US-Israeli ties not jeopardized

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, walking a diplomatic tightrope, is reassuring Israel that its bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor has not jeopardized U.S.-Israeli ties, while telling Arab leaders that a peaceful solution to the reactor issue might have been possible.

Asked if his Middle East peace efforts were "back on track" after meetings Thursday with five Arab ambassadors and the Israeli envoy, Reagan replied: "I think so, yes."

Reagan, who told the Arab envoys that "no one was more surprised" than he by Sunday's bombing, later reassured the Israeli ambassador, Ephraim Evron, that the fundamental relationship between the United States and Israel would not change, a senior administration official said.

The United States has condemned the Israeli action, which was carried out with American-made jets, and suspended a shipment of four fighter planes to the Jewish state.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Thursday that Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger had recommended that all economic and military aid to Israel be withheld because of the raid, a statement denied by both Weinberger and the White House.

"I'm sorry that Mr. Begin is proceeding on an erroneous assumption," Weinberger said in a statement issued at the Pentagon. "I have made no such recommendation."

Said David Gergen, staff director of the White House: "We are categorically denying the assertion that Secretary Weinberger argued for the president to discontinue aid. The prime minister was misinformed."

After the session, Sudanese Ambassador Omer Salih Eissa, describing Reagan as "very attentive, very responsive" to the Arab leaders' concerns, said the group was heartened by the president's statement that he was "shocked and disappointed, as we were," by Israel's raid.

Arab League seeks sanctions on Israel

By The Associated Press
The Arab League called for U.N. sanctions against Israel as the Security Council prepared to begin meeting this afternoon on the Israeli destruction of Iraq's nuclear reactor.

Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi demanded a joint Arab attack to destroy Israel's nuclear reactors, saying the Arab world "does not accept Israel's existence."

Menachem Begin said the Israeli raiders blew up a secret underground atomic bomb factory along with the Iraqi reactor in Sunday's precision attack outside Baghdad.

Foreign ministers or other representatives of the 21 Arab League members met in emergency session Thursday in the Iraqi capital. They adopted 11 resolutions charting a campaign of diplomatic pressure aimed at winning U.N. sanctions that would force a halt to U.S. military and political assistance to Israel.

"What we are asking for is a complete stoppage of arms to Israel unless they abide by the rules and regulations of the United Nations," said Bahrain's Foreign Minister Mohammed Bin Mubarak.

The meeting delegated Arab League Secretary general Cheddi Klibi of Tunisia, Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sabah al Ahmed al Jaber and Algerian

Information Minister Boualem Dousayeh to represent the league before the Security Council.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi was to open the council debate with his government's charge of Israeli aggression.

A Third World diplomat in Baghdad suggested Iraq was pressing for U.N. sanctions because "there is a limit to what they (the Iraqis) can do in the way of retaliation."

Gray County may go to electronic voting

Gray County voters may be using electronic voting machines in the November election if Gray County Commissioners agree to purchase six of the machines for $31,190.

After listening to a presentation from Computer Election Systems representative Chad Harbour concerning the 65-pound compact voting machine, commissioners agreed to make a purchase decision at their July 1 meeting.

The machines have been presented to the Gray County Democratic Executive Committee in Pampa. The committee voiced their approval of the machines due to the use of a printed ballot.

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter explained that if the county does purchase the voting machines the individual parties will rent them for use in the elections. Mrs. Carter will have the job of programming the machines for each election.

Sales representative Harbour explained that most counties purchase one machine for each precinct with over 1,000 registered voters. Ballots from smaller precincts could be brought to the courthouse and counted centrally. The machines also have several security check points to eliminate any voting irregularities. If an interruption of electricity should happen during an election the machines also have a memory bank that will store the computed information for future use. A battery in the machine allows for the memory bank to store the information, he explained.

The Texas State Legislature has recently provided rules for the use of electronic voting systems. Commissioners also reviewed their advertising program for the sale of the county owned Highland General Hospital.

A question concerning the sale of all the real and personal property to individual buyers was solved when commissioners agreed to sell all the equipment at an auction.

According to Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy certain local doctors and individuals had asked to purchase certain equipment before the sale.

Highland General Hospital Administrator Norman Knox agreed with the court that it would be easier to sell all the equipment at one time. Knox also thanked the commissioners for their efforts in trying to sell the hospital.

The Hospital Corporation of America (HCA) will purchase the Highland General Building from the county for $450,000 if commissioners cannot find another buyer.

"It would be an albatross around our necks, Knox, an HCA employee, said.

Hospitals are specialty buildings and if the Hospital Corporation of America thought they could remodel it to fit the stringent hospital codes, they would have. The hospital may be able to be used for some other business."

Judge Kennedy interjected that Pampa is in need of a place to hold small meetings and a convention center. The building has possibilities.

Some local government entities have inquired into the use of certain hospital equipment," Kennedy said.

The Pampa Independent School District has asked to use the whirlpools for the athletic departments and some of the equipment could be used by the Gray County Health Nurse," Kennedy said.

Commissioners agreed that some equipment should go to the school and the county nurse. Written requests will be received from the individual entities asking for the use of certain equipment.

Commissioners agreed to purchase 16 cemetery plots for $400 from the Memorial Heights Cemetery in Lefors for the burial of indigent persons.

The Lefors Cemetery has offered the 16 plots at a lower price than we can get at the Pampa cemeteries which ask $275 per lot," Kennedy said.

A new location for the office of Justice of the Peace Marge Prestidge was approved by the court.

The office will now be located in downtown Alanreed.

Pampans bombarded by severe weather

By DEBORAH BRIDGES Staff Writer

At 11 p.m. Thursday, Pampans were bombarded by heavy rains, high winds and flashes of lightning as a summer storm, spawning sporadic tornado funnels, crossed the area.

Local and county authorities ham radio operators and REACT volunteers scanned the black skies over Pampa for tornadoes after a sighting of a funnel near Perry - Lefors Airfield was confirmed by a Pampa Police officer.

