

Draft registration back on schedule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is going ahead with its registration of 4 million young men for the draft after a Supreme Court justice Saturday blocked a court order that would have scuttled the program.

Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan, in staying the effects of a ruling by a three-judge federal panel in Philadelphia, said failure to go ahead with registration might frustrate U.S. foreign policy and hinder American military capability.

"This is the relief we were looking for," said Justice Department spokesman Mark Sheehan.

"All those who were scheduled to register are legally obliged to do so," said a department statement released after Brennan's order.

Officials of the Selective Service System said 19- and 20-year-old men born in 1960 must begin registering Monday at the nation's post offices. Men born in 1961 are to register a week later.

The future of the controversial program was cast into doubt Friday when the special three-judge panel, considering a 9-year-old draft case in Philadelphia, ruled that the Selective Service Act was unconstitutional because it does not require women to register.

The order was applicable nationwide.

Although Brennan's stay gives the registration program new life, the constitutional question of whether only men can be registered will not be resolved until the full court decides the matter, probably next fall. The high court has never ruled on the issue of sex discrimination as it relates to draft registration.

After the Justice Department filed its request to have the Philadelphia order stayed, the case was turned over to Brennan, vacationing at his summer home on Nantucket Island, Mass. The full court is now in recess.

In a six-page explanation of his order, Brennan said he believed there is a "fair" chance that a majority of the high court justices will eventually overturn the order issued in Philadelphia.

If the order is upheld, destruction of the registration lists can be ordered, he continued.

The justice also cited the "considerable resources" which already have been expended by the government for registration, including advertisements, the training of personnel and contract obligations.

Brennan rejected claims by plaintiffs in the Philadelphia case that they may suffer "irreparable harm" if they are required to register under a law which later may be found unconstitutional.

He said such concerns are outweighed "by the gravity of the harm to the United States should the stay requested be refused."

Friday's court order was the most serious blow yet to President Carter's revival of draft registration, an effort launched after Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. Administration officials have for some time feared such a ruling and sought to head it off by requesting that women as well as men be registered. Congress, however, rejected the idea of including women.

Despite Brennan's order, the registration program may be hampered by the Philadelphia ruling. One Selective Service System source, who asked not to be identified, acknowledged Saturday that the constitutional questions may make some young men reluctant to register.

But Joan Lamb, the system's spokeswoman, said the agency is "all geared up" to go ahead as scheduled.

Failure to register is punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

In their unanimous ruling, the three judges in Philadelphia said they could not accept the notion that "women can contribute to the military only as volunteers and not as inductees."

"The complete exclusion of women from the pool of registrants does not serve 'important governmental objectives' and is not 'substantially related' to any alleged government interests," they said in a 43-page opinion. "Thus the military Selective Service Act unconstitutionally discriminates between males and females."

The three members of the federal panel were Chief Judge Joseph S. Lord of District Court, Judge Max Rosen of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third District, and District Judge Edward N. Cahn.

The case before them dates back to 1971, when draft-aged men challenged the requirement to register for the draft during the Vietnam War on grounds they were harmed by "gender classification."

After the war ended and draft registration was halted in 1975, the suit was put in abeyance and some of the plaintiffs dropped out.

THE FORGOTTEN HERO. In an emotional ceremony Saturday, President Carter hugged retired Army Lt. Col Matt Urban after presenting him with the Medal of Honor in Washington. Urban of Holland, Mich., received the honor for World War II heroic actions. Paperwork on his nomination for the medal was lost, resulting in the 30-year delay in the presentation. (AP Laser photo)

Forgotten hero receives Medal of Honor - finally

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tearful President Carter awarded the Medal of Honor on Saturday to a World War II infantry officer whose heroic exploits went almost unnoticed because the Army lost his paperwork.

After Carter hung the nation's highest award for valor around the neck of retired Army Lt. Col. Matt Urban, he embraced the soldier, then stepped back and wiped a tear from his eye.

The ceremony was held at a Washington hotel during the annual reunion of the 9th Infantry Division, the unit the 61-year-old Urban fought with in France 36 years ago.

Urban was wounded several times, "but he always kept coming back, and each time his presence brought something extra to his men when they needed it most," Carter said.

He "galvanized his men, and he led them to success while repeatedly risking his life to save others and to break his troops out of position when they were pinned down, sometimes in apparently hopeless circumstances by punishing enemy fire," the president said.

The partially disabled ex-soldier — now the city recreation director in Holland, Mich. — stood at attention, a bulge in his Army uniform revealing a slight paunch.

His eyes glistened with tears as Carter, apologizing for the long delay, tied the coveted blue ribbon around his neck.

The Medal of Honor hasn't been awarded for action in World War II in more than 30 years, and Urban's probably will be the last. A candidate must be recommended for the award within two years of the "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action" for which it is presented.

A sergeant in Urban's unit recommended his former commanding officer for the medal immediately after his release from a German prisoner-of-war camp. But the Army lost the letter, and officials didn't find a copy until Urban heard about the sergeant's recommendation and inquired about it in 1978.

Investigators confirmed the heroic actions as reported by Staff Sgt. Earl G. Evans, and Carter decided to grant the belated tribute.

Grass fire chars 160 acres

Firefighters from both Roberts and Gray Counties were called to fight a blaze Saturday that charred 160 acres of pasture land on the Lip Ranch, 20 miles north of Pampa near the Canadian River Bridge on Highway 70.

One Roberts County volunteer fireman, Don Newman, was injured during the fire when he was thrown from the fire unit on which he was riding. Newman was transported to Highland General Hospital where he was released in good condition after receiving treatment for leg contusions.

Roberts County Sheriff Eddie Brines reported that the fire started directly under the Canadian River Bridge where some persons were hunting.

"We don't know if they had anything to do with starting the fire, but it did start there," Brines said.

Henderson free on bond

Dean Ray Henderson, charged in the fifth murder to occur within the city limits since the beginning of the year, is free on bond after his case was passed in a recent session of the Gray County Grand Jury.

The 36-year-old man was released from the county jail Friday afternoon after making bail reduced to $7,500 in court proceedings Thursday.

Bond was originally set by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge at $25,000.

The grand jury passed the open murder case said. A 1979 Roberts County fire vehicle also sustained heavy damages from the fire.

"While the truck was in one of the burning pastures, it became overheated and stopped," Brines said.

"The truck was not completely destroyed, and we think we will be able to use it again," Brines reported.

The fire spread quickly in the dry pasture land and was at one time burning in several areas both east and west of the highway, according to Roberts County firefighters at the scene.

A home occupied by the Coy Stevenson family on the Lip ranch was undamaged by the fire. However, firefighters were standing watch late Saturday as sparks continued to fly.

presented by District Attorney Harold Comer last week. Comer said it will be considered again at the next meeting of the grand jury.

Doy Victor Hutchison, 36, of 736 Sloan died on the operating table the morning of July 9, while undergoing emergency surgery at Highland General Hospital to repair knife wounds to the abdomen and right leg.

His death was the result of an early morning fight at 504 Yeager where he was found lying near his vehicle, by city police officers.

Missile site unlikely in Texas

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — You might say, as Sen. John Tower once did, that an MX missile is just like a freeway.

"Everybody wants them, but they don't want them through their back yards," the Texas Republican said.

The possibility remains slim that all or part of the Defense Department's proposed hide-and-seek missile system would be located in a rural section of West Texas or Eastern New Mexico.

Rep. Kent Hance, a Democrat from Lubbock, gives it a 10-20 percent chance.

Others maintain even that figure is too high. "I don't think this is a serious proposal," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said about the future of the MX in the southern High Plains.

The MX is a costly wrinkle in the nation's strategic defense plans. It is, essentially, a variation on the age-old shell game. Under the proposal, missiles would be constantly ferried by huge 24-wheel transporters along dirt roads between dozens of launching sites, making it difficult for our enemies to know with certainty where a missile was at any one time.

Tower drew his parallel between freeways and missiles after the Senate Armed Services Committee voted to add a split-basing stipulation — and the chance that half the system would be located at least partially in Texas — to its authorization for the MX missile system.

The system's first half, or 2,300 shelters for 100 nuclear missiles, should be planned for the federal lands located in the Great Basin of Nevada and Utah.

The decision on locating the other half in Utah and Nevada, where vocal opposition had developed, then

Suitable sites listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the counties in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico that the Defense Department identified as having sites "geo-technically suitable" for the MX missile system:

Texas: Dallam, Sherman, Hartley, Moore, Oldham, Deaf Smith, Randall, Palmer, Castro, Swisher, Armstrong, Briscoe, Lamb, Hale, Cochran, Hockley, Bailey.

New Mexico: Union, Harding, Quay, Curry, De Baca, Roosevelt, Chaves, Lea, Guadalupe.

would be made only after the Defense Department studied "all reasonable deployment areas."

A $51.9 billion weapons bill passed the Senate with that stipulation intact, but it remains to be reconciled with the House version of the bill which does not contain the split-basing amendment.

Whatever the outcome of the stipulation, its approval hinges on the Defense Department's investigation of sites in West Texas and New Mexico as the best alternative to Utah and Nevada.

Tower, the ranking Republican on the armed services committee, said he is virtually certain the review would end with a declaration that Utah-Nevada is the logical site for the entire system.

"The Pentagon tells us it would be impractical to split-base the MX missile system and common sense tells us that the costs of using the West Texas-New Mexico site — in terms of both human displacement and money — would be prohibitive," Bentsen said.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements and New Mexico Gov. Bruce King met in Santa Fe, N.M., recently for a briefing by high-ranking Defense Department officials. "I endorse the program 100 percent," Clements said. "But there are better locations than New Mexico and Texas."

King said, "I just don't want to see them put it in New Mexico."

In Lubbock, Hance sponsored a session to inform local officials from throughout the region about the plan.

Congressional sources say the stipulation was an

Reagan, Bush make 'vital' Houston stop

HOUSTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan and George Bush came to pivotal and vital Texas Saturday in an effort to break the habit of those voters who support Democratic candidates.

For Bush, it was a return to his adopted hometown of Houston.

Most of the states' heavyweight Republicans were on hand for the big rally, including Gov. Bill Clements and former ambassador to Great Britain, Anne Armstrong.

The Republican nominees were more than a hour late for the rally in the spacious Galleria shopping center, where the air conditioning went on the blink in sweltering 98-degree temperatures.

Clements did a partial strip and Mrs. Armstrong made a slip.

The governor tossed aside his coat, then loosened his tie, then unhooked a couple of his shirt buttons.

Mrs. Armstrong made this comment: "We are proud that Gov. Clements has agreed to be the chairman for the Reagan-Ford ticket. I mean, Reagan-Bush."

Mayor Jim McConn, a Democrat, was to have appeared at the rally, but instead, sent telegrams to Reagan and Bush congratulating them on their nomination.

Reagan and Bush each spoke for about five minutes and, as expected, laid into Jimmy Carter. They also made a pitch for Democrats and independents to join in the campaign to elect a Republican administration.

"This crusade crosses party lines. This country cannot go for another four years under Jimmy Carter," Reagan said.

Bush echoed Reagan by saying, "It is not going to be an easy battle in the fall. It's going to be tough. So we ask you who are Democrats and you who are independents to not only vote for us, but work for us."

Texas, with 26 electoral votes, has only gone Republican four times since admitted to the union in 1845. In three of the last five elections, Democrats won by less than two percent of the vote.

The Lone Star State is considered a must for a Republican victory this year.

Clements, the first Republican governor in the state in 105 years, pointed out that three Texans have now been nominated as vice-presidential candidates and none have ever lost.

About a dozen women began a chant for the ERA constitutional amendment shortly before Reagan and Bush appeared. They were drowned out by a roar of "Boos" and finally the band struck up "Dixie."

The candidates stood in an atrium in the Galleria's center, surrounded on four sides by an estimated 3,000 people, stacked five stories high.

The easily accessible speakers stand kept worried Secret Service agents, Houston police and security personnel scurrying to turn back curious crowd members trying to get closer to the candidates.

The onlookers hung over balcony railings and flashed signs proclaiming "Carter is Georgia Bound," "Reagan and Bush — The Dream Ticket," and "Welcome Home, George."

The mall, already crowded with Saturday shoppers, became impassable at points because of GOP followers attending the rally.

Vi Doherty of Houston, a former Bush volunteer, said, "I think Reagan did the right thing" in picking Bush to fill the ticket.

She said she believed Reagan could not have chosen former President Gerald R. Ford because "he couldn't have anyone else tell him what to do."

"I was hoping for this ticket," she said. "It wouldn't have mattered if it were switched. Ford would not have helped the ticket all that much."

Jim Marrs, a five-year Reagan supporter, also agreed with the choice of Bush as vice president. "I think George Bush is just a super guy," he said.

The apparent last minute selection of Bush did not hurt Reagan's image at all, Marrs said, adding he believed Reagan did "a great job" with the selection of a vice-presidential candidate.

The Houston insurance agent said he supports Reagan "because the country can't live with Carter anymore. I agree with Reagan right down the line because he wants to balance the budget, and we won't get anything done until then."

Louise Badger said she was "skipping work" to attend the rally because "I wanted to touch a president."

"They are an unbeatable combination," she said, adding she had been for Reagan, then switched her loyalties to Bush until the former United Nation's ambassador dropped out of the race to back Reagan.

Officials to test lake for arsenic

DALLAS (AP) — State officials will test the entire Lake Tawakoni watershed to pinpoint the origin of arsenic concentrations found in the water and silt of the lake that provides 20 percent of the water for Dallas and its suburbs.

"We are in the process of checking the lake to determine if the arsenic levels are sufficient to create problems," said Bob Buckley of the State Soil and Water Conservation Board.

Arsenic has been found in concentrations of up to 11 parts per million in the silt, the average level is less than one ppm. Levels of up to 049 ppm have been found in the water. The standard established by the Safe Drinking Water Act calls for no more than 050 ppm.

City officials said arsenic has not been detected in Dallas drinking water from the lake.

Tom Taylor, director of water utilities for Dallas, said the city has an ongoing monitoring program and that a analysis of water supplies on July 1 showed arsenic levels of 01 ppm, far below federal standards.

However, Taylor said the cause of the pollution needs to be investigated and that the city would study the tests and maintain a liaison with state agencies.

"We are getting ready to start doing tests for non-point sources," said Clyde Bolmfalk, chief of water quality planning for the Texas Department of Water Resources. Non-point sources would include pollution from farmland, pastures, roadways and other areas where small amounts may be washed into the lake by rainfall.

"We will be testing the entire Tawakoni watershed," he said. "However, because the tests are conducted on runoff water, the tests cannot begin until the lake receives a significant rainfall."

Buckley said his agency is devising a plan for abatement after the source is identified.

"There are no severe levels yet," said Buckley. "But we are concerned because the arsenic is present in all the lake, and seems to be building up."

Judge to close hearing on controversial book

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - District Judge Richard Comfort says he will close part of a hearing Monday on distribution of a controversial book about the Worldwide Church of God to prevent details from being publicized.

His order followed a conference Friday with five attorneys representing David Robinson, author of the book, and three attorneys for two church members who oppose its release.

An attorney for the church members, James Kincaid, requested the order, arguing if the Tulsa County District Court hearing is opened to the public "then we've publicized the book."

Kincaid said his clients are not attempting to stop the book's release totally but are asking for a "pre-publication review."

"We are not interested in stopping the book," he said. "We ask that there be a review of the publication by the judge to the extent that if confidential information is divulged, that information be deleted."

James Sturdivant, an attorney for Robinson, replied that pre-publication review "is the Harvard word for censorship."

Comfort said he will determine Monday if confidential, legally protected "priest-penitent" relationships were violated by the author in writing the book.

Robinson claims the book, "Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web," is an expose of inner workings of the California-based church and its leaders. A sealed copy of the 300-page paperback book was given to the judge Wednesday night. Comfort said he has read the first few chapters but declined to comment further.

A copy of the book was to be given to the attorneys representing the church members Friday under guidelines agreed to by both sides.

District Judge William Means signed a temporary order June 2 halting distribution of the book at the request of the church members as part of a $2 million invasion of privacy suit. Robinson appealed that order to federal court but it was dismissed and the case was returned to state courts.

Robinson, 57, was ousted from the church last year and is now minister of a Tulsa church that includes some other former members.

ACTOR JAMES CAAN has his rope ready as he chases a steer through the arena during the California Rodeo in Salinas, Calif. Caan was the "heeler" for his partner H. P. Farmers pessimistic on grain transportation

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - Farmers responding to a recent 16-state survey are pessimistic about the grain transportation situation in the United States.

In fact, 49 percent said they consider the U.S. grain transportation system a very serious problem, and another 43 percent said it is somewhat of a problem.

In addition, most grain producers feel they can do little to help solve the transportation problem because they have lost their political clout.

The study was sponsored by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., based in Des Moines. It was prepared by Jefferson Davis Associates of Cedar Rapids. Yankelovich, Skelly & White, Inc., of New York, worked with Jefferson Davis in supervising questionnaire design and methodology.

The questionnaires were distributed by Pioneer's farmer-salesman network. A total of 34,760 responses were received to the four-page questionnaire, which contained more than 50 questions in nine categories.

The states involved were Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Indiana, South Dakota, Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan, Texas, Colorado, Oklahoma, North Dakota and New Mexico.

About half the results were released Saturday in Minneapolis at the annual convention of the National Corn Growers Association.

Dr. Phillip Baumel, a transportation specialist in the department of agricultural economics at Iowa State University, worked on the survey and made the presentation.

Nurses move after brutal murder

DALLAS (AP) - Homicide investigators say they still have few clues in the brutal rape-murder of a Filipino nurse who was bludgeoned and strangled and her throat slashed.

And 12 other Filipino nurses who lived in the northside apartment complex where the murder took place - including the victim's three roommates - have moved out.

The roommates discovered the body of Carina Doromal, 26, when they returned from their graveyard shift early Friday morning. The four women came to Dallas from the Philippines last December to work at the Granville C. Morton Center and Research Hospital.

"They are staying with families in the community," a spokesman for the hospital said.

Miss Doromal was off the night she was killed, friends said. Police said she was clad only in a pajama top when her body was found. A pair of underpants and pajama bottoms were found nearby and police said the woman had been raped.

Medical examiners said she had been strangled, beaten in the head with a blunt object and her throat slashed deeply. They said death occurred about 3 a.m., and that any of the three brutal assaults could have caused her death.

The roommates told investigators they left for work shortly before 11 p.m., leaving Carina at home with Paul Del Rosario, 22, another friend. He told police he left the apartment about 11:30 p.m. for his job.

Homicide investigator Gerald Luther said the killer apparently entered the apartment through an unlocked bedroom window. Luther said the apartment had been ransacked as if the intruder was searching for something, although it could not be determined if anything was missing from the apartment.

The other nurses are frightened by the savage attack on a woman described as quiet and cheerful, friends said.

"She was more conservative than the others," said Carol Del Rosario, a friend. "She was quiet, but she had a strong character. When the rest of us would get down about something, she was the one who cheered us up."

