Busboy charged in fire deaths

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A 23-year-old busboy who told police he turned in the alarm on the Las Vegas Hilton fire has been booked on eight counts of murder in the blaze, which sent a column of flame roaring up the side of the country's largest hotel.

Homicide detectives said Wednesday night they had arrested Phillip Bruce Cline after the room service busboy made "inconsistent statements" about his role in the biggest of the four fires deliberately set in the hotel Tuesday night.

The blaze — the second large and deadly hotel fire in Las Vegas in three months — killed eight people and injured 198. Hospitals had said that 242 people were hurt, but officials later said that figure was incorrect.

Cline told The San Diego Evening Tribune before his arrest that he tried to put out the fire on the eighth floor with water carried in a trash can. When that failed, Cline said he ran down the hall, knocking on doors to warn guests.

The busboy also was booked on one count of arson. Officials had no explanation immediately for the three other fires.

Formal charges would be filed at an arraignment, which officials said would take place before the end of the week.

In the aftermath of the blaze, which Fire Chief Roy Parrish termed "definitely arson," scorch marks scarred the side of the Hilton's east tower. Where flames burst from eighth-floor windows and shot to the top of the 30-story building.

Knotted bedsheets still hung from broken windows and an army of security guards was on patrol. Police said they had questioned some people about looting but there were no arrests and no immediate reports of large thefts.

Guests who fled rooms in the east wing, most severely damaged in the blaze, were being escorted in today to reclaim abandoned suitcases and other belongings.

Hundreds of people who lined up for hours Wednesday to wait for escorts to their rooms found their doors had been wrenched open during firefighters' room-to-room search for victims.

Inside, walls and furniture were thick with soot. The sooty, waterlogged carpets looked like mud.

Hilton officials estimated the damage at $10 million but said the hotel could be reopened in a week because some 1,900 of the 2,783 rooms were undamaged by the fire. The first-floor casino was unscathed. The other rooms were damaged, mostly by smoke.

More than 4,000 people fled the building during the fire, including 110 who were plucked from the roof by helicopters. Among the guests overcome by smoke was singer Natalie Cole, who performed at the hotel Monday.

Deputy Chief Eric Cooper said Cline "had given an initial statement last night (Tuesday) and another statement today (Wednesday) and there were inconsistencies."

One of eight people questioned at the scene of the blaze, Cline "stated he was the first one to discover the fire," Cooper said. All eight were released after questioning Tuesday night.

But after two hours of questioning Wednesday, Cline was formally arrested and booked in connection with the main fire.

Cooper said there is "probable cause to determine only that he's responsible for the main fire on the eighth floor.... We have no explanation yet for the other fires."

Some Hilton guests, still camped on cots at the nearby Las Vegas Convention Center, cheered Gov. Robert List's statement that a person convicted of arson in a fatal fire could be executed under Nevada law.

"This is a destructive criminal act," he said. "This state has a tough law. The penalty for arson that kills someone is capital punishment."

The blaze had four points of origin, Parrish said. The main fire began in the eighth floor elevator area and "spread from the eighth to the 29th floors by leaping outside," Parrish said. Within 15 minutes, it reached the uppermost floors, bursting windows and lapping back into the building.

The other fires were set in a second-floor uniform linen area, a third-floor service elevator and a ninth-floor fire hose, he said.

Evidence of arson included fire hoses on the ninth floor that were severed and stuffed with a flammable material.

Officials have declined to say exactly how the fire was started.

Drug Alert program for parents scheduled

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

John Picco of Amarillo, Operation Drug Alert Presentation Director, will be presenting a Community Night — Operation Drug Alert Program for Adults — at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 16, in Pampa Middle School.

Picco has been assigned as spokesman for the Panhandle Area Operation Drug Alert in the 21 Panhandle counties since 1979. He has been bringing many local communities his non-nonsense approach to the use of drugs in elementary, middle and high schools.

Picco is not a law enforcement officer. He is from the teaching profession and has been a counselor with the Texas Mental Health Mental Retardation program.

"Right now, I am preaching prevention," Picco said. "Just because families don't have a problem at present, they sometimes think the prevention phase is not for them."

"Just because Panhandle communities are small doesn't mean they are clear of the problem. Sometimes, the drug movement is easier in smaller towns because there is often less federal supervision," Picco said.

The Drug Abuse Program for Adults in Pampa is being presented in cooperation with the City Council PTA, the Gray County Family Living Committee and the Pampa Community Awareness Group. These groups will be sending letters to parents through the elementary school students, explaining the Operation Drug Alert Program.

"The program on Monday will be for parents — parents of pre-school children, parents of any aged children. I extend a special invitation for fathers to attend the program. The father's role should be expanded. Fathers are a part of the family and are a necessary force in the family," Picco said.

"I don't use scare tactics in the drug presentation, I just present information. Use it for what it is," Picco said.

The Teenage Drug Problem. Is there a solution?

"Yes there is," Picco said emphatically. "The solution is awareness. Parent awareness, citizen awareness, school awareness and authority awareness," Picco said.

"The nucleus of the family is not always together. We are a mobile society. Family pride is no longer a factor in the lives of youngsters. Many times there is a lack of role models for the children."

"There is a need to tell parents why children do these drugs. Drugs are obviously doing something for them."

"My only purpose is to make your children become happier adults," Picco said.

County slates computer talk

Gray County Commissioners will hear a presentation from representatives of Computer Election Systems in regular session Friday.

Commissioners also will be asked to approve the depository contract with First National Bank as decided in the last commission meeting.

A letter from Foster Whaley concerning proposed legislation will be considered by the commissioners.

Plans for Site 6A - McClellan Creek Project will be discussed by the court as well as a drainage easement of a Gray County road right of way, Precinct 2.

A letter sent to the court from the Texas Historical Foundation regarding Builders of Texas Month and Hometown Heroes will be discussed by the commissioners.

The auditors report for the County Tax Assessor-Collector's office will be heard, as well as other regular business.

Incumbents file for city, school positions

A small spark of interest in the city and school elections shown when three people filed for the six available spots earlier this week has dwindled to nothing. Foot-dragging incumbents, perhaps fearing their places would become vacant, have now filed for re-election.

No one has placed a bid for Ward 3 on the city commission, currently held by Charles "Buddy" Cauthorne. Cauthorne was the first to say he would not run for re-election.

Pampa Independent School Board president Darville Orr and fellow member, Dr. Robert Lyle, filed for their respective places on the education board Tuesday.

Wednesday, Mayor H. R. "Ray" Thompson decided to throw his hat back in the political ring, along with Ward 1 Commissioner O. M. Prigmore. Walter Shed, a Pampa realtor, announced his intentions to run for mayor of the city opposite Thompson Monday. In 1980, Shed engaged in a battle with the city commission over the passing of an ordinance increasing apartment utility rates.

Last week, Wallace Birkes, a local rancher-farmer, filed for Place 1 on the school board, to be vacated by veteran board member Paul Simmons. Opposing Birkes will be Bill Quarles, an insurance agent.

Prigmore, Lyle and Orr remain unopposed in their bids for re-election this April.

Filing for the city and school offices will remain open until March 4, election officials said.

Prospective school board members can file at the school business office at Carver Education Center, 321 Albert, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Filing for the city commission is being conducted in the city secretary's office weekdays for 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Both offices close during the noon hour.

Absentee voting begins March 16 through March 31 in the city secretary's office and in the school business office.

On April 4, school elections will be conducted at the Pampa High School music building.

Voting in the city commission elections will be held at city hall for Ward 1; the north Fire Station for Ward 2; the Pampa Optimist Club for Ward 3; and Ward 4 voters will cast ballots at the South Fire Station.

Storm blamed for jet crash, 44 deaths

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer

Winter's worst storm was blamed for the crash of a corporate jet in Westchester County, N.Y., that killed seven people, as deadly winds howled across the nation and freezing rains turned snow-covered areas into giant ice slicks today. The storm's death toll climbed to 44.

Tornadoes churned through the South with winds strong enough to lift a 59-year-old North Carolina man from his mobile home, toss him 35 feet through the air head-over-heels and hang him in a Chinaberry tree by his feet. He was not seriously hurt.

Five people froze to death in Iowa, Oklahoma, Colorado and Idaho. Tornadoes ravaged the Carolinas and Texas, leaving at least five dead. Traffic fatalities and weather-related heart attacks claimed lives in several other states.

Thunderstorms charged out of the Great Lakes on Wednesday after slinging more snow on the frozen Midwest.

Heavy rains pounded New England, Florida and North Carolina.

The mercury see-sawed as a burst of tropical air broke heat records for the day in some areas only to be followed by biting cold.

Ken Olivenbaum, a meteorologist at the National Weather Corp. in Teterboro, N.J., said the weather smorgasbord was caused by two storm systems over the upper Great Lakes and the mid-Atlantic states and a cold front sandwiched between them.

In White Plains, N.Y., a Lockheed jetstar crashed and burned during foggy weather Wednesday night near the Westchester County Airport.

Authorities blamed the crash on the poor weather and low visibility. The jet belonged to Texasgulf Inc. of Stamford, Conn. Seven people were killed. Wisconsin reported a dozen weather-related deaths — most of them elderly people who collapsed while shoveling snow, scraping windshields and, in one case, wading through drifts to a bird feeder.

A 77-year-old woman was killed when her mobile home was flattened and at least four others were injured as 50-mph twisters careened across central and eastern North Carolina, causing millions of dollars in damage, officials said.

One child was buried alive in rubble from a toppled house. Neighbors dug him out of the debris and rushed him to a hospital, where he was treated and released.

Milton Massey said his mobile home in Knightsdale was smashed by the winds and exploded like a firecracker, throwing him head over heels through the air. He ended up dangling upside down in a chinaberry tree 35 feet from his home, his legs caught in branches and his head touching the ground. He escaped with scratches and bruises.

"Don't even ask me how we're alive and breathing," said his wife, Eula.

Near Richmond, Va., strong winds ripped the roof off a two-story office building Wednesday night and damaged two other buildings at the Reynolds Metals Co. Bellwood facility. No injuries were reported.

Winds were clocked at 82 mph in the Adirondack mountains of New York state.

A 44-mile stretch of Mich. 28 in the Upper Peninsula remained closed from Munising to Marquette as up to a foot of snow whipped across the highway on 35 mph winds, reducing visibility to zero, police said. Parts of the state were buried beneath up to 17 inches of snow.

Temperatures throughout Illinois hovered around zero or below all day Wednesday as the state dug out from a storm that dumped up to a foot of snow in the Chicago metropolitan area and about 6 inches elsewhere.

Springlike, wet weather set a heat record in New Hampshire, only to be followed by a sudden freeze. The weather service said the cold front that passed through the state Wednesday followed a thaw that saw the temperature rise to 60, the warmest Feb. 11 since 1955, when the temperature was 58. Temperatures plummeted below freezing within hours.

Today is the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, the 16th President of the United States. Lincoln was assassinated in 1865 while serving as President during the Civil War.

George Washington's birthday will be observed Monday. Washington, the first President of the United States and often called "the father of our country," died in 1799. The traditional date of Washington's birthday is Feb. 22.

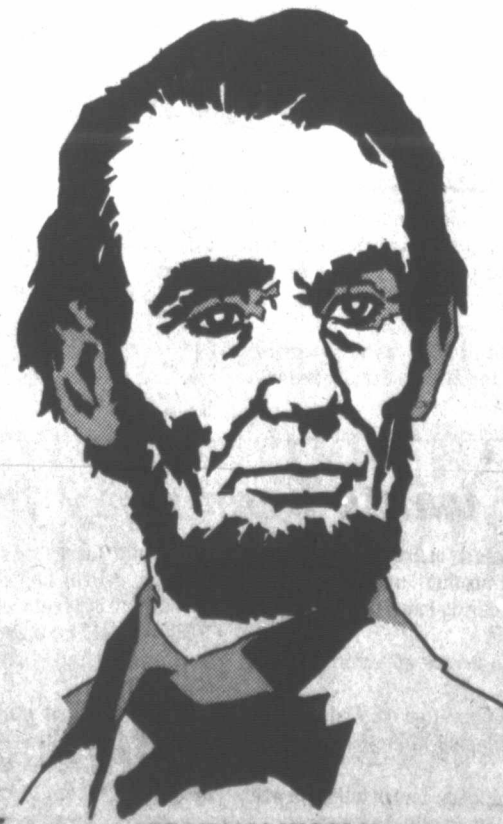

Federal offices, including the Social Security office and post office, will be closed Monday in observance of Presidents' Day, which combines Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays into one federal and state holiday.

