sales to cars with American plates to 100 pesos, about $4.60. That will put about a quarter of a tank worth of gas in a full sized car.

The limits affect the region between Matamoros, opposite Brownsville, to Nuevo Laredo-Laredo, said Marco Antonio Loiza, public relations spokesman for Pemex.

"We have a definite supply problem here in our region of the country because we are, in effect, serving a lot of South Texas," he said. "What has happened as a result is that our citizens have been penalized by spot shortages."

Mexican gasoline sells for 51 cents a gallon for regular and 72 cents for premium.

Loiza said the directive would not affect tourists traveling in the Mexican interior.

"It's not the tourist that has caused the shortage, but those that seek to take advantage of the cheaper price of our gasoline. We have a firm conviction to support our tourism, but tourists and gas gougers are two different things," he said.

He said he did not know when the limit would be lifted.

Ricardo Aguirre, who manages a Matamoros gas station, said since the directive last week, his overall sales have dropped 20 percent. Purchases by Americans have been cut in half.

"We were told by the Pemex sales agent that if we didn't comply with the order that our monthly quota would be cut," Aguirre said.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: By the time you receive this the party will be over, but I would like your opinion.

My father-in-law will turn 50 on Sunday, and he's been slightly upset about attaining this milestone. In order to help him through this traumatic birthday, his daughter decided to give him a surprise birthday party. The theme of this party is a "wake" for her father's youth. She is going to have a regular-size coffin on display and have the place decorated like a funeral parlor.

My sister-in-law keeps assuring me and my husband that several of their friends have had similar parties with this theme and they were all great parties. My husband and I find the whole idea very morbid. Are we being stuffy and narrow-minded?

I'd be interested in your opinion.

REPULSED IN COLORADO SPRINGS

DEAR REPULSED: This fake wake strikes me as sick, tasteless and strained. But now that it's past, I'd be interested in knowing how the idea went over — or under.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister is being married soon in another state. My husband and I plan to attend her wedding, but here is the problem. We have three children, ages 5, 3 and 14 months old. They are very active, and to say they're a handful is a mild understatement. I want to leave them home so that I can have a little vacation and relax away from home, kids and responsibilities.

My mother has offered to stay with them in my absence, but my husband wants to take them — to show them off! He says it will be "unfair" to his relatives if we don't bring the kids.

HARRISBURG HASSLE

DEAR HASSLE: I think it will be unfair to YOU if your husband insists on taking them. Furthermore, he owes you more than he owes his relatives. Besides, his relatives will look at the kids for two minutes, and you'll have to look after them the rest of the time.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are at odds over a family problem. A friend recently asked if he could spend the weekend at our home, as he was coming to town on business. I told him I was sorry but we would not be in town. Then he asked if he could stay at our home anyway. I said, "No, I would be uneasy having anyone in our home during our absence, but perhaps you can make it another weekend when we can all be together."

My husband agreed with my response, as this man wasn't a very close friend. Where we disagreed was with regard to relatives and close friends.

My mother-in-law is coming to town, and she has asked for access to our home in our absence. My husband says "That's fine," but, Abby, I am very uncomfortable with the idea (we both don't get along with her as it is), and I think it was presumptuous for her to ask.

I am a very private person, and I don't want anyone in my home when I am not there. If she (or anyone else) is too cheap to spend the night at a motel, I will pay for it. It would be well worth it to me.

I feel this way about my own family and close friends as well. What is your opinion?

Fenno receives award at LBJ library

A political science professor from the University of Rochester, N.Y., recently received a $1,500 prize as author of the best book on the history and workings of the Congress written in the past two years.

Dr. Richard F. Fenno, Jr., received the D.B. Hardeman Award in ceremonies at the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library and Museum in Austin.

The award was named for D.B. Hardeman of San Antonio, aide to the late House Speaker Sam Rayburn of Bonham.

Hardeman has made a lifetime habit of collecting books on Congress and is considered to have one of the best and most complete such libraries in private hands.

The award is being made to acknowledge Hardeman's gift of the collection to the LBJ Library and Museum, which will use the collection as the nucleus for a Center for Congressional Studies, and to recognize an outstanding example of such a book.

Dr. Lewis Gould of the University of Texas Department of History was chairman of the blue-ribbon-committee that selected Dr. Fenno's work from numerous entries.

Dr. Gould said he hopes that the D.B. Hardeman Award, which is being presented for the first time this year, "will become a way of recognizing important works on the Congress" for years to come.

Dr. Gould said "Dr. Fenno's emphasis on what congressmen do in their districts and how they relate to their constituents, the style they develop, is an aspect of Congress that never has been examined as fully as Dr. Fenno has done it."

"This book caused members of the panel of judges to realize they could see Congress through a new perspective and with new insights."

"Home Style: House Members In Their Districts," was published in 1978 by Little Brown. It was selected for the award from works published between January 1, 1976 and December 31, 1978. In future years, the D.B. Hardeman Award will continue to be presented biennially.

Dr. Fenno, 53, holds an AB from Amherst College and a Ph.D. from Harvard University. This is his fourth book on the Congress.

The author said he is "tickled to pieces" about winning the award, "especially since it is named for D.B. Hardeman. He is a long-time favorite of mine, and a long-time acquaintance of mine."

Fenno said he met Hardeman in the early sixties "when he would open his apartment to people like myself and help us get acclimated to Washington and teach us about Congress."

I probably got a better sense of the feel of Congress from D.B. Hardeman than from any other single person when I went to Washington to research his books.

Hardeman's collection of books on the Congress and American politics contains some 10,000 volumes. It covers the entire span of American history from the Colonial period to the present.

The LBJ Library will continue to build its collection by adding, among other things, the congressional papers of Wright Patman, J.J. Pickle and Lyndon Johnson.

The Congressional Study Center also will serve as a resource to direct researchers to the location of congressional papers other than those housed at the LBJ Library and Museum.

The Hardeman collection is strong both in printed source materials and in secondary works. Included in the collection are rarities such as a complete run of "Niles Weekly Register" and scarce monographs on the functioning of Congress.

The heart of the collection is an outstanding group of biographies.

There are scores of titles dealing with major figures such as Abraham Lincoln, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt, as well as biographies of second echelon figures who played roles of varying importance in state and national politics.

Taken as a whole, the collection offers a wide range of materials on the history and workings of American political institution.

Health benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans received a record $23.5 billion in benefits from health insurance companies in 1978, according to estimates by the Health Insurance Institute.

It says, "This is a 6.5 percent increase over the $22.1 billion paid in 1977 and means that Americans are receiving an average of $64.5 million per day from private companies to help meet the costs of illness or injury."

Tanning booths: don't get "burned"

There's something new under the sun these days: it's now possible to get an overall tan simply by paying money for the use of an indoor tanning booth. The Better Business Bureau, however, has a few precautions to prevent interested customers from getting "burned."

Thousands of tanning franchises have been set up since the idea of retailing artificial tans originated in 1978 in Searcy, Arkansas. A typical operation involves booths about the size of shower stalls set amidst potted palm trees and other hints of South Sea island decor. Customers pay several dollars per visit to stand in the stalls before an array of ultraviolet bulbs for exposure ranging from 30 seconds to 15 minutes. Ten minutes in a booth is said to equal an hour in the sun.

The Food and Drug Administration takes a dim view of the tanning booths, calling them potentially more hazardous than home-use sunlamps because of the greater intensity of ultraviolet radiation from the larger, multiple-exposure bulbs. Regulations went into effect May 6 of this year requiring operators of suntan clinics to post warnings of the dangers of ultraviolet radiation.

Medical research has established a clear link between exposure to ultraviolet rays and the onset of ordinary skin cancer. In addition, suntanning in booths can cause severe burning of parts of the body not usually exposed, destroy permanently the elastic fibers that keep the skin tight and young-looking, cause cataracts in unshielded eyes, damaged the DNA or genetic material of skin cells, and sometimes a rare and usually fatal form of cancer, melanoma.

