Dog dumping ground - Protest by residents?

THE FORM OF A DOG and blackened bones are all that remain of a dog thrown on a dirt road south of South Farley which had been burned leaving blackened grass in the outline of the animal, in the photo above. Dr. Kenneth Royce, a local veterinarian, said some persons burn their animals as a way of disposing of them. Below, a white smaller dog lies on the blanket it was apparently wrapped in when it had been tossed on the side of the road. The two animals are two of more than a dozen which have been shot and dumped on the dirt road. Local officials say citizens are tired of the large population of loose dogs and are taking the law into their own hands.

The carcasses of more than a dozen dead dogs litter a dirt road south of South Farley, apparently thrown by crusaders against the large population of loose dogs in the city and surrounding area.

The growing problem with large packs of dogs, especially in the south side of Pampa and the limitations of the Animal Control wardens in catching the animals, may be leading persons to use their own means of disposing of stray dogs, local officials said.

Most of the dead animals — some were wearing collars — appear to have been shot, but the stage of decay prohibits sure identification of the cause of death.

One dog had been completely burned, the form of the animal outlined with blackened grass. Some of the dogs had been split and some of the internal organs had been removed.

Sandy Burns, head of the Pampa Animal Control, said three of the animals were coyotes which had been skinned and thrown on the side of the road.

The remainder of the dogs were apparently domestic animals, she said.

Dr. Kenneth Royce, a local veterinarian, said a ditch full of animal bones, also on the dirt road, was an accumulation of as much as 10 years. Dr. Royce speculated some of the bones were from hogs and calves.

He said none of the animals appeared to have been intentionally mutilated, but had been possibly been eaten by rats and raccoons.

The Animal Control officer said some of the dead dogs which had been shot could have been thrown there by area farmers. She said she has received several complaints of farm animals being killed by packs of wild dogs. If the incident is out of the city limits, the farmers have the right to shoot the wild dogs to protect their animals, she added.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan, when told of the dogs, said it was "weird."

He said there was a law against throwing dead animals off county roads, but did not know what the details of the law were. A representative of the District Attorney's office was checking on the law at press time today.

In an unrelated incident, but perhaps a more serious one, Animal Control officers were notified of an open can of dog food left on a folded newspaper in an alley on South Faulkner.

The contents of the can are at the Diagnostic Clinic of Amarillo undergoing tests for strychnine and insecticides, Dr. Royce said. The test results will not be available for several days, he said.

Miss Burns said the cans contained dog food with small pieces of a white chunky substance scattered on top.

"It was set out for a purpose... it was too nice and neat to have just been thrown out," she said.

The animal control warden said the food, if poisoned, could kill a child if he eats it.

Miss Burns said she has received several reports of dogs being poisoned in the South Faulkner area.

Mrs. Frankie Wallace, a resident of South Faulkner, told the News yesterday that two of her dogs had been poisoned recently. An autopsy on the animals showed they had died from eating poisonous seed maize.

Dr. Royce said the seed maize could have been set out deliberately or the animals could have eaten it by mistake.

Hostage release chances slim

WASHINGTON (AP) — With only two weeks left in office, the Carter administration finds itself deprived of its direct link to the top U.S. diplomat in Iran and in the dark as to the whereabouts of any of the 52 American hostages.

The administration's slim hopes for a breakthrough centered on the daily meetings Algerian intermediaries have been holding with Iranian officials on the latest U.S. proposals.

But until this past weekend, the administration at least had been able to maintain periodic telephone contact with L. Bruce Laingen, the U.S. charge d'affaires in Tehran, and two other Americans who had been confined to the Iranian Foreign Ministry in Tehran.

That channel of communications now has been broken with the transfer of Laingen, political officer Victor Tomseth and security officer Michael Howland to a secret location where some of the other captives are being held.

Saturday's transfer of Laingen and his colleagues followed a curious incident 11 days earlier in which a group of Iranians turned up at the Foreign Ministry on Dec. 23 and informed the three Americans they were being transferred to a new location.

The envoys said they preferred to remain at the Foreign Ministry, where they were confined to a spacious reception room with access to television and video cassettes.

"They hesitated to be transferred without knowing where they were going or why or who in seniority had so ordained," State Department spokesman John Trattner said Monday, and the Iranians backed down from the standoff.

Trattner said he did not want to imply that the three resisted transfer "necessarily physically," but The New York Times quoted other, unnamed U.S. officials as saying the trio was involved in a "pushing and shoving" incident with the Iranians, who did not try to overpower the Americans or use weapons.

In any case, Trattner said, Laingen and the others acquiesced last week after being assured that the move was approved by the prime minister's office and that they would join some other hostages.

Accused murderer free on bond

Preston Wayne Maynard — alleged to have killed his wife Shirley and then shot himself on Dec. 10, 1980 — has been released from an Amarillo hospital and is currently free on $50,000 bond, Gray County authorities said today.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said Maynard, 45, was released Friday from St. Anthony's Hospital where he had been hospitalized for a gunshot wound to the knee since Dec. 10. The release is temporary, the sheriff said. Jordan added he was told by Maynard's physician that the man will be readmitted for more surgery in about three weeks.

Jordan said Maynard had had two operations to repair extensive damage to the knee during the three-week hospital stay. He said Maynard is now in a half-body cast.

After leaving the hospital Friday, Maynard was taken before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford who set the $50,000 bail. Sheriff Jordan said

Shortly after the arraignment, Maynard made bond and is convalescing at a local health facility, the sheriff said.

Maynard was charged with the first-degree murder of his 40-year-old wife on Dec. 11, 1980.

The cold December evening of the shooting, Gray County authorities, aided by city police department detectives and Lipscomb County authorities, stood vigil outside the mobile home of the couple.

Gray County deputies received a telephone call at about 6:40 p.m., informing the sheriff's department that Maynard and his wife were locked in their mobile home at the Pampa Mobile Home Park and that Maynard was armed.

Shortly before 7 p.m., after the county officers had arrived, a gunshot was heard.

No more was heard from the mobile home until 9 p.m. when deputies forced the door open to the Maynard residence, finding the wounded man on the floor of the living room and his dead wife on the couch nearby.

Congress opens hearings on Reagan Cabinet members

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opening-day niceties out of the way, the 97th Congress is getting down to the business of taking a close look at the people Ronald Reagan wants to run his administration.

Confirmation hearings in the newly Republican-controlled Senate were scheduled today for Cabinet nominees Richard Schweiker for the Department of Health and Human Services, Caspar Weinberger for Defense, Malcolm Baldrige for Commerce, John R. Block for Agriculture and Donald T. Regan for Treasury.

Also, the House and Senate were meeting jointly today to carry out a constitutional requirement that they ratify Reagan's victory by certifying the Electoral College vote results.

Most of today's confirmation hearings were expected to be marked by a lack of fireworks, if not friendly questioning.

However, Block was likely to be questioned closely about his avowed opposition to the Soviet grain embargo and to the food stamp program, which is administered by the Agriculture Department he hopes to head.

Hearings on Reagan's nomination of Alexander Haig to be secretary of state, his toughest appointment, are to begin Friday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Some Democrats have said they want to examine Haig's role as former President Richard M. Nixon's chief of staff during the days before Nixon was forced from office because of the Watergate scandals of the early 1970s.

But Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, a respected Democratic member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, called Monday for Haig's confirmation.

"For those who are insatiably curious about the Nixon era and Watergate, there are plenty of books they can buy," Nunn said.

It was not clear how much fuss would be stirred either by Haig's connection to Watergate or by his career as a four-star Army general who headed the military forces of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd said he has detected no concerted Democratic campaign to delay or kill the Haig nomination.

Howard H. Baker Jr., the new Senate majority leader, said he expects the various Senate committees will approve all of Reagan's nominees by Jan. 20, Inauguration Day, and that the full Senate will confirm them shortly afterward.

Baker said fast action on Reagan's nominees would permit Congress to go to work on the new president's plan for the economy, which the majority leader said would be worked out in advance with congressional leaders and formally proposed to Congress by early February.

The newly elected Congress' first session Monday was marked by good-humored ceremony in the Republican-controlled Senate and some bitter partisan quarreling in the House.

On the House side, Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill's re-election as speaker on a party-line vote reflected the continued Democratic control of that chamber.

Taking note of the increasingly conservative tone of both Houses, O'Neill said: "Being elected every two years, we are acutely aware of the desires of the people. We intend to adapt to the changed circumstances."

The GOP gained 33 seats in last November's elections and Republicans hope to take control of the House in 1982.

Nonetheless, under O'Neill's leadership, the Democrats beat back an attempt by Republicans on Monday to get more voting power on two key committees, Ways and Means and Rules.

That prompted Rep. W. Henson Moore, R-Ia., to complain that the Ways and Means Committee was "being stacked by the same people who were overwhelmingly repudiated on Nov. 4" and Rep. John Roussetot, R-Calif., to accuse Democrats of choking off debate on the issue of giving Republicans additional seats on the two panels.

"It is a mistake to gag this House and prevent it from fulfilling the promises made in the last election," Roussetot said.

The Ways and Means panel, which the Democrats dominate 23-12, will have jurisdiction over Reagan's plans to propose a tax cut and other economic measures. The Rules Committee, where Democrats prevail 11-5, controls the speed and procedures under which the new president's legislative proposals would be considered in the House.

Weather

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures through Wednesday. Winds will be 15-20 mph today decreasing tonight.

Protesters urge sign-up as 'CO'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Carole Carlson, a Denver pastor who says draft registration will bring the nation a step closer to war, is urging young men to sign up as conscientious objectors.

A spokeswoman at Selective Service headquarters in Washington said that's fine, but such a designation won't do draft registrants any good.

"If it makes them feel any better, they can write 'CO' on their registration cards, as long as it doesn't interfere with the legitimacy of their information," said Joan Lamb of the Selective Service.

But she emphasized that young men born in 1962 — they turn 19 years old this year — are required to register this week even though they may object on religious or moral grounds.

Failure to register carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Ms. Lamb said the only time a registrant can seek exemption from the draft as a conscientious objector is at the time of pre-induction classification and examination. Without a draft in force, she said, any classification and examination at the time of registration would be a waste of $220 million in tax funds.

