50 Youths Must Register For CAA Program Or School Goes

U. S. ORDERS ALL GERMAN CONSULATES CLOSED

Big Meeting Will Be Held Tuesday Night

Young Men Invited To Be At School Building At 8

Pampa's Civil Aeronautics Administration flying program may have to be abandoned unless 50 young men register to take a summer ground school course. A meeting will be held Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the high school at which time registration blanks will be available.

Anyone who has passed his 19th birthday is eligible to take the ground school course. Youths between the ages of 19 and 26 will be eligible to compete for free flight scholarships. Those over the age limit may take the ground school course and if they pass a final examination they may purchase flight scholarships. It is estimated that a student receives $5,000 worth of training if he completed his ground school and his flight courses.

Deadline for enrolling is June 22 and the minimum number of students has been set at 50. Sixteen have already secured application blanks from Jimmy Dodge at the bus terminal.

A ground school course was completed here last week and 10 free flight scholarships were awarded. Flying lessons will begin next week with Art Smith, veteran flyer, as instructor. Each of the 10 students will receive between 35 and 45 hours of free instruction which will equip him to receive a private flying license.

Frank Hall instructor Only cost for taking the ground school is $6 for physical examination, $2 for text books, and possibly a small assessment for incidentals, but the extra cost is not anticipated in this course because nearly all equipment is available.

Frank Hall has again named ground instructor and his salary is paid by the government. The entire flight program is sponsored by the Pampa Junior Chamber of Commerce with the Pampa school system in charge of the ground course.

"The CAA program is one of the most important we have undertaken and one that gives Pampa a lot of prestige," Supr. L. L. Sone said today. "Pampa is one of the smallest cities in the country with ground and flight schools and we are anxious to retain our standing as an aviation city."

Everyone who failed to make a grade of 70 or over in the recent ground school course will be eligible to take the summer course and compete for the scholarships, provided they are within the age bracket.

The 10 winners of the scholarships granted in the ground school just completed will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at the municipal airport to sign for insurance and discuss their flight training schedule.

After completing their private flight course the 10 students may carry on and take a secondary course, cross country course, and student instructor course, which will lead them to a commercial pilot standing. Only cost will be time and board at the advanced flying base they select. Advance schools are located at Amarillo, Lubbock, Wichita Falls and Fort Worth in this area.

Requirements for the future courses include: Secondary course: 108 hours of ground instruction and 40 to 50 hours of flight instruction. Cross-country course: 108 hours of ground school instruction and 40 hours of cross country (day and night) flight training. Student instructor course: 36 hours of ground instruction devoted to analyzing and explaining flight maneuvers, and 30 hours of flight training in approved instruction method.

Final review course: 36 hours of review ground instruction and 30 hours of review flight training. Successful completion prepares the applicant for commercial pilot certificate and an instructor's rating.

Sadler And Culberson Endorse Ickes' Plan

AUSTIN, June 16 (AP)—In a plea for unity with the federal government, two members of the Texas Railroad Commission today told members of the oil industry federal Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes had no desire to take over the best business.

Commissioners Jerry Sadler and Olin Culberson said in a statement read at the outset of a statewide oil proration hearing the administrator's only wish was to work out a smooth program of cooperative functioning whereby the industry can do the most good in the President's plan for national defense.

Both officials conferred recently with Ickes in Washington. The industry has one of the leading roles in defense preparation and Texas, being the largest oil state, should lead the way for the sake of patriotism and loyalty

Rationing Of Oil, Gasoline Being Argued

By CHARLES E. HARNER

NEW YORK, June 16 (Special News Service)—The petroleum industry is torn with internal dissension today over supplying the eastern part of the nation with gasoline this summer and fuel oil this winter.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, petroleum coordinator, has warned that some system of rationing may be necessary. Some oil men agree with him wholeheartedly; others definitely do not.

The oil crisis was brought to a focus by the withdrawal of British service of 50 tankers which formerly served the eastern seaboard out of Gulf and South American ports. These were part of a fleet of 280 ships which delivered gasoline to the east at a rate of 225,000 barrels daily.

It was less than two months ago, before the effects of the tanker diversion were felt, that leaders of the industry proudly proclaimed that the "oil business on its present basis can meet any conceivable defense demands."

Now, however, as the summer motoring season advances, areas of the nation well removed from oil supplies are finding their gasoline stocks dwindling and the outlook for the fuel and heating oil which much of the east uses in winter is not optimistic.

Some authorities are suggesting that oil and gasoline storage along the North Atlantic coast may be replenished by obtaining from the British use of some of the withdrawn tankers for a few rapid coastwise trips and by placing on the east coast tankers now engaged in carrying oil and gasoline in the far eastern service.

In the five months which will elapse before heating oil demands become heavy one tanker could carry half a million barrels of oil from Texas to New York.

Meanwhile, to eliminate the possibility of future east coast shortages and to permit the transfer of more tankers to British use, oil men foresee the likelihood of construction this year of between 2,000 and 4,500 miles of new pipelines east of the Mississippi river at a cost of $100,000,000 to $200,000,000.

One proposed line, 1,600 miles long, would run from the Texas coast to the New York area, carrying gasoline and other refined products. Another 900 miles long, would transport crude oil from the Illinois fields to eastern refineries.

Two others in the south are under construction, preparing to carry gasoline and fuel oil into the industrial regions. A fifth has been started across New England from Portland, Me., to carry crude oil from ocean tankers to Montreal refineries.

Not all the industry favors such a pipeline program. Many oil experts say ocean tankers are the best and cheapest transports of oil from Texas up the east coast. This is where controversy rages.

Some cost accountants assert oil and gasoline can be delivered in New Jersey from Texas by tanker at a minimum cost of 12 cents a barrel; they say the lowest cost which could be obtained on a parallel pipeline delivery would be 15 cents a barrel.

If a fast railroad tank transportation is concerned, they cite the rate as $2.37 a barrel and, therefore, out of the question economically. Several of the leading oil companies have tried to get together to build a 12-way shipyard, probably at Savannah, where they could construct 36 high-speed ocean-going tankers a year.

Such a combination of corporations might violate the anti-trust laws and, besides, there is a definite shortage of ship-building materials and skilled shipyard workers.