People who use tanning booths or home sunlamps should keep in mind the following information:

- Don't stand or lie closer to sunlamps than the instructions recommend.
 - Don't fall asleep...a problem for some people who tan laying down with their eyes closed. Indeed, don't fall at all; a customer was recently cut severely in a tanning booth when she lost her balance and fell against the unprotected bulbs.
 - Don't fail to use special goggles. Merely closing one's eyes is not sufficient; ultraviolet rays can penetrate eyelids.
 - Don't use sunlamps if any of a variety of medicines are being taken, including tetracycline and some other oral antibiotics, diuretics, tranquilizers, antihypertensive medications, and certain contraceptive pills that can make the skin abnormally sensitive to ultraviolet radiation. Consult a doctor about side effects of any medication currently being taken.
 - Don't use sunlamps if cold sores exist or if the skin is very sensitive.
 - Don't be double exposed to tanning lamps by intensifying their effects with mirrored reflections.
 - Don't assume that there will be no adverse reaction to tanning in booths just because moderate exposure to the sun doesn't usually burn the skin.
 - Don't rely on sunscreening products to protect the skin.
- For further information, request FDA publication No. 78-8063, "Sunlamps: Putting Safety First," from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, FDA Office of Public Affairs, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Maryland 20857. Those interested in area tanning franchises should ask the local Better Business Bureau for a reliability report.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A woman has moved into our area and she claims my husband is the father of her 4-year-old son. She is going to sue him for support and hospital fees. He says he did have relations with her but so did a lot of other men. Now what I'd like to know is if there is any way she can prove this. She says she can through a blood test.

DEAR READER — In the past blood tests were frequently used to determine paternity. They never were all that helpful and they are of limited value in establishing paternity. For the most part, the blood test can only be used to prove that a man is not the father of the child.

Let me illustrate. If the baby has type B blood and the mother is type A and the accused father's blood type is also type A, he is not the father of the child. In that instance, the father of the child would have to have type B or type AB blood.

Now let's say the accused man might have type B blood, that still doesn't prove he's the father of the child because there are a lot of other men who also have type B blood. This illustrates the principle. The technique can be refined by using subtypes of blood.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number W-4, Blood Type, Rh Factor and Transfusions, which will give you much more detailed information on this problem as well as information about transfusions. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Today there are much more sophisticated means of determining parentage. This is an outgrowth of tissue typing used for organ transplants.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What risk am I taking of conceiving at the age of 51 if I eliminate all birth control measures? I have been married 26 years and have never had a pregnancy and have always used birth control since I did not desire a family. I still menstruate regularly and show no indication of the menopause.

Recently I consulted a gynecologist regarding a tubal ligation and he did not advise it saying my chances of conceiving at my age were very remote.

My family doctor feels I'm taking a great risk and I should have my tubes tied. I'm very uneasy about this situation and wonder whether to believe my family doctor or my gynecologist.

DEAR READER — It's not unusual to get two different opinions from two different doctors. I do not know what kind of birth control measures you have been using but if you had been using the pill and stopping it at regular intervals, the induced menstrual period may be from stopping the pills rather than a true menstruation. That could account for some of the confusion. Your gynecologist may think you've already finished the menopause.

In any case, if you're still having regular menstrual periods that are not simply artificial ones induced by the Pill, then you certainly could get pregnant if you used no birth control at all. Gynecological texts report the oldest age for pregnancy at 56. Some of my readers have cited examples up to age 57.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about the gadgets you can get for ringing in the ears. Isn't there any medication you can take before you resort to that? Usually not, but you have to remember that ringing or noises in the ear is a symptom. Before you treat it, you need to find out if possible what's causing it.

It can be caused by taking various medicines, including common aspirin in some people. So in that case, taking medicine won't relieve the condition but stopping the medicine might.

Discover sesame chicken

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

If your family dotes on baked chicken that has a thick coating (a la some fried chicken) and still has tender, moist and flavorful meat, you may want to try this recipe. A lemon juice-and-Worcestershire sauce marinade probably helps account for the baked chicken's juiciness.

This recipe was tested using a whole cut-up chicken and then again using 3 pounds of chicken parts. Take your choice.

SESAME CHICKEN

1-3rd cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
 ¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
 2 tablespoons water
 ½ teaspoon salt
 3-pound frying chicken, cut up
 ¾ cup dry bread crumbs
 ¼ cup sesame seed
 ½ teaspoon paprika
 1 large egg, slightly beaten
 ¼ cup butter

In a shallow dish into which the chicken will just fit, stir together the lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, water and salt. With fork tines, prick the chicken pieces on all sides; arrange in dish in a single layer; let stand for 1 hour, turning pieces over after 30 minutes. On a piece of wax paper, stir together the bread crumbs, sesame seed and paprika. Dip chicken pieces in the egg and then in bread crumb mixture. Melt the butter in a 1½ by 8½ by 13½- inch baking dish in the oven. Roll chicken in the butter and arrange in the dish. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until tender — 1 hour. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Performing Arts season scheduled

The Society for the Performing Arts will open its third season in San Antonio Sept. 22 with Houston Ballet's classic revival of "Papillon," an 1860 favorite. This performance in the Theatre for the Performing Arts will signal the beginning of the 1980-81 series.

Following the Houston Ballet performance, SPA will present the national touring company of the New York City Opera in a lavish production of "La Traviata," fully staged with orchestra. Soloists from the City Opera will be featured in the Theatre for the Performing Arts, and the Oct. 28 presentation will be staged by Frank Corsaro with elaborate sets and costumes.

In the Society's tradition of presenting the unique and unusual, as well as the major cultural attractions, Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo will appear in San Antonio for the first time. The satirical, all-male travesty company, which spoofs well-known ballet classics such as "Swan Lake" (complete with toe shoes and tutus), will present a hilarious evening of dance on Nov. 19 at the Theatre for Performing Arts. Bring your grandchildren and your grandmother to this one!

After Christmas, two performances of the SPA series will take place at Trinity's Laurie Auditorium. On Feb. 6 the incomparable Spanish guitarist, Andres Segovia, will return to San Antonio on the 53rd anniversary of his first appearance in the United States. The unchallenged, reigning master of the classical guitar, has been a world sensation since his first concert at age 14.

Universally acclaimed as the greatest living pantomime artist, Frenchman Marcel Marceau will thrill audiences in a long-awaited return visit under SPA's sponsorship. A 3 p.m. matinee performance at Laurie Auditorium on March 22 will make it possible for all ages to enjoy this genius of mime in an enthralling afternoon of theatre.

The final performance of the 1980-81 season will be April 14 when the Ballet Folclorico Nacional de Mexico returns for another exciting performance of folk music and dance in the Theatre for Performing Arts. The company of 50 dancers, singers, mariachis, marimba and country musicians from the many provinces of Mexico always attracts sell-out audiences.

SPA's exciting season is available to ticket buyers in a series package, with prices ranging from $16 to $80, a savings of as much as 24 percent on the subscription. For more information and a full brochure, call SPA at 224-8187.

State gets site in land trade

The state's ability to trade its public lands for other lands resulted in a unique archaeological acquisition, according to Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong.

Recently the state acquired the largest and most significant Caddo Indian village archaeological site in east Texas.

The site, according to Armstrong, has been of prime interest to state archaeologists because of systematic looting and destruction while it was in private hands. He said it will now be protected and studied in an orderly, scientific manner under state ownership.

Under state law the site, including all of the known Caddo burial mounds along the Red River in Bowie County, will be under the supervision of both the General Land Office and the Texas Antiquities Committee which manages archaeologically valuable discoveries on public lands.

Armstrong said the 64.5-acre tract containing the Caddo mounds was traded for six small, unmanageable tracts owned by the state which had equal farming value.

The newly acquired acreage will still be leased for farming, but the lessee will agree not to disturb the mounds and will protect them from treasure hunters. Eventually careful excavation of the mounds and village site may reveal a great deal more about these early Texas residents than we now know, Armstrong said.

"I am particularly pleased that we were able to accomplish this trade," Armstrong said, "because the tracts we traded off were not financially advantageous to the state, but the Caddo site represents some of our richest and oldest Texas heritage."

MATURE WOMEN'S PROGRAM SET

NEW YORK (AP) — A new program, "Women in the Seventh Decade of Maturity," will be offered this fall by New York University's School of Continuing Education.

The program, WISDOM, is designed to help older women meet the problems brought on by retirement, widowhood and other critical life changes.

Almond roll keeps rolling

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Greg DeLuca loves the Almond Roll his mother-in-law, Rose Enrico, bakes. Because Greg loves to cook himself, he made a point of getting the recipe. Through a mutual friend he passed it along to me. The DeLuca's live in California. I live in New York. But what's 1,500 miles for a recipe to travel?