"They (the three roommates) have been talking about moving back to the Philippines, but I don't know whether they really will," she said. "Right now, they don't know what to do."

MX project welcomed by cities

An effort to soften electoral problems that could come up for Utah and Nevada senators, postponing the decision about where to locate the entire system until after November.

Two conservative Republicans, Jake Garn of Utah and Paul Laxalt of Nevada, have terms expiring this year.

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., is a member of the armed services committee.

"There are parochial problems involved in a situation of this sort," Tower said after the vote.

Larry Morgan, an aide to Rep. Harold Runnels, D-N.M., places the blame for increased talk about split-basing squarely on Utah-Nevada political considerations.

"Truthfully, we're of the opinion it's a subterfuge," he said. "Things may be a little bit different after November."

The attention has not provoked an uproar in Texas and New Mexico as it has in the two states farther to the west.

Congressional offices report little mail.

Civic groups in Clovis, N.M., and the small West Texas towns of Andrews and Denver City have said they would welcome the vast project and its accompanying payroll.

There are no precise figures available, but the Defense Department estimates that as many as 20,000 people could be employed during construction of the project, and it is expected that approximately half of them would be working in Texas and New Mexico if the system was split.

Once completed, a maximum of 14,000 people would be required to work and maintain the system, according to estimates. Again, it is reasonably safe to assume that about half those would be employed in Texas and New Mexico under a split-based concept.

The scheduled date for release of the Defense Department's draft environmental impact statement on potential sites for the MX missile recently was postponed until later this summer.

One of the reasons given was the need to include additional information about split-basing possibilities.

The Defense Department has stated publicly that its preferred alternative is locating the system in the Utah-Nevada area. The department then favors locating the entire system in another, as yet undesignated, area. Finally, Defense Department planners accept split-basing as the last alternative.

Not all Republicans happy with Bush

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' Republican delegates counted the pluses and minuses Saturday resulting from their appearance at the GOP national convention in Detroit.

Everyone was happy over the nomination of Ronald Reagan as the presidential candidate.

Everyone was happy, or at least satisfied, with the platform. Many of the 80 delegates, but not all of them, were happy Texan George Bush was picked as Reagan's running mate.

However, there were still two areas of discontent. Some longtime Reagan supporters who seized control of the state party from Gerald Ford backers in 1976 are still uneasy that they will be ousted by "newcomers" who came to power with the election of Gov. Bill Clements in 1978. About 75 of them gathered in a rump caucus Tuesday night in Detroit to complain.

Some of these same Reagan backers also are uneasy about having to explain Bush's liberal ways to the home folks. About 45 gathered in a second rump caucus

Thursday to discuss backing Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina. Forty-one of them decided to "vote their convictions," but only seven actually voted for Helms against Bush when the roll call came.

The four-day convention, with every session lasting past midnight, highlighted several state GOP leaders and their work.

Ernest Angelo, chairman of the delegation and state Reagan campaign director, was the stalwart of the group. The former Midland mayor, with his crew-cut hair and quiet voice, kept firm control of the delegation.

He convinced Bush delegates they should back Reagan, which they did unanimously. He sympathized with Reagan supporters who were hesitant to support Bush for vice president but urged them not to dispute Reagan's first decision as a presidential nominee. When seven of the conservative Reaganites voted against Bush, Angelo got personal promises from each they would come back to Texas and back the Reagan-Bush ticket.

State GOP Chairman Chet Upham, Mineral Wells, acted as peacemaker and troubleshooter among the moderates and Bush delegates, while Ray Barnhart, former state chairman who led the 1976 Reagan campaign, did the same for hard-line Reagan supporters.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, won the thanks of the delegation and the convention for his diplomatic handling of the platform committee.

Later Tower convinced Texas delegates who were unhappy about the platform's failure to support ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment that it contained a stronger than usual declaration of equal rights for all.

For the third straight GOP convention he had a personal hand in picking a vice president. Tower was one of several senators and governors advising Reagan on the vice presidential nominee. Tower later gleefully revealed that he told Reagan that Bush should be his No. 1 choice. Tower's daughter, Jeanne, a Bush delegate from Dallas, made a seconding speech for Bush.

Bored by Republicans? Wait for Democrats!

DETROIT (AP) — Now that you've slept through the Republican convention, prepare for the other guys. The Democrats will, as Democrats do, have a political brawl, and it couldn't happen in a nicer place than Madison Square Garden.

In Detroit, as speaker after speaker said the same things in not so different ways, the sound could be heard of television sets being clicked off across the land.

It was the country club set in charge of the Chamber of Commerce Fourth of July picnic: a lot of speeches, a lot of patriotism and a lot of good manners. Diversity flickered to infant death in committees. Even Henry Kissinger, the object of deep conservative distaste, got on and off the stage without being booed.

Republican co-chairman Mary Crisp, critical of her party's abandoning the Equal Rights Amendment and no longer welcome, warbled her bitter swan song in the morning when television is game shows and soaps.

Meanwhile in New York, the Garden — a storied fight arena — is beginning to look like a convention hall. The podium is up, although it hasn't been painted and covered. The anchor booths are taking shape for the Aug. 11 start. And the fights are taking shape as surely as afternoon clouds herald a thunderstorm.

The Democrats really don't want it too easy. "The smoothest cut and dried exercise in the last three decades was the renomination of Richard Nixon in 1972, and that was about as exciting as a migraine headache," says John C. White, chairman of the Democratic Party.

The main bout in New York, of course, is J. Carter v. E. Kennedy, with Carter the overwhelming favorite to hold the title. Unlike Detroit, where the main bout was for second billing, the vice presidential card in New York will most likely go to Walter Mondale by default.

"The Republican convention was a very depressing sight," White says. "They have a very narrow view of the world. They remind me of the preachers who shout 'the end of the world is coming.'"

Actually, when one thinks about it, Barry Goldwater did just about say that.

"Our convention will be less show business and more substance," says Tim Kraft, President Carter's campaign manager. "Our speakers will address themselves to the future. Our speakers won't dwell in endless repetition as in Detroit in personal attacks on Republicans. They just had one persistent policy: attack on Carter and Mondale."

"We are not going to campaign against Richard Nixon either. That was an ironic and interesting note that the Republicans had up to 40 to 50 hours on television and did not once invoke the name of their last elected president."

Recession, grain embargo and drought hurt port

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — As farmers in the Dakotas and Minnesota worry about drought and the fall harvest, the people who ship their grain abroad are beset with a recession and a Soviet grain embargo.

Traffic in this Great Lakes port, which ranks behind the Gulf ports of New Orleans, Baton Rouge, La., and Corpus Christi, Texas, among the nation's top grain-shipping centers, is down dramatically.

Longshoremen have been laid off and elevators have at times closed their dumps to trucks bringing in grain for lack of ships to carry it. Meantime, railroads are becoming more competitive.

Last year, a 12-week miller's strike cost the Duluth-Superior port an estimated $61 million when 1.5 million metric tons of grain were shipped by other means, usually rail.

Authorities fear the new damage — particularly the loss of Soviet ships to carry the grain — may be long-term.

At the heart of the port's troubles, however, is the recession. With the slump in the auto industry, demand for steel in the Great Lakes cities like Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo has fallen off.

In the past, freighters delivered foreign steel to the U.S. and returned to Europe with American grain.

"When you come from Europe, you like to have cargo going both ways," said Sven Hubner, a Duluth shipping agent. "Now, with the slow down in steel traffic, the ship is coming empty."

The average cost for a ship coming up the Great Lakes is $10,000 per day, he said. From Rotterdam (Holland) to the lakes is a 15-day run.

Without a cargo on the westbound leg, "that's $150,000 down the tube," said Hubner.

Duluth-Superior had a busy spring as it cleared its backlog of grain from the miller's strike. Some 45 ships called in March and April, compared with 22 in the same two months a year earlier.

But in May and June, only 62 ships called, down from 116 in the same period last year. The trend has continued into July, said Davis Helberg, director of the Seaway Port Authority of Duluth.

Grain shipped from Duluth-Superior, including domestic shipments, last year totaled 7.9 million metric tons.

This June, overseas grain shipments totaled only 230,000 metric tons — down from 675,800 a year earlier.

Hundreds of lake pilots, tugmen, grain handlers, inspectors and other waterfront workers are laid off around the Great Lakes.

"At least 200 of our people are idle," said E.L. Slaughter, vice president of the International Longshoremen's Association. "Most have not worked this year, or have worked little."

Meanwhile, the Lake Carriers Association of Cleveland says 44 of 240 U.S. ore carriers on the lakes will be laid up this week.

President Carter's Jan. 4 embargo of 17 million metric tons of grain to the Soviet Union hit the port doubly hard because Soviet vessels were active in the Great Lakes while ships of other nations are often too large to pass through the St. Lawrence Seaway.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Social security faces still another crisis

Trustees of the Social Security system have warned that yet another financial crisis is looming. Witnesses before a congressional committee helped explain why.

It turns out that millions of dollars in Social Security disability benefits are being paid to persons whose disability causes them no immediate financial problem. They are already being supported by the government — as inmates of prisons and jails.

The flow of disability checks into prisons is contributing to drug traffic, prostitution and gambling within the walls. That's a problem for the warden. The problem for the American people is that their government is wearing a blindfold as it passes out money under various "entitlement" programs. That's where the warden's problem begins.

Common sense tells us that the working taxpayer should not have to pay twice — once with taxes supporting the prison system, and again through Social Security taxes — to support a convicted felon who happens to be disabled. Yet there is a chance that Rep. William Whitehurst, a Virginia Republican, will get nowhere with his bill to cut off disability payments to prisoners. It may be unconstitutional to deny benefits to a prisoner who otherwise is entitled to them under the eligibility rules of Social Security.

The $60 million which Whitehurst estimates is going to prison inmates is a drop in the bucket for a Social Security system that will pay out $140 billion during the coming year. But this sort of double-dipping by prisoners reflects the mandated entitlements that run through the Social Security structure and keep getting it into trouble.

Now a shortfall in the retirement trust fund is looming for late 1981 or early 1982, because the government blindfold prevents Social Security from basing its benefits on what the system can afford. It cannot afford to keep its benefits rising with the consumer price index, as the law now requires, when the wages being taxed to replenish the trust fund are not rising at the same rate as the CPI.

People drawing Social Security will receive a mandated 14.3 percent increase in benefits July 1 based on the past year's rise in the CPI. Because wages have not risen as much, and because of the severity of the recession now gripping the economy, receipts from the Social Security payroll tax earmarked for the retirement fund will not be sufficient to cover the higher benefits.

The easy way out is for Congress to authorize the retirement fund to "borrow" from the separate funds used to pay disability and Medicare benefits, which currently have a surplus great enough to cover such a bailout. But that would not address the broader question of why Social Security seems to move from one crisis to another, defying efforts to keep income and payouts in balance.

Congress enacted a series of stiff tax increases in 1977 that were supposed to keep Social Security running smoothly until the end of the century. This year, the 6.13 percent tax amounts to $1,587 deducted from the pay of workers earning up to $25,900. Next year the rate goes to 6.65 percent on earnings up to $29,700, for a $1,975 deduction.

By 1987, workers earning the maximum will be paying $3,000 a year into the system.

Working people shouldering that kind of payroll tax deserve something better than recurring headlines about the imminent bankruptcy of a Social Security system they are relying on as insurance for their own future. Certainly they deserve to hear that their money will no longer be used to bankroll crap games in San Quentin or Sing Sing.

Exit an old friend

When a distinguished magazine like Harper's goes on the rocks, one cannot be sure whether the editors deserted the readers or the readers deserted the editors.

The magazine started by the Harper brothers in 1850 built its circulation in the early years by serializing the novels of Dickens and Thackeray. It published the poetry of Tennyson and the works of such American authors as Mark Twain and Stephen Crane. In its essays and commentary some of America's best minds were brought to bear on the issues that dominated our history and cultural development for more than a century.

Harper's has been losing money since 1967, and the present owners plan to suspend publication with the August issue. Other magazines with the reputation and leadership once enjoyed by Harper's are also in trouble. A new owner is trying to rebuild the faltering Atlantic Monthly, which dates from 1857. The Saturday Review, once a weekly staple for the bookish public, is limping along as a monthly.

The decline of magazines known for a high literary and intellectual standard would be less disturbing if it were readily apparent that something else is taking their place. What is it?

Harper's and the Atlantic for generations spoke in a voice often more thoughtful than what was heard in the streets. They were custodians of tradition, their pages a refuge from what was cheap and shallow in the passing parade.

The passing of Harper's is to be regretted.

Smoot-Hawley revisited

By Don Graff

Scattered here and there in the press in recent weeks have been reminders of an anniversary of some significance to our own times.

It is a half century since the Smoot-Hawley Tariff became the law of the land, and the near ruin of the economy.

History by definition not being news, and the economic branch of same by most definitions being equivalent to intellectual anesthesia, is an adequate explanation of why references were so few.

That and our preoccupation with the alarming state of affairs of the economic present — the continuing slide into recession, inflation's continuing attack on the value of the dollar and the continuing deterioration of the American world trade position.

The cumulative impact is apparent throughout the economy, but nowhere more so than in the auto industry with the $1.5 billion Chrysler bail-out, the rising volume of fuel-efficient imports, a third of the work force off the job and increasing pressure on Washington to curb foreign competition.

There is also steel, with problems of even longer duration with aggressive European and Japanese producers that it similarly has sought to alleviate by penalizing imports.

And these are just a couple of the biggest fellows on the block. Similar aches and pains are afflicting many others, and bringing similar demands for a protectionist response to the general ailment.

Demands that are finding increasing public support. A sounding just out by the New York Times-CBS News Poll, notes an emphatic majority — 71 percent — for protectionist trade policies to deal with the present complex of economic problems. The inflation-curbing advantages of unimpeded trade in the form of cheaper foreign goods carry little weight when the essential issue is perceived to be the preservation of the jobs of American workers.

It marks a significant increase in protectionist sentiment in the last few years and it raises disturbing echoes of the situation in 1930 when the economy was slumping, unemployment was climbing and business and labor were clamoring for assistance.

Which brings us back to Smoot-Hawley. The steepest tariff hike in the nation's history was Washington's response back then, and it quickly brought results. Although not those anticipated.

In self-defense, U.S. trading partners immediately followed suit and raised their tariffs. Trade volume declined, every country's position worsened and the worldwide Depression was deepened and lengthened.

Protectionism did nothing to improve things for Americans, employers and would-be employees alike, a consequence that was rather quickly recognized. But it took decades to reverse the process and repair the damage.

American trade policy since World War II has been consistently in the opposite direction — toward reducing trade restrictions to the politically practical minimum. And it has been largely successful, culminating last year in the laboriously worked out multilateral trade pact entered into by 99 members of the General Agreement on Trades and Tariffs.

Much has changed in the half century since Smoot-Hawley. Tariffs today are far below 1930 levels. The United States itself has become a much greater trading nation with exports currently representing 10 percent of overall output of goods and services, for a total value in 1979 of $270 billion.

One out of every eight manufacturing jobs now depends on exports, almost a third of corporate profits come from overseas activities and the produce from one of every three farm acres is destined for foreign purchasers.

Americans thus have much more to lose this time should history repeat. Protectionism as a response to today's challenges could cost more jobs than it saves because it is essentially an effort to export economic distress rather than resolving its causes at home.

And as Smoot-Hawley taught at considerable cost, it doesn't work. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Letter to editor

Dear Sir,
We, the parents of David Owens, who met with a tragic death in your city on June 28th, wish to take this opportunity to say "Thank you" to the many nice people in your city. Our two younger sons, Buddy and Rick, went to Pampa to take care of the details with hospital, police and funeral home, when they were hurt, frustrated and dealing with hate for the person that had taken their brother. (We were away and flying home so this responsibility fell to them.) While they were in Pampa so many people were kind to them and did care.

When David was younger he always wondered why people always tell the bad and never the good.

We would like to take this opportunity to say "thank you" to the people that did help, and care. In order not to leave someone out, will not try to name them, but we do appreciate them.

Our thanks to you,

Mr. Chairman

by ART BUCHWALD

"Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman."

"Will the gentleman in the living room in his undershirt please sit down. You are out of order."

"Don't tell me I'm out of order. You know the only reason you're going through this charade is because of the television audience."

"What seems to be the problem, sir?"
"I want to see the reruns of Charlie's Angels. Why can't you people hold your convention in the daytime when everyone is at work?"

"That's impossible. It would mean preempting the soap operas, and our female viewers would never stand for that. Besides, this is a very historical moment on television. We're nominating the person who may be the next President of the United States."

"Who's that?"

"Ronald Reagan."

"No, you got it all wrong. It's Jimmy Stewart for President — Ronald Reagan plays his best friend."

"We know what we're doin', Ronald Reagan for President — the part's all sewed up. Now will you please sit down so we can get on with the speeches?"

"I'd rather see The Gong Show — and I hate The Gong Show."

"If you don't keep quiet, sir, we'll make you listen to Sen. Charles Percy."

"I'll be quiet."

"All right. Now, ladies and gentlemen, we have a real treat in store for all of you. How would all you Americans like to have the Panama Canal back? You would? Well, it's now possible. If you vote for Ronald Reagan in November, we will send you absolutely free, without any obligation on your part, the Panama Canal as well as all the locks that go with it. Just think of it, the canal that you've always dreamed of is yours, once you put Ronald Reagan into the White House."

"Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman."

"Sir, we only have four hours of prime time and we would appreciate it if you'd..."

"What happened to the tax cut?"

"We're coming to the tax cut, sir, right after we return from Clare Boothe Luce. Why don't you go and take a nap and as soon as we get to the tax cut we'll wake you up."

"I don't wanna miss anything. You go right ahead with whatever you were planning."

"We have a film on Ronald Reagan as a young man."

"Beautiful! I'm glad I didn't go bowling tonight."

"And then we get to the tax cut."

"Are we going to get a tax cut and a balanced budget at the same time?"

"That's our big secret. If we told you that you might turn off the set and go to bed."

"Give me a hint."

"Well, we've shot it three different ways like they did 'Dallas' so it will be kept a mystery. In one version you get the cut and the balanced budget. In another you get the cut and a larger deficit and in the third you get the cut AND the Panama Canal as well."

"Is it true Ronnie wants to give the People's Republic of China to Taiwan?"

"Ronnie's always had a warm spot in his heart for Taiwan. He has all his American cowboy boots made there."

"Doesn't everybody? Hey, do you mind speeding it up? Maybe if you wind up early I can get to see Johnny Carson."

"We still gotta lot of business to attend to."

"Such as?"

"Ronnie is going to do his welfare cheaters number."

"Again?"

"It still plays in Peoria."

Fighting porno

By Anthony Harrigan

If civilized values are to prevail in our society, it will be necessary to turn back the tide of filth that has been released by hoodlum-dominated pornography operations.

Over the past two decades, the porn operators have had a field day. They have been allowed to establish "adult" bookstores that sell the most depraved materials. Their diseased fantasies have filled the pages of slick magazines. They have created a huge underground traffic in films that appeal to sick minds.