Oil men are in agreement in opposition to the idea of gasolineless Sundays, except as a last resort. They point out that thousands of filling station operators, farmers, resort operators and employees, and even federal and state treasuries, would be hard hit by such a drastic restriction.

U. S. Needs Good Food And Plenty Of It, Declares OPM

CHICAGO, June 16 (AP)—Gerrit Vander Hooing, consultant in the office of production management, asserted today that the most important element in building morale in both soldier and citizen in the country's defense program was "good food and plenty of it."

Addressing the annual convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers, Vander Hooing in his prepared talk, said that every American soldier was being given a "fully-balanced meal" thrice daily, "seven to the right calory and vitamin count."

WHY SOUTH AMERICA WORRIES DEFENSE PLANNERS

35 Survivors Of Robin Moor Arrive

(By The Associated Press)

MEANWHILE, 35 survivors of the United States steamer Robin Moor, reported sunk by a German U-boat in the South Atlantic May 21, arrived at Capetown, South Africa, in a British ship.

Eleven other survivors of the 46 persons on board the vessel—America's first torpedo victim in the war—had previously arrived in Recife, Brazil.

Further identification of the Nazi undersea raider was expected from the 35 survivors in Capetown, since the group includes the chief officer of the Robin Moor who talked with the submarine commander before the Robin Moor was sent to the bottom by a torpedo amidships and a barrage of shells.

Passengers and crew were given 30 minutes to abandon ship. Survivors at Recife said the submarine commander declared he would wireless the position of the lifeboats to expedite their rescue. Washington officials have charged that the sinking was a violation of humanitarian rules for submarine warfare.

Quiet for weeks, the North African battlefront flamed into action anew today as British troops punched across the frontier into Libya and attacked Axis forces in the Gambut sector west of Bardia, 10 miles from the Egyptian border.

In London, it was indicated that Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander-in-chief of the British army of the Nile, may have launched a new offensive to wrest Libya from the Axis.

The German high command said 60 British tanks were destroyed and that a British attack in the Salum area, on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, "collapsed" under the combined resistance of Axis troops and warplanes.

The British said their forces destroyed 12 Axis vehicles in the Gambut sector. Other details were lacking.

Premier Mussolini's high command also described the battle as raging on the Salum front and asserted that the British, striking "in force" after several days of patrol activity, had been "repulsed everywhere."

Hitler's high command credited the Luftwaffe with shooting down 11 British planes, and it noted tersely that "the fight is still going on."

Panhandle Oil Men Ask For More Production

AUSTIN, June 16 (AP)—A transportation shortage resulting from transfer of tankers from the Gulf coast service will cause a serious "backing-up" of oil in Texas, Manton Nixon of Corpus Christi said at a statewide oil proration hearing here today.

"A bit should be made to prevent 'backing up,'" he said, adding that oil from other parts of the state moved to the Gulf coast and the problem was statewide.

Nixon urged that the industry face the situation frankly and take steps to meet it. He said, however, that he had heard little talk about it, and that oil men were apparently unconcerned.

"The oilmen of Texas are either asleep, the cat's got their tongue, or they don't want to say anything," agreed Jerry Sadler, member of the railroad commission before which the hearing was held.

A different viewpoint was taken by witnesses from the Panhandle, who asked for more production to meet demand for oil. E. H. Foster of Bartlesville, Okla., suggested lifting one or more shutdown days in the Panhandle.

Other witnesses pointed out that there was "no transportation bottleneck in the Panhandle," and that on the other hand, there was need for all the oil that could be produced without physical waste to supply the demand of local refineries and pipelines.

"If we don't produce it, Oklahoma and Kansas will," these witnesses said, declaring Texas stood to lose considerable tax revenues if allowances were reduced.

All Nationals In Agencies To Be Ousted

Nazis' Activities In U. S. Called 'Harmful'

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—The United States today ordered the closing of all German consulates in this country and the removal of all German nationals connected with those agencies.

Sumner Welles, under-secretary of state, made the announcement after he had handed a note to an official of the German embassy.

The order requires the closing of the German library of information and railway tourist bureau and the German Transocean News agency before July 10.

Welles asserted this did not imply a break in diplomatic relations with Germany and in no way affected the German diplomatic staff in Washington.

The action was taken, Welles stated, because German consular officials and other Nazi agencies named have been engaged in activities harmful to the United States.

The order requires the closing of the German library of information and railway tourist bureau and the German Transocean News agency. It calls for removal of all nationals connected with the consulates and these agencies.

"Transocean is not connected with any American news agency," it has come to the knowledge of this government," the Welles note said, "that agencies of the German Reich in this country, including German consular establishments, have been engaged in activities wholly outside the scope of their legitimate duties."

"These activities have been of an improper and unwarranted character," he said.

"They render the continued presence in the United States of those agencies and consular establishments inimical to the welfare of this country."

This was the first action against German consular establishments in this country, although Italian consulates at Detroit and Newark, N. J., were ordered closed some time ago.

Today's notice to the German government affects scores of consular officials throughout the United States, including Captain Fritz Widemann, the German consul general.

Will You Be Alive On The 5th Of July?

The Fourth of July is just a little over two weeks away. Many of you already are planning where you're going to celebrate the holiday. But the Texas Safety association suggests—why not give a little thought to how you are going to celebrate.

Are you going to do it safely? Or are you going to be one of the thousands killed or injured during America's biggest jamboree of carelessness?

On the highways . . . in the homes . . . on the beach and picnic grounds . . . everywhere men, women and children are killed off by the score, even as they celebrate.

This senseless slaughter must be stopped! And it can be stopped if every one of us uses caution and common sense. The things that cause these tragedies are things we can control—haste, selfishness, thoughtlessness, the desire to show off.

The Texas Safety association is calling on Texas to stop this mid-summer massacre by signing a new Declaration of Independence . . . Independence from the kind of celebration that leaves us dead and the sightless and the suffering. Remember—be alive on the Fifth!

35,000 Men Needed

We have been so absorbed in the vital problem of building the two-ocean navy, waiting and watching breathlessly as each new ship slides down the ways, that we have forgotten that it takes men to operate them. Further, we have become so accustomed to the idea of selective service for the army that we are apt to forget that the navy still depends on volunteers for its personnel.