The tornado was reported to have touched the ground several times before going back into the cloud.

Civil Defense Coordinator Steve Vaughn said today he had not received any definite reports of damage.

Fred Renke of the Amarillo National Weather Service said Miami reported the heaviest rainfall with an even two inches of precipitation. Pampa was second with an official report of 1.81 inches, he said.

Vaughn said he had received several reports of rain gauges in the city showing from 3 to 3.6 inches of rain.

The first tornado sighting was reported to the National Weather Service at 10:29 p.m. Tuesday by the Department of Public Safety. A funnel six miles west of Panhandle on U.S. 60 was reported by a Texas Highway Patrol trooper. A second tornado was spotted three miles southwest of Skellytown at 10:59 p.m.

At 11:05 p.m., Sgt. John Bennett of the Pampa Police Department reported a tornado on the ground north of Pampa near the Perry - Lefors Airport moving northeast away from Pampa. Vaughn said.

The downpour from the storm clouds flooded city streets "from curb to curb," Vaughn said. "Most of the major arteries were flooded, leaving many cars stalled," he added.

Vaughn said the worst flooding was reported in the Perryton Parkway area.

Today, city streets were littered with debris from the late night flooding, sand, dirt, and tree limbs. Chunks of asphalt, uprooted by the swiftly moving water, were lying in the roadway in several major streets.

Almost a dozen mobile radio units manned by REACT members and ham radio operators roamed the Pampa area to watch for tornadoes, Vaughn said. Two base stations for amateur and citizen band radios were also activated, he said.

Renke said that with current weather conditions shaping up as they are, tonight may be a replay of last night.

"We have the moisture and heating, and a low pressure system with a weak front, we're looking at the same conditions as yesterday. There may be a repeat today," he said.

Pampa band prepares for parade, enjoys Hawaii

By LYNN HUNTER Managing Editor

HAWAII — Assistant Band Director Charles Johnson was hurried by the Pampa High School band members as he was chosen to hula with one of the Hawaiian dancers at Tavan's Polynesian Review Thursday evening.

It was the last dance of the evening, when eight of the Hawaiian dancers stepped into the audience to tap their chosen dance partners. A cheer went up from the band when Johnson was selected by one of the attractive hula girls.

While shopping at the Ala Moana Shopping Center Thursday, seven brave Pampans partook of an authentic Hawaiian meal. The feast included raw salmon topped with tomatoes (Good), raw tuna (chewy) and a dish of the Hawaiian 11 plant boiled to a spinach like texture with small chunks of squid (really octopus). Little suction cups under eight legs were visible in Marilyn McClure's bowl.

Of course, the meal included poi, which Pampans compare from a stomach - coating medicine to plum pudding, a beef stew (Of all things) and a small wedge of coconut pudding.

The band practiced Thursday afternoon at Queen Kapiolani Park. Their music was heard all the way to Waikiki Beach. It being a Hawaiian holiday, the islanders wandered over to see what all the noise was and to watch the band.

One native Hawaiian said he has a son at Kamehameha High School, and boasted their band has won awards for the past seven years. He predicted stiff competition for the top parade award.

The Hawaiian said the strongest competition will come from Castle High School. Only seven bands from the continental United States will be participating in the parade, he said.

The different island groups and businesses will be hotly competing with beautifully constructed floats for the King Kamehameha Parade award, also.

The Rose Bowl Queen will serve as the Queen of this year's parade. Many floats will be constructed of fresh flowers.

Today, the band plans to tour Sea Life Park, Hawaii's Marineland of the Pacific. The park features a stroll three fathoms beneath the surface of the giant reef tank where giant hammerhead sharks, stingrays and 2,000 other marine creatures can be seen. At Whaler's Cove, 3.00 pounds of killer whales perform for the visitors.

The rest of the evening is free time, so the bandsters can prepare for Saturday's parade. Several Pampans are planning to see Jim Neighbors' night club performance tonight.

The weather in Hawaii today is warm and humid, with mists of water spraying your face at unexpected moments.

Reagan slams door on any tax cut compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, rejecting Democratic complaints that his tax-cut plan does too little for low-income Americans, is slamming the door on further compromise. "I've dug in my heels," he says.

The statement, relayed by a press aide, apparently assured an all-out battle when a tax-cut bill reaches the full House later this year.

"I can't retreat from the 25 percent, across-the-board cut in personal tax rates," Reagan told a group of labor leaders Thursday at the White House.

Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee, meanwhile, were telling one of the president's chief tax advisers that the across-the-board concept — meaning the same rate cuts for rich and poor — is not acceptable.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the committee chairman, led the charge.

He told John E. Chapoton, assistant treasury secretary for tax policy, that the administration's bill is faulty because it does not increase the earned-income credit, which benefits working families with incomes less than $10,000, or the standard deduction.

Haig's visit not arms sales pitch

HONG KONG (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said today the situation in Poland is seriously deteriorating in the face of Soviet threats. He warned that Soviet intervention would have "a major impact on the full-range of East-West relations."

He also said he hopes that Israel's bombing of the Iraqi nuclear facility will not derail the Middle East peace process, which he said is far more important.

On a third subject, Haig said at a short news conference that his trip to China beginning Sunday shouldn't be seen as a mission to sell arms either to China or to Taiwan. Haig arrived in Hong Kong today for two days of rest and preparation for a three-day visit to China.

Haig denounced what he described as a "very threatening letter" from the Soviet Communist Party to Polish leaders, in which the Soviets demanded firmer action against anti-communist factions.

"Clearly if there should be Soviet intervention in Poland, it would have a major impact on the full-range of East-West relations, including the scheduled talks on theater nuclear force," Haig said, referring to plans to initiate discussions with the Soviets regarding deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Haig seemed to be urging moderate Arab nations to mute their anger over Israel's bombing of the Iraqi nuclear facility and turn their attention to the efforts to bring about a peaceful resolution in Lebanon and further the cause for an Arab-Israeli peace.