There has been very little resistance to this pornography which conditions people to anti-human attitudes and unnatural experiences. Happily, the situation seems to be changing. Influential public figures are beginning to speak out against the brutalization of society.

For example, Gov. William P. Clements of Texas recently told a meeting attended by more than 1,000 concerned citizens in Houston that he will support new measures to fight the cancerous spread of pornography. It's to be hoped that other governors will call on their legislatures to give police officers the tools they need to combat pornography.

In cracking down on smut-peddlers, police need to hit at the operators, not simply their hired hands. In making arrests at porno movie operations, Dallas police have begun the practice of carrying warrants for the arrest of the corporation officials who own the theaters involved. That's the way to proceed.

In many communities, public officials want to deal with the underworld elements responsible for the showing of perverted scenes and degrading spectacles, but they don't know how to proceed. Many prosecutors aren't prepared to deal with the pornographer's lawyer in the courtroom.

The National Obscenity Law Center has developed an important tool to aid police, prosecutors and concerned citizens. This is the "Obscenity Law Bulletin" which is available for $10 a year. The address of the Center is Suite 239, 475 Riverside Dr., New York, N.Y. 10115.

This journal is designed to keep prosecutors abreast of the latest cases. For example, recent issues have been devoted to the complex area of search and seizure in porno cases. This is an area in which many prosecutors and police aren't sufficiently informed, and on which many obscenity cases are lost.

In the United States, there are approximately 2,800 county district attorneys; 5,700 municipal attorneys, as well as 650 state prosecutors. All need up-to-date legal data on how to deal with the thugs who run porno operations.

Much more could be done by the federal government if the Justice Department were concerned and active. The smut-peddlers would be put out of business if the Justice Dept. fought porno operations with a fraction of the effort that the government puts into OSHA violations. It's time that the federal government set new priorities and dealt firmly with the traffic in degenerate films, literature and merchandise.

Doctors oppose lethal injections

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors would be forbidden to perform death-by-injection executions under a proposal before the annual meeting of the American Medical Association this week.

The policy, which must be passed by the AMA's House of Delegates to take effect, would put the 214,000-member organization on record as opposed to doctors' involvement in the new form of capital punishment.

The AMA begins its annual meeting here Sunday. Oklahoma, Texas, Idaho and New Mexico have passed laws making drug execution legal, but no prisoner has yet been put to death in that way.

None of the laws actually call on physicians to prescribe or give the lethal shot. But the AMA's Judicial Council, which drafted the proposal, was clearly worried about that possibility if more states opt for the method over hanging, firing squad or electrocution.

"A physician, as a member of a profession dedicated to preserving life where there is hope of doing so, should not be an active participant in a legally authorized execution, but should be excluded," the proposed policy said.

However, it said, physicians may continue to write death certificates for such executions, as they do for other forms of capital punishment.

Some 1,200 doctors and their spouses are expected at the meeting, which lasts through Thursday. They represent the 50 state medical societies that make up the AMA, as well as military doctors and specialists.

The House of Delegates meeting is traditionally devoted to political and social, rather than scientific, affairs.

The report on capital punishment is among 76 reports and 132 resolutions awaiting debate. Others deal with subjects ranging from the AMA's legal battle with the Federal Trade Commission and chiropractors to a resolution calling on hockey players to wear face masks.

The Judicial Council said physicians were sharply divided in opinions on participating in executions.

"Not surprisingly, those favoring capital punishment tend to support such legislation, while those opposing capital punishment do not," it said.

But critics "assert that it manipulates the profession into a position condoning capital punishment even though physicians are trained to save life, not take it," the council said.

Pryor telethon raises $140,000 in pledges

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — A telethon for the Richard Pryor Burn Foundation raised $140,000 in pledges by the time it went off the air Saturday, but the list of celebrity no-shows included the scheduled hosts — comedian Redd Foxx and singer Sammy Davis Jr.

A surprise visit by singer Stevie Wonder partly made up for the missing celebrities, who included former heavyweight champion boxer Muhammad Ali.

Telethon spokesman Greg Patrick said Ali called with a $100 pledge. "Jim Hill (a telethon host) told him that was cheesy, so he called back and pledged $1,300 and then his wife called back and pledged another $1,300," Patrick said.

The telethon goal was to raise $1 million for burn victims such as Pryor, who suffered third-degree burns over the upper half of his body at his home June 9.

Wonder donated a $10,000 harmonica which will be auctioned off, Patrick said. Donations ranged from $2 to $5,000 he said. The 14½ hour-telethon ended at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

Foxx, the telethon's organizer, reportedly developed a back problem before Friday night's start, and Davis was performing in Indianapolis, said a spokesman for station KHOF-TV.

Foxx donated sound, lighting and stage equipment at a cost of about $13,000, Patrick said. The show ended early because a generator for the amplifiers and stage lights was running out of power, he said.

Davis' wife, Altovise, stepped in to host the first segment of the telethon before she turned over the master of ceremonies duties to actor Leon Isaac Kennedy.

Celebrities who did appear included "Benson" star Robert Guillaume, Donny Most of "Happy Days," Marla Gibbs of "The Jeffersons," Johnny Crawford of the "Rifleman" series and sportscaster Jim Hill.

Rig fire injures one man

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — At least one man was injured Saturday when fire broke out on an oil drilling rig on the Sabine River near Port Arthur, Texas, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Fire broke out aboard the rig Ocean Leader about 1:20 p.m., said Petty Officer Joe Gibson.

The injured man was evacuated to a hospital, but further details on his injury were not available, Gibson said.

Ten of the 54 crewmen remained aboard to fight the fire, which burned out of control around the rig's engine room, Gibson said.

The other 44 abandoned ship and were picked up by a nearby vessel.

"The fire is out now, and everybody has been accounted for," Gibson said.

Col. Harland Sanders, admitted to a Louisville, Ky., hospital for treatment of a stricture of the esophagus, will go home Monday, a spokesman for Kentucky Fried Chicken Inc., says.

John Cox said the 89-year-old Sanders was "sitting up in bed reading get-well cards" Friday and was in "very good spirits."

"The esophagus thing, while very uncomfortable, wasn't considered very serious," Cox said. A procedure performed by doctors to widen Sanders' esophagus was "quite successful," he said.

Doctors said the esophagus problem had nothing to do with Sanders' other ailments.

Sanders continues to undergo chemotherapy for leukemia that was diagnosed when he was admitted to the hospital in June for treatment for pneumonia. Doctors say they have been encouraged by Sanders' ability to tolerate the drugs necessary to treat the disease.

The founder of Kentucky Fried Chicken continues to earn $250,000 annually for his endorsements of the product and the use of his name and face for its promotion.

Actress Melonie Haller says theatrical producer Roy Radin "intentionally, willfully, violently and wantonly assaulted, beat and raped" her at a party at his Long Island, N.Y., mansion, and she has filed suit for damages.

The suit, filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, also charges Radin and businessmen Robert B. McKeage IV knew that persons of "vicious character" would be at the party, and they were negligent in inviting her. It seeks unspecified damages.

Miss Haller, 24, known for her role as the only female "Sweathog" on ABC-TV's "Welcome Back Kotter" series, was found April 13 slumped in a seat on a Long Island Rail Road train in Patchogue, badly bruised and dazed. She charged she was raped at the mansion.

Indictments in connection with the incident charged McKeage, 42, of Manhattan, with second-degree assault and Radin, 36, with four misdemeanor counts. Misdemeanor charges also were filed against two women. No rape indictments were returned.

Radin and McKeage had no comment.

After an 8,000-mile trip across the Atlantic Ocean and back, Marvin Creamer sailed his 30-foot sloop into an Atlantic City, N.J., marina and was greeted by the cheers of several hundred people, a band and a present from his wife — an ice cream sundae.

"We zigzagged a bit," but proved it was possible to sail the North Atlantic without a sextant or compass, Creamer said Friday.

The 64-year-old former geography professor did miss his intended destination on the other side of the ocean — the Azores, a group of islands in the North Atlantic off Portugal. He arrived in Dakar, the capital of Senegal, a country in west-central Africa, after navigating along the coast of that continent.

The U.S. Coast Guard Oceanographic Unit in Washington, D.C., tracked his 39-foot sloop Navstar by satellite. The voyage took 92 days.

Princess Margaret, the younger sister of Britain's Queen Elizabeth, is spending two days in Ottawa before heading west to attend 75th anniversary celebrations for the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta.

On Sunday, the princess will travel to Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, as she begins a seven-day tour of six cities.

About 50 people were on hand to watch the princess inspect a guard of honor in Ottawa Friday and receive a 21-gun salute from the 2nd Regiment of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery.

One passenger on the regularly scheduled Boeing 747 flight from England said she hadn't even known the princess was on the plane.

NEW COAT FOR CITY STREETS. Above is a map of the streets scheduled to receive seal-coating as part of the city's annual street maintenance program. The contractors will begin in the central area designated as "1," continue through area "2" and finish up in area "3." Public Works Director R. B. "Jiggs" Cooke said, "All vehicles parked on these streets need to be moved for the duration of the program. Cooke said, so the seal-coating firm can reach the entire street."

City streets 'sealcoated'

City streets in the central, northern and southern portions of Pampa will receive a new "coat" beginning July 28, city officials said. The annual street maintenance program will begin July 21. Public Works Director R. B. "Jiggs" Cooke said, "with clean-up and repair work in preparation for the new layer of seal-coating."

The actual layering of the streets is scheduled for July 28, he said. The process is expected to take approximately one week if the weather remains good, he said.

The seal-coating will begin in the central portion of the city, he said, continuing to the southern section and finishing in north Pampa.

Ewing, Russians blamed for heat wave

DALLAS (AP) — The National Weather Service is wrong. The current heat wave gripping Texas and much of the Southwest and Midwest is not being caused by a massive high pressure system.

At least that's the opinion of several persons who have written Dallas city officials to tell them what's causing the heat wave that has caused temperatures to rise above 100 degrees each day for the past 26 days in this North Texas city. Guess who's first and foremost in shouldering the blame? If you guessed J.R. Ewing, that villainous snake from the television series Dallas, move to the head of the class.

"I am pleading with your honorship mayor to stop at once the filming of the TV program Dallas," Ray Martin of Attlesboro, Mass., wrote in a letter to Dallas Mayor Robert Folsom.

"Gambling is against the Lord. Millions of dollars are being bet on who shot J.R.," Martin continued.

The fall episodes of the internationally popular television series are being filmed here despite the heat wave.

A Canadian letter writer blamed the heat wave on Russia, claiming that the Soviets are bombarding the area with laser beams from four space platforms.

"The Soviet Union has installed four space platforms above us with full laser beam equipment, from which very few men can control the weather in America and all over the world," wrote Gerald Whalen of Toronto.

Other letters reaching city hall blame automobile exhaust fumes and some offer suggestions, such as seeding clouds and using Indian rain dancers to break the heat wave.

"You wouldn't believe some of the calls and letters we have gotten," said Carol Asel, administrative assistant to the mayor. "People have offered to pray for us. We have even heard from a soothsayer who says he can make the wind blow if he concentrates hard enough."

Record number of hogs, pigs reported

The United States has recorded the largest number of hogs and pigs on hand for any June 1 in history, but the rapid expansion that has taken place over the past several months may be winding down, according to Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

"As of June 1, a record number of hogs and pigs were reported nationwide," Brown said. "In Texas, the numbers were large, but not at record levels. However, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service indicates that producers have lowered their intentions to expand. The economics have simply become unfavorable to the producer."

Brown noted that as of June 1, there were 65.9 million head of hogs and pigs on U.S. farms. This was one percent above last June 1 and was the largest June 1 inventory on record. In Texas, some 900,000 head of hogs and pigs were reported, down three percent from a year ago.

The December 1979 to May 1980 pig crop in Texas numbered 640,000 head, a four percent drop from last year. Nationwide, the spring pig crop totaled 53 million head, five percent above a year ago.

"Texas producers have indicated that they intend to farrow 95,000 sows over the next six-month period, which would be a three percent drop from the first six months," Brown said. "Nationwide, farrowing intentions are down eight percent."

In the study the economists found that in the eight largest grain importing and exporting countries in 1977-78, cooperatives were involved in only nine percent of the world grain trade exports and 10 percent of the imports.

On the other hand, proprietary grain trading companies were estimated to be involved in 74 percent of the exported grain and 47 percent of that imported. Seventeen percent of the exports and 43 percent of the imports were by governments acting as state traders.

The economists expressed doubt as to whether an individual cooperative or even a group of cooperatives within a country can be expected to substantially penetrate international grain markets.

Birds to gain more rights than farmers?

BOWERS — The possibilities of the latest proposed federal regulation could give the migratory birds that visit the playa lakes in this area more rights than the farmers who own the lands.

The water district has recently been informed of another attempt to bring the playa lakes into Federal Regulation under the PL92-500 Section 404.

It has been reported to the water district that the Fish and Wildlife Services (FWS) has been applying pressure to the Army Corps of Engineers and the Environmental Protection Agency to make the playa basins and lakes fit into the classification of "wetlands."

The water district is taking the stand that Congress did not intend that playa lakes fit into Section 404 as "wetlands."

The fact that playa lakes would fall under federal regulations alarms members of the water district. As much as 95 percent of the land in the High Plains is privately owned.

There are between 16 and 17 thousand playa basins in the area and a majority of the land drains into these playa basins.

Irrigation farmers on the High Plains make good use of the playas, since the natural drainage is into the area and a tail water recovery system can be constructed with a minimum amount of earth moving.

The construction of "tail water pits" in the playa lakes decreases the loss of water due to evaporation. Also by decreasing the size of the playas more of the land around them becomes suitable for grass cover and, therefore, protects the land around them from wind erosion.

The rancher and dryland farmer are able to use the playa to their advantage by constructing a dirt tank in the central drainage point of the basin. The dirt tank will collect water for livestock and also allow the native grass to cover the playa (which normally would drown out in wet years), thus affording an excellent pasture for cattle and a cover for wildlife.

The water district realizes that the playa lakes provide a home for the migratory birds. The protection of migratory birds seems to be the main concern of the FWS.

Many land owners have been instrumental in the protection of wildlife and in providing a nesting ground for the migratory birds. Some landowners have purchased pheasant, quail, and other wildlife for stocking purposes on their farms and ranches.

The other side of the question is the amount of damage caused by the wildlife population. Many farmers have had experiences in the past three or four years with the sandhill crane. There have been as many as 1,000 such birds observed feeding on wheat fields in both Gray and Carson Counties.

Other instances include ducks feeding in wheat fields as well as grain fields, plucking the young tender wheat and harvesting half the grain. In most cases, the birds waste more grain than they consume.

The concern with federal regulations being implemented on playa lakes is that the farmer could be required to obtain permits for everything he did in the water shed area, such as plow, plant or fertilize.

The water district has contacted the Texas

Congressional delegation to alert them to what the district feels is an attempt to further regulate private property.

Under Texas Law, the playa lakes and the water that appears in them is property of the land owner.

Foreman takes case of church shooting suspect

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas (AP) — Flamboyant defense attorney Percy Foreman says his defense plan for accused Daingerfield church gunman Alvin Lee King III isn't hard to figure out.

The strategy "would be obvious to any intelligent person. I'm not going to discuss the case any further than that," Foreman said when reached in Galveston.

He said King "does not remember anything at all" about the incident.

King has been indicted on five counts of murder and 10 counts of attempted murder in connection with the June 22 shooting spree in the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield.

Five persons died in the bloodbath and another 10 were wounded. Authorities said the gunman wrestled with congregation members before turning one of the guns on himself.

King was treated at Galveston's John Sealy Hospital for a gunshot wound to the head, and was transferred to the Rusk State Hospital in East Texas this week for psychiatric testing.

Foreman, 77, said members of King's family asked him on Tuesday to take the case. He said he talked with King at Rusk, but added he will not interview him again.

"There's not one thing the poor man can help me with," he said.

"We will not conduct our prosecution any differently than we would for any other attorney," Morris County District Attorney Charles Cobb said Friday.

Visitors asked to haul out their trash

LAKE MEREDITH — If you carry it in - you can carry it out. Trash at Lake Meredith, that is.

With restrictions on mileage for trash pickup vehicles, this could be a necessity, according to officials at Lake Meredith Recreation Area.

National Park Service areas have had to reduce their mileage nearly one-half in an energy conservation effort.

"There are a lot of miles around Lake Meredith," according to John Sponsel, facility manager for the recreation area, "and it is just about becoming impossible to keep the trash and litter picked up as well as we would like to."

"It is going to get worse before it gets better," said Superintendent John Higgins, "due to increasing energy conservation requirements."

Recently, a group of Girl Scouts camping at Lake Meredith furnished their own trash bags and carried all of their refuse out of the area, leaving the campsite in better condition than they found it.

The National Park Service encourage visitors to police their own campsites and assist park officials in making Lake Meredith a clean place to visit.

Class founded, child governs learning

By KATHLEEN CARROLL
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — An 10-year-old boy sits on the floor, plugging colored pegs into a giant pegboard. He isn't playing, he is learning to square numbers by mapping them on a board.

As he lines up the pegs, the abstract squaring process becomes a physical reality. Elsewhere in the classroom, a student pins flags on a map and another arranges beads into geometric shapes.

They are uncannily quiet. None of the usual classroom noise and rowdiness.

These children are students in a unique public school.

They attend Amelia Earhart Montessori School, the nation's first public school to use the usually expensive Montessori teaching method.

"It is a sensory education where the child governs his learning," explained Dr. Andrew Martin, principal at Earhart.

Earhart opened as a Montessori school four years ago when the Dallas Independent School District was struggling with a desegregation plan.

Now, there is a waiting list of students to fill 210 slots. Those who are admitted (on a first-come, first-serve basis) are bused from every corner of the district, some from more than 20 miles away.

Earhart is located deep on the edge of West Dallas' housing projects, in an area of town where parking lot vendors sell hubcaps and small appliances from the backs of their cars.

"They all apply to come here," Martin said, before he was interrupted by phone call from a mother who wanted to enroll her child. "We turn away an average of 50 actual applicants, although we get a lot of calls like (the one from) that mother every day. We have more Anglo applicants than we can fill."

To comply with a desegregation plan, the school must maintain a ratio of 44 percent black, 44 percent Anglo and 12 percent Mexican-American students, Martin said.

The Montessori concept was developed about 1906 by Maria Montessori, an Italian physician and engineer who believed children should not be punished or rewarded for learning.

Under the Associate Montessori Internationale, the program moved to the United States, where it has been popular in expensive private schools until Earhart opened a public Montessori school.

Establishing a Montessori program is expensive. Equipping a classroom with the approved learning tools costs about $7,000, Martin said. And to qualify for AMI certification, teachers must undergo a year of training outside college work and intern for a year.

"But over 10 years, it's much cheaper," Martin said. "The children are taught to take care of the equipment. They just don't destroy equipment. Last year, I replaced damaged and lost equipment for 12 rooms and it cost me $14.87."

"I've been in education 23 years and I've never seen anything like it."

