Sadat orders state funeral for Shah

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat ordered a state funeral Tuesday for deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi of Iran, dead after a long fight against cancer, and former President Nixon left the United States to attend.

News of the shah's death Sunday at a military hospital south of Cairo touched off public jubilation in the nation he ruled for 38 years. "The bloodsucker of the century has died," said Tehran Radio. But a spokesman for President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said the death would have no effect on the fate of the 52 American hostages who today were spending their 268th day in captivity.

The young Moslem militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to try to force the United States to return the shah for trial said their captives would not be freed until Pahlavi's "stolen" fortune was returned to Iran, a French radio correspondent reported from Tehran.

Sadat, who had given the shah refuge after he fled from Iran 18 months ago and again in March when no other government wanted him, interrupted a vacation in Alexandria and hurried to Cairo with his wife to comfort the dead man's widow and four children.

"I mourn my departed friend before the entire world, especially the Moslem world," said Sadat in a nationwide telecast. "He had often spoken of a simple funeral, but in appreciation of all he did, we will bid him farewell with the same amount of honor and respect as we greeted him with here when he arrived."

Pahlavi was to be buried in the Al Rifai Mosque, the burial place of Egypt's last two kings, where his father, Reza Shah, was entombed for several years after he died in exile in 1941. It appeared, however, that foreign chiefs of state or government would not be invited because many of them would probably refuse rather than antagonize Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime in Iran.

A State Department spokesman said the United States would probably be represented by its ambassador to Egypt, Alfred Atherton. The department issued a brief statement that expressed sympathy for Pahlavi's family and said his passing "marks the end of an era in Iran, which all hope will be followed by peace and stability." But it made no mention of his long, close alliance with the United States.

Other former Western allies were also muted in their responses. Nixon, however, issued a statement saying the shah was "a loyal friend and ally of the United States and a personal friend as well." And his secretary of state, Henry A. Kissinger, eulogized the dead man as "a good friend of the United States who stood by seven presidents over 35 years of his rule... (and) died abandoned by all his friends except President Sadat."

The former president and his son-in-law Edward Cox left New York Sunday night to attend the funeral.

Extraordinary security precautions were expected to prevent assassination attempts.

The shah had been under treatment for lymphatic cancer since 1973, but his condition did not deteriorate noticeably until last October, nine months after the revolution drove him from Iran. Then the U.S. government allowed him to come from Mexico to New York for removal of his gall bladder and analysis of his cancer, and a crowd of militant students in Tehran reacted by occupying the American Embassy and seizing its staff.

After three months in Panama, he returned to Cairo in March and entered Al Maadi military hospital. His cancerous spleen was removed on March 28, but the disease had spread to his liver, and he was given chemotherapy. This weakened his body's natural defenses against infection, and he developed pneumonia last month.

He developed an abscess on his pancreas and other infections, and his condition for a time was described as extremely grave. But lately he was reported improving.

Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said the pancreatic abscess began hemorrhaging Saturday night and he died at 9:50 a.m. Sunday "as a result of shock to the circulatory system caused by a general deterioration in his health." But a doctor on the team treating him said the cause of death was pulmonary edema, or collection of fluid that caused swelling around the lungs.

At the bedside when he died were the shah's third wife, former Empress Farah Diba, 41; their older son, former Crown Prince Reza, 19; their three other children, Princess Farahnaz, 17; Prince Ali Reza, 14, and Princess Leila, 10; the shah's twin sister, Princess Ashraf, and his former ambassador to the United States and former son-in-law, Ardashir Zahedi.

Sadat, after visiting the widow and her children at the heavily guarded Kubbah Palace where they have been living, told reporters he now considered them part of his own family. He said they could make their home in Egypt as long as they wanted.

Mohammad Reza and his twin sister, Princess Ashraf, were born Oct. 26, 1919, in Tehran.

The Pahlavi Dynasty began in 1925 when Pahlavi's father, an illiterate Russian-trained army officer who seized power in a military coup, deposed Shah Ahmad Mirza and put himself on the Peacock Throne.

Sixteen years later, Reza Shah, a pro-Nazi sympathizer, was forced to abdicate by the British and Soviet Allies who occupied Iran in 1941. Pahlavi, then only 21, took the throne on Sept. 16, 1941.

Hostage families not optimistic

By The Associated Press
Families of Texas men held hostage in Iran say they don't think the death of the deposed shah of Iran will hasten the return of the 52 Americans held captive by Iranian militants.

Shah Mohamed Reza Pahlavi died early Sunday, the 267th day of captivity for the hostages.

"They'll let them go when they want to," said Johnny McKeel of Balch Springs. His son, Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr. is one of the hostages.

"I don't think he (the shah) had anything to do with it," McKeel said. "I just don't think it will make any difference."

Arie Ruth Walker's son, Marine Staff Sgt. David Walker, returned to his home in Prairie View last November when he was one of the first hostages to be released. But Sunday, Mrs. Walker remained skeptical that the shah's death could win the freedom of the remaining hostages.

"It's hard to say what will happen. I hope they (the militants) will go on and release the hostages," she said. "But with the way things have gone and the way they think, those people might use it (the shah's death) to hold them longer."

"I really don't think the shah was that big of an issue recently, but hopefully the militants will feel they don't have any bargaining power left."

Mrs. A.R. Engelmann of Hurst, mother of Navy Lt. Robert Engelmann, declined to comment on the shah's death.

Dorothy Royer of Houston, mother of hostage William B. Royer Jr., was unavailable for comment.

Nixon to attend Shah's funeral

PARIS (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon arrived in Paris today en route to Cairo for the funeral of the deposed Shah of Iran. Nixon said the trip was his public acknowledgement of the shah's long friendship with America.

He said he went to Cairo "as a mark of personal sympathy and a demonstration of deep appreciation by one American citizen for the loyal friendship and support which the shah extended to the United States."

The official U.S. State Department reaction to the shah's death expressed sympathy for the shah's family but did not mention his relationship with the U.S.

The former president and his son-in-law, Edward Cox, flew to Paris in the sealed-off upper deck of a Boeing 747.

Nixon refused to meet reporters, but he responded to a list of written questions from The Associated Press delivered by a flight attendant.

He said he did not contact the State Department or the White House before heading for Cairo, where Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi will be buried Tuesday. The shah died Sunday of complications arising from cancer.

Asked if he had been invited to the services, Nixon responded in a note: "After learning of the shah's death, I placed a call to President (Anwar) Sadat, and we talked. I asked him if services would be held. He told me the time. I said I would like to attend. He said, 'You are always welcome — very welcome in Egypt.'"

Nixon said he does not fear a terrorist disruption of the memorial services, despite threats by Iranian extremists to assassinate the Pahlavi family.

"I have never been concerned about my personal safety in meeting my public responsibilities," Nixon said. He added, "It would be a stupid mistake by the radicals in Iran if it happens."

Earthquake shakes fourteen states

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

More than 60,000 baseball fans felt it in Detroit and Cleveland. Pradeep Talwani measured it in Columbia, S.C. And Joel Mans said it "busted the whole back side" of his house in Frankfort, Ky.

It was a "very rare" earthquake registering 5.1 on the Richter scale that struck in northern Kentucky on Sunday and was felt for 300 miles or more in all directions — shaking people in 14 states and southern Canada.

No deaths or injuries were reported from the tremor, which was centered about 30 miles northeast of Lexington and occurred at 2:52 p.m., lasting 15 to 45 seconds. But hundreds of buildings — mostly in the Ohio River town of Maysville, Ky. — sustained damage ranging from shattered windows and toppled chimneys to cracked foundations.

States where residents reported feeling the earthquake were Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky, Tennessee, North and South Carolina and Alabama. People in highrise buildings in Toronto and other cities of southern Ontario also felt it.

For most people, the quake brought excitement, puzzlement, even disbelief.

"I was upstairs when the radiator started to jiggle and then the whole house rattled," said Fran Zaniello, a college English instructor who lives in Fort Thomas, Ky., 20 miles south of Cincinnati. "I went downstairs and said, 'Hey, I just felt an earthquake,' and everybody laughed."

Elba Cunningham, 56, of Dayton, Ohio, said it felt like "a great big giant shaking my house." She added, "I've lived here all my life and I never felt one before."

At Cleveland Stadium, where 20,000 were watching the Indians play the California Angels, announcer Herb Score said "the whole crowd became very quiet and were looking around," when the tremor was felt.

At Tiger Stadium in Detroit, an announcer told 40,000 fans watching the Tigers and the Oakland Athletics that the swaying they felt was not their imagination. "The fans all looked at one another, but there wasn't a stampede to get out," said police officer Mike Werner, stationed in an upper deck.

Waverly Person, a geophysicist with the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said it was the first time a quake had been recorded in that part of northern Kentucky. He said earthquakes anywhere in the area were "very rare" and that Eastern quakes rarely registered above 4.0.

The Richter scale measures ground motion as recorded on seismographs and every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. An earthquake of 5 can cause considerable damage.

Scientists said they did not know what caused the quake, but they said it differed from the kind of earthquakes common in California, which are triggered by two large plates of the earth's crust moving against each other along one of several faults. The Kentucky quake occurred in an area that has only one plate and no fault.

In northern Alabama, more than 300 miles from the epicenter, Billy Joe Cooley, news editor of the Huntsville News, said callers reported tables, lamps and dishes shaking.

"The phones just started going wild," said Bob Martin at radio station WCZY in Royal Oak outside Detroit. "A woman from Farmington Hills called at 2:57 and said she was thrown off her bed."

At the University of South Carolina in Columbia, Talwani, an associate professor of geology, said his seismograph picked up the tremor one minute after it was recorded in Kentucky. "If somebody tells you they felt it, they did," he told a reporter.

In Cincinnati, the steps to City Hall caved in when a stone ornament fell on them from a wall. In Lexington, cans were knocked from the shelves in a grocery store.

Most of the damage was concentrated in and around Maysville, a town of 7,500 people 70 miles northeast of Lexington. State emergency officials estimated 200 homes and businesses were damaged and said assessment teams would tour the area today.

Two chimneys fell on the Mason County, Ky., jail, and jailer Lloyd Berry said, "It felt like the whole damn jail was coming down."