NONI ROSIE'S ALMOND ROLL.
Yeast pastry, recipe follows
1 cup whole blanched almonds, toasted
1/2 cup flaked coconut
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 large egg, slightly beaten
3 tablespoons almond-flavor liqueur
1 tablespoon butter, at room temperature
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1 egg yolk blended with 1 tablespoon water
1/2 cup confectioners' sugar
3 tablespoons slivered almonds, toasted
Prepare pastry dough. Finely chop the whole almonds and stir in the coconut and orange rind; stir in the egg, 2 tablespoons of the liqueur and the butter. On a pastry cloth stir together the granulated sugar and the flour; with a stockinet-covered rolling pin roll out chilled pastry to an 18 by 15-inch rectangle; spread with almond mixture to within 2 inches of edges. Roll up from the 15-inch side; turn ends under; place seam-side down on a greased cookie sheet. Brush generously with the egg yolk mixture. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until baked through and browned — 30 minutes; let stand in a turned-off oven 5 minutes more. Remove to wire rack to cool. Stir together the confectioners' sugar and remaining liqueur; drizzle over roll and sprinkle with the slivered almonds.

YEAST PASTRY: In a small bowl dissolve 1 envelope dry yeast in 2 tablespoons warm water (110 to 115 degrees) stir in 1 tablespoon sugar; set aside. In a large bowl stir together 1 3/4 cups all-purpose flour and 1/2 teaspoon salt; cut in 1/2 cup butter until particles are fine. Whisk together 1 large egg and 1/4 cup sour cream; stir into the flour mixture; add more flour if necessary to have a non-sticky dough. Wrap in saran and refrigerate overnight.

Delta Kappa sorority meets in Lubbock

Area members of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society International joined 1,045 other members from Texas in a recent convention in Lubbock. Mrs. Mary Rowlette, state president, selected "To thine own self be true" as her convention theme. Newly-elected presidents of 270 chapters met with area coordinators in a leadership development workshop. Bernice Conoly of Portland, Ore., international president, discussed special challenges of this decade. Mrs. Ruth Johnson of Dallas chaired the workshop.

A formal banquet honoring founders and presidents ended the official convention activities. Miss Conoly brought international greetings and addressed members and guests.

Mrs. Vida Brown of Wheeler, incoming president for Beta Delta chapter, was among the chapter presidents honored at the Founders and Presidents banquet. Other Beta Delta members attending were Dorothy Dodgen of Shamrock, Mary Reeve and Geardine Rumpy, both of Pampa.

Chemical may boost gas supply

BORGER, Tex. — A chemical that sounds like a gas to put people to sleep — methyl tertiary butyl ether — is actually a pick-me-up for gasoline that promises to increase the supply of unleaded fuel at the pump, a major oil refiner reports.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recently approved the use of MTBE as a gasoline additive. MTBE serves to boost the octane level of many previously unusable low-octane motor fuel feedstocks to meet requirements of unleaded gasoline manufacture.

Unleaded fuel accounts for roughly 40 percent of the U.S. market and is estimated to make up 75 percent of demand by 1985, reports Phillips Petroleum, the first U.S. firm to commercially produce the chemical.

Glo-Valve wins little league title

Glo-Valve rode the 15-strikeout performance of Paul Simpson and the hitting of Tommy Bowsen and Wayne Hoskins to a thrilling 5-3 victory over Rotary to win the Little League City championship Tuesday night at Optimist Park.

Simpson allowed three hits and gave up eight walks to win his 14th Little League game in two years against only two defeats. Simpson is 5-0 in City Tournament play for the last two years.

Dierk Milum silenced most of the heavy hitters for Glo-Valve, giving up only four hits during the four and two-thirds innings he pitched. His reliever, Paul Smethers, gave up a bases loaded single to Hoskins to score two runs in the fifth. Hoskins also had another single and was walked twice for a perfect night at the plate.

Bowden slammed two doubles, walked, scored and drove in a run to lead Glo-Valve at the plate. Ricky Igau completed the Glo-Valve hitting with a run-scoring single.

Both pitchers were tough with men on base. Glo-Valve left eleven runners on while Rotary stranded nine.

Simpson allowed no hits for four and two-thirds innings when consecutive singles by Roy Waters, Jeff Gaines, and Smethers brought in two runs.

Glo-Valve got the runs back in the bottom of the fifth on Hoskins' hits and held on in the sixth to wrap up their second City Championship in three years. They were runnersup last year.

Glo-Valve finished the City Tournament with a perfect 5-0 record. They defeated Gibson Discount Center, 14-5, in the tournament opener with Grant Gamblin going the distance and being the winning pitcher. They slipped past Wil-Mart, 11-10, with Igau gaining the win with relief help from David Carter in the last inning.

Glo-Valve finished the season with a 15-4 record. Rotary was 17-3. Glo-Valve is 24-7 in City Tournament play since the tournament originated in 1976 and are 17-3 for the last three years.

HAPPINESS IS winning the Little League City Championship as witnessed by this overjoyed group of Glo-Valve Service players, who mob pitcher Paul Simpson until only his hat is visible in the center of the circle. Simpson struck out the last batter with Glo-Valve ahead of Rotary, 5-3, Tuesday night at Optimist Park. Players identifiable are (l-r), Eldon Hamilton, Jon Roe (59), Ricky Igau (25), Mike Egau, and Wayne Hoskins (15), who celebrates the win by slamming his mitt to the ground.

Turner favored in cup race

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Dennis Conner had steered Freedom to a three-race sweep of Courageous in the American preliminaries, but he wasn't ready to claim the America's Cup defense role from veteran Ted Turner.

"There's a long way to go yet," a beaming Conner said after reaching the dock Tuesday. "He's the champion. He's the guy you have to beat."

And beating Turner is just what Conner and the other U.S. skipper, Russell Long, have been doing since the round-robin preliminaries began last Saturday.

Conner, of San Diego, Calif., has won six of seven races while Long, a 24-year-old newcomer to 12-meter yacht racing, is 2-2 aboard the new yacht Clipper.

Turner, the Atlanta-based sports and broadcasting magnate and successful Cup defender in 1977, is 1-6. His single win came over Conner the first day of the trials.

Freedom and Clipper square off today in Rhode Island Sound as the trials continue.

"The summer is not made by one day. We're going to have our up days and he (Turner) is going to have his up days... He's going to get a lot tougher," Conner said.

Turner was philosophical about his frustrating day. "I think we'll give him a better race next time," he said. "It's a game of seconds, feet and inches, and we were wanting for every little bit."

Turner was outslipped by Conner all day and at one point was actually rammed by Freedom.

The collision came moments after the start of an aborted second race, when Freedom rode up on the starboard side of Courageous' transom, within four feet of Turner at the helm.

HANK GREENBERG, baseball Hall of Famer and now a successful Los Angeles investor, holds award he received recently New York for his years of playing celebrity tennis. Greenberg, who took up tennis after he left baseball, has dominated the annual Dewar's Sports Celebrity Tournament.

Hank Greenberg has a new racket

NEW YORK (NEA) — Hammerin' Hank Greenberg had an illustrious baseball career with the Detroit Tigers. Now, 33 years after walking off the baseball diamond, he's a star tennis player. "I have one distinction as a tennis player," claims Greenberg. "I've lost with the best... I've even lost to Jimmy Connors." A former Most Valuable Player of the American League (1935 and 1940), Greenberg, 69, has won tournaments that have included the likes of Archie Griffin, Lynn Swann and Walter Payton on their rosters. While these athletes play football, not professional tennis, they are all less than half his age. Hank was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame back in 1956. In 1970, at the age of 60, he entered the first annual Dewar's Sports Celebrity Tennis Tournament in Las Vegas. Surprisingly, Greenberg won the tournament. He has dominated the event for nearly a decade. Going into 1980, he has been champion of the Dewar's tourney six of the last nine years, winning once in singles and five times in doubles competition. (The Dewar's tournament has eliminated singles play and is now a doubles tourney. Playing partners are selected by a computer.) Greenberg's partners have included former Los Angeles

Lakers guard Gail Goodrich; San Diego Chargers tight end Bob Klein; Rick Barry of the Houston Rockets; USC basketball coach Bob Boyd; and Earl "The Pearl" Monroe. Hank claims there is an unusual reason for his success in tennis. "I've been lucky so far," says Greenberg with a touch of humor. "I've never been paired with Deacon Jones." Taking Greenberg's kidding in stride, Jones admits he's not as skilled in tennis as he was in pro football. "Now that I've made the Hall of Fame, my next ambition is to be paired with Hank Greenberg in the Dewar's tennis," said the former defensive end of the NFL Los Angeles Rams. Greenberg shows no signs of slowing down. Quite a few athletes can testify that he still strikes fear in the hearts of tennis opponents. "He made me feel helpless," said Julius Erving of the NBA Philadelphia 76'ers after losing to Greenberg in a match at the 1979 Dewar's tourney. "He made me want to go back to basketball." Skiing champion Suzie Chaffee agrees. "You have to be on the other side of the net to appreciate Hank's tennis play," she said. "He's as tough a competitor as he is a gentle spirit." Of course, Hank has a long history of determination and athletic ability.