The declaration of a full emergency makes it imperative that every new ship be instantly manned by trained sailors. The navy needs now 35,000 recruits, and has sent out a second urgent call for them. Requirements as to teeth and height recently have been lowered somewhat, which means that thousands who formerly were rejected may perhaps now be able to serve.

The navy is our first line of defense. Every post must be fully and ably manned.

Behind The News

By PETER EDSON The Pampa News Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON, June 16—Whether it works or not, give the Department of Commerce credit for trying to reorganize some of the bureaucracy out of its system, particularly in the big Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

In spite of the war, which has nearly wrecked our foreign commerce, and in spite of the defense effort which dictates that "business as usual" must go for the duration, the domestic commerce boys feel that they have a job to do in helping business wherever possible. Out of that idea has come the general reshuffling of the bureau.

Center of the new idea will be 12 apostles to spread the word from Washington. They will be called Regional business consultants and there will be one for each of the 12 federal reserve districts. These 12 men, hand picked not only from the bureau but also from business and research staffs of several universities, will gather in Washington soon to begin a course of training.

Then, early in the fall, they will take up their jobs in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Dallas, and San Francisco. They will be backed up by 19 field officers already at work in other key cities, and the entire 31 will be known as "The United States Department of Commerce Field Service."

BUSINESS DRUMMER UPPERS

The idea is that this new agency will work both ways. Field officers will report to Washington on business conditions in their districts and will be available as business consultants to trade association, chambers of commerce, and individual business executives. They will try to help work out readjustments in foreign trade, give advice on outlets to South and Central America, help the Rockefeller committee in trying to improve cultural relations between the Rio Grande, and on top of that try to help business men fit into the defense picture.

While this new field service is the one that will have the most direct contact with business men in every community, it is only one phase of the broader plan of Department of Commerce reorganization. Previously, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was organized on what was called a vertical basis. That is, there was a separate division for every commodity or group of industries. There were bureau chiefs for chemicals, iron and steel, movies, machinery, tobacco, and so on. The tendency was for each division to consider that its particular pet and baby was the center of the world and that all other business revolved around it.

Under the reorganization, most of these division or commodity or industry chiefs-of-section have been given the status of consultants, and their function hereafter will be to sit in with the new horizontal organization of five principal divisions. The Field Service unit outlined previously becomes the Division of Regional Economy. There is a Division of International Economy, which is foreign trade. A Division of Industrial Economy, organized horizontally by units of merchandising, consumption, construction, durable goods, and so on. Divisions of Research and Information complete the picture.

HOOVER'S FOLLY NOT SO FOOLISH

Now all this may seem like a lot of governmental red tape organization which it probably is and you shouldn't be bothered by it. It is illustrative, however, of the way these big government bureaus operate. You could wander for days through this Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce without meeting

THE CONDITION OF OUR ARMY

With the growing military power of other nations, the condition of our army is of the utmost importance.

I have run across nothing that so plainly sets forth our lack of preparedness as the article by Representative Ross A. Collins, in the June issue of the Reader's Digest. Mr. Collins, for many years, has been chairman of the War Department Appropriations Subcommittee of the House. For this reason, what he says should be regarded most seriously. His article shows that we are preparing an army to fight wars as they were fought years ago. His contention, and he certainly presents the proof, is that we do not need a large army but need one thoroughly mechanized. As proof of his contention, he says it is now an established fact that Germany broke the French line at Sedan, conquered France's army of 5,000,000 soldiers with a German force that did not exceed 150,000 men.

When 150,000 men properly equipped with tanks and airplanes can lick 5,000,000 soldiers of the 1914 vintage, then it behooves the American people to realize that they are wasting the energy of our country in training men to march and drill and carry arms, as was the practice in war decades ago.

Here are a few quotations from the Collins article:

"These lessons from the Battle of France have been before us for a year. We know now that the mechanized might of only 12 panzer divisions, aided by a few thousand airplane pilots, inflicted staggering losses and swiftly shattered France's old-style mass army.

"And how are America's military leaders profiting by these lessons?

"They are building another old-style mass army.

"They are giving outmoded training to the million-and-a-half men we will have in camps this summer. And they seem to be seriously planning an eventual army of 4,318,000 men. This spring the Chief of Staff requested of our committee funds for the 'initial equipment' of such a force.

"This is all wrong. We don't need a vast army of the World War kind. I don't see how we could make such a huge army efficient, or how we could make use of it. Few of our officers understand modern war."

"The most frightening fact is that too many of our highest military leaders aren't even thinking in terms of modern war.

"As they plan it, the bulk of our new army will be infantry, cavalry, field artillery, etc. Most of the men will travel on foot. Of our 33 divisions, only one is fully motorized—that is, equipped with motor vehicles to transport men and supplies. Only two are armored and mechanized panzer divisions. As this is written (April 30), the War Department's plans call for the creation of two more mechanized divisions. This is a ridiculously small number. The Germans had 14 panzer divisions a year ago. No doubt they now have more. We have two in training—and two to be created! What chance would those four have against more than 14 veteran divisions of Nazi armored troops?"

The article is so important that we will quote further from it in a later issue.

STRIKERS STAB ALL WORKERS IN THE BACK

What most people fail to realize is that every striker is in reality stabbing every man who is working in the back.

Of course, the strikers do not realize this or they would not do it. They actually think they are helping the workers who are working.

But, instead of helping them, they are stabbing them in the back. They are stabbing them in the back because what other workers produce will exchange for less, due to the strikers' failure to produce something of value, and because of the strikers' curtailment of production due to sudden stoppage of important work.

Workers really pay each other wages by their production. Any time anybody quits and throws out of balance and harmony the usual exchanges that are taking place between workers, then all workers suffer.

So, it can be truly said that strikes, or the sudden stoppage of work, stabs every working man in the back.

THE WORLD VIEW OF JESUS (The Christian Advocate)

There has been all too much inclination to think of Jesus as a theologian, and too little attention has been paid to his experience as a citizen who lived under a totalitarian government all of his life. It is extremely interesting that on no occasion did he raise the standard of revolt, even though his concepts of life were in absolute contradiction to the political and social philosophy of the Roman government. He was essentially a thinker and a philosopher who trusted to ideas to accomplish his ends. Such a one, of course, must be willing to take the long look and die before his dream is realized. And that is precisely what Jesus did. In "The World View of Jesus" (Harper, $2), Elmer W. K. Mould, professor of Biblical History and Literature of Elmira College, has drawn a painstaking and exact portrait of the Master as he preached the great ideas which made him the world's Redeemer. For laymen who have made some study of the field this is an excellent book. For preachers it will serve as a valuable reference volume for years to come.

all the people or finding out what they do.