Near the Kentucky state capital of Frankfort, 25 miles west of Lexington, Joel Mans said the earthquake "busted the whole back side of my house. You can pull the bricks out of my house on the back." He said other homes in his subdivision had similar damage.

Weather

The forecast calls for sunny and hot afternoons and fair and warm nights through Tuesday, with the high near 102 degrees. The expected low tonight and Tuesday night will be in the upper 60's. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 15 miles per hour today and Tuesday, decreasing to 5 to 10 miles per hour during night hours. lmr00100081

Governor says 'no' to base's use for Cubans

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — White House officials have suggested that Fort Chaffee be used to house 10,000 Cuban refugees for the remainder of the year.

Gov. Bill Clinton said officials asked him to "volunteer" the Army Reserve base to house refugees from camps in Florida, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin as well as Fort Chaffee. The base has been open since May 9 as a temporary home for refugees.

Clinton said his immediate inclination was to say "no." But officials did not ask for an immediate reply, so Clinton said he talk with city and county officials in the Fort Chaffee area if they favored the plan because of economic benefits for the area.

Clinton said he would fight the idea if the federal government tried to impose it on the state. He also said the federal government would have to pay the state and local governments $215,000 for damages and expenses incurred during earlier problems at the base.

Fort Chaffee was rocked by rioting June 1 as a crowd of 200 to 300 Cuban refugees tried to escape from the base. Clinton had ordered extra state police to patrol the area and also had mobilized some National Guard troops.

Power plant operating at deficit

CANADIAN — Reports from the city's preliminary audit during a recent public meeting reveal the Canadian electrical power plant is operating at a deficit of $56,000.

The public hearing conducted by Citizens for Action Group, was sponsored in order to clarify the reasons for the Aug. 9 election in which Canadian voters are asked to decide whether to give the city council the authority to sell the 50-year-old electrical power generating plant.

The plant had provided 100 percent of the city's electrical needs until 1977, city officials said.

According to a report prepared by city auditors Born, Hooten, Jones and Gardner, the plant was in the hole by $56,757.

Of the deficit, $56,000 had been spent in capital improvements, City Manager Vern Farrington explained to those attending the session.

Also, Bill McMorries — consulting engineer for Canadian — said, "Of the loss, actually there was a $44,958 net income gain before contributions to the general fund."

McMorries recommends the generating portion of the plant be phased out and kept for emergency purposes only.

The distribution part should continue to be used, he said.

"Even if we phase out the plant," McMorries told those attending the meeting, "the revenue place in the general fund will not be totally lost."

"We would have the revenue from the distribution system," he said.

system, Farrington said.

Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) officials have proposed to take over the entire system, he said, while North Plains Electrical Company have proposed to sell power at wholesale prices beginning in October of 1982.

Representatives of the company also attended the recent meeting. Cliff Milner of SPS told the assemblage his company has agreed to sell power through North Plains with a two-year contract.

In 1980, he said, SPS offered to take over the power plant and to do construction estimated at $2.6 million to improve the plant.

"We at SPS, however, have never solicited the purchase of the power plant," he added. "We are available, however, if the citizens vote for the sale of the plant."

Vesta Orr of North Plains explained that when the plant needed more power in 1977, "we wheeled the power."

"North Plains Electric Company may be able to provide the power for the needs of Canadian for some time," he said, "depending on how fast the city grows."

"The major objection to keeping the plant," Canadian Mayor George Arrington said, "is the $600,000 indebtedness of the facility."

If sold, he said, SPS will pay two percent of the gross receipt tax to the city and the ad valorem tax.

The present Canadian power plant is not an efficient operation, he added.

A special election has been called for Aug. 9. City voters will decide on the issue at that time.

Hostages' fates are unchanged by death

By The Associated Press
The death of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi "will have no effect" on the fate of the 52 American hostages, said a spokesman for Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Another spokesman said Parliament still must settle the hostage issue.

Tehran Radio said there was jubilation throughout Iran over the death in Egyptian exile Sunday of the man it called "the bloodsucker of the century." But there was no hint his dying might speed the release of the Americans, who began their 268th day in captivity today.

Iran "will not change its stand by even an inch with the death of Mohammad Reza," Tehran Radio declared.

The young Moslem militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4 and demanded the return of Pahlavi for trial also said his death wouldn't affect their captives, a French radio correspondent reported.

The militants said they would keep the 49 Americans they are holding until the "stolen" Pahlavi fortune — estimated as high at $25 billion — is returned to Iran, the French reporter said. Three others are held in the Iranian Foreign Ministry.

U.S. officials in Washington said they believed the death of the shah had little or no bearing on the hostage crisis. They said such recent political developments as the seating of the new Iranian Parliament, or Majlis, and the nomination of a prime minister held greater promise for the Americans' eventual release.

The Majlis held a closed session Sunday to discuss President Bani-Sadr's appointment of national police chief Mostafa Mir-Salim as the first prime minister of the Iranian republic, and a public debate on the appointment was scheduled today. But leaders of the revolutionary regime have said such pressing matters as the economy must be taken up before the hostages, and there have been reports the Majlis would not get to the Americans before October.

The Iranian government reacted cautiously to the first reports that the 60-year-old shah had succumbed to a massive hemorrhage and other ravages of his seven-year struggle against lymphatic cancer. But two hours after the death was first reported in Cairo, Tehran Radio broke into a program to announce the death of the "bloodsucker" despite the efforts of "American, French and Egyptian doctors to save him."

"A bloodthirsty murderer, a wealth-loving plunderer, a homeless traitor died today as a refugee," said a commentary broadcast Sunday night. "He was like a devastating flood that reduced everything the nation had to ruins. But how well God's justice has reduced this devastating flood to dust."

Meanwhile, Tehran Radio reported new fighting Sunday in Iran's simmering border war with Iraq and said an Iraqi who had been spying in Abadan, the site of Iran's oil refinery, had been executed there for espionage.

Texas weather

Thunderstorms roamed Texas along a weak front line Sunday night but they failed to bring much rain or even lower temperatures noticeably. Early today, the front stretched from near Texarkana through Austin, Del Rio and the Big Bend to El Paso.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from 65 degrees at Marfa to 84 at Laredo and Brownsville. North of the front, temperatures were in the 70s, while readings remained in the 80s south of the line. Winds were light and skies were clear to partly cloudy.

Temperatures reached just above the 100 mark Sunday in several Texas cities as the heat wave continued unabated.

Day 36 of triple-digit temperatures was forecast for North Texas, with temperatures in the 90s in the rest of the state. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were predicted for the mountains and the southeastern parts of the state this afternoon and evening.

Idaho officials okay repair

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — After a calm weekend, officials at the riot-torn Idaho State Penitentiary began working today to repair an estimated $2.7 million in damages.

Corrections Director C.W. "Bill" Crowl said Sunday it will be 10 to 14 days before cellblocks can be repaired after last week's rioting, and 12 to 18 months before the entire institution is repaired.

Most of the 240 inmates remaining at the prison are being held outside in Army tents.

Meanwhile, Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris said he is not satisfied with the copies of videotapes that Boise station KBCI-TV shot during the rioting Wednesday night, and said he wants the originals.

Harris said William Russell, an attorney for the station, confirmed that the tapes taken from the newsroom by deputies with a search warrant were not the originals.

Harris said tampering-with-evidence charges could be filed if it

Shah's death blamed on treatment problems

NEW YORK (AP) — Complications from a March 28 operation or from the chemotherapy he was receiving for his cancer are being blamed for the death of the deposed shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The shah died early Sunday in Egypt, nine months after he was diagnosed as having histiocytic lymphoma, a dangerous but often curable cancer of the lymph system. Houston surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey, in an interview with ABC News Sunday, blamed anti-cancer drugs for the death.

"It was the chemotherapy...to control the shah's cancer that damaged his ability to withstand infection and it was the infection, not the cancer, that ultimately caused the shah's death," DeBakey said.

But DeBakey himself has replied to charges that there were serious complications arising from the operation to remove the shah's spleen, which he supervised in Cairo on March 28. The Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram reported that a surgical instrument touched the pancreas, which is adjacent to the spleen, during the operation, causing damage which led eventually to the formation of a cyst. DeBakey is best known as a heart surgeon rather than an abdominal surgeon.

But DeBakey has denied the report of a slip during the operation. In an interview with American Medical News, the newspaper of the American Medical Association, he called the report "misleading and damaging" and said the operation "went as smooth as it possibly could."

DeBakey could not be reached for comment Sunday night. One doctor familiar with the case said Sunday that the shah's infection set in after a decision by Egyptian doctors to raise the dose of chemotherapy he was receiving.

The doctor, who asked not to be named, said the shah had been receiving six anti-cancer drugs, most of which had the effect of lowering the body's resistance to disease, since early May.

The chemotherapy was given in three-week cycles, the doctor said. The shah had received two such cycles at a lowered dose. But on the third cycle, when the dose was raised, his white blood cell count fell as low as 1,000 white cells per cubic millimeter of blood, compared to a normal value of 5,000 to 10,000 per cubic millimeter.

White cells are a key element in the body's resistance to disease. Such a drop is normal during cancer chemotherapy, and the white count normally springs back, as it did in the shah's case after four days, the doctor said.

But the doctor said the shah may have been especially vulnerable to infection because of weakness from the operation, the chemotherapy, or the lymphoma, which also can lower the body's resistance.

The shah's case was marked from the start by disagreements among doctors of various nationalities involved in the treatment.

A dispute between American and Panamanian doctors was a factor in the decision to move the shah to Cairo rather than perform the operation on his spleen in Panama, as was originally planned.

In Egypt, one American chemotherapy expert, Dr. Morton Coleman of New York, resigned from the case and returned to the United States three weeks ago after disagreements with the shah's French physicians over details of treatment.

The shah was treated by French doctors for a milder form of cancer for five years before he was brought to the United States under the care of New York tropical diseases specialist Dr. Benjamin H. Kean last October for an operation to remove his gall bladder.

It was while he was in New York that the histiocytic lymphoma was diagnosed.

Ku Klux Klan keep low profile

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Officials said today a curfew would be lifted after this racially torn city passed its third consecutive quiet night. Twenty-seven more people were arrested for curfew violations overnight, but no serious trouble was reported.

Children have resumed pedaling bicycles on a street where eight policemen were shot last week, and customers were venturing into downtown businesses that had been nearly deserted at the height of the violence.