Despite the protests by Ms. Carlson, pastor of the United Church of Christ in Denver, and other anti-draft leaders in cities across the country, the Selective Service predicts that nearly all the 1.9 million eligible young men will register this week, as required under President Carter's post-Afghanistan preparedness plan.

Registration began Monday at local post offices and all young men who will turn 19 in 1981 are supposed to be registered by Saturday. Afterward, all males are to register within 30 days of their 18th birthday.

All of this year's registrants, plus the 3.7 million 19- and 20-year-olds who signed up in the first draft registration last July, will have their names placed in a computerized pool of potential draftees in the event an actual draft is ordered in a national emergency. Their names will be dropped from the pool as they reach their 26th birthday.

Although protest demonstrations were widespread Monday, there were no reported incidents of serious violence.

Former Canadian resident murdered

MOORE, Okla. — A former Canadian woman was found dead in her home in Moore, Okla., Monday of multiple stab wounds in one of the first such slashing-type murders in that town in several years, according to Moore Police officials.

Tracy Waterford Neilson, 20, a University of Oklahoma coed, was found at approximately 5 p.m. Monday in her residence at 1104 NW Tenth Street by her husband, Jeff Neilson, a medical student at the University of Oklahoma.

Moore, Okla. police officials said they have no suspects in custody at this time but are checking leads provided by other residents of the Tenth Street apartment complex.

"There were no signs of forced entry at the apartment, and there was nothing reported missing," Moore police officials said today.

Police officials said they are seeking a knife of some type which was apparently used as the weapon in the brutal slaying.

Services for Mrs. Tracy Waterford Neilson are pending in Canadian with the Stickley-Hill Funeral Directors.

She is survived by her husband; her parents, Mrs. and Mrs. Jim Waterfield of Canadian; one brother, Rick Waterfield of Canadian; one sister, Cindy Waterfield of Canadian; and her grandparents, Mrs. and Mrs. John Wilkerson of Canadian.

Police investigate arson

Pampa Police are investigating a house fire that occurred Sunday and erupted again later that day as a possible arson.

The blaze at 405 Perry was reported at 12:15 a.m. Sunday, and Pampa firemen said the blaze caused light damage to the outside of the home, belonging to Paul Pletcher.

A blaze again at that address was reported at 8:15 p.m. Sunday. This second blaze was probably caused by the electrical wiring in the wall of the home which had been damaged in the first fire, Pampa fire officials said.

"We turned the case over to the police department for investigation after traces of a flammable liquid were detected near the sight of the fire," Pampa Fire Chief J.D. Ray said today.

"It does not look right now as though this fire is related to the 1980 arsons in Gray County," Ray said.

Weekend arraignments end

Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford has announced that arraignments on misdemeanor offenses will no longer be conducted during the weekends.

Lunsford said all persons charged with driving while intoxicated, public intoxication and other misdemeanor offenses will be arraigned on the following Monday at 9 a.m.

Industrial Foundation names nominees

The Pampa Industrial Foundation board today named 10 nominees for five three-year terms on the board, according to Pampa Chamber of Commerce manager Floyd Sackett.

The nominees are Frank Cuijerson, Joe Gidden, E. L. Green Jr., Benny Kirksey, Ray Kuhn, Rex McKay, Jim Nation, Fred Neslage, I. W. Tinney and R. D. "Jimmy" Wilkerson.

Of the 10, the five who receive the greatest number of votes will be named to serve on the board.

Ballots are to be placed in the mail Thursday, Jan. 8, to members of the Pampa Industrial Foundation and should be returned to the chamber of commerce office by Jan. 23 when the ballots will be counted. # Texas' freshmen Congressmen excited after first day in office

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Bill Patman is one of three new Texas congressmen but he can already claim years of Capitol Hill experience, most of it from long before he ever thought he would be taking the oath of office.
 The Democrat from Ganado was born in 1927, just one year before his father, the late Wright Patman, was elected to Congress for the first of his 25 terms.
 "It's quite a thrill for me, as you can imagine," the new congressman said Monday after the swearing-in ceremony for the 97th Congress.
 Patman noted that he grew up watching his father's career and, as a boy, worked as a congressional page. He also worked at other jobs in Washington.
 "I was so wrapped up in my father's career that I really didn't contemplate going to Congress myself," the former state senator said. "In fact, I didn't think I'd get into politics."
 Rep. Ralph Hall, a Rockwall Democrat, and Rep. Jack Fields, a Republican from Humble, also were sworn in Monday for their first terms.
 "It feels good," Hall, a former state senator, said upon assuming his new duties.
 Hall's district was represented by the late House Speaker Sam Rayburn for almost half a century, and he said that heritage means a lot.
 He said that Rayburn and Ray Roberts, the McKinney Democrat whose retirement cleared the way for Hall's election, represented the 4th District of Texas for most of the 20th Century and he hoped to close out the century in the seat.
 Until Hall can find a home of his own, he and his wife are living in the Roberts' suburban Virginia house. Hall also hired many of Roberts' former staff.

 Fields, a 28-year-old conservative, became one of the youngest members of Congress.
 He defeated veteran liberal Bob Eckhardt, a Houston Democrat, in one of the tightest Texas congressional races last year.
 "It's very exciting - it's a whole new world," Fields said after taking the oath of office. "I would be less than honest if I said anything other than that I was overwhelmed."
 House committee assignments for new members have not been made yet, but Fields said if he could choose, it would be for a seat on the newly renamed energy and commerce committee.
 Fields, who drew strong support from the energy industry during his campaign, estimated that one-half of the residents in his Houston-Gulf Coast district depend directly on the energy industry for their income.
 "I would hope that I would have a philosophy that is going to promote the development of energy," he said.
 Hall, whose district includes East Texas oil fields, said he expected to be assigned either to the energy and commerce committee or to the public works committee where Roberts sat.
 Patman said his top choices were the armed services committee, because of the military installations in his district, or the banking committee where he could continue the work on interest rates that he started in the Texas Legislature.
 All three Texas newcomers were accompanied by relatives and political supporters from home for the ceremonial activities that included rounds of receptions and luncheons.

Scientists play 'what if' with terrorists

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - Like the authors of the spy novels that line their shelves, engineers and scientists here dream up terrorist plots for breaking into the nation's nuclear weapons plants. Then they plan - and test - security measures to foil their own schemes.
 As armchair terrorists, the security scientists here read intelligence reports by the FBI and the military, the "Soldier of Fortune" magazine for mercenaries, mysteries, thrillers and scholarly works. The also examine plans of nuclear plants.
 Then they ask themselves, what if...?
 What if a drunk tries to crash a gate at a weapons plant? What if a spy is working inside a plant?
 The plotting and counterplotting are known as "black hat exercises" since the fictitious terrorists and saboteurs are the bad guys.
 The targets of the plots developed at Sandia National Laboratory here are nuclear weapons plants and research facilities, owned by the Department of Energy but operated by private contractors.
 "What we at Sandia do is look at engineering solutions to the problem of terrorists," said Roy Crouch, director of safeguards and security for the U.S. Department of Energy.

 "We read all of this literature and ask ourselves, 'If somebody tries to do that, are we prepared for it?'. We go to military people and ask them, 'If you and your buddies from Vietnam try to take over our plant, what would you do?'" said Bill Myre, director of nuclear security at Sandia.
 Another technique for second-guessing and countering terrorist attacks is to feed information on nuclear plants - drawings, floor plans, personnel schedules, photos - into a computer.
 Often, "the computers will tip us off to the easiest route into a plant," Myre said.
 The scientists also occasionally put a scenario into action to test guards and the plant's security setup.
 Crouch said inspectors go out in the middle of the night and tell guards there will be a drill.
 "We're not sneaking over a fence and leaping on a guard," he said. "That's the worst thing we can do."
 "It's like Army training," Myre said. "The bullets are not for real. There are no real battles until you go to war."

Braniff to name new chief

DALLAS (AP) — Vice-chairman John J. Casey will vault past company president Russel Thayer into the board chairmanship of Braniff International Airlines when the board gathers on Wednesday, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Harding Lawrence resigned as board chairman and chief executive officer Dec. 30, in a move that caught the industry by surprise.

The News said Casey, brother of American Airlines chairman Albert V. Casey, has the support of management and employees for the job and has even drawn up a new program for running the company.

Members of the board and company creditors have not seen that plan, according to the newspaper's unidentified company sources, but are expected to give it their approval.

Casey would realign internal responsibilities so that a trio of hand-picked executives would report directly to him, the newspaper said.

Those executives would be Neal J. Robinson, vice president for finance and control; Bill Huskins, vice president of engineering and maintenance; and Edson Beckwith, vice president of financial services, said the News.

Casey, Robinson, Huskins and Beckwith were not immediately available for comment.

Industry analysts have guessed two factors probably led to Lawrence's retirement last week. One was Braniff's financial position — the company lost $113 million in the first three months of 1980 — and preliminary merger talks with much-larger Eastern Air Lines — whose president, Frank Borman, reportedly would expect to be in charge of a post-merger company.

Oppenheimer & Co. analyst Michael Derching said he had been "leaning toward Thayer as the new Braniff pilot. My second choice would be Stewart. My last choice would be Casey. I look at Casey as more an operations guy, not a chief executive officer."

Casey joined Braniff in 1968, after a stint as senior vice president for Seaboard World Airlines in New York. Before that, he was an executive with American Airlines.

Reagan man hustles to get airport crowd

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Local Republican leaders did some last-minute scrambling after President-elect Ronald Reagan decided he wanted to see a crowd on hand for his reception at the airport here.

Initially, Reagan had wanted the arrival to be "low key," but changed his mind two days beforehand.

"At first, they didn't want anybody at the airport at all," said El Paso County GOP Chairman Ralph Scoggins. "Then Saturday afternoon, they changed their minds."

Scoggins was able to hire a mariachi band and spread the word so that about 250 citizens showed up at the airport for the Monday morning arrival of Reagan, who then went by car across the international border to Juarez for a meeting with the president of Mexico.

Scoggins said the brightly costumed mariachi musicians were hired after some of Reagan's advance men heard the folk music Saturday night and suggested the band be at the airport for the arrival.

