ROWS AND ROWS of packed up suitcases, piccolos, and all other Pampa High School band instruments, band members, sponsors and friends were boarded on ten Continental Trailway busses

Tuesday at 8 p.m. as the first leg of their journey to sunny Hawaii began. This line of luggage was only a part of the baggage accompanying the group.

'Pride' winging its way to Hawaii

After nine hours on the bus, the Denver Airport was a wonderful sight. The ten Continental Trailway busses carrying the Pampa High School Band members and friends filed triumphantly into the airport at 5 a.m. today - then it happened.

One of the large busses ran out of gas on the airport ramp one mile from the terminal, according to information received from Pampa News representative on the Hawaiian trip, managing editor Lynn Hunter.

Actually the slant of the ramp kept the gasoline from reaching the fuel pump - in other words the bus ran out of available gas.

Nine busses continued into the airport, passing the stalled vehicle, causing some concern among the stopped passengers - would they ever get to Hawaii where these sort of things don't happen.

The moving busses unloaded people and equipment and one bus was sent back for the stalled vehicle - passengers were finally carried to the terminal at 5:30 a.m.

Jim Duggan relayed information to Pampa that all band members were O.K. The sponsors said the kids were a little tired and a little irritable.

At 8:30 a.m. today band members boarded the first United American flight and headed west to the King Kamehaha Parade and sunny beaches.

Pampans waiting for the next flight could be seen sleeping on the carpeted lounge areas in the Denver Airport and resting their feet on luggage marked See Hawaii.

Polish leader promises reins on reformation

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Responding to new threats of Soviet intervention, Polish Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania promised to rein in the independent labor movement and reformers within his party.

Kania told a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee that Poland's socialist allies were "indignant at the filthy wave of anti-Sovietism and anti-communism in Poland."

Kania said the Soviets' concern was "fully justified."

"There cannot be any more tolerance for activities directed against socialism, against our alliances, against the friendly relations with the Soviet Union," he declared. "About such a practice one must give evidence starting tomorrow."

Kania's speech was his toughest since taking office after the nationwide strike wave last summer that resulted in "legalization of the Soviet Bloc's first independent strike movement and a growing grass-roots reform movement in the Polish Communist Party."

The party chief was responding to a letter from the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee accusing the leaders of the Polish party of succumbing to "counter-revolutionary activities" spearheaded by the "extremist wing" of the independent Solidarity labor federation.

A copy of the letter published by the Paris newspaper Le Monde cited Kania and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski by name, indicating the Soviets might be trying to get them replaced.

The Soviet party warned that "the serious danger, hovering over socialism constitutes a danger for the very existence of an independent Polish state." It said "the offensive by the anti-socialist forces in Poland threatens the interests of all our community, its cohesion, its integrity and the security of its borders. Yes, our common security."

The Kremlin sent a similar message to party leaders in Czechoslovakia shortly before the Soviet invasion in August 1968 to put down a reform movement in the Czechoslovak party.

The letter to the Polish party called on it to "mobilize all the right-thinking forces of society to meet the adversary and to fight the counter-revolution. The party can and must find in itself the strength to reverse the course of events."

After Kania's speech, several headline committee members took the floor to call for changes in the ruling Politburo before the party congress July 14-18.

The Soviet letter protested that too many "devoted comrades" were being dropped in the preparations for the congress, which will accept or reject proposals for economic and political reforms.

Solidarity leaders suspended the strike call after union-government talks Monday night. The Soviet labor newspaper Trud said the strike threat was like "aiming a pistol" at the vital interests of the workers. It accused the union of trying to "dismantle the socialist system in Poland."

Czechoslovakia's official media, which has been among the harshest critics of Poland in the past 10 months, said political opposition in Poland was "identical" to the events that led to Soviet intervention there in 1968.

Senate Judiciary Committee wants death penalty restored

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Judiciary Committee is recommending restoration of the federal death penalty amid charges that the legislation is unconstitutional.

The committee voted 13-5 on Tuesday to re-establish the death penalty for a number of federal crimes, including aircraft hijacking, the attempted or actual assassination of a president, kidnapping, treason and espionage.

The vote makes it almost certain that capital punishment will be the first major social issue the Republican-controlled Senate will consider this year.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the committee chairman, has made the death penalty a major priority. After President Reagan was shot in an assassination attempt March 30, he pushed for an amendment to make an attempt on a president's life a capital offense.

The death penalty was approved by the judiciary panel last year but did not reach the full Senate. With a new conservative, Republican majority, however, passage seems likely in 1981.

Groups such as the American Civil Liberties Union say the proposal approved Tuesday is unconstitutional and will face court challenges if it becomes law.

Four Democrats, Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Joseph Biden of Delaware, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and Patrick Leahy of Vermont, were joined by Republican Charles McC Mathias of Maryland in voting against the bill, which was approved after only perfunctory debate.

On the Senate floor, Leahy is expected to urge that the crimes specified in the bill be made punishable by a mandatory life sentence.

Thurmond's amendment to include attempted assassination of the president says such an attack could bring the death penalty if it results in bodily injury to the president or otherwise comes dangerously close to causing the death of the president. In recent rulings, the Supreme Court has excluded rape and other crimes from death sentences, and many scholars believe that only if a crime results in death should it be punishable by execution.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., like Thurmond a former judge, voted against Thurmond's amendment, saying he believed it contradicted existing Supreme Court rulings.

Capital punishment critics, pointing to the high proportion of black criminals executed over the years, cite the death penalty as an example of racial prejudice in law enforcement.

Begin says Israel will attack if threatened

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Prime Minister Menachem Begin warned that the Israeli attack on Iraq's nuclear reactor will be repeated if the Jewish nation is threatened again by an enemy Arab nation's plans to develop nuclear weapons.

"Israel will not tolerate any enemy to develop weapons of mass destruction against the people of Israel," the 67-year-old prime minister told a questioner at a news conference Tuesday.

He added this was not a new policy. Israeli experts said the destruction of the French-built reactor outside Baghdad Sunday did not put an end to the Arab nuclear potential.

"This is a blow to Iraq but not the end of the plan to build an Arab nuclear bomb," wrote the military commentator of the newspaper Haaretz. Ze'ev Schiff "Israel cannot prevent this development by military means. It can only delay it by various methods."

Yehoshafat Harkavi, a former military intelligence chief, said the Arabs were not likely to accept Israeli "veto rights over Arab nuclear development."

An Iraqi government official was quoted today as saying Iraq is determined "to buy new and better nuclear reactors."

Foreign Minister Latif Nassim Jassem said in an interview with Al Thawra, the official newspaper of Iraq's ruling Baath Party, that the Israeli raid "will not prevent Iraq from continuing with its nuclear program and development plans," the Gulf News Agency reported.

In an attempt to answer criticism of the raid in the United States and prevent suspension of American arms sales to Israel, Begin said the American planes used in the 600-mile strike "were given to us for purposes of self-defense," and the destruction of the reactor "was an act of supreme legitimate self-defense."

He charged that the Iraqis were planning to develop three to five Hiroshima-type, 20-kiloton bombs. Three such bombs, he said, "could have destroyed completely, utterly, the Dan district, the basis of our industrial, commercial, agricultural and cultural life."

Begin said such an attack would cause 600,000 casualties, the equivalent of 44 million in the United States or more than 8 million in Egypt.

"Where is the country that would tolerate such a danger knocking at its door?" he asked.

Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, the Israeli chief of staff, said Israel was on guard against Iraqi retaliation. He said Iraq "theoretically" has the capacity to strike back, "and Israel will consider how to prepare itself when we learn what option they might choose."

In Washington, the Reagan administration said it was still investigating to determine whether Israel had violated the conditions under which it obtained the planes used in the raid.

But a State Department spokesman said the "longstanding moral, political and military ties" between Israel and the United States are not threatened.

Amid demands from some Arabs for an oil embargo or other sanctions to force the United States to rein in Israel, the Arab League scheduled a foreign ministers' meeting in Baghdad Thursday to try to agree on a united response to the Israeli attack.

Officials only ones talking about proposed Perryton Parkway improvements at hearing

By DEBORAH BRIDGES Staff Writer

City and highway officials were practically the only ones expressing their opinions in a public hearing Tuesday on a $3.5 million proposal for improvement of the stretch of Texas 70 just north of the Hobart - 21st intersection.

If passed, the project will increase Pampans' taxes about 8 percent, city officials say.

During the public hearing, only three private citizens commented on the proposal, although about half of the 30 persons attending the city commission meeting in city hall Tuesday morning left the meeting at the conclusion of the hearing.

A. L. McKee, district engineer for the state department of highways, explained in the hearing that state funding will not be available indefinitely.

"There is an urgency to this project," he said. "As I mentioned, there's a possibility of losing state funds."

McKee said the state's portion of the improvement will be about $1.8 million of the total, to be funded out of the state "urban systems" highway fund. He said about 70 to 80 percent of this fund comes from federal money.

"There are indications from Washington that the funds will not be continued with the passage of the federal highway bill," he said. All federal money will go to interstate primary funds, he added.

McKee concluded, "We had recognized the needs in this area, but wanted the citizens to approach us on it. I think it is one of the most needed projects of its kind in the district," he said.

Floyd Watson, a member of the project's steering committee, said the project was the "number one priority" in the defeated 1980 bond election.

"With the businesses being placed in the north part of town - the new hospital - and the increased traffic flow, it's vital. The improvement is needed," Watson said.

Fred Nesledge, speaking for Father Francis Hynes of St. Paul's Catholic Church, said the drainage at the proposed intersection is "a serious situation." He said the improvements are "imperative."

Harry West of Pampa asked what the time period would be before the state funds are lost.

McKee answered about a year was left in the two-year program.

West said, "It's obvious then that the priority isn't time. The question is how it will be financed on the city's part."

McKee explained that about six to nine months would be needed to prepare the plans and specifications for the project, and to write an environmental impact statement before the project would be ready to submit to the federal government for approval.

West pointed out that the project was voted down in the April 1980 bond election. "The citizens made it clear then that they didn't want it."

"In my opinion you should ask them again," he said.

Watson said the steering committee "dealt with this (another bond election). The committee felt the best procedure would be to do it by bond election."

Mayor Ray Thompson added, "If most of the people feel that way, then we'll take the risk of losing the state money."

E. C. Sidwell commented, "I recognize the drainage problem in that area. But I'm not so sure that project should have priority over other projects in the city."

Sidwell mentioned the bumps and "falling trees on Somerville and the poor drainage in the area of the Post Office as examples."

"You're 20 years behind times this drainage out there. We voted it down 20 years ago," he added.

Quentin Nolte commented, "I'm usually against anything that will increase taxes, but this is something that is worthwhile."

The proposed construction will include the new curb and gutter from 21st Avenue to the Loop, a four lane highway, and a redesigning of the intersection of 21st with Hobart and Perryton Parkway and the Duncan Street entry to Texas 70.

A new traffic signal will be installed at the 23rd Street and Perryton Parkway intersection, and a part of 23rd will be rebuilt.

Officials say owners of property adjoining the project within the city limits will be responsible for about $36,000 of the total cost.

Gray County will pay about $498,000 and an estimated $1.3 million will come from the city's coffers through the taxpayers' pocketbooks.

The city intends to fund its portion of the project through certificates of obligation. By state law, these certificates can be issued by the authority of the City Commission and do not require voter approval.

Annually, the city will pay about $150,000 per year, city officials say. To have the money to do this, city officials propose to raise city property taxes about eight percent.

Development part of new cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States and Mexico, despite deep differences over the turmoil in Central America, are taking tentative steps toward cooperating in a multilateral development program for that region.

Mexican Secretary of Foreign Relations Jorge Castaneda said Tuesday that the proposal was suggested by President Reagan during his meetings with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo and that the Mexican leader gave his conditional acceptance.

Lopez Portillo insisted that the plan not have a military aid component, that it not be used as an instrument to "fight the Soviet Union or communism in the region" and that no country be automatically excluded from it, Castaneda said.

Without these conditions, "the plan might do more harm than good," he said, adding that the American side accepted the conditions.

The Reagan administration has been developing a plan for the entire Caribbean-Central American area, but Castaneda said the proposals discussed related only to Central America. He said Venezuela and Canada also may cooperate in the program.

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan Wednesday in Beirut. Habib arrived in Beirut Tuesday for a new round of talks with Lebanese leaders in a new continuing attempt to defuse the Syrian - Israeli missile crisis.

Clements unhappy with question

WASHINGTON (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements glared at a reporter who asked him outside the White House Tuesday about the Texas Legislature.
 "I thought we were here to talk about the visit here by Mexican President Lopez Portillo. I don't think that has anything to do with him, and I don't believe I'll have any comment on it," Clements said.
 But he spoke optimistically about talks between President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo about the illegal alien problem in Texas and other border states.
 "I don't think there's any question but that some progress has been made in this regard," Clements said Tuesday afternoon as he was leaving a luncheon held at the White House in Lopez Portillo's honor.

"You can never solve a problem unless you discuss it, and the two presidents have met and have put it on the table for discussion. It's never happened before, so that alone is progress and a great step forward, in my opinion," the Texas Republican said.
 "But you must recognize that this is only a beginning, and that they are talking at this point only in concepts. But it's a great beginning, and I would anticipate further progress will evolve," said Clements.
 Clements and Texas Secretary of State George Strake and their wives were among about 100 guests at the luncheon.
 "The guest worker program was certainly discussed. It was not a new issue. I'll remind you, because it has been discussed for at least a year among governors of the border states."
 Several Hispanic groups had a press conference in Washington earlier Tuesday at which they blasted the idea of a guest worker program, saying it would open the door to more illegal aliens than ever before and create massive problems.
 "That's nonsense," Clements said.
 "That one word describes my feeling about that. Absolutely nonsense. Anyone who thinks we are going to allow unfettered, undisciplined immigration into the United States with no system behind it, is mistaken," he added.
 "Those who make the loudest noise about it are just seeking publicity," he said.

Bell wins appeal in home information fight

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The Public Utility Commission had no right to temporarily prohibit Southwestern Bell from testing a home information system, a state appeals court ruled today.
 The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals, ruling in the battle between the phone company and Texas newspaper publishers, voided PUC's February order against the Bell test of its electronic information system.
 Commissioners decided Bell should not begin the test, scheduled for June, until a July public hearing could be held to hear complaints about the test.
 Bell wants to test the computer-based information system in Austin. Television-like screens would be placed, at no charge, in homes and businesses. The screens would have been equipped to display telephone listings and advertising.
 PUC initially approved the test, but changed its order after the Texas Daily Newspaper Association complained. Newspapers someday probably will offer their own home information systems.
 The commission told Bell in February to hold off on the test until the July 6 public hearing.

minor accidents

June 9
 4:50 p.m. - A 1966 Ford, driven by Davis Wylie Jackson, 75, of 1221 S. Faulkner, came into collision with a 1977 Ford, driven by Steve E. Smith, 20, of 2721 Navajo. The Wylie vehicle was reportedly leaving a driveway in the 2200 block of Evergreen when it came into collision with the southbound Smith vehicle. No injuries were reported at the scene of the mishap.
 5:30 p.m. - A 1963 Mercury, registered to Terry Garner, 1005 Mary Ellen, came into collision with the corner of the residence at 930 Mary Ellen when the vehicle rolled from where it was parked at 1005 Mary Ellen. The unoccupied vehicle reportedly rolled across the intersection of Mary Ellen and Virginia before it struck the house at 930 Mary Ellen. Garner was cited for failure to secure vehicle.

House sanctions busing curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House, reflecting the new conservative trend in Congress, is sanctioning curbs on court-ordered busing of school children to achieve racial desegregation.
 The sponsor of the measure, Rep. James Collins, R-Texas, predicted Tuesday that the House-backed curbs would pass the Republican-controlled Senate and be signed into law by President Reagan, who already has said he opposes court-ordered busing.
 "This is a different year and we have a different president and we have a different Senate," Collins said.

Last year, a similar effort passed the House and a reluctant Senate only to be vetoed by then-President Carter.
 The busing amendment, attached to a bill authorizing funds for the Justice Department in fiscal 1982, easily passed the House on Tuesday.
 Collins called the passage "the biggest win we ever had" in 12 years of fighting school busing. "It's the real breakthrough," he said.
 Collins noted that the last time the House considered the amendment, the vote was 209-190. This time, the margin was 265-122 - a switch of about 70 votes.

 The bill prohibits the Justice Department from spending any of its money to require any student to be bused to any school other than the one nearest his or her home. It makes exceptions for physically and mentally handicapped students who might need to attend special schools.
 The measure would apply only to future Justice Department actions and would not affect any suits now in progress.

Israeli attack complicates relations

WASHINGTON (AP) - Israel's use of American-supplied warplanes to destroy an Iraqi nuclear reactor is complicating U.S.-Israeli relations, but the "longstanding moral, political and military ties" between the two countries aren't threatened, a State Department spokesman says.
 "I would not want to leave you with the impression that the United States is backing away from its commitment to Israel," spokesman Dean Fischer said Tuesday.

Although the United States has to "deal with the facts that exist," the Israeli raid has not given Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. any reason to abandon his "strategic consensus" that the Soviet Union poses a far greater threat to the stability of the Mideast than does Israel, Fischer added.
 He said U.S. officials are reviewing the arms aid agreement with Israel to determine whether the attack violated a U.S. law prohibiting the use of American-supplied arms for offensive purposes.