He said that while the bombing had had "an unsettling effect" on the Lebanese peace mission "it is my hope that all the parties involved... will recognize that the long-term objectives of the peace process far outweigh the current tensions associated with the Israeli raid."

Haig said the United States wants a prompt resolution of Palestinian autonomy talks immediately after Israel's June 30 elections and an early completion of the negotiations for withdrawal of Israeli forces from the Sinai Peninsula, which is to be returned to Egypt.

Haig said the purpose of his visit to China is "to clear the air with respect to President Reagan's policies in this region and the special role that U.S.-China relationships have with respect to those policies."

High court to review Iranian hostage pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since Watergate, the Supreme Court will hold a special summer hearing. At stake: the Iranian hostage accord hammered out by Jimmy Carter in the last hours of his presidency.

Moving with unusual speed, the justices announced Thursday they would hear arguments in the dispute on June 24.

The Justice Department and the Iranian government asked for swift consideration because the agreement calls for transferring up to $4 billion in Iranian assets by July 19.

On July 8, 1974, the justices heard lawyers clash over then-President Nixon's authority to hold onto the Watergate tapes.

Nixon lost that historic struggle just 16 days later, when the court ordered the embattled chief executive to hand over the White House tapes to a special prosecutor.

Weather

The forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of thundershowers today and tonight. Temperatures will be in the mid 90s through Saturday. Winds will be 10 - 15 mph today increasing on Saturday.

BOY TRAPPED IN WELL. This was the scene Friday in the country near Frascati, Italy, where in a race against the clock, rescue workers were drilling desperately to reach Alfredo Rampi, a six-year-old boy, who is trapped in a narrow artesian well. The boy tumbled into the well Wednesday evening and is now in critical condition after being trapped at 36 meters of depth inside the well. (AP Laserphoto)

Trapped boy is getting weaker

FRASCATI, Italy (AP) - A 6-year-old boy with heart trouble grew steadily weaker today in a 10-inch-wide well as firemen desperately drilled through more than six feet of solid rock blocking a parallel rescue shaft.
 Alfredo Rampi, who tumbled into the artesian well Wednesday evening, spoke whole sentences to his would-be rescuers Thursday night. But by early today, his only words were soft cries of "Mamma, Mamma, Mamma," echoing up through a walkie-talkie that had been lowered to him.
 "Enough, I can't stand it any more," Alfredo told his father, Fernando, Thursday night.
 "His breathing is rough. He has stopped talking and he's just sobbing," said Dr. Evasio Fava, one of two physicians monitoring the boy's condition with listening devices.
 The doctors said the boy was weakening, and ordered an increased flow of oxygen through a tube that was passed down to him. Earlier, they had fed him sugar water through the tube.
 "My son is courageous and sensible, but he is not well, and I don't know how he is going to endure any longer," the boy's mother, Franca, said after Alfredo failed to respond to his father's calls through the radio.
 The parents took turns talking on the walkie-talkie through the night to encourage their son, but doctors today asked them to get off the radio because they were getting "too emotional."
 Rescue workers are drilling a parallel shaft about nine feet from the well. At 8:30 a.m. - 2:30 a.m. EDT, firemen said the drillers had about 6 1/2 feet of rock to go before they hit 43 feet of soil and clay at the base of the second shaft.
 "If we get over this hurdle, we should be able to reach him in four hours," a drilling supervisor told an Italian television interviewer.
 "It's a struggle against time," Dr. Fava said. "I don't know how he has lived as long as this."
 He said the warm weather - temperatures climbed into the 90s during the day Thursday - improved Alfredo's chances of survival.
 Firemen had hoped the boy could be reached by Thursday night but the operation slowed when the drill hit 15 feet of solid rock.
 Alfredo is caught at a point where the well, 16 inches at the surface, narrows to 10 inches. His head is up and his arms apparently are free.
 A volunteer was lowered on ropes head first into the well late Thursday in a futile attempt to get Alfredo out. Isidoro Marabella, 52, was chosen for the attempt because he is short and thin, but he was not able to squeeze far enough down into the narrow shaft to reach the boy.

Iranian quake toll may be 5,000

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - Rescue workers reported finding 500 bodies in the ruins of a major earthquake in southeastern Iran's Kerman province, the official Iranian news agency Pars said today. The Red Crescent, Islamic equivalent of the Red Cross, said the death toll probably would climb to 5,000.
 Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai flew today to the region to inspect the scene of the destruction, Tehran Radio reported.
 Pars said rescue squads were still digging out dead and injured from the ruins from Thursday morning's quake. It said the tremors flattened 95 percent of the buildings in Gol Bagh, a city of 40,000 people near the provincial capital Kerman, 500 miles southeast of Tehran.
 Pars said one casualty figure reported from the area "was put at more than 3,000 killed and more than 1,000 injured."
 The agency quoted a Red Crescent announcement as saying 500 bodies had been recovered from the ruins by 10 a.m. today, and 1,500 injured people rescued. The Red Crescent report said 5,000 people "have been reported missing and they have probably been killed in the collapsed buildings."
 Rajai called on the Iranian people for "revolutionary sacrifice" to aid the victims of the disaster.
 Tehran Radio said food, medicine, blankets and relief personnel were being flown to the region 500 miles southeast of Tehran by helicopter, and the injured were being brought out to hospitals on the return flights.
 The provincial governor-general ordered all security forces mobilized to help with relief work.
 In Washington, a White House spokesman told questioning reporters he knew nothing about any U.S. government plans to send aid.
 The governor-general's office said the small city of Gol Bagh, with a population of 40,000, appeared to be hit hardest. He said two-thirds of the homes were destroyed.
 The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the earthquake registered 6.9 on the Richter scale. A quake measuring 5.8 hit the same area in 1977, killing nearly 600 people.
 The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one number reflects a tenfold increase in magnitude, so that a reading of 7.5 shows an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5. An earthquake of 6 can cause severe damage, while one registering 7 is a "major" quake which can cause widespread heavy damage.