When the Department of Commerce building was finished, it was dubbed Hoover's Folly and everybody wondered what on earth they would use to fill all the offices on all seven floors covering the equal of two big city blocks. Today the place is filled to overflowing and they're trying to make the big unwieldy thing function for the good of the citizenry.

And the fact is that it does a lot of good. It is probably a top-up as to whether you can get more miscellaneous information from the Department of Commerce or the Department of Agriculture. If you write in asking for information about your particular business, they have some. Or if you call in person, there is an information office which is trying desperately to steer business men coming to town on defense jobs. It may take two or three tries to get you what you want but they try.

Around Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON NEA Service Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, June 16—If you'd ask a number of people to name the most versatile individual in the entertainment world, most of them probably would pick Orson Welles. They would be the ones who don't know about Fortunio Bona-nova.

He's quite a guy, this Spaniard from the island of Majorca. Once he trained to be a bullfighter but turned to opera and toured Europe and South America for two years after his debut. Inevitably his twin talents suggested a performance of "Carmen" in a bull ring, so one was staged in which he sang and fought at toro.

That didn't satisfy Bona-nova, who decided to branch out to the legitimate theater. He went to France, divided his time between plays and musicals and was the star of an outdoor festival when Gilbert Miller heard of him and cabled him an offer to come to New York. He made his American debut with Katherine Cornell in "Dishonored Lady" in 1929, and also appeared with Gloria Swanson in her last silent picture.

DOES THINGS WELLES

Presently he went back to Spain to make movies for United Artists release. Like Welles, Bona-nova was producer, writer, director, and star. One of his films, "The Immaculate Wife," won all the awards in South America—best writing, directing, and acting.

In Hollywood, Orson Welles hired his rival-in-talents for the funniest role in "Citizen Kane." Bona-nova was the voice teacher with the unhappy task of trying to train the second Mrs. Kane for opera.

When 20th-Fox began preparing "Blood and Sand," Bona-nova really got a workout. He was engaged as technical adviser on costumes, sets, and lighting. He served as dialogue director and played the role of Linda Darnell's father.

And now Fortunio Bona-nova is one of the pair of "Two Latins From Manhattan." Just to prove that he isn't too old or too much of a character type for a romantic role, he winds up by winning the girl. And the girl is Jinx Falkenburg.

BOMBERS BLOCK MOVIES

By special arrangement and with extra precautions, 20th-Fox has been filming a few sequences of "A Yank in the RAF" at the Lockheed airplane factory in Burbank. There hasn't been the slightest interference with defense work, or in the production of bombers for Britain, but defense work and bombers for Britain have interfered considerably with shooting the picture.

You'd think that when an aviation flicker is being made at a field, the sound of planes in the air and on the runways would be just the thing for background atmosphere. But it isn't. For some unexplainable technical reason, the noise doesn't register properly. So such scenes have to be made when everything's quiet, and the sounds of engines are dubbed in later.

The scenes made at the factory's field represent an airbase in Britain with a concentration of new bombers awaiting installation of guns and bomb racks. In order not to delay the work of Lockheed mechanics, the studio put them all in RAF uniforms and let them go ahead with their regular jobs.

People You Know

By Archer Fullingim

Before the Fiesta becomes a thing of the past as far as the newspaper is concerned, this one being a member of the Texas club, wants to express appreciation for the Texas float. It moved at the head of the parade and certainly no one was ashamed of it; rather they were proud of it, and of the queen on top of it. And I think that you would like to know that the two girls chiefly responsible for the float were Mrs. J. P. Mathews and Mrs. Charlie Lambka, both pretty enough to ride on any float and they did have a chance to ride on the float as queens but they turned it down in order to work on the Texas float. The idea of the stars and maps was theirs and they did most of the work on the float, besides planning and buying the dress for the queen, Dorothy Campbell. . . . They were to the Texas float what R. B. Saxe was to the Michigan float, what John Monroe was to the Oklahoma float, what Jim Connor and Mr. Griffith were to the Indiana float and what Don Conley and several others were to the West Virginia float, and what Mrs. Harry Hoyle was to the Mississippi float, what Mrs. Bell Wells was to the Louisiana float, what O. K. Frasher, John Lindsey and Mark Denison were to the Colorado float—but we could go on like this for a column, but the point was that their work was indispensable. Another wonderful person without whom Finis Stillwell and his assistants couldn't have gotten along along was Molly Anderson, a 16-year-old girl. She helped make all the paper decorations and then she helped build the floats, and she used only one lick on a tack with a magnetic hammer, and she could saw and drive nails and pull wagons and push, and she also drove the pickup and the tractors and moved several of the finished floats with the tractor. On the last day of the parade, there were no tractors or pickups to pull the floats and 20 minutes before the parade Molly got in the pickup and in 10 minutes had commanded the necessary pickups. She told the drivers how fast to go and she threatened one youth with a hammer when she saw him towing a float at the rate of 10 miles per hour. The first day when the Arizona queen did not show up at parade time we put Molly on that float, and were glad to, and the next day she was too busy hammering and sawing and tacking and gunning that pickup and the tractors to even change into her cowboy costume.

Thanks, Supt. L. L. Some for opening the high school auditorium Saturday night and personally dusting the seats for the coronation of the queen. "I never enjoyed any parade I ever saw as much as I did the Fiesta parade this year," he said. "I think that the Jaycees' state club idea should be made a permanent fixture of the Fiesta."

THE LOOKING GLASS

SUMMER EVENING By Stella Holit

Jessie loved to lie in the grass under the stars, the dipper, the seven sisters up there in the sky made her reflect on the immensity of the world. It was cool in the grass and very merry with the lightning bugs flying around. It was the only part of the day that was any good for nobody was telling you to do the churning, gather the eggs, stop the pigs, pick up chips or water the horses.