 Fischer gave no hint about what action might be taken if it is found that Israel misused the aircraft. "I don't want to prejudice the outcome of a process now beginning," he said.
 Meanwhile, Defense Department spokesman Henry Catto condemned the raid and said that it left in doubt this week's scheduled delivery to Israel of four F-16 fighter planes.

Waterline replacement bids tabled

City commissioners Tuesday decided to table awarding bids on the waterline replacement in Overton Heights addition and for the improvement of Somerville Street west of Sumner until the bids could be reviewed by city engineers.
 Four bids ranging from $51,184 to $44,956 were received by City Secretary Pat Eads on the waterline replacement project. Alternate bids ranged from $28,838 to $26,400.
 Bids for the paving of Somerville, west of Sumner, where two apartment complexes have recently been built ranged from $31,497 to $24,288. Four bids were submitted.
 City officials said these were base bids, not including substitutions or alternates. Officials earlier estimated the cost of the paving project at $34,000.
 The total cost of the paving will be assessed between the city and adjoining landowners. City Manager Mack Wofford said. He said a public hearing on the Somerville project has been scheduled for June 23.

Attorney Joe Harlan of the Gibson, Oschsner and Adkins law firm, was appointed by the city fathers to represent the City of Pampa in the Rachel Bailey vs. Rodney Tucker and the City of Pampa civil rights suit, now pending in U. S. Northern District Court of Amarillo.

Wofford said Tuesday no dates for hearings in the civil rights suit had been set to his knowledge.
 Mrs. Bailey recently filed the suit in Amarillo alleging her civil rights were violated June 7, 1979, when Tucker, a Pampa police officer at that time, arrested her at her home. Mrs. Bailey alleges her finger was broken in the scuffle at the time of the arrest.
 Zoning changes were approved by commissioners on final reading for areas in the Suburbs, Crawford Addition, and Young's Addition to allow mobile homes and for Blocks 1,2,3 and 4 of the Overton Heights Addition No. 8 for single family residences.
 In final action, the city's elected officials approved May salary changes for 10 city employees; and the hiring of seven temporary employees and 10 permanent employees.
 Accounts payable amounting to 125,561.89 were approved for payment by commissioners.

SPS offers stock

Southwestern Public Service Company announced today it is offering 2,919,036 shares of common stock for subscription by stockholders at the subscription price of $10.95 per share, on the basis of one share for each 10 shares held on the record date on June 4, 1981.
 The offering, which will expire at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, June 24, carries the privilege to subscribe, to the extent available for additional shares. One right is being issued with respect to each share of common stock outstanding on the record date, and 10 rights are required to subscribe for one share of additional common stock.
 The offering is being underwritten by a group managed by Dillon, Read and Company, Inc. which will purchase any unsubscribed portion and reoffer those shares to the public.

Telex facility here

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. - Western Union has announced that Pampa is now both a Telex I and Telex II (TWX) exchange city, as formerly was required.
 Western Union's interconnected Telex teletypewriter exchange services provide users with a communications service that combines the speed of immediate delivery with the accuracy and written-record value of a letter. Western Union advertises Telex as the most underpriced message service in the world.
 A Telex subscriber can communicate electronically with any of the 140 thousand Western Union domestic subscribers plus 80 thousand more in North America and another million around the world.
 In addition to direct terminal-to-terminal service, subscribers have access to a variety of other message services including Mailgram, Telegram and Cablegram service, store-and-forward delivery of Telex messages addressed to busy or inoperable stations, multiple-address message service to stored lists of addressees and on-line information services ranging from stock price quotations to reports on ski conditions.

Area cattle rustling trial set at Lipscomb

LIPSCOMB - A Lipscomb County cattle rustling case is up for trial by the Pampa District Attorney's office June 29, District Attorney Harold Comer said today.
 The trial of Miguel James Velasquez, 27, of Booker and Danny Lionel Miera, 31, of Booker, for allegedly rustling cattle on land leased by Lance Bussard of Lipscomb will begin June 29 in the Lipscomb County Court House.
 Comer said the two men were arrested on March 1 after Bussard reported he had driven onto his leased land and saw two Mexican males standing beside a calf lying on the ground kicking.
 Bussard's pickup truck blocked the only exit in the area, Comer said, so the two men jumped into their pickup truck and drove around Bussard's, almost knocking off the truck's open door.
 Bussard discovered the 350-pound calf had been shot twice in the head.
 Two men, matching Bussard's description of the men standing beside his calf, were arrested by Lipscomb County authorities about 15 miles from the scene of the incident.

Area 4-Hers place in state competition

The state 4-H Roundup was held June 2 and 3 at College Station, Texas. It was sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas A & M University System. Contest placings from this area include the following:
 Range Evaluation: Third Place, Hemphill County, district 1. Keith McEntire, Kayla McEntire, Van Morrow, and Bruce Johnson, all of Canadian. Coach: Laramie McEntire.
 Range and Pasture Grass: Second Place, Hemphill County, district 1. Cindy Barnett, Ken Urschell, Guy Morrow, Tony Lloyd, all of Canadian. Coach: Laramie McEntire.

Tax assistance available here

AUSTIN - J. D. Caproni, a representative of Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock, will be in Pampa June 17 to assist area taxpayers and answer tax questions.
 Claudia Stravato, manager of the Comptroller's Amarillo office, said Caproni, enforcement officer, will meet with taxpayers in Gray and Carson Counties at the Gray County Court House here from 2 to 4 p.m.
 Questions about taxes, the filing of tax returns or assistance on return can be answered quickly and efficiently in these face-to-face meetings, Bullock said.
 Taxpayers who are not able to meet with the Comptroller's representative June 17, can get their tax questions answered by calling this toll free number, 1-800-252-5555 from anywhere in Texas.

Former Tennessee governor convicted

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Gov. Ray Blanton, convicted of extortion, conspiracy and mail fraud in a liquor license kickback scheme, faces a sentence of up to 70 years in prison.

Two aides of the soybean farmer, who was booted from office in 1979 in a coup engineered by fellow Democrats, also were convicted Tuesday as the eight-week trial ended after nearly a week of deliberations.

The conviction "should serve as a lesson to anyone in public office who might be tempted to abuse their authority," said Republican state Sen. Victor Ashe of Knoxville, one of Blanton's harshest critics.

Blanton, 51, embraced his teary-eyed wife and widowed mother and left the federal courthouse without comment after a U.S. District Court jury convicted Blanton of extortion conspiracy and nine counts of mail fraud.

The verdict came 4 1/2 hours after jurors convicted Blanton's 1974 campaign manager, James Allen, 52, and his former special assistant, Clyde Edd Hood Jr., 28, of conspiracy and six mail fraud charges. Hood was acquitted of extortion and three mail fraud counts.

Defense lawyers have 30 days to ask for new trials and to have the verdicts set aside.

Blanton, Allen and Hood were convicted of fixing the state Alcoholic Beverage Commission to award 12 suburban Nashville liquor licenses in 1976 to Blanton friends.

Allen received a license, as did the government's chief witness, Jack Ham, who testified he retired $23,000 of a $38,000 bank loan to the governor as a payoff. Blanton acknowledged Ham retired the loan but denied it was a payoff.

In addition to the prison sentence, Blanton faces fines of up to $29,000. Allen and Hood each face up to 35 years in prison and $16,000 in fines.

Judge Bailey Brown dismissed the extortion charge and three mail fraud charges against Allen before the jury began deliberations that lasted a total of 44 hours and 45 minutes.

When foreman H.G. Murrell read the verdicts finding Allen and Hood guilty, he said the jurors could not agree on Blanton's case. Brown urged them to keep trying.

"There's no reason to believe that the case could ever be submitted to jurors more fair, more competent, more impartial or that the case could be presented with better evidence," said Brown.

Bell Telephone to seek another rate hike

DALLAS (AP) — A Southwestern Bell spokesman says inflation and the Public Utilities Commission's refusal to approve past rate increase requests are the reasons the company will ask for another rate hike "in the next several days."

"We need to get our earnings to a level to be able to pay our investors a return on their investment," spokesman Dale Johnson said Tuesday in announcing the rate increase request.

Johnson declined to say how much the company will ask for, but indicated the request will be higher than the 1980 request of $326 million.

"We will file a request for more than we filed for in 1980, and we filed a $326 million request in 1980," said Johnson.

The company will also ask for its rate of return to be increased from 10.82 percent, Johnson said, because Bell's current rate of return to its investors is now "considerably below that figure."

"We will be asking for a return which we feel is needed in this day of high economic volatility," Johnson said.

The PUC rejected a $326 million rate increase request by Bell last summer. It authorized a $114.3 million rate hike and set the current rate of investment return Jan. 28.

After posting a bond, Bell raised its rates in November, then sought a temporary injunction blocking the PUC's January decision.

Bell also claimed it was penalized $38 million illegally under the PUC decision.

The Texas Supreme Court in May refused to grant the injunction and ordered the company to refund $22.5 million collected after Bell instituted the higher rates.

Bell then asked the court to expedite its decision on the $38 million question, but Johnson said the ruling would not reduce the size of the rate request.

Johnson said the refunds would start in late July and would be reflected in August bills.

He cited increased demands, inflation and the PUC's failure to ever grant Bell a full increase as the reasons the company is seeking another rate hike.

Johnson said the "exceptional growth of Texas, especially in the metro areas," has increased demand for service to the level that Bell cannot continue to provide under the present rate structure.

"Inflation keeps eating up most of the gains we have made with our internal controls (on expenses)," said Johnson.

He said the company also has built up a backlog of debts because of insufficient rate increases approved by the PUC in the past.

If the PUC turns down the request or grants only part of it, Johnson said the company ultimately may have to curtail service.

"The lack of those investment dollars in the long run would potentially effect the type of service we could provide," he said.

Federal judge grants award to crippled boy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Judy Scales says her 3-year-old son Charles should never have been born, and a federal judge agrees with her.

U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts Tuesday awarded $625,000 to the retarded boy who was born with multiple birth defects after Air Force doctors failed to advise his mother of the dangers of having a baby after she had contracted German measles during her pregnancy.

Mrs. Scales, a former Air Force recruit, filed a $1.25 million "wrongful life" suit against the government on behalf her son, claiming he was damaged by the measles.

Testimony during the trial, held in April, showed that most of the boy's major organs were damaged at birth and that he has since had open heart surgery and faces more surgery.

A health care expert also testified the boy may be seriously retarded and could need full-time or residential care for the rest of his life.

Briefs at the trial showed only one other "wrongful life" has been filed and was upheld in the California courts.

Attorney Bob Gibbins, representing Mrs. Scales, argued she would have had an abortion if she had known her son would suffer birth defects.

Gibbins argued that doctors at two bases where Mrs. Scales was stationed failed to advise her of birth defects that could result when a woman contracts German measles during pregnancy.

"I'm just tickled to death," Gibbins said after the verdict. "That's one hell of a verdict. It will start a whole new trend in Texas. It's a first in Texas on the wrongful life theory."

In his opinion, Roberts said doctors at Lackland Air Force Base doctors were negligent because the disease "was a proximate cause of (the child's) being born with congenital rubella syndrome."

Roberts ruled that doctors at Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi, Miss. — where Mrs. Scales was transferred after she contracted the disease at Lackland — failed to get medical records from Lackland, which would have shown the bout with rubella.

The Keesler doctors also should have given a test for recent rubella exposure, Roberts said.

Roberts ruled the government must pay $400,000 for care and treatment until Scales is 18; $200,000 for pain, suffering and mental anguish after age 18 and $25,000 because he will never be employable.

The money goes into a trust fund to be used only for the boy, Gibbins said.

White sees no concern about creationism law

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The lack of publicity about the fact that Arkansas schools are using biology textbooks that deal with creationism shows there is little public concern about the state's new creation-science law, Gov. Frank White says.

Five biology textbooks approved for Arkansas schools deal with the creation-science viewpoint, but four of them may not qualify under Arkansas' new creationism law because they refer to the Bible.

The state's creation-science law says the teaching of creation-science or evolution-science may not include any references to religious writings.

The law White signed also says that schools teaching either view must give balanced treatment in lectures, texts and teaching materials to the other view.

White said he was not suggesting that the books give equal treatment to evolution and creationism.

"I just wanted to point out that it is being taught in some districts without any uproar about teaching religion in the schools," White said.

intellectual development," she said.

Bishop John E. McCarthy of the Catholic Diocese of Houston denounced the study.

"My first reaction would be to call these alleged findings patently absurd," McCarthy said.

McCarthy admitted he has not seen the study but said, "A religious frame of reference that provides stability, continuity and maturity in a person's life is not an obstacle to learning, but an extraordinary advantage as a beginning point."

But Ms. Blau stood by her research.

"In every instance in my sample, average scores of Catholic children were lower than those who are Methodists or higher protestants or non-denominational," she said.

Ms. Blau's study was based on IQ scores of 523 white and 549 black Chicago-area fifth and sixth graders and sociological data supplied by the children's mothers.

University of Texas sociology professor Bill Kelly took issue with the study because of its use of IQ scores as data. Critics of the tests say they are not a true yardstick of intelligence because they don't take into account socio-economic variables.

"The problem with studies like these is that they frequently look at just two or three variables," Kelly said. "It's like the studies that correlated race and IQ — the results could be based on socio-economic factors that are correlated with IQ. When you add other control factors, you get different results."

Ms. Blau conducted her research while a member of the faculty of Northwestern University. She said her sample contained more references measures "than any other study I know of."

"I know there is a lot of controversy about IQ tests," she said. "Some people are against using them and studying them, but I don't feel that way."

She said she also used achievement tests, but feels IQ tests are a good "predictor variable."

Ms. Blau said her research refuted University of California psychologist Arthur R. Jensen's conclusion that race and IQ are connected. Jensen's research contends that lower

Collins delighted that his anti-busing bill was okayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jim Collins couldn't conceal his delight after his anti-busing bill sailed through the House of Representatives by its biggest margin ever.

"The last time we had a record vote, it was only 209-190. I never dreamed we'd win by this big," the Dallas Republican said late Tuesday after his amendment to a Justice Department appropriations bill won by a vote of 265-122, an edge of more than 2-to-1.

"This is really a change. A vote on busing is like one on abortion. It's hard to change a member's position. Once you get this big a change in position, it shows to me that the mood in this country has really changed," Collins said.

Only two Texans voted against it.

Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston and Rep. Henry Gonzalez of San Antonio voted against the amendment, which bars the Justice Department "from using any funds in this bill to engage in any action that would result in transporting any student to any school other than the one closest to his home."

Three Texas Democrats — Jim Wright of Fort Worth, Richard White of El Paso and Jack Hightower of Vernon — did not vote.

Wright was closeted with other House leaders in a briefing on the Israeli bombing of an Iraqi nuclear facility. Had he been present, Wright would have supported Collins' amendment.

Wright's office said.

Collins asked for a record vote after his amendment had already been declared as passed by a voice vote.

"We wanted to give the Senate a message," he said, noting that the measure barely carried a year ago in the Senate.

"When the fellows in the Senate see the overwhelming feeling of the House, a lot of senators who haven't understood it will understand it now."

Collins won House approval of his anti-busing amendment two previous times, but the Senate killed it the first time.

Researcher says religion major factor in childrens intelligence

HOUSTON (AP) — Religious leaders and educators have challenged a study by University of Houston sociologist Zena Blau that concludes religion rather than race is the important factor in determining a child's intelligence.

Ms. Blau's study, both black and white children scored lower on IQ tests if they came from "fundamental, doctrinaire" religious backgrounds. She said the lowest IQ scores in her sample were children of Roman Catholic and Baptist mothers.

"In a society that is changing so rapidly, where self-control and self-direction are important to an individual's performance, the impact of the high-control religious institutions is adverse to a child's

NOTED HYPNOTIST IN PAMPA TO HELP SMOKERS & THE OVERWEIGHT.

WADE M. GENTHNER, F.A.I.H.
Director of Techniques of Living.

Are you overweight or a cigarette smoker? Have you tried to lose weight or stop smoking, only to fail time and time again? If you find yourself answering "yes" to either of these questions then the Techniques For Living Seminar, under the direction of Wade M. Genthner, F.A.I.H., at the Best Western Coronado 1101 North Hobart will be the place for you to be on Friday June 19 Techniques For Living will be conducting their famous Lose Weight - Stop Smoking Seminar which has helped thousands of people throughout the United States. Techniques For Living is a national organization dedicated to helping Americans solve these and other problems that have kept them from enjoying their lives to the fullest.

The subject of numerous newspaper and magazine articles as well as television appearances, Mr. Genthner and his staff have been conducting these seminars throughout the country. In a comprehensive and fascinating three-hour program, those who attend the seminar experience the relaxing and beneficial effects of clinical hypnosis. Not only do people permanently lose weight and stop smoking as a result of the seminar, they also report that they sleep better, feel more energetic, and generally enjoy life more than they have previously.

Mr. Genthner's skill in clinical hypnosis was noted by Dan Rather of CBS' "60 Minutes", who referred to him in a nationally televised report as a well-trained and highly experienced hypnotist.

"Clinical hypnosis is the easiest way there is to solve these problems", Genthner says. "Simply put, it helps to eliminate these types of problems permanently."