All state offices with the exception of the Highway Patrol will be closed Monday.

All City of Pampa, Gray County and district offices will be open Monday.

Banks and savings and loan associations will be closed, so those wishing to transact business for the weekend should plan to do so on Friday.

Offices close for holiday

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

"I desire so to conduct the affairs of this administration that if at the end, when I come to lay down the reins of power, I have lost every other friend on earth, I shall at least have one friend left, and that friend shall be down inside me."

Balloonists hope winds blow south of Iran

LUXOR, Egypt (AP) — Two daring Americans, bundled against subzero temperatures, lifted off today in an attempt to make the first nonstop, manned balloon flight around the world.

The silvery, helium-filled Jules Verne, with Maxie L. Anderson and Donald H. Ida aboard a red-white-and-blue gondola suspended 100 feet below, rose quickly over this upper Egyptian tourist resort under the midday sun.

The flight had been delayed repeatedly as the balloonists waited for winds to shift so that they would pass south of Iran after a threat from Tehran that they would be treated as hostile aircraft if they entered Iranian air space.

"We are holding our breath about the winds aloft," Anderson said as he arrived at Luxor airport in his green flightsuit. "It's not that the winds improved today, but that they worsen Friday and Saturday."

Anderson said he and Ida expected to reach an altitude of 30,000 feet in three hours. The beginning of the trip would be slow because winds are light, he added.

They should be over Saudi Arabia 25 hours after launch, said Anderson, who became the first person to cross the Atlantic Ocean by balloon when he piloted the Double Eagle II from Canada to France in 1978.

A malfunction in a key electrical component delayed the liftoff for several hours today. It was the fifth time the flight had been put off.

"They have a problem with a small, essential item," the expedition's weather director, Bob Rice, said in a telephone interview from his headquarters at a private weather forecasting service outside Boston, Mass.

Rice said he did not know what part had malfunctioned or what the problem was.

The 20-story-high balloon is named after the 19th century French novelist Jules Verne who wrote the tale of Phileas Fogg's 80-day balloon trip around the world.

The flight, if successful, will take from eight to 10 days of drifting through the world's bitter-cold skies at maximum altitudes of about 30,000 feet.

visited singer Phyllis McGuire at the Tahoe resort.

Sinatra turned testy toward the end of the hearing, snapping "I don't remember" and "I would not like to discuss that" to several questions.

Control Board members said that Sinatra would have to cool his temper and stay away from Mafia figures if he wanted to keep the six-month license.

Applause broke out as the three-member panel announced its decision. "I'm very happy," Sinatra told reporters as he was whisked from the hearing room, surrounded by a cordon of police officers and security guards.

If Sinatra receives final approval from the Gaming Commission, he is expected eventually to seek to buy his own resort.

Sinatra a step away from gaming license

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Frank Sinatra is only one step away from a Nevada gaming license after bringing celebrity pals before the Gaming Control Board to dispel two decades of rumors about reputed mob connections that cost him his first license.

The board voted unanimously Wednesday to recommend Sinatra be granted a six-month limited license as an entertainment and public relations consultant at Caesars Palace, leaving one last hurdle in the entertainer's bid to move from the stage to the board room. The Nevada Gaming Commission will make the final decision Feb. 19.

Character witnesses including actors Gregory Peck and Kirk Douglas and Los Angeles County Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess praise Sinatra as the Godfather.

Peck said Sinatra's work for charity "constitutes a separate career in philanthropy." He said he had been with Sinatra on hundreds of occasions "and I've never met or heard discussed any of these characters he is alleged to be associated with."

Tanned, graying and wearing a three-piece suit, Sinatra testified for nearly three hours and spent much of the time answering questions about his relationship with the late reputed Chicago mob boss Sam "Momo" Giancana.

Sinatra was reminded repeatedly of a 1963 incident — which involved Giancana — that led to the revocation of the gaming license he held for the Cal-Neva Lodge at Lake Tahoe. Giancana, listed in Nevada's "Black Book" of people barred from entering casinos, had

Correction

Rosalez murder
 In the first article of a series on murder printed in Sunday's edition of the News, it was incorrectly reported that Roy Dario Rosalez was killed by Felipe Miranda following a fight over Rosalez spitting on the floor of his brother's home. In fact, the altercation concerned Miranda spitting on the carpet of Rosalez's brother's house. The News regrets any inconvenience caused by this error.

police notes

Officers of the Pampa Police Department responded to 21 calls during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.
 Danny Mac Bradshaw, 25, of 1113 S. Banks was arrested for driving with a suspended driver's license and cited for vehicle registration violations.

State PTA wants beer away from schools

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Connie Weedon of Bryan, speaking for the state PTA, says "one school after another" must deal with the problem of students who leave school during lunch periods to drink beer at nearby stores.
 Ms. Weedon said adults, "need to create an environment to protect children."
 She told the Senate State Affairs Committee on Wednesday of students drinking beer and either skipping afternoon classes or "coming back and throwing up."
 She said the students claim school officials cannot tell them what to do on their lunch hour.
 Grocery and package store owners, however, complained it would be unfair to pass a law extending the buffer zone from 300 feet to 500 feet between stores that sell alcoholic beverages and schools and places of worship.
 The 500-foot limit in the bill by Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, would apply only to stores with licenses for off-premises consumption.

"I would rather have one well-run, decent liquor store under a well-run, decent Legislature one foot from a church than a poorly run store 10,000 feet away," said Henry Elkouri of Fort Worth.
 Elkouri said he was representing Majestic Liquors, and package store owners had "fought tooth-and-nail to keep school children out of the stores."
 He said if Truan's bill "put one mom and pop store in jeopardy, it would be a travesty."
 Asked if he would oppose another senator's bill raising the legal drinking age from 18 to 19, Elkouri said he would not.
 Several witnesses talked about the problem of figuring out what type of establishment qualified as a place of worship. Truan's bill specifies "place of worship."
 Committee member Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, wanted the bill to say "church" or "synagogue."
 "What people worship has changed drastically," she said.
 "My home is often a place of worship," said Elkouri.
 The committee left Truan's bill as pending business.

Volunteer stands alone against $1 million suit filed by city

FRISCO, Texas (AP) - Mike Dodson isn't happy about battling a $1 million lawsuit without an attorney, but says he'll do it because city officials "did the wrong thing" when they disbanded the town's volunteer fire department.
 "What I want to fight for is a name and a reputation," he said of the $1,050,000 civil suit filed against him by Frisco city officials in a 2-year dispute over the Frisco Volunteer Fire Department.
 Dodson's troubles began when what he calls "small town politics" prompted the city council to pass an ordinance disbanding the 65-year-old department and creating another volunteer department that is controlled by the city.
 "They (the council) can't disband what they didn't create," argues Dodson. "That ordinance was passed in closed session ... they wouldn't talk about it."
 He said when the firefighters ignored the ordinance, the city filed suit against 11 members of the 24-man department.
 "The only people who were named in the suit were the people who signed up to speak against the ordinance at a city council meeting," Dodson said.
 The city then obtained a court order to operate the new volunteer department and use the old department's equipment until the suit was settled.

Sheriff's-deputies from Collin and Denton Counties - the small city stretches across the two county lines - appeared the day after the order was issued and confiscated at least five trucks and a van Gordon insists were owned by the firefighters.
 Records show the equipment was bought from donations and charity events, he said.
 Last fall, 10 of the 11 firefighters named in the suit agreed to an out of court settlement which said, according to Dodson, that both sides would relinquish any claims to the equipment and the city would continue to use it.
 Dodson refused to sign and Frisco city attorney Richard Abernathy advised him that the city intended to pursue the suit.
 Dodson said his attorney, Mike Griffin, bailed out last month because "he couldn't go against the city."
 Dodson said he got a letter Jan. 13 telling him he had to appear in court the 15th. Representing himself, he got a continuance and has been searching for an attorney ever since.
 "I've talked to four or five of them," he said. "All of them want money up front or say the case is too complicated."
 Dodson says he's not sure what he will do Feb. 19 when his case is due to open in Denton district court.

New Polish premier promises to keep his country communist

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Apparently seeking to reassure the Kremlin, Poland's new military premier pledged that despite continuing labor unrest the Polish armed forces will keep their country communist.
 At the same time, Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania tried to reassure the independent labor movement by depicting the new government leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, as a moderating influence in previous labor crises.
 In a statement to the armed forces a few hours after Parliament confirmed his appointment Wednesday as premier, Jaruzelski said he would continue as defense minister also.
 "I am convinced that in the brotherhood of arms with the Warsaw Pact armies, our armed forces... will always fulfill the tasks which guarantee the independent socialist existence of Poland," he said.
 The 57-year-old, four-star general replaced Jozef Pankowski, who took over the government at the height of last summer's nationwide strike wave but was unable to end the labor unrest that produced the Soviet bloc's first legal unions independent of Communist Party control.
 Kania, submitting Jaruzelski's nomination to Parliament, also stressed Poland's loyalty to the Soviet Union and thanked the Russians "for the understanding of our situation."
 But in an apparent attempt to counter speculation that the appointment of a military man foreshadowed military action against the labor movement, he said Jaruzelski "always opposed actions leading to social tensions, and in (a) certain crisis he was not only an advocate but in fact a significant mainstay of the line of political settlement and agreement."

 It is widely believed that both Kania and Jaruzelski opposed the use of force against the strikers last summer in Gdansk, the focal point of the labor rebellion.
 Kania said the party expected Jaruzelski to show "openness toward social organizations and readiness for dialogue and negotiations with firmness in the implementation of social contracts and in exercising constitutional rights of the state's power."
 Jaruzelski's appointment was expected to be discussed at a meeting today in Gdansk of the leaders of Solidarity, the nationwide independent labor federation. The labor leaders also will discuss recent government attacks on the union and the Supreme Court's rejection Tuesday of private farmers' demands for permission to form a union. He did not suggest what they might do.
 In Washington, meanwhile, the Soviet Embassy made public a letter from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to Secretary of State Alexander Haig accusing the United States of open interference in Poland's internal affairs.

Delegates to religious gathering hearing of government intrusion

WASHINGTON (AP) - One of the most inclusive religious gatherings in American history, from Catholics, Jews and Protestants to Hare Krishnas, Scientologists and the Unification Church is hearing speaker after speaker detail cases of government intrusion into church affairs.
 Some recent instances of it threaten "the silencing of social and political criticism by religious bodies," said Kansas City attorney John E. Stumbo, a United Methodist representative.
 He told how an agency of his denomination, under IRS warnings that the church might lose tax-exempt status, dropped out of a coalition working for gun-control legislation.
 The Rev. James E. Wood, a Baptist church-state expert at Baylor University, said growing government intervention in religious operations "constitutes a mounting crisis in American church-state relations."
 It is a "serious threat to the prophetic role of religion and to the constitutional guarantee of the free exercise of religion," he said.
 The three-day conference, which opened in suburban Chevy Chase, Md., Wednesday night, is sponsored by Christian and Jewish organizations embracing about 110 million members from 90 percent of American religious affiliations.
 They included mainline as well as smaller conservative denominations, Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox.

 Such controversial groups as Hare Krishnas, Scientologists and Sung Myung Moon's Unification Church also were present because "the least acceptable groups are the most vulnerable victims of government intervention," said conference chairman William P. Thompson.
 Thompson, chief executive of the United Presbyterian Church and a lawyer himself, said the meeting probably was the most inclusive religiously in the nation's history.
 In any case, the breadth of sponsorship rivaled the religious partnerships formed in the civil rights struggles of the early 1960s.
 Backers included the National Association of Evangelicals, made up of conservative groups, the mainline Protestant-Eastern Orthodox denominations of the National Council of Churches, the U.S. Catholic Conference, Southern Baptists and the Synagogue Council of America embracing all three wings of Judaism.
 Thompson said the Reagan administration was invited to send a closing speaker but declined because it was still new at the job.
 Listing 17 recent examples of intervention by government agencies and courts in religious matters, Thompson said the "pattern they form together is an alarming one."

Oil rich nations should give more foreign aid

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Former ambassador Robert Krueger called upon newly rich oil nations Wednesday to shoulder a larger responsibility for foreign aid.
 The former U.S. ambassador-at-large to Mexico said economic woes tied to soaring world oil prices have forced industrialized nations to take a diminished interest in foreign aid.
 "It was much easier to think of giving when we could give without any loss to ourselves," said Krueger.
 In his speech Wednesday to the 28th Student Conference on National Affairs at Texas A&M University, Krueger suggested the oil wealthy countries should be willing to pick up the slack, especially with their poorer neighbor nations.
 He defended the use of foreign aid in his address to 200 students from the United States, Canada, Mexico, Guatemala and Kuwait.