He made his major league debut with the Detroit Tigers of the American League in 1930 but only played in one game that season. It was another three years before he stepped back on the field for Detroit. Playing first base for the Tigers, Hammerin' Hank made himself known pretty quickly during 1933. He batted .301 during his first full season in the major leagues and knocked in 87 runs. One year later, Greenberg hit .339 and led the Tigers to the World Series. The title proved elusive to Greenberg, though, as Detroit lost the Series to St. Louis. The next season, 1935, Greenberg and the Tigers won the World Series by downing the Chicago Cubs in six games. He was named the American League's MVP for his performance that year. He hit .328. Possibly the best season for Hank was 1937. That year he batted .337 and gathered a league-leading 183 RBIs. His lifetime batting average was .313.

Cromartie's hit gives Expos another win

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer. Someone asked Warren Cromartie how many game-winning hits he had had this season. Quite a few, right? "I don't count them," said Cromartie. "Maybe (Pete) Rose does. I don't keep tabs on that stuff. I just go out and play baseball." Cromartie, who has hit in eight straight games and is batting .317, singled home the winning Montreal run in the 10th inning Tuesday night, giving the Expos a 7-6 victory over Philadelphia and a 2 1/2-game lead over the Phils in the National League East. Ron LeFlore started the 10th for Montreal with a single and advanced to second on an infield out. With first base open and lefty reliever Tug McGraw, 0-3, on the mound, Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green ordered the right-handed swinging Gary Carter to be walked. That brought Cromartie, a lefty, to bat. "The percentage was just as high with Tug out there against both guys in that situation," Green said. "But the way Carter has handled our pitching, I felt it was best to go left-hander against left-hander." Carter's line single in the eighth had given the Expos a short-lived 6-5 lead, but the Phils tied it with two out in the ninth on an RBI-single by Garry Maddox. Cromartie said the intentional walk "perked" him up. "It's always a challenge," he said. "That's the percentage, left-hand pitcher against left-hand hitter, and Tug McGraw has always been tough on me. He just threw me a good fastball, and I saw it." In other NL games, Houston downed Los Angeles 5-4 in 12 innings, the New York Mets edged the Chicago Cubs 6-5, Cincinnati whipped Atlanta 8-2, St. Louis got by Pittsburgh 3-2 and San Diego defeated San Francisco 5-3. Mike Schmidt's 21st homer of the year highlighted Philadelphia's four-run fifth, but Montreal re-took the lead on consecutive doubles by LeFlore and Rodney Scott in the sixth. The Phils tied it again in the seventh on a throwing error by right fielder Rowland Office. Elias Sosa, 5-2, relieved in the seventh and earned the victory. Astros 5, Dodgers 4. Cesar Cedeno led off the 12th inning with his fifth straight hit, a double, and scored Houston's winning run on an error by Los Angeles reliever Joe Beckwith. After Cedeno's hit, Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda decided to intentionally walk Art Howe to get to winning reliever Frank LaCorte, 4-0. Craig Reynolds came in to hit and laid down a perfect bunt. Beckwith fielded the ball and threw it into left field trying to get Cedeno at third, allowing the winning run to score. The Astros tied it up with Joe Morgan's leadoff homer in the ninth, his fifth of the season and first this year at the Astrodome.

Mets 6, Cubs 5. New York got home runs from Claudell Washington, his fourth in two days, Mike Jorgensen and Elliott Maddox to outgun the Cubs. Washington's was a three-run blast in the fifth that capped a four-run inning. Mark Bombardieri, 5-1, earned the victory in relief of Ray Burris, who yielded all five of Chicago's runs in four innings. Reds 8, Braves 2. Dave Concepcion drove in a pair of runs, one with a solo homer in the first inning, and Charlie Leibrandt tossed a three-hitter to help Cincinnati continue its domination this season of the Braves. The Reds, who have won eight of nine games this season with Atlanta, erupted for four runs in the eighth, capped by Concepcion's RBI-single. His homer in the first inning was his first in more than two months. Jeff Burroughs drove in both of Atlanta's with a homer. Cards 3, Pirates 2. Bobby Bonds bounced back from an 0-for-27 hitting slump with a double and a home run to pace St. Louis over the sliding Pirates, who have lost eight of their past nine. Bonds doubled and scored in the first inning and homered in the third to break a 2-2 deadlock.

American League baseball roundup

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer. Weaver saw some pretty good pitching Tuesday night. Weaver did some pretty good pitching, too. "The kid can pitch, that's all I can say," Earl Weaver, Baltimore's manager, said after 26-year-old left-hander Scott McGregor baffled Toronto with a four-hitter, facing just two more than the minimum of 27 batters in the Orioles' 1-0 victory over the Blue Jays. Another "kid," 25-year-old right-handed reliever Roger Weaver of Detroit, silenced Cleveland for 31-3 innings to pick up his first major league victory as the Tigers stretched their winning streak to six games by belting the Indians 9-4. Elsewhere in the American League, New York shelled Boston 10-5, Texas topped Seattle 5-4, Milwaukee defeated Oakland 5-3, Chicago doubled California 2-1 and, in a two-night double-header, Minnesota beat Kansas City 2-1 before the Royals trimmed the Twins 4-2. Tigers 9, Indians 4. Weaver, who has pitched nine innings of major league ball since being called up from the minors and has yet to allow a run, replaced Detroit starter Dan Petry in the third inning. "At first I was a little cold," he said. "I was a little concerned, but when Dan got in trouble early, I was hoping it would be me. I was afraid I was going to get stale from not working. You never like to go into the game so early, because it means the starting pitcher is in trouble." Towards the end I felt I was getting a little sharper." And, of his first victory, he said simply: "It's the best!" The Tigers' big bat man was Richie Hebner. He drove in six runs, one with a grounder in the first inning, three with a double in the seventh and two with a single in the eighth. Yankees 10, Red Sox 5. Reggie Jackson is supposed to hit mammoth home runs and he did, a three-run shot in the eighth inning deep into the right-center field stands in cavernous Yankee Stadium. Rick Cerone is not supposed to hit home runs — of any kind — but he put one in the stands, too. And it was the big shot of the night, a third-inning "clout" that erased Boston's 5-3 lead. Cerone's homer, which matched the career high of seven he set last year with Toronto, was a lazy opposite-field fly ball that barely made it over the 310-foot sign at the base of the right field foul pole. Rangers 5, Mariners 4.

Mickey Rivers doubled with two out off Seattle's Shane Rawley in the bottom of the ninth in Texas and, after Bump Wills was intentionally walked, Al Oliver singled for his league-leading 10th game-winning RBI. Rusty Staub, who doubled and scored Texas' first run on the second inning, had a two-run single in the sixth. Brewers 5, A's 3. Ben Oglivie picked up his 50th RBI with a sacrifice fly that broke a sixth-inning tie while Sixto Lezcano and Mark Brouhard slugged solo homers in Milwaukee's victory over the A's. Tony Armas had a two-run homer in the ninth for Oakland. White Sox 2, Angels 1. For the Angels, there's no place like home — thank goodness! They've lost 20 of their last 23 home games. They helped Chicago break its own six-game losing streak on a bases-loaded walk to Greg Pryor in the second inning and Thad Bosley's RBI single in the fourth. Twins 2-2, Royals 1-4. Roy Smalley's RBI single in the ninth inning gave Minnesota its first-game triumph, then Amos Otis drove in two runs with a pair of singles in the Royals' nightcap victory that made it a split. "Six hours of wasted baseball," Twins Manager Gene Mauch muttered.