Genthner says that the reason clinical hypnosis is so successful is that "it removes the causes of problems, not just the symptoms." For example, he explains: "People who are overweight go on diets. A diet is only good for as long as you can follow it. Once you stop the diet you gain the weight. Hypnosis is permanent because it eliminates the causes of overeating, not just the symptoms." The same holds true for smokers where the need to prevent cravings for cigarettes or weight gain is just as important. Both problems are covered at the seminar, and each seminar leader is personally trained by Mr. Genthner. Further information can be obtained by calling, toll free 1-800-645-5454

Congress continues work, advances bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to reinstate the federal death penalty and to prohibit the Justice Department from doing anything to foster court-ordered busing of school children have advanced in Congress.

With little debate, the Senate Judiciary Committee voted 13-5 Tuesday to permit execution of persons convicted of treason and espionage, carrying explosives across state lines, kidnapping, hijacking an airplane or killing or attempting to kill a president.

The bill, which some critics say does not meet Supreme Court rules for capital punishment, is expected to win Senate approval before setting off a fight in the House.

Meanwhile Tuesday, the House, for the second time in a year, sent the Senate anti-busing legislation. Former President Carter vetoed a similar measure last year, but President Reagan is on record as opposing court-ordered compulsory busing.

The proposal, an amendment to the Justice Department's annual authorization bill, was offered by Rep.

James Collins, R-Texas, and attracted little debate before being approved 265-122.

It would bar the department from taking any action that would cause children to be bused past their nearest school. Busing for the mentally or physically handicapped who need special education would be allowed.

In other congressional business Tuesday:

—The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee approved a 5.45 percent pay raise for federal workers in fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1. Reagan has recommended 4.8 percent.

The panel also directed the Postal Service to save $100 million by closing or consolidating up to 10,000 small post offices and $20 million by delaying its controversial nine-digit zip code until after 1983.

—The Senate voted 84-7 Tuesday to confirm President Reagan's nomination of Chester A. Crocker to be assistant secretary of state for African affairs.

The action ended a five-week delay imposed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who said he wasn't sure Crocker would support the president's policies.

—The Census Bureau said 17 House seats will have to be shifted because of the 1980 census results. Most will move from the Frost Belt to the Sun Belt.

—The House Agriculture Committee approved a bill to give wheat and corn farmers access this year to the government's long-term price support loan program.

—The House Banking Committee rejected a plan — already approved by the Senate — to end federal housing aid to cities with rent control.

—Congressmen spoke out in defense of Israel's attack Sunday on a nuclear reactor in Iraq. On Monday, the initial reaction was against the raid.

—Reagan's three-year, 25 percent tax-cut plan was introduced in the House by Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr. of New York, the ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee.

President mellows on biblical inerrancy, won't discuss Jews

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Re-elected in the face of the strongest opposition to a Southern Baptist president in more than 20 years, the Rev. Bailey Smith says the 40 percent vote against him "wasn't a protest of anything."

Smith, 42, was re-elected Tuesday by a vote of 6,934 to 4,524 over challenger Abner McCall, chancellor of Baylor University. The contest was an unusual break with custom that normally gives the president of the 13.6 million member denomination an unopposed second term.

McCall said his reluctant candidacy was to "carry the standard" for those who were protesting pressure for a strictly literal interpretation of the Bible.

Some of Smith's backers had been demanding that professors and officials at Southern Baptist seminaries and other agencies of the denomination meet stricter standards on the issue of Biblical inerrancy — the belief that the Bible is a completely accurate rendering of God's word.

At a news conference following his victory on the first day of the Southern Baptist Convention, Smith said: "I wish everybody believed every word of the Bible, because it's the truth, but I have no plans or agenda to attack anyone... I think what we don't need is to be rude or use it (Biblical inerrancy) as an ax."

Smith, speaking to 13,009 "messengers," refused twice during the news conference to answer questions on whether he still believes that "God Almighty does not hear the prayer of a Jew."

Smith made that statement last August when he spoke to the National Affairs Briefing in Dallas sponsored by The Roundtable, a right-wing political-religious group.

Smith explained that a subsequent remark in a sermon that Jews "have funny-looking noses," was a private joke with a Jewish friend who was in his audience. He has never retracted his statement about Jewish prayers.

He said the major thrust of the Southern Baptists will be "to win people to Christ."

He also said, "All of us need to be concerned about world hunger and Baptists have to be more aggressive in helping blacks. Southern Baptists must say to the world, 'There is only one kind of person in the world, a person for whom Jesus Christ has died.'"

Regarding the election, Smith said, "The only reason Dr. McCall got so many votes, is because he deserves them."

But McCall said he was surprised at the size of the vote for him and commented that those who come to a Southern Baptist Convention aren't delegates: "They're messengers, and I think they sent a message."

"Our program depends on the complete voluntary cooperation of every Baptist and each individual autonomous church," said McCall. "When 40 percent of the people in a cooperative program register a protest and say we don't like the way things are going, this is a significant number of disaffected people."

Smith had made some concessions to the moderate faction earlier in the day, including an agreement that past doctrinal statements are sufficient.

Widow says relatives tried to kick her out

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Last year Evarista Serrata, a partially blind, 106-year-old widow, was kicked out of her house by a younger relative.

This year, she says her family tried to burn her out to get her property.

The woman told Peace Justice Alex Perez that her niece and great-niece set her house on fire, leaving the inside blackened and ransacked. Mrs. Serrata said she had refused to accompany the relatives to Houston.

In June last year, Mrs. Serrata filed civil suit to evict her great-granddaughter, who had taken over the house and forced the elderly woman to stay with her adopted son.

"It's a shame and I'm going to see that he is brought to justice," said Perez, who handled the civil suit.

"They're just trying to get her property," he said. "And they're trying to force her out. She (Mrs. Serrata) knew that if she went to Houston, she would probably die soon. That's why she kept telling them, 'No voy, no voy (I won't go).'"

Arrest warrants were issued Monday for three persons in connection with a fire at Mrs. Serrata's house.

DENALI NATIONAL PARK, Alaska (AP) — Denali National Park doesn't try to be all things to all people. It's more a park for animals than for humans. Even Mount McKinley — North America's highest peak — is a secondary attraction.

It is 5.7 million acres of splendid solitude, bigger than seven states. The National Park Service doesn't talk about managing a park, it talks about managing an ecosystem.

Unmarked by pollution, hundreds of miles from anything remotely resembling a big city, and w-year-old Denali is a park from the past. Rangers still use dog sled teams for working and patrolling in the winter.

"We're probably where Yellowstone was 50-60 years ago," says Bill Truesdell, Denali's chief naturalist.

At the same time, Denali may be a park of the future when it comes to coping with ever-increasing hordes of visitors.

Private vehicle traffic virtually is prohibited along its mostly gravel 87-mile road, with free shuttle buses substituting for the traffic jams plaguing many of the nation's most popular parks.

Superintendent Bob Cunningham, a wildlife biologist, says he believes the lack of traffic contributes significantly to healthy animal populations. He says his mail indicates most visitors support the auto restrictions.

Truesdell says a minimum of 200 grizzly bears, 1,000 caribou, 1,200 moose and a like number of sheep are in the core area of the park.

The large mammals are the most visible during the peak visitation period from May through August, but more than 30 other wildlife species and 155 bird species share the park habitat.

Among the exotic birds using the park tundra for their nesting grounds are the long-tailed Jaeger, which migrates from Japan, and the arctic tern, which comes from Antarctica each year.

There are no flashy curio shops and junk food emporiums that blaze the way to many national parks. Denali is announced simply, by one of the Park Service's distinctive brown wooden signs.

There are hotel-type sleeping accommodations for only about 300 people in the park boundaries and a lesser number near the entrance.

Two train cars, each sleeping about 50 people, serve as a youth hostel, the only other pillow space for rent. There are seven campgrounds with 228 spaces available.

Others spending the night in the park must do so in a tent or under the stars. The inner park area is divided into backcountry units. From eight to 15 campers are allowed into each unit each night. Their camps must be at least one-quarter mile from the road.

What used to be called McKinley National Park now is a park within park. Laws enacted in December expanded the park from 1.9 million acres to 5.7 million acres and changed the name to correspond to the Indian name for the mountain, meaning "Great One."

A proposal to rename the peak is pending before the U.S. Board of Geographic Names. The Ohio congressional delegation is opposed, on grounds that it would be an affront to native son and the nation's 25th president, William McKinley.

The "old park" will be managed strictly as a wilderness. In areas surrounding the core, local residents who traditionally have hunted and fished in the lands now encompassed by the park boundaries may continue to do so. And in the extreme northwestern and southwestern corners of the "new" park, sport hunting will be allowed.

Denali is not without problems. Despite its size, probably 80 percent of the visitation takes place along the road.

Restored steam engines are back powering old machines

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — John Bowditch chipped away at layers of accumulated grime. Then, his grease-stained fingers tightened the bolts of an antique machine.

Bowditch, 35, is the curator of power and machinery at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village. He's a shirt-sleeve curator who believes in working closely with the objects he is assigned to oversee.

Curators, according to Bowditch, are librarians of objects. They are responsible for developing museum collections, researching the history of artifacts and preparing labels for exhibit. These labels inform the museum visitor about the use and importance of these items.

"In my case, I also do quite a bit of work on conservation and restoration, so the machines look good and work. Machinery is better understood if it runs and it's better for the machines," Bowditch said.

Conservation and restoration require long hours of dirty and physically exhausting work for Bowditch, who repairs and restores everything from giant dynamos to miniature steam engines.

The mechanic-curator has been working long hours through the winter and spring to prepare for the reopening of buildings in Greenfield Village's industrial area. The steam-operated industries have not been in operation for a number of years.

Bowditch and a group of museum volunteers have restored several old steam engines to power a circular sawmill, a gristmill and a printing shop. This summer, visitors to the village will be able to see these engines powering industrial machines as they did decades ago.

The circular sawmill, last operated in 1951, was built at the village but is typical of late 19th-century sawmills. One of the engines that will be in operation was used to run a foghorn in Lake Michigan in the 1880s.

The gristmill, idle since 1968, was moved to the village from Monroe, Mich., where it was built in 1831. The engine was made in 1870 and originally operated a shoe factory in New Hampshire.

The antique presses in the print shop have been operating on electric power, but this summer they will be operated by an 1850 steam engine, one of the earliest American steam engines still in operation.

"I've been interested in machinery all my life," he said. "As a child, I was interested in railroad locomotives, same as a lot of people. That's really how I got into it."

As a curator, Bowditch is able to combine his interests in American social history and machinery. His college thesis was a study of American culture from 1898 to 1918 as reflected in American music. At Henry Ford Museum, Bowditch shows how American culture is reflected in its machinery.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men; to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

Overfinanced budgets the big fiscal problem

Problems not precisely defined tend to result in remedies that aggravate the cause. The common perception of the current attempts to reduce the budget is that the federal government — or misgovernment, as the case may be — doesn't have enough resources to pay for all the things that the various power segments within the country wish to have. Nothing could be more diametrically opposed to the factual situation.

The problem with government expenditures, at least since the mid-1950s, is that the federal apparatus has been, and continues to be, over-financed. Over-financing was the historic provocation that changed the Social Security system, as established in 1935, just four years later from a funded insurance program to a pay-as-you-go tax program. Dollars were coming in so fast that they threatened to deflate the rest of the economy.

As a result of sustained GNP growth in the 1950s and 1960s, revenues flowed into the Potomac treasury faster than Congress could devise truly beneficial programs to spend them on. The capacity of Congress to act constructively is not greatly different from that of any other committee; that is, the outcome seldom matches the charitable intention.

So what we see today is an inflow so extraordinarily immense and an accumulation of outflow of projects so forbiddingly long that top-flight accountants cannot add the two columns so that the end sums match in any special fiscal year. Indeed, the best guesses of the most knowledgeable officials vary in the magnitude of $40 billion to $60 billion as to how far apart the two sets of arithmetic are.

In the meantime, the inflation that results from the annual overdraft against the U.S. Treasury pushes more workers into higher tax brackets so that more revenues flood the Washington bookkeepers. If Congress had duly applied the inflow to an established number and level of programs, the imbalance would have ultimately been corrected. That correction did not take place because such projects, once seeded, grow larger than originally envisioned and because congressmen, being so very human, like to invent new projects in order to get their names in print, their faces on television and their names in voters' minds.

The net of the matter is more dollars in and more dollars out than any bookkeeping system can cope with.

As a matter of fact, the runaway has reached such a stage that the U.S. Printing Office hardly can produce dollar bills fast enough to replace those that become dirty, ragged and wrinkled from prolonged use.

A constitutional amendment limiting the power of Congress either to tax or inflate would be one approach to a cure. A speedier technique would be to organize some sort of surveillance over the congressmen who originate tax legislation — the 37 members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Farming in Red China

The news out of mainland China is fascinating. Over the past three years the government has been seeking to stimulate agricultural production by, of all things, leaving farmers alone.

The method has been to lift restrictions on what farmers can plant and how they can sell it. Once peasants have met their contracts to produce for the state, they can keep the rest of what they produce, or sell it.

Not surprisingly, with more personal initiative, Chinese farmers have been producing more.

Du Run-sheng, vice-minister of the State Agriculture Commission, recently told reporters that, "It is essential to leave the right to decide how to improve production and how to improve their lives in the hands of the people themselves." And the official press claims that the peasants only fear is that the government will flip-flop in its policy and go back to the terrible old days of equal pay for all and rigid restrictions on what to plant.

This news about China is especially fascinating when compared to official agriculture policies in the United States.

A glance at just a few of the news releases recently issued by the House Agriculture Committee reveals a pattern of extensive and intensive government involvement in agriculture.

HR 2401 provides a complex formula for projected purchases of surplus milk products by the government.

Another bill sets forth an equally complex formula for payments to producers of wool products.

A bill for indemnities to dairy farmers is extended for four years.

Another bill authorizes long-term credit sales and donations of "surplus" agricultural products to the Food for Peace program.

Legislation extending the Agriculture Department's farm storage facility loan program is approved by a subcommittee.

Another subcommittee approves a bill that authorizes expansion of a number of agricultural research programs.

All this in one month, in an era in which it is supposed to be fashionable in Washington to cut back government programs. Can it be there is more freedom for farmers, more recognition of the importance of incentives as opposed to government guarantees, in China than in the United States?

Well, that may not be quite an accurate picture.

Farmers in China must produce a certain amount for the state.

Farming technology is much more advanced here than in mainland China.

One should take pronouncements by China's official press with a healthy dose of skepticism.

Despite all the regulations, there is a long tradition of independence and capitalism among American farmers which will take a long time to develop in China.

Nonetheless, it seems clear that for the moment, the Chinese government seems in fact to be moving toward less regulation and less central control of agriculture.

Here in the United States, despite a tax-cutting atmosphere, despite wide-spread support for decentralization as a general principle, we still have more bureaucrats in the Department of Agriculture than we have farmers.

And we seem struck on dead center.

Both Israel, Syria should back off

We like to believe that neither Syria nor Israel really is serious about going to war over hapless Lebanon.

But Israel is threatening war if Syria refuses to remove anti-aircraft missile installations in Lebanon. And Syria so far has refused.

Israel has respected, however, a request by the United States to refrain from an assault on the Syrian missile sites. President Reagan wanted to be sure that his peace envoy to the Middle East, Philip Habib, had an opportunity to persuade Israel's Prime Minister Menchem Begin to be cautious.

Habib encountered rigidity both in Damascus and Jerusalem.

Syria insists on its right to keep its surface-to-air defense weapons in Lebanon. Israel insists on its right to patrol Lebanese air space and to supply weapons to Christian militants battling the Syrians in Lebanon.

Both nations should back off. World peace is in jeopardy.

Basic budgeting

Well folks, they're at it again. "It" is rewriting the Constitution. And "they" are the majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which has approved a proposed amendment that would mandate a balanced federal budget.

That subject certainly can't come as news. It has been around for years — in the case of Sen. Strom Thurmond, perhaps its most tireless proponent, for almost 30 years, since the South Carolina Republican began pushing it during the Eisenhower administration.

It has picked up a lot of additional support in more recent administrations, as budget deficits have succeeded each other with a regularity approaching monotony and increased geometrically in size.

The arguments in favor of a budget-balancing amendment are obvious and even pressing, as that recent history suggests. The deficits are devastating to the economy and must be curbed. If that cannot be accomplished through normal legislative and administrative processes, then the basic law is the alternative.

The objections are less obvious, at least to those whose interest in figures is primarily in bottom lines, but possibly even more pressing. Using the Constitution as an instrument of coercion is not a constructive substitute for executive and congressional self-discipline in the budgeting process. It makes rigid a process that requires flexibility in meeting the changing, unforeseen and in the long run of history unforeseeable needs of the society. It would be impossible, for example, to wage a war or respond to a depression with a balanced budget.

And above all, the Constitution should not be used to legislate. Its function is to establish the basic principles and machinery of government, not to dictate what buttons should be pushed and what gears must be used to make it function most effectively.

Not that there are not constitutions devised to do that including a few in these United States. The too-specific document is invariably also too long, too complex and too inflexible. Many have had to be replaced as changing times dated the unchanging shalls and shall nots, in some instances several

A glory of the American Constitution is its brevity and its resiliency: its ability to provide the basis for the development of new responses to meet the new demands of a growing country and a changing world.