Police today reported the quietest night since the shooting and firebombings began Tuesday, and officials said a three-night-old curfew would be lifted when the city commission met at 9:30 a.m. EDT.

Fears of an upsurge in violence faded over the weekend as Ku Klux

Klanmen who planned a march were persuaded to keep a low profile and the curfew forced most residents off the streets at night.

Broken glass still littered streets Sunday in predominantly black areas hardest hit by three nights of violence last week that caused $350,000 damage to property.

Police have arrested more than 200 people since trouble began Tuesday night, including 27 persons arrested Sunday night and early today for curfew violations. The disturbances began after two Klanmen were acquitted Tuesday on charges of shooting and injuring four black women and a third Klanman was convicted on reduced charges. The violence peaked Thursday when eight policemen were slightly injured in a shotgun ambush.

Peru democracy returns today

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Democracy, a fragile experiment in much of Latin America, returns to Peru after 12 years today with the inauguration of President Fernando Belaunde Terry.

Rosalynn Carter, presidents from three other Latin American countries and Spain's prime minister headed the 700 guests invited to the House of Representatives for the inauguration of Belaunde, the 67-year-old Texas-educated architect who lost the job in 1968 when leftist generals escorted him out of the National Palace and into nine years of exile.

The coup was led by Gen. Juan Velasco, who declared a socialist-nationalist government to spearhead a "revolution of the armed forces."

Velasco was overthrown in 1975 by Gen. Francisco Morales Bermudez, a more conservative, pro-Western officer under whom the country again chose Belaunde as president in elections May 18. Belaunde won a five-year term by receiving 40 percent of the vote in a 15-candidate field.

"We are in Lima to celebrate one dramatic new dimension in the Americas: the rebirth of democracy in Peru," Mrs. Carter said Sunday at a luncheon given by Colombian President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala.

Other heads of government who came for the inauguration were Presidents Luis Herrera Campins of Venezuela and Rodrigo Carazo Ochoa of Costa Rica and Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez Gonzalez of Spain.

More than 100 countries sent high level delegations to the transfer of government in this mountainous, mineral-rich nation.

Senior citizens van service set

A transportation service for senior citizens unable to provide their own means of travel is scheduled to begin Aug. 5.

The Community Transportation Service, organized by the Gray County Committee on Aging, will be offered on Tuesday of each week.

The van service will pick up passengers and deliver them throughout Pampa as needed. The van will drop passengers at designated locations and return later to pick up passengers for the return trip home.

Those in need of transportation should call by noon, Monday, before the Tuesday they need the ride.

The free service was developed by the county committee on aging after realizing the need of many older adults who are not able to get out of their homes.

The transportation service will provide an opportunity for older adults to visit the bank, doctor's office, shopping areas, grocery stores and other stops as needed.

Local churches will provide the vans, volunteers and gasoline for the project.

Cindy Kelly will be co-ordinating route schedules and volunteers. Anyone interested in signing up for the transportation service should call 669-2211.

The Committee on Aging is an a subcommittee of the Gray County Extension Services interested in providing programs and activities for senior citizens.

Electricity usage reaches high

Extremely hot weather has increased the use of electricity for air conditioning during the last few weeks and has established a new system peak for Southwestern Public Service Company, officials said.

The peak, which is the highest amount of electricity used during the year, reached 2,651,000 kilowatts on July 14, at 5 p.m.

Cooling systems are one of the largest users of electricity and as a result, many customers will see their electric bill go higher than in the past few months.

SPS officials say that on an average, customers with refrigerated air conditioning will experience an increase of about 42 percent over the same period last year. The increase is due in part to the increase in rates granted June 2, but mostly to the hot weather.

Larry Fuller, Panhandle Division Manager for SPS in Amarillo, said recently, "many more of our customers are beginning to take advantage of our Averaged Billing Plan to minimize the effect of higher bills in the summer. The plan helps smooth out the highs and lows that occur in electric bills during the year and arranges for the customer to pay an average rather than the actual amount used each month."

Fuller explained that with the average billing plan, the amount of the electric bill each month is determined by averaging the actual dollar amount of the bill for the past twelve months. For example, if the bill was $50 in July and had been $25 for the past 11 months, the customer would pay $27.08, using the average billing plan.

"Any residential customer of SPS Company with satisfactory credit and whose bill averages $25 or more can request the averaged billing plan," Fuller said. "There's no charge for participation and a telephone call to our office is all that's necessary."

Fuller also pointed out several steps that a residential customer can take to control electric usage: proper insulation, storm windows, caulking, and thermostat settings. In addition, SPS has free booklets available explaining these steps and others to help conserve energy.

"We are not experiencing any difficulties providing the electricity our customers need. This is because we have built and are continuing to build coal-fired power plants," Fuller concluded.

Wild burro roundup began

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A roundup of 350 wild burros from the Grand Canyon gets under way this week, and the elite cowboys hired to do the job don't expect an easy time of it.

"Some of them old stud burros get pretty mean," said Dave Ericsson, 39, a veteran trail boss in charge of the roundup. "I had one of my men's thumbs bit off one time."

"You get one of those ornery old jacks — a male is a 'jack' and a female is a 'jenny' — and they'll really bite you," he said. "I've had 'em take some pretty good bites out of me... but we understand 'em pretty well."

It was Ericsson's understanding of the burros and his reputation for gentleness with animals that won him the contract for the project, said Cia Hobbs of the Fund for Animals, which is organizing the roundup and airlift scheduled to begin Tuesday.

The roundup was arranged after it appeared the burros might have to be destroyed because a federal report said they were damaging the environment and posing a threat to other animals in the canyon.

The burros will be herded into corrals on the canyon floor, put in slings and then lifted by helicopters to pens on the rim of the canyon, said Cleveland Amory, chairman of the board of the Fund.

Ericsson and his six-man crew have rounded up about 1,700 burros in the past two years near Alamo Lake in western Arizona and have spent the past week studying the movements and habits of the canyon burros.

The animals are not native to the area but are descendants of burros introduced by Gold Rush-era prospectors who mined the canyon from the 1850s through the 1880s.

In recent years, as the burros became a nuisance, large numbers of them were shot, but a federal judge restrained any killings this year at least until after a Nov. 12 hearing.

The U.S. Park Service report on the burros said they deprive bighorn sheep, deer and other wildlife of food and water by destroying vegetation and fouling water holes.

"For some reason, burros have a tendency to eliminate waste right into the same streams and pools from which they're drinking," said Roger Giddings, of the U.S. Park Service. "Bighorn sheep and deer don't do that."

He said the burros also have a tendency to roam into campsites and leave their smelling like barnyards. "In addition, the Park Service report said trails worn into the canyon by the burros contribute to serious erosion."

Ms. Hobbs has said that "the absolute most primary concern" of the Fund is to handle the burros as gently as possible. But that's not to say burros ever have been regarded as the milktoasts of the animal kingdom.

"You could refer to them as stubborn animals," said Jerry Owens, the Fund's chief humane officer. "They're animals that do what they want to do," and when the cowboys go after them, "they're going to resist."

Such resistance could produce "absolute carnage," says the head of another environmental group.

"We feel very strongly that in this roundup many animals will be destroyed," said Joan Blue, president and board chairman of the American Horse Protection Association.

She said documents filed with the Park Service when the Fund sought its airlift permit reveal the tranquilizing drug, M-99, will be used to subdue the burros.

Airline woes continue as inflation persists

DALLAS (AP) — Like most people, Robert L. Crandall is dismayed at the rising cost of fuel. It's costing his company a lot of money.

Crandall is president of American Airlines, which reported a net loss of $76.7 million for the first six months of 1980, compared to an $88.4 million profit for the same period last year, and he says things won't get much better the next few months, either.

"The outlook for the third quarter is poor," said Crandall, 44, who recently took control of the nation's largest domestic air carrier.

He said the same problems that created havoc in the rest of the airline industry — high aviation fuel costs and deregulation are the prime reasons.

American, he said, suffers more severely from fuel price squeezes than its competitors because the airline buys from a "mix of suppliers ... and that ends up with a higher average price than the suppliers of other carriers."

To make matters worse, he said, American operates with a fleet of jet liners that gulp large amounts of fuel, inefficient Boeing 707s and 727-100s designed when jet fuel cost less than half the current price.

CHILD STAR Allen C. Hoskins, left as character Farina in the "Our Gang" comedies, and in 1975, right, died of cancer Sunday in Oakland, Calif., it was announced. He was 59.

Patients not instructed in escape official says

BRADLEY BEACH, N.J. (AP) — Fewer lives might have been lost in a rooming house blaze that took 23 lives if mentally retarded residents had been taught more avenues of escape during fire drills, an emergency official says.

Authorities said many of the victims of the Saturday night fire were found locked in their rooms, where they retreated after being unable to make their way to the front door, the escape route they had been taught.

"Every door I kicked in, I found a body," said firefighter Jeffrey Ralston.

The blaze in the Brinley Inn, a four-story wood-and-stucco building, was accompanied by an explosion. Authorities said Sunday it may take several days to determine the cause. The New Jersey state arson squad is participating in the investigation.

There were 38 residents inside the rooming house at the time of the blaze. About half the residents were mentally retarded and some of the others were former patients at Marlboro State Psychiatric Hospital, said Jeff Scott, a case worker for the state Division of Mental Retardation.

Many of the residents were also elderly.

Gene Wilkins, director of Monmouth County First Aid Squads, said two fire drills per month were conducted at the building, but the residents were only shown how to get out the front door. The fire escape is in the back of the building.

He said the fire might not have claimed as many lives if residents had been taught an alternate escape route.

"They went to the front door as they'd been told. You've got mentally retarded people, slow thinkers. If you show them two or three exits, what do they remember? If you show them one, they'll remember," he said.

However, one survivor, Samuel Magna, rejected that account, saying he had been told to use the fire escape if there were flames on the stairs.

The Shah - His life in brief

Here is a brief look back at the life of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi:

— BIRTH: Oct. 26, 1919, with a twin sister, Princess Ashraf.

— OFFICIAL TITLE: King of Kings, Center of the Universe, Shadow of the Almighty, Regent of God and Light of the Aryans.