It was lovely to lie in the grass and think about the world. Ma came from the grand old state of Texas and she knew it was wonderful but ma couldn't describe it very well. She used to talk a lot about the Galveston float and how the coffins washed right out of the graves and went to sea and the bodies came floating in after the storm was over. That was awful. Nothing like that ever happened around Beaver. In the spring rains the old drake swam away and never came back but that wasn't anything like the Galveston float.

Pa came from Texas too, some place called Carden Valley but nothing interesting ever happened there. Sometimes his brothers came from there to visit. They were lovely and always brought big bags of candy.

Texas was a long way but just think where peddlars came from. Now and then peddlars would come by with ribbons, threads, knives, scissors, buttons, and braids. One said he came from Rooshia. That was somewhere on the other side of the world. Jessie supposed that all the people there were dark and carried packs of things to sell.

Once in the grocery store a man had come in and ma said he was a drummer from Chicago. He had a black derby and a cigar and Jessie believed until she was grown that all the men in Chicago were drummers and wore derbies and cigars.

It was hard to get grown-ups to tell you much about the world. Ma went to a school at Hog Wallow but she wasn't a very brilliant student and she didn't talk much about that. She talked a lot about Dallas and there were mysterious illusions to Uncle Jim who lived there and drank too much and finally died and his widow, the giddy thing, married again right away.

Another uncle, the black sheep, had gone to St. Louis and was never heard of again. St. Louis was a wicked city, but not nearly as wicked as Chicago. A school teacher from Texas, ma knew the teacher, went to the Chicago World's Fair and never again did anybody ever hear of her. It was a terrible city where women were swallowed alive, where people suffocated in the summer and froze in the winter. Maybe a drummer had made off with the school teacher.

New York was a place too, all full of tenements and Rooshians like the peddler. There might be other places in the world like Pompei. Grandma had a print all framed of the Last Days of Pompei.

It was nice to look at the milky way and dream about the world.

IRVIN S. COBB LOOKS BACK, LAUGHS, IN GRAND BOOK

"Exit Laughing" (Bobbs-Merrill; $3.50), is Irvin S. Cobb's life story; from his Paducah boyhood to his Hollywood successes; from his newspapering in a small town to his 11-year stint for the Saturday Evening Post and his assignment in Europe covering World War I. It is overflowing with good humor, rich in anecdote and "inside" stories (such as only a veteran reporter can set down) of the great and near great of the past 40 years. One of these typical yarns is told here, what President Harding said at a poker session at a Maryland hunting lodge several months after his election: "When the poker game was over, we had a snack of broiled oysters and Canadian ale. Some of the party put off to bed. . . . I rest sat chatting. Without warning and apparently not regardless of anything, the President burst forth with an avowal which, by reason of its frankness and its unexpectedness and its self-searching analysis, was startling even to these men who were his intimates. . . .

"Boys, I guess maybe I got too big for my breeches when I let a fellow like Penrose and Smoot and Jim Watson—edge me into this spot. I was all right running a country paper out in Ohio. It's a doggone good paper, if I do say it myself. No, sir, I wasn't biting off more than I could chew back yonder in Marion. And through the grace of God, I even got by being a member of the United States Senate. But I'm a small-town product. My horizon is limited; it doesn't stretch out internationally. Problems of involved diplomacy, and of intricate foreign relations, and the problems of financing a government—well, they keep bobbing up and I haven't either the intuition or the experience to swing them. So I have to let Jones or Smith or Brown do it and if the thing succeeds I get the credit, and that's not fair to the faithful lads hanging around the palace. I've been fair all along about my ability to hold down the job and I'm not getting any less afraid as time passes on." He smiled a rueful smile. "Boys, don't any of you ever let anybody you care for get elected President of these United States."

British express fear German threat to Russia is a feint: This appears to reflect an attempt by the British leadership to dispel wishful thinking about a German-Russian conflict (incurable British habit) and to prevent any relaxation of vigilance and watchfulness at home. There is solid ground for expecting another German-Russian get-together, probably at Russia's expense. But it also is apparent that Germany is applying tremendous military pressure to Russia in an attempt to get a free hand in the wheat country of the Ukraine and perhaps the oil fields of the Caucasus, if not even more. To the disillusionment of Russia, Hitler's disavowal of this sort of policy is a feint. This sort of story must infuriate Adolf Hitler, who has all the rest of the European continent to feed, can be imagined with the greatest of ease.

11 Matches Completed In City Golf Tournament

Only 11 matches in the city golf tournament were completed yesterday before the rains came again. The deluge yesterday caught players on nearly every hole on the course.

A few players completed their first round of play during the morning but most of them waited until the afternoon. Players who failed to complete their matches yesterday are asked to get together as soon as possible and complete the round so that second rounds can be completed during the week.

Most of the matches completed were close. Results of yesterday play: Championship Flight Mark Heath defeated Melvin Watkins, 5 and 4. Marvin Harris won from Clyde Keith, 7 and 5.

First Flight Buck Hines beat Jet Brumley, 1 up. Bill Anderson defeated Art Swanson, 3 and 2. Carl Snow won from Ted White, 1 up in 19 holes.

Second Flight R. A. Baker won by default from Bryant Caraway. Grover Austin Sr. beat J. V. Osborne, 2 and 1. Mickey Prigmore defeated Bunny Behrman, 2 and 1. Bert Curry won by default from Gene Green.

Third Flight Frank Carter defeated Ed Myatt, 2 up. Fourth Flight W. H. Robbins won by default from H. C. Feeler.

Wonder how many more ball players will have to be hit on the head by pitched balls before the wearing of the headgear perfected through the persistence of Larry MacPhail of Brooklyn becomes universal?

It took its time before half-heartedly adopting an idea it should have picked up years ago from jockeys, football players, and participants in other athletic lines open to head injuries.

Oiler-Gasser Games Rained Out A Borger Yesterday

The Pampa Oilers and the Borger Gassers were rained out yesterday in Borger which means that two more games will have to be made up. The rain yesterday afternoon started falling 15 minutes before game time. A doubleheader was scheduled on Thursday night when the Oilers left early this morning for Lamesa where they will play two games. Then they move to Big Spring for three games before coming back to Amarillo for two games.

Business Manager Harold Miller of the Oilers received notice today that Umpire Swindell had fined Manager Dutch Prather $10 and Catcher Catfish Smith $5 for objecting to strenuously to one of his decisions on Thursday night when they were chased from the game.