School board member Robert Medrano is a vocal advocate of the program at Earhart, where his 12-year-old son, Ricardo, is completing sixth grade. "I'm literally sold on it, based on the fifth and sixth grade experience of my son," he said. "I waited for a year (to enroll Ricardo at Earhart) because I was skeptical. But after a year, word starting getting out that Earhart had a fantastic program. I checked it out myself."

"It is ideal because there is more individual attention, more self-discipline."

Medrano said he wants the school board to pump more money into Montessori programs, making them available to schools throughout the district.

"The equipment comes from Europe and in order to bring about a heavy, heavy financial expenditure ... the school district is going to have to provide this type of relief," he said.

Montessori learning, however, should still be considered an alternative to more structured teaching, Medrano said.

The Earhart Montessori program has been modified slightly to conform to Dallas school guidelines, Martin said, but still adheres to the basic free-form learning ideals.

"The teacher does not dominate the classroom," he said. "The child is free to talk to his neighbors or work in the hall if he likes."

"Textbooks are not issued to the child, but there are five or six in each classroom. The students use them, but they learn to budget their time because the know another child will need the book," Martin said.

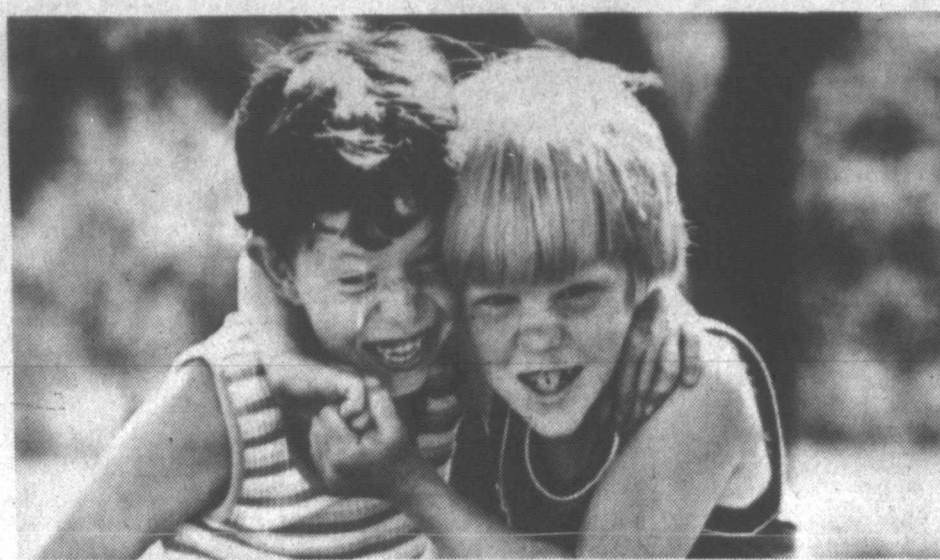

Teachers do not give the information to students, but act as a guide with the learning tools — beads for counting and math, maps and flags and globes for geography, color-coded word cards for construction and diagramming of cities.

"It is more work," said Norma Williams, 29, a teacher at Earhart who previously taught in a "traditional" school. "You feel like you've accomplished something, so you're not half as tired or frustrated."

"And the children are so independent. They don't like to be interrupted to go to lunch or out to recess. And they don't need to be constantly supervised when they are working on something they really are interested in."

The Montessori method, like most educational theories, has been the subject of great debate. And, of course, not everyone agrees on its merits.

"I think it's great when the kids are little," said a Fort Worth high school teacher. "But when a child gets to be about nine years old, I think he needs a little more structure. He has to learn to work within guidelines set by the teacher."

Rossington-Collins: anytime, anyplace

By Rob Patterson

"This is a totally new group," says guitarist Gary Rossington of the band he and fellow guitarist Allan Collins have formed — the Rossington-Collins Band. Though the group includes four former members of Lynard Skynard, Allan and Gary hesitate to compare themselves with their former band.

On their debut album, "Anytime, Anyplace, Anywhere," Rossington-Collins retains some of the best aspects from Skynard while moving in a new direction. The fluid and fiery guitar work of Gary and Allan is still a highlight of their sound (along with some fine lead and slide guitar from new recruit Barry Harwood), but the songs and style move in the direction of heavy British Blues that was always a part of Skynard's roots.

A prime ingredient in their new direction is female singer Dale Krantz, a whiskey-throated, full-voiced warbler who Gary and Allan recruited (rescued?) from 38 Special's line of back-up singers. "When we asked her to join the band, we didn't even know that Dale wrote songs," says Gary. A fine lyricist, Krantz contributes her own indelible stamp to almost every song on the album.

"We knew we had to do something totally different," says Allan. "Lynard Skynard was one group and this is another. We didn't want to redo all the old songs; it wouldn't have been right."

Kicking off their first tour at the Fox Theatre in Atlanta — where Skynard had recorded their live album a few years back — Rossington-Collins won over a rabid, sold-out audience of Lynard Skynard fans to the new band from the very first song.

With Ex-Skynard pianist Billy Powell and bassist Leon Wilkerson joined by new drummer Derek Hess, Rossington-Collins have all the verve and excitement of their former band. It's clear from both their album and performance that this group has all the potential to make a mark on the world of music as a group they were once a part of.

"With all these groups out there, doing what Lynard Skynard once did," says Allan, "we didn't want to be another imitation. This band can go all the way to the top," he concludes, "and that's just what we're going to do."

I have no doubt that they will do so. The Rossington-Collins band is a new sound from the South, and the "freebird" flies again.

Tween 12 & 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D. Copy News Service

Dr. Wallace: I'm not writing this letter to you because I have a problem. It's because I have a message to tell. I want to help a teen who might be thinking of doing something that I already tried — suicide.

Last year I was really depressed. I thought nobody cared for me so I jumped off an 80-foot bridge. Fortunately, instead of dying, I wound up in the hospital for three months. The jump broke all the bones in my ankles and crushed my heels. My hip was broken in three places and I broke my back.

All this happened because I thought, "What difference does it make because no one cares." I am now walking again but with a noticeable limp. I can't stand too long and I can't bend my back. Besides many scars all over my feet and legs, my rib cage is lower and I have shrunk an inch and one-half. I learned the hard way that people did care for me. My body may never totally mend but my spirits and goals are high and my mind is clear and bright.

Teens, look around you, people do care about you even though they don't say it. For those who look and still feel lost, I love you and so does God. We both care what happens to you. — A Friend, Seattle, Wash.

Friend: Thank you for sharing your thoughts with us. Your message will touch many teen readers.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 14 and have a nice boyfriend. We don't get to see each other very often but we do talk two to three hours every night and every night my mom gets on my back. She says that I tie up the phone and that nobody can call in.

My mom knows how much I love him but she doesn't understand how much he means to me. What can I do? — Denna, Torrance, Calif.

Denna: Your mother has much more understanding than I would have. Teens in love should be allowed 15 minutes maximum to talk on the telephone to their "friend."

Two to three hours a night of talk leaves little time for school studies or family relationships.

Write letters (if you can afford postage) to each other. At least this way you both can work on penmanship, grammar and sentence structure.

Dr. Wallace: My best friend has a very serious problem with her stepfather who is extremely cruel to her and is constantly beating her. She is always running away and is afraid to get help. I want to help but I feel totally helpless. What can I do? — Shirley, Nashua, N.H.

Shirley: Again, I recommend the faithful, reliable, sensible school nurse. Tell her what you wrote to me and she will know exactly what to do.

Dr. Wallace: I am 16 and overweight and I know my problem is psychological. I spent many agonizing years with my parents during my childhood. My mother was a battered wife and my father an alcoholic. (Things are better now with them.)

My escape during this horrible time was to overeat. Now I can lose weight but I can't keep it off because my parents are a constant reminder of my nightmare.

I realize that I need help but I don't know what. Can you help me? — M.S., Mount Pleasant, Texas

M.S.: Professional guidance and assistance would be the best solution but, naturally, this involves finances.

You can help yourself if you set goals and really want to solve the problem. Give yourself a reward every day that you stay on your diet.

Always remember that you and only you are responsible for your actions. You cannot blame what your parents did for your overeating. If you do, it's a cop-out and deep down, you know it.

When you set your goals and rewards, please write to me and let me know what they are.

Dr. Wallace: I have a friend who gets very emotional at times. When she is at my house sometimes she will start crying and run out of the house. What should I do about it? — Nancy, Mount Vernon, Ohio

Nancy: Talk to your friend when she is in a good mood. Ask her if you are doing anything to trigger her crying.

If she wants to talk about it, hopefully, she will clue you in as to what causes her outbursts. If she doesn't want to talk about it, tell her that you are sorry you asked and overlook it if it happens again.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Montgomery freed on $100,000 bond

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Candace Montgomery, accused of murder in the ax slaying of a family friend, has been freed on $100,000 bond and told to stand trial on September 15.

District Judge Tom Ryan accepted bond for Mrs. Montgomery after a three-hour hearing Friday which saw stern warnings issued to defense and prosecution attorneys.

Mrs. Montgomery, who was indicted July 9, has been in Collin County jail since July 11, when her original bond was rejected because of insufficient collateral.

The original bond was underwritten by Bob Hendricks of McKinney on June 27, a day after Mrs. Montgomery was arrested on a murder warrant. Hendricks also arranged for the new bail money.

Ryan told attorneys for both sides in the highly publicized case that he would throw them in jail if they violated his gag order.

"I don't want to hear, see or read anything with (the attorneys') names on it," Ryan said. "If I read it one more time, I'll put you in jail."

"The show is over, gentlemen," the judge continued, "and if you want to test me you can try your case from jail."

Mrs. Montgomery is accused of murdering Betty Gore, 30, a Wylie school teacher and mother of two who was a member of Mrs. Montgomery's church.

AID-TO-EDUCATION GRANT. Jerome Cribb, left, of Celanese Chemical Company of Pampa recently presented an Aid-to-Education grant to Dr. Dan Luss, chairman of the Chemical Engineering Department at the University of Houston. The gift of $5,000 is one of many educational grants presented by Celanese this year to universities throughout the nation.

Range war turns to future water rights

A new western range war, one fought in the courts, and in Congress, could be ignited as irrigation farmers try to cope with future water use, according to the Farmland News.

The battle over who gets the water will be fueled by conflicts over water rights and demands for water conservation.

Speakers at a recent Water Pollution Control Federation national symposium in Denver outlined water issues to about 35 participants from Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

About 17 states in the West practice the doctrine of prior appropriation for water, explained attorney Jack Palma, of Cheyenne, Wyo.

In the past the doctrine promulgated water rights basically on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Today, priority on water use for irrigation is based upon the priority established by the application date for water rights. Water rights traditionally have been held as private property rights as long as the water is used beneficially. With today's increasing demands on water resources, these private property rights are being questioned by those who see water as a public resource.

"The principles of private property make it difficult to alter them through due process and to make restitution," Palma said.

"Farmers claim the use of irrigation water is a property right but downstream users suffer. The courts must decide the issue," Dr. J.C. Anderson, economics head at Utah State University, said.

"The property rights issue is closely connected with the push for water conservation practices at the farm level. Water savings generated by conservation practices accrue to stream use in general, not to the farmer who has created the water savings," Palma said.

Farmland shows decrease

The downward slide in the amount of Texas farmland and the number of farmers is projected to continue with 2,000 fewer farms by the end of 1980, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has reported.

Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service's annual report released this week shows an estimated loss of 300,000 acres in farmland for a total of 138,400 acres.

Since 1972, there has been an annual decrease of 2,000 to 3,000 farms each year.

"We are expecting a year-end total of 159,000 farms in Texas," Brown said.

At the same time, the size of farms has been increasing from an average of 800 acres in 1975 to 870 acres in 1980.

"The loss in acreage has been consistent also," Brown said. Since 1975, 1.6 million acres have been diverted to other uses, mostly in the suburbs of metropolitan areas.

"These statistics don't shake up many people, but the impact on our future food supply deserves attention from everyone," Brown said.

He pointed out that this is a nationwide trend with 22,000 farms estimated to go out of business this year.

"Almost three million acres will either be covered over with shopping centers, residence, and industrial plants, inundated for reservoirs, or converted to recreational use."

Holtman takes fourth place

Two women's fastpitch softball teams from Pampa entered a slowpitch tournament for the first time last weekend in Perryton. The tournament consisted of 17 teams from Pampa, Perryton, Liberal, Guymon, and other surrounding towns.

Holtman Tank Trucks defeated the Pampa all-star team of Harvey and Roth to eliminate them from the tournament. Winning pitcher was Kellye Richardson while the loser was Carmella Caldwell. Holtman went on to take fourth place.

Softball roundup

League-leading Gordy Trucking came close to losing their first-place position not only once, but twice in Pampa women's fastpitch action last week.

Gordy had to rally to defeat Dunlap Industrial, 23-13, Monday night.

Jody McClendon started the comeback with a bases-loaded home run.

Winning pitcher was Dean Shipley while Carol Vincent was the loser.

Pampa News gave Gordy a run for its money before losing, 20-19, Thursday night.

The score was knotted at 14-14 after five innings. Gordy outscored the News, 3-0, in the seventh to win the game.

Winning pitcher was Dean Shipley, who also went three for four at the plate.

Rita Cook had a perfect four of four night, including a home run. Debbie Eggleston, who was three for five, had a homer and triple. Jody McClendon was three of three with a triple.

Holtman Tank Trucks defeated Dunlap Industrial, but no score was available.

Winning pitcher was Peggy Terrill and losing pitcher was Carol Vincent.

Lindsey Furniture stopped Con Chem Co., 14-0, in five innings.

Holtman Tank Trucks downed Granny's Korner, 13-2.

Peggy Terrill and Brenda Marshall pitched for Holtman.

Pampa youngster wins motorcycle title

Eight-year-old Barry Coffee of Pampa did something last weekend most youngsters his age don't even dream about.

Barry rode his 63 cc Suzuki to a first-place finish in the 1980 A.M.E. Motocross Championships at Oklahoma City Speedway. For his efforts in winning the 6-8 stock division, Barry received a brand-new Honda from D & S Suzuki of Pampa.

"We're real proud of him," said Barry's father, Bennie Coffee. "He just started racing last March, so it was quite an accomplishment for him."

By winning the dirt track race, Barry qualified for the Regional finals August 1-3 at Lake Whitney.

"Barry's had seven or eight races, but this was the first big one he's been in," the elder Coffee said.

Barry's older brother, Junior Coffee, placed in two events at Oklahoma City. He took third in the 63 cc 9-10 junior modified division and eighth in the 9-11 83 cc junior stock division.

"It's kind of an expensive hobby, but it's fun for the boys and it gives them something to do," Coffee added.

Other Pampa and area youngsters were also entered in the motocross championships. Their division and placings are as follows:

9-10 division (63 cc junior modified)-Jamie Finney, Lefors, third.

9-10 division (63 cc intermediate modified)-James Skinner, third.

9-11 division (83 cc junior stock)-James Skinner, fifth.

12-16 division (83 cc intermediate modified)-Marvin Skinner, second; David Youree, fifth.

100 cc junior stock-Marvin Skinner, third.

Fantasy pro makes people happy

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — Thomas Earl Pugh, at 6-5, 285, looks and plays the part of a National Football League player.

He carries cards bearing the names of NFL clubs and has a sticker on the back of his car that reads "National Football League Players Association."

Pugh, 28, graciously signs autographs for adoring fans who notice the sign on his car. He revels in stories of the gridiron and delights in relating to children.

But Pugh plays pro football only in his dreams.

Pugh was arrested near this Houston suburb last week driving a 1980 rented luxury car. Authorities said Pugh would be returned to Florida on a felony warrant accusing him of failing to return a rented car.

Bob Parke, a security representative for the NFL, said Pugh was released on bond in Orlando, Fla. in March. Parke said Pugh drove to St. Louis where he posed as a Dallas Cowboy and went from there to Houston, where he pretended to be trying out with the Oilers.

"Kids automatically bathe in my warmth—you know, when I buy them hats and autograph footballs," Pugh said. "The kids were so happy. I guess I did more for kids than most football players do."

"I wanted to play ball in the NFL so bad and I couldn't. I wanted people to love me. I really think that that is my only way to find happiness and keep it. People only like you when they think you're somebody."

"If they think you're a big football player they treat you right."

Pugh classified himself as a con artist but added "I'm not vicious. I go out and I just rent a car and put a sign on it. People stop and wave. I sign autographs. You wouldn't believe how many."

American League baseball roundup

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN

The Oakland A's have been scratching out runs this season by playing Billy Martin baseball — bunts, steals, hit-and-run plays. Friday night, however, they put on a power-packed show reminiscent of Martin's old New York Yankee teams.

Hot-hitting Tony Armas slammed his 20th and 21st home runs of the season. Mitchell Page hit two more and Jim Essian and Dwayne Murphy also connected as the A's set a club single-game home run record and pounded the Cleveland Indians 9-1. Homers by Murphy, Armas and Page in the fifth inning equaled a team mark.

The power barrage enabled Mike Norris, 12-6, who usually doesn't get many runs to work with and has gripped about it, to breeze to his 13th complete game with a four-hitter.

The Yankees also got a taste of their own medicine when the Kansas City Royals made like Murderers' Row by pounding out 21 hits and crushing New York 13-1 in a battle of American League division leaders.

Elsewhere, the Boston Red Sox nipped the Minnesota Twins 1-0 in 10 innings, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Texas Rangers 8-7, the Milwaukee Brewers trimmed the Chicago White Sox 5-1, the Detroit Tigers downed the Seattle Mariners 5-3 and the California Angels defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 6-3.

Royals 13, Yankees 1
Larry Gura pitched a three-hitter while Willie Wilson led Kansas City's assault with five hits and George Brett and Hal McRae drove in four runs apiece as the Royals defeated the Yankees for the fifth time in seven meetings in what may have been a playoff preview.

Gura, 12-4, who has beaten the Yankees six times in seven regular-season decisions since they traded him to Kansas City four years ago, had a no-hitter until Bob Watson singled with two out in the sixth.

The Royals jumped on Rudy May in the first inning when Wilson singled and Brett socked his ninth homer of the season into the upper right field stands.

Red Sox 1, Twins 0
Rookie Dave Stapleton lined his fifth home run into the screen in left-center with one out in the 10th inning while Mike Torrez blanked Minnesota on seven hits. Stapleton, called up May 30 after five years in the minors, broke up a pitching duel between Torrez and Minnesota's Roger Erickson by leaning into a 2-2 pitch for his second homer in two nights.

Orioles 8, Rangers 7
Ken Singleton's two-run single capped a six-run Baltimore rally in the seventh inning that erased a 3-0 Texas lead. Singleton's hit came off Sparky Lyle, the fifth Texas pitcher of the inning, after a bases-loaded walk to Pat Kelly forged a 3-3 tie. The Orioles then took the lead on Benny Ayala's infield out. Loser Jim Kern suffered his 11th setback in 13 decisions.

The Orioles added two decisive runs in the eighth when Mark Belanger rapped an RBI triple and scored when catcher Jim Sundberg dropped the ball while attempting a tag on the relay. The Rangers battled back with four runs in the top of the ninth.