Hightower's efforts aid Pantex plant

WASHINGTON - Congressman Jack Hightower late Thursday defeated on the House floor an amendment which might have ultimately resulted in resumption of a lawsuit stopping planned expansion of the Pantex Nuclear Weapons Facility near Amarillo.
 Passage of the amendment, as written, could also have disrupted the plant's production schedule, resulting in serious delays effecting national security.
 By a vote of 233 - 122, Hightower won overwhelming approval for language eliminating the Pantex facility from an amendment to prohibit all future environmental impact studies at US nuclear weapons plants.
 Hightower charged that the proposed amendment offered by Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., to the Department of Energy Security and Military Applications of Nuclear Energy Authorization Act of 1982, if passed, would have violated an existing agreement between the Department of Energy and an Amarillo environmental group which has been approved by a US federal court and which permits the continuation of the construction planned at the plant.
 "Pantex is now free to continue its expansion and weapons production on schedule, construction jobs were saved and, most importantly, the ability of the government to settle expensive lawsuits and save tax money was not hurt," Hightower said.

Hartsock named DA investigator

District Attorney Harold Comer announced today the resignation of his investigator, Kirven Roper, and the hiring of Sgt. Michael Hartsock of the Pampa Police Department as the new investigator for the DA's office.
 Comer said Roper submitted his resignation to become effective July 1. The District Attorney said Roper has decided to enter private business. Roper was hospitalized recently with medical problems.
 Hartsock will be joining the District Attorney's staff July 1, Comer said.
 Presently serving as a sergeant on the city police force as a shift supervisor, Hartsock has intensive police training in identification, criminal investigation, fingerprints, photography, accident investigation, crime prevention, composite drawing, arson investigation, computer programming and special weapons.
 Prior to moving to the Patrol Division of the local police force, Hartsock spent two years as an investigator in the Criminal Investigation Division. He was also the department's chief photographer.
 Hartsock has served in the U. S. Navy, where he attended nuclear submarine school and sonar technician school, he was a police officer in the Bartlesville, Okla. Police Department where he received 260 hours of police training.
 A graduate of Bartlesville High School, Hartsock attended Amarillo College and Clarendon College. Also, he has taken computer programming and accounting at Tri-County Technical School in Bartlesville.
 Hartsock has been the recipient of the Pampa Kiwanis Officer of the Quarter in 1976 and the Pampa Jaycees Officer of the Year 1977-1978 awards.
 Hartsock lives in Pampa with his wife and two daughters. Comer said as the DA's investigator, Hartsock will continue to live in Pampa but will have his offices in Hemphill County Courthouse in Canadian.

Finney new Lefors school board member

Eugene Finney has been named a member of the Lefors School Board. His appointment fills a vacancy created by the resignation of Dean Wilson. Finney was named to the board during regular session held Thursday.
 Board members also voted to allow one Alanreed and one Grandview student to transfer to the Lefors High School. The two were accepted on the condition that their parents make arrangements to pick up and take them home from the school. Tuition for each of the transfer students was set at $100 per month.
 The resignation of Lefors Junior High coach David Adams was accepted and board members are trying to recruit a replacement.
 A 1982 suburban bus will be purchased as a replacement for the 10-year-old suburban now being used by the school.
 The First National Bank was accepted as the depository for the school on a two-year contract.
 Board members will next meet on Thursday, July 9.

Floods force Texans from homes

By The Associated Press
 A Medina County man apparently swept away by flood waters when a rescue vehicle overturned was feared drowned today as heavy rains continued to lash South Central Texas.
 The man, tentatively identified as Alfred Breeden of Devine, was swept into high water along San Miguel Creek in Frio County, according to Devine Fire Chief Manuel Rodriguez.
 Breeden was one of four campers being taken to high ground in a fire truck when the vehicle overturned after being struck by a wall of water, Rodriguez said.
 Medina County Sheriff Donald Campsey said his deputies have rescued several people stranded by flooding in northern Frio County, and several more are hanging in trees, waiting to be saved.
 The National Weather Service said this morning that as much as 7 inches of rain has fallen since midnight near Navasota, and Victoria has reported almost 5 inches.
 In Austin, residents braced for more rain today after as much as 8 inches fell Thursday in Central Texas, where flash flood watches have been posted.
 No one was reported injured in Austin, where early morning floods killed 12 people on Memorial Day, but the Austin Fire Department evacuated creek-bank homes in the south part of the city as normally small Williamson Creek spread to a 350-foot wide flood.
 Shoal Creek, the cause of much of the death and damage during the Memorial Day flood, rose quickly. At times the muddy water lapped near homes that have been abandoned since the earlier flood. Lawns in front of many houses along the creek in the northwest section of town still are strewn with debris from the Memorial Day tragedy.
 In Northeast Austin, firemen used boats to rescue 20 people from a lumber yard threatened by rising water, according to fire department spokeswoman Debbie Brown.
 Violent storms also raged across the Panhandle, where very heavy rain, hail and gusts of wind up to 70 miles an hour were reported in downtown Amarillo. A tornado was sighted six miles west of Panhandle, but no damage was reported.
 The Department of Public Safety reported that nine inches of water from Village Creek in Hardin County had covered Highway 418 between Kountze and Silsbee. The creek rose about three inches an hour during the afternoon, a DPS spokesman said.