Miller announced today that he will write to President Milton Price asking that Umpire Swindell be removed from the circuit on the grounds that he is not competent to be a league umpire. Miller said he had never before protested an umpire but that Swindell's decisions on Thursday and Friday nights were so far out of line that he was filing a formal protest with the league president.

Believe-It-Or-Not Here's an odd play. The Danville and Martinsville teams were playing down in Virginia. Shortstop Avayaron of Martinsville hit the ball to Pitcher Bob Durham. In attempting to field it, Durham kicked the ball on the fly back to Catcher Daniels who, in turn, threw to first for the put-out.

Yanks Scourging League With 7-Game Win Streak

(By The Associated Press) The New York Yankees are scourging the American League again with a sizzling seven-game winning streak that has the Cleveland Indians trembling on their pedestal.

At various times this year the Yanks have been fighting for first and indifferent—mostly the latter—but right now they are hotter than a Harlem swing band.

Yesterday they polished off the Indians for the sixth time in nine meetings this season and reduced the Tribe's margin to the top of the league to two games. They had proved Saturday that Bob Feller was not invincible, and they came right back against young Jim Bagby and won, 3-2, before 43,962 fans.

The first two encounters of the series attracted 86,122 fans, and the Sunday baseball program was a whole new turnout of 186,782, including capacity crowds at Boston in the American league and St. Louis in the National.

The Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers were fighting for first place, and 34,543 spectators saw the pair divide a double-header. Kirby Higbe pitched seven-hit ball and Lew Riggs batted in four runs, three on a ninth-inning homer, as the Dodgers won the opener, 2-1. Then Ernie White retailed with a two-hit mound job to take the nightcap, 3-0.

A throng of 34,500 at Boston saw the Red Sox sweep two games from the Chicago White Sox, 8-6 and 6-4. The Philadelphia Athletics battered the St. Louis Browns, 10-4, and the Philadelphia Phillies split their twin bill. Claude Passeau pitched a 6-0 shut-out for the Cubs in the first game and Charley Root added five scoreless innings in the second before the Phillies blew their top with an eight-run rally started by Danny Lattin's single and ended with his home run. Result: Phillies, 8-4.

Montgomery Convinces Everybody He Has Promising Mound Future

Monty Montgomery of the Pampa Oilers has had a bit of trouble proving it, but before he broke into professional ball, three pretty smart baseball men singled him out as a pitcher with a promising future.

Ernie Quigley, formerly umpire and now contact man for the National League, Roger Peckinpaugh, manager of the Cleveland Indians, and Lew Fonseca, former big league first baseman and skipper of the Chicago White Sox, were the men who passed judgment on Montgomery's ability. Not once, but twice.

During the spring of 1938, Monty was ace hunter for his high school nine up in Davenport, Ia. He pitched the team to the finals in the state tournament, and at the conclusion he was selected as all-state pitcher by that trio of competent baseball judges.

The same thing happened next spring. Peckinpaugh, Quigley and Fonseca again comprised the selecting committee and singled out Monty as the all-star hurler. They went so far as to name him captain of the team and predicted something for him if he ever tried organized ball.

Monty didn't turn pro that summer, but pitched for the Davenport Maroons, a local semi-pro team. He turned in 11 victories against one defeat, and there were two no-hitters stacked up among his wins. He had a one-hit game against the strong Kansas City Monarchs, one of the best negro clubs in the country.

London Skeptical Of Nazi Hint To Invade Russia

LONDON, June 16. (AP)—Wary Britons weighed increasing reports of an imminent break between Soviet Russia and Nazi Germany against their own mounting conviction today that the talk and the troop movements were a feint to hide the real blow—at Britain.

However, the press and public gave careful attention to each new sign apparently indicating that the Nazi military strength actually might be diverted to the east by trouble or the threat of trouble with the Red Army.

It was acknowledged generally that full implications of the reports of troop concentrations on both sides of the German-Soviet frontier could not yet be divined.

The London News Chronicle's Ankara correspondent reported travelers arriving from Hungary and Rumania as saying the odds are five to one Germany will invade Russia within a fortnight.

(Associated Press reports from Ankara quoted a French diplomat in Turkey as saying German troops have been withdrawn from Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia and are being removed from Greece, and that most of them are being drawn up in Rumania facing the Russian frontier.

(Martin Agronsky, NBC correspondent in Turkey, broadcast an unconfirmed report last night that Russia has ordered general mobilization and cancelled all army leaves.)

Grew Protests Against Bombs In American Zone

TOKYO, June 16. (AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew personally delivered today a sharp 300-word note of protest to Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka against Sunday's Japanese bombing of Chungking in which bombs fell in the American safety zone, narrowly missing the U. S. gunboat Tutuila.

The ambassador acted as soon as he received definite notification of the bombing from Chungking, and without waiting for instructions from the state department.

The ambassador received word that at least five bombs fell in the vicinity of the U. S. embassy at Chungking and of the gunboat.

AP Writer Picks Conn To Decision Joe Louis

NEW YORK, June 16. (AP)—For the first time since Joe Louis began training folks have changed their tune from "we believe you" to "you gotta show."

A majority of them still think he's going to beat Billy Conn around in the Polo Grounds Wednesday night and brush off the 18th challenge to his heavyweight crown.

AP Writer Picks Conn To Decision Joe Louis

Yet I have told this corner just that. He is not a little man who can be punched. That's why I pick Conn to win the decision, thus becoming the 16th ruler since Sullivan in the royal heavyweight line.

But although he has slowed 'em down since the night he sent Der Moxie to a hospital in 2 1/2 minutes, and his guns no longer pack the shells they once loaded, it is conceivable that Joe may still be red-hot and rarin' for this one effort.

SERIAL STORY

CALIBAN FROM CALEB

BY NORMAN KAHN

CHAPTER I

IT is two o'clock in the morning, and Angus MacPhillips is sitting in Herbie's Curbside Cafe, and dissecting a slab of liver while Adoreen is swabbing the counter with a sopping rag, when this pasty-faced slicker with the green, store-bought suit comes in.

Angus looks up, and when he sees the slicker's mustache, he grunts through a mouthful of fried onions. The slicker takes one look at Adoreen and his eyes go kind of pop-eyed and he staggers over to the counter. As any one can tell you, Adoreen is just about the trimmest little mouse on either side of the Mississippi.