He said the United States reaped lasting international goodwill from the foreign aid it expended to rebuild devastated nations following World War II.
 Krueger said despite the economic problems at home, Americans might be more willing to support foreign aid if developing countries addressed such problems as population control, unequal distribution of income and political corruption.
 "I would be less than candid if I didn't fail to recognize these problems," Krueger said.
 "The United States can't solve all the problems, but it is important that the other countries see that the United States finds it hard to work on foreign aid if there are corrupt practices going on," he said.

Women protest all-male meeting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—When Garland officials set up a business luncheon with their legislators, they had no idea one lawmaker wouldn't get past the door.

The incident resulted in Wednesday's adoption of a House resolution that state representatives would "refuse to attend any functions in public or private places that deny access to any member of the House."

Rep. Anita Hill, R-Garland, and the other 10 women state representatives sponsored the resolution and stood together at the front of the House when it was presented.

"I'd better inform you that the resolution is for the male House members to judge a beauty contest from among these," Speaker Bill Clayton joked as the women gathered.

Mrs. Hill was turned away from the Citadel Club in the Driskill Hotel here on Monday. Garland city officials had set up a luncheon there to discuss legislative issues with her and Reps. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, and Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas.

She said the Garland officials were "embarrassed" and did not know ahead of time that the Citadel was an all-male club that does not admit women.

"I tried to talk them into going ahead and having their meeting and just talking with me later but they wouldn't hear of it," Mrs. Hill said.

Senate approves drinking age bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Two bills that would raise the legal age for consuming alcohol to 19 in an effort to get "alcohol out of the schools" have been approved by the Senate State Affairs Committee and sent to the floor.

If passed into law, the two bills approved Wednesday could drop Texas from a list of eight states that currently allow 18-year-olds to buy and drink alcoholic beverages.

The measures, sponsored by Sens. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, and Bill Sarpalus, D-Herford, would ban the purchase or consumption of alcoholic beverages by Texans under age 19.

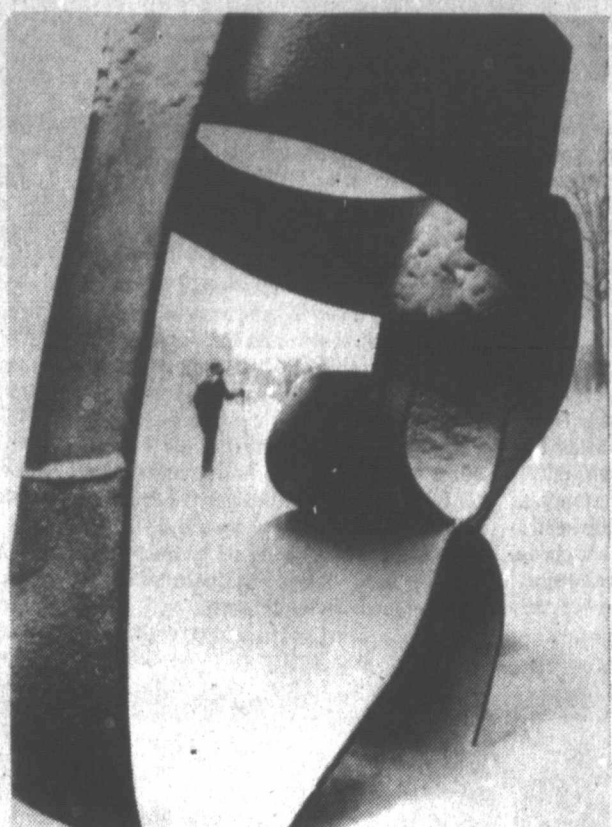

"The reason for this is to get alcohol out of the schools," Mengden said.

Both measures would allow 18-year-olds to work in bars and places that sell alcohol, but Mengden's also would allow 18-year-olds to own businesses that sell liquor.

The committee approved both bills 7-0 without addressing their differences, but only one may be passed by the full senate.

The bills drew favorable reviews from numerous representatives of educators, civic and religious groups who spoke before the committee. Several high school students testified against the measures.

"Peer pressure is one of the greatest motivators in the 14 to 18 year age group," said Don Apple, president of the Texas Association of School

$1.50 gasoline seen

HOUSTON (AP)—Gasoline prices of $1.50 per gallon are only a penny away.

The American Automobile Association, making its second statewide survey since the Jan. 26 decontrol of prices, said one Nacogdoches station is charging $1.49 a gallon for premium unleaded fuel at full service pumps and many stations are charging more than $1.45.

The survey of 203 stations indicated prices have risen 4 cents to 10 cents a gallon in the last 10 days.

A survey immediately after decontrol had indicated an immediate average hike of 3 cents a gallon for all grades.

The AAA said prices have risen about 14 cents a gallon since its year end survey in mid-December, the fastest rate of increase ever recorded.

Thorny price hits would-be valentines

DALLAS (AP)—Faces of the romance-minded may turn rose-red this Valentine's season when they learn a dozen of the largest, long-stemmed beauties now cost as much as $75.

"Roses are just like gasoline," said Al Cooper, manager of Carren's Flowers in Dallas. "They've been going up almost daily for the past month."

Prices for a dozen large roses vary from $50 to $75, while smaller roses with shorter stems sell for $35 to $50 a dozen.

Area florists blamed inflation, the rising price of natural gas, the Rose Bowl parade, the rain in California, the freeze in Florida and supply and demand for the price increases.

Some florists said they've been hit with four price increases during the past week from their wholesale suppliers. "I've been here 10 years, and the prices go up every Valentine's," said an employee of Lakewood Florist. "The suppliers don't give us a reason, they just give us the price. And every morning, the price is a little bit more."

"It's just inflation," said Harvey Schwartz, owner of Your Florist, Inc.

He blamed the weather in other parts of the country for "a lack of roses."

"A lot of that has to do with the really bad rain they had recently in California," Schwartz said.

But Floyd McVey, owner of Reed Floral Co., disagreed. "The weather? It didn't have anything to do with it. It's supply and demand," he said. "Our wholesaler-to-retailer cost is twice what it was a month ago. This always happens at Valentine's. It will hold a while at the present level, then go down when the holiday is over," he said.

"There are so many roses used for the Rose Bowl parade in California. Millions are used for that," said Judy Hofmann, owner of The Flower Affair.

"All the growers in California, where we get most of our roses, deplete what they've got for the parade and have to force-grow new flowers in six weeks for the Valentine's Day demand," she said.

Compromise reached on anti-crime legislation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—"Oil field language" between Gov. Bill Clements and an East Texas senator who drills wells apparently has greased the way for part of the governor's anti-crime package.

Clements met privately with three senators Wednesday and worked out a compromise knocking Attorney General Mark White off a three-member committee that would control state funds to fight crime.

A vote was scheduled for today on Sen. Bill Meier's bill to re-establish the Criminal Justice Division in the governor's office.

Sen. Chet Brooks said colleague Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, negotiated in "oil field language" with Clements, the founder of an oil well drilling service. "They communicated extremely well," said Brooks, D-Pasadena. "Sen. Meier and I sat there in awe."

McKnight said Clements had threatened to veto a substitute offered by him and Brooks that would place the Republican governor on an executive funding committee with State Comptroller Bob Bullock and White, a Democrat who been at odds with Clements numerous times.

No anti-crime funds could be released without approval of two of the three members.

The compromise would replace White with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Democrat who already has announced for re-election next year.

Another change requested by Clements would remove from the bill additional court charges to finance a state fund for crime victims. Brooks said Clements had agreed to submit that proposal as an emergency if it were placed in a separate bill.

The compromise bill also creates a 21-member advisory board to review and recommend grants to the governor.

The showdown was the second in the month-old Legislature between Clements and lawmakers, with the governor apparently getting his way again.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

A date to remember

You might not have noticed, but Jan. 27 was the anniversary of a significant day in the history of this country.

Eight years ago signaled the ending of the war in Vietnam.

This country, reputedly the mightiest power in the history of mankind, came home like a beaten dog with its tail between its legs. It was a humiliating experience that would take a long time to live down, if it could be lived down.

Perhaps it is not good to bring it up again, year after year; but, then, who can say that in the long run there are not some built-in benefits that, if nurtured and handled with care, will work to this country's advantage?

Trying to put a finger on where it all began is like trying to say where a circle begins. President Kennedy had inherited from the Truman and Eisenhower regimes a commitment to prevent a Communist takeover in South Vietnam, a small, weak Southeast Asian country formed in 1954 from a coastal strip of the former French colony of Indochina. To keep this tiny ally from going down the Red drain, Kennedy increased the amount of aid to the South Vietnamese government. Where President Truman had sent 35 military advisers and Ike had sent some 500 more, Kennedy sent 16,000.

That was the real beginning of a war that was to tear this country apart as surely as its citizens, once the war was over, would suddenly come to the realization that the United States, after all, was fallible.

When that notion settled across the land like a cold, wet blanket, the nation reacted in the same manner a young man would react upon learning that he has lost his manhood. We came to a recognition of our limits.

And that wasn't all bad. We faced up to the fact that even nations have human characteristics and that one of those characteristics is that nobody can do everything, no matter how great he or she might be.

We came home, beaten, bowed and licking our wounds, a nation split down the middle over a war a half a world away.

About 57,000 U.S. troops had died, including about 46,000 in combat. More than 300,000 Americans had been wounded and about 780 were missing. The South Vietnamese had suffered 255,000 troop deaths and the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong over one million.

Over one and a half million people killed and perhaps twice or three times that many were wounded — in a brushfire in Vietnam.

If it hadn't been for Watergate, waiting on the steps back home, that took Americans' minds off Vietnam, the after-war tailspin might have been even more severe.

Jan. 27, 1973... a date to remember. A war to forget.

No revenge, no relations

It seems to us that President Reagan struck just about the right posture in his first press conference when questioned about the future of relations between the United States and Iran. He said he was not thinking about revenge. "What good would just revenge do, and what form would it take?" Reagan asked. "I don't think revenge is worthy of us. On the other hand, I don't think we should act as if nothing ever happened."

At the same time, Reagan cautioned Americans against traveling in Iran because the United States government could hardly be expected to guarantee their safety, and joked that he hoped the horde of businessmen who are already jostling to get back to business with Iran's oil merchants were conducting their business by long distance.

We agree that revenge, while an emotionally tempting thought, is not a course we'd like to see the government pursue. We don't see why the United States should be in any hurry to establish diplomatic relations either. We may presume that it has penetrated even to the State Department that the regime in Iran is hardly a model of stability and reliability.

What about all the American oil companies and other businessmen who, now that the hostages have been returned, would like to get back to doing some kind of business with the Iranian government or whatever private businesspeople may exist in Iran?

We don't think they should be prevented, but we don't think the government ought to encourage them either. It should be made clear that the government isn't going to provide any physical or economic protection for people who want to travel to or do business with Iran. There should be no loans through the World Bank or International Development Agency, no long-term, low-interest loans to encourage imports or exports, no government subsidies or protections of any kind at all, whatsoever. And, if an American business enterprise gets cheated or swindled by the Iranian government or an Iranian business concern, it would be solely their loss. Our government should make it clear that it will not provide low-cost, taxpayer subsidized insurance of any kind, or in any form of bail-out for businesses that suffer losses, reverses or seizure in Iran.

That sounds like a sensible program for dealing with most of the world. But it would be a pretty severe departure from the way most American businesses do business overseas. For most other countries the government provides various forms of encouragement, counseling and support, removing some of the risk inherent in foreign operations at the expense of the taxpayers.

For Iran, at least, there should be no such cushion. Let American businessmen trade if they want to. But let them take all the risks themselves. There's no reason the taxpayers should have to bear any of those burdens.

By Oscar Cooley

Was Carter's policy in regard to Iran's holding of the American hostages right or wrong?

Some have opined it was wrong because it depreciated the United States of America, revealing this country's weakness when challenged by an insignificant adversary. Others have said it was right because it worked. The 52 hostages were finally freed and came home, safe and sound.

I think it was right for another reason: although as a nation we temporized and endured insult for more than 14 months, our policy was shaped by the president's determination to preserve the lives of individual human beings. This nation of 225 million people allowed its head to be bloodied in order than 52 of their number might be saved. Such concern for the individual is not common in these times of preoccupation with the social — the mass.

The United States is fundamentally a Christian nation. The Christian philosophy is that every human being is, though imperfect, a child of God and of infinite worth.