A reception line of 21 persons including Texas Gov. Bill Clements was hastily assembled as Reagan stepped down from his jet.

In another last-minute turnaround, U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Julian Nava almost was left out of the meeting between Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo. Nava was at the El Paso airport an hour before Reagan's arrival Monday, but he was not wearing an official identification badge when the presidential parties arrived at the Art and History Museum in Juarez, Mexico.

A small group of national pool news reporters and the entourages of both leaders entered the museum, but guards kept Nava out by mistake. He remained outside in an area roped off for about 300 other newsmen for about 10 minutes while the rest of the party was inside the small, round building.

Finally a Mexican official retrieved Nava from the crowd and apologized for not recognizing him.

While Reagan and Lopez Portillo leaders met, Clements was in a separate room of the museum, talking to Oscar Ornelas, governor of the Mexican state of Chihuahua, and the mayors of El Paso and Juarez.

Clements said one of the topics the four men discussed was that of the migration of Mexicans flooding into the United States illegally to seek jobs. At a border governors' meeting last summer, Clements proposed giving the Mexicans work permits to control the flow.

"There is a general area of agreement that very closely follows the pattern of what we talked about last June — temporary work visas good for up to a year," Clements said. He said no action has been taken on such a plan yet.

"Just exactly how you bring about an implementation of that kind of a program has not been discussed, but that's only a detail," he said.

When a reporter asked Clements if the meeting were one more of symbolism than substance he said, "That sounds good in the press but I find very little substance in that phrase."

Man crushed in landfill

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A man was crushed to death by a load of debris that fell on his pickup truck at a landfill Monday, police reported.

Robert Moran, 19, was sitting in the cab of his pickup truck when a nearby truck dumped a load of heavy waste materials. Investigators said the dump truck's load shifted and fell on Moran's truck, trapping him inside and fatally crushing him.

Moran was pronounced dead at Brady Clinic at 1:45 p.m. Monday.

Jarvis aids Texas tax group

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state tax relief organization is getting help — a lot of it — from Howard Jarvis, who led the campaign that resulted in California's tax-cutting Proposition 13.

Texas 13 announced Monday that Jarvis will make an 18-city tour of Texas, beginning in El Paso today and ending next Monday with a rally in Austin, the day before the Legislature convenes.

Former Attorney General Waggoner Carr, president of Texas 13, said his organization's legislative program includes a push for initiative and referendum, which Californians used to reduce their local property taxes in 1978.

The Texas Research League says Texans' state and local tax burden is the lowest in the nation, at 8.53 percent of total income.

In addition to Jarvis' appearance in El Paso, he will go to Lubbock and Midland on Wednesday; Odessa, Abilene and Fort Worth on Thursday; Tyler, Waco and Dallas on Friday; Lufkin, Beaumont, Galveston and Houston on Saturday; Victoria and McAllen on Sunday; and Harlingen, San Antonio and Austin on Monday, Jan. 12.

Carr said Texas 13 was not named for Proposition 13 but for the original 13 colonies

"which fought against unjust and burdensome taxation."

He said his organization is a coalition of 28 local groups with about 55,000 members.

Texas 13's legislative program for the 1981 session includes:

- No new state taxes for another two years.
- Texas has not had a state tax increase since 1971.
- Return of the treasury surplus to taxpayers.
- Reduction of the number of state employees.
- A constitutional amendment requiring a two-thirds vote in each house to raise taxes.

— A constitutional amendment giving the people the right of initiative and referendum on tax and spending matters.

Carr noted with disapproval that the Legislative Budget Board has recommended an increase of more than $5 billion in the biennial state budget.

"This program to moderate government spending, slow the growth of government bureaucracy and halt the tax spiral will require the support and active help of every concerned Texas taxpayer — and every taxpayer is vitally concerned. This is why it is so fortunate that Howard Jarvis is coming to lend his prestige and influence to our efforts as the legislative session gets underway," Carr said.

Traffic toll exceeds DPS prediction

By The Associated Press
The bloody New Year's holiday weekend is over, leaving 38 people dead from traffic accidents — one more than officials predicted would die during the 102-hour holiday period.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Richard Grimmert said Monday that the last victim, Sylvia Zamora Ugolina, 26, died a minute before the counting period ended at midnight Sunday.

She was a passenger on a motorcycle that ran off Interstate 10 in El Paso.

DPS officials had predicted 37 people would die during the 4½-day period that started at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

The count was the second in a two-week holiday period. Fifty people were killed during the 4½-day Christmas holiday, eight less than the DPS estimate of 58.

Grimmert said the 38 New Year's holiday victims died in 34 separate accidents. Fifteen of the accidents were one-car crashes that killed 15 people, he said.

Four head-on collisions killed six people and five more died in five auto-pedestrian accidents, he said.

Pressures against Reagan will come up soon

Syndicated columnist Victor Riesel made a regrettable pitch for auto import controls, which Jimmy Carter and the International Trade Commission have spurned thus far. Ronald Reagan is likely to face pressure to impose such limitations once he takes office, and unless consumers scream loud and hard, he may find it politically impractical not to do so.

Preventing the imports from competing with Detroit's lines may be only the start of Reagan's troubles on the auto front, however. The possibility is growing that Chrysler Corp. might fail notwithstanding the $1.5 billion loan guarantee approved this year. The new president surely would then be asked to work out some new bailout arrangement and he's going to find it hard to refuse. His campaign concessions in Detroit, where he not only came out against "dumping" of imports but said he had changed his mind on the Chrysler loan guarantee and now favored it, might come back to haunt him.

Chrysler is in trouble again for a variety of reasons. For one, interest rates are headed up again (the result of continued heavy government borrowing brought on by high government spending). The heavily unionized auto industry is slow in making itself more efficient.

If Chrysler cannot endure even with the subsidy the taxpayers provide it already, what then? Not surprisingly, it should sink or swim on its own merit. In a bankruptcy, the profitable divisions of the company would be assumed by other firms, and the capital that is being misallocated to perpetuate production lines that enjoy no market could be freed for use by more vibrant sectors of the economy.

Reagan, though he'll be getting similar advice from many of those close to him, is hobbled by his words to the Chrysler workers at a luncheon symposium before the election. Should he simply renounce his comments as throwaway campaign pronouncements, and acknowledge himself a typical politician? Or should he try to skirt the issue, by telling the auto workers that, yes, he favored the bailout when he talked to them, but that it hasn't worked after all and he sees no point in a bigger one?

Reagan could soften that harsh note by reminding his audience that he plans to reduce federal harassment of the domestic industry, actions that will improve the health (and increase the hiring capacity) of the firms that survive the current crunch. The only good job is one that derives from genuine consumer demand, and not only the auto workers but all of us are going to have to learn that if we're to breathe life into our stagnant economy.

Reagan's stand on the hustlings has made his Chrysler dilemma worse, but it ought not to cloud his judgment on what will be a central concern of his presidency: dealing with the fact that we can't hope to nurture a new generation of American industry in this manner.

Figuring in D.C.

You might wonder how the people in Washington spit out all those big figures when they get to talking in terms of billions of dollars.

Well, they have a way.

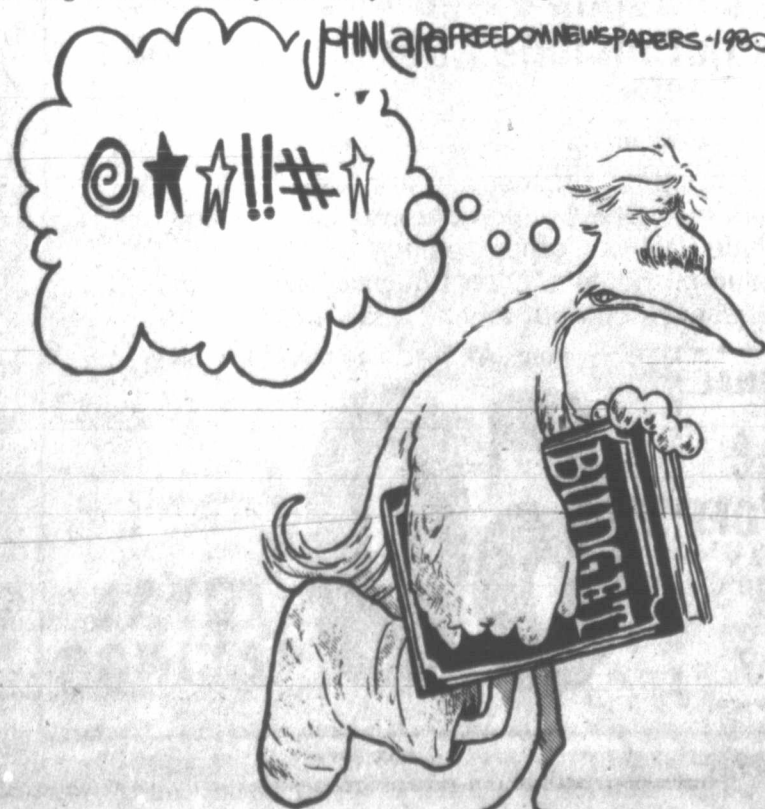

They treat one billion as though it were one dollar.

The Reader's Digest in a November article spelled that out. It said that: "A $300-million appropriation, in budget committee markup, is simply called '3' to facilitate calculation. It also correctly conveys the attitude toward taxpayers' money that prevails in Washington: $10 million — represented as .01 — is chickenfeed, the lowest possible unit of computation.

The Digest went on to say that the way they think in Washington is further demonstrated by President Carter's description of the nation's first $500-billion budget (in 1978) as "lean and tight."

To grasp what is really involved at this colossal level of spending, it may prove useful to break down the arithmetic this way: If you had started out at the birth of Christ spending $690,000 a day, every day, and had continued spending money at that rate through all the intervening centuries, you would just now have succeeded in getting rid of $500 billion. Or, to put it in a shorter time frame, to spend that much money in a year our government has to disburse nearly a million dollars a minute — $951,000 — every minute of every day.

"Shocking" is a word totally unworthy in describing the situation.

Oil reform or politics as usual?