Wimbledon interrupted by rain

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "It's damp, dreary and depressing." So muses America's Brian Teacher from the players' restaurant as he stared up at yet another huge threatening black cloud overhead. Whatever else you can say about the start of this year's Wimbledon, one thing is certain: It has been very wet. Downright soggy. Fits of downpours, light drizzles and overcast skies have been wreaking havoc with the schedule of matches. Players walk onto the grass and exchange a few volleys, maybe even finish a set, before they are forced to seek cover again because of rain. Martina Navratilova, the defending champion, found the Center Court so slippery during her interrupted match against South Africa's Ilana Kloss Tuesday that she feared an injury from all that sliding around. "I have no reason to take any chances. I was very careful," she said later. "But you can't really play according to the conditions." "You can't really hurry up or slow down." Since 1887, Wimbledon has played the last week in June and the first week of July, a period thought to provide the best weather Britain can muster. There's even a saying among Britons here that to "have Wimbledon weather" means blue skies and sunshine. But in recent years the championships have been losing more and more days to rain. Monday's damp afternoon at Wimbledon's opening left half the men's singles unplayed. The women shared "Ladies Day" Tuesday with the men, but even that didn't help. Delays and more delays plagued the day. It hasn't been until 6 p.m. or 7 p.m. that the players have really gotten going. The rest of the time they spend dozing in their dressing rooms, sipping sodas in the restaurant or just complaining. The 2,200-strong maintenance staff at the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club have been working overtime to protect their courts dragging tarpaulins on, dragging them off, on, off, over and over. Even Tracy Austin seemed demoralized. Her match suspended against Alycia Moulton for several hours, Tracy poked her head out of the women's dressing room to plead for the clouds to go away. But the clouds — and Wimbledon's crowds — stayed put. While Wimbledon itself has changed little over the years, hallowed by tradition, its crowds are younger, more boisterous and more idol-crazy than ever. And when it rains, they are almost impossible. With no tennis to watch, hordes of schoolchildren roam the pavements, making it necessary for three policemen to accompany Bjorn Borg if he is to arrive safe and untrampled at his dressing room.

But it's not just the men players who are hunted. Just as many pre-tennis pursue Tracy, Chris Evert-Lloyd and Navratilova on a wild flight around the courts. It all seems a bit vulgar to Lance Tingay, tennis correspondent for Britain's Daily Telegraph who has covered every Wimbledon since 1932. He remembers when it used to be a "rather snooty affair," when the top people went to see and be seen. Now tennis — and its millionaire stars — are the chief attraction for the masses. This year Wimbledon boasts the first-ever automatic line-watching device ever used in a major championship. This is done by a box that sits beside the court and bleeps when a service is long. Romania's Ilie Nastase had a good deal of fun with it Monday, even climbing down on all fours to fix it with one of his infamous "Nasty" stares. It means a little less work for the 220 umpires employed, and the magical aura that surrounds the Center Court is safely intact. "The Center Court has an atmosphere of its own and seems to make everyone play well," said Nastase after beating John Feaver of Britain, 6-2, 6-3, 6-7 Monday. In keeping with tradition, the Center Court is still used only for the Wimbledon championships.

FARM SCENE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless something is done to change the law, the government's dairy price support program will cost taxpayers about $1 billion a year at least through 1985, says the Agriculture Department.

A detailed analysis of the program's costs and future trends was made available to dairy, farm and consumer representatives at a closed-door meeting here late Tuesday.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland called the meeting to discuss a number of proposals that have been made to change the current price support system.

Under current law, passed by Congress and signed by President Carter last fall, milk price supports must be set each Oct. 1 at a minimum of 80 percent of parity, a standard which at 100 percent theoretically would give farmers the same buying power they had in 1910-14.

It also requires a semiannual adjustment — each April 1 — to reflect higher farmers' costs of producing milk. Unless the law is changed, a further increase will be due this fall.

According to briefing papers distributed at the meeting, annual costs of the support program in the year that will end Sept. 30 will be slightly more than $1 billion, twice what was estimated last fall.

If the 80 percent support rate is continued, the annual cost of the program could rise to more than $1.3 billion in 1985, the report said.

Further, the rising supports would help spur increases in milk production, already projected at a record of about 128 billion pounds in 1980-81, it said. By 1984-85, production could be 130 billion pounds a year.

Milk supports are carried out by USDA through government purchases of surplus butter, cheese and nonfat dry milk. Dealers, in turn, must pay farmers at least the minimum support rate for milk.

The analysis showed that if the support is scaled back to 75 percent of parity, dairy farmers would be discouraged from increasing output so rapidly, government purchases of surpluses would ease back and costs not rise so rapidly.

At 75 percent support, it said, costs of buying surplus dairy products would be "only" $480 million in 1980-81 and drop to around $320 million a year by 1985.

In a letter Bergland sent to people invited to the meeting, he said it was hoped "these discussions might lead to a single legislative proposal that will effectively deal with the problem and one that we can all support."

One arguing point in favor of a change, according to the analysis, is that "economic incentives for milk production have been very strong" the last several years.

"In 1977, the all-milk price moved above the national average cost of production for the first time since that cost series was begun in 1974," it said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although much depends on how 1980 crops turn out, a senior Agriculture Department economist says retail food prices could rise more in 1981 than they are expected to this year.

Food prices this year are still expected to average 7 percent to 11 percent higher than in 1979, said J.B. Penn, deputy administrator of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service.

"We're still looking at present for something on the order of 8.5 percent," Penn told a news conference.

Food prices rose 10.9 percent in 1979, on the average, the sharpest increase in five years.

Rising livestock prices are expected to push overall food prices up sharply in the third quarter of this year and then decline seasonally because of more meat and poultry, and because of "some softening of demand due to the recession," he said.

However, given production plans of cattle, hog and poultry producers, the meat and poultry supply will begin to shrink by early 1981. Thus, Penn said, food prices in the first three months of next year are expected to creep higher.

Penn was asked if he thought food prices in all of 1981 would go up by more than the 8.5 percent gain now being predicted for 1980.

"We haven't (made an official estimate) because we don't even know what the size of this year's crop is going to be, there's so much uncertainty," he replied.

"But, if we have what one would expect is a pretty normal crop this year and nothing major happens in 1981, I'd say the answer is yes, that you could look for that, just given where we are in the cattle cycle, what's happening to pork, what's happening to poultry."

Onion pickers air grievances

HEREFORD (AP) — About 200 onion pickers have walked off the job at a field near here, demanding higher wages, a union contract, portable toilets and clean drinking water as conditions for their return.

The workers, some waving the black and red banner of the Texas Farm Workers Union, refused Tuesday to harvest onions in a field near Hereford for the Howard Gault Co.

Texas Farm Workers Union spokesman Jesus Moya said the workers are demanding 80 cents, instead of the current rate of 45 cents, per 53 pound bag of onions.

Cameron Gault, part owner of the packing company, said negotiations were underway with the union, but he declined to detail the company's offer.

He said if a compromise could not be reached with the union, he and other farmers might be forced to purchase expensive machinery to pick the onions.

Gault's 20-acre onion field was the first ready for harvest in the Hereford area. Moya said the strike would spread to other packers if it is determined they are not paying the minimum hourly wage.

"The growers have got to pay the workers a decent wage," he said.

"We're going to hit any growers not paying the minimum wage."

Farmworkers contend the 45 cent rate per bag is below the $3.10 an hour minimum wage.

Bill Beardall, an attorney for the Texas Rural Legal Aid which is representing the farm workers, said most of the workers were only getting a dollar to a $1.00 to $1.50 per hour.

"All they are seeking is to get minimum wages, and they want some type of portable toilet and clean drinking water," said Beardall.

"Nobody out there is making minimum wage," said Ed Tuddenham, another legal aid attorney. "There are people working here in this field so they can eat — not buy a color television set."

Gault contended the 45 cent rate provided more than minimum wage for the average or good worker, who he said could sack about seven bags an hour.

Other growers said average workers could sack seven bags an hour and good workers could sack 10.

However, Beardall said the average worker can fill only two to four bags in an hour.

Castro's sister tries to make amends

By Tom Tiede

MIAMI (NEA) — One of the ironies of the latest Cuban exodus is that while the refugees have been chased to Florida by one Castro, they've been welcomed here by another.

Juanita Castro, Fidel's estranged sister, and a Miami resident, has been quietly and privately doing what she can to assist the wave of expatriates settling into democratic exile.

She has urged established Cuban communities around the nation to open their hearts and pocketbooks to the outcasts.

She has pleaded for understanding, patience and traditional American mercy for the suddenly uprooted boat people.

Recently, she even opened her small but comfortable home to newly arrived families who had nowhere else to stay.

In short, Juanita Castro is doing what she's been doing since she fled communist Cuba herself 16 years ago: tending the wounds of her unfortunate country, and trying in a small way to make amends for the sundry evils of her famed brother.

She knows those evils better than most, to be sure. She says Fidel is a "megalomaniac," a "hangman" and a "tyrant." Brother or not, she wants him driven from his office and put behind bars where he can do no more killing or harm.