The Senate's proposed budget amendment would meet some of these objections. It would allow exceptions to the mandated balance in the event of war or should a three-fifths majority in both houses authorize a deficit. But no plan can foresee every contingency. And the cynics among us may well suspect that given our national penchant for meeting domestic and international crises with money, there would be frequent congressional recourse to exempting votes.

In which case a budget amendment would not only be demeaning the Constitution but making realistic budgeting more difficult than it is now.

That happens to be the view of this fiscally as well as politically conservative administration, as it was of its liberal predecessors. Budget Director David Stockman, who has shown no hesitation in taking on any and all obstacles to his concepts of budget responsibility, sees no reason to take the constitutional road. Adequate avenues already exist in Congress.

Congress, however, may very well be inclined to go along with the proposed amendment for reasons other than the budget problem itself. There is already an amendment movement under way, the petition that has been circulating among state legislatures for some years and has so far been approved by 30. If the magic number of 34 — two-thirds of all states — is reached, a constitutional convention could be called to deal with the budget issue.

The first such since the original, the convention might also take a mind to deal with a number of other issues, a prospect that appeals to no one other than the most zealous special-interest advocates.

Going the conventional route and submitting a congressional recommendation to the states for ratification — 38 required — could, for many congressmen who do not share Thurmond's personal enthusiasm, at least have the advantage of heading off the convention drive at the constitutional pass.

Polish wedding

If anybody tells you that Paul Harvey cries at weddings, deny it. But he almost does.

This past weekend a business associate and friend of mine got married: Richard Mack took a beautiful bride named Hope.

Both have been happily before. To each other.

Twenty-five years ago. On this 25th anniversary of their wedding day — they did it again.

A formal church ceremony — complete with the original clergyman, beautifully adorned bridesmaids and frock-coated attendants including their own four tall, handsome sons.

The minister preambled the ceremony with such beautifully appropriate remarks that I wish I'd kept notes. But, engulfed by the emotion of the occasion, I did not.

In essence — he recalled how most newlyweds enter upon this solemn ceremony and ritually recite the vows without an adequate comprehension of their meaning. "For richer, for poorer" . . .

The inexperienced cannot anticipate that "richer" is oftentimes harder. "In sickness and in health" . . .

The uninitiated are unaware that sticking together in sickness is comparatively easy; it's "in health" that there is a greater tendency to fly the coop, jump the fence, seek greener pastures.

And it is no less true for either mate. Restiveness is rarely the fault of the other. Most often it is a man's own waning virility which he comes to despise; for a woman — her wrinkles.

But if beginners at the altar see the future only through a soft, pink haze which flatters everything . . .

When a couple bring their love back to the altar — at considerable inconvenience and expense to reaffirm their pledge of allegiance to one another — when they say "richer or poorer" or "sickness and health," they know what they're talking about.

For this family has not been without the sickness part. This family has experienced and endured the early problems of making ends meet on a lawman's income. These lovers have not been spared trial, trouble, temptation, disappointments, tears.

Yet in the autumn of their years, the Macks wanted to return to church to say thanks to their God and to one another.

If you're ever invited to a Polish wedding reception, don't miss it. It's really something!

And the celebration which followed this solemn occasion was a dandy. Family and longtime friends affirm this bride and groom were more radiant than 25 years ago.

During the church part I couldn't help reflecting on what a significant example this is to their own grown sons.

And indeed for the others of us in the pews who, when the minister said, "Do you . . . stole a misty glance and joined our own hands.

Inflation is a killer

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
The No. 1 public enemy is inflation. It's essential that the President and the Congress not lose sight of that fact as they develop economic policy for the next few years. In recent weeks, there seems to have been a waning of interest in the fight against inflation.

If anyone thinks that budget deficits and inflation can be tolerated awhile longer, he should listen to Michael Raoul - Duval, senior vice president of the Mead Corporation.

In a recent speech Mr. Raoul - Duval warned repeatedly against the peril from inflation. "If we do not get firm control over domestic inflation," he said, "we will likely continue to decline quickly in economic strength relative to the other industrialized democracies."

Mr. Raoul - Duval noted that "We are left with a hemorrhaging federal budget that generates — in good times and bad — massive deficits. We are funding these deficits by on- and off-balance-sheet federal borrowing. The Federal Reserve has monetized this borrowing in the past by increasing the rate of our money supply beyond the growth in real economic activity. The result, of course, is inflation."

Mr. Raoul - Duval's remarks are timely, for there is increasingly open argument by extreme supply-siders that deficits are nothing to worry about.

Mr. Raoul - Duval offers this important text for Congress and the administration:

"First, with our gross national product rapidly approaching three trillion dollars, our economy is too large and has too great an impact on the world monetary system to survive with high inflation. In fact, there is a possibility that if inflation remains at the double digit level — or even in the high single digits — there may soon be a massive crisis in a major segment of our monetary system.

"Second, perhaps for the first time in history, we have middle-class owned wealth in the context of peacetime inflation. The average man has reacted virulently against inflation because he correctly sees it as eroding the value of the assets he has accumulated. This reaction has been directed at the nation's political leadership because the average man now sees uncontrolled government spending as the principle cause of inflation. Inability to reduce inflation may well lead to major social upheaval."

In short, inflation is a killer. There is no more important domestic task than combating inflation. Furthermore, the basic element in the fight against inflation is the elimination of federal deficits.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, June 10, the 161st day of 1981. There are 204 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On June 10, 1610, the first Dutch settlers in America landed on Manhattan Island.

On this date:
In 1967, Israel agreed to a United Nations ceasefire with Egypt, with Israel holding conquered territory four times its own size.

In 1970, at least 100 persons were killed in fighting between government forces and guerrillas in Jordan.

In 1972, a flash flood hit Rapid City, South Dakota, resulting in 236 deaths.

And in 1979, Pope John Paul II ended a nine-day visit to his native Poland, urging his countrymen to — quote — "be strong with the strength that comes from faith."

Five years ago: Lebanon's civil war, simmered down as the Arab League peacekeeping force arrived.

One year ago: Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin pledged that his country would stop building controversial settlements on the West Bank after 10 more were completed.

Today's Birthdays: Britain's Prince Philip is 60. Former astronaut James McDivitt is 52.

Thought For Today: I like a man who grins when he fights. — Sir Winston Churchill, British statesman (1874-1965).

Waterbeds good for newborns

Editors Note: Critically ill newborns have a new tool for survival — waterbeds. The beds are part of special incubators. A hospital in San Antonio is the first to make use of this medical technology.

By MARJORIE CLAPP
San Antonio News

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Waterbeds are taking the place of cradles at Bexar County Hospital, sending infants off to dreamland quicker than a lullaby.

Nurses say the waterbeds are healthier for the newborn.

Ten specially designed waterbeds for premature infants have been installed in the hospital's Nursery Intensive Care Unit.

Consider one-month-old Johnny Garcia, a three-pound, 15-ounce tyke who has lived on a waterbed all his life.

The infant is one of 10 who has lived in the environment of the special incubator because it's helping to keep him alive.

The special incubators, made in Ohio, are a decided improvement over the older type incubators and have several advantages, medical experts say.

A spokesman said the hospital's perinatal center was the first in the world to obtain these particular incubators, with their controlled environment, quick access in case of emergency, easy positioning and, of course, the waterbeds.

As is the case with the other infants, young Garcia's stay on the waterbed isn't just for easy sleep or fun.

According to Thelma Bowen, nursery supervisor, clinical studies have shown that premature infants on the waterbeds normally breathe better.

Respiratory problems are common among premature infants, she said. But on the waterbeds, infants seem to stop breathing less often because of the slight movement of the water.

Ms. Bowen also noted that skin breakdown and malformation of the head occurred less often in infants who have to be immobilized for long periods of time.

"The babies on the waterbeds seem to be less irritable than other babies," she said. "perhaps because the waterbed, combined with the environment of the incubator, simulates the womb of the mother."

The environment of the incubator is regulated by probes taped to the infant so that his or her skin temperature remains constant between 97.7 and 98.8 degrees, Ms. Bowen said. Even when the dome of the incubator is raised, an air vacuum keeps the heated air from escaping.

Digital readouts of the baby's temperature are located on the front of the incubators in easy sight of nurses.

Texas chef prepares meal for two presidents

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas chef was flown to Camp David to specially prepare a meal for President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Reagan and Lopez-Portillo dined by candlelight Monday evening at the conclusion of their first day of talks.

On the two-tiered flagstone terrace, the two presidents dined on a menu of charcoal roast sirloin, tomato pie, corn on the cob, tossed salad and deep dish apple pie with homemade ice cream.

Both presidents returned to the buffet-style table for second helpings of the meal prepared by chef Cliff Teinert of Albany, Texas.

Teinert paid his own way to Camp David, said Larry Speakes, deputy press secretary to the president.

President Reagan was dressed in a red checked western shirt worn outside his brown western pants and boots. Lopez-Portillo wore a brown turtleneck sweater with a tan button-up sweater and brown pants.

In a toast, Reagan paid special tribute to three recent American heroes of Mexican descent — Army Sgt. Roy Benavidez of Texas, to whom Reagan earlier in the year awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor; Marine Sgt. James Lopez, who was honored for his action in defending U.S. personnel during the takeover of the U.S. embassy in Iran; and rookie pitcher Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Navy band "Country Current" played during the cocktail hour, and country music singer Janie Fricke entertained at poolside after dinner.

Washington talks prompted action

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — State Department officials say they intervened in a Juarez labor strike because they feared an international incident would erupt while President Reagan and Mexico President Jose Lopez Portillo were meeting.

Eric James, an official on the State Department's Mexican Affairs desk in Washington, D.C., said Tuesday the high-level negotiations that resolved the strike were accelerated last week because of Lopez Portillo's visit to the White House.

The strike took on international overtones because hundreds of horses and dogs, many owned by United States citizens, were trapped at the Juarez Race Track. The track workers called the strike May 4 because they feared that a planned change in the track concessionaire would cost them their jobs.

The red-and-black strike banners came down Monday after the Mexican government awarded a new lease to the current operators.

"I think it's safe to assume that the Mexican government as well as the United States government had hoped this would be settled in time (for the presidents' talks)," said Frank Stevens, U.S. consul general in Juarez. "We certainly were concerned with the urgency of it."

Tuesday, many American horse owners removed their steeds from the stables and whisked them back to the United States, Stevens said.

Stevens said all of the horses and dogs appeared healthy, although some had lost their racing trim during the five weeks of inactivity.

He said most of the owners were taking their horses to tracks around the United States, but that many dog owners were leaving their greyhounds in Juarez.

Assistant track manager Demetrio Sotomayor Jr. has said there will be no horse racing at the track this year because of the strike, but dog racing is scheduled to resume later this month.

Some owners had talked last week of trying to forcibly free the animals from the kennels and stables at the track. It was just that type of an incident government officials were trying to avoid, James said.

"I'm just glad they didn't attack the race track during President Lopez Portillo's visit," James said Tuesday. "The owners could have gotten hostile and could have started something. That was my main concern. We tried to stress the importance of not reacting too strongly."

The owners were upset because they were paying high prices for the upkeep of the animals, but were not being allowed to race them. Stevens said he knew of no plans to try to get compensation from the Mexicans for the money the owners lost while their animals were held hostage at the track.

"Any kind of compensation would have to initiate with the owners," he said. "Since everybody lost money on it, it would be hard to imagine where any reparations would come from."

Solar powered plane to attempt flight across English Channel

PARIS (AP) — The American team behind the only human-powered flight across the English Channel unveiled the first solar-powered airplane Tuesday and said they hope it will make the same crossing.

The Solar Challenger, on exhibit at the Paris Air Show, is driven by the sun's energy. It is powered by more than 16,000 solar cells placed on moveable panels on top of the wings and has no batteries or other energy storage.

The glider-like plane weighs 217 pounds, has reached an altitude of more than 14,000 feet and has reached a speed of 42 miles per hour in test flights in the United States.

The inventor of the craft, Dr. Paul MacCready, said there is no "immediate, practical or commercial uses for such a plane," but that the planned Channel crossing later this month is intended to "prove how far you can go in improving the efficiency and energy conservation potential if you combine imagination with modern, superlight materials."

The DuPont Company, which has invested $600,000 in the project, has provided 10 lightweight plastics for the plane, which has a wingspan of 47 feet and is 30 feet long. With 240 square feet of solar cells, the plane is expected to have 3,000 watts of electric power at sea level and 4,800 watts in high altitudes to drive its electric motor at about 2.7 horsepower.

Jack Conmy, a spokesman for DuPont, said the company first got interested in MacCready's projects after the successful flight of the Gossamer Condor, another MacCready design which became the first human-powered aircraft to fly a figure eight over a one-mile course, winning a long-sought prize.

DuPont decided to back what became the Channel-crossing Gossamer Albatross and also invested in the current solar project. "When he came to us, we had to believe him because MacCready is a card-carrying genius," Conmy said.

The Channel crossing, scheduled for some time in mid-June depending on weather conditions, will be made by Stephen Ptacek, a 28-year-old Golden, Colo., pilot who lost 25 pounds to prepare for the flight. At 5 feet 9 inches tall, he now weighs in at 127 pounds.

MacCready estimates the flight will take about seven hours with the Challenger flying between 20 and 40 miles per hour. The proposed altitude will be about 15,000 feet which is high enough to permit the pilot to glide more than 30 miles in any direction to a landing spot.

Ptacek will take off from Cormeilles en Vexin airport, 25 miles northwest of Paris. The target landing field is at Croydon, 20 miles southwest of London, but organizers said any landing on English soil would be considered a success.

Spurs select forwards in NBA draft

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs did not get a pick until the second round of the National Basketball Association draft, but coach Dan Albeck said the team still got two forwards high on its shopping list.

San Antonio, one of four teams with no first-round choice, exercised the 28th and 30th selections to choose 6-7 forwards Eugene Banks of Duke and Ed Rains of South Alabama in the second round.

"If you had told me from the start we could have Banks and Rains, I would have taken it and run," Albeck said.

San Antonio had given up its first-round selection to New Jersey as compensation for shot-blocking center George Johnson and its second-round pick to Washington in return for backup center Dave Corzine. However, it picked up the two second-round picks when free agent forward Larry Kenon signed with Chicago last year.

Albeck said the Spurs also hoped to pick forward Eddie Johnson of Illinois, but Kansas City selected

Johnson as the 29th player chosen Tuesday. "We had hoped to get two forwards. We really are happy the way the draft fell," Albeck said. "Philadelphia and Boston picking guards at the tailend of the first round, and then Portland taking Bryan Jackson was a surprise. At that point, we knew we'd get two excellent players."

Albeck was particularly high on Banks, who averaged 16.8 points during his four years at Duke where he signed after being the No. 1 high school college prospect in 1976. Banks was a high school All-American selection for three consecutive years at West Philadelphia, Pa., and was an honorable mention on the AP college All-America team last season.

"Banks is a great talent and had an impressive career at Duke," Albeck said.

He compared Banks to Golden State's Larry Smith who was drafted in the second round last year and made the NBA 1980-81 all-rookie team.

Rains, a native of Ocala, Fla., averaged 15.6

points and nearly 7 rebounds during his four years at South Alabama. He was described as an excellent ballhandler for forward and the Spurs said it was possible he could see some duty as an off-guard.

In the third round, the Spurs selected 6-2 speedy guard Tom Baker from Eastern Kentucky, and in the fourth round they chose 6-5 forward Earl Belcher of St. Bonaventure.

Baker averaged 16.8 points and 5.2 assists in his senior year, while Belcher scored at a 24.5 per game clip last season and was listed as a big guard prospect.

Other draft choices by the Spurs were: fifth round — guard Mike Rhodes, Vanderbilt; sixth round — forward Norman Shavers, Jackson State; seventh round — center Mark Mindeman, Northern Michigan; eighth round — forward Bob Bartholomew, San Diego; ninth round — forward Leonel Marquetti, Hampton Institute; and tenth round — guard Alvin Brooks, Lamar.

Rockets draft Texas A&I's Turner

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets risked their first choice in the National Basketball Association draft on a flashy forward from a small Texas college, but they invested two others in a trade for a grided veteran who is a hometown star.

The Rockets, who had forfeited the first-round pick to Utah earlier, used a second-round pick acquired in a trade with Boston to select 6-foot-7, 90-pound Ed Turner of Texas A&I — the 45th player chosen in Tuesday's college draft.

"I'm just pleased that I'll have a chance to play in the NBA, and now that this chance will come in Houston, I'm twice as pleased," he said.

Turner — who was drafted by the Rockets in the 10th round last year but declined in order to complete his last year of eligibility — won the Lone Star Conference scoring title the past two seasons, averaging 27.4 points a game as a junior and 18 points a game as a senior.

He also averaged 12.5 rebounds a game as a junior, 11.7 as a senior and was named to the all-conference team all three years he played at A&I.

But Turner's selection by the Western Conference champions was overshadowed by Elvin Hayes' return to the team he left nine years ago.

On Monday, the Rockets spent the other second-round choice in this year's draft and their second-round pick in 1983 to reacquire the 12-time All-Star center from the Washington Bullets.

Hayes, a former University of Houston star who had said he wanted to finish his professional career with the Rockets, was brought back primarily to lend assistance to center Moses Malone.

"This will be the first time in my career that I'll be playing next to a big guy," the 13-year NBA veteran said. "I've never had that luxury before, and that can't help but prolong my career."