By Howard P. Marvel

The arrival of a new administration offers hope for regulatory reform designed to straighten out the energy mess. Real reform will require a change in the focus of government policy from a search for scapegoats to one for solutions. One important indication of whether that change has occurred will be provided by the fate of subsidies to small refiners.

The leading role among the villains in any energy crisis scenario always seems to go to "Big Oil," with the result that policymakers try to control the power of the largest oil firms by fostering and sheltering smaller competitors. The subsidies to Big Oil's competitors have been particularly generous for small refining operations, with the result that the U.S. is adding refining capacity which refines the wrong kind of crude oil into the wrong kind of petroleum products. These weak sisters of the "Seven Sisters" exert a negligible competitive discipline, but the policies that spawned them may forestall installation of more efficient and therefore more competitive refining capacity.

Many of our small refining operations were created by regulations that will soon be removed. Since 1974, 64 new refineries have been built in this country. The average size of these new units is only 14,500 barrels per day, a capacity about one-eighth the size of Big Oil's typical refinery.

Why were these "tea kettle" units built?

Under the entitlements program, the government forces refiners with access to controlled-price domestic crude oil to subsidize those who buy from foreign sources. Because of a so-called small refiner bias in this scheme, a disproportionately large fraction of these entitlements payments is funneled to the tea-kettle operators. Since it is easy to set up a little refinery and get a check from Exxon, Texaco or Gulf, many people scrambled to get on the gravy train. This explains why there are more refineries in the U.S. now than in 1974, while the number of refineries has been dropping in Western Europe and Japan.

What are the consequences of this subsidy to small refiners? They break down into three groups: considerations of efficiency, the environment, and national security. Small refiner inefficiency can be clearly seen by comparing refineries in the U.S. to those in the rest of the developed world. In both Western Europe and Japan average refinery size is well over 100,000 barrels per day and growing. In the U.S. it is under 60,000 barrels per day and static. Many large refineries can produce aromatics, compounds used to raise octane levels in unleaded gasoline. Hydroprocessing facilities at many of these refineries allow them to remove sulfur, an important pollutant, from crude oil. Of those 64 new U.S. refineries, only about six have either sort of production facility because it simply does not pay to install such sophisticated, large scale technology at these small units.

Since small refiners are unable to produce relatively large amounts of low sulfur fuel oil and high octane unleaded gasoline, reaching environmental goals is unnecessarily difficult and expensive. This problem will steadily worsen because easy-to-refine low-sulfur crude oil has been used in preference to heavy, high-sulfur crudes. Heavy California crudes, oil from Alaska's North Slope, and most of the rest of the world's remaining crude oil reserves are high in sulfur content. Only a few years after completion, the small refineries are well on their way to becoming antiques.

It is possible, of course, to produce low sulfur fuel oil in a small refinery. One simply starts with low sulfur crude oil. Unfortunately for the U.S., an important source of that crude oil is North Africa, particularly Libya and Algeria. Their oils previously went to the European coast of the Mediterranean, but much of it now goes west to the U.S., passing eastbound shipments of high-sulfur Middle Eastern crude at the Straits of Gibraltar. This cross-hauling is inefficient and serves to strengthen the bargaining position of two of OPEC's principal hawks. Increasing our dependence on Libya's Qaddafi and his Algerian allies hardly seems to be in the interest of our national security; nevertheless it is the direct consequence of our domestic refining policy.

We can have low sulfur fuel oil and high octane gasoline even if we start from low quality crude oil. Japan uses predominantly high sulfur crude and is still able to impose strict sulfur emissions controls because of its sophisticated refinery technology. Much of that technology is American in origin, and has been applied in America's larger refineries.

We can have low sulfur fuel oil and high octane gasoline even if we start from low quality crude oil. Japan uses predominantly high sulfur crude and is still able to impose strict sulfur emissions controls because of its sophisticated refinery technology. Much of that technology is American in origin, and has been applied in America's larger refineries.

The question now is what to do with the little refineries. Because decontrol of U.S. crude oil prices will eliminate the entitlements subsidy, many — perhaps most — small refineries will fail unless they obtain some other form of subsidy. Accordingly, their trade association has launched a lobbying effort to convince Congress and the new administration to upgrade unsophisticated refining capacity with subsidies and to provide small refiners with preferential access to the high quality crude they require. The subsidy has the politically useful property that it comes not from Big Oil but rather from taxpayers, an altogether more pliant group. The preferential access may not appeal to Big Oil, but it will appeal to bureaucrats whose jobs are threatened by decontrol and for whom intervention in the petroleum market has become a way of life.

If the new administration can resist substantial political pressure to save these progeny of earlier regulatory excess, President Reagan will be able to deliver on his promises to free up the petroleum market. If the subsidies are granted, it will signify business as usual in energy and politics as usual in Washington.

Take a card--any card

"Is this Mr. Erik Gerende?"
"Speaking."
"This is Mr. Barkle of the Visa card company."
"Happy New Year."
"That is not what I'm calling about. We notice that you have $2,340 in charges and we haven't heard from you."
"I didn't know I was supposed to call."
"You weren't supposed to call. You were supposed to send us a check."
"I would have, but it would only bounce and then you people would have gotten mad at me."
"You mean you don't have $2,340?"
"Who does, except the Hunt Brothers?"
"I'm not in a joking mood, Mr. Gerende. We need the $2,340."
"Well, you better call somebody else because I don't have it."
"Why did you use our Visa card if you didn't have the funds?"
"I didn't intend to. But everytime I went into a store before Christmas, the person behind the counter said, 'We'll take either Visa, MasterCard or American Express.' I figured you people needed the business so I gave everyone my Visa card."

"We sent you that Visa card on the understanding that you would pay us back for the things you charged on it."
"Well, if that's the way you feel about it, I'll send the card back to you. I don't want to do business with any company where I'm not welcome."
"You don't have to do that. We've canceled your Visa card already. If you pay us back the $2,340 we will be happy to reinstate you."
"For $2,340 I could join the Burning Tree Country Club. Look, if I had the money I'd send it to you. But I'm a little strapped now, what with Christmas and everything."
"What did you buy with the card?"
"A lot of stuff for the kids and two airline tickets for my parents to visit us over the holidays."

"Have they used the tickets both ways?"
"Yeh, they went home last night. They had a great time."
"Mr. Gerende, this is going to look very bad to the computer. The computer gets very angry when one of our members fails to pay his bills."
"What does it do?"
"It tells other computers all over America that you refused to pay your Visa obligations."
"That's a rotten thing to do."
"Do you know what you are now, Mr. Gerende, in the memory of every computer in this country?"
"No, what am I?"
"A deadbeat."
"Nobody's perfect."
"We want our money, Mr. Gerende, and we want it now."
"Okay, if you feel that way about it. Do you people take American Express credit cards?"

Not so fancy footwork

By Don Graft

For a time there early on, it appeared candidate Ronald Reagan's most notable contribution to the presidential campaign was going to be a running demonstration of an extraordinary ability to plant a foot squarely in his own mouth.

His advisers took care of that potentially disastrous problem in short and effective order, ruling out extemporaneous interpolations in set speeches and restricting direct contact between working press and the candidate to minimize chances of his being caught in an off-guard comment.

So much for the campaign. President-elect Reagan has not, however, been able to leave the problem entirely behind. Only now it's a matter of other people's feet.

There was, to start with, the well-publicized Asian tour of Ray Cline, a foreign-policy adviser and likely nominee for a key administration post. His advice on this occasion was to "People's China, on how "civilized behavior" could increase its popularity in the international community. It was not appreciated, drawing a blast from Peking that the administration — to be did not need as it works to get its policy priorities in order.

Now we have the surprising performance of Sen. Charles Percy. Surprising because Percy has a reputation as one of the more responsible members of the upper house, not given to grandstanding for partisans or personal reasons.

It might be expected that as the incoming chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, which he is, on an exploratory visit to the Soviet Union, which he was, he would have coordinated positions with the president-elect, which he apparently did not.

Instead, in signifying support for a Palestinian state during his Kremlin conversations, Percy raised a foot that Reagan has been compelled publicly to dodge. It's not the sort of incident that gets new teams in the White House and on Capitol Hill off to a cooperative start.

It may be that too much has been made of the incidents. The Reagan command has issued a directive disabusing globe-trotting associates of any enthusiastic notion they may be entitled to speak for the president-elect. Further, neither the Reagan team nor Percy and his Republican Senate colleagues are in policy-determining position yet.

On the other hand, the responsibility of being in position is no guarantee that feet will be kept under control. We have the record of the Carter administration — Andrew Young, Zbigniew Brzezinski and all that — as evidence.

Which suggests that the epidemic of tangled feet we've been seeing of late may come down to a simple question: So what else is new?

Maybe nothing, but the American people can always hope.

Reduction of junior high sports proposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A State Board of Education committee is recommending that the power of the University Interscholastic League — governing body for public school athletics in Texas — be diluted and competition among junior high schools be de-emphasized.

The Committee for Special Schools and Athletics recommends the UIL governing body be enlarged from nine to 13 members, not including the league's executive director, and that any junior high sport that makes a student miss even part of a class be halted.

The committee said interscholastic programs require students to spend "significant amounts of time during the regular school day in athletic endeavors."

Athletics in grades seven and eight are "nonessential activities" that can be reduced to lift students' grades and save taxpayers money, the committee said.

Many junior high schools in Texas offer extensive athletic programs.

The committee offered this recommendation to the Board of Education, which meets Saturday.

"The junior high level program should emphasize regular physical education and intramural activities. Emphasis on interschool competitive activities should be reduced. No athletic endeavor, including preparation and travel time, should be scheduled in a manner that would result in a student's loss of instructional time during the regular school day."

Athletic Director Bill Farney of the University Interscholastic League said, "Local school districts already can do that themselves. It's up to each district."

"The idea is that the students' grades will pick up, that they will go straight home and do homework and study," said Farney, "but I think — as one who has a doctorate in education — they probably will throw Frisbees, work on cars or do everything else."

The committee recommended that the current nine-member UIL state executive committee, which includes seven University of Texas professors, UIL Director Bailey Marshall and Farney, be enlarged to 13 members — seven professors and six citizens "who are knowledgeable in public school extracurricular programs."