Our religion, our laws, our customs all revolve around the individual person. We have no state religion; everyone is free to believe as he will. Our law holds that everyone is "innocent until proven guilty." On our value scale, education stands as very high — education of every individual to his highest potential. Each is free to choose his own occupation and place of residence.

Our forefathers held slaves, but they came to see that each person has a human right to the earnings of his own labor, so slavery had to go. We hate racism because men are neither white nor black, Nordic nor Hispanic, but human beings — and individuals.

It is said that in war sometimes a platoon must be sacrificed to save a battalion. The decision to do that would be a hard one to make. I am confident that if the battalion were American and the decision were put up to the men, they would not agree.

Some deplore the sacrifice of the prestige of the world's proudest nation merely for the sake of 52 citizens, but has the standing of this nation really been sacrificed? On the contrary, it has been enhanced. The Iranians used violence in the attempt to gain their end, but we did not.

It is also suggested that the U.S. need not keep its agreement to unfreeze the assets of Iran as the price of getting the 52 released, the deal having been made with kidnappers.

If the United States were to repudiate the agreement, we would be in the position of breaking our word while Iran has already kept hers. Do Americans want to be placed in a position below that of barbarians?

An agreement is an agreement, and should be kept regardless of the party with whom it is made. Because we contract with a certain one does not mean we endorse his morals.

The United States would indeed demean itself if it deliberately failed to keep its agreement with Iran. Future agreements and treaties we might make with foreign nations would be looked at with skepticism. The peace of the world hangs to a great degree on the keeping of treaties, even after the people who made them are out of power or even dead and gone.

It is impossible to know now just how history will judge the American government's conduct of the affair of the hostages. At the moment there is much tendency to deplore and condemn, largely to justify ourselves for voting Jimmy Carter out of the White House.

It is quite possible the historians will give Carter a fairly high mark for his hostage policy. He saved the lives of 52 Americans, caught in a trap they could not possibly foresee. And he preserved the peace of the world throughout a very touchy world situation.

Perhaps our question should be answered by a poll of the 52 rescued people, taken by secret ballot.

Today in history

Today is Thursday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1981. There are 322 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 12, 1912, China became a republic when the Manchu dynasty was overthrown by forces led by Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

On this date: In 1733, English colonists led by James Oglethorpe landed at Savannah, Ga.

In 1809, Abraham Lincoln was born in what was then Hardin County, Ky.

In 1914, ground was broken for the Lincoln memorial in Washington.

And in 1974, Soviet Nobel Prize-winner Alexander Solzhenitsyn was arrested at his Moscow apartment.

Ten years ago: Eight U.S. helicopters were shot down on missions over Laos.

Five years ago: The head of the National Institute on Drug Abuse said marijuana posed less of a health threat than alcohol and tobacco.

One year ago: A U.S. mission returned from East Africa with commitments from Kenya, Somalia and Oman to allow increased U.S. access to their military facilities.

Today's birthdays: Gen. Omar Bradley is 88. Actor Lorne Greene 66. Italian director Franco Zeffirelli 68.

Thought for today: I claim not to have controlled events, but confess plainly that events have controlled me — President Abraham Lincoln (1809-1865).

The monetary unit of the African nation of Liberia is the U.S. dollar.

The Fashion Capital

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — You can say what you will about the Reagan administration, but you can't deny it has turned Washington into the fashion capital of the world. All it took was a rich First Lady from California and her richer California friends and suddenly this dusty, peanut-farming, Amaretto-drinking town turned into a land of lynx and sable.

The new California "laid-back look" has affected everyone.

I went to buy a hot pretzel the other day from my favorite stand on K Street, when I noticed that Mary had a new look. Her frayed sweater had been patched all over with ultra-suede, her muffler was thrown back across her shoulder, her wool Redskin hat was perched on top of her head like a pillow, and she was wearing white gloves as she made change.

"Mary," I said, "you look absolutely smashing in that outfit."

"Bill Bliss designed it for me," she said. "I adore his lunch-time things."

"May I have a pretzel, please?" I asked. She handed me one wrapped in a page from last month's Vogue magazine. and accepted my 50 cents. "Don't get me wrong. I don't have anything against Adolfo. As a matter of fact, I'll probably change into one of his suits when I move my cart over to Lafayette Park later this afternoon."

"I didn't know you were into fashion, Mary," I said.

"We all are," she replied. "Thank heavens we have somebody to set a standard in the White House. Let's hope the sidewalks of Washington will no longer be filled with uncombed hairdos, messy gold chains and raggedy jeans."

"People do look a lot more pulled together since the Reagans moved into Washington," I said, as I ate my pretzel.

"Oscar de la Renta is supposed to stop by and show me some fabric for a coat I'm having designed for when I sell pretzels outside the F Street Club."

"I like Oscar's things," I said.

"Myra says she prefers Jimmy Galanos, but I don't think he's right for pretzels."

"What does Myra sell?"

"Carnations at 18th and Pennsylvania Avenue. She found her first Galanos gown at Goodwill Industries, and she's been loyal to him ever since."

"Isn't keeping up with the Reagan's going to be quite expensive?" I asked her.

"I'll probably be criticized by some of the other pushcart dealers, but I think when you have money you should spend it any way you want to. It's been a long time since we women have been permitted to dress up, and I'm going to make the most of it."

"I don't blame you," I said. "I notice you're wearing a skirt. You always used to wear pants in the wintertime."

"Pants are out," Mary said. "Particularly at lunch time. If Women's Wear Daily took a picture of me in pants, I'd never hear the end of it. The important thing is for clothes to match. Ruffles are replacing sequins. That's why my sweater is so ruffled."

"Who designed the Redskin wool hat for you?"

"Yves St. Laurent. He said he wanted me to have something that was not glitzy or show-off, and it's perfect if you miss your hairdresser's appointment."

I decided to have another pretzel.

"I don't want to be critical," I said, "but I notice you're still wearing crepe-soled boots."

"That was Halston's idea. He said it was the best way of showing the Californians that we in the East have a laid-back look too, and we intend to stick with it."

"He's right," I said. "There's no reason for the Californians to shove Gucci shoes down our throats."

A man came by with his hairbrush. Mary introduced him to me as Julius, her hairdresser. "He always comes by right after the lunch hour to give me a comb-out. If it weren't for darling Julius, I don't know when I'd find the time to sell pretzels."

New boys on the block

By Don Graft

You can run into some of the strangest people in the midst of an international crisis.

Such as the Algerians. They did not resolve the Tehran hostage crisis by any means, but they provided the good offices through which Iranians and Americans could reach the point of bilateral settlement.

Good offices are not where the more established members of the international community have become accustomed to running into the Algerians.

More often than not such encounters have involved opposite sides of an issue separating the developed democracies from the demanding Third World, of which Algeria has been an outspokenly self-appointed leader.

What makes Algeria different from most of that Third World it champions so energetically is oil. It is no Saudi Arabia, but has enough to pay its own way and provide the economic security that translates into political clout. But in other respects, Algeria's experience of the past quarter century is archetypical.

After more than a century of subjugation, the country emerged victorious from a prolonged and bitter war of independence that almost plunged the colonial power, France, into its own civil war.

The Algerian revolution promptly went the usual route. Instead of opening the way to political democracy, it decayed into a one-party authoritarianism that until very recently was also essentially a one-man show.

Initially, that man was Ahmed Ben Bella, youthful and charismatic hero of the struggle against the French. He was Algeria's undisputed strongman from 1962 to 1965, at which point his role was successfully disputed by another but less flamboyant veteran of the war of liberation, Houari Boumediene.

Under the doctrinaire ascetic Boumediene, Algeria made its mark on world affairs as an OPEC oil-price hawk, a haven for political dissidents and terrorists of various persuasions and a supporter of liberation movements, particularly the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Polisario guerrillas who continue to pursue their goal of an independent state in the Western Sahara territories abandoned by Spain. It is a cause that has brought Algeria into continuing conflict with neighboring Morocco, which was of considerable assistance to Algeria during the Algerian independence struggle but now claims the desolate Saharan territory.

Two years ago, with the death of Boumediene, Algeria appeared to be eyeball to eyeball with crisis. It was the test that every authoritarian regime must meet and so many fail to pass without violence — a transfer of power.

Not, however, in Algeria's case. Boumediene was succeeded by a little known military man, Benjedid Chadli, who was expected to be more an arbiter among rival factions of the inner circle than personally dominant. In reality, it is working out somewhat differently. He appears to have become a bit of both.

Real power is exercised by committee, but Chadli is much more than its figurehead. He has been instrumental in an important shift of economic emphasis, from Boumediene's preoccupation with oil and industrialization to greater attention to Algeria's original but neglected resource, its agriculture. And by mid-1979, he felt sufficiently secure politically to release Ben Bella from 14 years of house-arrest.

The Algerian role in the hostage settlement may flow in part from that sense of security and a new political maturity. It may mark, along with the apparently successful passing of the transfer of power test, Algeria's coming of age as a member of the international community.

The long-established members of that community may in the future find they are dealing with a new Algeria, although that does not necessarily mean a more predictable or accommodating one.

"Honestly, Mother! Don't worry. I'm sure I'll be able to look back on my childhood with great fondness."

U.S. aid lags behind in aid-to-health ratio

U.S. foreign aid, once the gold mine of world development, is in an accelerating decline at a time when such other industrial democracies as Japan and West Germany are setting higher and higher goals for their aid programs.

Among the top half-dozen donor nations of the West, only Britain, under Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's austerity program, has joined Washington in whittling away at its financial assistance to poorer nations.

As a result of the current aid, the United States now ranks 15th among 17 nations in ratios of aid-to-wealth. The 17 countries are the major aid donors of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, a grouping of industrialized democracies.

Official American development aid in 1979, the last year for which comparative statistics are available, totaled $4.7 billion, which equaled one-fifth of 1 percent of the U.S. gross national product. Only Austria, with an aid program equivalent to .19 percent of GNP, and Italy, at .08 percent, were lower.

The most generous donors statistically — Sweden, the Netherlands and Norway — all topped the .9 percent-of-GNP level, almost five times the U.S. rate.

The United States remains the biggest single contributor of foreign aid. In dollars, the Swedish, Dutch and Norwegian programs together totaled barely more than half the amount of U.S. aid.

But specialists in the field regard the aid-to-GNP ratio as the most meaningful indicator of a government's generosity.

They point out, for example, that the GNP of the United States equals the GNPs of Japan, West Germany and France combined, but those three countries together spend twice as much on foreign aid as Washington.

In the first decade after World War II, the United States was virtually alone in providing substantial overseas aid. But from more than 5 percent of GNP in the Eisenhower-Kennedy years, the aid program slipped to .32 percent in 1970, and on down to its 1979 low of 2 percent.

In its report for 1980, the OECD's Development Assistance Committee concludes "there appears to be no present chance" that OECD donors will collectively reach the United Nations' goal of 7 percent of GNP in aid by 1985. The committee largely blames the United States.

The outgoing Carter administration proposed a foreign-aid budget of $8 billion for fiscal 1982, which begins next Oct. 1, but President Reagan's Office of Management and Budget has suggested cutting that by $2.6 billion, for a budget of roughly $5.4 billion.

The State Department and OMB have been working on a compromise that is expected to be announced this week.

The proposed cuts drew criticism from such U.S. allies as West Germany, France and Canada. Liberals in Congress also assailed the planned cutbacks. Last month, then-Secretary of State Edmund Muskie noted the long decline and said the United States "can no longer afford to act as if foreign aid were charity, and as if diplomacy were a diversion. They are as vital to our long-run security as defense."

Nations with export-gearred economies, such as West Germany and Japan, see an additional motivation: greater development abroad means expanded markets.

The Japanese government announced last month it will try to double its foreign-aid spending over the next five years, from $10.7 billion during 1976-80 to at least $21.4 billion from 1981 to 1985.

Japan's fiscal 1981 budget is one of its most austere in years but still includes an increase of some 65 percent in foreign assistance, to $4.35 billion.

The countries receiving the most U.S. aid are Egypt and Israel, while Japanese aid focuses on the developing countries of east Asia, the biggest recipient being Indonesia.

West Germany's foreign aid in 1979 totaled $3.35 billion, or 44 percent of the country's GNP.

Marilyn Monroe's birth records found by officials

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eighteen years after Marilyn Monroe's death, the widely held belief that the blonde sex symbol was born illegitimate has been disproved by authorities who found copies of her birth certificate at the home of a dead man they believe was her father.

Martin Edward Mortensen, 85, collapsed at the wheel of his automobile Tuesday in downtown Riverside and died of an apparent heart attack, a Riverside County coroner's investigator said.