Brewers 5, White Sox 1
Cecil Cooper rapped a pair of RBI singles and Robin Yount added a solo homer to back the nine-hit pitching of Moose Haas as Milwaukee snapped a three-game losing streak. Haas blanked the White Sox until an eighth-inning home run by Jim Morrison.

By that time, the Brewers had a 5-0 lead on Yount's triple and Cooper's single in the first inning. Jim Gantner's RBI single in the second, Cooper's run-scoring single in the fifth and two runs in the seventh on Yount's homer and consecutive singles by Cooper, Gorman Thomas and Ben Oglivie.

Tigers 5, Mariners 3
Al Cowens singled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning and scored on a double by Tom Brookens. Steve Kemp, who had two RBI singles earlier, started the uprising against Jim Beattie with a single and advanced to second on an infield out. Rick Peters had three hits and scored three runs for the Tigers.

Angels 6, Blue Jays 3
Rod Carew's bases-loaded triple and Stan Criburn's two-run single highlighted California's six-run second inning.

Kerry shuns pressure to compete in Olympics

MOSCOW (AP) — Australia's handsome Mark Kerry should pick up a medal or two, possibly a gold, in the Moscow Olympics unless he suffers ill effects from all the arm-twisting he's undergone.

"I've had a lot of it, both from my own government and the United States," says the 20-year-old backstroke swimming specialist as he prepares for next week's events in the Olympic Pool.

"My conscience is clear. I have spent most of my life preparing for this day and I have no feeling of disloyalty at all over what I am doing.

"When I was pressured not to compete, I told them that if they would quit selling wool and wheat to the Soviet Union I would gladly go along. I see no reason that the athletes should be made to suffer while business goes on as usual.

"That's a double standard." Kerry is a fully Americanized Australian. Born and reared in the town of Woolongong, a seaside resort south of Sydney, he received a college swimming scholarship from Indiana University at age 17, spent two years there at the knee of the great Dr. James Counsilman and then headed west.

"I had been active in stage work in high school and college," he said. "I decided that if I wanted to be an actor, I should go where the action was. After deliberating between New York and Hollywood, I chose Hollywood."

Kerry took up residence in Los Angeles in May, 1979, got a modeling job and started making periodic checks of the movie studios while continuing his intensive training routine.

"I don't have an acting agent yet," he said. "I've been spending a lot of time in training and I had this Olympic trip on my mind. If I got a call, I didn't want to have to say, 'Sorry, you will have to wait until after Moscow.'"

Although he hasn't resumed his undergraduate studies, Kerry has been working out with the Southern California team.

With no big John Naber to contend with, the rangy Australian is co-favorite with the USSR's Viktor Kuznetsov in the 100-meter backstroke and with Hungary's Sandor Wladar in the 200. His best time in the 100 this year is 57.43 seconds, just back of Kuznetsov's :57.36. He has been timed in 2:04.34 in the 200, second only to Wladar among Olympic competitors.

At Montreal in 1976, at age 16, Mark finished fifth in the 200 backstroke and seventh in the 100. "I wasn't ready," he said. "It was just poor little me against 6-foot-6 John Naber."

Kerry is 6 feet, 2 inches tall, slender with blue eyes and a shock of blond hair that fits all Hollywood specifications.

Kerry said prior to coming to Moscow he received telephone calls from the U.S. State Department, as many as twice a day, urging him not to compete in the Olympics.

"They were very insistent," he added. "They even read headlines from Australian papers telling how badly the Russians were treating the Afghans."

Judge voids UIL rule

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Dist. Judge George Cire has declared unconstitutional a University Interscholastic League rule that penalizes schoolboy athletes if they participate in summer basketball camps—but the battle isn't over.

UIL Director Bailey Marshall said Friday the ruling would be appealed and T. Gerald Treece, an attorney for the plaintiffs in the case, agreed the battle could continue.

"This is only the first round of a three round fight," attorney Treece said. "We're delighted with the ruling but the appeals court could undo everything."

A third court date could come in the U.S. Supreme Court, Treece said.

The suit was filed in behalf of Alex and Larry Harris, sons of Houston Rockets Coach Del Harris, claiming the UIL rule prohibited the Harris family from making decisions involving their own family.

"This court must find that the decision to send a child to summer basketball camp is important enough to warrant constitutional protection under the families' fundamental right of personal privacy," Cire said in his ruling.

UIL attorneys argued during the trial that striking down the rule would lead to abuses in schoolboy athletics in the state.

The UIL contended poor athletes who could not afford to attend camps would be discriminated against.

The UIL also said schools could send entire teams to a camp for summer instruction, giving an unfair advantage over other schools.

Kazmierski, Stanger share Classic lead

LUTHERVILLE, Md. (AP) — Joyce Kazmierski, who shares the lead with Julie Stanger after the first round of the $100,000 Greater Baltimore Golf Classic, says "winning is not all that important."

"Otherwise, I would have quit a long time ago. There is motivation to win, but so far I have had to be satisfied with second," said Kazmierski, who shot a 5-under-par 68 at Pine Ridge Golf Club Friday.

She calls herself "0-for-350" in tournament victories, which is not too far off. In 323 events since she turned pro in 1968, she has never won but has placed second seven times.

Stanger, meanwhile, attributed her 68 on the 6,304-yard course to concentration.

"I just tried to think what I was doing," Stanger said. "I can't look at leader boards because I get distracted."

Five players were tied for second with 4-under-par 69s including Ladies Professional Golfers Association veterans Nancy Lopez-Melton and Pat Bradley and Angie Tsai, Vicki Fergon and Louise Bruce.

There also was a five-way tie at 70 with Beth Stone, Cathy Morse, Dale Lundquist, Beth Daniel and Sally Little shooting 3-under par. The 71s included U.S. Women's Open champion Amy Alcott and Kathy Whitworth.

After the first round, 30 players had broken par and 14 were even with it at 73. After today's round, the field of 95 was to be cut to the low 70 and ties.

Kazmierski picked up four birdies on the front nine to go out with a 4-under 33. On the back nine she played par golf until reaching the par-73, 5,496-yard 18th where she dropped a 15-foot putt for birdie.

Stanger started quickly with an eagle 3 on the 435-yard, par-5 first hole when she knocked a 3-wood onto the green and sank a 30-foot uphill putt. She bogeyed the second, but birdied the third and stayed 2-under through 11 holes. Stanger then ran three straight birdies on 12, 13 and 14 and then bogeyed 15.

Coaches meet

HOUSTON (AP) — The annual Texas High School Coaches Association Coaching School, spiced with all-star football and basketball games and a speaker's list that includes Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce and Pittsburgh's Jackie Sherrill, kicks off in Astrodome this week.

Schoolboy stars from the North and South are due on the University of Houston campus Sunday to begin practice for Friday's basketball game in Hofheinz Pavilion and Saturday night's football game in the Astrodome.

Plano High School head coach Tom Kimbrough and his staff of assistant coaches will direct the North football all-stars, who hold a 25-15-4 edge in the annual series.

Oscar Cripps, who led his Houston Stratford team to a 15-0 state Class 4A championship in 1978, and his staff will direct the South football all-stars.

Although the North holds a commanding lead in the all-star football game, the South has a 5-1 edge over the past 10 years, including a 7-6 victory last year at Fort Worth.

Seminole High School's Leland Caffey will direct the North basketball all-stars with the assistance of Louisville's Sam Russell. The South will be tutored by Jesse Walker and Winfred Simmons of Lufkin High School.

A trio of blue chip backs will lead the South football all-stars including Donald Moore of Splendora, Ricki Byars of LaPorte and Mike Luck of Houston Spring Branch.

Moore, 5-10, 178, rolled up eye-popping yardage during his career at Splendora, finishing with 5,945 yards rush and 508 points. Moore, who will attend Texas Tech this fall, was the state's No. 1 regular season rusher in 1979 with 2,472 yards and 224 points.

National League baseball roundup

By the Associated Press

The Montreal Expos used two important arms to keep the Houston Astros from traveling 90 important feet.

Montreal right fielder Ellis Valentine threw out Houston catcher Luis Pujols at the plate in the sixth inning Friday night and later, in the ninth and 10th innings. Astros runners held third base on fly balls to Valentine's territory.

That helped matters for Expos pitcher Woodie Fryman, who survived bases-loaded crises in the eighth, ninth and 10th innings and rode Gary Carter's 11th-inning RBI single to a 5-4 victory over Houston.

The Astros finished with 18 hits and 19 runners left on base.

"I got myself in a lot of trouble, but each time I made the good pitches when I had to get myself out of trouble," said the 40-year-old Fryman, 4-4.

"Any other manager would have had me out in any one of those three (bases-loaded) innings," Fryman said in praise of Montreal's Dick Williams. "It really helped my confidence that Dick left me in."

It didn't help the Astros any to show so little after so much offensive push.

"It's a shame to get 18 hits and score only four runs," said Houston's Terry Puhl. "We just let that one slip away."

In the other National League games Friday night, the San Francisco Giants rallied past the St. Louis Cardinals 8-7, the Pittsburgh Pirates topped the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-4, the Philadelphia Phillies ripped the Atlanta Braves 7-2, the San Diego Padres edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1 and the Cincinnati Reds swept a two-night doubleheader from the New York Mets by 5-3 and 8-3 scores.

Valentine threw out Pujols when the Houston catcher tried to go from second to home on a single by Puhl in the sixth.

Montreal came back twice on home runs by Gary Carter in the second inning and Tony Bernazard in the seventh to tie the score both times. Bernazard's homer tied the score at 3-3 and the Expos took a 4-3 lead in the eighth on Rodney Scott's sacrifice fly.

Houston's Jeff Leonard tied the score in the eighth with a solo home run that forced the extra innings.

Montreal finally won it in the 11th inning when Valentine singled, went from first to third on a wild pitch by losing pitcher Dave Smith, 1-3, and scored on Carter's single.

Giants 8, Cardinals 7

Milt May doubled, singled and belted his third career grand slam — a one-out blast in the ninth — powering San Francisco over St. Louis.

The Giants, trailing 6-2 after seven innings, got two runs in the eighth and won it in the ninth. Bill North and Larry Herndon walked, then Jack Clark reached on an error by third baseman Mike Phillips and one out later reliever Kim Seaman served up the decisive pitch.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 4

Former Dodger Rick Rhoden withstood a three-run Los Angeles second inning and defeated his former teammates for his first victory since September, 1978.

"There was a little extra adrenaline flowing, knowing I was going up against the Dodgers," said Rhoden, who was traded to Pittsburgh for Jerry Reuss.

Rhoden developed bone chips in his right arm last season and pitched only five innings. But Friday night, said Manager Chuck Tanner, "He finally found it."

Phillies 7, Braves 2

Bake McBride and Pete Rose drove in three runs apiece and Nino Espinosa — also coming back from arm troubles — pitched seven innings of two-hit ball in Philadelphia's triumph.

In the sixth, Mike Schmidt hit his seventh lifetime home run off Braves starter Phil Niekro.

Espinosa left in the eighth and Dickie Noles came on to give up the third and final Atlanta hit of the contest.

Padres 2, Cubs 1

Dave Cash hit his first home run of the season and Willie Montanez delivered the game-winning run with a sixth-inning double to help San Diego hand Chicago its ninth loss in 11 games.

Bob Shirley, pressed into a starting role when Juan Eichelberger underwent an appendectomy, combined with Rolie Fingers on a six-hitter.

Reds 5-8, Mets 3-3

George Foster slammed a three-run homer in the nightcap to help Bruce Berenyi record his first major league triumph after a three-run homer by Hector Cruz had powered the Reds in the opener.

Trevino leads British Open by three

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Lee Trevino says a hungry dog hunts best and he's blazing a trail through the British Open Golf Championship on low scores and negligible nourishment.

He's cut out dinner and rarely takes breakfast. Lunch is permissible, but not much else.

Notwithstanding, the bouncy 40-year-old wizard of the links is three strokes ahead of the field midway through the Open and is well placed to recapture the title he last won in 1972, also over the 6,926-yard par-71 Muirfield course.

Trevino carved out a 67 Friday to add to his first round of 68, leaving himself 7-under-par for the championship. He said the only thing he hungered after was "seven more under," which he thought could win.

The nearest challengers at 138 after two rounds were Tom Watson, who had a second-round 70; former United States Open champion Jerry Pate, with a 67, and Scotland's Ken Brown, who had a 68.

Jack Nicklaus and defending champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain were in a cluster of six players at 140.

It's old tournament tactics for Trevino to leave a long time between meals. He claims he once went 1 1/2 days in an event without eating.

But Trevino, who weighs in at a strapping 180 pounds, confessed to another bit of lore which allows him to play a golf course without passing out from starvation.

Irrespective of the spartan diet, other top players in the hunt for golf's oldest and most revered title agreed that Trevino has an outstanding chance.

Nicklaus said Trevino has played "awfully well" for two days. "But he, too, could shoot 72 or 73, I suppose," said the Golden Bear with a wry grin. "He, too, is capable."

Nicklaus carded a 73 on opening day, but it was a different story in the second round when he charged around in 67, recording 32 going out but getting two fives on the 17th and 18th for an indifferent finish.

Watson, who shared the first-round lead with Trevino, also had problems. He bogeyed two of the par-5 holes and said later it was "like throwing away four shots."

Ben Crenshaw, runner-up in the last two British Opens, was 2-under-par midway in this championship. Others at 2-under for the championship were Australian Open champion Jack Newton and Americans Andy Bean and Gil Morgan.

Giese back Tri-State tournament tees off here Tuesday

Bob Giese of Amarillo is anxiously waiting to defend his title in the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament, which begins Tuesday for the 46th year at the Pampa Country Club.

In the meantime, he's not letting his clubs get rusty. "I'm really looking forward to it," said Giese Friday morning as he prepared for the opening round of the Amarillo Men's Partnership Tournament. "It'll be there bright and early Monday morning."

Giese won the senior division of the West Texas Tournament two weeks ago and has finished in the money in two other tournaments this summer.

"I'm getting my game squared away, so if I don't do any good next week, it will be my own fault," he admitted.

Giese, who has been a real estate developer in the Amarillo and Fort Worth areas since 1972, entered the Tri-State Tournament for the first time last year.

Giese started a trifle slow, coming from six strokes back to win the title with a two-under-par 69 on the final day. His four-round total was 285.

"They were calling me 'rookie' all during the tournament," Giese laughed. "Now I'm a sophomore."

Giese and several others signed up early for the tournament, but other entrants may register from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday and from 7:30 to 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Country Club. Practice rounds may also be played Monday while the official qualifying round gets underway Tuesday morning.

Players in the championship flight, determined by Tuesday's qualifying, will play 72 holes of stroke play.

After 36 holes have been completed, the flight will be divided into the president's flight. All other flights of 16 players are scheduled for match play Wednesday and Thursday.

The four semi-finalists play 18 holes stroke play Friday to determine the winner and runnerup of their respective flight.

The tournament champion will receive a sport jacket and trophy.

Past champions of the Tri-State Tournament are listed below:

Soviets lash "counter-Olympics"

MOSCOW (AP) — A popular Soviet newspaper ridiculed U.S. and British Olympic policies Saturday, denouncing the "counter-Olympics" in Philadelphia and mocking the British government.

The newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya, whose publishers include the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee, called the recent Liberty Bell track and field meet in Philadelphia a "pathetic sight" that attracted little public interest.

"So the participants in this farce are having to run and jump to the whistles and applause of their own trainers and teammates," the paper said.

The paper also reiterated a claim — denied by the British Embassy — that the embassy has burned a packet of Olympic tickets purchased earlier for its staff. The embassy has barred employees from attending Olympic events, but a spokesman last week denied there had been any burning ceremony.

"Don't turn the tickets back to the box office, don't sell them, but burn them!" Sovetskaya Rossiya said. "No compromises! Long live 'Atlantic solidarity!'"

Nationals gain revenge

PHILLIPS-Wade Howard hit a grand slam homer and David Carter pitched a three-hitter to lead Pampa National past Pampa American, 12-6, Friday night in the semi-finals of the District 11-12 Tournament.

It was the first tournament loss for the Americans, who had earlier defeated the Nationals, 13-1. The two teams met again Saturday night to determine the championship. The winner will represent the zone in the district tournament at Pampa, beginning Monday.

Carter went the full seven innings in his first appearance on the mound. Only three of the runs he gave up were earned, but he walked 14 batters.

Carter helped himself out with a homerun. The Nationals had 10 hits altogether.

Losing pitcher was Brent Cryer. The Nationals opened the tournament with a 3-2 win over Borger, then lost to Pampa American, before bouncing back to edge Borger again, 9-8, to set up another meeting the Americans.

Besides the games with the Nationals, the Americans also played Phillips-Stinnett and won, 6-5.

Hoch leads Quad Cities Open

COAL VALLEY, ILL. (AP) — After the rain clouds lifted, it was Scott Hoch who took the $200,000 Quad Cities Open Golf Tournament by storm.

The 24-year-old touring rookie, who led by two strokes going into Friday's rain-delayed second round, stretched his lead to four shots with a 66 that gave him a blistering 11-under-par 129.

The performance equaled the low 36-hole total on the PGA tour this year, but all Hoch could talk about afterwards were wayward drives that put him off the fairway half the day.

"Luckily, when I was in the rough, it was either the short cut or the really trampled-down stuff," he said. "I was still hitting out of the rough to within 8-15 feet of the cup, and when you do that, you can KAXX%."

Hoch, whose best finish this year was a tie for 19th in the Western Open, suffered a single bogey while collecting five birdies in a sensational afternoon of golf capped by a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th to give him a commanding lead.

A fierce morning storm ripped the 6,514-yard, par-70 Oakwood Country Club Course and forced a 75-minute delay. By the time Hoch teed off, it was 3 p.m. and conditions were ideal. A stiff breeze that played havoc with drives earlier in the day had abated, the sun was out and the greens soaked earlier by the deluge were dry and running well.

Four strokes back at 7-under-par 133 were veteran Howard Twitty, runner-up in last week's Greater Milwaukee Open, who ran a string of four birdies on the back nine for a 67; tour rookie Tom Jones with 68 and Mike Sullivan at 67.

Bunched at 134 were Tom Valentine, Vance Heafner, Brad Bryant and Dale Douglass.

For Sullivan, the first two rounds have meant a return to winning form. After beginning the tour with a tie for second in the Bob Hope classic and a third-place finish in the Phoenix Open, Sullivan began suffering muscle spasms and has missed the cut six times.

Sixteen Jernberg of Sweden won nine medals in Olympic Nordic skiing — four gold, three silver, and two bronze.

In the 1956 Winter Olympics, the United States placed 1-2-3 in men's figure skating with Hayes Alan Jenkins, Ronald Robertson and David Jenkins.

John Hay Whitney, the owner of the Greentable Stable, is a former ambassador to the Court of St. James.

John McGraw managed in the major leagues for 33 years and his teams won 2,840 games.