Russian Olympic team invited to Luckenbach

LUCKENBACH, Texas (AP) - The Soviet Union has been invited to send a team to participate in Texas-style olympics planned during the upcoming Great Fifth Sometimes Annual Luckenbach World's Fair.
 Guich Koock, a television actor who has sponsored the sporadic mock world's fair off and on the past decade, Thursday released the invitation he sent to A. Dobrynin at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C.
 The letter invited the Russians to compete in events of the Texas Decathlon - five of which consist of beer chug-a-lugs - during the festivities June 27-28 and July 4-5 at a ranch near this well-known Texas town, population 3.
 "If the Russians are not used to Texas beer, they could substitute 12 ounces of vodka for a longneck," said Koock, who calls himself the grand exalted ringmaster of the beer bash.
 "Now that your country is fixin' to go buy our grain, I think that in return, it is only fair to invite you to send a team to compete in our World Texas Hill Country Olympics," Koock told Dobrynin.
 "We hope to have Soviet representation June 28 in the Texas Decathlon. I realize this is short notice, but my friends from Afghanistan tell me you Russians can move quickly when you want to."
 Koock then listed the 10 events of the Decathlon which are, in order: cow chip toss, beer chug-a-lug, egg toss, beer chug-a-lug, log throw, beer chug-a-lug, stick horse race, beer chug-a-lug, back door races, beer chug-a-lug.
 The idea of the egg toss, Koock said, "is to catch an uncooked egg at increasing distances without breaking it. This requires a fast shift and a gentle touch if you have miscalculated. I suggest some of your diplomats to Poland would be excellent candidates."
 As for the log throw, Koock told Dobrynin, "we know that the Russians are experienced in throwing things great distances. But to win, you must admit it when somebody asks, 'Who threw that?'"
 On the back door races, he told the Soviet diplomat: "From Russian movies I've seen on late night TV, Russian men are experienced at this action. The contestant is clad in long red underwear (even more appropriate in your case) and is lying in a brass bed. At the sound of a shotgun blast (which signifies the approach of a father or husband) he leaps out of bed and has to be dressed before he jumps out the window. This is fun and such practical training."
 Koock advised Dobrynin, "to ensure fairness, you may bring along three judges, none of whom will be allowed to defect and become Texans. We will supply five fair-minded Hill Country Judges."
 Koock was a star of the former "Carter Country" television series and will appear this fall along with Gabe Kaplan on a new series called "Guich and Gabe" about a New Yorker who comes to Texas to operate a bar.

Borger fish fry fizzles

BORGER, Texas (AP) - The 18th Annual Lake Meredith World's Largest Fish Fry has been cancelled - again.
 The mammoth picnic, which normally features thousands of people eating tons of fish with traditional trimmings, had been set for Saturday, but the Borger Chamber of Commerce said Thursday they couldn't find enough finny fare to go around.
 The affair will be held later in the summer, a spokesman said.
 The fry had originally been scheduled for June 6. It was postponed when the truck loaded with 3,600 pounds of frozen cod crashed into a train three miles away from the site. The fish were prematurely "super-fried," a fire department spokesman said.

Special session may be a lengthy one

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says the July 13 special legislative session may not be as short as some had hoped. Clements told a news conference Thursday that the five subjects he listed in his call of the session did not mean that would be all he wanted out of the 30-day meeting.

In a special session, the governor has full power to say when the Legislature will meet and what subjects it will discuss. "I strongly support the gasohol bill (for temporary exemption from the state motor fuel tax) but whether it gets into the special session is an open question," he told the news conference. "I haven't decided yet, but I have not changed my mind about supporting it."

Clements said the three "must" issues of the special session are:

- Abolishment of the state property tax. "That's my No. 1 priority," he said.
  - Congressional redistricting.
  - Passage of the Medical Practices Act. The Texas Medical Examiners Board, which licenses all Texas doctors and physicians, will go out of business Sept. 1 unless the act is continued.
- "The other two items are certainly needed," he said. Also on the agenda for the summer session are creation of a water trust fund from any state surpluses and a "tune up" revision of the 1979 property tax revision act.

He said the regular session of the 1981 Legislature passed 901 bills and he has not acted on 478 of them. The deadline for his signing or vetoing them is June 21.

On other subjects, Clements said: — He was confident the recent meeting of President Ronald Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo strengthened the lines of communication between Mexico and Texas. — He would veto a bill changing the dates of local elections in Houston. "The others I have not decided," he said about other pending bills.

Draper prepares to seek GOP support

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Democratic member of the House Speaker Dan Draper prepared today to make a final appeal for Republican support for his legislative program after bringing back to the fold a key session at 2:30 p.m. after a closed-door meeting of the minority caucus.

The speaker was expected to offer the GOP members immediate appointment this session of three Republicans on the House Reapportionment Committee, which is considering congressional redistricting, plus greater representation next year on key House committees.

In return, he will ask the Republicans to drop their opposition to passage of emergency clauses on appropriations bills. The GOP House members made up roughly two-thirds of a coalition of conservatives that blocked passage of emergency bills in late May, forcing a legislative recess until June 15.

Draper announced Thursday that he and state Rep. John Monks, D-Muskogee, had signed a peace treaty after a summit meeting in Arkansas the night before.

Draper flew to Fort Smith, Ark., Wednesday night and for a dinner meeting with Monks, who currently is at nearby Fort Chaffee on military duty. "John has no desire to be aligned with the Republicans and he assured me that on Monday he will support the Democrats," the speaker said. "John and I have been friends for a long time and we have had our disagreements. But he has no love for (state Rep. Neal) McCaleb and that is not where he wants to be," Draper continued.

McCaleb, House minority leader, has assumed the leadership role in the House rebellion against the leadership.

Lawmakers are to return to work on Monday to try and wind down the session, which only has eight working days left under the constitutional 90-day limit.

After his meeting with Monks, Draper said he "feels pretty good" about being able to muster the necessary 68 votes to attach the emergency clauses, which are necessary to avoid a 90-day delay in funding state agencies.

Battle of advertisers ends

DALLAS (AP) — The lyrics are cheerful, the music is bouncy, but the lawyers fighting the deadly serious battle of the ads argue copyright laws offer protection from "smiling assassins."

The four-day copyright infringement trial ended Thursday with an attorney for Dr Pepper telling the federal judge that Sambo's Restaurants Inc. should be ordered not to use a commercial that parodies the Dallas-based soft drink company's ad.