— ENTHRONEMENT: Sept. 16, 1941, upon the abdication under British pressure of his father, Reza Shah, because of the latter's pro-Nazi views. Shah Mohammad held off on a formal coronation until succession to his Peacock Throne was assured with the birth of a son. Crown Prince Reza was born in 1961 and the coronation was held Oct. 26, 1967.

— WIVES: He married three times, divorcing his first two wives. The first marriage, which lasted 10 years was to Fawzia, sister of the late King Farouk of Egypt, in 1939. The marriage produced a daughter, Princess Shahnaz. After the divorce, he married Soroya Esfandiary, half-German daughter of a Persian tribal chief. He made her queen, but the marriage produced no children and they divorced in 1958. In 1959, he married Farah Diba, Paris-educated daughter of an Iranian army officer, and she became Empress of Iran. In addition to Crown Prince Reza, they had another boy and two girls.

— GOAL: The Shah's often-expressed aim was to restore to Iran the grandeur of the Persian Empire.

— DOWNFALL: The Shah's links to the West and his efforts to modernize Iran stirred opposition among Shiite Moslem clergy, culminating in a revolution in late 1978 and early 1979. U.S. support for the Shah's government dwindled and on Jan. 16, 1979, the Shah and his family fled Iran. A month later, the Islamic revolutionaries led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini overthrew the government he left behind.

— EXILE: The Shah fled first to Egypt, then Morocco, the Bahamas and Mexico. On Oct. 22, 1979, he flew secretly to New York for surgery for the removal of his gall bladder and treatment of a cancer detected six years before. His admission to the United States led to the seizure of U.S. hostages in the American Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4, 1979. On the following Dec. 15, the Shah flew to "temporary" exile in Panama and on March 23, 1980, his cancer worsening, he flew once again to Egypt where his spleen was removed. He was invited by President Anwar Sadat to remain in Egypt.

— DEATH: The Shah was readmitted to the Maadi military hospital near Cairo on June 27 for treatment of a series of abscesses that apparently stemmed from his body's inability to fight infection because of the loss of white blood cells caused by the chemical cancer treatment. The Shah died Sunday, only hours after one of his doctors reported he had suffered a hemorrhage from an abscess of the pancreas. Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said he died at 9:50 a.m. "as a result of shock to the circulatory system caused by a general deterioration of his health."

U.S. reactions vary to news of Shah's death

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dismissing the death of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi as almost irrelevant to the hostage crisis, U.S. officials say they believe recent political developments in Iran hold more promise for the eventual release of the 52 American captives.

These officials point to the recent installation of a new parliament and the appointment of a new prime minister in Iran as hopeful, though inconclusive, signs that a breakthrough may be forthcoming.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said in an interview

Sunday on CBS's "Face the Nation" that the designation of a new prime minister "perhaps offers a more reasonable structure" for dealing with the crisis.

Other officials, who asked not to be identified, said the convening of a new parliament was equally important.

These officials agreed with a statement Sunday by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that the "hostage question was only vaguely related to the Shah."

The crisis will end, Kissinger said, "according to the internal dynamics of the Iranian revolution."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Talk of cutting taxes tied to political season

President Carter has tried to be firm in his resistance to tax-cut proposals, clinging to the idea that a balanced budget is the key to ending inflation.

But the president is rapidly giving in to Democratic leaders and the White House advisers who are of a different mind.

The jobless rate has jumped from 6.2 percent to 7.8 percent and an 8.5 percent rate has been predicted by late 1980. A tax cut designed to stimulate investment, production and jobs is a predictable election-year tactic.

Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation fighter, has conceded that a tax cut is "inevitable." A similar message has come from former Treasury secretaries Michael Blumenthal, a Democrat, and William Simon, a Republican. Former Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur Burns is urging a tax cut.

George Shultz, secretary of labor and secretary of the Treasury in the Nixon cabinet and now an adviser to GOP presidential nominee Ronald Reagan, has said a tax cut is essential. Reagan, joined by Republican leaders in Congress, recently called for a one-year version of the Kemp-Roth proposal.

Unfortunately the high-powered support for a cut in taxes does not extend to pleas for an infusion of funds into the big-spending welfare programs or public works projects or other make-work programs.

The goal of a balanced budget remains valid. That means a tax cut must be offset by cuts in spending — at least, in the short term. The proclaimed reduction in the annual rate of inflation from 18 percent to 12 percent was attained through tight credit policies and high interest that discouraged consumer spending, but inflation's fires still burn.

A tax cut seems certain. Whether the certainty is good or bad depends on a number of factors, including the size of the cut and the probable beneficiaries. The bid to restore lost jobs must not be allowed, however, to permit a resumption of the runaway cost-of-living.

The delicate task of attacking unemployment and inflation simultaneously cannot be undertaken recklessly. In a presidential election year, there is every likelihood that politics will prevail over the truth of that statement.

The politics of deprogramming

It is becoming increasingly popular to label nontraditional religions as cults. Such labeling makes unorthodox religious groups the objects of fear and distrust, linking them to insane criminal gangs like that of Charles Manson. While a certain degree of caution is justified when dealing with unfamiliar religious organizations, there is no justification for the violation of the religious freedom of the members of these groups. And that is just what is being done in the name of fighting the "cults."

One of the more blatant infringements on the rights of members of nontraditional religious groups is "deprogramming." Deprogramming is a fancy word for kidnapping and assault. Parents, disturbed by finding their children involved in something they don't approve, hire goons to forcibly detain their off-spring and convince them to change their way of thinking. They don't let go until their views change. It would be bad enough if these tactics were used only against minors, but some of the people being kidnapped — for their own good, of course — are adults.

Most of this kidnapping has been perpetrated against members of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church and Hare Krishna devotees. Although these two religious organizations appear freakish, their appearance has no bearing on the rights of the individuals to choose their religion. The claim that people do not have the right to join weird religious groups is on its face an attack on freedom of religion.

But deprogramming has not been restricted to members of nontraditional groups. The Alliance for Preservation of Religious Liberty, an organization formed in response to attacks on the so-called cults, claims deprogrammers have also kidnapped charismatic Catholic and Protestant church members. APRL describes one Catholic girl who was dragged "kicking and screaming" from a Catholic community in Bethany, Canada. She was 21 years old.

The principle behind deprogramming is false; the practice is dangerous. Deprogrammers claim members of religious sects have lost their ability to make rational decisions and are little more than zombies. The only way to restore the "cultist" to rationality, according to deprogrammers, is to free him from his religious environment so he can think rationally again. "Rationally" is defined, of course, as whatever the person paying the deprogrammer — usually a parent — thinks is rational. Once captured by a deprogrammer the victim is certainly not free to make decisions. Consequently, it is the deprogrammer and not the religious sect that is involved in brainwashing. It is a degrading and psychologically harmful process.

Deprogramming was carried to its logical extreme recently when the mother of a left-of-center political activist in San Francisco reportedly hired a deprogrammer to kidnap her daughter to cure her of her political beliefs, which are not so different from those of many people who live in San Francisco. Her mother claimed her daughter had quit thinking and was focused entirely on "propagandistic politics." The daughter is 35 years old and teaches at a community college. The mother comes from a small town in Pennsylvania.

Kidnapping in the name of deprogramming is wrong and should not be tolerated. It is a vicious violation of the rights of the individual to make religious decisions. Indeed, as the Pennsylvania mother probably hasn't thought through, deprogramming has much in common with left-of-center politics.

Women are today's revolutionaries

By Oscar Cooley

My mother never thought of such a thing as getting a job. Today, 50 percent of American wives have jobs outside the home. In 80 years there has been a revolutionary change. It is rocking the United States, even the world.

Nobody foresaw this revolution, nobody willed it. It grew, I think, out of technology.

At the turn of the century, the typical American family was far more self-sustaining than it is now. It produced much of what it consumed. It handled much less money, and so there was less need to work outside the home and earn money.

Mother cooked on a wood stove. The same stove heated her wash water and her flatirons. When the living room got cold, she went to the woodshed for a chunk.

A first step in the revolution was the piping of natural gas into people's homes. As a fuel it is incredibly more convenient than either wood or coal. But it had to be paid for with money.

We used kerosene lamps to light our home. They had to be cleaned, trimmed, and kept filled with kerosene. Then the electric line came past the house and we had electric lights — and another monthly bill.

The most complicated machine in our house was Mother's sewing machine, which she operated with a foot treadle. When we got electric lights, we also got an electric sewing machine. Ditto washing machine. And vacuum cleaner. All these added the monthly energy bill.

Soon there was no more ice to carry; an electric refrigerator had arrived. Some time later there came a freezer. Now the women folks quit canning, with all its boiling and sterilizing, and put the beans and berries in the freezer. Fresh meat, too. What a revolution when we could have steak and chops, killed in midwinter, to eat all midsummer. But the electric bill rose some more.

Mother used to make most of our clothing. One winter it was homemade overcoats, and every winter she knit me a pair of mittens. How many garments does a mother make today? Ask your Grandma if she can knit.

The automobile played a part in the revolution. Mothers always wanted to go to town oftener. By horse-and-buggy she went rarely, but her daughter went by automobile, and frequently. The town with all its attractive shops became familiar to her. There were so many things she could — and did — spend money for.

Then came radio, and in due time TV. These brought entertainment into the home, especially for the children. No longer did Mother have to read to the youngsters or teach them how to play Flinch. In fact, mothers began to wonder if they were necessary.

As the home functions of the women folk declined, the monetary cost of maintaining the home and bringing up the children increased. So it was natural for the women, released from the home work, to look for remunerative employments outside the home. They had the time, and they needed the money.

At the same time, many new potential jobs for women came into being. Expanding business firms required more typists and bookkeepers. The baby boom after World War II greatly increased the number of school children and so the demand for teachers. Women as well as men could serve hamburgers and French fries in the newly popular snack bars. Service jobs multiplied.

As women left the home for office, schoolroom, store and factory, it seems they felt called upon to justify their departure, and so arose the women's rights movement, ERA, and the stew over abortion. These issues did not start the revolution; they were by-products. It will go right on whether ERA becomes law or not.

Activists in these areas thought they saw their sex being emancipated. Others were surprised to be told they had been living in slavery.

Most of the women did not bother to justify their actions; they just went ahead and got a job. They enjoyed the new way of life, and their husband enjoyed adding their earnings to his and so relieving the ever-increasing strain that modern living puts on the family bank account.