Farney said he and Marshall, who are voting members of the executive committee, presumably would remain on the committee, without a vote. "Since we bring cases before the committee, we tend to be looked upon as prosecuting attorneys," said Farney.

"Nothing substantive is changed," he said.

The special committee said the executive committee should govern all UIL operations. Currently, the special committee said, the executive committee is primarily concerned with interpreting rules and "does not function in the true sense as governing-policymaking board."

Farney said he thought the larger committee would still go to the UIL's 1,151 member schools to get administrators' opinions before changing a UIL rule.

"We've been called inflexible," said Farney, "but we are a democratic organization with built-in safeguards."

Farney said the special committee's recommendation to make it easier to get a proposal on the UIL's statewide ballot could result in conflicting propositions, such as different dates for the state track meet.

The committee said an official request by three separate UIL district committees from each of the four regions should be sufficient to get a proposal on the ballot. The UIL's Legislative Committee of administrators now determines which proposals are placed on the spring ballot.

Farney said, however, South Texas — where the weather is warmer — might want a March date for the track meet so schools from that region would have an advantage over Panhandle teams. Schools from the Panhandle might favor a late June date to give their athletes more time to get in shape.

The Board of Education committee also recommended that:

— The UIL's constitution and contest rules be rewritten to avoid inconsistent rulings by the 169 UIL district committees.

— A group of educators be set up in each region to review and rule on written appeals of UIL rulings and interpretations.

— UIL policies should be revised "to ensure that students are not needlessly penalized for the inappropriate behavior or activities of responsible school district employees."

The committee said its research had shown that the majority of sanctions imposed on school districts for rules violations "actually penalize the students" where "in most instances, the students neither perpetrated nor are they responsible for the rule infraction."

"It is very, very difficult for the UIL to penalize a coach or often even to find out whose fault it is," said Farney. "For one thing, there is the question of civil rights. ... There is no way you can penalize a school without penalizing the youngsters. No state (organization) has found a way to do it."

"It's a very idealistic recommendation," said Farney, "and if we could find a way to do it, we should copyright it and make a lot of money."

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last week my husband's half-brother, from whom he had not heard in 33 years, appeared at our door with his wife. They had driven from California, arriving at our place in Ohio just as we were finishing our dinner. We were hurrying to get to a meeting so we didn't offer to feed them. It was very awkward.

My husband asked them where they were staying, and they said, "Nowhere." I'm sure they were planning to stay with us, but I was expecting my parents from out of town in a few days, and we have only one guest room, so I didn't offer. However, I did invite them to come back the following evening for dinner.

MRS. VERSUS MR.

DEAR MRS.: If these long-lost relatives knew where to find you, they could (and should) have written or called to let you know they were coming. Blood may be thicker than water, but after 33 years in California it might have thinned out a little. I vote with you.

DEAR ABBY: I must respond to your letter from IN LOVE IN JERSEY, the woman who was in love with a homosexual. Your advice to "do yourself (and him) a favor and give up" probably cost them both a valuable friendship. Gay men make marvelous friends. They are warm, sincere, understanding and will do anything for a friend. Maybe she wasn't so much in love with him as she valued his friendship.

My best friend is gay (I am a woman), and we think the world of each other. Friends are hard to come by, and it shouldn't matter whether they are male, female or gay.

LOVES A GAY IN PORTLAND

DEAR LOVES: IN LOVE IN JERSEY didn't just

"love" a gay; she was in love with him," and wanted him to marry her. She asked if I thought he could change his sexual preference.

I told her his chances for changing were zilch and advised her to give up. Granted, gays make wonderful friends, but they are not for marrying.

DEAR ABBY: A very good friend of ours died after a long illness. While this friend (I'll call him Bill) was ill, my husband and I sent over at least a dozen books for him to read. One in particular is irreplaceable, having been personally inscribed by the author. It's been nearly two years since Bill died, and his widow has made no attempt to return our books.

Although we see her quite often socially as well as at church, we have never mentioned the books to her. We know she's aware that she has them because a year ago she said, "I'm really ashamed of myself for not having returned those books you let Bill read."

DEAR NAMELESS: Call Bill's widow and tell her you realize that she's had a lot on her mind these last two years, so she needn't be embarrassed for neglecting to return your books, and if it's convenient, you'd like to stop by and pick them up tomorrow. And when you do, bring her a little gift of flowers, cookies, fruit or whatever.

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Creativity is key to decorating

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The difference between good decorating and bad decorating isn't money. It's creativity.

If you doubt this, listen to three decorators who were asked for advice for do-it-yourselfers with limited funds and big ideas.

"It doesn't cost anything to educate your eye," said Janet Rosenberg, who has a design studio in Upper Montclair, N.J. A beginner can develop confidence by accumulating information from magazines in her opinion.

"Cut out any room or decorating idea you see and like and then put it in a reference file for future use," she suggested. Another no-cost way to educate yourself is to pay close attention to any environment in which you find yourself.

"Ask yourself what is it about the space that is pleasing or irritating," she said. The habit of noticing will soon make it clear what kind of spaces are especially appealing to anyone who tries this trick, she added.

When it is time to begin the first decorating project, start out with something small. Allow enough money to complete the entire room, limiting yourself to projects small enough to fit into your budget.

Take a photo of the room after removing all loose miscellaneous accessories. The photo will reveal better than the naked eye the room's deficiencies, according to Ms. Rosenberg.

If money is lacking, search for ideas that provide the maximum effect. That almost always means using color.

"The use of color is the cheapest and most effective decorating ploy," according to Joseph Freitag, president of the New York area chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers.

"It costs the same to paint the wall red as it does blue, so a good color sense can make the most difference for the least money," he added.

Anyone who is willing to put in the time and effort can learn how to use color, but a tip for novices is to pick a print you like with three or four colors and use those colors for your scheme.

"Then don't use the print. You don't need it once you've got your scheme," noted Freitag. If you choose colors you really like, chances are they will appeal to you for years. But if you do need to introduce a new element into an existing room that you do not wish to otherwise change, make sure that element is in a muted color.

"If you make it too bright, it's going to make the rest of the room look dated and old," said Freitag.

A clever decorating idea that doesn't have to cost much is to make up a wall grouping of objects and artworks that have special significance.

"If you decide to make such an arrangement, make sure it is installed in a spot where people can get up close to look at it. After all, that's the whole point of the thing," he added.

The use of an unexpected object in a surprising setting can be an effective, yet inexpensive, decorating trick, according to Cathy Crane, a designer and author of "What Do You Say to a Naked Room?"

For example, in a bedroom that illustrates the principle, a large orange beach umbrella was opened and set at a slant in a bucket filled with pebbles against a purple wall. Orange throw cushions were set on the bed.

"The bedroom gave a feeling of shelter and warmth that was very pleasing," said Ms. Crane.

Lighting offers another inexpensive way to add drama to a room. For example, set a floor canister light behind a large plant. The light will reflect and enlarge the pattern of the leaves on the ceiling, softening a cold room and providing an agreeable air of mystery in an ordinary room, she said.

It is simpler than one might think to outline a room with light, added Ms. Crane.

AT WIT'S END

By Erma Bombeck

Since the holidays, Mother has been looking a little peaked. It's nothing you can put your finger on - just a lot of dragging from chair to chair and heavy sighing.

When I saw her doctor at a social gathering, I mentioned Mother to him and he suggested we run a G.S. series on her.

"What's a G.S. series?" I asked. "Garage Sale," he said, popping a cheese puff into his mouth. "Run an old ice cream freezer before her eyes and say, 'I'd let this go for a buck,' or a chipped candy dish that you'd be willing to sacrifice for a quarter and see how she reacts."

"That's going to make her well?" "I've seen women at death's door who hiked three miles in the dark to get dibs on last year's calendar and a box of melted candle stubs. It's worth a shot."

The next time I saw Mother, I mentioned I had a pair of cuff links with scorpions on them, a lawn chair that wouldn't open, a drinking glass with a picture of Johnny Bench on it, a jewel box that played "Happy Days Are Here Again" and four milk-stained bibs.

Mother's blank face came slowly alive. Her droopy shoulders straightened, her limp hands became clenched and she stood up and announced, "That sounds like the beginning of a garage sale."

From that moment on, she became a blur. She moved the cars from the garage to the street, hung lines for display, carted card tables out of closets and attics, posted signs, ran ads, orchestrated the comings and goings of merchandise and barked orders like a dock worker unloading the QE II. It was like watching a transformation in slow motion. Her steps quickened, her cheeks flushed with excitement, her humor was restored, her wit sharpened, and I would have been willing to bet this frail woman would never have been able to carry a grill-rotisserie under her arm a week ago.

The day of the sale was her finest hour. "No, dear, we don't do alterations." "You want that stuffed hamster head or not? I got three waiting." "Ask yourself, if the boots didn't have a hole in them, would you be able to buy them for 50 cents?" "We don't deliver. Who do you think we are, Saks?" "We call that a husband and put 'em down, he's not for sale. He's just resting."

I asked the doctor if all G.S. series were that successful.

He said, "If a woman doesn't respond to a garage sale, very frankly, I'm not too optimistic about her."

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I had my regular checkup and the doctor said I was a little anemic. He scheduled me to come back in six weeks for another test. He said that if I was still low that he would have to do special tests to see what was causing it. I was wondering if I couldn't just take some iron tablets and correct this on my own without having the tests.

DEAR READER — You might just confuse the issue. Your doctor wants to know what kind of anemia you have before he starts treating you. And he may find you don't really have a significant anemia at all with the repeat tests.

There are several different kinds of anemia and that makes a difference in the choice of treatment for best results. You can have an anemia because you don't have enough iron. That is particularly likely to happen to young women in the childbearing age. Or you can have an anemia because you have chronic bleeding. That is important. A cancer of the large bowel may be the underlying cause of an anemia.

The bone marrow may not be producing enough red blood cells. This can be from many different causes, too. Sometimes this is a response to any of a number of medicines. Sometimes it is from exposure to some toxic agent you are unaware of. Then, too, the bone marrow may fail with increasing age for no evident reason.

Still another cause of anemia is an inadequate amount of vitamin B-12. This may be from an inability to absorb B-12 because a vital chemical is absent from your stomach.