Miss Monroe's mother has been in mental institutions since 1953, and early studio biographies reported that her father was dead. Some biographers reported she was born illegitimate.

But Mortensen, who worked as a gas company serviceman for 50 years before retiring in 1965, had told co-workers and his physician he was the late film star's father, giving details of his marriage to her mother that contradict the biographical accounts.

At the modest apartment where Mortensen lived alone in Mira Loma, about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, Ford said he found copies of Miss Monroe's birth certificate as well as marriage and divorce papers for Mortensen and Gladys Baker, Miss Monroe's mother.

Mortensen, address unknown, age 29.

The marriage certificate is dated Oct. 11, 1924; the final Los Angeles Superior Court divorce Aug. 15, 1928.

Also found at the apartment were several books about Miss Monroe as well as Mortensen's own birth certificate and his parents' marriage certificate. Ford said he is convinced all the documents are authentic.

Details of her childhood were always cloudy, and a publicist said Miss Monroe wanted the studio biographies to say her father had died.

"It was made up because Marilyn wanted it that way," said Jet Fore, the film publicist who wrote Miss Monroe's first studio biography for 20th Century-Fox. "She told me her father was dead."

Fore said he later heard that her father had abandoned her mother, and was under the impression that Miss Monroe was illegitimate.

"That's what we all thought," he said. "It's in several books." Miss Monroe had said her father's name was Mortensen, but "the feeling was it was a name plucked out of the air," Zolotow said.

But Mortensen told gas company counselor Thomas Burns a different story about his marriage and his daughter's birth.

"They were separated when she was born," Burns said. "Marilyn's mother left him and he didn't know she was pregnant at the time. He said she was quite a wild gal, a lot like Marilyn was — a pretty gal, but kind of wild."

Burns said Mortensen didn't really know about his daughter until she was 7 and county welfare authorities subpoenaed him.

Mortensen also disputed stories that he had repudiated Miss Monroe when she tried to reach him as an adult, Burns said.

"He told me she told him she didn't want to have anything to do with him when she became a movie star. He said, 'I never bothered her.'"

Free trade zone could become first Western common market

WASHINGTON (AP) — A free trade zone along the U.S.-Mexican border sees it as a first step toward a complete Western Hemisphere common market, perhaps as early as the end of the century, says a Texan lobbying for the idea.

Former White House protocol chief Abelardo L. Valdez said a successful 10-year trial run would have the potential for expansion to a North American common market that later could be linked to South American markets.

"The end result could well be a common market for the Western Hemisphere by the year 2000," Valdez said in a statement prepared for a North American trade hearing today in Miami.

The statement fills in some details on the proposal he first started to promote last year.

Valdez said the free trade zone should extend for 200 miles on each side of the border, running all the way from Brownsville, Texas, to San Diego. Among the Texas cities to be included would be Corpus Christi, San Antonio, San Angelo, Midland, Odessa and El Paso.

"In essence, it would constitute a mini-Common Market — i.e., any product grown, produced or manufactured within the zone on either side of the border, could move duty free, throughout the zone," he said.

The native of Floresville, Texas, said 10 years should be a long enough period to determine whether the zone could be successful.

The advantages he listed if his proposal became reality included more jobs on both sides of the border, joint ventures and incentives for new industries.

"In addition to increasing trade within the zone, I can foresee a skyrocketing of the competitive position of firms operating within the zone relative to world trade," Valdez said.

He added that the zone could not succeed unless both countries saw mutual advantage.

Valdez contended that the experiment would be mutually beneficial.

"The proposed zone is a manageable first step, and this is important because past North American common market proposals, especially those made during the past presidential campaign, have been perceived in Mexico as being one-way streets — the United States trying to monopolize Mexico's oil reserves or take over its industry," he said.

Valdez said a successful common market would not only have economic benefits but could also aid hemispheric political stability.

Broken pipe cuts service

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — About 10,000 natural gas customers in this area were without heat for about six hours because of a burst pipeline, company officials said.

A 40-foot section of the 10-inch pipeline was replaced and pressure was restored by 6 p.m., said Bolero Energy Corp. Mike Long.

"We're in good shape," Long said after the repair.

Utility officials in both cities asked businesses, schools and residents to lower their thermostats and Long said that action averted a complete gas shutdown during repairs.

Long said a fire started when the pipe burst but was quickly extinguished.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What could be more Shakespearean or more like Ibsen than this real-life drama?

My father, a very handsome and physical man, has had the same mistress all his married life. His wife (my mother) was aware of it, and in her later years she has become morbid and melancholy, until now she is completely senile. She knows nothing. Father is very attentive to her. He has his mistress come to his home every day to take care of Mother. This mistress, who was the object of Mother's most passionate hatred in years gone by, is now the object of poor Mother's deepest gratitude and affection. Meanwhile my father and this Salome are having a geriatric ball without the slightest guilt.

Mother looks but does not see; she listens but does not hear. Tell me, Abby, is something rotten in Denmark?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If your parents live in Denmark, the answer is yes.

DEAR ABBY: I hope this letter makes your column because a lot of people need to get this message. My daughter was married recently, and while I was standing in the receiving line at the reception, a cousin embraced and kissed me, then between sneezes, with an obviously stopped-up nose, said in a croaking voice, "I've been in bed all week with the flu, but nothing could keep me away from this wedding, so I got out of a sick bed to be here."

Abby, the poor dear really thought she had done us a favor by coming. She would have done us a bigger favor by staying home! And would you believe this well-meaning but inconsiderate woman actually kissed the bride?

TYPHOID MARY'S COUSIN

DEAR COUSIN: Yours is a timely letter. Thanks for the opportunity to remind readers that the flu and colds should not be treated lightly — a thorough recovery is essential. A relapse due to returning to work (or school) prematurely can lead to pneumonia, or even prove fatal. And, mothers, please don't send your children to school with coughs and runny noses!

AT WIT'S END

By Erma Bombeck

Aaaachoo!
What do you mean where did I get this cold? It should be obvious to everyone where I got it. Watching television.

Night after night I sat in front of the tube while one sickie after another peered out at me through red eyes (cleared up only by eyedrops), runny nose (dammed up only by the miracle of an antihistamine), fevered lips (brought down by an aspirin containing extra strength) and irritating coughs. I don't want to talk about it.

For awhile, I felt pretty good. Then one night, a tall blonde with a stuffed-up nose was trying to breathe through a balloon, and my husband said, "Can you do that?"

"Why would I want to blow up a balloon with my nose?"
"I didn't mean that. I just thought that for the last couple of days you've sounded like your head is stopped up."

At the next commercial break, a woman wrapped in a blanket who looked like she was living only for her residuals coughed and said, "My cold capsule lasts for eight hours instead of two."

I said aloud, "Sweetie, it doesn't matter. Your capsule is going to outlive you by two hours."

When I went to bed, I felt a little flushed, but nothing serious. The next night, I counted eight people on commercials who wheezed, sniffed, hacked, sneezed, gargled, moaned and gasped, and still looked better than I did. I wanted to reach over and turn them off or change the channel, but I was afraid to get too close to any of them.

Instead, I crouched on the other side of the room and tried to figure out where they find all these sick people. I've seen one actress on three different cold commercials. It's the biggest thing that has happened to her in her entire career. I never saw her on anything when she was well.

Imagine answering an ad for a "consumptive, feverish actress with a stopped-up nasal passage and shallow breathing" and having to wait in an office of 3,000 unemployed flu victims who are applying for the same job.

I feel lousy as I sit in front of the TV set in my bathrobe. It's like Tom Sawyer watching his own funeral. Last night I was watching a commercial about a man in bed who was coughing so hard he couldn't talk. His wife said she'd get him a cough depressant. At that moment our screen went black.

It was probably a power failure, but frankly, I'm worried.

Exclusive Godmothers service, not for poor

NEW YORK (NEA) — The Godmothers is coming! It's already in New York, Washington, Philadelphia and Boston and, in the next two years, Abby Hirsch, who founded the dating service in New York in December '78, plans to open branches in 12 more cities.

But hold onto your pumpkin. Unless you're an educated, accomplished, cultured professional, you can't sign up. Not even if you can scrape up the $250 fee for "three evenings" with three different men (or women) who, it's hoped, come closest to what you say you want in a date.

The Godmothers was not organized for the underprivileged. Says Ms. Hirsch, who also runs her own public relations business, "I started The Godmothers because my friends who are very interesting people had become boring. They kept lamenting the fact that there was no one around they liked going out with. Lo and behold, that applied to the men, too."

So Ms. Hirsch sent out a press release about her plans for an elite introduction service and the response put her into business. Now she says, "At any given time, I have several hundred people registered."

They're men and women aged 21 to 60, but mostly in their 30s and 40s ("the men go through their 50s"); doctors, lawyers, corporation presidents, stockbrokers, two restaurateurs, some journalists, one artist, a novelist, etc.

All doing well, except socially, all with the credentials to survive the screening procedure which goes like this: "First," she says, "you send us an autobiographical sketch including your last three relationships, how long they lasted, why they ran into problems, what you liked and responded to about the people and what you didn't, etc."

"In the third part, you tell

Heart names president

Dr. Jay Johnson, D.D.S. has been chosen as president of the American Heart Association, Gray County Division.

Dr. Johnson is pleased with the CPR programs sponsored by the Gray County Division. They are planning to expand the life saving programs of research, education and community services and need public support to do so.

us the sort of person you'd like to meet through us and the kind of relationship you want. We study all this and try to see if you would mix easily with our other clients, and if your expectations are not too unrealistic."

If what you say is what they like, you're invited in to say it in person. "We sit and talk for about 45 minutes, asking you to expand on what you've written," she says. "I try not to think of whom you might like during the interview because I will start to hear things I would not hear otherwise. But the moment you leave, I start going through my files." Promptness counts because The Godmothers claims it will produce your first "evening" in four weeks. "If we can't, we say here is someone pretty close, or we ask for more time," she says. "I've spent weeks trying to figure out whom someone might be compatible with. All three evenings could take as long as a year to produce, but it almost never does. We try not to be sloppy, though."

After each encounter does take place, the Godmothers calls each party for his and her reaction. And that's when the trouble starts. "Two things sabotage people in relationships," she says. "Unrealistic expectations and the feeling that there's always something better around the corner."

People are quick to reject, lest they be rejected first, and they're slow to allow second chances. But, she says, "If I'm able to say to a client, 'Your date liked being with you and would like to go out with you again, are you interested?' the answer more often than not is yes, and a lot of initial criticism falls away. Also, people have to allow for differences in style. Some are more casual and warmer than others.

Still, two people with different styles can get on if they go out again."

Thirty to 35 percent of her clients do continue some sort of relationship with one of the people we introduce them to, she says. "That's a vast difference from the world out there if you think of all the people you go out with once and never see again. Also, I have six couples who are living together, and they're not frivolous people." Neither is the mature, New York marketing executive who is on his second three-evening round with the Godmothers. "I'm divorced and I was attracted to The Godmothers because I favor anything that suggests pre-screening," he says. "You hear about all the fish in the ocean in the single world, but how much time can you spend chasing fish?"

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column on the lady who suffered from constipation for 10 years. What a pity there was no mention of eating apples to break the laxative habit. My experience has been to eat as many as needed of whole apples to keep in good condition. I will be 90 years of age soon and I need only a few apples that I enjoy to keep fit. It is important to eat the entire apple. Too many people peel the apple and throw the best part away. It is important to thoroughly cleanse the apple because of spray residue.

DEAR READER — Thank you for your thoughtful comment. It is true that fresh fruit is often helpful in promoting good bowel function. Why? For one reason it contains bulk and, as I usually mention, it is important to colon function to include bulk in your diet. Studies have shown that cereal fiber is one of the more effective sources of bulk and that is why most people usually mention bran.

Raw apples do contain a lot of bulk and that slows the absorption of the sugar in the apple to the point that the blood sugar doesn't even tend to rise after eating a raw apple. Many other fruits also contain bulk.

Now I can see that you are a firm believer in the old adage that an apple a day keeps the doctor away — and perhaps the idea that if a little is good, more is better. But I must say that not everyone with colon problems tolerates apples well. For some people they are gas formers. But so is bran. A person sometimes has to find out what works best for him or her as an individual.