U.S. District Judge William Taylor, who has already issued a temporary injunction against Sambo's and its advertising agency, Bozell & Jacobs, said he would try to make a "prompt" decision in the case.

Sambo's has been promoting a senior citizen's discount program with an ad that features elderly dancers singing a sprightly jingle that asks the musical question: "Don't you want to be a senior, too?"

Dr Pepper sued the restaurant, claiming the commercial was "substantially similar" to the soft drink ad that queries, "Wouldn't you like to be a pepper, too?"

Robert Jordan, attorney for Dr Pepper, argued that the Sambo's ad infringes on Dr Pepper's copyright. Witnesses for the restaurant and its advertising agency, Bozell & Jacobs, claimed the "dancing seniors" tune sounds like the Pepper music, but is different, and the lyrics are in good taste.

"Copyright laws protect against smiling assassins just as much as they do against those who do it with a snarl or a growl," said Jordan.

He argued that the "be a pepper" campaign had cost Dr Pepper $137 million, and the "dancing seniors" commercials dilute the ad's effectiveness and shorten its lifespan.

During the trial, Stanley Marcus, chairman emeritus of Neiman-Marcus department stores, testified that he thought the Sambo's ad was "tastefully done," a "charming parody" that brought the soft drink to mind.

In contrast, he described as "salacious" and a "rip-off" a poster of bare-breasted women posing in cheerleader uniforms similar to those in a poster put out by the Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders Inc.

Marcus said he is a marketing consultant who specializes in the "tastefulness" of advertisements, and Bozell & Jacobs is one of his clients.

Composer Tom Merriman brought his electric piano to court to show that the Sambo's tune differs from the Pepper music, which he called a "musical cliché" that has been around since the 1920s.

"They're not rip-off artists," Sambo's attorney Roger Clapp said of his clients. He said the "dancing seniors" commercials are innocent parodies that don't hurt anyone.

"Where's the evidence of harm?" he asked. "There isn't any."

OPINION PAGE

Go west, Detroit; fuel lesson awaits

Out of the industrial arts department at San Diego State University comes an MG sports car converted to get 110 miles to a gallon of diesel fuel. Admirers of power and speed might not consider this a dream car, but it should perk up those who fancy escaping from the bondage of their oil company credit cards.

Professor William Guentzler and his students at the California state university have shown what can be accomplished in the way of fuel efficiency with the right kind of tinkering under the hood — replacing the original MG engine with a Japanese diesel built for tractors, to begin with.

It is a long way from this demonstration project to a mass-produced car that could offer motorists the same kind of mileage. Nevertheless, there are possibilities for Detroit if it could manage to "reinvent the car" as it was urged to do by the government a couple of years ago.

The conversion job at San Diego State seems to confirm that miles per gallon can reach remarkable levels if one is willing to make trade-offs that effect performance, comfort, convenience, safety and other factors. The challenge to the auto industry is to push back the frontier of fuel efficiency without inventing a car that no one wants to drive.

The converted MG which has run for six months on a tankful of diesel fuel is a one-of-a-kind, but it is encouraging to know that it is not exactly a freak. There are enough of these experimental models in service that San Diego State will host a symposium this summer for designers of cars getting 100 miles or more to a gallon of fuel. Hopefully Chrysler, Ford, GM and the rest can afford to send an observer.

There are a few motion pictures for which I will get up at almost any hour of the night to view on television. One of these movies is the classic "Judgement at Nuremberg", which, in my opinion, is one of the most potent movies ever produced by Hollywood. "Potent" not because it reminds us of the savagery of Nazi Germany, but because it demands an examination of the tyranny implicit in any nation - state, however constituted and wherever situated. It is far more than a movie in which judges representing victorious allied forces have the opportunity to judge their Nazi counterparts; rather, the tribunal represents institutionalized political society sitting in judgment upon itself.

What we discover, if we will but look beneath the veneer of atrocities and butchery, is that we often go about playing word games that permit us to create self-serving but meaningless distinctions between the evils we are prepared to sanction (when done by "our" nation - state) and the evils perpetrated by "our enemies" which we are equally prepared to denounce in the most self-righteous tones. Thus it is that many of us have learned to acknowledge the "practical necessity" of the American citizens of Japanese ancestry, at the same time we are revolted by the German government's practice of incarcerating its "undesirable" citizenry. We are equally incensed at the thought of millions of victims dying in German concentration camps, but praise the American government — in tones that suggest a "humanitarian" purpose to the act — for having killed hundreds of thousands of innocent men, women, and children (including many American POWs) in the atom - bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Our deadly word games

The word games we play, here, are reinforced by the childhood notion that there are "good guys" and "bad guys" throughout the world, and that the alleged wrongs perpetrated by the "good guys" are indispensable and forgivable, the "necessary evils" that are permitted of "well-intentioned" people. And, of course, "our enemies" are playing the same game. Had the axis powers won World War II, there is little doubt we would have had an American counterpart to the Nuremberg trials, and that schoolchildren would, today, be growing up with the "certainty" that Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur, et al., were "vicious" and "evil" monsters for their roles in killing innocent people in bombing raids, putting people into concentration camps and other "criminal" acts. Do not misunderstand my point: none of this is to condone the vicious evils that were, in fact, engaged in by the Nazi government. It is, rather, to suggest that every war is always evil and vicious, and that everyone who participates in such wholesale institutionalized butchery must share in the responsibility for what occurs. There are no "just" wars; there are no acts of suffering and injustice that are "necessary" to inflict on any one person or six million persons.

Kenneth Boulding has stated that "if the human race is to survive it will have to change more in its ways of thinking in the next twenty-five years than it has done in the last twenty-five thousand." Assuming that we are sincere in our desires for a peaceful, war-free world — and do not simply reserve the thought as a message to be embossed on Christmas cards — how will we go about doing so? Each generation has, until now, subtly sidestepped that question by assuming that future generations would resolve the problems of war. We would make the "sacrifice" and fight the "necessary" war to "preserve the Union," or "make the world safe for democracy," or "put an end to the tyranny of Nazism," or "stop the growth of international communism." Each generation has had its own peculiar version of a "holy war," and has fought it with the firm conviction that eternal "peace" would prevail over the land once that war had come to an end.