And Hayes insisted he would not be upset if Coach

Del Harris chose not to start him next season.

"I have the same attitude as Calvin Murphy — whatever works best for Houston will work best for me," he said.

"Calvin agreed to come off the bench as the sixth man. That had to be a great inspiration and I would like to be that same kind of inspiration. I don't want to change anyone's game. I just want to enhance everyone's game," he said.

The Rockets, who had also traded away their third round pick, chose Larry Spriggs, a forward from Howard University, in the fourth round. Houston then selected Hasan Houston, a guard from Bradley, in the fifth; Kentucky forward Brad Cowan in the sixth; Joe Faine, a Bowling Green forward, in the seventh and Stan Brewer, a guard from West Georgia, in the eighth.

Houston passed in the ninth and 10th rounds of Tuesday's draft.

American League baseball roundup

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Yankees bullpen has made a habit of performing heroics all season. So has Chicago's Rich Dotson. But Minnesota's Ron Jackson has discovered the tough just this week.

Jackson, the Twins' versatile infielder-outfielder, has been almost the entire Minnesota offense the past two nights. On Monday, his run-scoring single knocked in the only run as the Twins edged Milwaukee 1-0. Tuesday night, Jackson's two-run double put the Twins on top to stay in a 3-1 triumph.

The Yankees, meanwhile, continued to get first-rate relief pitching as Dave LaRoche, Mike Griffin and Rich Gossage hurled 72-3 innings of scoreless ball in New York's 8-5 win over Kansas City, the Yankees' ninth straight victory.

And Dotson threw his fourth shutout, tops in the American League, a five-hitter that befuddled Toronto, which lost its ninth game in a row, 3-0 to the White Sox.

Elsewhere, it was Detroit 5, Texas 0; California 4, Cleveland 2; Boston 10, Seattle 1 and, in a doubleheader, Oakland took Baltimore 4-2 and 3-2.

Twins 3, Brewers 1
Jackson, who slumped early this season but has raised his average to .275, credits visits to a psychiatrist with his improvement.

Jackson, who has been used at four positions and as designated hitter this season, followed fourth-inning singles by Butch Wynegar and Mickey Hatcher with a double off the left field fence.

Fernando Arroyo, 4-4, needed last-out relief help from Doug Corbett, who earned his seventh save.

Yankees 8, Royals 5
Corbett now has 10 fewer saves than Gossage, who leads the majors. Rookie Gene Nelson was bombed for five runs in 11-3 innings, but LaRoche, 3-0, came in to check the Royals — who have lost five straight to New York this season — on two hits for 32-3 innings.

Griffin took over for 21-3 innings of three-hit pitching, followed by "The Goose" for 12-3 innings of hitless relief. The Yankees bullpen has given up one run in the last 332-3 innings.

White Sox 3, Blue Jays 0
Dotson, 7-3, retired 14 of the last 15 batters in pitching his fifth complete game this season.

The Sox got their first inside-the-park homer in exactly seven years when Wayne Nordhagen lined a shot down the right-field line and circled the bases as the Toronto outfield had trouble retrieving the ball. Ron Santo had the last White Sox' inside-the-park homer on June 9, 1974.

Tigers 5, Rangers 0
Aurelio Lopez made his first start of the season and just his seventh in three major league seasons. After hurling a four-hitter over six innings — Kevin Saucier then took over — Lopez became a starter on a more permanent basis.

Angels 4, Indians 2
Don Baylor's two-run homer in the fifth was decisive for the Angels. California trailed Len Barker and Cleveland 2-0 entering the inning but Fred Lynn doubled home two runs, his first RBI since May 23. Then Baylor slammed his ninth homer.

"When everyone else is hitting but you, it's tough," said Lynn, who is fighting back from a left calf injury that has plagued him since the first week in May and kept him out the lineup from May 25 to June 5. "It's nice to get an important hit after a long wait."

Red Sox 10, Mariners 1
Mike Torrez' five-hitter, three RBI by Jim Rice and two by Dave Stapleton paced Boston. The Red Sox jumped to a 5-0 lead after two innings and coasted.

Spinks makes promise to Holmes

DETROIT (AP) — "Tell Larry Holmes he's got my blessing and I wish him the best of luck," says Leon Spinks.

While wishing Holmes well, Spinks made a promise to the unbeaten World Boxing Council heavyweight champion who he will fight Friday night in the Joe Louis Arena.

"I'm going to cling to him like a T-shirt and punch more than I ever did against Muhammad Ali," said the 27-year-old Spinks who will be making his second title bid in just his 15th pro fight.

In his eighth pro fight, using the pressure tactics he promises to use against Holmes, Spinks won the universal title by scoring a 15-round split decision over Ali Feb. 15, 1978, at Las Vegas.

But he admittedly didn't handle well the pressure that goes with the title, and he had problems that led to bad press, mostly involving his driving habits and his life style.

On Sept. 15, 1978, Spinks, in an uninspired performance lost the World Boxing Association title to Ali in New Orleans. He earlier had been at stripped of title recognition by the World Boxing Council for failing to sign for a defense against Ken Norton.

WELCOME TO DALLAS. Mark Aguirre, first-round draft choice of the Dallas Mavericks, is welcomed to Dallas by the club's owner, Donald Carter, at DFW Airport Tuesday night. As expected, the 6-5 DePaul forward was the Mavs number one pick. (AP Laserphoto)

Mavs make Asuirre their No. 1 choice

DALLAS (AP) — As the National Basketball Association's 1981 draft of college players drew nigh, stories began to circulate about DePaul superstar Mark Aguirre. The rumors said he was moody, hard to coach, selfish — in sum, he had a bad attitude.

The talk became so strong that the Dallas Mavericks, owning the No. 1 pick in the draft, said they would not take Aguirre even though the 6-foot, 5-inch forward was considered the most talented player available.

But after a long, private Sunday interview with Dallas coach Dick Motta, things changed and Aguirre was, indeed, the first player chosen in Tuesday's draft.

"What happened to Aguirre's attitude problem?"

"Enough's been said about that. We won't go into that," Motta said, as he faced a battery of reporters at the team's draft headquarters downtown.

"I'd just like to ask people in Dallas just to judge me by what they see... don't judge me by what anyone says," Aguirre said, after arriving in Dallas Tuesday afternoon.

"I think that when they do come out and see me, I don't think they'll have any doubt that someone really put a bad rap out on me. It will take time to get it off, but I'm sure the people here in Dallas will see that's definitely not me."

Earlier in New York, Aguirre admitted that part of the "attitude" problem may have been his own doing.

"That was my own fault," Aguirre said, talking to reporters via conference call from New York. "I didn't go out and meet the media. But the people who know me don't say that. I've never met face-to-face with anyone who told me I had a bad attitude."

Aguirre added, "All I want to do is come to Dallas and play well and win. I don't want to be a superstar and I'll play anywhere the coach tells me to."

Motta said Aguirre's unquestioned ability would mean more, in the long run, than any speculation about his attitude.

"I think about a third of you (pointing at reporters) are here because of him and I think more people are going to fill our stadium because of him," Motta said.

"When you watch him the first time you're going to see something that intrigues you and when you come back the second time, you'll see something different. And each time you come to watch this guy play you'll see something new and different — and all of you will have an opinion of him."

"He will be somebody you'll talk about for 10 or 12 years. There's no question of his ability, we're certain of that."

Win streak ends

Rangers shut out by Detroit

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Tiger right-hander Aurelio Lopez has made only one starting appearance this season. In fact, Lopez has but seven starts in his three major league seasons.

His other 170 appearances have been from the bullpen, where his fastball earned him the nickname, "Senior Smoke."

But after he shut down the Texas Rangers in a 5-0 Detroit win Tuesday, Lopez is a relief pitcher no longer.

"No question about it," said Detroit manager Sparky Anderson, "he's in the (starting) rotation until he pitches himself out of it."

Is Lopez happy at the promotion?

"No," he said. "Well, wait a minute. I like to pitch. I want to pitch anytime, anywhere. But for my whole career, I've been a relief pitcher. That's what I'm used to, and that's what I'd rather do."

But the choice is not his. Lopez, 3-1, gave up only four hits through six innings before giving way to reliever Kevin Saucier, who surrendered one hit the rest of the way and posted his seventh save.

"The guy (Lopez) just pitched too good against us," said Texas manager Don Zimmer. "We didn't even score a run — how could we win against that?"

While Lopez was muffling the Texas bats and snapping a four-game Ranger win streak, Detroit's first and second hitters provided the offensive spark.

Lynn Jones and Alan Trammell worked a hit-run-bunt combination as though they were reading from a textbook.

Three times Jones opened an inning by reaching first base, twice with singles and once on a walk. Each time, Trammell dropped a perfect sacrifice bunt that moved Jones to second, and each time Jones came on to score.

"Trammell has to feel good," Jones said. "He made three great bunts and that made the difference. He changed the ball game."

Trammell shrugged off the compliment.

"That's my job," he said. "As the number two hitter, I have to do that. Lynn has to get on, and my job is to move him over. There is no worse feeling than to put yourself on the line and then not perform."

"I'm just glad I was able to do it right."

Jones singled in the fourth, moved up on a Trammell sacrifice and scored on a single by Steve Kemp.

In the sixth, the Jones-Trammell team worked again. Kemp drew a walk, then Jones scored when Texas shortstop Mario Medoza flubbed a potential double-play ball.

Kemp went to third on the error and scored on a sacrifice fly by Tom Brookens.

And in the eighth, Jones walked to set up the third Trammell sacrifice. Kemp walked again and Brookens drove both runners home with a single to center.

Jon Matlack, 3-5, took his second straight loss from the Tigers this year, walking four and striking out seven.

Softball coach to be buried Thursday

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Wendell Prentice, who died Monday of a heart attack while coaching a softball game at Hobart Park, will be remembered as a man always willing to lend a helping hand.

Prentice coached the First National Bank team in the Babe Ruth League and served as a Pampa Optimist umpire for several years before quitting to devote more time to his oilfield job. But Prentice missed the game and just recently started coaching again...this time in the Men's Industrial Softball League.

His team, the Pampa Oilers, wasn't exactly setting the league on fire, but it was slowly shaping into a winner under the leadership of Prentice.

"In my opinion he was doing a super job," said Mike Penrod, who plays for the Oilers. "We were a bunch of new guys, totally inexperienced. I felt like we would have won the game if he hadn't passed away."

The Oilers lost the extra-inning game to Southside Monday night, but before the game was over a team lost its coach.

"There was no warning whatsoever," Penrod said. "He was standing along the third base line calling plays. He had spoken to two or three people, and just a few seconds later he had the heart attack."

Prentice was rushed to Highland General Hospital by a Pampa ambulance, but was dead on arrival.

"There were attempts made by a lot of people to keep him alive until the ambulance got there," Penrod added.

"Wendell never won a league title, but he was a real fine person. He was the type of coach that was out on the field helping the players," said Bob Dixon, president of the Pampa Optimist Club when Prentice first started coaching. "He also helped me out a lot by umpiring several games."

Prentice, 46, will be buried Thursday at Fairview Cemetery.

A statement issued yesterday by the Pampa Oilers softball team read, "We would like to express our thanks and appreciation to those members of the Southside softball team and all others who extended their efforts to save the life of our coach."

Phillies pound Astros as Rose gets two more hits

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Will Pete Rose make pitcher Nolan Ryan the answer to baseball's next trivia question?

Rose, the Philadelphia Phillies first baseman, needs just two hits against the Houston Astros pitcher to erase Stan Musial's all-time career National League hit record of 3,630.

And Rose predicted last week he'd break Musial's mark against the Houston flame-thrower.

"As long as I win, I don't care," said Ryan. "I don't care if he gets three hits as long as I get the W."

Rose got two singles Tuesday night as the Phillies beat the Astros 10-3. Rose walked once and grounded out twice.

Ryan said he wouldn't change his pitching plans for tonight's game and wouldn't think about Rose until the first baseman steps into the batter's box.

Rose admitted Tuesday night he finally was getting psyched over all the excitement. He said he didn't expect Ryan to pitch him any differently tonight.

"He won't walk me to keep me from getting the record, because he doesn't want to lose, and Gary Matthews, Mike Schmidt, Dick Davis and Garry Maddox come up behind me," Rose explained. "He doesn't want to get himself in a hole."

Rose is sure to have the support of a big crowd, including his mother, Mrs. Robert Noeth of Thonotosassa, Fla., and Musial.

The Phillies wrapped up their fourth straight victory Tuesday night with a five-run fifth, highlighted by Schmidt's two-run triple. A couple of Houston errors also aided the Phillies' cause.

The Phillies scored one in the first on two singles and a wild pitch. They added one in the fifth on Schmidt's double and an RBI single by Maddox.

It became 8-2 in the sixth on Bob Boone's third home run of the season. The Phils added two in the eighth on an RBI double by Keith Moreland and pitcher Ron Reed's run-scoring single.

The Astros' runs came on Jose Cruz' third-inning RBI single, and Cesar Cedeno drove in one in the sixth and another in the eighth.

"It should be real exciting," said Rose of tonight's game. "Just think, there will be two (potential) Hall of Fame pitchers working. Ryan and Steve Carlton, and me going for something like that," said Rose, who has a 13-game hitting streak.

"It's almost like it was written by a Hollywood script writer."

Houston manager Bill Virdon said he was more concerned with his team getting back on the track than he was about Rose's record.

White Deer rallies to edge Skellytown

WHITE DEER—White Deer scored four runs in the seventh inning to edge Skellytown, 7-6, Saturday in a makeup little league game.

Skellytown was leading, 6-3, going into the final inning. Ladd Lofferty scored three runs for the winners, while Tommy Martinez, Brad Clay, Mike Bradley and Todd Haynes tallied one run each.

Brian Bridwell knocked in three runs for Skellytown. Joe Brown had two runs and two RBIs, Lance Cross scored twice, Frog Furgason and Jason Marlar had one run each.

White Deer outhit Skellytown, 13-6.

Skellytown, 3-2, hosts Panhandle at 6:30 p.m. Monday night.

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include: tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Other nations realize US won't stand for farm export subsidy hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block is confident that European leaders understand the United States will not stand for further increases in their farm export subsidies.

"In no cases did they tell me that they intended to go ahead and put levies on corn gluten feeds or taxes on soybean oil or soybean products," Block said after returning from his European tour.

"I think the fact that they talked about it and had an open mind to what we were saying is encouraging," he said.

During the two-week trip, Block met with agriculture leaders in Yugoslavia, Belgium, Great Britain, France, West Germany and the Netherlands.

Those European Economic Community meetings were designed in part, Block says, "to protect some markets that we already have in Europe and some markets that we suspected might be threatened to some extent."

"I think it's well understood by them that we are very much concerned and will not take the continued growth in exports that are subsidized without some action," Block said.

"We delivered a clear and concise message," he added. "Everyone understood it."

Block said major commodities at issue are wheat, flour and poultry. In the past 15 years, he noted, Europe has overtaken the United States as the world's leading poultry exporter.

He declined to elaborate on what the United States might do if European export subsidies are expanded, but he also said the highly subsidized agricultural economy of the 10-nation bloc is beginning to take its own toll.

"Their budget costs are becoming very, very excessive — $15 billion or so," Block said. "And as they look at this, they are looking at their future and they are not sure just how much they can continue to subsidize."

Block, looking back on the talks with the European leaders, said a major concern is that discussion of a tax on soybean oil was considerable.

"There was no indication that it would happen, and some of them said, 'We are outwardly against it,'" Block said. "Yet the fact that it has some visibility disturbs me."

The issue, he said, is not that the EEC has subsidized exports in the past and is continuing to do so now.

"As we look to the future, we feel that their internal agriculture policies continue to encourage excessive production that can only be disposed of through subsidy," Block said. "We are afraid that the level is going to continue to escalate and go up. That is our major concern."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government will allow no more than the already approved limit of peanuts to be imported into the United States this year.

Agriculture Secretary John Block said the current special import limit of 301.7 million pounds will expire July 31 as previously scheduled.

Block said expiration of the special import quota at that time would continue to ensure that the unusually large amount of peanut imports would not interfere with the sale of the American crop, which will not be marketed until later this summer.

The normal import quota is 1.7 million pounds, but it was increased by 200 million pounds in December in the wake of severe drought that damaged substantial portions of the 1980 U.S. crop.

President Reagan, acting on a recommendation by the International Trade Commission, raised the quota another 100 million pounds to 301.7 million in April to ensure sufficient domestic supplies until the new U.S. crop.

Block said current high market prices have discouraged stockpiling of the imported peanuts.

Through May, nearly 83 percent of the relaxed quota had been filled, the Agriculture Department reported, and foreign importers had requested government inspection for all but 900,000 pounds of the quota.

Sellers must complete negotiations for further imports under the relaxed quota by June 15.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has reorganized its Food Safety and Quality and Agricultural Marketing services in an attempt to separate their regulatory and marketing responsibilities.

Group goes after 'pusher' doctors

By LEIGH SHIRLEY Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. William B. Cromer had a coverly profitable practice. With a select group of "patients" and flexible office hours, he had it made. The only hitch — Dr. Cromer was a pusher.

Writing about 150 prescriptions a day, at a charge of $50 per prescription, Cromer was raking in nearly $7,500 every day and enjoying sexual favors from several of his patients, investigators said.