In order not to confuse the issue, I must urge you to follow your doctor's orders. DEAR DR. LAMB — I realize the importance of proper nutrition during pregnancy, but would there be any connection between proper nutrition and getting pregnant? I have been trying to become pregnant for some time. I am typical of today's youth, rushing day in and day out, often with skimpy meals to maintain my weight. I'm 26 years old, 5 feet 3 and 114 pounds. Although my gynecologist found my husband and me medically capable, I was embarrassed to ask about this.

DEAR READER — That is a good question. Many young women and even mature women have absent menstrual periods because they are on fad diets. A woman apparently needs to have a certain amount of body fat for normal hormone function. When you get too lean the brain stops releasing a hormone that stimulates the pituitary gland which in turn stimulates the ovaries. That is thought to be one reason why women athletes may develop menstrual disorders.

While it is not foolproof, a good guide for you is your menstrual periods. If you are having a normal cycle, you are probably able to get pregnant. Nevertheless, since you sound like you may be a little on the thin side, a few pounds might help. Otherwise check again with your gynecologist if you have not become pregnant within a year's time.

Planning helps prevent stress on business trips

DENVER (AP) — Less than a decade ago, few women took business trips. Today, however, women are traveling on business with increasing frequency. The key to traveling alone without stress is good planning, suggests the Samsonite Traveler Advisory Service, which offers these tips:

— Traveling with heavy luggage can be stressful, so take only what you can handle by yourself. For short trips pack lightweight, softside luggage that permits you to carry everything you need onto a plane, train or bus. Choose a hanging garment bag for suits and dresses and a matching tote for accessories.

— For longer trips select a single, large, sturdy piece of luggage that will hold everything you'll need on your trip, and make sure it has wheels for easy maneuverability.

— Surrounding yourself with familiar, homey items can make any trip easier on you. One of the surest ways to reduce stress is to try to duplicate your techniques for coping during your everyday life.

For example, do you normally unwind after a long day by sipping a cup of warm herbal tea, while munching on chocolate cookies? If so, pack these items for late-night relaxing in your hotel room. If you like to fall asleep to soft music, slip a small radio into your suitcase. If you need your old furry robe to feel warm and cozy, it's worth the extra space it occupies.

Other special things you may wish to pack include a good book, needlework and a favorite photo.

— Take any medications you may need on your trip. This includes both prescription drugs and "over-the-counter" remedies that may not be on every counter, especially in foreign countries. Tucking in an extra pair of eyeglasses is also a good idea.

— Print only your name on your outside baggage tags or, if necessary, use your business address. You don't want someone reading your home address and going there in your absence.

— For security, choose a hotel near where you'll be doing business, and ask for escort service from the lobby to your room if it's late at night.

— Never put out the "Make up the room" sign — it's a sure tipoff to a would-be burglar that no one is in. And when you attend a convention, don't wear your badge outside of the meeting rooms — it's easy for someone to read your name and then tell the front desk that he is an expected guest of yours. — If you need that morning cup of coffee to get going, call room service the night before and arrange for your breakfast to arrive at a designated time. — Getting to your destination can be stressful in itself, with waits in airports.

Cowboy flight attendants prepared for the worst

DALLAS (AP) — As Monica Stock left Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium with her three friends and co-workers, the Dallas Cowboys trailed the Atlanta Falcons 24-10 in Sunday's National Football League playoff game. It was the start of the fourth quarter, the time when the women always have to leave.

"Don't worry, girls. Cowboys will win by three," Miss Stock told her colleagues. "I just can't figure out where the three points will come from, is all."

In the car, all the way to Atlanta's airport, she kept trying to perk up the spirits of her glum companions, all of whom are dedicated Cowboys fans. After all, they had been the flight attendants on all the Cowboys' road-game charter flights during the season.

They reached the airplane and started putting things in order for the team's arrival. Only Ms. Stock was confident. The others — Jackie Moseley, Patty Ringness and Maria Surgeon-Root — began practicing their "better-luck-next-time" facial expressions as they started warming food, preparing liquid refreshments and rehearsing the lines they would use to commiserate with men who had just blown a chance at the Super Bowl.

None of their portable radios worked. They had no idea what was happening back at the football field.

They remembered the Braniff executive who met them at the hatch after that LA game and said, "Don't smile — no matter what you do, don't smile, don't laugh or look happy."

Then, just as the game ended, an airlines agent hustled aboard and told them the score. Cowboys by three. And what a party on the way home.

"We couldn't even serve the food," said Ms. Stock.

"Nobody slept on the way home," said Ms. Ringness. "It would have been like sleeping through a hurricane."

As retired quarterback Roger Staubach climbed aboard for the ride home, the entire team rose to its feet for an ear-splitting, unison rendition of, "Roger Whoooooo?!" much to the delight of Staubach's replacement, a grinning and exuberant White.

League rules prohibit any player drinking more than two beers on a post-game flight but sources say several rather large, muscular men got what looked to be quite tipsy on that flight from Atlanta.

Math coach likes antique algebra texts

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The telephone calls are rolling in at Stan Hartzler's home, and the University of Texas math instructor hopes each will yield another antique algebra book.

Less than 10 days after a column in the Chicago Tribune outlined his fascination with old algebra tests and growing anger with newly published schoolbooks, Hartzler already is reaping the benefits, and is getting leads on new additions for his current collection of 215 old algebra books.

Hartzler hopes the publicity dragnet will help him obtain enough books to "investigate why the (high school algebra) books coming off the press now are so bad."

His experience as a coach for high school math teams in suburban Chicago several years ago convinced him that algebra texts written between 1890 and 1910 are good enough for today's students.

After he started using a turn-of-the-century text to drill his math teams, they won five straight division championships. And classroom use of old books resulted in nine students scoring perfectly on national college entrance exams when 30 neighboring schools didn't produce even one perfect scorer, he said.

Less-than-brilliant students benefited from using the old texts, too, Hartzler recalled. "I can remember the names and faces that I had in remedial math classes. They had fine minds, but nobody had shown them how to do long division."

So, Hartzler said, he has acquired a "large disgust" for current algebra texts. He's irked by modern books "written by teams of people who too often never see each other to coordinate their philosophy and objectives."

"Previously, books were written by one teacher who wrote out of his experience — what had worked best for him. These books needed no revisions because they were good in the first place," Hartzler said.

Books of the educational era — "the heyday of organization," Hartzler calls it — often were written by a one-room schoolteacher. He said those books had to be self-contained because the busy one-room schoolteacher couldn't take time away from other students to present long lectures.

Hartzler's enthusiasm becomes overwhelming. "It is awful the way those students moved from one exercise to another. I get emotional about it, like when I hear Handel's 'Messiah.' Today, those exercises are not even written by the authors. Too often, they are written by high school teachers who live close to the publishing houses," he said. "They pay the authors less that way."

Hartzler is irritated by today's frequently revised math texts, updated with trendy layout and educational fadism. "It was 'new math' in the '60s, 'back to basics' in the '70s and now it's 'problem solving' in the '80s," Hartzler said. "I want to start a new fad — call it balance — and let's stop the pendulum."

Hartzler said he wants to "develop an informed demand for better books among those (state and school officials) who buy them. A lot of politics is involved here in Texas, and there's not much hope. But plenty of high school teachers are aware of how bad the books are."

Hartzler, who warns "I'm a rather outspoken little beast," suspects that modern math books are "being written for the teachers, not the students."

He sees the use of large, colorful graphics as "the most criminal of fads." Research, he said, indicates that "the more pictures there are in books, the less the kids learn."

Hartzler's algebra textbook research is designed "to show that there have been sudden changes in topics that have no foundation in the classroom."

And he wants to set up guidelines teachers can use to evaluate textbooks, policies to replace politics or high-pressure tactics of publishing firms.

Finally, Hartzler said, he wants to "listen to my customers," the elementary education students he's now teaching at UT, and "to teach in ways I hope they can understand, not in higher educational theories."

The old-fashioned math teaching he advocates may be on a comeback. Until then, Hartzler and his family — wife Shirley and her children Beth, Amy and Michael — will scour antique stores, Salvation Army shops, garage sales and junkyards for old math texts.

Fraud, theft charged in resale oil scheme

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — A "miracle chemical" developed by German scientists was pumped into oil wells on a lease near here with phenomenal results, a West Texas oil company told dubious officials of the Texas Railroad Commission.

That's how the lease, previously showing zero production, could suddenly begin pumping more than 2,000 barrels of oil a month, officials of Jaco Oil Co., Inc. of Midland said to convince the commission to give approval for the production.

Although production was approved, the Railroad Commission felt such a miracle deserved checking out. A two-month investigation and stakeout of the lease ended Monday with the arrest of the pumper responsible for seeing that oil was pumped from the well into a storage tank.

John Theford Sims of Odessa, an employee of Jaco Oil Co., was charged with theft over $200, and accused of participating in a scheme to defraud Cosden Oil & Chemical Co. of as much as $425,000 over the past six months by selling them the same tank of oil repeatedly without ever putting the oil into Cosden's pipelines.

Texas Ranger Eddie Almond, Railroad Commission agents and Howard County sheriff's deputies went Monday to the W.B. Currie oil lease operated by Jaco Oil Co. near Big Spring and arrested Sims.

"We've been working on this since October, but we suspect it has been going on since June," said Almond, who coordinated the investigation. "It looks like we may have up to 57 felony offenses in the theft of 12,500 barrels of crude."

Jaco has sold oil from the Currie lease to Cosden on a regular basis, usually three times a week, since June, Almond said.

Deputies took Sims to 118th District Court in the Howard County Courthouse, where Justice of the Peace Bob West arraigned him about 10:30 a.m. and set bond at $20,000. Sims was represented by Big Spring lawyer Roger Brown, who was retained by Jaco Oil Co.

D.C. Wheeler of Odessa, president of Jaco Oil Co., was unavailable for comment.

Agents believe a complicated scheme was devised in which a Cosden employee who regularly checked the lease was shown a full oil storage tank, ostensibly to be pumped into Cosden's pipeline.

Instead, Almond said, it is believed that the pumps were turned off after the Cosden employee left the site and that the same tank of oil was resold to Cosden each time the employee returned during a 7-month period.