One result of this revolution is that the family is becoming a looser institution, each member going her or his own way. Some say the family is disintegrating. Others say it cannot go wholly to pot because it is based on sex, which is a biological imperative. Surely it is less secure than it was back there when it was largely self-sustaining and "unemployment" had not been discovered.

But perhaps life is also less dull, more varied and stimulating. Certainly, when one chooses to return to the horse-and-buggy way of life, he gets his picture in the paper.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, July 28th, the 210th day of 1980. There are 156 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1914, World War I began as the Austro-Hungarian Empire declared war on Serbia.

On this date: —In 1821, Peru proclaimed its independence from Spain.

—In 1896, a Florida town with a population of less than 300 was incorporated — Miami.

—In 1945, 13 people were killed when a U.S. Army bomber crashed into the Empire State Building in New York City.

—In 1973, three astronauts were launched into space from Cape Kennedy to link up with the orbiting "Skylab" space station. They spent nearly two months in orbit.

—Ten years ago: Dr. Thomas Paine left his post as head of NASA to return to the General Electric Co.

—Five years ago: Senior Turkish officials said some U.S. bases in Turkey would remain closed even if Congress ultimately lifted an arms embargo.

—One year ago: President Carter tapped former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu as the new secretary of housing and urban development. Portland, Ore., Mayor Neil Goldschmidt was named secretary of transportation.

Today's birthdays: Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis is 51. Deep sea explorer Jacques Piccard is 58.

Thought for today: Beware of little expenses. A small leak will sink a great ship. — Benjamin Franklin, U.S. statesman (1706-1790).

1. True or False: The American flag flies over the Senate wing of the U.S. Capitol building every day of the year.
2. Montana is known as (a) The Coyote State (b) The Mountain State (c) The Treasure State
3. At least seven languages or dialects are spoken in the People's Republic of China. Can you name the official language?

ANSWERS

1. False. It's only displayed when the Senate is in session.
2. c. Mandarin Chinese

Tomorrow won't wait

by Paul Harvey

Less than a hundred years ago there were bitter disputes and angry protest demonstrations in our nation over electricity.

In the news media and in the streets there were vehement objections to stringing electric wires which "might kill people."

Ordinances were passed in many cities and towns forbidding stringing electric wires which might cause deaths and fires.

And the controversy raged for 10 years — while Americans continued to incinerate themselves and their houses by burning candles.

Every innovation since the beginning of the industrial revolution has been frightening to some. The most fearful are often the least informed.

This awareness led anthropologist Robert Briggault to lose faith in the democratic process and to become a communist. Cynically, he concluded, "Not one man in ten thousand is entitled to his opinion." The age of the atom was conceived in clandestine trust and born in the belly of a devastating bomb. Nuclear energy is as mysterious now as was alternating current 90 years ago. Each having been proved deadly dangerous, neither would be trusted for a generation. Evolution, at its most accelerated pace, is agonizingly gradual.

But this time we haven't time to wait. Nuclear energy had been harnessed to provide 13 percent of our nation's electrical needs. In some cities, like Chicago, 50 percent. And entirely safely.

But then came the media-magnified false alarm over Three Mile Island and the scaremongers took to the streets.

The National Academy of Science is comprised of some of the most prestigious scientists in the world. The Academy has just completed a four-year study by 350 scientists, economists and environmentalists. Their conclusion: For the near term none of the exotic energy sources can produce enough energy fast enough to keep our nation's lights lit. We have no option but to rely on nuclear energy and coal.

Again, this is the consensus of our most learned scientists following an in-depth study.

Yet their significant report is drowned out by the protests of pettifoggers who use rock musicians to gather crowds with whom they can share their limited learning and magnified fears. And utterly irresponsibly they can misuse the court process to paralyze huge power projects.

A very real and present danger has developed in the Persian Gulf. Oil is not worth going to war for and we don't have to.

With an all-out acceleration of production of nuclear energy and coal energy — while we prove and improve new energies — Americans can maintain our country's life support system.

If the scaredy-cats will desist from leading their lemmings into the sea. To paraphrase one of the ancients, "I could get ten thousand people out into the streets to demonstrate against popery and not three in the ten-thousand would know what it is."

Education and politics

By Anthony Harrigan

American public education is in decline. Though the federal government has been throwing money at school problems for more than a decade, standards of public education continue to fall. The emergence of numerous private and church-related schools is evidence of profound parent dissatisfaction with public elementary and high school systems.

One reason for this decline is that professionalism has given way to politics in so many aspects of public school operation. School administrators have to contend with a wide variety of federal requirements and pressures which have nothing to do with quality education. Schools are continually forced to adjust attendance districts to conform to the demands of protest organizations. Education goes by the wayside in this highly politicized process.

Another cause of the deterioration of public education is the transformation of the National Education Assn. into a full-fledged, politically oriented union. The NEA today is deeply involved in partisan politics. Again, education suffers. Teachers are conscripted into political activity with which they may disagree profoundly.

The Public Service Research Council recently described the abuse of union dues by the NEA. It pointed out that the NEA and its local affiliates are spending "what they estimated will be $2 million" on the reelection of President Carter. The Council notes that "This money will come out of the organization's budget which means it will come from dues dollars." The Council also reports that in the 17 states where it is legal, the NEA's affiliates negotiate contracts under which teachers are forced to pay a fee to the NEA as a condition of employment.

The Public Service Research Council has learned that the National Education Assn. "has a political army of 1,160 full time NEA staff in what they call Uniserv." Each agent is a highly trained professional organizer. A recent article in the Boston Globe, the Council states, says these agents are key workers in Mr. Carter's presidential campaign.

One wonders how teachers feel about this, especially those who have other political preferences. If they don't pay their dues, which are used for political purposes, they are in danger of losing their jobs.

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina has introduced legislation (Senate Bill 2325) which would prevent the use of compulsory union dues for political purposes. This is "must" legislation if citizens aren't to be compelled to support political activities of which they disapprove.

Beyond this, something needs to be done to rid the schools of an organization that is interested in promoting politicians. If there is to be a national association of teachers, it should be for the purpose of advancing learning.

If Johnny can't read, one reason may be that classroom issues have taken a back seat to politics.

Clever books motivate kids to read

By Betsy Hearne
American Library Assn.

It has come as a shock to many college teachers that their students can't read or write. For parents, it is even more frustrating to watch the family's pride and joy turn into a classroom failure. Most of the reading problems in this country, parents must realize, could be solved in the cradle.

Motivation is three-quarters of the battle. If friendship has already developed between child and book, there is no room for fear. Children who start out chewing on cloth books and following the illustrated story in picture books; children who have parents who take the time to read aloud every night will be readers, comfortable readers.

Rosemary Wells has developed a set of durable cardboard books — "Max's New Suit," "Max's Ride," "Max's Toys: A Counting Book" and "Max's First Word" (Dial Press, $2.95 each) — that are clever and funny instead of didactic and cutesy.

Though Max himself can't count he covets sister Ruby's ONE favorite doll while shunning his own TWO soldiers, house with THREE windows, etc. In the process of trying to teach her brother words beyond "bang," Ruby identifies for rapt listeners a host of familiar items. Max also asserts his toddler rights to put on clothes with illogical logic and takes a wild buggy ride DOWN, OVER, UP and UNDER. Max is just where he ought to be — in the center of his universe in these four 10-page, gay-colored, rip-proof books for ages 1 to 3 and older jealous siblings.

Similarly, Shigeo Watanabe in "How Do I Put It On?" (Collins, $6.98) appeals to the very youngest book lovers with how-to advice to a lovable main character. The subject is learning to dress oneself, and to this end a bear in the throes of acquiring the necessary skills makes, first, a silly, wrong guess, then a right one. He shows us his efforts with shirt, pants, cap and shoes while asking, "Do I put it on like this?" Children will chime in with the bear's answers. Soon second-guessing becomes a rewarding game during inevitably requested re-readings. Illustrations are large, in color, and uncluttered.

Preschoolers beginning to learn the names of animals will find Roger Bester's "Guess What?" (Crown, $6.95) a visual romp. For each of the seven animals (horse, pig, cow, duck, chicken, squirrel and seagull), a three-line, two-picture clue asks, for example, "What has a bushy tail, likes to eat nuts, and lives in a tree?" This is followed by a two-page spread — in this case, a squirrel perched in the branches — that depicts the animal as a small figure in its larger environment, and, finally, a full-page, identified close-up of the creature in question.

Even more far-reaching is Yvonne Russell's "Words in My World: The I Can Look It Up Book" (Rand McNally, $5.95). More than 300 common words, familiar to a child, are gathered in 19 recognizable groups such as family and friends, house, playthings, zoo, space, numbers and colors, farm animals and clothing. They are humorously depicted in animal-filled scenes in which the words play an important role. The beginning two-page spread, for example, focuses on "me," and 16 words (arm, face, mouth, toes) are listed with their visual counterparts.

PEOPLE

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Is it against the law for a husband and wife to appear in public — restaurants, shopping, etc. — the husband dressed as a woman, and the wife dressed as a man?

Paul and I are both normal in every sense of the word. It all started this way: I am 5 foot 11, and Paul is 5 foot 5. We are as compatible as two people can be, but we have always felt somewhat conspicuous in public. For that reason, I stopped wearing heels.

One day I bought some women's Wedgie shoes in Paul's size and gave them to him. He tried them on, found them to be very comfortable and was delighted with the extra height they provided. After wearing these Wedgies a few times, he wanted another pair. Now he refuses to wear anything else. Just for fun, I put some makeup on him and got him a woman's wig, and we went to dinner that way. We loved it! Then I started to dress like a man, and now we do it all the time. I assure you we are sexually normal. My husband dresses as a man for work. We switch roles for fun only when we go out.

Someone told me that this is against the law. Is it? J.J.

DEAR J.J.: What is legal in one community may be illegal in another. In some places, cross-dressing is considered "masquerading" — or deliberately attempting to conceal one's identity, which could conceivably be against the law. Play it safe and consult a local lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letters concerning having gold removed from a person's mouth after death. I specialize in reconstructive dentistry, and it is not uncommon to use between 2 and 3 ounces of gold in an individual's mouth. Many patients have taken to the grave enough gold to pay for the funeral. However, I've been torn over a decision to mention this to my patients for fear they might find it objectionable, or look upon it as a desecration of the body.