Rural phone companies common in Texas areas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — For those of you who think Ma Bell is mean and monopolistic, you should have dealt with Ma Bindock.

The Bindock family owned Frio Canyon Telephone Co., one of Texas' approximately 80 small, locally owned telephone companies, until the Public Utility Commission told the family to sell.

Obscure, small town telephone companies are a strange departure from Texas' pattern of dominance by two major telephone companies. They provide local service to approximately half the state's territory yet have relatively few customers.

One company, Big Bend Telephone Co., makes Southwestern Bell's rates, even with a proposed increase, look downright cheap by charging some isolated customers $117 a month.

In virtually all communities, one telephone company has a monopoly, but customers have a choice in at least one city. In the tiny North Texas community of Lucas, the PUC has certified both Bell and General Telephone.

Customers have a choice. Some take two phones, one from each company. Calling your neighbor in some parts of Lucas is a long distance call.

Bell has about 80 percent of the phones but covers only a third of the area of the state.

General Telephone is the next biggest.

Many large areas are served by family-owned companies or cooperatives with only a few hundred customers.

Charles Land, PUC's assistant director of engineering and enforcement, said many small companies offer excellent service but others cut corners.

Land has seen telephone lines strung on trees, instead of poles.

"It seems these small companies have good relations with their clientele. Even if the service is bad we rarely hear about it. It's not that they're clannish, but there is a reluctance to bring in someone from the outside," he said.

There was no such reluctance in the Southwest Texas city of Leakey, where some of the Frio Canyon Telephone Co.'s 838 customers were unhappy with the service.

Like many small companies, Frio Canyon was family-owned. The Bindocks were the owners, and a PUC hearing examiner's report in 1979 said they caused many of the problems.

The report said some of the problems "seem to go back more than a generation" and spoke of a "climate of deep-seated mistrust" toward the company.

The Bindock family, the report said, "while not the sole cause of the present environment, has been and continues to be a principal, active agent and prime mover of most of the animosity directed toward it."

PUC gave the Bindocks 60 days to find a buyer for Frio Canyon Telephone Company and ordered them to refund $16,595 in overcharges. They sold to Hill County Telephone Cooperative.

The examiner's report talked about telephone monopolies.

"It is indeed by virtue of that protected status... afforded initially by the monopolistic nature of a public utility in the area it serves... that has permitted Frio Canyon Telephone Co. to survive," the report said. "In a competitive environment, it could not."

Telephone companies say monopoly makes sense, but then there's Lucas, where some customers have two telephones in their homes, one from Bell and one from General.

"Our people say we were there first," said Carroll Rowbotham, public affairs manager for General in Lewisville. "It's just kind of a creeping situation. It goes one at a time until you've got a real problem. Neither phone company wants it."

A GTE customer must call long distance to talk with his next-door neighbor who has a Bell phone.

Bell service costs $6.40 a month for residential customers. GTE charges $11.15. However, many customers prefer GTE service because it includes free calls to Dallas.

A check of tariffs on file with PUC shows the size of the phone company has little to do with rates. The prices vary, but generally are within a few dollars of each other.

The glaring difference is the Big Bend Telephone Co., of Alpine. If you live in Calamity Creek or another of the remote areas there, you've really got to want a one-party phone to pay the $117 monthly bill.

Jeff Haynes took over this year as president of the family-owned company. He said a few rich ranchers are willing to pay the $117. Most, however, opt for the cheaper four-party service.

HELICOPTER PATROL and white-hatted U.S. Border Patrol agents Greg Terrones and Bill Parker escort illegal aliens through the brush where they were found hiding at the mouth of the Dillon Canyon, some two miles north of the border.

DRENCHED AND DEFEATED, two illegal aliens, husband and wife, walk along the Colorado River from which they were rescued by the U.S. Coast Guard, after their attempt to enter the U.S. ended in failure.

The 'Silent Invasion'

SAN YSIDRO, CALIF. — To the U.S. Border Patrol, it's a "silent invasion" of guides called "coyotes" and illegal aliens called "tonks."

"You know, it's a lot like going fishing," says agent Steve Rickman. "We catch them, the big ones and the small ones. The only problem is that we have to throw them all back in."

By the count of Border Patrol Chief Dan Cameron, 600 such "fish" try to elude his 180 agents along 15 miles of the U.S. border with Mexico on cool days. On hot ones, it's 1,000.

They come on foot, over the hills and across the Colorado River, and Cameron says that nine out of ten illegal aliens succeed by their third attempt.

"We just don't have enough manpower," he adds.

Says one of his agents, "You know this is all one big joke. When we do catch a Mexican, we turn him loose across the border the following day and he returns that same evening. So we start the game all over again."

Many of the so-called coyotes are as young as 6, and most are under the age of 18. They get an average of $25 a head for each "pollo" they lead. "Pollo" means chicken.

And once the aliens — not only from Mexico — but from El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and other Latin countries as well — make it into the United States, the "Boys from T.J." take over.

Who are they? "Godfathers" from Tijuana, Mexico, who organize the aliens into groups at a drop house, put them into trucks or sedans, hide them in the back of pickups or secrete them in recreational vehicles driven by middle-aged whites complete with tourist cameras slung around their necks.

These "Boys from T.J." smuggle more than flesh. They deal in false identification cards, parrots and hard drugs, too.

But there's real money for them in the aliens they shepherd. They charge an average of $350 a head and, often as not, $50 a week for as long as the aliens remain in the United States.

For some, it amounts to lifelong blackmail.

AN ILLEGAL ALIEN walks across the border to Mexico, after being held overnight at the U.S. Border Patrol station in San Ysidro, Calif.

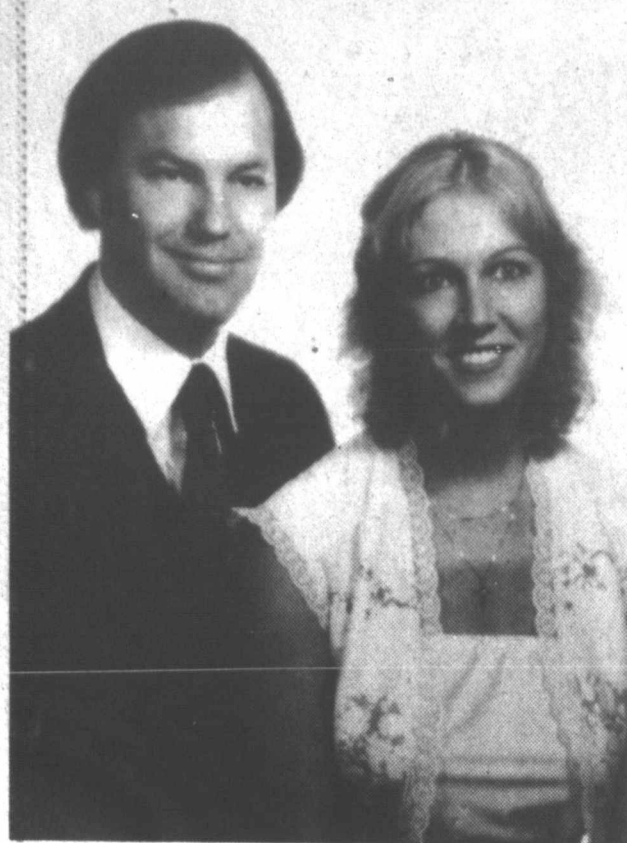

ALIENS TAKE COVER in a section of washed out culvert beside the Tijuana River, as they await the darkness which will protect them as they make their way into the U.S.

THE ROAD TO THE BORDER. Walking along the road from Mexico into the U.S., illegal aliens make their way toward the border and what they hope will be a successful crossing.

SENIOR PATROL AGENT Randy Williamson uncovers and apprehends an illegal alien hiding out in the brush in the Otay River bottom, approximately four miles north of the border.

Design exhibit Desk & Derrick Club to meet

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"Traditional Japanese Designs: The Tom and Frances Blake-more Collection of Textiles, Stencils, and Costumes" is on view at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art through July 8.

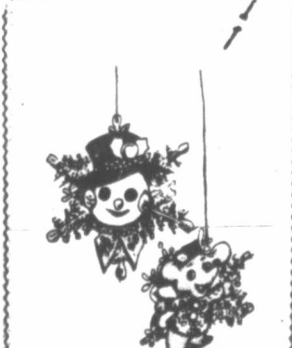

The folk art of Japanese textile design is explored in the exhibit. Some 200 handmade Japanese textile stencils, accompanied by 26 costumes, and nearly 50 hand-dyed textiles — dating from the 19th and early 20th centuries — are included in the exhibition.

The Pampa Desk & Derrick Club will meet Tuesday at the Pampa Club. Dennis Doerr, an employee of Phillips Petroleum in Borger and a member of the American Industrial Chemical Engineers, will be guest speaker.

Mr. Doerr's program, "Protecting the Environment?" will indicate what happens when government regulatory agencies intervene.

All members and guests are invited to attend. To make reservations, call LaDonna Bohannon at 669-3422.

PATIO DINNER

Tropical Freeze
TROPICAL FREEZE

Calorie-watchers will appreciate the marvelous flavor of this dessert.

1 egg yolk (from a large egg)
1/4 cup milk
1/4 cup sugar
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 papaya (5 to 6 inches long, weighing about 1 pound)
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Fruit Compote: bananas and fresh strawberries with cut-up pineapple (fresh or canned in its own juice)

In a 1-quart bowl beat together the egg yolk and milk to blend; add the sugar and salt; beat to blend. Halve the papaya and discard seeds; pare and puree; add to milk mixture and beat gently to combine. Turn into an 8 by 8 by 2-inch pan; freeze until firm. Break up and beat until smooth and fluffy but not melted — makes 2 cups. Turn into an appropriate container; cover tightly and freeze. At serving time, let soften in refrigerator or at room temperature, and scoop or spoon into sherbet cups or dessert dishes. (Papaya flavor comes through best when this dessert is not icy-hard.) Top with the Fruit Compote. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY DUCKWORTH

Danley, Duckworth wed in Lefors ceremony

Kathy Gail Danley and Henry Simpson Duckworth were wed in a recent evening ceremony at the First Baptist Church in Lefors. The Rev. A.G. Roberts, pastor, officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Danley and Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Duckworth, all of Lefors.

The bride wore a formal gown of sheerganza and re-embroidered chintilly lace over bridal taffeta. The gown featured a Queen Anne neckline, empire waist, long bishop sleeves and semi A-line silhouette. Inserts of lace appliques enhanced the neckline, bodice, sleeves and skirt. The gown ended in a chapel length train. A coil secured the veil of imported illusion.

Attending the bride were Donna Wallis, Sarah Stroud and Sandra Stroud, all of Lefors. Meleidy Story registered guests.

The bridegroom was attended by Reuben Day of Pampa, Tom Ray of Lefors and Tracy McDonald of Irving. Ringbearer was Kevin Mayfield of Lefors.

Ushers were Rodney Day and Kirk Story, both of Lefors. Music was provided by Mrs. Carol Watson of Lefors, organist, and Mrs. Lela Harris of Pampa, vocalist.

Assisting at a reception in the church fellowship hall were Laura Lowrance and Evelyn Wallis, both of Lefors.

After a honeymoon trip to Dallas, the couple will reside in Lefors.

The bride is a 1980 graduate of Lefors High School. Duckworth, a 1974 graduate of Lefors High School, attended Clarendon College. He is city superintendent of Lefors.

Chinese products exhibited

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The first National Exhibition of the People's Republic of China, and the largest exhibition that country has ever held abroad, will open here next fall and go on to Chicago and New York.

The showcase of China's antiques, arts and crafts, textiles and light and heavy industrial products will open in San Francisco at Fort Mason on Sept. 13; in Chicago at the Navy Pier, Oct. 25; and in New York City at the Coliseum, Dec. 6, running 16 days in each city.

"The Chinese are anxious to share their products and culture, and hope to reach a broad cross-section of America," said Gilbert A. Robinson, chairman of the U.S.-China Business Development Corp., which is managing the exhibition.

In San Francisco it will be sponsored by the chamber of commerce.

In addition to the 20,000 items on display, three top chefs from Peking will be on hand to demonstrate Chinese cooking; acrobats will entertain; contemporary Chinese paintings will be on view; artisans will carve bamboo, blow glass, do engraving and cut paper into intricate forms.

A branch of the Peking post office will be open and a special commemorative stamp will be on sale.

The exhibition is an outgrowth of the Sino-U.S. Trade Exhibitions Agreement, signed May 10, 1979, by Juanita Kreps, U.S. Secretary of Commerce, and Li Qiang, Minister of Foreign Trade of the People's Republic of China. The United States will reciprocate with an exhibition in Peking about the time China's opens here.

Gravity a problem for Delaware jugglers

DOVER, Del. (AP) — The law of gravity poses a real problem for 10 Delaware State College students. They're enrolled in a clown course — one section of which involves learning to juggle.

And the old physics rule of "what goes up, must come down" was quickly illustrated.

"I think I was born with two left hands," said Robert Schicker, who is in charge of the class and has never mastered the feat of throwing one ball and catching it with the other hand.

So Schicker, whose clown name is "Professor Auguste," invited the Sikorsky Brothers of Baltimore to teach his students to juggle.

The brothers stage a juggling and circus act that travels the country performing for school children, conventions, fairs and fund-raisers.

They warmed up for the class by tossing three plastic pins under their legs and behind their backs. "You can juggle in your sleep if you practice," said Thomas A. Sikorsky.

But when it came time for the students to try, less damaging rubber balls were distributed — and soon were bouncing about the room.

The first lesson, called the "Juggler's Test," involved throwing a ball underhand and catching it with the other hand. "This is the hard part. You may be stuck here for about 3½ minutes," Sikorsky told the class.

"I think it's easier to sit down and watch somebody else," said Patricia Johnson of Lincoln as she chased a ball across the room.

"Make your catch part of your throw," Sikorsky told the class. Amateur magician Richard J. Slihsse had already caught on, and had three balls going at the same time.

'Shoplifters' find little intervention

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — Four young women recently went on a shoplifting spree in Walla Walla. They stole merchandise from a neighborhood market in plain sight of other shoppers and were amazed to find that few people tried to stop them. One of the "shoplifters," Virginia Bacon of Tacoma, Wash., said, "It got kind of infuriating after a while. I got really mad to think that people weren't turning us in."

project for the experimental psychology class was the students' curiosity about the 1969 New York City murder of Kitty Genovese, who screamed for help for more than half an hour in the vicinity of hundreds of apartments and was finally murdered because no one called the police or helped her in any way. Sarah Christensen of Federal Way, Wash., said, "Apparently people are apathetic to all sorts of crimes, not just the violent ones."

When the students started the experiment they had wanted to determine whether the way the shoplifters were dressed would make a difference in whether they were reported. "We thought a shabbily dressed person would probably not be turned in as often as one who was well-dressed," said Michelle Segal of Scottsdale, Ariz. "As it turned out only two people were turned in when they appeared to be affluent, but six people were turned in who appeared to be poor. However, our results on all of it were so small that we really couldn't draw any conclusions about the influence of mode of dress."

study research," he said. "I do think that one would have to have twice as many subjects as these students had in order to come up with a significant trend." Michelson says, "I'm sorry to see the results of the study and a little concerned about the whys. I guess my customers had their reasons for not reporting those thefts, and I don't want to hurt their feelings or intrude in their lives. I guess I'd just like to know why."

It was all part of a Whitman College psychology-research project. And it was done with the permission of the store owner, Jack Michelson, a former Los Angeles law-enforcement officer. Michelson, who says he is a perennial student himself, helped the four Whitman College sophomore psychology majors conduct the study to see if people would intervene when they saw a crime in progress. "I was pretty sure I knew what the results would be," Michelson says. "We have really worked to make this a friendly neighborhood market where we care about our customers and they care about us, and I thought all of my customers or nearly all of them would tell me about anyone who was ripping me off."

William J. Metzger, associate professor of psychology who teaches the experimental psychology class at Whitman College, says the results of the study support other psychologists' research on bystander apathy. "I think these students did a really good job of their field

Now Michelson is perplexed by the fact that only eight out of 40 shoppers reported the theft to him or tried to intervene in any way. "And two of those really don't count," he says, "since one was an employee and the other a former employee of the store." Susan McMurchie, of Portland, Ore., says, "We know that they saw us because we made sure that they did. We had two observers who were watching in every case and they were certain that those shoppers saw and heard us every time." Working in pairs, the students shoplifted food items in clear view of women shoppers between the ages of 20 and 50. Waiting until they were alone in an aisle with only one shopper, one of the students would take a food item from the display, glance over her shoulder, and then drop the package in her purse. Her companion would say in a loud voice, "I don't think we should do this." The shoplifter would reply, "Oh, it's OK. Nothing will happen," and walk quickly from the store. One thing that prompted the Mexican jumping beans actually are seeds that "jump" because they have wriggling caterpillars inside them. The caterpillars get inside after a small moth lays eggs on the leaves of the plant that bears the seeds. Each egg hatches into a caterpillar that chews its way inside one of the seeds. Eventually, the caterpillar turns into a moth and crawls out.

Homemade peach ice cream

By CECILY BROWNSTONE, Associated Press Food Editor
When I was a little girl, hand-churned ice cream was made at our house on the back porch or lawn on Sundays all summer long. Ice cream speckled with crushed vanilla bean or rich with strawberries or raspberries. A banana, pineapple, orange and lemon sherbet called Four-Fruit. Fresh peach ice cream — a great favorite.

And what a lot of preparation went on. I can still see the ice-cream freezer can and dasher being scalded, the ice chipped in a big burlap bag, and the container of rock salt lugged outdoors. I remember how my father and uncle took turns cranking the ice-cream freezer. This was work considered too hard for females.

Nowadays making ice cream at home is so easy it might, in bygone days, have seemed sinful. Sometimes I use a 1-quart electric ice-cream maker that needs neither ice nor salt and does its work in the freezer. Or a 2-quart electric freezer that stands by itself on a counter and needs only ice cubes and common salt. When a friend sent me the following peach ice-cream recipe, she included a note holding only one word: "Delish!"

PEACH ICE CREAM
6 medium-size fully ripe peaches (about 2 pounds)
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
1-8th teaspoon salt
1 cup heavy cream
1 cup light cream
Peel and pit the peaches. In an electric blender or food processor finely chop peaches — there should be 2 cups. Stir in 1/4 cup of the sugar and the lemon juice. Cover; refrigerate about 30 minutes to allow flavor to develop. In a medium bowl stir together the remaining 1/2 cup sugar, the corn syrup, vanilla and 1-8th teaspoon salt; add the heavy cream and light cream; stir until sugar dissolves. Thoroughly stir in peach mixture.

For freezing, follow manufacturer's directions for your particular ice-cream freezer. (We tested this recipe in a 2-quart electric freezer that uses table salt and ice cubes.)
Makes about 1 1/2 quarts.