She didn't always feel this way, but she claims Fidel hasn't always been the way he is. When they were younger they were close; they were often argumentative and competitive, but close. "We had nine children in the family," she says. "My father was well to do, and we were very happy."

Juanita was particularly happy when Fidel began his guerrilla campaign to overthrow the Cuban regime of Fulgencio Batista. That government was corrupt and oppressive. She fully agreed with her brother that it must fall. The entire family celebrated when it did, in the 1959 revolution.

But Juanita's delight was short lived. She says she was horrified when her brother executed his enemies. She also resented his imposition of religious persecution. Most of all she was sobered by his movement toward Marxism-Leninism, and his increasing association with communist representatives.

By 1962 the disillusioned Juanita was openly critical of Premier Castro. She was also serving as something of an informant for his opponents. Some observers say she was recruited by the CIA, but she strongly denies that she has ever been anyone's foil.

Juanita left Cuba in 1964. She says Fidel had begun to threaten her, and she feared for her life. She lived in Mexico for a few months, then moved to Little Havana on the edge of Miami. Since then she has been a dedicated anti-communist, and the world's most outspoken adversary of Fidel Castro.

She believes the premier has ravaged Cuba morally and physically. She is particularly critical of his lack of values. He has built his army and solidified his influence in the Third World, she notes, but there are not enough homes for his people. Basic foods are rationed.

Meantime, Cubans by the legion have fled for freedom. One-tenth of the island population has left in the last 20 years. Juanita is pleased they have left, and thinks the U.S. should likewise be pleased "because they are the people who will soon return to Cuba to overthrow Fidel and the other communists."

Juanita says she too will go back to Cuba when her brother is deposed. Until then, she will continue to fight him. She will also go on helping the exile community in Florida. Friends say she has become a symbol of that community, the conscience of all the families that are torn asunder.

Miss Castro is 47, seven years younger than Fidel. She says she used to date in Cuba as a girl, but has never married. She lives, alternately, alone or with other women. She manages a small pharmacy southwest of the downtown area, and, yes, she bears a slight resemblance to her notorious relative.

Not everyone appreciates the resemblance, by the way. She says she is occasionally bothered by Castro operatives who circulate in South Florida. And besides this, some anti-Castro exiles insist that she is a spy. Through the years she has thus suffered threats and the abuse of petty vandals.

But in the main she is respected and even loved by the Cuban expatriates. She is not so active on the speaking circuit as she once was, but she spends more time than ever aiding and counseling refugees. Friends say no one who seeks her help is turned away. "She is a completely selfless person."

The selflessness goes beyond Juanita Castro's social work, of course. If she had stayed in Havana, at her brother's side, she might have become the most powerful woman in Cuba. Instead she chose banishment. The prime minister might not understand it, but a good many Cuban exiles here do.

Newborn found in leaf pile

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A baby boy found crying in a pile of leaves near an exclusive neighborhood south of here may have been left to die by the unwed mother who gave birth to the child just two hours earlier, investigators said.

Chief Deputy Jim Collins of the Smith County sheriff's department said the infant was found by construction workers early Tuesday morning and rushed to Tyler's Mother Francis Hospital.

Hospital spokeswoman Beverly Mason said both the nine and a half pound infant and the 16-year-old mother, who officials declined to identify, were listed in good condition Tuesday.

Mrs. Mason said physicians estimated the child was two hours old when it was discovered about 8:30 a.m.

Collins said it appeared that someone had tried to hide the baby in the wooded area behind the affluent home where the young mother lived with her parents.

"It had been left there for some time. Does that sound like someone planned to return to take care of the baby?" asked Collins. He said the incident was still under investigation.

Very special Jaycees

Retarded reach for 'highest potential'

By Denise Foley

BENSALEM, Pa. (NEA) — Cliff Palmer and Bob Cutler discovered recently that they have more in common than an uncanny ability to sell apple butter.

The two had hustled about six cases of the stuff in front of a local supermarket to raise funds for the Jaycees.

Palmer, a Jaycees regional director, was doing it for his 10th year. Cutler, vice president of his Jaycees chapter, was a neophyte.

But they both looked at it the same way: as a challenge. They sold their apple butter with a motivation that would put a star pupil of est to shame.

In fact, the only difference between the men is that Cutler is mentally handicapped.

But that doesn't make a difference to either of them.

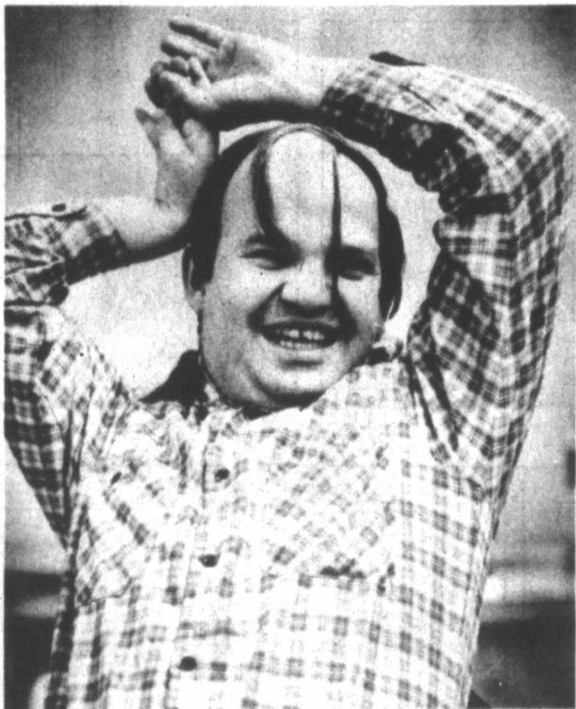

Cutler is vice president of the Pennel Mental Health Clinic Jaycees. The chapter has 31 members, all mentally handicapped or retarded.

Jaycee chapters for the retarded are a relatively recent innovation — but one that director Palmer says fits the service organization like a glove.

"The premise of the Jaycees, the chief reason for our existence, is individual development," he says. "To allow each man to develop his potential through activities, through service projects, by taking on new tasks and learning by doing. That shouldn't be limited just to people in normal walks of life."

As in regular Jaycees chapters, explains Palmer, much emphasis is placed on initiative. Projects are based on members' own ideas and carried out under their own power. The result is a sense of accomplishment like that shared by the two apple-butter vendors.

"The retarded have the same feelings, the same emotions, the same personal desires as anybody else has," Palmer continues. "It is perhaps a little harder for them, within the confines of society, to experience what quote-unquote normal people do. Through Jaycees, they're put together with each other and can draw off the strengths of each other."

"I REALLY WANT to fulfill my potential," remarks Bob Cutler, a 31-year-old factory worker who serves as vice president of a pioneering Jaycee chapter for the retarded and mentally handicapped. (Photo by Bill Johnson)

"I really want to fulfill my potential," remarks the 31-year-old Cutler, a factory worker who jokes that he lives "under minimum supervision — nobody bugs me after 10 o'clock."

Pleasant, prematurely balding, Cutler suffers from cerebral palsy. He does not have the use of his right hand.

As he speaks, his award for his apple-butter sales is clutched firmly in his left. Periodically he glances furtively at it, a smile tugging at his mouth.

"This really is a challenge," he says as the meeting room begins to empty. "I think it can help me reach my highest potential and that I can help other Jaycee members reach their highest potential and get to be as normal as we can."

There is little that is not "normal" about a meeting of the PMHC Jaycees.

The Jaycee Creed and the Pledge of Allegiance that start things off may be slow and halting. There may be a little extra prompting from the membership when a Jaycee struggles over a report or a word. But there is as much arguing and agreeing and cutting up as in any room filled with 30 men.

A discussion on membership drives prompts one enlightened Jaycee to suggest that the organization would get a needed boost if it went co-ed.

"They could meet in the next room," wryly suggests a consultant from one of the group's two sponsoring Jaycee chapters.

"Yeah," agreed the Jaycee to peals of laughter, "and we could sneak over and check on what they're doing."

While making plans for a dance, they members quickly divide the duties — from renting a hall to providing refreshments and music. One Jaycee offers to get the hall — and the women.

He says he will bring his girlfriend and maybe some of her friends.

"I'll try and round 'em up, guys," he promises, barely suppressing a grin. "But it'll be hard."

There are other moments just as normal but still somehow poignant.

Mark Russell, a dimpled 21-year-old in white painter's pants, proposes that the first beneficiaries of the chapter's clothing drive be a family that lost many of its possessions in a fire.