She comes only about so high and her brown eyes are always dancing around as if whatever she's doing is just about the nicest thing in the world to be doing. Her black hair starts out straight at the top of her head, but it begins curling just over her ears and from there on you lose track of it. Well, this slick individual just eases himself into a stool while Adoreen tosses some silver and a napkin in front of him, and Angus is getting very red and starts to cut his mashed potatoes as if they are one of Herbie's tough steaks.

"It is quite apparent," says the slicker, in a groovy voice, "that I have lost my way. I had no idea I was this close to Hollywood, Miss Lamarr."

Adoreen just hands this guy a menu and stays poker-face. "You are not close to Hollywood, sir," she says. "You are getting close to Caleb—just 80 miles down this road—and my name isn't Lamarr, it's Micklektwidge—Adoreen Micklektwidge."

The stranger can't take his eyes off her, which is a trouble lots of people who come into Herbie's Curbside Cafe seem to get. "Micklektwidge," he says, like he is praying it. "Adoreen Micklektwidge... what a delightful name. But tell me, Miss—Adoreen, if this isn't Hollywood, what are you doing so far away?"

"The pigs knuckles are on special today," Adoreen says. "Or why aren't you in New York where they are crying for beauty like yours?"

"Would you like some clam chowder first?"

"That face... your eyes... your—er—that of you—wasted in a roadside inn; your talent buried under pigs knuckles and clam chowder."

BY this time Angus loses all interest in his liver. The back of his neck is beginning to look like a furnace. That is no kind of radical talk to be handing an impressionable girl like Adoreen—after the fights they'd been having lately about her wanting to run off to New York and get a job as a model on an actress or something like that.

Angus is debating whether he should poke this agitator in the nose and leave him gently out the door. But that would not be polite especially where Adoreen has taken his order. Angus finally grabs his cup of coffee and walks around to the kitchen door. Millie Schweitz, Adoreen's partner, is mixing up a mess of soup and Angus slides into a chair in the corner.

"Hello, Angus," says Millie cheerfully. "What's up?"

"Millie," says Angus slowly, "you were talking to Addie like I told you? You know—about New York and all that stuff?"

Millie grunts at Angus. "So that's it. You two been fighting again?"

"Naw, honest, Millie. Not yet. But I can feel one coming on. There's a mug in there telling Addie she ought to be in pictures or New York or somewhere. And he's got a mustache."

Millie is a generous portion of woman, about 35, with blond hair

Angus puts his fork down and scratches his head. "Now, Addie, you don't want to listen to that kind of talk. That cookie wasn't no gentleman."

that looks as if it is going through a partial eclipse. "Look here now, Angus," she says. "You leave her alone. I've been talking to her. She ain't gonna run off anywhere without you. I told her how I went to Hollywood 15 years ago and how I tried to get in pictures but instead I became the best hash-slinger on Sunset Boulevard. You leave her to me and don't go gettin' her all riled up again."

Angus leans back in his chair and looks a little happier. "Okay, Millie. It's just that I get worried sometimes."

Adoreen comes skimming into the kitchen, and she's got a glow in her face that doesn't go with roast beef on the plate lunch at Herbie's special prices. "Some pork chops, Millie," she says. "Make 'em kinda extra—you know what I mean." Then she sees Angus. "Oh, I didn't see you in here."

Angus gets up and looks hurt. And when he looks at the look that goes into the gesture. He is at least six-feet-three, and every one of his 240 pounds is packed on tight to his body where it does the most good. His hair looks a little like hay and there is always a shock of it sticking out from under his cap in front.

"Addie, didn't you even notice I came in here? Look, Addie, I want to talk to you. I—"

"Not now, Angus. Can't you see I'm busy? And don't call me Addie."

"All right, Adoreen. But I gotta go soon. I got to get that truck into Caleb. It's all full of butter and I don't want it to get soft."

Adoreen grabs a bowl of chowder and slides out of the kitchen. Angus scratches his head slowly, starting on his forehead and going back to his neck, like he is plowing a field of alfalfa.

"See what I mean, Millie. It's gettin' worse. She ain't never been like that before. If that guy gives her any more ideas, I'm gonna go out there and—"

Millie slaps a pork chop on the griddle and turns around to glare at Angus. "You ain't gonna do a thing, Angus. Understand? You're gonna stay right here until he's gone. You ain't gonna go moppin' up this joint with any travelin' salesmen."

IT is 20 minutes later before Angus finally hears the door slam outside and he peeks into the other room and sees Adoreen cleaning off the counter. He goes back to his stool and he is hungry again so he orders a piece of pie and gets another cup of coffee. He is already half an hour behind a schedule but he has to get a few things straightened out before he takes his load of butter in to Caleb.

Adoreen is still looking like she has a part interest in a cloud. "Did you hear what that nice gentleman told me, Angus? He said I wouldn't have any trouble at all—not a bit."

"No trouble don't what, Addie?"

"Why getting a job in New York, of course. Modeling, or maybe even getting into a show."

Angus puts his fork down and scratches his head. "Now, Addie, you don't want to listen to that kind of talk. You don't want to pay no attention to it. That cookie wasn't no gentleman, anyway—and he had a mustache."

"Angus, quit talking like that," Adoreen flashes. "I was just telling you what he said and you have to take it all wrong. I won't ever see him again, but I'm glad he stopped. He appreciated my talent—even if you don't."

"What tal—? Oh, all right, Addie. Let's forget it." Angus is playing around with the meringue on top of his pie. It keeps slipping off, and he is trying to put it back on top of the lemon filling.

"And another thing," she is saying, "he is the kind of man who would call me Adoreen, which happens to be my name."

Angus is fishing around nervously in his pocket for some change to settle up. "I been thinking, Addie—I mean, Adoreen. You ain't me. All right, we been kinda—sw—Aw shucks, Addie. Let's stop this fighting. Let's get married."

What he has just said scares even Angus, and there is a long period of very loud silence before he collects enough courage to go on. "We been going together for a year, Addie, and we love each other... at least I love you, Addie... and I make good money—$125 a month—and Mr. Wittenbaum says maybe he'll raise my wages in a couple months. We could get a house in Caleb and—"

Adoreen has cooled down and she reaches out and grabs Angus' hand. "Angus, I like you, but I'm not sure. You see..."