Cromer, who now is serving five years at a federal penitentiary on drug-related charges, was feeding anywhere from $25,000 to $100,000 worth of narcotics into the illicit drug market every day.

His practice could have continued if he had not been stopped by a small group of Dallas investigators responsible for putting drug-dealing physicians out of commission.

In the last 30 months, the diversionary unit of the Dallas Police Department has arrested eight doctors on criminal charges of prescribing controlled substances not in the usual course of professional practice for legitimate medical reasons.

Of those eight, seven were convicted on felony charges and one faces trial June 8 in a Dallas federal courtroom.

"Granted, most doctors — about 97 percent — are very careful about what they prescribe," said Sgt. A.J. Jones, who oversees the five-man diversionary unit. "But one doctor, if he so chooses, can put more drugs on the street in one day than any pusher."

"We aren't on a witch hunt, we just feel like doctors ought to do what they are licensed to do," he added.

A podiatrist, an M.D., an osteopath, a dentist, a psychiatrist — all have been targets of the unit's investigations, Jones said.

The common denominators among these doctors are money and sex, said Michael Sortore, an investigator with the Texas Board of Medical Examiners.

"They enjoy having the power to get all the sex and all types of sex that they want and make money, too."

Prescription drugs most frequently abused include pain killers, such as dilaudid, preludein and demerol, barbituates, amphetamines and tranquilizers, such as quaalude.

When Dr. Donald Wayne Hopkins, an osteopath, learned that he was being investigated for writing prescriptions illegally he joined the Army in an attempt to avoid prosecution, Jones said.

"On March 17 (1981), he enlisted and was sent to San Antonio, set to ship out for Germany on March 23," Jones said. "A day later, we got an indictment."

Jones said Army recruiters were "a little upset" that their prize catch turned out to be a "fugitive from justice."

Hopkins is scheduled to stand trial, beginning Monday, before U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders.

"We have taken some kind of action (in the last 30 months) against about 32 doctors, ranging from taking them to court to calling them and telling them to clean up their act," Jones said.

For doctors who knowingly violate the law, Jones said his investigators work up a criminal case or take the physician before the State Board of Medical Examiners in an effort to get his medical license suspended or revoked.

"It accomplishes basically the same thing — in jail or without a license — either way, they can't practice medicine," he said.

Some doctors carelessly or unknowingly prescribe dangerous drugs to people who funnel them onto the streets, Jones said.

Investigators usually ask them to voluntarily alter their registration — which allows them to prescribe controlled substances — to exclude the type of drug being abused.

"We try to determine what is the best course of action — if it would serve any useful purpose to pursue a criminal conviction," Jones said.

In one case, a psychiatrist's license was suspended when police discovered he had become an addict and was writing prescriptions illegally to support his habit.

"He agreed to get into a drug abuse program. In five years, if he has cleaned up his act, his license may be reinstated under probation," Jones said.

"Another psychiatrist told us sending him to jail would have served no useful purpose. It would have killed him."

When the Dallas diversionary unit was established, nearly seven years ago, it was set up to handle only prescription forgeries, Jones said.

"But the results really started about two and a half years ago, as far as doctors are concerned," he added. "It took us a while to learn the business."

Units, such as the one in Dallas, are relatively new, says Jim Flewellen, an investigator with the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Fort Worth, Houston, El Paso, Austin and most large cities have at least one officer working in this area, he said.

"Texas has a very good, aggressive operation overall. Some states have none," he said.

Diversionary units started popping up across the country primarily in the early 1970s, when states began passing their own controlled substances acts instead of depending on federal laws, Flewellen said.

Recently, Texas legislators have given police additional support by passing a major bill concerning prescriptions.

Under the new law, doctors must write prescriptions for certain controlled substances on numbered forms issued by the Texas Department of Public Safety. The forms, in triplicate, would be filed with the doctor, the pharmacist and the DPS.

A DPS computer would correlate the information and officials could easily spot doctors who may be abusing their prescription powers.

Officials say drugs covered by the bill make up only 7 percent of all drug prescriptions.

The triplicate bill makes Texas one of four states, including California and New York, that have such a law.

Currently, investigators make daily trips to check pharmacy files for large numbers of controlled substances prescribed by a single doctor to a small number of people, Jones said.

"If a doctor specializes in cancer, (a large number of prescriptions for pain killers) wouldn't be that unusual," he said. "But if it's a dentist or podiatrist, that's another matter."

The local medical community supports the investigators' efforts, Jones said. Expert testimony often comes from members of the Dallas County Medical Society.

"Without expert testimony there would be no prosecution," said Robert

Heath, a spokesman for the society. "We help ... because we feel that when drug dealing begins, that's not the practice of medicine."

Inflation theory is 'mad'

NEW YORK (AP) — It is now almost an article of faith that domestic inflation is caused by excessive growth of the money supply, and it is a dictum of monetary policy that high interest rates are the cure.

It is the uncritical acceptance of this analysis, and the resulting course of action, that explains why men such as John Wright can be seen holding their heads and looking baffled, frustrated and angry.

To Wright, who founded and presides over a respected service for institutional investors, including many banks, the theory is mindless and the course of action destructive. In short, it is mad.

If continued, he states in an analysis issued recently from Wright Investors' Service headquarters in Bridgeport, Conn., the current high interest rates "will destroy the American economic system."

First, "they take from the poor and add to the rich," says Wright, whose own portfolio choices regularly include the bluest of the blue chip stocks. He isn't against the rich; he is against poorness.

Next, he says, they diminish the producers and expand the lenders, and in his view that is somewhat contrary to the desires of most Americans. In his view, people have an instinctive desire to produce.

High rates "inhibit and diminish long-term capital investment, productivity, research, and development, production and development of new sources and efficient applications of energy."

"They are," he states, "bankrupting small businesses, increasing the concentration of economic productive power, drastically reducing effective, competitive price cutting and have caused the highest rate of bankruptcies in our history since the Great Depression."

But, the explanation goes on... this curtails excessive demands that were fueled in the past by excessive growth of money. Hogwash, says Wright. Inflation, he agrees, can be caused by excessive monetary growth, "but there has been no excessive monetary growth in the U.S. during the past decade."

If you want to find explanations for inflation, Wright argues, look at imported oil prices, for one thing, and for another, consider the growth of Eurodollars (dollar credits created abroad by banks which lend on dollar deposits). Some $550 billion of them have been created, doubling commodity prices and forcing up U.S. import prices.

James Randi, professional charlatan

EDITOR'S NOTE — He's a self-described professional charlatan, a magician, and the "green monkey" of Rumson, N.J. AP Newsfeatures Writer Kay Bartlett paid a visit to the "wizard of Rumson" for this tale of the supernatural — a term the "Amazing Randi" probably would challenge.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
RUMSON, N.J. (AP) — His Diners Club credit card lists his name and his game: "James Randi, Professional Charlatan." The door on his Tudor home opens on the wrong side after a recorded Wizard of Oz warns of the perils in seeing the wizard.

But the wizard comes to the door, as he always does, and allows as how he's on the phone, as he almost always is.

In the living room, one finds a large gold and blue macaw that squawks, "Hello, what's doing?" a smaller green parrot, this one uncaged, a larger-than-life green statue of a pharaoh wearing a black cape and top hat, a skull and crossbones perched atop a clock with the numbers one hour late, a butterfly collection on the mantle, a few swords and sabers leaning casually against a wall, a plaster mask of rock star Alice Cooper's head, various chess sets, the latest in electronic gadgetry, telescopes, two cats oblivious to the birds and a book case filled with such titles as "Houdini," "Ghosts and Photographs" and "Psychic Surgery."

The fresh daffodils are reassuring. Enter the wizard, short as wizards go and quite bald, but sporting a magnificent bushy white beard and blue eyes bursting with chicanery beneath equally bushy white eyebrows. He is master magician and escape artist "The Amazing Randi," a man who tirelessly tilts at the psychic healers, fortune tellers, metaphysical key benders, dowzers, ESP practitioners, housewives who claim they can help solve murder cases and so on down the list of flim-flam.

He says they're all full of "bull poop" and he carries a dog-eared $10,000 check to back up that challenge. Randi says he will gladly turn it over to the first person who can make one — just one — accurate but not obvious prediction, anyone who can move anything by psychic powers or find one missing child. Ditto to those with divining rods looking for water, astral projectionists, not-so-affectionately labeled "half-astral projectionists," the biorhythm crowd, et al.

Be forewarned that Randi himself can make a great deal move around this house of indeterminate gables, a do-it-yourself TV studio and a refrigerator containing human blood — all the better for the psychic surgery he's willing to perform, and then debunk, on stage, screen or live TV studio.

And if you're not up for that, he will gladly stop watches, bend keys, make pencils move without touching them — all "miracles of a semi-religious nature" as he entertainingly calls them, or "feats of clay," i.e., that good old-fashioned magic he performed under his mentor, magician Harry Blackstone.

Randi's $10,000 lure has been out there for over 15 years and some 600 have tried for it. Only 60 passed preliminary tests to demonstrate any remote probability they could collect and none of those even came close. Meanwhile, Randi gleefully notes, he pays the mortgage on his house with the interest the money earns.

"The money has never been safer," he observes, although the number of psychics is proliferating. Randi has 11 ground rules governing the bet, all of which he will mail to you fully notarized. Among other things, the claims must be outlined in advance, the odds must be fairly long and judging will depend upon the nature of the claim.

For instance, astral projectionists claim they can send their consciousness out of their bodies to distant places — Jupiter seems increasingly popular — and then report back on what they saw. Randi just asks them to transit upstairs in his 12-room house and tell what object is on the table in the locked room. Nobody has succeeded.

He says there's a difference between those who really think they have psychic powers and those that are just out and out fakers. In that latter category he includes the most famous, people like Uri Geller, Jeanne Dixon, Peter Hurkos of Boston strangler fame, and Dorothy Allison, New Jersey housewife who recently went to Atlanta to help solve the murders of the children, and, of course, Tamara Rand, the psychic who faked the broadcast forecast of the assassination attempt on President Reagan. Randi says people who believe they are psychic often get so carried away by near misses they start rationalizing those as hits. When there is a hit — as the laws of chance determine there will be — they delude themselves into believing they felt that much more strongly than any other guess. Friends then start believing and they, too, start shading test results, usually unintentionally.

Randi's aim with these people is just education. With the others, the frauds, he's got a more forceful approach. Put up or shut up. Or, continue what they're doing but admit what they are — professional charlatans, conjurers, magicians, entertainers, call it what they will but don't call it psychic.

Randi doesn't flatly say that all of these things, ESP and the like, don't exist. He simply says he has not seen one shred of evidence that it does. And, he stresses over and over, the burden of proof is on them.

"There's a great deal more evidence that Santa Claus exists. I've seen pictures and drawings of a fat man in a red suit," mocks Randi. "Now if someone could only come up with a flying reindeer..."

Born Randall James Zwinge 52 years ago in Toronto, Randi left home at 17 to join the carnival. The son of a telephone company executive, Randi says he was a child prodigy of sorts.

"I had a very nasty time of it as a child. There was no one to talk to. There were no special schools for children back then." Even with his rather anti-social personality, Randi says, he was offered scholarships in physics and chemistry, but chose instead to become Prince Ibis, replete with turban and beard. Later he changed his act and became Randall the Telepath. Then he discovered something truly amazing — people believed his act was real.

"They thought I was a psychic. They would come and ask me about all sorts of important things. When I tried to explain it was trickery they wouldn't believe me."

He then went to Montreal and opened a night club act as a more traditional rabbit-out-of-the-hat magician, with a repertoire of Houdini-like escapes. Often compared to Houdini, Randi has among his credits an escape from a straightjacket while hanging upside down over Niagara Falls.

Randi did well on American TV in the '50s and took over a late night call-in show on a New York radio station in the '60s, again to see that more and more believed in psychic bunk.

ABRACADABRA. Randall James Zeige, 52, better known as "The Amazing Randi," shows a young visitor to his home in New Jersey the trick to bending a key. Randi believes all the famous psychics of today are simply magicians of one sort or another, including New Jersey housewife Dorothy Allison who recently tried to solve the murders of Atlanta's children. He says that the most incredible part of an act he did called "Randall the Telepath," was that people thought he was for real. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

America's first zoo is alluring

EDITOR'S NOTE — Philadelphia's animal house, officially the Philadelphia Zoological Gardens — the zoo — is the nation's oldest. It will be 107 years old in July. Much has changed since the opening, but much has not. It's still alluring fun for children, of all ages.

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mormon leader Brigham Young gave two bears.

President Ulysses Grant sent two curassows, chicken-like birds from South America.

Mrs. William Tecumseh Sherman even offered the cow, "Atlanta," which had accompanied her husband on his march through Georgia.

So a zoo was born. It was America's first, on the drawing board for 15 years but interrupted by the Civil War. The date was July 1, 1874.

A brass band was playing and flags were flying and steamboats plied the nearby Schuylkill River, ferrying people to The Great Event.

Few, if any, in that bubbling crowd had ever seen a zoo and so they didn't know just what to do — certainly not the middle-aged maiden who was about to be in distress.

There was this big elephant. And it started ambulating toward her.

That's when she dropped her parasol and started for the tree, not noticing the chain connecting the elephant's foot to a mighty oak.

Not meeting with encouraging success in this attempt (at tree climbing), she gave a despairing look toward her enemy and, noticing the chain, quickly picked up her parasol and, of course, glanced around to see if anyone was looking. "Noted a reporter for the old Philadelphia Press who witnessed the event.

Almost 107 years have passed since then. Some things have changed at Philadelphia's Zoological Gardens. Some haven't.

Money is still the biggest worry, according to Dr. Wilbur B. Amand, the zoo's current director and senior veterinarian.

Differences? Zoos are becoming more selective in their collections and seeking out endangered species.

"They are realizing that they are not strictly entertainment institutions anymore. Education about conservation, about the threat of extinction, is equally important," Amand says.

"We have to make space by not having one of everything you can get your hands on. It's not a stamp collection. We feel we have a responsibility to future generations — to give them a chance to know, say, a Siberian tiger by seeing one alive, not a stuffed one in some museum."

The Philadelphia Zoo was modeled after the Regent's Park Zoo in London. And although many of the original buildings are gone now, there's still an old-fashioned air to the place with shrub-lined promenades, wrought iron fences and copper weather vanes.

It sits on 42 acres in Fairmount Park, said to be the largest single city park in the United States. The older buildings are slate-roofed, flanked by stout old trees — gingkoes from China, Japanese pagodas, mock oranges and wisteria.

America's first zoo (Cincinnati's opened in 1875; the London Zoo — oldest in the modern world — in 1829) claims many firsts. Among them:

— The first zoo in the world to breed and rear orangutans (1928) and cheetahs (1956).

and the first in the United States to breed and rear chimpanzees (1930) and trumpeter swans (1965).

— The first zoo in the United States to exhibit its primates behind glass, thus resulting in the "complete elimination of tuberculosis, formerly a major scourge among monkeys and apes."

— The first zoo to study animal diets on a wide scale and to feed its collection scientifically, including giving its flamingos carrot juice to keep their feathers pink. The work is carried out at the Penrose Research Laboratory, the first such research center to be established at an American zoo (1901).

— The first major zoo in the nation to open a children's petting zoo (May 1, 1938).

It may have been the first to ban the sale of peanuts.

In March of 1888 the ban was ordered after zoo officials argued that peanuts spoiled the animals' appetites and provided little nourishment.

Victim shot down under welcome sign

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 24-year-old man was shot and mortally wounded from ambush Monday night as he walked beneath the welcome canopy of a bar, police report.

Felipe Carvajal was shot twice in the left side of the chest and died later during surgery at Baptist Memorial Hospital.

Customers at the Villa Ice House said Carvajal was leaving the lounge when they heard two shots apparently fired from a white automobile that sped away from a nearby parking lot.

The investigation continued today.

Club, theater offer film festival

A family film festival will be presented on the second and fourth Tuesdays in July and August at the Cinema III theater in Coronado Center.

The festival is sponsored by Twentieth Century Forum Study Club, in cooperation with the theater. Co-chairmen of the event are Mrs. Billy Hawkins and Mrs. Steve McCullough.

Four film classics for viewers of all ages will be shown. Each film, starring top Hollywood film artists, will be shown at the Cinema III.

Schedule for the festival is: —7:05 p.m., Tuesday, July 14 — JUMBO, a musical comedy about a circus, starring Doris Day, Jimmy Durante and Stephen Boyd.

—7:05 p.m. Tuesday, July 28 — NATIONAL VELVET, starring Elizabeth Taylor and Mickey Rooney.

—7:05 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11 — THE YEARLING. The son of a Florida Everglades pioneer family raises a pet deer. Starring Gregory Peck, Jane Wyman and Claude Jarman Jr.

—7:05 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 25 — A surprise film to be announced.

Advance discount ticket books for all films in the festival are being sold by study club members. Adult ticket books are $8 each (for ages 12 and up), and one child ticket book is $4. Advance tickets offer a $4 savings for adults and a $2 savings for children. Individual tickets at regular theater rates will be sold only at the theater on the night of each performance.

Tickets may be bought any Friday in June at the First National Bank or at Citizens Bank and Trust. Tickets are also available at Texas Furniture Co., Barber's Gifts and from Twentieth Century Forum Study Club members.