"They're beautiful," says director Palmer. "They don't think of themselves as unfortunate. They do for other people."

Russell, the chapter's treasurer, is planning a fall trip for the members to see New England's changing foliage.

He also wants to include young victims of muscular dystrophy, a crippling disease that claimed the life of one of his childhood friends.

"They don't get out so much," says Russell. "I think they would like it. I like to do things to help people."

Palmer notes that the Jaycee chapter is giving many such young men their first opportunity to help others. (In fact, he says, several — including Russell — have to be discouraged from volunteering for everything.)

"For many of them, for the first time in their lives, instead of everybody doing for them, they're doing for themselves and for other people," the Jaycee official explains. "That's what makes it so darn exciting. They love it. They eat it up!"

IN AMERICA

J.R. is back, alive and kicking

DALLAS (AP) — Only the good die young, while the dastardly wheeler-dealers like J.R. Ewing live on to survive both gunshot wounds and contract disputes with television producers.

A pistol-packing assailant gunned down the crafty, cutthroat J.R. in the final episode of the popular CBS television series "Dallas," leaving fans to ponder for six months the gunman's identity.

Almost every character in the weekly, hour-long soap opera is a suspect in the attempted murder. And executives at the California-based Lorimar Productions are determined to keep the mystery a secret until the show airs Sept. 19.

"This is a dramatic show and the whole affect would be lost if everyone knew who did it," said Lorimar publicist Earl Wingard. "We want the audience to hang in there with us."

All "Dallas" fans were really sure of Tuesday was that prime time's favorite villain would survive his wounds.

Larry Hagman, who portrays the sinister oil and cattle baron, re-joined the 10-member cast Tuesday on location here, Wingard said.

"I was supposed to have guards 24 hours a day," cried J.R. as he was rolled in a wheelchair from the fictitious Dallas General Hospital on Tuesday.

"What burns me is how they got in the office in the first place... They're just trying to drag more money out of me, that's what they're trying to do," he screamed.

The Texas-born actor flew from London to Texas on Sunday, almost two weeks after filming of the fall series began.

Don't be afraid to take on additional responsibilities this coming year where your work or career is concerned. You can handle whatever is thrown at you, and you'll be rewarded in proportion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If possible, devote the greater portion of your time and energy to large projects. The bigger they are, the better you'll handle them. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 488, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone you know socially could put you on the track to something good that may make or save you money. Listen attentively when insiders speak.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a good day to wrap up situations that mean something to you materially. Do a thorough job. Don't leave any loose threads hanging.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's best not to be too talkative today regarding projects or enterprises in which you're involved. Speaking prematurely might dull your edge.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your financial prospects are very encouraging today. By using your smarts you should be able to gain from several sources.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to be more fortunate today in joint ventures than in acting alone. Even though you'd prefer to be independent, cozy up to allies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The control of something important to you may be in the hands of another today. Be prepared to play a supportive role.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Friends you may be counting on to help you today might not be able to do so, but persons you'd least expect will come through on your behalf.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's important today to team up with individuals whose standards and goals are in harmony with yours. The right choices will make winning combinations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A willingness to help others will have a two-fold effect: It will make their lot easier, and they will reciprocate in kind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 19) You have excellent organizational abilities today, so put them to productive uses. You're especially adept at untangling complicated financial matters.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Benefits can be derived today from situations where partners are involved. As a team player you have much to contribute.

NEW YORK (AP) — While Ronald Reagan waltzed to the Republican presidential nomination, his son joined a prestigious ballet company.

Ronald P. Reagan, 22, is a member of Joffrey II Dancers, the training troupe for the Joffrey Ballet. He has toured several cities with the troupe since joining it in early spring.

Ballet officials say Reagan is maintaining a low profile, partly for security reasons.

"He really wants to pursue his own career in dancing," said dance company manager Frank Lackner. "He is working very hard and wants to keep out of the limelight as much as possible."

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Two men claiming to be the illegitimate sons of Avery Brundage will receive $62,500 each from the estate of the former president of the International Olympic Committee.

The settlement, approved Monday in Superior Court, resolves a two-year battle in which Avery Gregory Dresden, 28, and Gary Toro Dresden, 27, sought a share of the $19 million California estate. Brundage died in May 1975.

The Dresdens' court action began in August 1978, when they claimed to have been heirs omitted from Brundage's will.

Avery Dresden also sought to set aside Brundage's 1974 will in an action, claiming the IOC official didn't know what was in the document when he signed it six months before he died.

In return, the executors of the Brundage estate sued to recover $225,000 that Brundage had paid to the Dresdens under a 1955 trust agreement signed by their mother, Lillian Linnea Dresden. But that suit has been dropped.

Under the trust agreement, Brundage set aside $16,666 in cash, $150,000 worth of stock and a share of his home for each boy. But the agreement also contained a clause that would terminate it if a court determined that Mrs. Dresden made any public statements "intended to bring Brundage into disrepute" or if her sons made any claim on Brundage's estate.

Brundage was twice married and had no children by either wife.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Conrad Braun has been honoring his economic heroes by minting gold medals of them for more than a year. He hopes to do similarly with his latest effort, a medallion of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov.

Braun arrived in Moscow Monday and began mapping plans to find Sakharov's wife so he can present the one-ounce medal to her. Sakharov himself has been exiled to Gorky, a city that foreigners aren't allowed to visit.

The piece, which Braun calls an Olympic boycott medal, is the latest in a series produced by his private Kansas City mint. One side shows Sakharov's likeness with the words, "Champion of Freedom." The other side shows the five-circle Olympic symbol, with the circles replaced by chain links.

Most of Braun's coins honor conservative economists, many of whom favor a return to currency based on gold. The latest honors Sakharov because the Soviet dissident has suffered for his attempts to win freedom, Braun said.

TOWERS CLIMBERS

POOL SPEED MILWAUKEE (AP) — Why is one swimming pool "faster" than another?

"One reason is that the faster pool will create less turbulence from the water splashed and pushed against the walls," says Ray Essick, administrator for U.S. Swimming, which is supported by Phillips Petroleum.

"One of the fastest pools in the U.S. is at the Walter Schroeder Aquatic Center here, because its 14-foot to 17-foot depth eliminates much turbulence," Essick said.

TORONTO (AP) — Two mountaineers who tried to climb the north face of the world's tallest self-supporting tower — the 1,822-foot Canadian National Tower in downtown Toronto — gave up after going about 700 feet, police said.

David Smart, 17, and Gerry Banning, 34, both of Toronto, used their mountain-climbing hooks and ropes in the attempted climb Monday. They came down after talking to tower officials through cracks in the windows, officials said.

Police whisked them away to a police station, but a spokesman said it was unlikely the climbers would be charged. The two said the climb was to commemorate the fourth anniversary of the opening of the concrete tower.

MOSCOW (AP) — All 14 full members of the ruling Politburo attended today's opening of the Soviet parliament, the Supreme Soviet.

Among the Kremlin leaders present was 71-year-old Defense Minister Dmitry F. Ustinov, who was last seen in public April 2 when he expressed condolences at the Vietnamese embassy at the death of Vietnamese President Ton Duc Thang.

Western observers in Moscow speculated that Ustinov had been seriously ill. He was absent at the May Day parade and May 8 ceremonies marking the 35th anniversary of victory over Nazi Germany.

Conversation with a veteran bank robber

CLEVELAND (AP) — "Fast Eddie" Watkins, now 62 years old, can look back on a life that includes fast cars, lonely motels, 60 bank jobs and 39 years in jail. "Everyone has got to have something to be proud of," he says.

In a jailhouse interview Tuesday, a seemingly unrepentant Watkins called himself "probably the last of the practicing big-time bank robbers."

Eddie Owen Watkins, a native of Pittsburgh with childhood memories of Los Angeles and Cleveland, claims to have netted close to $2 million in more than 60 bank robberies and 125 other escapades since the 1930s, and says some of that loot has been deposited in other banks.

"I trust banks with my money — they're insured," he said straight-faced. "It's the best place in the world to put money."

Watkins, behind bars again at the Cuyahoga County Jail, is charged with two counts of bank robbery and is awaiting possible extradition to Los Angeles. However, Cleveland authorities want him, too.

But for the time being, the man known to police in the 1930s as the "Smiling Bandit" and in the 1960s as "Fast Eddie," is content to reflect on times past.

"It's probably an ego thing," he says of his reputation.