The Art of Home Decor
by Sara Martinez

Small touches make the big difference in decorating. A room grows dull if it has no subtleties to be discovered as you live in it. Accessories—that just right lamp, the little table and, of course, the pictures on the walls—bring life into the big furnishings in the room. So do "intimate" objects that reveal the personalities of the people who live among them. The little things that turn a room into a success are not always tangible objects. The way the plants are arranged, the pictures hung, the braid trim used, etc. In the weeks to follow, we hope to make you aware of all the little subtleties that will enhance your home.

Welcome to our columns. We hope to help you, not only by revealing some of the latest decorating "secrets" in our column, but also by having you visit with us at SARA'S DRAPERIES, 1512 Alcock, 665-8284. "We Do Windows". Hours: 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Mon. thru Fri., 9 a.m.-Noon Sat.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I attended three funerals in the last month and have some tips for good friends who really mean it when they ask the family of the deceased, "Is there anything I can do?"

There are countless details to deal with, such as funeral arrangements, people to be notified, transportation and housing for incoming relatives and friends.

When bringing in food, please bring it in foil or disposable containers, otherwise containers must be washed, labeled, stored and returned. This takes time.

It would be helpful, too, if some casseroles could be brought in unboxed to be frozen and used a week or two later, when needed.

Friends shouldn't visit at mealtime, especially those with children who need to be fed.

Offer to sit with the house during the funeral. Due to publicity, families across the nation have returned from funerals to find that their homes have been burglarized. Most people are reluctant to ask a friend to miss the funeral, but believe me, this is one gesture of friendship that is greatly appreciated, so please offer.

I realize that these suggestions are only common sense, but you might find them worth printing.

IOWAN

DEAR IOWAN: Indeed they are. Common sense is very uncommon.

DEAR ABBY: Why would a man insist on knowing where his wife is every minute of the day? Do you think he suspects that she might be fooling around?

B. IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR B.: Not necessarily. Maybe he just wants to be sure where she is while he's fooling around.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people expect musicians to entertain at weddings, benefits and other functions for free? They'll say, "You're lucky God gave you a talent. You should share it with the world!"

A good musical performance is 10 percent talent and 90 percent work.

Parents spend thousands of dollars on music lessons. They are not free!

Costumes, music, gasoline and baby sitters all cost money. Organizations will spend money for a meeting room, decorations, food and speakers. But they expect musicians to donate their time and talent.

Abby, please spread the word that the ability to sing or play an instrument may be a God-given talent, but it takes hard work and practice to make it entertainment.

PAYWORTHY

DEAR PAYWORTHY: Consider it spread.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree on something. I feel that an 11-year-old child should be sent to another room, outside, or somewhere out of hearing range when his parents are having a serious disagreement about money matters, marital problems, etc.

My husband feels that it is perfectly all right for the child to hang around and listen, so he can "learn."

What do you say?

DIFFERING VIEWS

DEAR DIFFERING: An 11-year-old should not be an ear-witness to his parents' marital disagreements, money fights or adult discussions. But if he is pointedly sent away, he may suspect that something is seriously wrong between his parents, causing him to feel threatened, frightened and anxious.

So I recommend privacy for such occasions — and subtlety in acquiring it.

Tri-state golf luncheon set

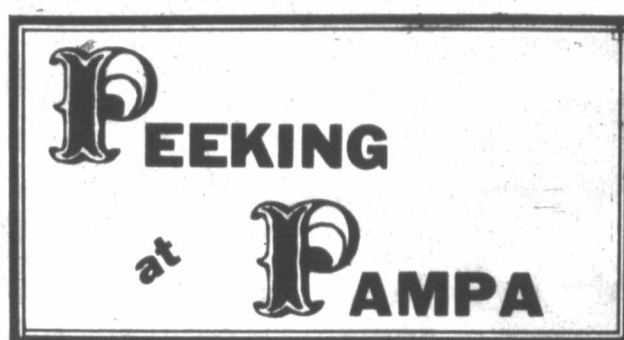

The Tri-state annual senior golf tournament is scheduled for Monday through Friday at the Pampa Country Club. Entertainment for the ladies will include a luncheon Wednesday at the club. The luncheon and other entertainment is under the direction of Mrs. Fred Nesledge. Mrs. N. Dudley Steele will present "Selections from Erma Bombeck."

BETH GIBSON AND MIKE SHANNON

Beth Gibson, Shannon to exchange vows

Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson, 2117 N. Christy, announce the engagement of their daughter, Beth, to Mike Shannon. Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Earl Shannon of Abilene. The couple will exchange wedding vows Aug. 9 in the First Assembly of God Church in Pampa. The bride-elect is a teacher at Pampa High School. Shannon is employed by Cabot Corporation.

Lots of reunions and parties on Independence Day. One group of old friends always gets together for a brunch on July 4, which seems a happy way to celebrate. Group includes Charles and Jean Cook, Dr. M. and Connie McDaniel plus others. Good to have traditional get-togethers.

Charlie is one of Pampa's most dedicated golfers, you know. Plays every day except Monday.

Glad to hear that Norma and Norman Fulps were dancing and partying a few nights ago. Wonderful to know that Norman is looking so well after his extended illness.

With the Fulps were Leo and Betty Casey, so charmingly sociable, and the exquisitely-dressed LeMonds, Guy and Freda. Also in the party was the LeMond's grandson, Mike, who fit right in with older people, dancing, visiting, showing enjoyment of the place and the company. In their case, I'd say there isn't any generation gap.

Hear there was a marvelous dance at the Pampa Club a week ago Saturday night. Entertainment was by the acclaimed trio, "Jay Perdue and Company," meaning Jay on drums, wife, Vicki on piano and friend, Gary, on organ, with all three singing solos, duets and trios. Graduates of West Texas and formerly playing in Pampa often, the three have just returned from a successful tour of the U.S. Tired of living out of suitcases, the group plans to settle down near here. Jay and Vicki are building an unbelievable underground home near Lake Meredith.

Jay used to sign a recording contract for a national company soon, assisted in the effort by Pat Carter, who grew up in Pampa and now lives in Nashville, Tenn. (Remember when Pat used to play here frequently, heading his own band?) Jay owns his own recording studio in Borger. Surely his and Vicki's baby-to-be will be a musician!

Understand that Betty Arrington of Miami was the first of three generations at a party in Pampa recently. Had her daughter and husband as well as granddaughter and boyfriend. Delightful group of five — and all outgoing, people-loving folk. Incidentally, the granddaughter is a marvelous disco dancer, one of the best around. Takes special energy to keep up with that kind of rhythm. I should think.

But, as Jay Perdue said, "One of our doctors can disco with any dancer alive. He's Dr. Charles Ashby, in his pink-flowered trousers, swinging wife, Melody, most enviably."

Cook couple to be honored

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cook, 727 S. Barnes, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary at an open house July 27 in the Starlite Room of the Coronado Inn.

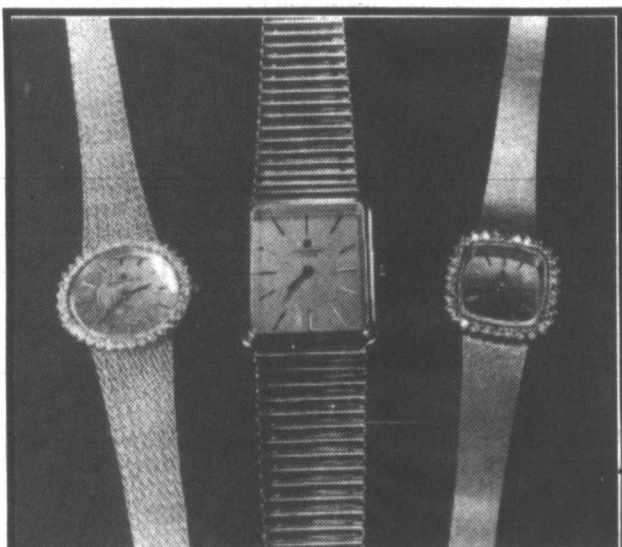

The event will be from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The former Laura Campbell and Joe Cook were married in Hollis, Okla. July 26, 1930. They have resided in Pampa since their marriage.

Mr. Cook is a retired mechanic. Mr. and Mrs. Cook are members of the Church of Christ.

The couple has one son, Joe Carroll Cook of Houston, and two grandchildren.

Friends and relatives are invited to attend the open house.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

My sharing of married happiness, and my advice to older couples who want to be as happy as my husband and I are, usually take the form of simple and achievable self-help.

If I am discussing an illness problem, I always urge readers to counsel with their doctors before diagnosing themselves — and before downing patent medicines by the pill or bottle or capsule on their own.

I have mentioned seeking legal advice on occasion but perhaps not as much as I could have and should have.

A letter came today that brought this home to me. I recommend it to you as my present advice as well as that of my correspondent.

DEAR LOUISE: Last month in one of your articles you wrote in answer to a woman whose husband had taken all the money out of their savings account. He lost it in the stock market or some other types of investments.

Since I disagree with your reply, I hope you will accept the following criticism:

1. I can agree with the woman in not seeking a divorce, but I cannot agree that the husband should have a second chance to be financially in charge. Ineptitude is one thing; but a thief is a thief, regardless of whom the individual may be.

2. Advise the woman to hire a lawyer, a very good one. She stated that the money was obtained by forging her signature. That is illegal. It is the responsibility of all financial institutions to check the accuracy of signatures before releasing funds to another individual.

3. When the money is replaced, if it is, please tell her to place it where her husband cannot have access to it. No one should be advised to risk being financially wiped out twice, particularly in advanced years of age.

I cannot emphasize too strongly the necessity of you informing the woman to hire an attorney and the reason why. It also is important for her to consult with the attorney WITHOUT HER HUSBAND PRESENT...YOUR ASS'T ADVISOR IN NEW MEXICO.

DEAR Y.A.A.I.N.M.: Thank you for your excellent advice. I will see that the wronged wife gets your suggestions. And I hope other readers will take note also.

The only thing I wish to add to this worthwhile letter is that sometimes there are extenuating circumstances in such instances.

The lady who wrote the original letter lives in a small town where people are inclined to trust each other — and that is usually a commendable practice. I don't know how the husband managed to persuade the savings account executive that both mates signed the check for the release of the money. But I would guess that he may have brought in a check that he said contained her signature as well as his. He would be familiar enough with her writing to fake it, perhaps. And many older couples live so closely to each other that business men who know them well, take their word when they say they agree on anything.

Of course the lady we are discussing had a scoundrel for a husband. She had known for years that he had sticky fingers. So she would have done well to be on the lookout for such trickery.

I agree with you that this kind of wife must be on her guard if she stays with a husband who has betrayed her financially, which many wives of marital thieves do. But I do not agree that she must demand that he have no access whatever to their savings thereafter. That would destroy the pride and perhaps the personality of even a compulsive thief.

If a wife stays with her husband after being mistreated this way, she needs to show a semblance of trust, even though, in this lady's case, the trust can be tempered with reality.

I think the wife should follow the course that many happily married couples do, whether they have financial troubles or not. Both go together to sign papers that require both signatures. Both they and the financial institution should agree that the signing must be at the place of purchase, before funds are released. That way, the husband would not be ignored and thus driven from home, which the lady in question did not want to happen. And the savings account would be protected.

DEAR LOUISE: My wife and I both, write checks on our joint account, but she never writes hers down. Every time the cancelled checks come in, we don't have near as much money as I thought we had. I ask at the bank and find out there's not even as much as the cancellation shows because she's written some more. I ask her and she doesn't remember who else she bought something from. Can you suggest any solution to this problem? V.F.

DEAR V.F.: If your wife is mentally ill, you should insist on handling the check book yourself. If she is alert, ask her every night if she spent anything that day. If you are retired and not tied to a new job, you might go with her on her shopping trips.

Summer exercise isn't easy. Even golfers often ride carts in this over-century-mark temperature. But Otis Nace tells friends he likes the exercise problem. Says he jogs for 15 minutes around the apartment after breakfast every morning, before he goes to his office. Says it starts the day off right. Wife, Evelyn, adds that sometimes it almost throws her off her feet — because he swings his arms as he passes her in the kitchen.

Alma Shane of Wichita, Kan. visited friends here last week. Said Pampa was the friendliest, most enjoyable, most-fun place she had ever known. Husband, Jack, is the trust officer in the Fourth National Bank in Wichita and they attend countless important functions there. But friends said that Alma told them she would love to live in Pampa, where hospitality and good times abound. Said a big city could use some of our person-to-person hospitality. Nice compliment to our way of life here.

Ever notice how peppy Mary and Odell Giddeon, of Pampa and Skellytown, always are? Both are enthusiastic for whatever the current activity is. That's personality. Also accounts for their many friends.

Roy and Ann Kay eat Sunday morning breakfast at the Coronado Inn, as do many other couples. Usually the Kays have a granddaughter with them. She smiles and they beam on her.

Other proud grandparents are Barbara and Jerry Bruce. Heard they love to have son, Vance, and wife, Linda, bring little Ryan and baby, Christian, to the shop. Patrons enjoy the little boys — and the grandparents are so proud! Dan and Kathleen Hopkins always look so happy with each other. He takes her out to eat often. Should be a lesson to other husbands who aren't that considerate. Hear their home is beautiful. Was one of the houses selected for the Garden Club's tour, a year or so ago.

Heard that Bill Monroe plays golf as often as he can slip out of the store without wife, Grace, catching him at it. Seems salesmen sometimes call him "Mr. Sands," because of his firm's name. And there are those who call him "Mr. Muscles," referring to the Lions' annual show a few years back.

Bill says it has to rain sometime. And don't we all hope so?

We predict that Sarah Ane, 2-year-old-daughter of the Hunter Nadders, will be a future beauty queen. She and her father were out shopping recently.

Another lovely mother-daughter combination is Louise Bailey and daughter Vicki. Vicki is home from Tech this summer.

Best. PAM.

Mexican drought creates grain market

4-H CORNER By Carl Gibson and Deana Finck

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A severe Mexican drought and huge revenues from oil production are creating a growing market in Mexico for U.S. grain and the wherewithal to pay for it.

And the increased demand, which has forced federal grain inspectors to work overtime and has choked rail and truck supply lines into Mexico, has opened a new market many South Texas farmers and grain elevator operators.

Mexico bought only 2 million tons of sorghum, corn, wheat and soybeans last year but exports this year already have reached 7 million tons.

"However, the burgeoning exports are taxing federal grain inspectors and railroads.

"It means we're busy as the dickens. We've got people scattered all over South Texas," said Larry Nafzinger, district field supervisor for the Federal Grain Inspection Service in Corpus Christi.

Federal officials must inspect grain and guarantee its quality if the exporting contract specifies a certain grade.

Between 60 to 70 grain elevators scattered throughout rural South Texas are sending grain directly to Mexico by rail or truck, instead of hauling it to ports at Brownsville or Corpus Christi for shipment.

A year ago, only 20 to 30 "country" elevators required visits from federal inspectors for exported grain, said Jerry Parker, Nafzinger's assistant.

"In the last year or two, we've seen a lot of country shippers in the lower Rio Grande Valley and near Corpus Christi getting involved in direct shipments," said Nafzinger.

Small grain elevators can take advantage of regulations allowing them to skip official weighing procedures if they export less than 15,000 metric tons annually from an elevator. A metric ton is approximately 40 bushels.

Small exporters simply need to notify the federal office that they intend to ship grain across the border.

Mexico's drought the past two years has created desperate need for sorghum as a livestock feed and corn for human consumption, said Roland Smith, a grain marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in College Station.

"Mexico City alone used 9 million tons of corn last year just to make tortillas," Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said recently.

Neither government nor industry representatives said they knew how much Texas grain is involved in the total purchase. Large exporters in Kansas City and New York take orders from Mexico and assemble shipments from several different states. Not even the Texas Agriculture Department keeps records on how much Texas grain is bound for Mexico.

The sudden explosion in grain shipments by rail has overwhelmed Mexico's railroads, said George Nichols, manager of the public grain elevator at the Port of Brownsville.

"Mexico has had problems with rail movement from the Day One. The lack of locomotives and their more than doubled sales has made it worse," he said.

U.S. railroads complain they can't get their cars back from Mexico fast enough and have imposed a permit system to allow only a certain number of freight cars across until the backlog clears.

Robert Krueger, ambassador-at-large to Mexico, met with Mexican government officials and railroad representatives in Brownsville last week to discuss the problem. He estimated there are 26,000 hopper cars in Mexico awaiting either unloading or return to the United States.

A similar situation sometimes develops in shipping, Nichols said. His elevator has been full with 72,500 tons for more than a week waiting on an overdue ship from Mexico.

Sources in the grain industry complain that Mexican ports have obsolete or inadequate unloading equipment to handle the large exports.

Nichols expects to send 300,000 tons of sorghum to Mexico this year, most of it grown in the Valley.

Most of the corn going to Mexico comes from midwestern states, where "unit trains" of 62 cars are loaded at huge elevators for bulk shipments.

Denny Curtis, a grain broker in Mathis, said more and more Texas farmers are banding together and offering their product as a package to Mexico. They save costs of dealing with middlemen, he said.

Bill Walker of Central Grain Co. in Donna said his business with Mexico has increased 1,000 percent in the last year. He has sold 30,000 tons since January, but some came from other states.

A rural grain elevator operator, Ralph Vela of Edinburg Co-op, said about 20,000 tons of sorghum will go to Mexico. He said that figure represents 60 percent of his sales.

Cotton may be next crop to fall to heat wave

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The four-week long seige of record high temperatures is taking heavier tolls each day of Texas crops and livestock, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

If the hot, dry weather continues through July, severe cotton crop reductions will be added to those already recorded for grain sorghum, corn, hay crops, pecans, fruit crops, home gardens, pastures and ranges, Pfannstiel said in his weekly agricultural report.

Should the dry weather continue into mid-August, the state's estimated 7.5 million acres of cotton may produce as low as 4 to 4.5 million bales this season. This would compare with the 1979 total cotton yield of 5.7 million bales grown on 6.9 million acres, Pfannstiel said.

Across the state, brown ranges and pastures are causing many livestock producers to cull their foundation herds heavily to reduce excessive feeding costs. Ranchers in the Southwest and South Texas and several other areas are already feeding hay and supplemental rations and some are attempting to grow out calves before shipping. Calves and lambs in Far West Texas and other regions are being weaned early or sold at lighter weights than normal to reduce pressure on pastures. Stock water supplies are getting low in portions of the Rolling Plains and Southwest Texas, where range conditions have become almost winter-like, and in areas of West Central and South Texas.

Home gardens in most areas of the state are a total disaster, fruit crops are showing drought stress and pecans are shedding as a result of the prolonged extreme weather. Peanut crops are being irrigated where possible, and some drought-delayed soybeans are being baled for livestock feed in the Coastal Bend area in anticipation of a hay shortage.

Reports from district Extension directors showed the following conditions:

PANHANDLE: Hot, dry winds have sapped soil moisture, and most irrigators are behind schedule in watering corn and sorghum. Dried sorghum is under stress and cotton is beginning to need moisture. Wheat yields are down considerably from last year. Some supplemental livestock feeding has begun.