In order to determine if any oil from the lease was entering the pipeline during December, RRC agents monitored a special meter secretly installed to gauge the flow of oil from the tank to the pipeline, Almond said.

Crews work to restore gas service

DAISETTA, Texas (AP) — Crews have worked "around the clock" to install a new pipeline and restore natural gas service to nine homes where residents detected the odor of leaking gas, officials here say.

Mayor Harold McCann said he hopes the new loop to replace a deteriorating line will be in operation sometime today. The faulty line was shut off last week after residents in this Southeast Texas town of 2,000 complained of leaking gas.

Gas odors were detected in 12 homes, but three were vacant, McCann said.

The town's 30-year-old gas distribution system is under fire from the Texas Railroad Commission. The state regulatory agency said it wants the system shut down because residents in this community 50 miles northeast of Houston are in "imminent danger."

State inspectors said 20 percent of the gas flowing into the lines leaks or is not registered an antiquated meters.

State District Judge W.G. Woods Jr. issued a temporary restraining order Saturday to stop the TRC from cutting off gas to 390 homes and the high school.

A hearing on a permanent injunction has been scheduled Friday in Liberty.

CHUCK KNOX, coach of the Buffalo Bills, was named Associated Press NFL Coach of the Year Tuesday. ## Knox tabbed as NFL coach of the year

NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck Knox, who guided the Buffalo Bills to their first division title since the 1966 American Football League season, was named today The Associated Press Coach of the Year in the National Football League, narrowly edging Atlanta's Leeman Bennett.

The Bills, who were 5-11 and 7-9 in Knox's first two years in Buffalo, soared to 11-5 this year and won the championship of the American Conference East for their first playoff berth since 1974. They faltered last Sunday in San Diego, losing 20-14.

Knox received 27 1/2 of the 84 votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and sports broadcasters, three from each NFL city. Bennett was a very close second with 26 1/2 votes and Sam Rutigliano of Cleveland was third with 18. The only other coach to receive more than three votes was Oakland's Tom Flores with 4.

It is the second time Knox has been selected AP Coach of the Year. He earned the honor in the 1973 season when he turned Los Angeles around from a 6-7-1 loser into a 12-2 National Conference West champion. It was the first of five consecutive division titles for the Rams, who were 54-15-1 under Knox during 1973-77.

When he came to Buffalo in '78, he inherited a team which had won just five of its 28 games in the preceding two seasons. Barely three months after his arrival, he traded O.J. Simpson to the San Francisco 49ers in exchange for a bunch of draft choices. The Bills' new era was under way.

"We didn't set a timetable," Knox said of the Bills' rebuilding. "We just wanted to get competitive as soon as we could."

Their offense was competitive, to say the least, thanks in part to rookie running-back Joe Cribbs, who gained 1,185 yards. But it was the defense—Knox's specialty—which made them so competitive this year. The defense which had been ranked 14th in the league in 1979 was the best in the NFL in 1980.

When the Bills' division title was secure, linebacker Shane Nelson said pointedly: "This season is no fluke."

Like the Bills, the Falcons surged to surprising prominence in 1980. Under Bennett's guidance, they won their first division championship ever, beating out the Los Angeles Rams in the National Football Conference West with a 12-4 record. And, like the Bills, Atlanta was stung in its first playoff game this year, beaten 30-27 by Dallas.

Rutigliano brought Cleveland an unexpected division championship as well as the Browns nosed out Houston for the AFC Central title with an 11-5 record. But they, too, were beaten in their first playoff game, falling 14-12 to Oakland.

College cage roundup

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Even after his defending NCAA champions had broken a five-game losing streak, Louisville's Denny Crum sounded a beaten coach.

"I felt like if we were going to get beat, we might as well get beat with our younger guys in there," Crum said.

So, he inserted freshmen Lancaster Gordon, a guard, and Charles Jones, a center, into the starting lineup, and his Cardinals rolled over Tulane 73-53 Monday night.

Gordon scored 13 points, including five in a run of nine by Louisville early in the first half as the Cardinals took a 17-8 lead. Jones, however, gave way quickly to regular center Derek Smith, who led the Cardinals, now 3-7, with 19 points and 13 rebounds.

"If I'd had to pick a game before the season that we'd lose, it would have been Tulane," Crum said of his Metro Conference foe.

In the very early going, it looked like another washout in the works for the beleaguered Cardinals, whose most recent victory had been way back on Dec. 13 over Maryland. Louisville missed nine of its first 10 shots until Gordon got them going with a 20-footer.

"That's been our pattern so far this season," Crum said. "That's why we've been getting behind. If they (Tulane) had shot the ball well, we'd have been behind again."

While Louisville was avoiding yet another upset, 10th-ranked Michigan could not. The 9-1 Wolverines saw the first blemish appear on their record this season in an 81-74 loss to Purdue in the two teams' Big Ten Conference opener.

Freshman Russell Cross scored 21 points, while Drake Morris and Keith Edmonson added 20 each for the unranked Boilermakers, 8-2.

Purdue hit 37 of 49 field-goal attempts for a single-game conference record percentage of .755, and first-year Coach Gene Keady called it unbelievable. "This was the best game of the year for us," he said. "We played with intensity and took care of the ball."

Michigan's only lead of the game was at 4-2. Cross tied it 4-4 off an offensive rebound, and the Boilermakers were on their way. In other games involving ranked teams Monday night, second-ranked Oregon State downed Arizona 61-49, No. 3 Virginia trimmed Delaware 88-69, seventh-ranked UCLA drubbed Washington State 87-61 and 14th-ranked Arizona State clobbered Oregon 104-64.

The night's games also included the first at his home court since Missouri center Steve Stipanovich accidentally shot himself in the arm. The center originally told police he was shot by a gunman who broke into his apartment, but later, he admitted the wound was self-inflicted.

Stipanovich did not start, but he scored nine points, grabbed a team-leading 12 rebounds and received a 30-second standing ovation when he entered the game midway through the first half. Missouri defeated Navy 88-67, incidentally.

Senior center Steve Johnson scored 32 points, including 19 in the second half to help break open a close game and boost Oregon State, 10-0, over Arizona.

Oregon State did not take the lead until 5:43 was gone in the second half on a layup by Johnson.

Jeff Lamp scored five straight points to give Virginia a 28-21 lead with 7:12 left in the first half.

Red Sox stars could become free agents

BOSTON (AP) — Outfielder Fred Lynn and catcher Carlton Fisk could become free agents this year if an arbitrator decides the Boston Red Sox sent out their option-year contracts two days too late.

Marvin Miller, director of the Players Association, informed the Red Sox Monday that he has filed a grievance seeking immediate free-agent status for both players because the club failed to mail them contracts before the Dec. 20 deadline.

Haywood Sullivan, Red Sox vice president and general manager, said, "It is our position that we have binding contracts with Fred Lynn and Carlton Fisk."

Last week, Miller informed the Red Sox that under baseball's 1980 basic agreement, both Lynn and Fisk were eligible to arbitrate their 1981 salaries, and, if the Red Sox failed to agree to the arbitration, both automatically would become free agents.

Lynn and Fisk are two of only four players in the major leagues who signed under the 1976 agreement, and the four are the last ever to have an option year.

When asked why the club even mailed out contracts to Lynn and Fisk if it thought it already had valid pacts with the pair, Sullivan said, "I can't say anything because I don't want to jeopardize my defense. We'll see what happens in litigation."

Miller met Monday with a representative of the Players Relations office to set up a grievance hearing. If nothing is settled in the grievance, binding arbitration is the final step.

Miller said the players association also was ready to file for salary arbitration for Lynn and Fisk between the Jan. 15-25 period, but that may be unnecessary if there is a decision by then on the late contract grievance.

In a related matter, Sullivan said he and New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner still have been talking about a trade of pitcher Ron Guidry for Lynn. He said wanted the late-contract matter cleared up before he started talking trade again with New York.

Dutton amazed by Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — John Dutton kept being amazed by the team he joined 18 months ago.

"I've never seen anything like it," said the Dallas Cowboys' defensive tackle who was obtained from Baltimore for two high draft choices. "This team never loses control. They just know they can win no matter the situation."

Dutton said he still had butterflies from Sunday's 30-27 come-from-behind victory over the Atlanta Falcons in the National Conference divisional playoffs.

"The feeling on this team is hard to explain," he said. "They just never get down on themselves. Even when we were behind 24-10 we still had confidence we were going to win."

"When I joined this team, I could just sense a different feeling. I knew they were used to winning but I didn't know what was behind it. Now I know. Confidence. Confidence in your teammates. Confidence in the system. (Coach) Tom Landry is incredible."

Dutton said "At Baltimore there was never that much confidence. We always ended up getting beat like Atlanta did Sunday."

He said the Cowboys were looking forward to a good boogie when they take the field Sunday in the NFC title game against the Philadelphia Eagles in Veteran's Stadium.

"It helps draw a team together when you have everybody against you," said Dutton. "We like to go to places like Atlanta where you get booed. It sort of like the Christians and the lions. Only the lions don't always win."

Dutton said "I think we'll settle down quick after the Atlanta win. The lockerroom was pretty much low key after the Falcon game. We were emotional to each other but we knew we couldn't think that was the biggest win of the year."

"Of course, personally I almost blacked out my heart was beating so fast."

Arizona State blasts Oregon

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Senior center Alton Lister hit a career-high 23 points as 14th-ranked Arizona State ran by Oregon 104-64 in Pacific-10 Conference basketball play Monday night.

With the win, the Sun Devils (9-2) evened their league record at 1-1. The Ducks of Oregon dropped to 0-2 in the Pac-10 and 7-4 overall.

The Sun Devils broke out of their recent scoring slump by hitting 66 percent from the field and made 14 of 15 attempts from the free throw line as they opened up a 46-29 halftime lead.

Lister put in 10 points — including eight straight free throws — as ASU used a 14-0 scoring spree to erase a 26-25 deficit midway through the first half.

The 7-0 Lister finished with 14 first-half points and Sun Devil senior forward Sam Williams shot four-for-four from the field and three-for-three from the line to add 11 points and pad the lead.