There was a bandage on his right arm, where he was wounded by police gunfire June 6, the day he was recaptured. Acting on a tip, FBI agents, sheriff's deputies and police converged on Watkins south of Lodi, Ohio, and took him in after a nine-hour standoff. The tip of one of his fingers was also shot off.

Watkins had escaped from a federal prison in Atlanta on April 29. He said he robbed five banks in the five weeks he was out, including banks in Los Angeles, Cleveland and Indianapolis.

He said he had two or three more bank jobs lined up at the time of his arrest, and had arranged for plastic surgery.

Conserve energy for the future

The many faces of Ted Turner

EDITOR'S NOTE — Ted Turner, the millionaire yachtsman and baseball owner, is seldom out of the limelight. This month, to considerable fanfare, he launched his new cable television news network. Behind that enterprise, as behind Turner himself, are many Ted Turners, and this portrait touches on most of them. By JOHN BARBOUR AP Newsfeatures Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — One of the Ted Turners sitting behind his desk turns his eyes away and his voice cracks ever so slightly as he explains how he took over his father's business at age 24 because I had to. It's hard to describe exactly how I felt because my father and I were extremely close.

"I decided to throw myself into my work and get what happened out of my mind."

He says nothing more of his father's suicide and it is nearly 30 silent seconds before his eyes return to his visitor.

Now, at 41, the handsome millionaire with the straight line moustache, the straight line teeth, the straight line eyes and the straight line approach keeps marching straight ahead. The motto on his desk faces his visitors with "Lead, follow, or get out of the way."

Once, with a short lead in an ocean sailing race, a tug and barge with a long taut cable crossed between his yacht and the finishing buoy. The crew urged him to turn away, risk the lead to save the boat from being demasted. Ted Turner held course. It was the tug that slackened cable and Turner rode over it to victory. He calls his boat Tenacious.

Once, he said, "If I only had a little humility, I'd be perfect."

"I say a lot of things," he says now in rare understatement. It leads to a lot of other Ted Turner images. There is the brash heretic challenging the elite sailing establishment. There is the tobacco-chewing, beer-drinking baseball owner pretending to be dead on the dugout roof while his team plays dead on the field. There is the devoted father of five, taking his children sailing or for a walk in the woods. There is the intimidator who tries to keep strangers off balance. There is the adored husband, the macho male, the respected, even loved, boss, the man with a penchant for saying shocking things.

But the excuse for all of this is Ted Turner the doer. He took his father's faltering venture into billboards and rescued it. He branched into radio and television. His "superstation" in Atlanta, with its menu of old movies, old series and sports, is beamed via satellite as far west as Hawaii. He owns the Atlanta Braves baseball team, the Atlanta Hawks basketball team and part of the Atlanta Chiefs soccer team. He piloted Courageous to win the America's Cup of 12-meter sailing in 1977 and plans to defend it this year.

And that's not all. He is staking everything on a new 24-hour cable television news network. That enterprise, reportedly costing something like $50 million for starters, began this month. He hopes it will break what he calls the stranglehold that network television has on American voices, American children, American time.

Coincidentally, it will allow Ted Turner's view of the world to occupy the same space, and maybe even make Ted Turner a lot of money. No one who knows him bets against Ted Turner. He enjoys playing David in his self-declared war with Goliath. And he does it with a kind of teen-age enthusiasm. There is something almost childlike in the way he knocks down history into small Turnersque capsules and uses them in a rapid fire, drawing, evangelistic way that carries him from Armageddon to Red China, from Nero to Hitler, from DDT to Joan of Arc in minutes. All of it punctuated with aphorisms and quotations.

"Where there's a will, there's a way. That's a great statement, and another is, 'What the mind of man can conceive and believe, the mind of man can achieve.' Idleness is the devil's workshop. A coward dies a thousand times, a brave man but once."

"He moves forward so fast," says a longtime associate, "that he may make nine wrong decisions, but they are corrected by the velocity."

The same friend says, "Ted would make Norman Vincent Peale look like a peasant. He could find a diamond in an acre of manure."

Ted Turner has found his share of diamonds. With the money he made on outdoor advertising, he moved into television and sports, parlaying an audience of perhaps a million in the Atlanta area into 8.5 million households nationwide. Now the good people of Atlanta can watch their Braves play live and in the wee hours on tape, and the good people of Ringling, Okla., Eastport, Me., and Fleetland, Wyo., can share that precarious pleasure via satellite and cable.

How Ted Turner

leapfrogged copyright laws and the Federal Communications Commission is an example of his "damn the torpedoes" style.

Turner worked out plans to beam his signal to one of the communications satellites hovering over the United States, and thence to the webs of cable stations on the ground. But there were daunting problems. He was licensed for the Atlanta area only, and he had leased the old movies and TV series for that area only.

But what if someone else picked up his signal and took it from there?

The signal, after all, was free as a bird. Funny how things work out.

Now an independent company picks up the signal and rebroadcasts it to the cable stations that pay the independent company a tariff. Turner gets not one cent. But he charges advertisers on his WTBS Channel 17 for reaching the larger audience. And he now has the market to attract national advertisers and their fat wallets as well.

Ted Turner's enterprises pay him a reported $285,000 a year, but he is not a man who lives high on the hog. He has three cars, including a battered, often dirty, old blue Toyota. When he travels with his basketball team, the long-legged players ride in first class by contract, and the boss sits back in tourist.

He lets his people handle details and they call themselves Alley Fighters, a kind of "No. 2" or Hooligan Navy esprit. He is said not to pay lavishly, but fairly.

Turner's hired Daniel Schorr, the former CBS reporter, as his chief correspondent in the 65-person Washington office of his new cable news network. Schorr is understood to be making his CBS salary plus 25 percent.

He's promised time to such divergent personalities as Bella Abzug, Ralph Nader, Phyllis Schlafly, William Simon and Richard Reeves.

"If this doesn't work, we can all go out and get other jobs," Schorr says. "But if it doesn't work, he's bet everything on it."

In his small office, the walls sporting sailing pictures and one end crammed with more than 80 trophies, Turner lights up a hummed cigar (he's trying to quit) and worried about Armageddon.

"I'm frightened the way events are currently moving that we could be headed toward the destruction of mankind and perhaps life on earth and an atomic holocaust," he says. "We've made tremendous technological progress in the last couple of hundred years and unless we immediately start working on the same sort of gains in social progress, I'm afraid we may be extinct shortly. Television has the power to inform, educate and entertain and perhaps turn the situation around before it's too late.... And that's basically what I'm working on now."

Then he says, "I do a lot of thinking now, and yesterday I came up with an idea for a series that I'm hoping I'll have the time to do myself when the summer's over — to go around and interview the different nations in the world."

"I mean, you hear so much about the Third World going down the drain and the Middle East countries are out to screw the rest of the world.... What I wanted to do was go around.... and tour all of their beautiful places and interview their leaders on what they're trying to do to solve the problems, and to present as positive a picture of every nation in the world as possible. That's never been done on television before."

And midday in a sermon on overpopulation, pollution, those "incriminating" buttons in Moscow and Washington that could start an atomic war, he stops and points to the television set flickering silently near his desk: "Look at this. That's an old Bette Davis movie. Our programs are really fine, I'm telling you. Just looking at it the way... sex is not degraded, love is played up. All our problems could be solved by going back to the wise ways in the past."

His own past is an untypical mix, but then he explains, "people are like snowflakes. No two are exactly alike and I think that's really wonderful, that no two childhoods are exactly alike."

Born Robert Edward Turner III in Cincinnati, he spent a year in boarding school at the age of 3 or 4 during the war. He was in military school from the fifth grade on. His father and grandfather started as Mississippi farmers.

"I was blessed with parents that I felt cared a lot about me and teachers that did," he says. "I was a happy child. I mean I was lonely part of the time because I was off at school. I was not around my parents perhaps as much as the average child would be, but I loved them very much and was very close to them."

He was expelled from Brown University after three years for violating

Baptists lose tax case

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ruled today that the state constitution does not protect a bookstore and publishing house owned by the American Baptist Association from property taxes.

E.E. Swearingin and other trustees of the Baptist Sunday School Committee appealed to the Supreme Court after lower courts held that the association must pay taxes on the 4,128 square-foot building and 4.863 acres in Texarkana.

The Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals court said the Legislature enacted a law in 1907 exempting "actual places of religious worship" from property taxes. The law was amended in 1931 to include ministers' dwellings and in 1967 to include radio or television facilities used to spread religious faith.

"The true test is whether the facility serves the same function as does a traditional place of religious worship," the appeals court said.