A proper diet, adequate bulk and regular habits helps to relieve many of the bowel complaints that people have. These aspects are discussed in The Health Letter number 16-4, Spastic Colon, Irregularity and Constipation, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

A spastic colon often causes frequent small stools rather than absence of a bowel movement. And alcohol is one hidden cause for bowel complaints in those who use too much of it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you kindly explain what a Colles fracture of the wrist is? Will it affect the fingers and what are some of the after effects one can expect from this? I am 66 years old and fractured my wrist. The fingers seem very weak. Is there some therapy I can take to help the strength come back in my hand?

DEAR READER — A Colles fracture means a fracture of the distal end of the radius, the bone in the forearm that joins the hand region near the thumb. The tip (styloid process) of the ulnar bone (the other forearm bone) may also be broken. The displaced bone gives the wrist a typical "silver fork" shape. It is named after the doctor who first described it in 1814, Abraham Colles.

The swelling during the acute injury can put pressure on the nerves that go through the wrist area (carpal tunnel) to the fingers. This may cause a variety of symptoms including tingling. But if you can move all your fingers and use your hand, you are doing well. Ask your doctor what exercises are best for you in view of your stage of recovery. But I should think you can expect good recovery in your case.

The human side of Abraham Lincoln revealed

HOUSTON — Abraham Lincoln's life and accomplishments have been enshrined in so many myths in the years since his death that for many of us he exists more as a symbol than as a human being with human problems.

Dr. Paul McFarland regrets that phenomenon because he thinks the human aspects of Lincoln are really as interesting as, if not more so than the legends. McFarland is professor of surgery and associate dean for graduate studies at the Dental Branch of the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston.

Although McFarland decided at the age of eight "for no good reason" to become a dentist, a history instructor at Gettysburg College introduced him to the study of Lincoln, and it has become a lifetime pursuit.

McFarland believes the best way to sum up the true character of Lincoln is to call him a "very uncommon man". His great strengths were his integrity and his ability to accept the advice of people more knowledgeable than himself, yet he was strong enough to stick with a difficult decision when he knew he was right, McFarland said.

However, he was not without insecurities. He left his wife standing at the altar on their first scheduled wedding day because he got cold feet. They were married several months later.

Lincoln studied and became a brilliant military tactician during the War Between the States but his only active military experience was in the Black Hawk Indian War. He was elected captain of his company, an honor which he considered to be the best of his career.

Unfortunately, he lacked the training to be a really polished military leader. For example, "once when he was leading his troops, they came to a fence and Lincoln was not sure which command to use to get them through the gate. So he called a halt and told them to regroup on the other side of the fence."

McFarland said.

Many newspapers panned Lincoln's address, chastising him for the banality of his remarks. According to McFarland, one of the few people who realized the depth of his words was Everett, who

ON VALENTINE'S DAY, your valentine will be impressed by receiving a pet of her own that needs no special care, as suggested by the Jewelry Industry Council. Heart pendants and bracelets are traditional but she may delight in some of these little creatures including a fuzzy kitty, a shaggy dog, a perky rooster, dragonfly, lizard, lovebird or the little gold owl the teddy bear is holding.

FIRST LADY gets rave notices from designers. Adolfo describes Nancy Reagan as a "Thoroughbred American" while Bill Blass states "I don't think there's been anyone in the White House since Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis who has her flair."

Offer fuzzy pet for Valentine

NEW YORK (AP) — Want a whimsical little gift for that special Valentine of yours?

How about a fuzzy little cat that won't give her allergies — or a shaggy dog she won't have to walk? The Jewelry Industry Council points out that such little jeweled pets will be quite at home on her lapel or collar.

"Of course, there are always the little heart pendants and pins for Valentine's Day, but there's something extra charming about a little wise old owl, a colorful lovebird, a rampant rooster or a handsome gold-winged dragonfly with little diamond eyes in gold," adds

Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the council.

These remembrances are practical additions to her jewelry collection and can be worn not only on lapels and collars, but on fabric handbags, hair ribbons or neck scarves to perk up a costume, she says.

Follow that fragrance

Recent scientific research seems to verify what the editors of Harper's Bazaar have always suspected: Scent is a turn-on. Women have always taken advantage of that phenomenon to attract men. But don't forget, the editors report in the magazine's February issue, it can work the other way, too.

If you love the way he smells when he wears a cologne, that is a turn-on for you. So here is a collection of provocative scents for you and him — to keep you both happy on Valentine's Day and forever...

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

February 13, 1981

You should experience a rise in your social life this coming year. It could begin when someone you meet introduces you to a new crowd. You won't stop seeing your old pals, you'll just be making the list longer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) For some reason today you won't be in a mood for meeting strangers, but your curiosity about people will quickly overcome this. You'll end up having a great time. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, false pride might initially try to run your decision-making, but you'll have a good talk with yourself on an do what must be done, even if credit might go to another.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your doubts over whether a person close to you really appreciates you will be short-lived. His or her actions will eliminate all fears.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Success with large goals can be achieved today because you won't wait for someone who was supposed to have carried the ball to take action. You'll do it yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Because you're not easily dissuaded today, you'll quickly bypass any associate who tends to waver or vacillate. You won't let anyone hold you back.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) At first your chores may appear overwhelming today, but once you get going you'll find ways to overcome even large obstacles and accomplish your tasks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If it weren't for your gregarious mood today an incident which occurs could easily dampen your spirits. Your sunny disposition also helps others keep smiling.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Intangibles tend to confuse you today because you can't quite seem to grasp them. However, anything you can touch or feel you'll have no trouble parlaying into dollars.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Although you may be tempted to dwell in the world of dreams today, you'll get hold of yourself and let realities lead you to success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your first thoughts today may be to let someone else do the giving for a change, but the real you can't stand to see someone in need. You'll happily extend yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone of whom you may not be exactly fond might be the instrument for leading you toward something quite beneficial today, because you didn't let prejudicial emotions interfere.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your success today depends largely on the ante. As the stakes get higher, your dreams and drive magically dissolve any fears or doubts you may have had.

Radio Moscow loud from Cuba

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (NEA) - The young people here who tune in radio station WAIV on the AM dial normally hear an orthodox mix of rock 'n' roll music and commercials for tight-fitting trousers.

But not always. Sometimes at night, when the station changes the direction of its signal, startled listeners may be greeted by an unconventional announcer who intones: "This is Radio Moscow."

The reason is that the Soviet propaganda network has begun broadcasting from a relay transmitter in Cuba, and, coincidentally, it's near the same part of the dial as WAIV.

So when the signals overlap, the dad-ratted Russians often win out, and the kids who listen for B. Springsteen and J. Brown may instead receive a recording from Mr. L. Breshnev.

The kids say it's just not the same. Martial music has no boogie, for one thing, and WAIV receives candid complaints from folks who say they don't like travelogues of Lake Baikal.

But the grumbling has been to no avail. Government observers say the Soviet Union is making a considerable effort to put its views into American homes, and the radio broadcast is a principal tactic. Presently, the Russians are sending 4-5 hours of programs a day from the Cuban relay transmitter.

It should be noted there is nothing sudden about the activity. The Russians have been broadcasting to the United States, and all around the world, for more than 30 years. Indeed, they may have built the largest foreign radio service of all time. The West thinks Radio Moscow currently broadcasts in 85 languages, and perhaps as many nations as well.

But until recently the broadcasts to America were technically limited. The programs were sent exclusively over high frequencies, and could only be heard by short-wave operators.

Ergo, the difference today is that the Cuban relay facility permits Radio Moscow to contact the U.S. over regular radio sets. And in the Southeast the contact comes with the force of a clear channel. People as far inland as Tennessee can now hear Russian news and views by dialing 600 kilohertz.

And a few people do dial it. Given the normal fare of U.S. radio, some of the Moscow material isn't bad. This is another change from the old days of Soviet airwave propaganda; where they used to rage about U.S. imperialism and "war mongering," the broadcasts have become rather more sophisticated.

Recently, for example, Radio Moscow presented a factual and quite sympathetic commentary on the anniversary of John F. Kennedy's assassination. Even the feature regarding Lake Baikal had some merit; it told a long story of a "grassroots" movement to save "The Pearl of Siberia" from dread pollution.

And besides this growth of professional skills, the warp and woof of the Russian programs have apparently become an important data source for Western authorities and scholars.

The CIA, in fact, is now packaging the warp and woof. It has a Foreign Broadcast Information Service which transcribes Radio Moscow's programs and sells them by subscription.

The transcriptions run an average of 80 pages a day. And data aside, the content is often as thick as the volume. "Radio Moscow is all politics," says a state department officer. "The programs are more subtle than they used to be, but they are still designed to promote the USSR philosophy."

Thus Radio Moscow has recently informed U.S. listeners of the continued "genocide" of American Indians, and of the "Moscow" treaty banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere. The travelogue on Lake Baikal also told how the grassroots movement proves again that Russia is a government of the people.

And then there is Afghanistan. Radio Moscow has used the observations of what it calls an "American journalist" to relate that progressive things taking place in Kabul. Without mentioning the Russian invasion, the journalist says the new Afghan government is receiving widespread popular support.

Alas, that support for Afghanistan does not extend to Sterling, Ill. And this has been bad news for Radio Moscow. Sterling radio station WSDR used to be the only outlet in the nation to carry the Russian broadcasts as part of its regular programming; that is, until the events in Afghanistan.

loved to play something on the air and ask listeners to call in with rebukes. Then the Soviets invaded Afghanistan and it wasn't much fun any more. So we just dropped the whole idea.

Now the only way the people of Sterling can get Radio Moscow on AM sets is like the people of Jacksonville: over signals from places like Cuba. All told the CIA thinks about 250,000 Americans tune in to hear about the continuing drama of Lake Baikal, presumably, everybody else prefers Mr. Springsteen.

Although it has far more domestic radio stations than the Soviet Union, the United States' foreign broadcasting activity on shortwave does not begin to match that of Radio Moscow.

The Moscow service is on the air at least 2,000 hours a week in as many as 85 languages, while the U.S. counterpart, the Voice of America, broadcasts 868 hours in 39 languages.

The U.S. also supports Radio Free Europe, which aims at communist countries there, and Radio Liberty, which concentrates on the USSR. However, these additional systems do not significantly close the radio propaganda gap.

America does have one foreign broadcasting advantage. A VOA spokesman says that network alone is heard by 80 million people a week, excluding China. The Chinese audience is not known, but may constitute 80 million more. In any event, the U.S. listening audience is greater than that of Radio Moscow.

Ocean production problems solved

HOUSTON — Scientists have long been aware of the potential for much-needed reserves of oil and gas trapped beneath oceans in hard-to-reach geological structures.

The difficulties of drilling and producing in deep water offshore, however, are many. The first and most obvious problem is just how to get the hydrocarbons out of the ground and transported thousands of feet to the ocean's surface through often rough waters.

Technology has come a long way in answering this problem, and many researchers feel a system known as the Submerged Production System (SPS) is ready for adaptation to commercial operation and is environmentally safe for the job.

The SPS is an ocean-floor installation for production of offshore oil and natural gas reserves in water depths which eventually could reach 5,000 feet or more, explains Dr. George Lack, manager of the Offshore Systems Division at Exxon Production Research Company, an affiliate of Exxon Corporation in charge of technology development. The SPS features a cluster of wells drilled through a structure called the seafloor template that lies on the ocean floor. That structure contains piping which combines the oil and gas from each well and channels it through flowlines to either a so-called production riser or a pipeline to shore.

the part of the system which brings the oil to a vessel on the ocean's surface where it can be processed and stored. Then, it can be moved to market via a shuttle tanker. Oil can be produced, using either a production riser or a pipeline to shore; gas would most likely be produced through a pipeline.

The production riser can be functions are controlled used for oil production and is remotely from the surface.

Regionals next stop for swimmers

Pampa High coach Jackie Stephens expects her swimmers to hold their own in the upcoming Region 1 meet, especially after the Harvesters plunge through two solid weeks of practice.

Pampa's boys' and girls' teams placed second and third respectively in the District 3-5A meet Tuesday in Amarillo. The top three finishers in each event qualified for the regionals Feb. 26 in Lubbock.

"Some of our kids have not tapered yet," Stephens said. "They didn't do as well as they could have in the district meet. They should do well in the regionals after a good taper."

Stephens said all the Pampa qualifiers are looking forward to the Region 1 meet.

"We're hoping to end the year in a big way," she pointed out.

Personally, Stephens feels the regional's most interesting race will take place in the girls' 200 intermediate between Pampa's Cindy Raymond, Tascosa's Lisa Martinez and Amarillo High's Martha Gerken.

"It will be quite a race for the top two places," Stephens added. "These girls are just pretty well-matched."

Shockers fall

The Pampa Shockers lost to Amarillo High JV, 68-43, Tuesday night in a junior varsity game in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Phillip Jeffrey led Pampa with 10 points.