SOUTH PLAINS: Pastures, ranges and dryland crops need rain, and corn watering is behind schedule, placing some fields under stress. Rain is critical in the next 10 days to prevent extensive dryland cotton losses. Growers are spraying to reduce spider mite damage to irrigated corn.

ROLLING PLAINS: Dry, hot conditions are taking a heavy toll as grain sorghum continues to deteriorate and range conditions become almost winter-like. Most gardens are a total loss and peaches are ripening prematurely. Pecans, fruit crops are showing drought stress. Heavy herd culling and early weaning of calves is under way.

NORTH CENTRAL: Pastures are declining; grasshoppers are troublesome. Boll weevils and bollworms are damaging drought-stressed cotton, and corn is producing small, poor ears. Hay yields and quality are down, and peach yields light. Livestock are being sold and calves weaned early.

IN AGRICULTURE

by Joe Vanzandt

DROUGHT CONDITIONS:

The current weather conditions would lead us to believe we are in the middle of the drought of the '80's. Farmers and especially ranchers may need to be looking ahead as to what they can do or are going to do if the current heat wave continues for several more weeks.

Supplemental feeding, especially protein supplement, will be needed for cattle on these very dried out pastures fairly soon. The protein level in our grass has dropped a lot in the last month.

Thankfully, we had a good spring growth of grassland and hopefully, ranchers were understocked so grass could grow and recover a little from the dry weather of last summer and fall. Needless to say, I certainly think ranchers had better get understocked quickly or face the prospects of large feed bills.

Back to the subject of supplemental feeding, a result demonstration conducted two years ago under dry pasture conditions demonstrated that feeding protein supplement pays. This involved a set of steers weighing about 500-pounds in July. They were fed three pounds of 41 percent cottonseed cake daily and this was estimated to increase their rate of gain from 1.2 pounds per head per day to 2.6 pounds per head daily, or a gain increase of about 1.4 pounds daily. Based on a cost of $185 per ton cake cost at the time, the feed cost was 28 cents per day for the extra 1.4 pounds gain or 20 cents per pound of gain. This was a good demonstration of the value of feeding supplement protein to cattle on dry pastures.

FALL VEGETABLE GARDENING:

A fall garden can be even more productive and more fun than a spring garden. Experienced gardeners know that our late summer and fall weather favors more productive growth than the harsher spring climate.

The quality and yield of many vegetables from a fall garden are often better than from a spring-summer garden. The cooler weather or fall will result in a longer harvest period for many vegetables. Lettuce and leafy greens are sweeter and more tender. Buttercrunch lettuce, collards, Green Comet broccoli, Jade Cross Brussels sprouts and Rhubarb chard will continue to grow to be a part of your Thanksgiving feast.

Careful planning of the fall garden is very important. The first fall frost usually occurs in mid-October. Planting must be timed to allow the frost sensitive vegetables to mature and be harvested before frost. Those which will tolerate frost are planted to permit harvest to continue after the first fall frost.

Vegetables adapted to fall gardens can be divided into four groups by their tolerance of freezing temperatures. Some warm season vegetables adapted to fall gardens — but killed by frost — are snap bean, maturing pepper and tomato varieties, southern pea, summer squash, winter squash, cucumber, sweet corn. The second group includes cool season crops — usually damaged by light frost when mature — such as lettuce, cauliflower, kohlrabi, English pea, celery, cabbage, and broccoli. The third group contains those which are moderately tolerant of repeated light frosts: carrot, parsnip, beet, brussel sprouts, leaf lettuce, endive, radish, rutabaga, turnip, and watercress.

Members of the fourth group, which tolerate night after night of freezing and have even survived a mild plains winter include: bulb onion, green onion, chives, garlic, leek, multiplier onion, shallot, spinach, parsley, collard, kale and the buttercrunch and romaine varieties of lettuce.

Seed of snap bean, baby lima bean, broccoli, cabbage, carrot, collard, chard, sweet corn, cucumber, and summer squash, sown in early to mid-July will produce crops ready for harvest before the first fall frost. Beet, kohlrabi, leaf lettuce, English pea, and spinach seed sown in early to mid-August will likewise provide abundant fall harvests. Mustard greens, radish, turnip and cress sown in early to mid-September will make it to the table in October and November.

Gardeners have several choices of starting their fall gardens. Summer vegetable seedlings require constant attention. Seed sown in the garden in summer is one choice, but will require repeated irrigation and careful attention to pest control. It is often easier to start seedlings of tomato, pepper, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, brussel sprouts and parsley in boxes or pots of potting soil, culture them in or near the house, and transplant them to the garden when they are 4 to 5 weeks old.

A third choice to help fall gardeners is offered by some local nurseries which will have plants of these vegetables at the right age ready to transplant in mid-July to early August.

The choice of a vegetable variety for the fall garden is very important. The early maturing, determinate tomato hybrids (those requiring 65 to 75 days from transplanting to produce their first ripe fruit) Spring Giant, Big Set, Jackpot, Pik-Red and Bonus have produced 30 to 50 or more large fruit per plant within a period of 60 to 90 days from transplanting in extension all variety demonstration. In contrast, the late maturing, indeterminate tomato varieties may ripen only six to a dozen fruit by frost when planted in mid-summer.

Green comet broccoli, stonehead hybrid cabbage, gold king and nantes carrots, snow crown cauliflower, honeycomb sweet corn, sweet slice and liberty hybrid cucumbers, and buttercrunch lettuce are superior varieties which grow rapidly and reliably in plains fall gardens.

Additional advice on the timing of fall garden plantings and recommended varieties for fall gardens can be obtained from the Gray County Extension Office in the Courthouse Annex.

Friendship and social situations take on a new predominance in your life this coming year. One alliance you may be forming brings a most unusual opportunity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There is very little chance that luck will be another dull Monday. Unexpected pleasant surprises should make this day a stimulating one. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although you may be a bit restless today, what you really need is someone you feel close to, whom you can confide in, to take things off your mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your intentions may not be such, yet you could find yourself blurting out the hidden facts behind a sensitive matter. Fortunately, it should work out well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Something unusual is happening around you today. If you can fit the pieces together, it could be of advantage to you materially.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is an excellent day to use your creative abilities. Your ideas will be sound in principle and will have practical applications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Separating yourself from a situation that has caused you some recent aggravation enables you to clearly see things for what they are. The solution will be obvious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll be luckiest today operating in areas that call for progressive and original expressions, especially when associating with others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Goals are more reachable at this time if you aren't afraid to try new methods. Discussions with co-workers could prove productive.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The essence of a good idea could come to you today from a conversation with a forward-thinking friend. Use it, don't file and forget it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Speak up if you think you know the solution to a matter that is giving someone in your family fits. What is obvious to you may be obscured from them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Little flashes of inspiration will help guide you today, aiding you already keen mind. Try to spend your day doing mental tasks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your imagination is in high gear today and can be used successfully for coming up with new ideas to better your material position. Trust it.

Underground homes: Caves of future

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — Outside, a hot and blustery wind howls across the High Plains, kicking up dust and dirt raised by the threat of a fierce thunderstorm.

Inside, all is serene. The House is quiet and clean, bathed in bright sunlight. Soft stereophonic music fills the spacious rooms.

Most puzzling, however, is the view from the terrace. One does not see swirling dust nor ominous clouds, or hear the sirens that signal the approach of a tornado.

There is only the sound of a splashing fountain and the glimmer of fish in the pool. Plants and flowers ring the courtyard, enhancing the seascape in the distance.

The seascape?

Well, not exactly. But such a scenario is no fantasy, and a tall, lean Texan named Jay Swayze is here to tell us about underground living.

Actually, he's been talking about his subterranean homes for years. But now people are beginning to listen. He says his is an idea whose time has come.

"I'm saying that underground living gives us the best of two worlds," he said from his home in this Panhandle community of 17,000.

For those sick of soaring utility costs, home repair bills and disruptive noise, Swayze may be right.

"We've gone to the moon and back, and cured a number of common and uncommon ills," he said. "The one thing we haven't done is utilize the underground potential."

"It offers us privacy, security, safety, and controlled environment and a better quality of living."

Swayze is no dreamer, but he does speak out of a certain bias in behalf of subterranean dwellings. He built an underground home in 1962 in nearby Plainview and lived there with his family for many years.

He played a key role in similar underground projects in Central Texas and the Colorado Rockies and built a prototype for the New York World's Fair in 1964-65.

Abandoning the building business several years ago, Swayze devotes his energies now to planning and designing such structures and chronicling their virtues in a forthcoming book.

A Swayze home, the first "total energy" house to date, is under construction north of town and will be heated and cooled through a combination of surface solar collectors and an underground swimming pool.

It is a $160,000 project.

Swayze's book is designed to provide builders, developers, realtors, businessmen, educators and homeowners a glimpse of his subterranean world.

"We can do almost anything better in the earth than we've done on the earth," said Swayze, 55.

"We've got 50 to 60 underground homes in 11 central and western states and we're just getting into commercial buildings. Some day they will replace conventional buildings."

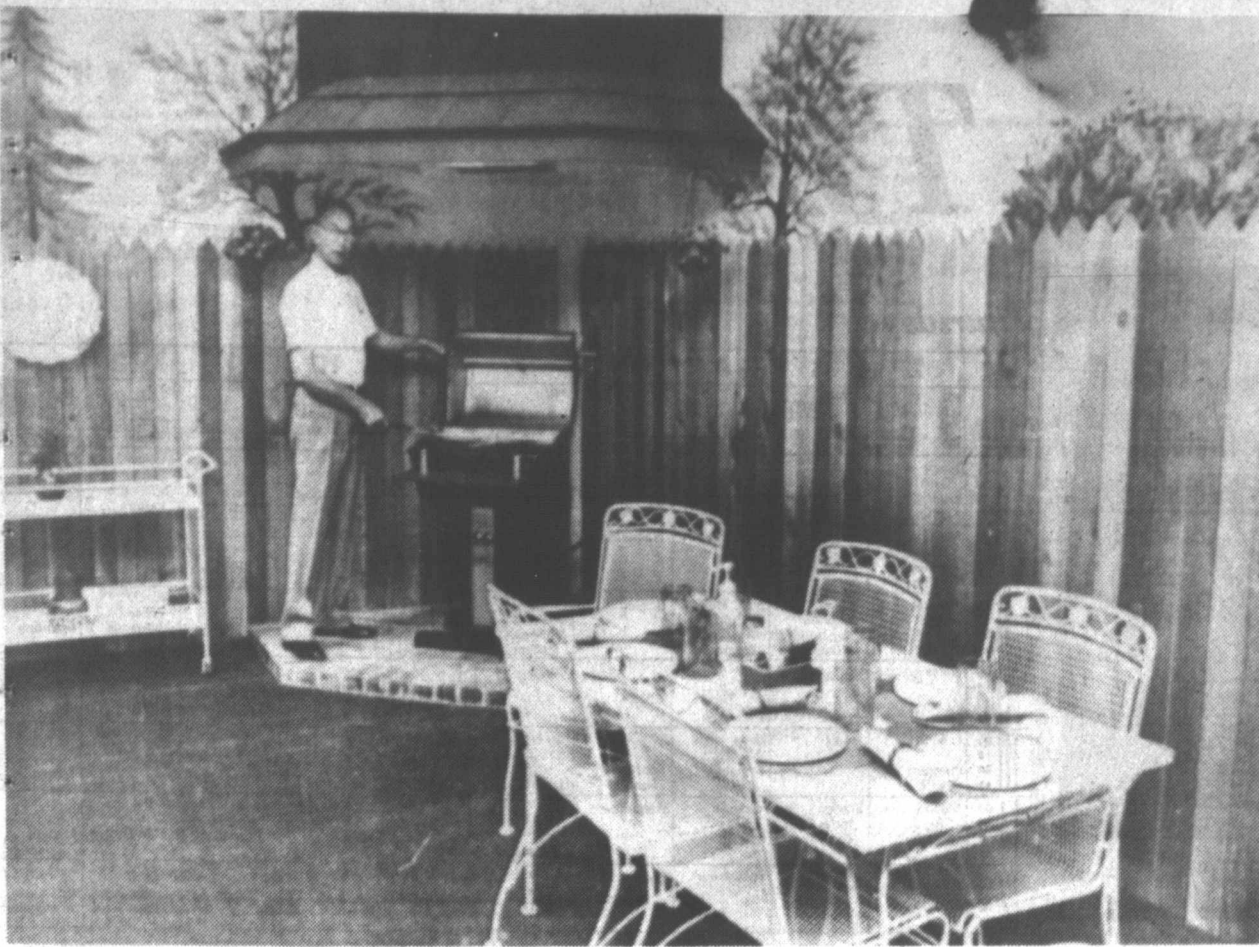

Envision a vandal-proof school house, for instance, or a chain of subterranean steak houses.

According to Swayze, the cost of an underground home is 10 percent to 20 percent higher than the cost of conventional housing, but reduced insurance, utility and repair bills quickly offset the initial expense.

A 2,000-square foot home within a 3,000-square foot shell would cost roughly $120,000, he said. The most expensive home to date was a $2.3 million model somewhere out west.

"We don't give locations because of customers' requests," he said.

"They attract the curious from all over the world."

UNDERGROUND PATIO. Jay Swayze of Hereford, Texas, stands on the patio of his model underground home in Hereford. Swayze says power utility bills, easier heating and cooling and less maintenance make the underground dwellings more attractive to prospective buyers. Trees and fence are drawings. The patio is functional for cooking.

Groups aid women facing Caesareans

By KATHLEEN CARROLL
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Linda Turnbull was totally unprepared for her first Caesarean birth.

While her first pregnancy had not been easy, she and her husband, James, had taken natural childbirth classes and the possibility of a Caesarean delivery seemed very remote.

Now, after more than 34 grueling hours in labor, her doctor was telling her she must have major surgery to deliver her child.

"It was such a shock," she says, two years and two Caesarean deliveries later. "I wasn't prepared for anything like it. Up until the very last minute, I kept thinking I could have Chris naturally. I was really scared."

A year later, shortly before becoming pregnant with her second child, Mrs. Turnbull discovered the reason for her Caesarean — the baby's head would not pass through her pelvic area, a common problem for many mothers. She was angry.

"All that year I had been so depressed, so mad."

Her frustration is not uncommon among Caesarean mothers, especially those who undergo the surgery unexpectedly.

"That frustration often leads to depressions that run deeper than most cases of the postpartum blues."

"Not all mothers feel this way, but some have negative feelings toward themselves, their doctors or their husbands," said Linda Worzer, founder of Caesarean Awareness of Dallas.

"The first few weeks of motherhood are really the pits anyway," she said. "You love that baby so much, but you are so tired. It's not always as wonderful as you want it to be."

Still in its infant years, the idea for Caesarean Awareness was born shortly before Mrs. Worzer's second child.

"It was the same old story with my first child," she said. "I was going to have an unmedicated delivery, drink my orange juice, hop off the table and walk to my room. Our (childbirth class) instructor said one person in the class would have a Caesarean section and I looked both ways to see who it was going to be."

After going into labor, her doctor, too, told her she would have to deliver by C-section. A short time later, Matthew, now 4, was born.

"I was very depressed for quite some time (after the delivery)," she said. "I know my husband (Richard) nearly lost his mind."

"When my baby was six months old, I got pregnant again," she said. "Facing another Caesarean section was terrifying."

There were no support groups for Caesarean mothers in Dallas, so Mrs. Wolzer contacted C-SEC, Inc., in Boston. After 3-year-old Meagan was delivered, Caesarean Section came into being.

One of the first goals was to establish a strong support group to help Caesarean mothers over their depression. Second, Mrs. Worzer said, the group established Dallas' first childbirth classes geared specifically for couples facing Caesarean births.

Now, with a small, but strong core of members, the group is pushing area hospitals to loosen regulations for Caesarean deliveries — allowing fathers in the delivery room, allowing the mother to keep the child in her room after the birth and, in general, helping parents take as active a role as possible in the "birth process."

The mole who came in from the heat

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP

DETROIT (AP) — Notes found under table of Windsor, Canada, pub, as made available to and decoded by CIA (Soviet citizen found under same table is assisting Royal Canadian Mounties with their inquiries):

COMRADE VASSILY: Cover to infiltrate revolutionary group plotting to overthrow President Carter in Detroit blown almost immediately. However, by great fortune, I was suspected of being media representative of KGB, Moscow, Idaho, issued Radio-TV credentials and assigned a sky booth in Joe Louis Arena where dissidents known as Republicans are meeting. Other moles named John Chancellor, Walter Cronkite and Frank Reynolds sit with backs to large window, facing away from action. I do not know why, am working on it. SIGN OFF: BORIS.

COMRADE VASSILY: Advise Politburo revolutionaries openly denounced Carter as weak, inept, inane, insincere, naive, incompetent, insensitive, defeated, finished. Police stand by and do nothing. Blatantly advocate B-1 bombers, cruise missiles, neutron bombs, a three-ocean Navy. Banners proclaim "Elephants Eat Peanuts." It is some kind of code, am working on it. SIGN OFF: BORIS.

COMRADE VASSILY: As we suspected of many American cities, Detroit's glittering glass skyline is a facade. There are tramcars running here that have not been seen on the streets of Moscow in 50 years. Hotel rooms with cardboard walls are rented on a most temporary basis. The maid keeps knocking on my door saying, "Time is up." I don't know what it means, but I am working on it. SIGN OFF: BORIS.

COMRADE VASSILY: Democracy in action is not as dangerous as we have been led to believe. In debate, a skilled parliamentarian with a large mallet cuts off the nyets before any dissident has a chance to speak. It is an admirable system, we should study it more. SIGN OFF: BORIS.

COMRADE VASSILY: The

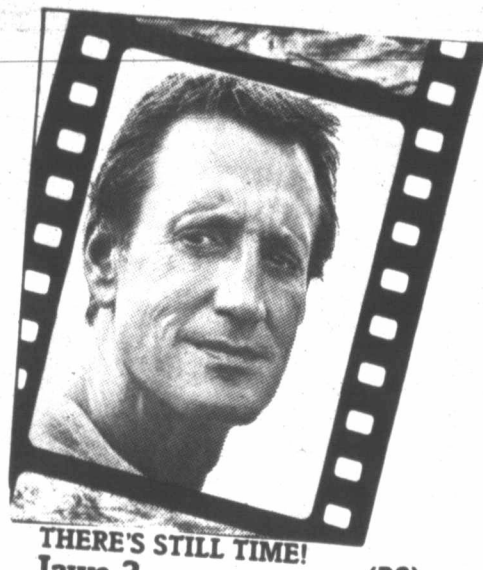

revolutionaries take great care to disguise themselves in cowboy hats, baseball caps, New England sou'westers and other strange regalia including a head gear with an elephant trunk, but there is more regimentation than dedication among them. They are taken in groups to the meeting hall in large buses and wear buttons identifying their local cell. Many, however, defect across the river to Canada after dark, where prices are cheaper and the vodka halls remain open two hours longer. A high official of the Hiram Walker distillery is in charge of the host committee luring defectors.

I am not quite sure what the real appeal of Windsor, Canada, is, but I am working on it. SIGN OFF: BORIS.