We can no longer afford to play out these lies we tell ourselves. Given the enormous monstrous powers of destruction with which governments of the world could obliterate life on this planet within a matter of minutes, we can no longer delude ourselves as did our ancestors. They fought and died and suffered in the belief — no doubt truly held by them — that we, their children and grandchildren, would find the secret to living in peace. We are not only the future of which they dreamed, we are the future of mankind itself. If we do not start changing our ways of thinking — and soon — we may discover that we are also the end of mankind.

Price, wage floors deceptive

By OSCAR COOLEY

Government interference with prices is the source of a vast amount of evil. It comes about because of the widespread impression that firms can set their own prices, exploiting the consumer at will.

The U.S. Steel Corporation recently announced an increase in the price of steel. Jones & Laughlin and National Steel soon followed. Such announcements strengthen the belief that firms control their selling prices, raising them at will. This causes resentment toward the corporations and a cynical distrust of the capitalist system.

Even U.S. Steel's "control" is exercised within narrow limits. A selling price is determined by the buyers' demand for the goods and the producers' supply, which in turn is determined by the cost of purchasing or producing that good. The seller can boost demand by advertising, but advertising also increases cost of production. So the seller must reckon with all these variables in deciding precisely what price to announce.

Broadly speaking, in a free system, all prices — and these include wages, which are the price of labor — move up and down with the demand and supply of the good or service being priced. No firm is powerful enough to act against these forces.

This is the most important single principle in economics. Most of our social troubles are caused by ignoring or denying this principle. Consider the persistent unemployment. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, 7.5 workers out of every 100 lack jobs. Among teenagers, the lack is much worse, and among teenager blacks, the jobless are said to be 35 percent. These percentages have changed little in two years.

This is not because of lack of work to be done. A vast amount of work cries out. Potential jobs are all around. In home building, for example. Decent, comfortable single - family homes are scarce. They are so costly that people are existing in shacks, tents, trailers. The building of homes alone would provide work for many thousands of people.

Consider highways. We have fine ones, but they were built in the past and for years have been pounded by the huge semis that have replaced the defunct railroads. They are wearing out; many need repair or rebuilding.

Another of our growth areas — sad to say — is crime. We have a shortage of policeman to keep law and order. Our judges complain of overwork. More jails and prisons must be built; even now criminals are being released simply for lack of prison space. They will have to be watched by probation officers, but these are all too few.

One wonders if there is a surplus of labor anywhere. If not, why 7.5 percent unemployment?

There is unemployment only at certain wage levels. It occurs because of unwillingness to let wages seek natural levels. Laws made by man are assumed to be superior to natural laws.

For example, Congress years ago enacted the Davis - Bacon and Walsh - Healy acts, which say that nobody can work for a firm that is filling a government contract unless they get the "going" wage, which has been interpreted by the bureaucrats to mean the union wage. Government contracts are let on a competitive basis, but unions are monopolies, and union wages are not competitive. Result: fewer people were hired than would have been at moderately lower wages.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:
After attending Tuesday's city commission meeting, I must say that I am appalled by the lack of courtesy and consideration shown in the conduct of certain city commission members, namely Mayor Thompson and City Attorney Lane.

Several times while receiving comments from citizens addressing the meeting, the gentlemen chose to not only ignore the speakers, but to carry on whispered conversation during time allotted to discussion from the floor.

Apparently hearing no opposition, the city commission passed city ordinance number 902. This ordinance allows our city to steal cars from private property if someone calls it abandoned or junk.

Who is someone? Who knows? This is not stipulated in the ordinance.

If the city commission can ignore the voiced comments of persons in attendance and the signatures of more than 400 others, what kind of legislation will they cram down our throats next?

Certainly, this type of behavior is not becoming to any elected public official, nor do I see any method to this legislation other than putting the city in competition with private enterprises in the junk car business.

I feel like some sort of reform is needed, in both our city commission and their methods of dealing with the citizens who elected them. Thank you.

Dear Editor:
The phrase "Taxation Without Representation" rang loud and clear as a rallying cry to our forebears as they initiated their historical Revolutionary War against an oppressor.

Basically, the phrase meant that the people in this country were being assessed unfairly and grossly because they held no seats in Parliament through which they could air their grievances. The situation was remedied when the war was won. Remedied, yes; eliminated, no. We have something of the same order going on today, even though it comes from a quarter other than government.

To get right down to the nitty gritty, taxation without representation, to my way of thinking, can be practiced in any area which has the ability — and opportunity — to dig into our wallets and bank accounts through the expediency of raising the prices of items we buy, and under conditions that force us to either pay or do without. In other words, we have absolutely no say in the matter when they decide to rip us off. A shining (or corroded) example of this is the union that controls the automotive industry; there are others — many of them — which are similar.

At regular intervals the hierarchy of the example union starts beating its chest and exhorting the rank and file to "strike The Ford Motor Company" or anybody else who manufactures automobiles and their components. But who are they actually "striking"? The buying public, that's who! Auto companies cannot possibly absorb the added costs forced upon them by union "agreements" so they simply pass these increases on to us. (The word "agreements" is encased in quotes purposely to emphasize the fact that they are not truly such, but are something attained under duress and threat from union officials sitting at the "bargaining" table; "bargaining" being another word which belies its true meaning.)

And right there is the crux of the situation: where in heaven's name are we, the consumers, represented? Somewhere between the chest-beaters and the cringing company executives there should be a body of citizens as a buffer to protect our own interests. But there is no such body, as you well know, and the result of the "bargaining" can be predicted as surely as tomorrow's dawn! The unions will come off with another pyrrhic victory that will burn darker our already - toasted "dough".