I know that not all dentists feel as I do, but I would be perfectly willing to accommodate a bereaved spouse or the kin of a loved one by performing this kind of dentistry. FLORIDA D.D.S.

DEAR D.D.S.: You claim the distinction of being the only dentist among my readers to make such an offer. Congratulations. I was informed by others in your profession that getting a dentist to perform this type of surgery would be "like pulling teeth."

DEAR ABBY: I'm happy for that woman with multiple sclerosis who was carried up five flights of stairs in a Japanese temple and on and off airplanes by a husband who not once hinted that being married to a disabled woman was at times inconvenient.

I wasn't that lucky. After I got M.S. and became less able to function, my husband divorced me and left me with two teen-agers to raise alone.

Unusual? Not really. Statistics show that approximately 80 percent of the women with M.S. end up divorced, as compared to 15 percent when the husband develops it. That doesn't say much for the American male, does it?

It's good to know that the words "in sickness and in health" actually mean something to some people, but as for me, so do the words...

FROBISHER BAY, Northwest Territories (AP) — "Inuit" means "the people" and has recently become more preferred than "Eskimo," which means "eater of raw meat." The Inuit language is called Inuktitut.

YVONNE DEL BOSQUE, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abelino del Bosque Jr. of Pampa, is one of 15 young women entered in the Miss Top O' Texas pageant. Miss del-Bosque, who is sponsored by Citizen's Bank & Trust, will perform a dance number during the talent portion of the pageant.

"Sentimental Journey" theme of pageant

"Sentimental Journey" will be the colorful theme of the third annual Miss Top O' Texas scholarship pageant to be staged Aug. 16 in the M.K. Brown auditorium.

The pageant is sponsored by the retail trade committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. The winner of this year's pageant will be awarded scholarships as well as the right to represent Pampa in the Miss Texas pageant.

Tickets for the Texas pageant can be obtained from the contestants or their sponsoring organizations. Ron Graves, pageant director, said the show is designed to depict the poise, grace and beauty of the contestants who are seeking the Miss Top O' Texas title. It will be a show designed to please the audience.

Graves noted that Marie McLaughlin, popular ventriloquist and former Miss Pennsylvania, will be mistress of ceremonies. She and her dummy, Timothy, will entertain the audience during the pageant.

Terry Eoff, the newly crowned Miss Texas, will make an appearance and perform the dramatization that won her the Miss Texas crown.

The 15 contestants will compete in private interview, evening gown, swimsuit and talent divisions.

Premature infant doing "just fine"

When Monica Johnson was born May 22, she weighed only 3 pounds 15 ounces. She was six weeks premature and had to spend three weeks in the intensive care unit for infants at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

During the time Monica was in intensive care, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Johnson of Pampa, visited her almost every day. Mrs. Johnson says, "If it wasn't for that place in Amarillo, she might not have made it. They were really good to her."

After they brought Monica home from the hospital, the Johnsons watched her body temperature closely and were especially careful when burping her. Because Monica's head had been shaved to allow insertion of an IV, it was necessary to keep her head covered.

Monica's sister, Christina, celebrates her first birthday today. Although Christina was carried to term, she too, was a tiny baby. She weighed 4 pounds 9 ounces at birth.

Christina was jealous of Monica at first, but now she "really likes" the new baby. Mrs. Johnson has her hands full with two babies so close in age, especially now that Christina is learning how to walk.

New advice: dresses for success

NEW YORK (AP) — For the past few seasons, women striving for success in the business world have been advised to climb that corporate ladder clad in three-piece business suits and conservative colors that blend into the boardroom walls.

But now that women are solidly entrenched in the business world, they are breaking out of the suit mold and are secure enough to once again add dresses to their wardrobe and wear them to the office, says Jerry Silverman, president of the American Dress Council.

Silverman, who heads the organization made up of American fiber and textile companies, dress designers and manufacturers, has these suggestions for women who want to dress for success — with the emphasis on "dress":

Pick four or five basic dresses as the backbone of your wardrobe, preferably in fabrics that can wear year-round.

Keep the lines easy and uncomplicated. Simple lines allow you to do more with accessories.

Buy blazers and jackets in a variety of colors and fabrics. Have at least one white or beige blazer in both winter and summer fabrics. Neutral blazers can top both dresses and separates.

— Dress up your dresses with embroidered sweaters or cardigans.

— Buy vests in a variety of fabrics for every season of the year, using contrasting colors when you want a dramatic effect, or colors that blend with the dress for a more conservative look.

— Collect belts in every conceivable color and shape. A variety of looks can be achieved with the clever use of belts.

— Scarves also are marvelous accessories, especially the bright sari-prints that you can tie around your waist, as well as around your neck.

— Shawls, in myriad sizes, colors and fabrics, are great for achieving different looks. For summer, the simple cotton shawls in colorful floral prints are very striking tied around the shoulders. Wrap them around your waist for a more dramatic evening look. Wool shawls, which you can wear over blazers as well as over the dress itself, are wonderful for air-conditioned offices or cool evenings.

— No need to forsake your skirts or tunics. Try wearing a belted tunic or a wrap skirt over your dresses. Tunics work especially well with strapless dresses that are too bare for the office, but just right for evening.

— Don't forget the importance of shoes in achieving a variety of looks. Wear pumps, boots or sandals for the office, then change into sexy spaghetti-strapped spikes for evenings.

Relief from recession was brief

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Political attempts to convince the American public that the worst of the recession is over is like trying to polish the floor without washing it first.

Maybe some people, for a day or so, did see the light of encouragement in statements from the White House and its advisers, but now Americans are again forced to look at the deep, dark and dirty realities.

The unemployment rate, which remained under 8 percent in July despite forecasts it would be much higher, is now being viewed as a statistical aberration resulting from a poorly designed seasonal adjustment factor.

The increase in June retail sales might have been a one-month affair that won't be repeated in coming months, various analysts are now saying. And, with money getting tighter again in some areas, some doubts are arising about the staying power of the housing recovery.

Consumer prices seem to be rising again. June prices rose a full 1 percent compared with 0.9 percent in April and May. And now food prices may be heading up, especially for beef and grains.

It appears also that wholesale price increases, after shrinking, will explode again, fueling even further increases in the consumer price index and assuring Americans of stiff inflation for months to come.

Business Week magazine quotes Donald J. Ratajczak of George State University as expecting the July figure will show an 18.2 percent annual rate, compared with just 6.4 percent for the second quarter.

That figure, coupled with higher jobless figures, can be expected to give such a dose of reality to Americans that political promises will be seen for what they are. Reality is the present, and it is grim.

Many economists think the immediate future — for the rest of the year, anyway — isn't much brighter. The car industry especially is in bad shape, and that automatically means certain other industries are too.

On the same day last week, General Motors, the world's largest manufacturer, reported a $412 million loss for the second quarter, its biggest quarterly loss ever. American Motors lost $85 million in the same quarter, and that too was its largest quarterly loss in history.

If the industry's woes were a consequence only of buyer resistance to prices, or buyer hesitation because of the recession, there wouldn't be much to worry about. Such problems correct themselves.

The automobile industry's problems are deeper than that, however. Its reputation for reliability has been undermined, and its styling decisions in recent years have been rejected.

Many potential buyers also are financially overextended, and thus are reluctant or unable to add further credit problems. And their reluctance to buy isn't diminished by high gasoline prices and taxes.

The economic floor is very dirty, and most Americans know it. They know it because, unlike some politicians who seem to float above realities in this political year, they are standing in the dirt on that floor.

Paperworkers reach agreement

TORONTO (AP) — A spokesman for the Canadian Paperworkers Union says negotiations for the union and Abitibi-Price Inc. have reached a tentative agreement that could end a three-week strike by more than 6,000 pulp and paper workers in three provinces.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said members will vote on the settlement Tuesday or Wednesday. He said details of the settlement reached Saturday will not be made public until after the vote.

The three-week strike in Ontario, Newfoundland and Quebec against the world's largest paper manufacturer involves demands for improved pensions, job security and a cost-of-living allowance.

Murray rejects mother's atheism

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — In a low-key five-minute talk that provided counterpoint to the sharp style of the church's preacher, William Murray rejected everything his mother taught him about religion.

The son of American's leading atheist activist was at the Central Assembly of God — speaking before its members and cameras — to say there is no life without God.

"Each day when I wake up I make sure I turn my will and my life over to the Lord. He has to sit on the throne," Murray said.

Murray, 34, chided his mother Madalyn Murray O'Hair's atheism as "negativism." He said he rejected her non-belief because of its "self-centeredness."

As a 16-year-old student in Baltimore, Murray was the plaintiff in his mother's suit that ended prayer in public school. Now, as a convert, he is fighting to return school prayer. He's apologizing for all he did to build his mother's Society of Separationists here.

"(Atheists) might as well be bears or chimpanzees or any other animal other than man that roams the face of the earth," he said.

Murray sang all the hymns Sunday. He also listened attentively as the Rev. Tom Wilson told the congregation that Murray used his new faith to escape alcoholism. "When God is at the center of the human universe then man needs to seek nothing. He has everything," Murray, a Houston aviation consultant, said at the first of two Sunday rallies.

"We can see what type of nations in the world have atheism as their dogma. They shoot men as they shoot animals," he said.

Ms. O'Hair, famous for her legal efforts to take God out of everyday life in the United States, has had little to say about her son's conversion.

Murray mentioned his mother by name only once at the first rally. He told of his efforts, while an atheist, to raise money for an X-ray machine for a hospital. He said his mother and other atheists wanted to use the money instead to sue the hospital because it had a religious name.

"I might as well have been stoned by the good Dr. O'Hair," he said.

In addition to preaching the Bible, Murray is urging political involvement by Christians.

"Christians, for some reason, don't vote," said Murray.

Rangers edge White Sox to gain twinbill split

CHICAGO (AP) — Texas Manager Pat Corrales threw his hands up in the air and said, "You figure Mickey Rivers out. I can't. Did you see him limping home with that run?"

Rivers did anything but limp when he scored from third on a shallow sacrifice fly by Jim Norris in the 13th inning to give the Rangers a 4-3 victory Sunday and a doubleheader split. Chicago won the first game 3-2.