Rick Peters drilled in 24 points for the winners.

Lisa Raymond

Martinez won the 200 intermediate Tuesday, breaking Gerken's district record set last year. Gerken and Raymond placed second and third respectively.

Cindy will also compete in the 100 breaststroke, which she won at district.

"I also have high hopes for Lisa Raymond," Stephens added. "I look for her to get to state in the 500 freestyle."

Lisa took second in the 500 intermediate and third in the 100 fly at district.

Both the Raymond sisters qualified for the regionals a year ago. Cindy won the 100 breaststroke and took third in the 100 freestyle in district while Lisa was second in the 200 intermediate and third in the 100 fly.

Richard Steger, who placed second in the 100 backstroke and third in the 200 freestyle, will make a strong run for a ribbon, according to Stephens.

Pampa cyclists compete in races

Barry Coffee was the big winner in the Antelope Creek Motocross Race last weekend in Fritch.

The Pampa youngster took first overall in the 60 cc class after winning both motos.

James Skinner finished second overall in both motos of the 80 cc class.

Junior Coffee took third overall after placing third in both motos during the 80 cc junior class.

Doug Youree placed second and third to finish third overall in the 125 cc class.

Gary Griggs was third and fourth for third overall in the 250 cc class.

Pampa cyclists continued to take high honors during the second round of GNC qualifying at La Luz, New Mexico.

Doug Youree claimed first in overall in the 100 cc class after winning both motos.

Jerry Skinner won first overall in the 125 cc class after first and second in his motos.

In the 80 cc junior class, Jimmy Hannon of Lefors placed second overall after second and third place finishes.

Marvin Skinner Jr. failed to finish after developing mechanical problems in the 125 cc novice class.

Next weekend the third round of GNC qualifying will be held at Clovis, New Mexico.

Pampa girls close season tonight

Pampa's Lady Harvesters finish the season against Amarillo High there at 7:45 p.m. tonight.

An AHS win tonight would give the Sandie gals their third straight district title.

AHS is 19-6 and Pampa is 3-20. AHS is 2-0 in the second-half of league play while Pampa is 3-0.

The Harvesters take a break from district action Friday night with a non-loop game with Dumas. Gametime is 7:30 p.m. in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Tascosa's boys will go after the first-half title tomorrow night when they meet Caprock. The Rebels are 3-0 in the first half of league play, and can clinch at least a playoff berth with a win over the Longhorns.

A Caprock victory, however, would leave Pampa and Tascosa tied for the first-half title.

McDougall may sign with Tulsa

Pampa receiver Steve McDougall is expected to sign a national football letter of intent Feb. 18 with Tulsa University, according to an Amarillo television station.

McDougall, a 160-pound senior, led the district in receptions three years in a row and was a first-team, all-district pick the past two years.

This past season, McDougall was named return specialist of the year among district players.

Virginia wins squeaker over N.C. State

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus...and according to North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano, he could easily pass for Charles Watkins, an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball official.

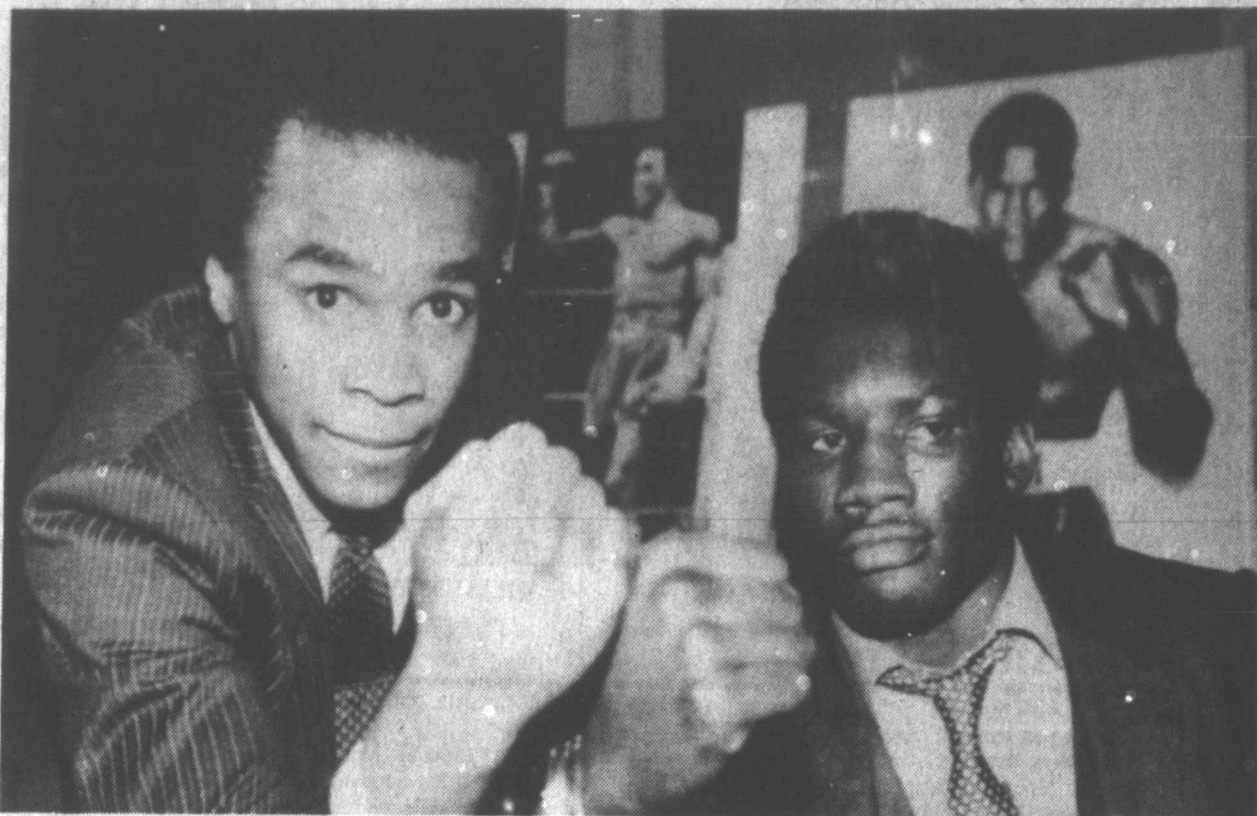

What got Valvano all steamed up was a crucial call by Watkins with 2:14 to play Wednesday night that helped the top-ranked, unbeaten Virginia Cavaliers take the lead and go on to defeat N.C. State 51-46 on the losers' court.

With the Wolfpack clinging to a 42-41 lead, Virginia's Jeff Jones tied up State's Dereck Whittenburg in the backcourt. Valvano screamed for a foul but Watkins called a jump ball.

Virginia won the tap and Lee Raker's layup put the Cavaliers on top to stay. Jeff Lamp's driving layup gave them some breathing room as they extended the nation's longest winning streak to 26 games, 21 this season.

"You can't tell me that was a jump ball," Valvano snorted. "It looked to me like they were trying to foul. We were up and time was running down. Was it a questionable call? You tell me."

"We could have had a three-point lead, but we turned up with a jump ball. It happened right in front of me. I can't imagine that not being a foul. I don't mind losing a game if the opposition makes a super play, a steal or a tough shot. You can live with that. But a couple of unbelievable calls turned the game around."

was not announced. Leonard regained his title last November from Roberto Duran. Kalule, a Ugandan who now lives in Copenhagen, will be making his fifth defense of the title.

Virginia Coach Terry Holland almost agreed with Valvano's assessment of the game-turning call.

"We told our kids to just go after the basketball and if we got a foul, fine," he said. "We were going to have to foul eventually, anyway."

In another key ACC contest just down the road in Chapel Hill, seventh-ranked Wake Forest swamped No. 10 North Carolina 84-68. Three other members of The Associated Press Top Twenty, all from the Southeastern Conference, were in action and all were winners — fourth-ranked Louisiana State trimmed Alabama 70-57, No. 9 Tennessee edged Florida 53-52 and No. 11 Kentucky downed Mississippi 62-55.

Virginia wrapped up its victory over N.C. State when Raker hit two free throws with 13 seconds left and 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, who led the Cavaliers with 17 points, made two more with one second remaining. Virginia committed 16 turnovers but the Wolfpack sealed its own fate by shooting only 39 percent.

"Talented players determine the outcome of a game," Valvano raved. "That's what college basketball is all about. I've been nice all year, but this is too much. I really don't know what to say. If you lose and criticize the officiating, it's sour grapes. But you can't tell me that was a jump ball. I'd like the commissioner to take a look."

Mike Helms scored 20 points, one of five Wake Forest players in double figures as the Deacons handed North Carolina a second straight home-court loss for the first time since 1973. Wake Forest raced to an early 20-4 lead and was never seriously threatened.

The lead was 43-22 at halftime and it grew to 62-32 midway through the second half. Besides Helms, Jay Johnstone scored 17 points, Alvis Rodgers and Guy Morgan 13 and Frank Johnson 12 for Wake Forest (19-2). Al Wood led Carolina (18-6) with 20.

"I can't remember us being dominated like that, especially here," said Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "We're embarrassed as a team."

Meanwhile, freshman Leonard Mitchell scored 14 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead LSU (22-1) over Alabama, while Ethan Martin sparked a second-half breakaway for the Tigers' 21st consecutive triumph. It was a 26-25 game when Martin sparked a 17-4 spurt early in the second half with two baskets, two steals and several assists.

"I looked like the team that got us where we are today," said Coach Dale Brown. "The defense was really brilliant."

Tennessee, however, needed Michael Brooks' jump shot from the top of the key with 29 seconds left to turn back Florida. The Vols (17-4) erased a three-point deficit in the final two minutes and Brooks scored four of his eight points in the final 60 seconds. Dale Ellis led the Vols with 16 points.

Sam Bowie was the only Kentucky player in double figures but the 7-1 center scored 13 of his 25 points in a four-minute span midway through the second that helped the Wildcats (17-4) break open a tight game and defeat Ole Miss.

Walsh suffered rare chromosome defect, medical report claims

CLEVELAND (AP) — The husband of late Olympic gold medal winner Stella Walsh says his wife's name has been slandered through media reports about her gender since her death last December.

A coroner's report released Wednesday said Walsh, an Olympic champion in 1932, had one set of male chromosomes and an incomplete second set of chromosomes. An autopsy report released in January said she had non-functioning male sex organs.

In the two-page summary of chromosome tests conducted after the autopsy, Coroner Samuel Gerber wrote, "The majority of her cells examined had a normal X and Y chromosome and a minority of her cells contained a single X chromosome and no Y chromosome."

The normal human embryo has either entirely XY (male) chromosomes or entirely XX (female) chromosomes, he said.

Walsh, 69, a Polish-born American who collected more than 5,000 ribbons and medals in a lustrous track career, was killed in what police say was an apparent robbery attempt Dec. 4.

"I don't see what Cleveland is doing and what sadistic satisfaction the city is getting out of all this," said Harry Olson, the widower of Walsh, in a telephone interview from his Northridge, Calif., home.

Walsh was married to Olson in 1956 but lived with him for only a few months. She considered herself single and her autopsy reported her as divorced.

Olson, a factory worker in Northridge, said he is disgusted with the publicity about her sex confusion. "Where does the city government get the right to persecute someone. It appears Nazi Germany is here in the U.S. and alive and well in Cleveland. If Cleveland weren't so bankrupt, I'd sue the city for slander."

Walsh suffered a rare chromosome defect called mosaicism, Gerber said.

"Individuals with this form of sex chromosome mixture may present a variety of physical forms ranging from almost normal males to individuals that would be indistinguishable from females with Turner Syndrome," Gerber said in the report.

Turner Syndrome is a variation of chromosomes that affects a fetus and causes it to develop sexual abnormalities that are visible at birth, he said.

If Walsh's condition were noticed in a developing fetus today, corrective surgery could be performed after birth to allow the child to be raised as a male or a female, Gerber said.

"In 1910, doctors probably would examine the baby and depending upon which sexual organs were more dominant, they would advise the parents to raise the child accordingly," said Dr. Angus Muir, director of the Case Western Reserve University genetics center.

"Back then, nothing was done to these people unless they were grossly abnormal, in the sense that they would not have been able to go to the bathroom. If there was a major abnormality in the sex organs, something surgically probably would have been attempted," Muir said.

Often, the sexual differences do not develop until the youth reaches puberty. If the XY sex chromosomes dominate, as in Walsh's case, secondary sexual characteristics, such as a beard and body hair, may develop even though the child was raised as a female, Muir said.

