NEXT STEP IN BUILDING NEW PLANT TAKEN

City Engineer Stine Submits Estimate of Cost for Study of Soil, Nearby Buildings for U. S.

TO BE THOROUGH

Allowing of Only 15 Days For Work Is Taken to Indicate Desire for Speed In Project.

More action on Pampa's federal building was taken yesterday when C. L. Stine, city engineer, submitted his bid to Washington for the making of a topographical survey and soil investigation of the lot purchased for the new building.

"I believe the postal authorities will take quick action on the building," Postmaster D. E. Cecil said this morning. "They give only 15 days to complete the various surveys and it is customary to allow at least 30 days for each step in the development of the building program," he declared.

Orders regarding the work to be done by the city engineer covered eight pages. Photographs of the lot and surrounding buildings must be submitted with a history of the construction of each building and the condition of the buildings regarding aging.

Particular care is to be taken in the data on soil. A hole ten feet deep and six feet wide must be dug and each foot minutely described. A hole five feet below the ten-foot hole is to be dug with a posthole digger and that soil tested. Corners are to be marked and a history of the surrounding territory made.

A report of the engineer's report will be sent to every contractor bidding for the job so that he will know the earth formations. A letter accompanying the orders to the engineer state that it will be necessary to give information regarding the foundation necessary for a two-story building under nonhandic conditions.

"I believe the new federal building will be two stories," the postmaster said. "Earlier I was of the belief that a one-story building would be all Pampa would get," he said.

Murder Verdict In Texas Death

PORT ARTHUR, Sept. 22. (AP)—Justice B. H. Wiley returned a verdict of murder against "persons or person unknown" today in the death of B. R. Holstein, 40, who was found shot to death in his burning home here yesterday.

As detectives sought to fix the hour of Holstein's death by returning to discovery of fire in his bachelor apartment, county investigators were probing the story of Mrs. Frances Trotter, 29-year-old divorcee who said she was with the slain man up until 10:10 p. m. Sunday night. So far as known, she was the last person to see Holstein alive.

"We had been on a week end trip to Houston," she told police. "And he left me at my home. I picked him up when he was going to his office or to his apartment, but I guess he didn't hear me for he didn't answer my question."

Holstein was found in his blazing bed yesterday by firemen. He had been shot once through the left side of his head.

FLOOD AREA IS TOUCHING

Lindberghs See People on House Tops With No Means of Rescue.

NANKING, China, Sept. 21. (AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed on today here at a point north of a big Central China flood area. They were the first to land since the flood broke out last night.

They discovered a badly flooded area hereabouts unknown to the National Flood Relief commission. The rescue team, including Lindbergh, during his last survey flight, declared to have been nearly successful, were turned over to the flood relief commission for use in its operations.

As during yesterday's flight, which covered virtually each of the central of the big flood area, Lindbergh and his party, including Lindbergh, during his last survey flight, declared to have been nearly successful, were turned over to the flood relief commission for use in its operations.

Lindbergh and the flood water, released more than a month ago when dykes along the Grand Canal burst, were receding over much of the territory covered today. He said he and Mrs. Lindbergh were deeply moved at the sight of refugees still clinging to the roof of their poor homes, with water lapsing all about them, and to the means of escape or communication with the outside.

Most of the crops of Kansu province have been destroyed by the floods, Lindbergh said. He pointed out that even if there is an early recession of the floods, the harvests of 1931 are lost.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15. (NEA)—President Hoover, one of the more frank and realistic dry leaders remarks to your correspondent, will have to depend on the dries for his reelection.

The dry organizations, he adds, accept the responsibility, but none too cheerfully. They will naturally go right down the line for Hoover because his attitude on prohibition and enforcement has been entirely satisfactory to them, but there is a sad lack of serene confidence among them that factors outside the wet-dry fight can be kept from complicating the issue.

Consequently, this informant continues, there will be a terrific effort in next year's campaign to maintain dry strength in congress. The dries feel that while the election of a wet president would break their hearts the election of a wet congress would ruin them completely.

Every dry believes his side would easily win any clean-cut national contest with the wets. That is why the gentleman who was being queried on the general dry point of view along with many of his comrades, expresses an earnest hope for a real wet-dry presidential fight next year.

The dries would be likely to be divided if Roosevelt made any real attempt to conciliate them," he says. AMARILLO, Sept. 22. (AP)—All attendance records at the Amarillo Tri-State exposition yesterday were broken. The opening, when more than 60,000 persons passed through the free gates.

Although more than $12,000 is offered in premiums, it was estimated that all expenses could be paid from the first day's receipts from entertainment features and concessions.

Five persons injured in the only mishap of the opening day were reported to be recovering. They were thrown from a tub on a riding device into the mechanical equipment.

Army Budget Will Be Reduced First

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22. (AP)—President Hoover's call on the American Legion to oppose new money demands on the government was scarcely uttered before it appeared certain the army would be the first federal branch to feel the pruning knife.

The war department announced its forthcoming budget will eliminate all requests for increased pay for officers and that "the army will not press claims not included in the program of its commander-in-chief, the president."

From Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, however, came a renewed demand for full cash payment of veteran bonus certificates, a step it is estimated would cost $2,000,000,000. He said 750,000 veterans to whom the government admits it owes money are unemployed.

and Norma. She had not let him know about the tears shed. She would not let him see her weep this morning.

Norma turned to the tiny gas stove. "You coffee's cold," she said steadily. "Wait a minute and I'll have some more boiling."

Five minutes later Mark was drinking the piping hot beverage. The outburst had ended. He was subdued and quiet now.

Across the table Norma began hesitatingly. "I've been thinking, Mark, maybe I mean just what things are the way they are—I've seen some ads in the paper and I have so much time on my hands! Would you mind if I looked round to see if I could find a job—you know, just something until you're working?"

He let her finish. "That makes it perfect," Mark said slowly. "That's the final touch. Well, Norma, you can look for a job any day so far as I'm concerned. But the day you find one—and begin working I walk through the door and don't come back. I may be a hell of a good-for-nothing but I'm not quite low enough to live off my wife's wages. Not yet!"

He halted a moment before the mirror, adjusting his tie. Then Mark picked up hat and coat and left the apartment.

So once more Norma lunched with Chris Saunders. Toward Chris the younger girl turned as toward the last remaining stronghold of courage and comfort.

They met in a crowded cafeteria but the very bustle and hum of the eating place provided privacy. In the drone of hundreds of other voices their confidences were secure.

"I—I don't know what to do, Chris!" Norma's voice came out loudly with the last words. "We're not getting anywhere and—oh, I'm so afraid something's going to happen! I don't quite know what. When Mark talks the way he did this morning—he doesn't mean it, of course, but not being able to find a job he's getting on his nerves. He's it's getting on mine, too. I try not to let it, Chris, I have to talk to you like this but what can I do?"

Chris Saunders selected a tender section of celery.

"He's right, you know," she said thoughtfully. "At least about your getting a job. A man with a grain of gumption isn't going to let his wife bring home a pay check while he's doing nothing."

"But I didn't mean it that way—I—"

"Of course you didn't mean it, but how we mean things, it's the way other people take them that's important. Anyhow I think Mark's right. What kind of a job has he been looking for?"

"Oh, anything! I've heard him say a dozen times he was going to do anything and he means it. Mark would do anything at all—so long as it paid enough for our living. That's what worries me. You see the money we borrowed is almost gone."

"Your credit's good with me, kid. Do you think Mark would let me borrow from you? Of course not!"

"Well about this job, what does he know how to do?"

The two tiny wrinkles reappeared in Norma's forehead. "Working in his father's office is about the only real job he's ever had. He wasn't there very long and anyway, he was mostly getting acquainted with the people in the organization and seeing how things are done."

"Don't I know! Rich men's sons inherit the business some day—come in and see how the faithful slaves keep it going."

Swiftly Norma took the defense. "But it wasn't Mark's fault! That was what his father wanted him to do. And besides it's different now. Mark really wants to work. He wants to work hard and he's been through college and he's so clever. Oh, I know he'd be a big success if he could just get a chance!"

While she was still speaking the other girl's face had brightened. "Listen! Chris exclaimed dramatically. I've got an idea! Do you suppose Mark could sell advertising?"

"Of course he could!"

"Well, I just remembered something. Bud Jamieson's quitting Saturday and Brad hasn't hired anyone to take his place. Brad doesn't ordinarily take inexperienced salesmen but he likes Mark! I'll tell you what you do—"

Casually that evening Norma spoke of meeting Chris. She added in an off-hand way. "Chris said Mr. Hart's been wanting to see you. Asked if you could stop in his office tomorrow morning."

"What's he want to see me about?"

Dark fringed lashes fluttered faintly. Then the better part of valor won a victory. "I don't know," the girl said. "She told me Mr. Hart's always in about 11 o'clock. Chris is looking awfully well, Mark. I don't believe she's putting in as much overtime as she did."

Shortly before noon, next day Norma was called to the telephone. A jubilant-voiced Mark almost shouted the glad tidings:

"Brad Hart's got a job for me! Wants me to start right away. Do you hear that, Baby? I said Brad Hart wants me to work for him—selling advertising. Sure I can do it! Why, of course. Everybody knows advertising's a good thing! I'll be a snap! Hart's taking me around to meet some of his customers this afternoon. I'll tell you all about it when I get home. See you later, Baby. Bye."

They celebrated by going to the neighborhood motion picture house that evening and holding hands through a talking drama which was neither very funny nor very moving emotionally. To Norma the picture glowed with a haze of romantic beauty that was to make it memorable.

For a week thereafter Mark Travers arose to the clangor of the new alarm clock, downed his breakfast and sprinted for the 8:15 car. Each evening he reappeared between 5:30 and 6. After dinner he read a volume Norma had unearthed in the public library. "Psychology of Selling Advertising" was the title of the book.

Norma got out the paper notebook containing her much-thumbed budget. Forty-five dollars a week was the sum Mark was to be paid. Pitifully small to a young man of Mark's financial standards but there would be commissions and raises. Norma remade the budget sheet so that it totaled $45. There was a column heading "savings" too.