Rivers did not start the second game because "he told me his leg was hurting," said Corrales. "His right leg. When you run like he does, your legs are supposed to hurt."

Rivers went into the second game in the 11th inning and got to bat in the 13th only to force Johnny Grubb, who had walked. Rivers then stole second, continued to third on catcher Rick Seilheimer's throwing error and scored on Norris' shallow fly to Chet Lemon in center.

"No doubt in my mind," said Rivers. "I was going. You can't even hesitate. You do what the situation calls for. When I was on first with one out, I had to steal so that we could get two pops at it."

Coach Jackie Moore, who in the ninth inning sent Jim Sundberg home on a fly ball to Harold Baines, only to have Sundberg doubled at the plate, said, "I would have thought twice in that situation about sending somebody else in. But not Rivers."

"The ball wasn't that deep but you had a good arm (Lemon) against a great runner. We tried it before with Sundberg and it didn't work. But we came out 1-of-2 and got the one that counted."

The White Sox trailed 3-1 in the second game when Wayne Nordhagen struck. He homered in the seventh and doubled in the ninth before Randy Johnson's sacrifice fly scored pinch runner Thad Bosley with the tying run. In the next four innings the White Sox put the leadoff man on base but failed to score.

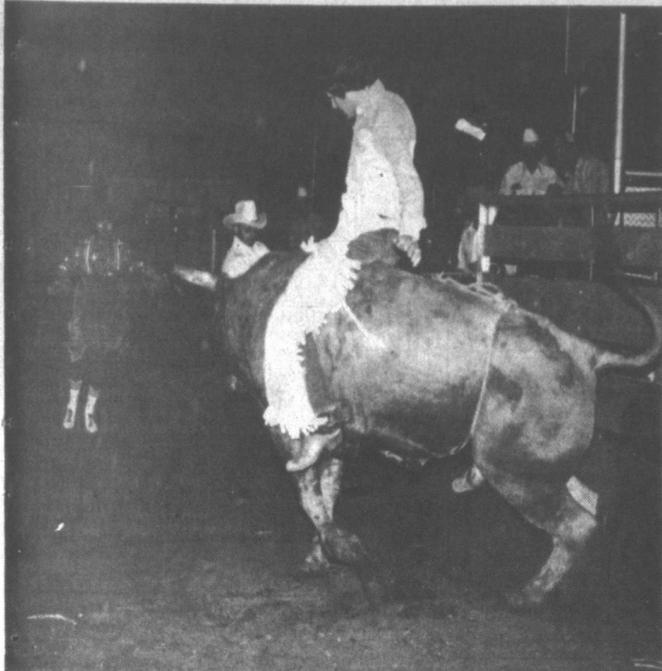

"We had our opportunities but couldn't score. What else can I say?" said Manager Tony LaRussa.

LaRussa did say that Steve Trout pitched well in the opener which the White Sox captured when Bobby Molinaro doubled with two outs in the sixth inning to score Greg Pryor with the winning run.

"I would have liked to have had a complete game," said Trout. "I know they got 11 hits but most of them were cheapies and they scored two runs without getting the ball out of the infield."

The two runs came on an infield single by Al Oliver who had four hits in the opener and also drove in two runs in the nightcap with a sacrifice fly and a single.

Both teams are off Monday and can use the rest considering they played 46 innings over the weekend.

BULLS VESUS COWBOYS wound up with the bull winning when Brad Mathis, above, Pampa cowboy drew a rough one in the final performance of the 21st Annual White Deer Rodeo Saturday night. JERRY BRAZILE aboard a tough 3M bull called Snoopy, was one of the over two dozen bull riders entered in the White Deer Rodeo. The 21st annual show drew record-breaking crowds during its three-night schedule. A barbecue Thursday preceded the first performance of the show which brought rodeo fans from across the area with standing-room - only available for all performances. Davis, Moreland win singles titles

Joe Davis and Nancy Moreland were the winners in the Pampa Singles Tournament last weekend at the high school courts.

Davis defeated Dan Pendleton, 6-2, 6-3, to win the men's title and Moreland downed Elaine Eddins, 6-4, 6-1, to claim the women's crown.

In quarterfinal action in the men's division, Davis stopped Gary Oateman, 7-5, 6-2; Sam Gilbert defeated Paul Skoog, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3; Bob Adcock won over Don Carter, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4, and Pendleton defeated James Moreland, 6-2, 6-0.

Davis faced Gilbert in the semi-finals and it turned out to be his toughest match. Davis won 7-5, 7-6, and Pendleton def. Bob Adcock, 6-2, 6-3, in the other semi-final match.

Moreland defeated Skoog, 6-3, 6-4, for consolation.

In the women's division, Eddins turned back Carolyn Wingham, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, in the semi-finals.

Debbie Martinak defeated Kay Haveriah, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 in the consolation finals. Haveriah defeated Ruby Adcock, 6-3, 6-4, in the consolation semi-finals.

Two weeks from now, the Pampa Tennis Club will sponsor a doubles tournament for men and women. There will be both A and B divisions.

More tournament information will be printed in a later issue of the Pampa News.

South edges North in all-star grid contest

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — There was a lack of point production on the field and attendance in the stands when the South defeated the North 7-6 in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game.

And as TSHCA officials reviewed figures from Saturday night's money-losing show, they were more concerned with finances than with points on the scoreboard.

"I'm really mystified," said Donald Jay, assistant to the THSCA executive vice president. "I don't know if there's anything that can be done about the attendance problems."

Jay said last year's All-Star games in Fort Worth lost an estimated $8,000 and this year's results would be no different.

Saturday night's crowd of 11,624 at the All-Star football game was the lowest attendance since 1967. Friday night's basketball game, won by the North 89-86 in a game that produced 71 turnovers, drew the lowest attendance since 1960 with 4,800.

"This football game used to signify the start of high school football in Texas, but it doesn't anymore," Jay said.

Despite the decline in attendance at the All-Star games, the 48th annual coaching school had a record 7,464 coaches registered.

Jay pointed out, however, that the coaches received free tickets to the All-Star games and estimated only one half of Saturday's football crowd was paid admissions.

It was the third straight 7-6 final score, but South Coach Oscar Cripps of Houston Stratford did not concede the low scores meant a lack of talent.

"Both sides had fine football teams that made big plays when they needed them," Cripps said. "Big plays are what determines if there is talent on the field."

LaPorte's Ricki Byars, Aldine Eisenhower's Paul Goodie and Robert Paweleck of Falls City provided the big scoring plays for the Rebels.

Byars completed the winning touchdown drive with a 9-yard touchdown run with 2:20 left to play and Paweleck added the game-winning extra point.

The North had taken a 6-0 halftime lead on a 25-yard touchdown pass from Highland Park's Lance McIlhenny to McKinney's Jamie Harris with six seconds left in the half.

Goodie blocked the extra point to provide the South's winning margin.

Bobby Micho of Austin Anderson, who ignited the winning drive with a 29-yard run, was named the Most Valuable Back for the South, while Goodie and Gregory-Portland's Tommy Robison shared the Most Valuable Lineman honors.

Harris, who caught four passes for 65 yards, was the North's Most Valuable Back and Tyler John Tyler's Keith Guthrie earned the lineman honors.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 25, 1980
 Be very patient this coming year in enterprises you regard as a second source of earnings. Your prospects look hopeful, but they may be tardy in coming to fruition.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Whether it is while shopping or doing business, be careful today or you may buy something you believe is a bargain that in reality is a white elephant. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It may be wise today to keep your opinions to yourself, especially if you are bucking the majority. Nothing is likely to be resolved through debate or argument.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're pretty good today at finding excuses to put off work until tomorrow. This is a bad day to sweep things under the rug.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're entitled to relax and have a good time today, but be very careful how you conduct yourself. Your social image could easily be tarnished.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Attempting to stretch the rules to suit your purposes could get you in a bit of trouble today. Go by the book in all instances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Know what you're talking about today. Opinions or views you express are apt to be challenged. Unless you have facts to back you up, you may be embarrassed.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be careful in joint ventures today, especially if they could cost you something out of your own pocket. Mistakes may be more costly than usual.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be cooperative today, but don't make lopsided compromises that could go against either party's best interests. Bad deals won't hold up.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Treating your responsibilities indifferently today could later cause you serious problems. Do what's expected of you. Better yet, do more.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Friends will appreciate you more today if you are just yourself and eliminate all forms of pretense. Hotdogging it will have a reverse effect.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take nothing for granted in competitive situations today. You may feel you have the upper hand, but you could be in for some surprises.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Subdue impulses today to exaggerate a bit in order to impress another. You'll make more of an impact if you play it as it is.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Rock Hudson has been released from a Los Angeles hospital following a week-long treatment for a viral illness, his doctors said.

A doctor at the Los Angeles New Hospital, who asked not to be named, said the actor was "doing very well." He said Hudson, 54, had suffered from fever and possible flu, but that his admission to the hospital last Monday had been merely precautionary.

Hudson was hospitalized after returning from Europe, where he filmed his latest movie, Agatha Christie's "The Mirror Crack'd."

With more than 60 movies to his credit, the tall, ruggedly handsome Hudson established himself as a perennial box-office attraction during the 1950s and 1960s with comedies such as "Pillow Talk" and "Lover, Come Back."

His dramatic films include "Giant," for which he won an Academy Award nomination in 1956. He starred in the successful "McMillan & Wife" mystery-comedy-television series from 1971 to 1976.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Leif Garrett says he doesn't want to go to war and kill somebody — "that's not in my nature." But "I hate the Iranians so much that I would go to war against them tomorrow."

The young rock singer went to the New York General Post Office on Sunday to register for the Selective Service System. But he arrived too late, and now plans to register on Tuesday in Miami, before a concert.

"I don't want to go to war," he said. "I don't believe in killing. But I would go to war tomorrow over Iran. I hate them for what they did to our hostages."

Garrett said he believes each person should make up his own mind about the draft, but said women should not be drafted.

"I can't tell anyone what to do, but I'm going to register," he said. "I have mixed emotions...I believe I should do something for my country, but when you ask me to kill somebody, then I wonder if the draft is right."