"Look, Addie, I gotta no down to Moosehart for another load of butter this week and I'll be comin' back this way night after next. You think it over. You can tell me then."

Adoreen grabs a cloth and starts polishing the pie case. "All right, Angus. Night after next, I'll let you know."

Texans Arrive In Atlanta For Kiwanis Meeting

Fred Thompson, governor of the Texas-Oklahoma Kiwanis district, and Pampa's mayor, was in charge of the Texas delegation arriving in Atlanta, Ga., today for the 25th annual convention of Kiwanis International.

The convention will last four days and has attracted 6,000 delegates and many visitors from all parts of the United States and Canada.

Besides the Texas-Oklahoma district governor there are 10 others from Pampa at the convention.

Lieutenant governors of the T-O districts are: in Texas, Jack K. Bell, Gainesville; Boyd Evans, Sherman; Leland Lacy, Port Arthur; J. R. Sorrell, Corpus Christi; Tom C. Mabray, Waco; A. Foy Curry, Jr., Tulsa. In Oklahoma: Marion C. Liebhart, Enid; Joe L. Porter, Lawton; Dr. Joe F. Messenbaugh, Britton; C. C. Toomey, Tulsa.

Mark A. Smith, of Macon, Ga., president of Kiwanis International, in his annual message today said: "Both the United States and Canada are united in their efforts in the task of bringing a victory for those who see life as a spiritual adventure and not merely a blind will to live. Our common faith is that we live for one another and upon our sacrifices depends the future of civilization."

"Our strength lies in the capacity and the swiftness with which we produce. In many ways Kiwanis can participate in defending democracy. We shall continue to insist upon the full recognition of human values and fight against totalitarianism the death of the finer human and spiritual values of life.

"We are in an area of the world where democracy is the strongest. Our rapid growth in Kiwanis is due to our belief in democracy and in many fine welfare and civic projects. In a world of war the spirit of Kiwanis, of tolerance, of free speech and of fair play must be kept alive. This calls for unity and courage among our entire membership," he said.

Wheat Farmers At Last Gain Parity

Special To The NEWS
COLLEGE STATION, June 16—For the first time since the early 20's when the farm depression hit American agriculture, Texas wheat farmers who cooperate with the 1941 farm program are going to reach their approximate parity goal on this year's crop.

"That's what the new department of agriculture wheat loan program plus 18 cents for wheat parity and conservation payments mean to Texas wheat farmers," Fred Rennels, assistant state administrative officer in charge of the AAA office, declared.

Since wheat farmers approved marketing quotas by a majority of 80.8 per cent in the national referendum May 31, with 94 per cent voting favorably in Texas, the 85 per cent of parity loan becomes mandatory under the law.

The wheat loan rate, which represents an average national loan value to farmers of about 98 cents a bushel, is based on the July 1 parity price for wheat.

The primary purpose in announcing the loan now, Rennels explained, is to give producers in the early wheat areas the same advantage producers in the later wheat areas will have. Wheat harvesting is under way now in some sections of the state and will reach a maximum volume in the next week or two.

The loans, as in previous years, will be made by the Commodity Credit corporation, and the state and county AAA committees will be responsible for local administration of the program.

Texas Farm Labor Shortage Forecast

Special To The NEWS
COLLEGE STATION, June 16—A shortage of farm labor in Texas may be experienced in the summer and fall months.

Summarizing the prospects, however, T. R. Timm, extension economist in farm management, says the probable shortage will be more in the form of the wage farm operators will be able, or required, to pay than a physical shortage.

Reports from over the state, he continues, indicate that during peak seasons at least, many farmers will have to pay higher wages than in corresponding periods of 1940 in order to obtain all the labor needed. Moreover, the proper distribution of routing of migratory labor may be more difficult than in recent years.

The latter condition is forecast by the delayed season, which was due to excessive rain. This caused farmers in south, central, and north Texas to plant their cotton at about the same time. As a result, picking seasons between regions will be close together.

Veterinarians Will Also Be Deferred

Instructions have been given to the Gray County Selective Service board, and to all other Texas boards, by General J. Wait Page, state selective service director, to defer from military training every student who gives reasonable promise of becoming a qualified veterinary doctor.

The reason is that the number of practicing veterinarians in the United States has been practically static for 10 years. An OPM survey shows 12,000 at present in the nation, of whom 80 per cent devote their skill to livestock, 20 per cent to inspection of foods of animal origin, such as meat, poultry, and dairy products.

Shelterbelts Used To Protect Melons

Special To The NEWS
COLLEGE STATION, June 16—Many farm gardens and watermelon patches in Northwest Texas will be protected this summer by shelterbelts from hot winds and blistering sunshine the U. S. Forestry service has learned from county extension agents in that area.

Workers on the Prairie States Forestry projects at Wichita Falls report that several years ago W. H. Cunningham of Lamb county, purchased an old ball park fence to protect his garden. For the past two years, Chinese elms he planted in 1938 have given him all the protection he needs. His nearby shelterbelt has made this protection even more effective. Recently another farmer with no protected field sought to lease land adjacent to the E. M. Bitter farm in Wilbarger county for growing watermelons. The Bitter farm is protected by shelterbelt planting. Forestry workers say that with over 80 per cent of approximately 1,700 miles of shelterbelt fall enough to provide protection for areas reaching out 100 to 500 feet, operators of farms with these trees are protecting the family's food supply.

the ROAD AHEAD

Old Man Texas is today looking ahead and planning.

Beside the great farming and ranching country which Texans have built, he sees a new industrial empire here.

Already the start has been made. Some industries, such as petroleum, are now showing what can be done to utilize Texas' vast natural resources. Today this industry refines with Texas labor over four-fifths as much oil as the State produces. Its products make up nearly one-half of all Texas manufacturing. Altogether petroleum provides the living for almost one-sixth of our people. But this is only a beginning.

Texas has many other raw materials, unexceeded by any other State. Texas has in oil and gas the cheap and dependable fuel supply essential to industry. Texas is the gateway to Latin America, our new foreign market.

Each new industry means more jobs. It makes added tax values for our State and local governments, bigger payrolls for our workers, and greater prosperity for you and every other Texan.