Saturday noon—Mark's first pay day—she waited impatiently for his arrival. She waited until frigid fingers coursed her spine and her hands were clammy. She tried to invent excuses; even invented reasons to believe the excuses. She waited and waited—and at 4:30 there were steps on the stairs.

"Is that you, Mark?" Norma cried, running into the hall.

"Much ado is being made over the present unfavorable nature of 'News', says a well-known writer. 'That the 'News' is bad, however, should not be surprising. It is always so in the final stages of any decline in values.' This writer has prepared the following list of scare headlines which appeared in financial sections of newspapers in August, 1921, the month which marked the end of the 1919-1921 big depression: 'FRENCH DEFICIT THREE BILLION FRANCS'; 'MORGAN CANCELS EUROPEAN TRIP BECAUSE OF FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES'; 'STEEL CUTS PRICES $3 TO $2 A TON UNDER JULY LEVELS'; 'REAL MONETARY DEPRESSION EXISTS IN GERMANY'; 'BROKERS' LOANS LOWEST IN 8 YEARS'; 'PRESIDENT OF AMERICA WOULD SESS EUROPE RIDING FOR A FALL'; 'MELLON SAYS GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES MUST BE CUT ONE QUARTER OF A BILLION'; 'BREAK IN MARK CREATES FRENZY IN EUROPE'; 'STEEL CORPORATION MAKES FURTHER WAGE REDUCTION'; 'GENERAL ECONOMIC CRISIS EXISTS IN CENTRAL EUROPE'; 'VANDERLIP SAYS TASK OF BRINGING ORDER OUT OF EUROPE CHAOS IS VIRTUALLY IMPOSSIBLE.' Here are only a few of the headlines picked at random from the various New York papers at the time. Nevertheless, this was the exact time at which the 1919-1921 decline culminated. Therefore, there does not seem to be any reason to become unduly depressed or impressed by the present news. The situation is not as hopeless as in August, 1921. Yet the depression turned then. A turn, therefore, would not be surprising in the near future.

City Expects to Stay Under Its Budget of Year

Reduction of personnel, revision of salaries, and effecting of administrative economies are being carried out by the city in an apparently successful effort to stay under the budget for this year.

Last year the city had no city hall and fire station-like the present structures to maintain.

The probable expense of the maintenance of the new city hall is $2,753, as compared with $832.50 last year. At the present rate the fire department will cost $8,541.12, but reduction of personnel and other expenses is expected to reduce this figure to $7,500. The total cost last year was $3,719.21. Also, a salary of $2,100 is being paid a building inspector who was not on the payroll last year, and at least one water system improvement item of approximately $600 has found its way into the expense list to be paid with current revenue instead of tax money.

For the sake of economy, one policeman, one street department employee, and one fireman have been cut from the payroll. It is claimed, however, that the efficiency of none of the departments has been lessened. For instance, there are three men on duty at the fire station as before, due to the fact that the men retained have agreed to work longer hours. They are on duty 48 hours and off 24 instead of on 24 and off 24 as was formerly the case.

Markets

WHEAT STRONGER

CHICAGO, Sept. 22. (AP)—Wheat averaged higher early today, influenced by sharp upturns in Liverpool quotations and by unfavorable harvest weather in Canada. It was confirmed that Czechoslovakia's crop would be 1,000,000 tons below last year.

COTTON ACTIVE

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 22. (AP)—The cotton market experienced a steady and fairly active opening. Liverpool came in better than due and first trades here showed gains of 2 to 3 points.

While this slight bulge attracted some hedge selling which caused prices to ease off a point or two, the market soon rallied in sympathy with New York, and owing to trade buying and the final passage of the Texas cotton law.

spirit of intolerance, into a sympathetic understanding of what 20 or more millions of Americans who are Catholic really believe."

Mr. Goldstein recently said: "I know that our fellow-Americans are fair; that they believe in free speech and religious liberty; that they need but to be approached in a frank, truthful and courteous way to get a hearing from them even for the Catholic church, the most misunderstood institution in the world. I believe that the time has come when the voice of the laity of that oldest, most sublime, universal and Divine organization that Christ commissioned to teach, should be heard and understood, if only to bring about a better understanding among the citizens of our beloved country by a better appreciation of others' viewpoints. Christ has been good to me. He has led me from error into truth, and in return I mean to show my love for Him by making His church better known. This I shall endeavor to do with Christian courtesy. I am coming to your city, not for the purpose of arousing religious animosities, there is too much of that already in the world. My purpose is to explain, for animosities do not exist among men of good will when they know the facts in the case. My talk in your city will be religiously Christian and patriotically American."

The clubs stress international, as well as local affairs, and these things tend to bring about broad-mindedness.

Walker Returns With 6 Ounces Added to Weight

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—James J. Walker, who found no place in Europe where a New York mayor may rest, was home today to resume work and prepare for a personal appearance before Samuel Seabury's inquirers.

Completing an 11,000-mile "rest cure" that turned out to be a round of fetes, dinners and honors fit for a king, the bronzed mayor came into port last night wearing a smoke-blue suit topped by a white beret with a vizor.