Proceeds from the family film festival will go toward college scholarships, which have been offered by the study club throughout its 52-year existence. The 1981 scholarship recipient is Melanie Garrett, daughter of Mrs. Betty Jo Garrett and Bill Garrett.

Tickets for the festival may be ordered by calling 669-6524.

Twentieth Century Forum officers for 1981-82 are Mrs. William L. Hallberg, president; Mrs. Kenneth W. Fields, vice-president; Mrs. John W. Sparkman, secretary; Mrs. Joe L. Turner, treasurer; Mrs. Robert R. Williams Jr., parliamentarian; and Mrs. Doug Carmichael, reporter.

CO-CHAIRMEN. Cynthia Hawkins, left, and Debi McCullough, co-chairmen of the family film festival sponsored by the Twentieth Century Forum Study Club and the Cinema III theater, look over information about each of the four films to be shown during July and August.

Start African violets from seed

By Sheila and Allan Swenson

There's a growing dimension for African violets this year. You can sprout hardy hybrid plants that bloom profusely directly from seed. The flowers are speckled, bicolored, even patterned.

Many have double flowers much like camellias, and a few have variegated foliage in pink, white, cream or light green. Some of the characteristics of these Park's Fantasy hybrids have never been available in African violets grown from seed.

These new varieties have come from two independent hobbyists. One of these enthusiasts, Dr. Ron Nadeau of St. Louis, has created new varieties with a color range that includes pink, maroon, red, white and purple. Some of his creations are bicolored in different shades with unusually variegated leaves.

Unlike those who propagate from cuttings to produce plants identical to the parent, African violet hybridizers never know what to expect in their progeny.

"That's half the fun of it," Nadeau says. "I grow African violets with the idea that I can create something which never existed before and that can be carried on forever."

Since he began breeding violets professionally, Nadeau has named some 60 varieties. He's working diligently to produce many more.

Betty Waugh of Statesboro, Ga., is another plant breeder who has created many new fantasy hybrids. Many of these display a profusion of huge double blooms. Some are striped, picotee, speckled or flecked. Others are solid colors, and one is lime green.

You can grow African violets from seed successfully with these basic steps.

Use a soil-less mix. Ms. Waugh adds Peters 15-30-15 fertilizer, a quarter teaspoon per gallon of water. Nadeau uses a quarter teaspoon of Rapid-Grow per gallon of water.

Then spread the seeds on the surface of a 4-inch pot and spray with the fertilizer solution. Cover with clear plastic and place the pots 1 foot below a fluorescent light. Leave the lights on 14 hours a day to warm the starting medium to a temperature of 75 to 85 degrees F.

Moisture beads should form inside the plastic on the first day. If not, add water. When seedlings reach 1/4 inch high, remove the plastic. When they are large enough to be transplanted, move them carefully into larger permanent pots.

Dear Abby

Secretary follows dictates of conscience

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from NO GUTS, on secretaries doing personal work for bosses:

That problem will never improve unless we secretaries speak up for our rights. It isn't necessary to be discourteous or surly; a simple "I prefer not to do your personal correspondence for you" should suffice.

I've done secretarial work for 10 years and have always spoken out when I've felt a boss's request was an imposition on my workload.

The idea of the catch-all underling secretary and the big superior boss will disappear only when secretaries stop thinking of themselves in those terms. My three basic rules:

1. Take your complaints to your boss, not to everyone in the office.
2. Don't compromise your values by doing anything that is against your principles.
3. Don't do extra work without pay. No one else does.

MAD IN SIERRA FOOTHILLS, CALIF.

DEAR MAD: Your "basic rules" are fine, but in applying for any kind of job, it is essential to have a clear-cut understanding of what the job will consist of. However, the applicant for a secretarial position who tells a prospective employer that she "prefers to do no personal correspondence" may be looking for a job for a very long time.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a psychiatrist. A patient has asked him to play the role of her father (give her away) at her wedding. The ceremony is taking place in Nevada and she will pay for his trip. I was not invited.

When I objected to my husband going without me, he said that there was no "mother figure" in therapy, and he was annoyed that I would object. I don't feel good about this and would appreciate your thoughts on the matter.

LEFT OUT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR LEFT OUT: It's not unusual for a psychiatrist to become a father figure in the course of therapy, and in some therapeutic situations he might even act as a surrogate father at a patient's wedding — assuming her own father is dead. However, you should have been invited to accompany your husband, and your husband should have insisted upon it.

...

DEAR ABBY: A waitress in Milwaukee asked why people always seem to want tables that have not been cleared. You said it was because of the coziness of clutter. Well, there are other reasons:

Waiters and waitresses know which tables are the least desirable, and they try to get those tables filled up first. For instance, if a table is under an air-conditioning vent, or near the radiator, or right next to the restroom, or in the line of traffic, or facing the wall, or too near the kitchen, or too close to the music, it's not the best table in the house.

On the other hand, some people prefer a table near a window so they can watch their car or enjoy the view. Some people choose a table so they can be in a certain station to get a preferred waiter or waitress. Some like to watch the door so they can see who comes in (especially if they're with someone they don't want to be seen with). And some people sit at a table that hasn't been cleared to ensure instant service. They know that the waitress will be there in two seconds to be sure the newcomers don't pick up her tip!

Prepare for summer heat by servicing air conditioner

PHOENIX, Ariz. — One of the sure ways to beat the heat this summer is to tune up the evaporative cooler.

New pads, a touch of oil and paint here and there and a quick check to see that belts are tight, the water level is right and the unit is clean are about all the work needed to insure cool inside weather on those hot summer days.

Homeowners who maintain their coolers should follow specific brand and model use and care manuals carefully when performing the work.

Local air conditioning contractors also perform routine maintenance work.

Be sure all power to the evaporative cooler is disconnected before beginning maintenance tasks. It is also a good idea to wear shoes with non-slip soles if work must be done on the roof. Never drain water on a roof. Instead, use a hose to drain water to the ground or rain gutter. Wear gloves when handling cooler pads.

Cooler pads should be changed at least twice each year — at the beginning and midway through the season. In areas where mineral content in the water is high, pads might need to be changed more often. Mineral deposits could build up on the pads to restrict water and air flows.

When changing pads, carefully remove all pad frame retainers. Wash dirt and scale from the cooler pad frames with a mild detergent and rinse with fresh water.

Pre-soak each pad and lay in the frame, starting at the trough end. Make sure the pads are snug against the trough and outer edges. Pad thickness should be uniform across the frame. Each pad must also completely fill each frame. Pad retainers should lock under the edges of the frame and the sharp points buried in the pads.

After installing the new pre-soaked pads, start the pump and allow troughs to fill. Then check the water levels in the troughs by slightly tilting each pad frame out.

Each time the cooler is inspected, check the belt tension on the motor-blower assembly. Replace the belt if it is frayed or appears damaged. At the same time, check the alignment of the blower and motor pulleys.

Blower shaft bearings will need lubrication every two or three months under normal use. Fill the oil cups on the blower shaft with a good grade SAE 20 or 30-weight oil. Do not over-oil. Pump and blower motors do not require lubrication.

The cooler pump also needs periodic cleaning. With the power supply to the cooler unplugged, disconnect the pump from the switch and remove. Remove the impeller base plate from the pump body by carefully releasing the four snap-out tabs. Wash all deposits from the inside, around the impeller and base plate with a mild detergent solution. Then rinse, re-install impeller and base plate and replace pump.

Never wash the cooler's cabinet with a garden hose because water could harm the motor and pump, or seep into the ductwork.

Clean the cabinet with power off and frames removed. Connect a drain hose to the drain fitting on the bottom of the reservoir. Then remove the standpipe from the drain fitting, drain and clean.

Bare metal spots should be retouched with a good grade paint or rust inhibitor when necessary. Cabinet and internal parts should be primed and painted and the reservoir interior should be coated with an asphalt base paint.

TEXAS GRILLED SPANISH MACKEREL

Spanish mackerel, Texas style

TEXAS GRILLED SPANISH MACKEREL
3 pounds dressed Spanish mackerel or other dressed fish, fresh or frozen
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves, crushed

1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon monosodium glutamate

Thaw fish if frozen. Combine lemon juice, olive oil, salt, oregano, garlic salt, pepper and monosodium glutamate. Make 4 to 5 shallow slits on each side of each fish. Brush fish inside and outside with sauce. Place fish in well-greased, hinged, wire grills. Cook about 4 inches from moderately hot coals for 5 to 8 minutes. Baste with sauce. Turn. Cook for 5 to 8 minutes longer or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Makes 6 servings.

Eliminate waste to save on grocery bill

By EDWARD STILES
Tucson Citizen
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — You could save as much as 15 percent on your grocery bills by eating your garbage — or, more precisely, by cutting down on waste that becomes garbage, a University of Arizona professor says.

Anthropologist William Rathje and his students have been studying Tucson's garbage for the past seven years, much as archeologists study the trash piles left by vanished civilizations to learn more about how they lived.

They have found that Tucsonians throw out 15 percent of the food they buy. And it isn't just table scraps. Most of it, 70 percent in fact, is untouched — whole cuts of meat, unopened canned goods, loaves of bread and other items.

"With $9 to $12 million of food going to waste in Tucson each year, we all could save a good bit of money by watching how we eat," he said.

Rathje has some simple methods for cutting down on waste. The suggestions cut across lines of class and income because Rathje has found that those factors have little to do with the amount of food people throw away.

He says the majority of the food found in garbage still looks good, but people apparently are afraid to eat it because they've had it too long.

He's not suggesting that people eat something that might be unsafe. What he is suggesting is that they avoid getting into the position of making the decision in the first place.

So the first rule in saving money on the grocery bill is to stay away from specialty items as much as possible. Buy food that has a wide range of uses and that can be consumed quickly. Buy a standard loaf of bread, for instance, instead of hot-dog buns and hamburger buns.

And if that bread still goes stale, use it for toast or bread crumbs.

Experimenting with food also leads to waste, he explains. People who buy the same kind of food all the time may have more boring diets, but they also waste less. They know how long it takes the food to spoil, they know how to prepare it and, therefore, make fewer cooking mistakes.

Above all, don't succumb to panic buying. Rathje cautions: People wasted beef when beef prices skyrocketed. The same thing happened when sugar suddenly became more expensive. Some people apparently started to hoard food, but didn't store it properly and it spoiled.

Some started experimenting with cheaper cuts of meat. Because they were unfamiliar with how to prepare the new food, they didn't like the taste.

When sugar prices increased, some Tucsonians began experimenting with new desserts, only to throw them out when they found they didn't like the taste. The message is simple: Don't change your eating habits overnight in response to prices. Gradual change will mean less waste.

"You can lose a lot of money trying to buy around price increases," Rathje said.

In families where both husband and wife work, it's a good idea to be conservative when buying fresh food, Rathje said. Fresh food often is green or blue or soggy by the time someone finds enough time to make a home-cooked dinner.

June 11, 1981

Before this year is over, you are likely to end up with a much larger circle of friends than when you started. Several of these pals will have a great influence on your life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have good leadership and organizational qualities today. You'll fare well in most areas. However, your skills may not extend to financial realms, so be careful. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're very capable of doing what needs doing today once you feel the prod of pressure. It will awaken your determination.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're not the type to be envious of the accomplishments of others. Today, when you learn of what another did, it will inspire you to equal those efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Obstructions which could have deprived you of financial reward or career advancement are likely to be lessened at this time. Get going.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Situations similar to those which you've handled successfully in the past may develop today. Draw upon your memory. Use the same methods which worked previously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your intuition and instinct in business matters today could be a major contributor to your success. Listen to the dictates of your small, inner voice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may have been wondering lately just how loyal a certain friend would be when the chips are down. Today, he or she will prove a staunch ally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's not likely you'll be second best in any competitive situations today, especially if they affect your work or career. Run for the tape.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try to break away from what you deem to be dull routines today in order to do things which are more fun and exciting. You need activities with a change of pace.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Changing conditions tend to benefit you at this time, even those which you don't personally inaugurate. Ride to success on the tide of happenings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This should be a generally pleasant day. You'll know how to restore harmony even if situations do get a bit out of kilter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have a few extra tasks to contend with today, but don't let this disturb you. Actually, you should find the busier your schedule is, the better you'll perform.

NINE OF THE WORLD'S 10 busiest commercial airports are in the United States. As ranked by the Airport Operators Council International, representing governmental bodies responsible for public airports, the leaders is Chicago's O'Hare International through which passed some 43.7 million passengers in 1980. Second is Atlanta's new international facility with 40.2 million passengers. The only non-American airport in the top 10 is London's Heathrow, which placed fourth in 1980 traffic. According to the council's count, 596 million passengers used U.S. airports during the year and the worldwide total was 890 million.

A story about a giraffe

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — There's a most story about these two circus roustabouts trying to load a reticulated giraffe onto an airplane for a special engagement in Las Vegas.

Former legislator sought by police

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austin police are looking for former state Rep. Fred Head of Athens, who has been named in five warrants charging him with misdemeanor violations of housing codes.

The charges, dating back to March 1980, allege that three houses owned by Head are substandard and dangerous. In addition, Head owes $2,200 in city and school taxes on six local properties.

I hope you haven't heard it already. Good. Well, it seems there were these two circus roustabouts...

Yes, Miss, we'll have cocktails... Anyhow, these two circus hands had this giraffe in a cage on the back of a fork lift truck... Twisted? Yes, Miss, that'll be fine, a twist in the martini.

Getting back to these two chaps with the giraffe in the cargo area at Kennedy Airport. You see, one of them was a rather crude Alabama redneck, the other was a way out Ivy League drop-out who had joined the circus after living in one of those scream therapy clinics in California, and the two of them... Oh, menus already? We'll have another round of drinks while we see about our orders

You see, once they got the giraffe aboard the Boeing 747, it could stretch out, really up, to that little upstairs cubicle which they use as a first class lounge on passenger flights.

Salad dressings? Creamy Italian will do me. Ted prefers the house dressing and the other will have the Roquefort... Anyhow, giraffes have these long necks so they can eat the leaves and fruit at the top of the trees in the veldt or open savannas, which are their natural habitat. The redneck had the idea of stringing eucalyptus leaves at the head of the stairwell, but you must remember this was a reticulated giraffe, which is not exactly spotted but has kind of a network of bands or ribbons.

So they went ahead and hung these leaves and some pomegranates high up inside the plane, but the hippie type also added some hallucinogenic mushrooms... Anyhow, the zonked out roustabout had neglected to tell his partner he had just released a reticulated python in order to... Here comes our orders now. That's right, Miss, I'm the creamy Italian and Ted is the house dressing. The rest are Roquefort. The Klutz, you see, had brought along the python to tie down the giraffe...

NEW YORK (AP) — There may be more than one way to skin a cat, but only one man is willing to risk the wrath of 23 million cat lovers with 101 suggestions for what to do with the hide.

That man is Simon Bond, a 33-year-old Englishman who professes to love cats even though they make him sneeze.

His best-selling book, entitled "101 Uses for a Dead Cat," is a dementedly whimsical collection of cartoons purporting to show how cats can be useful even after they've exhausted their nine lives. Some call it disgusting, obscene, sadistic, horrible and sick. Others call it very funny. And everybody calls it very, very successful.

Already, 200,000 copies of the $2.95 book published by Clarkson N. Potter Inc. of New York are in print, pushing it well past the "cat books" it spoofs. It's even more popular than the recent publishing phenomenon "The Official Preppie Handbook," which spoofed an altogether different sort of cat.

Bond's uncaptioned drawings show stuffed cats used as bookends on the mantle above a fireplace and as little throw rugs, like bearskins, before the hearth.

"Monstrous and obscene," Roy Youngdale of Los Altos, Calif., said in one of dozens of outraged letters received by the publisher from cat fanciers. "An open call to sadism."

Bond, who said he got the idea for the 95-page book during a conversation with friends in Britain's zany Monty Python comedy troupe, has sketched rigor mortis cats with tails sharpened so they can be thrown at dartboards.

"Weirdness," wrote Nancy Orr of Tampa, Fla. One of Bond's kitty carcasses has been hollowed into a bowling ball bag; several others are mounted above prison fences with their tiny ears holding barbed wire in place.

"The death of a cat is not a funny circumstance," Ann Green-Cloutier of Warren, R.I., wrote. A cat's foreleg serves as a tone arm on a phonograph and a carcass draped over a teapot as a cozy. One flattened kitty, grasped by the tail, serves as a tennis racket. Another squished feline, without tail, is a perfect Frisbee.

One writer, W. Michael Long, suggested another book: "101 Uses for a Dead Simon Bond." The book also depicts four cats as dining table legs, while a cat on its hindquarters with forelegs extended is a functional wine rack. Two tails are portrayed as windshield wipers and little paws are transformed into rubber stamps.

"Horrible," wrote Laurie Zane. "This man must be a sad and despicable human being." Actually, Bond is a rather impish fellow whose asthma and allergies led him to move to Phoenix, Ariz., several years ago.

His cartoons have been published in magazines like Esquire and the New Yorker, but Bond swore in an interview that he had never earned more than $10,000 in a single year — until now.

He said "101 Uses" was put together for fun, not money. "I couldn't have done the book if I thought it was terrible," he protested. "I'm the first to start sneezing when a cat comes round, but I'm also the first to start petting it." Nancy White Kahan, the publicist promoting "101 Uses," says more than 200,000 copies of the book have been printed, and booksellers are ordering in quantities, surpassing the previous record fast-seller, "The Official Preppie Handbook."