But functional and psychological characteristics must be taken into account, he said.

In the concluding sentence of his report, Gerber said, "Socially, culturally and legally Stella Walsh was accepted as a female for 69 years. She lived and died a female."

When the first challenges to her sexual identity arose the night before her funeral, Cleveland's Polish community became outraged and threatened suit against WKYC-TV, the NBC affiliate in Cleveland.

WKYC-TV eventually won the right in the 8th District Ohio Court of Appeals to get the coroner's autopsy report and copies of any further tests conducted on Walsh. The television station contended that coroner's records are public information.

SMU's Potts to resign AD post

DALLAS (AP) — The father of "Mustang Man" will leave his athletic directorship at Southern Methodist University before the end of the month to become vice president for marketing with the American League's Chicago White Sox, the baseball team announced. No SMU athletic officials, including Potts, were available for comment early Thursday.

Potts, 41, became the SMU athletic boss in May 1978 and immediately hired a new promotions director, Brad Thomas, who deluged the Dallas-Fort Worth area with bumper stickers and signs reading "Mustang Man," theme of the Potts-inspired athletic promotion.

That promotion helped bring about an NCAA-record attendance increase for SMU football from an average crowd of 26,635 in 1977 to 51,960 in 1978, athletic department publications said.

In other sports, Potts hired former Davis Cup star Dennis Ralston to coach the SMU tennis team and wooed Dave Bliss away from Oklahoma to coach the Mustang basketball squad.

White Sox public relations director Chuck Shriver said Wednesday that Potts would be filling a new post with the baseball team.

Rockets trounce Spurs

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston coach Del Harris has been delivering his sermon on defense since he was an assistant coach with the Rockets. Wednesday night he got some converts.

Trailing 56-53 at halftime, the Rockets swarmed over the startled San Antonio Spurs in the third quarter, holding them to 13 points and roaring to a 108-89 victory, the sixth time in eight games Houston's opponents have scored less than 100 points.

"I think it's a part of us now to play great defense," Harris said. "At halftime we realized they were shooting 60 percent and we felt with an extra step and a little extra pain we could slow that down."

The Spurs shot only 33 percent in the second half and not even the high-scoring George Gervin could dent the Rockets' armor. Gervin hit 19 points, well below his 27-point average.

The Rockets, still in second place in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division to San Antonio, outscored the Spurs 20-4 to start the third quarter and Bill Willoughby led the way, scoring nine of his 15 points in the period.

"Anybody can score but that doesn't do any good unless you are playing defense and we did tonight," Willoughby said.

Harris also has the Rockets playing the 24-second clock, working for the latest possible shot. And the strategy was not lost on San Antonio coach Stan Albeck.

"There's no question their defense is much better but their utilization of the clock is helping them too," he said.

Names in the news

HAMILTON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Former baseball great Willie Mays received mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and heart massage from school officials after he collapsed during a speech to students here.

But just a few hours later, the 49-year-old Mays was released from a hospital, and officials said he apparently had collapsed because of fatigue.

Mays, who does public relations work for Bally's Park Place casino hotel in nearby Atlantic City, collapsed five minutes into a talk before 425 sixth- through eighth-graders at the J. Harold Duberson School on Wednesday, school officials said.

He was taken to the Atlantic City Medical Center unit in Pomona, where he was diagnosed as suffering from fatigue, said Park Place spokeswoman Rita Shade. He was released two hours later.

"The doctor said that when he was getting dressed, Willie even wanted to know if there was a pediatric unit there. He wanted to go up to see the kids," Ms. Shade said.

Principal John Buysarski said it appeared Mays was not breathing after he collapsed. Buysarski said he administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation while another teacher performed heart massage. Mays was given oxygen and walked to an ambulance, Buysarski said.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Offers to help Francis Ford Coppola's finagled Zoetrope Studios have come from all over the world, but the biggest boost is Paramount Pictures' $1 million aid package.

Paramount Chairman Barry Diller and President Michael Eisner purchased a $500,000 interest in an upcoming Zoetrope film, "Interface," and extended a $500,000 personal loan to Coppola, officials said Tuesday.

Zoetrope's money problems had forced the company to delay paying staff and union workers on its $23-million film "One From the Heart."

"The money lets us shoot a couple more weeks. It relieves us of the heavy burden of the payroll for a couple weeks," said Ann Schwebel, a Zoetrope spokeswoman.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — General of the Army Omar Bradley, still on active duty as the nation's highest ranking military officer, celebrates his 88th birthday today at his home at Fort Bliss.

A spokesman at the army base where Bradley lives with his wife Kitty, 58, said the general planned to report to his office for a day of work as usual Thursday, but a private birthday celebration was planned for Saturday night.

Aides to Bradley said the general is in good health despite a minor illness that forced him to spend two days in a hospital last week, aides said.

Bradley remains on active duty because of an act of Congress that exempts five-star officers from retirement. Counting his days at West Point, he has more than 69 years of active duty service, the longest of any serviceman in U.S. history.

Although arthritis in his legs confines him to a wheelchair most of the time, Bradley frequently travels, and attended President Reagan's inauguration last month.

MELISSA, Texas (AP) — In a voter turnout believed to be the heaviest in the history of this Northeast Texas community, "dry" forces won by eight votes their battle to keep liquor out of town.

The proposition to allow the sale of beer, wine and liquor for off-premises consumption failed by a vote of 133-125 Tuesday.

Melissa City Council member Bob Harlow, however, says he plans to check the list of voters to find out if everyone who voted lives in the city limits.

Daniel file in court custody

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — A sealed accordion file containing correspondence of the late Price Daniel Jr. is in the custody of a criminal district court.

A packet of letters, cards and other written material was submitted Wednesday by the attorney for Vickie Daniel, who is charged with murder in the Jan. 19 shooting of her husband, a former speaker of the Texas House of Representatives.

Attorney Andrew J. Lannie of Baytown filed a motion for a protective order asking that the 253rd Criminal District Court preserve the correspondence as an exhibit for the defense.

He asked that the packet remain sealed and not be opened, read, copied or photographed for any reason without reasonable notice to the defense.

Bicycling police surprize burglars

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — The newest police patrols cruising this town of 12,000 have no sirens or flashing lights. But they do have something that can surprise even the coolest of criminals — two wheels.

When Police Chief Tony Stout was told to trim his budget, he figured he could save on squad-car costs by mounting his police on bicycles.

And although Stout had to lay off two Kelso patrolmen, he was able to pocket a third pink slip by starting the bicycle corps. Officers helped him save even more by using their own bikes.

In some ways, a cop on a bicycle is more effective than one in a squad car, officials say.

"Bikes really throw burglars," said Lt. Dan Price, who organized the patrols.

"They can see a police car a block away by its silhouette. But even if they have stereos under their arms, the sight of a person on a bicycle doesn't intimidate them."

"You see things on a bike you can't from a car," said another two-wheeled officer, Chuck Dunnivant. "When you're driving, you have to pay more attention to the road."

Surprise, approval, and a few catcalls were common responses to the bikes by local citizens. Stout said in an interview Tuesday. The bikes have been in use about two months on the force, which has 16 full-time officers and 13 reservists.

"Cycling cops may be new here, but it's really a throwback to the tradition of walking the beat," said Price. "It brings back what police departments had a long time ago with meeting people."

Generally, two officers are on bicycles each shift, riding for three or four hours in the evening — or long enough to numb the toes when temperatures drop into the 30s. One officer wears long underwear for his stint.

Cyclists say they have the advantage of being able to go where cars can't — like a cluster of retirement apartments or a frequently vandalized elementary school.

Stout said he expected to save $5,000 to $7,000 this year by using bicycles during the afternoon and evening hours.

However, a police car is also on patrol while bicycling officers are on duty.

Officers have made no major arrests while astride bikes, he said, but they have crept up on some people who didn't expect an officer to be there.

"We don't have what you'd call major crime here," he said. "We have your occasional murder, but it's not your L.A. (Los Angeles). I would be hesitant to put anybody out in anything less than a tank down there."

Energy in focus

By L. Frank Pitts

The new organization of the Senate and some critical changes in the House of Representatives offer further encouragement that what has been needed may now be forthcoming; an energy program which takes into account the possibility of increasing American oil and natural gas production and goes all out to see it happen. For too long federal policy has apparently been aimed at conservation and slow strangulation of the oil and natural gas industry.

Such a policy change will not de-emphasize conservation. Conservation of all the nation's natural resources is a stern necessity. This is especially true for oil and natural gas. However, conservation alone will only intensify the nation's problem. Conservation without increased domestic production of oil and natural gas will continue to play right into the hands of OPEC.

During 1980 oil imports decreased from over eight million barrels per day to less than seven million barrels per day.

The OPEC response has been to up their prices. This will continue. It is to their advantage to decrease production and to compensate for it by raising their price demands.

Oil imports are costing the United States approximately $10 million per hour. What this means in terms of trade imbalance, jobs for the unemployed, inflation, and the national defense is painfully obvious.

Unrealistic pricing of American production of oil and natural gas, controls and hamstringing regulations by bungling bureaucrats, environmentalism gone amok and tax disincentives have been inconsistent with the federal government's stated intentions to decrease imports.

The United States has tremendous undrilled potential oil and natural gas areas which could greatly increase American production and reduce oil imports. Only the Federal government stands in the way of doing this.

For the past twenty years the United States has experienced a growing energy problem. Our problem can be clearly seen in three parts as follows: One, a soaring increase in consumption of oil and natural gas. For example, in 1956 when we were producing in this country, 7,150,000 barrels of oil per day were imported only 1,436,000 barrels per day. In 1979, despite the aftermath of the oil embargo of 1973 and all the jawboning about conservation, and before gasoline prices went beyond a dollar ($1.00) per gallon, and the recession set in, we were importing over eight million barrels of oil per day, much of it from Saudi Arabia, 11,000 miles away.

Meanwhile, American producers were delivering about one million barrels per day above the 1956 level. However, consumption had increased to 17 million barrels per day, more than twice what it was in 1956. Two, there was a disastrous decline in American drilling and a consequent steady decrease in American proven reserves of oil and natural gas.

For example, in 1956 our industry drilled some 58,000 wells, the highest number in history. By 1971 drilling had decreased to only 27,000 wells. Of course, once an accumulation of oil has been found and begins to be produced, the amount of oil which can be extracted, the recoverable reserve, can only decrease. Reserves can only be replaced by more and more successful drilling.

Little woman has big spirit

FAIRHOPE, Ala. (AP) — The way you describe Verda Horne is tiny. Barely 60 inches separate the top of her gray head and the soles of her small feet. She also is elderly, in her 70s.

But anyone who would call her, patronizingly, a little old lady has encountered neither her energy nor her wit.

Some who follow Verda Horne on her field trips say it is as much a challenge to absorb all the wonders she has to show them as it is simply to keep up.

Her step, like her mind, is quick, agile. Verda Horne was not put on this earth to lollygag.

"There is so much to see, so much to learn," she was saying during a mini-field trip in her back yard. "That's a magnolia. Does it look like a magnolia? Of course it doesn't, but it is. It is a species found only around here."

No greenhouse imports decorate the Horne back yard, only trees and shrubs and flowers native to this area, and they are lovely.

"I guess my goal in life is for everyone on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay to know this environment. To know it is to love it. That's true of any environment, especially your own. When you see a plant, wouldn't you rather know what it is than not know?"

"If everyone knew his own environment, was aware of what is special about it, we would be less inclined to watch it be destroyed."

To that end, Verda Horne teaches a once-a-week class in ecology for the Institute for Lifelong Learning, a local enterprise organized by retired professionals who, like Verda Horne, figure they still have quite a few productive miles left on their aging chassis.

She also is working with a group that aims to establish America's third National Scenic Trail, which she believes is as deserving of preservation as the other two, the Appalachian Trail and the Pacific Coast Trail.

It is the trail of William Bartram, the naturalist who roamed the Deep South 200 years ago, studying, painting, recording.

She roamed the deserts and mountains of the West as an undergraduate biologist at Utah State University, then, as a graduate student, wandered the wilds near the University of Minnesota.

Then she wandered to Alabama.

"I wanted to see where my grandfather was born, before he moved west, and I was able to get a grant to study crabs on the Gulf Coast. I met my husband, who was doing a survey for the National Park Service. With his help, I learned an entirely new ecology, and loved it."

"We lived in a cabin and were the only ones around for miles. We watched sea turtles swim ashore and lay eggs. Now," she said, icily, "it's all neon. Dune buggies run over the nests."