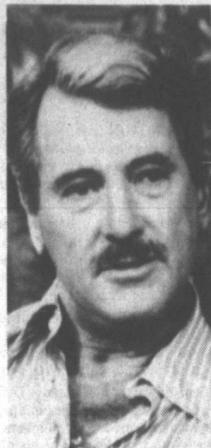

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't a performance of "Camelot," or even a good British game of cricket. But actor Richard Burton still morning to put on a kingly show on the softball field.

Burton, returning to his role as King Arthur in this year's revival of the musical, traded Excalibur for a softball bat and showed up Sunday at Shea Stadium to cheer the Broadway Show League All-Stars in their battle with the Albany Maulers.

"I know the Mets are having problems with injuries," the Welsh-born actor told Mets manager Joe Torre. "I understand because I've had the same problem."

And in response to a query from Tom Seaver, now with the Cincinnati Reds, he said, "I have a pinched nerve but still have about 42 weeks of 'Camelot' to do yet." Burton also suffers from bursitis of the right shoulder.

Detained Cubans escape, bid for freedom fails

EL PASO (AP) — Four Cuban refugees were back in a government detention center today, after their brief bid for freedom failed, federal officials said.

The four men, transferred to the Immigration and Naturalization Service medium-security detention center June 7, escaped Sunday morning but were recaptured by INS guards within minutes, said INS regional deportation officer Robert Lally.

Three of the men were caught just outside the center and the fourth was stopped as he tried to leave, Lally said. The escapees were identified as Antonio Mendoza, Jorge Alvarez, Pedro Hernandez and Daniel Vega, part of a group of 60 Cuban refugees moved to the El Paso center after a June 1 riot among refugees at the huge detention compound in Fort Chaffee, Ark.

The four men were first taken to the El Paso County Jail for safe keeping, and were released to the custody of INS officers late Sunday night, Lally said.

Escaped jail inmate surrenders to police

SAN ANGELO (AP) — One of two San Angelo city jail inmates, mistakenly released Saturday after a jailer received bogus telephone instructions, turned himself in Sunday night after the other inmate was captured earlier in the day.

Dwight Dewayne "D.D." King, 27, called police Sunday night offering to give himself up. He was apprehended about 9:30 p.m., said Police Chief Travis Johnson.

Alfonso Valadez, 23, was recaptured by police at 3:15 a.m. Sunday at a residence in town.

The two were set free about 5 p.m. Saturday when the jailer received a telephone call from people masquerading as Justice of the Peace Jerry Jennison and Police Captain Ralph Englert, Johnson said.

Valadez, who was being held on criminal trespassing and burglary charges, was recaptured on additional charges of criminal trespassing and possession of marijuana. Bond on the burglary had been set at $5,000.

King was being held on a rape warrant and three traffic charges. He was jailed on a charge of rape by force on evidence compiled during investigation of a complaint filed by an 18-year-old San Angelo woman. His bond was set at $25,000.

The police chief said the plot apparently started about 4 p.m. Saturday when King reportedly told the new, part-time jailer that Jennison was going to have him released. Someone soon called claiming to be Jennison and said that Englert would call.

A man who identified himself as Englert then called the jailer a few minutes later and instructed him to release King and Valadez. When the jailer told the man he wasn't following proper procedure, Johnson said the man replied, "I don't have to have procedures. I'm the captain."

Honeymoon at hospital

MONROE, La. (AP) — David Neal and Kathy Graves are honeymooning in room 675 of the hospital where they were married during the weekend.

It took Neal all day to dress for the wedding Saturday, helping to wrestle a gray pinstripe suit over the casts that have covered his body since a tractor fell on him a month ago.

"He proposed to me last Sunday, and so we decided to go ahead and get married here at the hospital," the new Mrs. Neal said after the ceremony in the auditorium at St. Francis Medical Center.

"He'll be going to a rehabilitation center in Denver in August and I thought it would be better if we were married when I went with him." Neal's back and face were crushed in the accident June 24, and Mrs. Neal said the wires that have held his jaw shut since then were removed especially for the wedding.

He proposed by writing a note. Traditionally enough, it asked, "Will you marry me?" The two had dated for about six months before Neal's accident, and Mrs. Neal has spent every night since then at the hospital, learning how to help him make a comeback.

"We had been talking about marriage before, but nothing definite," Mrs. Neal said. "Some of my relatives have asked me if I'm sure I want to marry him right now because of the accident. But the things and qualities I like most about David are not his legs or if he can walk. My life's been so much better with David. He's good, just a good man."

Dallas banker kills two, self

DALLAS (AP) — A bank officer who mistakenly believed his estranged wife was having an affair with another man shot and killed both of them, told his mother what he had done and then committed suicide Sunday, police said.

Dallas homicide investigator Linda Fulghum said the first indication police had of the bizarre incidents was a report that Nancy Patrick, 33, had been shot at a busy Dallas intersection.

Nurse killed at home of former mental patient

DALLAS (AP) — A former mental patient has been arrested for investigation of the murder, at his apartment, of a nurse who once helped treat him, police said.

Officers said Janice Ballew, 28, was shot at least four times with a high-powered rifle. She was a registered nurse at the psychiatric ward of Baylor Hospital and met the arrested man while he was in the ward for treatment, said police detective G.R. Robinson.

Two sheriff's deputies were dispatched to the man's North Dallas home after receiving a call from the man's attorney. Police said the man had called his uncle who then called the lawyer.

The deputies said they found the 40-year-old man in the apartment, holding a hunting rifle, and talked him into surrendering.

Inside, they said, was the nude body of Miss Ballew. The police report said she was carrying her clothes and purse and was trying to leave the apartment when she was shot in the head and back.

Heating oil spill dissipating

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — No cleanup will be needed after a 4,000-barrel spill of heating oil in the Gulf of Mexico, authorities say. A thin oil sheen about two miles square was all that remained Sunday of the spill, and the Coast Guard said it did not even check it after a morning flyover.

The spill occurred when the tanker Exxon Houston, bound for the Northeast, was struck and punctured early Saturday by an unidentified submerged object, Exxon officials said.

The incident occurred several miles off Southwest Pass, the southernmost entrance of the Mississippi River into the Gulf of Mexico, the Coast Guard said.

"We had a flight go up this morning, and based on that aerial observation that the sheen had dissipated considerably in the water," said Exxon spokesman Ed Burwell.

"There is only a very light sheen — which is the lightest classification the Coast Guard uses — and no cleanup activities appear to be necessary," Burwell said.

The sheen is still 15 miles from the nearest land and appeared to be dissipating. Burwell said the balance of the oil in the Exxon Houston's damaged compartment was being transferred to a fuel barge. Once the transfer was complete, Burwell said, company officials would decide where to send both tanker and barge.

Oilman looks for Titanic

ABILENE (AP) — Wealthy Texas oilman Jack Grimm, who likes to spend his money looking for strange things, is at it again. This time, he's trying to find the Titanic.

Grimm left home Saturday to join an expedition looking for the wreckage of the supposedly unsinkable ocean liner that rammed an iceberg in the North Atlantic and sank in 1912.

It's not the first time he has invested a chunk of his sizeable fortune in what others might consider frivolous ventures. His past escapades have included a scientific search in Scotland for the Loch Ness monster and a trip to British Columbia to find Big Foot.

For his latest venture, Grimm has outfitted a ship, the H.J.H. Fay, which began its mission Saturday after several days in port at Bermuda.

"The ship was stuck in port with equipment difficulties... and the crew toiled 20 hours a day to integrate the massive amount of electronic equipment needed for the search," he said.

The search will begin 380 miles southeast of Newfoundland. Grimm said he expects the H.J.H. Fay to be there by Wednesday.

It is equipped with four computers, three sophisticated sonar trackers and seven closed-circuit television systems. The search team is prepared to spend 30 days looking for the underwater hulk, but Grimm thinks it will take 10 days or less.

"Raise the Titanic," a fictionalized movie account of an expedition similar to Grimm's, is to be released in August.

The wealthy Texan likes to gamble on adventure. "And I love a good game of poker."

Carter faces twin trials over Billy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, at a time when he could well have been looking forward to a triumphant Democratic National Convention, this week faces twin threats stemming from the conduct of his brother Billy that could turn the convention into a personal disaster.

A special Senate subcommittee opens an investigation Tuesday into Billy Carter's dealings with Libya and the president himself could be called to testify. At the very least, the probe will raise embarrassing questions about the president's brother — and the president's administration.

At the same time, several dozen members of Congress are continuing efforts toward holding an "open" Democratic convention, a move that could deny Carter the renomination he seemed to have so firmly in grasp only a week ago.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Sunday he continues to favor an open convention, but presidential spokesman Jody Powell cautioned Democratic members of Congress against judging the president's troubles with brother Billy until all the facts are in.

President Carter has promised the nine-member Senate panel full cooperation. Billy Carter and his wife, Sybil, reportedly left Georgia for Washington on Sunday and plan to remain in the capital until its investigation is completed.

Billy Carter, whose irreverent comments and once-fabled penchant for beer drinking have been troublesome to the president in the past, has developed into much more than a mere embarrassment since he was forced by the Justice Department to register as a foreign agent of Libya.

The president's brother has acknowledged receiving a $220,000 installment on what he described as a $500,000 loan from the Libyan government, and questions have arisen over the behavior of the White House and Justice Department in the handling of the matter.

In an interview on ABC's "Issues and Answers," Kennedy proposed a 24-hour postponement of a convention fight over his challenge to a rule that would require convention delegates to vote on the first nominating ballot for the candidate they were pledged to support.

The rule would guarantee Carter's renomination, because he already has 1,981 delegate votes, with 1,666 required for nomination.

Powell said on CBS "Face the Nation" that there was "no reason" for the president to release his convention delegates, as the dissident congressional Democrats are urging.

The president's chief spokesman predicted that when all is known about Billy Carter's relationship with Libya, "the conclusion will be reached that the president and the administration conducted themselves in a way that was right and proper."

Republican candidate Ronald Reagan and independent John Anderson have not been pushing the Billy affair, meanwhile, assuming correctly that it would simmer to a boil by itself.

Anderson was in Chicago today for strategy and fund-raising meetings. Reagan, whose own troubles over his choice of a vice presidential candidate seem to have melted in the face of the Billy affair, was off the campaign trail in California.