This week "101 Uses" hit No. 7 on the New York Times list of trade book bestsellers and No. 1 on the Walden and Dalton bestseller lists, ahead of other books in the cat category like "The Official I Hate Cats Book," the "Catcalender" and "Garfield Gains Weight."

Despite the letters, Ms. Kahan says booksellers report most of the buyers are cat fanciers. "A few people have just lost their sense of humor and their perspective over it," she said.

Psychologist Joyce Brothers agrees. While Bond's catty humor may be slightly sick, she said, it is nonetheless a harmless sort of comedy that produces laughter and relieves tension. "It's a put-on," she said. "If you get upset at this, you have too much emotional involvement in your pet."

There have been favorable letters, too. One arrived on the stationery of the Bahrain Dead Cat Society, purportedly from the State of Bahrain on the Arabian Gulf. The group's motto is "Felix Morte," and its cable address is FLATCAT.

The society said it was "eagerly" ordering five copies to share with its affiliates. And who are they?

Group plans commercial space launches

HOUSTON (AP) — NASA mapped the trail America blazed in space and found a way to make it profitable with a reusable craft that climbs to orbit on tongues of fire and then glides to earth — but now a Houston company plans to compete with the government agency by selling the cosmos at a discount.

Space Services Inc. can't match the cut-rate fee for the Space Shuttle, but the shuttle already is booked through 1985 and company officials say they can beat the price

NASA charges for launching satellites with the more conventional Delta rockets. "Private space launch is the wave of the future," said Gary Hudson, whose GCH Inc. is building the Percheron rocket that Space Services officials hope will make space a paying venture.

"It's a seller's market," said Space Services Vice President Charles Chafer. "There appear to be many more people who want to put things in orbit than there are people who can do so."

Space Services has not put anything into space, but Chafer said preliminary testing has been completed on the first Percheron — a rocket named for a work horse and modeled on those NASA used in early manned flights.

Chafer said the company will conduct three 30-second test burns in early July. "We're not counting on more than a 50-50 chance that those will be successful, but if they are, we'll try to have a (sub-orbital) flight up in July," Chafer said.

Space Services President David Hannah Jr. said that first flight, which the company intends to launch from a leased site on Matagorda Island on the Texas Gulf coast, is intended chiefly to demonstrate that the company has the right stuff.

He said the 53-foot-long rocket is expected to reach an altitude of about 50 miles and splash down in the Gulf of Mexico.

"If this is successful, I think we will have established our credibility," said Hannah.

However, a successful flight still hinges on government approval, and the government has yet to say if it will allow private companies to launch rockets, or to what extent it will regulate whatever space flights are made. "I'm just not ready to make a formal judgment," said David Small, space specialist for the State Department's legal office. But he noted the so-called Outer Space Treaty of 1967 calls for government supervision.

And Peter Eaton, NASA program director for Delta Launch Vehicles, said he believes private groups have no place in the space business.

"If they launch their rocket and it comes down in the middle of downtown wherever, who's going to pay the damages?" Eaton asks. "The cutting edge of all this is whether the government will say, 'Well, the government's got to do this kind of work,'" said Hannah.

"If it does, then I think we really have given ourselves over to a socialistic form of government."

He said the company carries $25 million in flight insurance and has two prospective launch sites — that will allow launches over larger bodies of water than the Matagorda Island site — for its orbital flights. He declined to discuss where the sites are located.

He said if the first flight is successful, Space Services will attempt to put a payload in orbit about 80 miles high at the end of the year.

Hudson said Space Services will charge much less than NASA for the same job, profitably inserting satellites — such as those used in weather observation — in a 100-mile high orbit for about $2 million.

And he predicted a $5 million price tag for sending communications satellites into geosynchronous orbit, where the payload constantly remains about 23,000 miles above the same point on Earth.

NASA officials say it costs about $22 million for the lower orbit and $25 million for the higher one with Delta rockets carrying 2,400 pound payloads comparable to those foreseen for the Percheron.

However, NASA spokesman Terry White said the Space Shuttle can carry 65,000 pounds of payload into space for $26.3 million, which breaks down to a bargain-basement price of slightly more than $400 a pound.

Eaton laughed at Hudson's cost estimates and said Space Services' executives probably don't realize how complicated space flight is.

"Are they aware that I've got a staff of several thousand people working in a program that launched 10 flights last year?" asked Eaton.

Final arguments set in swine flu suit

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A U.S. District Judge has scheduled final arguments in the suit a 78-year-old woman filed against the federal government because a swine flu shot she received in 1976 allegedly left her paralyzed.

Judge Hal Woodward ordered closing statements by both sides to begin today at 10 a.m. The suit was filed in 1978 by Hettie Terrell of Sweetwater and asks for $150,000 in damages.

Ms. Terrell claims that she received the shot in October 1976 at a National Guard Army and was paralyzed by December.

She testified earlier this week she took the shot because she heard "it (the flu) was awful for old people and going to kill them."

"I was paralyzed and could not even go to church," Ms. Terrell, who walks with the aid of a cane, testified. She said she was hospitalized for three months, then spent a month in a rest home and received physical therapy for eight months after she got the shot.

Justice Department attorneys representing the government are contending that the woman could not have become paralyzed because of the vaccine.

Dr. Paul Mani, an Abilene urologist, testified that he treated Ms. Terrell in December 1976 and diagnosed her as having post-vaccination polyneuritis and encephalitis.

He said the woman's bladder was paralyzed when she came to him for treatment.

NEW YORK (NEA) — Debate continues over what U.S. policy should be toward human-rights violations abroad. Jacobo Timerman is one who cannot accept the premise advanced by Jeane Kirkpatrick, ambassador to the United Nations, that authoritarian right-wing regimes do less damage to people than totalitarian communist regimes.

"For America to maintain its stature as a world power," says the Argentine journalist, "it cannot choose to fight only the Soviets for violating human rights. It must fight fascism at the same time. There is no difference between violations by the left or the right."

Timerman speaks from personal experience — painful personal experience, which he has recorded in a brutal new book "Prisoner Without a Name, Cell Without a Number" (Knopf). The slim memoir is already in its fourth printing.

It was April 1977 when Timerman, prominent editor-publisher of one of Buenos Aires' daily newspapers, was arrested by a faction of the right-wing armed forces that still control Argentina. He was thrown in the back of a car and driven to a prison.

Experience of political prisoner Torture part of man's history

JACOBO TIMERMAN: "For America to maintain its stature as a world power, it cannot choose to fight only the Soviets for violating human rights. It must fight fascism at the same time. There is no difference between violations by the left or the right."

"I was never accused of any crime," says Timerman, 58, who now lives in Israel with his wife and children.

But he was an enemy of the state, for publishing in his newspaper the names of the people who kept disappearing. It is estimated that as many as 20,000 citizens were kidnapped and murdered by the armed forces in the 1970s.

Argentina were: rural and urban Trotskyite guerrillas; right-wing Peronist death squads; armed terrorist groups of the large labor unions, used for handling union matters; paramilitary army groups, dedicated to avenging the murder of their men; para-police groups of both the left and the right vying for supremacy within the organization of federal and provincial police forces; and terrorist groups of Catholic rightists.

He saw how it happened, but he still doesn't understand why. "A British journalist," he says, "once wrote that the greatest political mystery of the century is the failure of Argentina as a nation. There is no explanation.

Timerman has accepted an invitation to spend a semester at Princeton University's Institute of Advanced Studies. "I want to see if at this place I can go back to being the man I was before," he says. "Not by reliving the experience but by building a bridge over it. I hope to write another book about this process. Maybe it will be helpful to the thousands of others who have been political prisoners. I'm not the only man on earth who has been tortured."

"People say to me that it is unbelievable what has happened in Argentina. I say that if you see a tiger torturing another tiger that is unbelievable. But a man torturing another man? This is part of man's history."

News in brief

MORTON GROVE, Ill. (AP) — Owning or possessing a handgun in this Chicago suburb will draw penalties of up to $500 in fines and six months in jail when ordinances outlawing the weapons go into effect at the end of summer.

Despite strong public opposition, trustees voted Monday to ban sale and possession of handguns in hope their action will tell lawmakers across the country "they too can do something about the senseless, wasteful injuries and deaths that are directly related to handguns."

Only seven of 44 witnesses at the hearing supported the ordinances in this village of 30,000. Some 300 people attended the meeting.

Police officers and certain kinds of guards, in addition to licensed gun collectors, will be allowed to have guns. Citizens would be permitted to turn in handguns to the village police without penalty or reimbursement.

Lorraine Mitchell, president of the Federation of Alberta Students, recently returned from a three-week visit to Chilean universities. She told a news conference Tuesday that 120 university students were banished to remote areas last year for periods of up to six months.

MOSCOW (AP) — A Syrian military officer stationed in Moscow has been stabbed to death near his downtown apartment, diplomatic sources report.

The sources said the officer was believed to be with the military attaché's office at the Syrian Embassy. They said he left his apartment last weekend after getting a telephone call and later his body was found.

Notes from the Capitol

CHARLES RICHARDS, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas' population leaped by 27.1 percent during the 1970s, about 2 1/2 times the national increase, according to figures released Tuesday by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The jump from 11.2 million to 14.2 million residents in the decade will mean an increase in the state's congressional delegation to 27 from 24.

Texas' seventh district, represented by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, was the third-fastest growing area in the nation. Census Bureau figures show. The area of west Houston jumped from 466,336 residents in 1970 to 867,726 in 1980, a gain of 86.1 percent.

Of the present 24 districts, 22 showed gains over the past decade. The only ones with fewer residents than in 1970 were the 18th, an inner-city district in Houston represented by Rep. Mickey Leland, and the 20th, which is made up of the city of San Antonio, represented by Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez.

Leland's district declined from 466,520 to 427,491, and Gonzalez' fell from 466,514 to 423,610.

With the 11.4 percent population increase nationwide, the new districts now being drawn up by state legislatures must include approximately 527,000 residents, about 60,000 more than 10 years ago.

Four Texas districts, in addition to those of Leland and Gonzalez, must take in more area this year because their growth was less than enough to put them at 527,000.

Those districts are the 5th of Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Dallas, 16,936 short; the 12th of House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, 19,817 short; the 13th of Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, 21,364 short; and the 17th of Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, 22,948 short.

In contrast, Archer must lose 340,749 residents, or about 40 percent of his constituency, in the remapping process.

Besides Archer, seven Texas congressmen must lose more than 100,000 constituents in redistricting.

Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson, must lose 184,235; Jim Collins, R-Dallas, 169,104; Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, 151,402; Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, 149,092; Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, 132,268; Jake Pickle, D-Austin, 118,513; and Phil Gramm, D-College Station, 111,067.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should accelerate the decontrol of natural gas to encourage the exploration and production of the energy source, Rep. Jim Collins, R-Dallas, says.

He is a member of the Energy and Commerce Committee, which is in the process of reevaluating how much natural gas America has.

The nation has an estimated 200 trillion cubic feet of proven gas reserves and 913 trillion cubic feet of potential reserves, Collins said. "But drilling for gas is expensive and risky. There must be incentives there to make taking the risk worthwhile."

The Tuscaloosa Trend, a belt of natural gas formations along the Gulf Coast of Texas and Louisiana, is believed to have enough gas to last for 1,150 years, Collins said.

The Natural Gas Policy Act, passed in 1978, provides for phased-in decontrol of certain types of gas, and the short-term price incentives created an increase in exploration and drilling, he said.

"But as it is now, it is inadequate for the long run because it imposes 1970 prices on 1980 gas. If producers are limited to obsolete prices while incurring the higher costs of the 1980s, drilling will be discouraged," he said.

Collins has introduced legislation that would remove certain price controls from unproduced gas from a new reservoir or lease, or gas that is reached through an existing well if new drilling is required.

"Last year we sent $80 billion to OPEC to pay for imported oil. America must increase the domestic production of its energy sources," Collins said.

BOSTON (AP) — Arlo Guthrie's "Massachusetts" will become the official state folksong if an endorsement by the House is echoed by the Senate.

But the folksong bill endorsed without debate on a voice vote Tuesday reaffirms "All Hail Massachusetts" as the state song. The Arthur J. Marsh tune won that recognition in 1966.

GURNESS, Ill. (AP) — Nine of 53 people overcome by toxic chlorine gas at Marriott's Great America remained hospitalized, but the amusement park has reopened following repairs to the leaky tank.

Park employees discovered the leak Monday night and immediately turned off the valve on the 1,000-gallon tank of chlorine used to purify water in two of the park's rides, said Ron Johnson, general manager of the park. The park north of Chicago reopened Tuesday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas will get $125 million in military construction under a $6.98 billion military construction bill that has won approval in the House of Representatives.

Contained in the bill is $2.58 million for new construction at Bergstrom Air Force Base, outside Austin, for an aircraft maintenance facility, a data processing facility, and land acquisition and easements.

Rep. Jake Pickle, D-Austin, said the House "displayed its commitment to a strong defense" with the action. The bill is not the entire Department of Defense budget, but covers actual construction only.

"The Senate has already approved its own version of the authorization, and I am confident a conference committee can work out the rather minor differences," Pickle said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ambassador John Gavin "Of course, it's doubly important for me because we have my president here also, and I'm looking forward to seeing both of them today."

The 20-year-old rookie pitcher, whose screwball helped him win his first eight starts this season, trying the record for a first-year major-league pitcher, was a guest at President Reagan's luncheon for Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Valenzuela and Gavin carried two baseball caps and baseballs for the presidents.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. arrived and threw his arm over the pitcher's shoulder. "Are you a baseball fan?" Haig was asked.

"You betcha," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted mass murderer Charles Manson is interviewed by television host Tom Snyder in a segment of "Tomorrow Coast to Coast" that will be broadcast this week on NBC.

Manson and five followers were sentenced to death in 1971 for the 1969 murders of actress Sharon Tate and six others. The sentences were reduced to life imprisonment in 1972 with the abolition of the death penalty in California.

Manson's interview with Snyder, conducted in a prison parole board room with a guard present, will be shown at 12:30 a.m. EDT Saturday.

Arms brokers are indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted two English arms brokers and ordered the release of an Austrian jetliner pilot accused of plotting to ship $1.2 million worth of military weapons to South Africa.

Peter Towers, 51, and John Parks, 43, were indicted Monday on one count of conspiracy to illegally export 16,396 munitions, including automatic rifles, grenade launchers and pistols, to the Republic of South Africa.

The two men also were charged with one count of attempting export weapons without a license and 22 counts of possessing fully automatic M-16 military rifles.

The pair faces up to 10 years in prison and $100,000 fines each if convicted of the charges.

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Soviets love their pets — dogs, cats and birds, especially. Much of the interest in Moscow is centered in a pet market, where a bazaar, if not bizarre, area is set off for vendors who sell everything from tropical fish to Great Danes.

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Animals by the thousands change hands every weekend at Moscow's free-enterprise pet market. Animal-lovers have been complaining about it since the 19th century, but the vibrant trade in everything from cats and dogs to rat-like nutria seems unstoppable.

Despite reports of cruelty and profiteering, Soviet authorities tolerate the market to satisfy Muscovites' passion for dogs, cats and other domestic pets.

The Soviet capital has a few state-run pet shops, and pedigreed animals can be purchased through official breeding clubs. But these facilities are insufficient to meet demands of a city of nearly eight million humans.

Every weekend, Russians crowd the open-air bazaar to haggle with private vendors over puppies, kittens, hamsters, furry nutria, parakeets, tropical fish and other animals.

Sellers pay an entry fee of about 30 cents, but sales aren't taxed.

Dogs bark and strain against leashes, rabbits cower in paper cartons, caged birds chatter and fish dart around aquariums as strollers price the pets displayed in stalls and on the muddy ground.

One woman coaxes two angora kittens from under her overcoat. "They are gentle, kind and smart, with fur soft as silk," she confides. "You can teach them to use a regular toilet. Only $29 each."

The market, a series of fenced yards the area of two football fields, is located amid high-rise apartment blocks two miles east of the Kremlin.

"People come here in a holiday mood. Couples bring their children. And they end up smashed in a crowd. Can't the market be expanded, or can't it be moved to another, larger area?" one Muscovite, K. Parkhilevsky, wrote in a recent letter to the newspaper Nedelya.

Another Nedelya reader, A. Fedulova, branded the pet market "a hotbed of immoral, mercenary attitudes toward dogs, cats and other animals" and demanded its immediate closure.

Criticism of the market is not new. Russian author Anton Chekhov described it in the late 19th century as "that little bit of Moscow where animals are so tenderly loved and where they are so tortured."

Today, many of the market vendors look like they could have stepped out of a Chekhov short story.

An elderly man in a grimy jacket squats beside two wooden crates of furry nutria, quoting his prices to passersby — $36 for the big gray ones and $21 dollars for the smaller brown ones.

Nutria, muskrats and other fur-bearing animals sold at the market are usually fattened in suburban pens and then skinned to make fur caps. Some buyers of nutria hold them up against their fur coat collars, testing to see if they will make matching hats of an appropriate color.

What do the nutria eat? "Everything," the vendor replies laconically.

A middle-aged woman wearing a Russian peasant shawl opens a vinyl bag to display cuddly brown and white puppies.

"I sold the others for $21 each, but you can have the last two for $7.20 apiece," she says. "The mother's a good watchdog. She won't let anybody get into my house."