Williams opened the second half with four consecutive baskets to give ASU a 61-40 bulge with 14:53 remaining, before going to the bench with his third personal foul.

Sophomore forward Walt Stone replaced Williams and put in six points and Lister added nine more as ASU built a 31-point cushion (77-46) with 9:00 to go.

ASU Coach Ned Wulk went to his reserves the rest of the game.

Williams shot a perfect eight-for-eight from the field and finished with 19 points. Stone added 12 — all of them coming in the second half.

Guard Felton Sealey led Oregon with 12 points.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Pampa visits Borger tonight

Pampa high basketball teams are both the road tonight with the Harvesters traveling to Borger and the Lady Harvesters visiting Lubbock Coronado.

The boys' game tips off at 7:30 p.m. while the girls' contest is set to begin at 8 p.m.

The Harvesters recently returned from the Borger Holiday Tournament where they lost to Perryton, 62-57, Saturday night in the championship finals.

Borger lost its first game of the season to unbeaten Perryton, 52-51, Friday in tournament action.

The Harvesters led by Charles Nelson's 20 points and Mike Nelson's 16 points, shot 55 percent from the floor and 70 percent from the foul line, but turnovers, forced by Perryton's ballhawking antics, plagued Pampa throughout the game.

Four steals by Perryton's catquick guard Jeff Greenway in the second quarter led to four easy baskets and an 11-point halftime lead for the Rangers.

Pampa won the battle of the board against the taller Rangers, 27-17, with Charles Nelson leading the way with eight rebounds. Jay Henson and Terry Faggins had five rebounds apiece while Mike Nelson had four.

The Harvesters reached the finals by defeating Dumas, 33-30, and Vernon, 67-61.

Pampa Red defeats Canyon White

Pampa Red used a balanced scoring attack to defeat Canyon White, 60-52, in a ninth grade basketball game Monday night in the middle school gym.

Pampa had four scorers in double figures, led by Craig Chapin's 15 points. Charles Wuest followed with 11 while Randy Harris and Ricky Stout had 10 points each. Also scoring for Pampa were Devin Cross with six points, Troy West, four; Garland Allan, two; Aaron Anderwald, two.

Crittle paced the losers with 22 points. "I really liked our balanced scoring,"

Pampa coach Al Clark said. "We were a little weak on our man to man defense. Hopefully we'll strengthen it before we play again."

Pampa hosts a ninth-grade tournament Friday and Saturday.

Pampa swimmers compete in Dallas meet

Eight Pampa high swimmers attended an A meet in Dallas during the holiday break with three placing in the North Zone competition.

Richard Steger took tenth in the 100 backstroke with a time of 1:65.

Lisa Raymond took seventh in both the 100 and 200 butterfly events while Cindy Raymond won the 200 individual medley and placed third in the 100 breaststroke.

Other Harvesters who competed were Robbie Hill, Richie Hill, Cody Moore, Clay Douglass, and Reid Steger.

Pampa will meet Palo Duro and Caprock in a meet Thursday in Amarillo. The Harvesters host Lubbock Monterey in a dual Saturday at the Pampa Youth and Community Center.

Redskins fire Jack Pardee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bobby Beathard, the general manager of the Washington Redskins, was to fly to the West Coast today to begin the search for a replacement for Jack Pardee, who was fired Monday as the team's head coach.

Beathard indicated he probably would look for a successor to Pardee among the ranks of assistant coaches in the National Football League, but would not rule out the possibility of a return by former coach George Allen.

Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke, who fired the 44-year-old Pardee, said nothing about a possible replacement.

Beathard said that if the choice came down to an assistant in the professional ranks or a college coach, he most likely would go with the man from the NFL.

The general manager said he did not intend to talk to Allen on this trip, but "it's not up to me to eliminate him. Mr. Cooke is going to hire the coach."

Allen coached the Redskins from 1971 until his firing at the end of the 1977 season.

According to today's editions of The Washington Post, two men are reportedly at the top of Beathard's list — John Robinson, coach at the University of Southern California, and former Oakland Raider Coach John Madden.

And, the newspaper said, a list of highly regarded NFL assistants includes Joe Gibbs, offensive coordinator for San Diego; Dan Reeves, offensive coordinator for the Dallas Cowboys; Tom Bass, defensive coordinator at Tampa Bay; Dick Coury, the Philadelphia Eagles' wide receiver coach; George Perles, the Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive coordinator; and Marty Schottenheimer, the Cleveland Browns' defensive coordinator.

A move by Cooke to Allen would be a surprise. Allen, who said Monday he had not been contacted by the Redskins, noted in an interview from his Palos Verdes, Calif., home that "with any job I took, I would have to have complete control of the football program."

Asked if he was interested in the job,

Allen said "it isn't right for me to comment on anything like that at this time. It's distasteful, like talking when somebody has passed away."

Meanwhile, the Redskin players expressed surprise and what some termed shock at the news of Pardee's dismissal.

"I hate it," said Ken Houston, who was benched during much of 1980, his final season with the team. "I hate it for him. Last year he was coach of the year. This year, we didn't win as many as we should have. It wasn't his fault."

Pardee, who still has two years to go on his five-year contract, was dismissed as the result of what was termed philosophical differences between him and Beathard over the future of the team. Pardee could not be reached for comment Monday night, despite repeated telephone calls to his home.

Record budget for Oklahoma proposed

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The 1981 Oklahoma Legislature will convene at noon today, hear Gov. George Nigh's plans for writing a record $1.3 billion budget, including $227 million in growth revenue, at 1:30 p.m., and then begin work on a myriad of problems.

Nigh already has announced his budget plans, and House Speaker Dan Draper and Senate President Pro Tem Marvin York already have announced their plan to make substantial changes in some of the governor's suggestions.

Nigh and the legislative leaders agree on several general ideas, such as the need for a $40 million tax cut, but they don't agree on many specifics, such as the type of taxes to be cut.

The governor wants to take the state sales tax off prescription drugs. That will cost about $10 million, and the legislative leaders say they will go along with that.

But Nigh's main tax plan would eliminate the state inheritance tax for lineal heirs. That would cost $30 million and Draper and York say they think a lot better plan can be found to give state taxpayers a $30 million tax reduction.

They are talking primarily about cutting the state income tax, but they haven't decided on a definite plan, only that they won't approve Nigh's inheritance tax cut.

Regardless of the tax they cut, however, Nigh can rejoice over the fact that it will be the third straight legislative session in which he has provided the drive toward an eventual tax cut. That's not a bad campaign plank for a governor who presumably will run for re-election next year.

The budget normally is the big problem facing the Legislature, but reapportionment occupies at least equal billing this year, and it is even more of a problem in the eyes of most legislators.

Nothing causes more legislative problems than the once-a-decade job of redrawing all the legislative districts after each federal census to take population shifts into account. That means the Oklahoma City and Tulsa areas and some other parts of central and eastern Oklahoma will get more senators and representatives, but it also means they will get them at the expense of areas of western and northern Oklahoma that have shown little population growth since 1970.

The House has 101 members and the Senate has 48. If eastern Oklahoma or a metropolitan area picks up a Senate or House seat, some area has to lose one. That means some western or northern Oklahoma House or Senate incumbents could be thrown into the same district with another incumbent.

The Legislature has 90 meeting days to finish its work, and there is a good chance the reapportionment issue will force a lengthy recess to reach a compromise.

Without a recess, the four-days-per-week work pace the Legislature follows would force adjournment by early June. If a recess is called, the 90 days could be extended into July or August.

While reapportionment will take up most of the time, however, the money issues will dominate the early part of the session.

Nigh, in addressing a joint session of the House and Senate Tuesday afternoon, will stress the need for passage of his already announced tax-cutting ideas and his budget proposals.

He says the Legislature will have $227 million in growth revenue to appropriate, and he already has outlined his plans for spending it, including proposals to provide a $73.6 million increase for common schools and a $35 million boost for higher education.

The budget normally is the big problem facing the Legislature, but reapportionment occupies at least equal billing this year, and it is even more of a problem in the eyes of most legislators.

Ferrigno to have speaking role in 'Hulk'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lou Ferrigno, who plays the Hulk on "The Incredible Hulk," will have his first speaking role in an upcoming episode of the CBS series. Besides the Hulk, Ferrigno will also play the role of Carl Molino, a bodybuilder who is trying to raise money to open a restaurant. In at least one scene he will appear with the Hulk by means of a split screen.

"I'm in almost every scene," said Ferrigno, "so it's like 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.' You will see me as myself — you will see that it's so far from the Hulk. I play a very sensitive person and I show a lot of vulnerability."

Ferrigno is 75 per cent deaf because of a childhood affliction and has had to take extensive speech therapy. It was easy for him to play the non-speaking role of the Hulk, but for a long time it seemed that he would never have a speaking role.

The 6-foot-5, 255-lb. Ferrigno was a Mr. America and Mr. Universe, but withdrew from professional football after breaking another player's legs during scrimmage. He now plays the alter ego to Bill Bixby in the popular CBS series. Bixby's character turns into the Hulk when he becomes angered.

He sat in his dressing room waiting for a call on stage to play the Hulk. His body was covered with a kind of green clay, and that combined with his size and musculature made him look very intimidating. He said the green paint is very uncomfortable, smears easily and makes him feel very hot.

Ferrigno said he had felt strongly for some time that the viewers should be allowed to see him in another dimension.

"I wanted for the public to see Lou Ferrigno," he said. "And I wanted to show that I could act. I had learned pantomime and showing my feelings without speaking. They never needed more than two takes when I played the Hulk."

It is Ferrigno's sensitive performance as the Hulk that has helped lift the show out of the realm of the monster movie.

Looking beyond the series, Ferrigno said he wanted to show people that he is "a very fine actor. I think everyone will see that when they see this show."

He said he is looking at scripts now and hopes to be able to establish himself as a unique character. "My size makes me unique," he said, "but I'll never be just another bodybuilder. I have an acting ability that's going to make me well known in this business."

"I was very, very underestimated by some people. I think they're going to be surprised at what I can do."

Ferrigno said he was grateful to Bill Bixby for his work and encouragement. "He coached and worked with me on every scene," he said. "He'd stand behind the camera pulling the emotion out of me."