As a further indictment, you need only to recall some figures culled from a recent "Newsweek" edition. The item stated that auto workers were receiving an average hourly wage of $19 and change, whereas the average worker in this country gets $6 and change. Does this mean that the people in Detroit and Flint were doing three times as much work as those elsewhere? Poppycock! Anyone familiar with union regulations knows that jobs controlled by them are deliberately geared to the slowest worker on the line, thus making more hours for all.

In sum, we are being taxed out of new cars and many other things we would like to buy because we are without representation among those who pull the strings at "bargaining" time during all union "negotiations". In the final analysis it is we, the consuming public, who would make the binding decision as to how much we should be gouged to pay the ever - more - hungry unions!

U.S. and Canada - the 'Odd Couple'

Canada is beckoning. Our unguarded border with Canada is crossed 70 million times each year.

The heaviest traffic is at Niagara Falls and Detroit, and much of it is American motorists seeking cheaper gasoline.

But this unique international symbiosis — this most extraordinary odd - couple relationship — has other attractions for Americans.

For AP, Charles Hanley has been watching that 3,989 mile - long border seeking to categorize the incentives: Gasoline 50 cents a gallon cheaper than stateside.

Innovative medical treatment not available in the United States.

Easy abortions, not available in Canada.

Cheaper appliances. Cheaper dentures.

X-rated movies.

It is the migration for medical purposes that may become most significant.

In a border town, a mother may elect to have her baby across the border in Canada where Canadian maternity benefits are greater.

Conversely, Canadian women from Catholic Quebec frequently enter U.S. hospitals for abortions.

American sufferers from spinal disc problems may go to Canada to have the disc "dissolved" with Chymo Pappin which the FDA has not approved for use in the U.S.A.

Chenodeoxycholic acid — abbreviated "Cheno" is one of the new drugs I happen to know is not new.

Cheno was discovered in 1968 at the Mayo Clinic by Drs. Thistle and Schoenfeld, publicly reported in 1969.

For 13 years it has been under study in the United States — but it is not yet in use in the country in which it was discovered. It has been in use for five years in much of the rest of the world.

Our FDA declines to make it available — though thus dissolving gallstones might make unnecessary 250,000 operations every year.

May 18 there is to be a meeting of the American Gastroenterologic Assn. in New York. Then and there the results of government - supervised tests in the United States will be announced.

From insiders at hospitals where the tests have been conducted I hear nothing but favorable reports.

Because Cheno is not patentable — this research has been entirely government sponsored.

For that reason, some further delay would not come as a surprise.

Though other nations are dissolving gallstones with Cheno and with a new-generation gallstone - dissolving bile called Urso, routinely, and without any significant negative effects.

Somewhere between reckless enthusiasm for what's new and our government's inexcusable refusal to accept the research of others is a responsible protection of the public interest.

Legislature dealt with energy and environment in last session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Energy and the environment were key issues of the recently adjourned Texas Legislature, in which lawmakers adopted a "model" law to regulate low-level nuclear waste but rejected a gasohol proposal that supporters claim could be an answer to future energy problems.

The recent Legislature also promoted solar energy and energy conservation, appropriated money to clean up hazardous chemical wastes and voted to require the state to prepare a plan for "energy emergencies."

It also voted to impose heavy penalties on anyone stealing oil or gas field equipment and refused once again to raise state severance taxes on crude oil and natural gas.

The radioactive waste bill authorizes the State Health Department to buy land for disposal sites and to regulate activities of firms it licenses to operate them. Operators would pay into a special fund to finance "perpetual care" of all abandoned sites.

Nuclear medicine accounts for almost two-thirds of the 2.163 cubic meters of nuclear waste generated in Texas each year, and some hospitals were storing radioactive waste in barrels in their hallways because out-of-state disposal sites were refusing to handle more Texas radioactive waste.

Violators of the new law could be fined up to $100,000 a day.

"This was our big effort, and the Sierra Club views the bill as model legislation, possibly the best of its kind in the nation for regulating low-level radioactive waste," said Rick Lowerre of the club's Lone Star Chapter.

Another proposal created a new state agency — the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority — to locate and operate a burial site or contract with a private company to run it.

"The club is not excited about this (bill), because it opens the way for a possible disposal site in Texas," said Lowerre. "But if there is a disposal site in Texas, it will be well regulated."

A third measure would strengthen the health department's regulation of wastes from uranium mines. It is estimated that a million tons of uranium mining wastes were produced in the state last year.

The threat of a filibuster on the final day of the session June 11 blocked a bill to exempt gasohol from the nickel-a-gallon motor fuels tax until 1987. Gov. Bill Clements was asked to allow legislators to consider the bill in the upcoming special session, but the governor said the July 13 session would be limited to five subjects and would not include gasohol.

Gasohol is a mixture of 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent ethanol alcohol.

"Right here, the energy leader of America, a leader in production of agricultural products with a large motor fuel market is ideally suited for a gasohol industry. Not to have passed this bill is unthinkable," said Guy Austin, chairman of High Plains Grain Products Cooperative of Muleshoe.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said "14 gasohol facilities are intended or already started, but I don't believe the industry will get off the ground unless it has an incentive."

"Gasohol would not only be good for farmers," said Brown. "We need to have it as a standby in the event of a national emergency."

Legislators did approve a bill that would authorize the agriculture department to regulate small-scale gasohol production.

Two bills promoting development of solar energy cleared the Legislature. They commit the state to paying up to 20 percent of the cost of constructing experimental "solar repowering" and solar heating facilities.

The state was instructed in planning new buildings to determine whether it would be feasible to use solar energy devices. If money is available, state buildings in the Capitol complex should be renovated to include "energy conservation measures," the Legislature said.

Legislators eliminated the $5 million ceiling on the Energy Development Fund.

Under another bill, a person could be sentenced to up to 20 years in jail and fined $10,000 for stealing oil and gas field equipment.

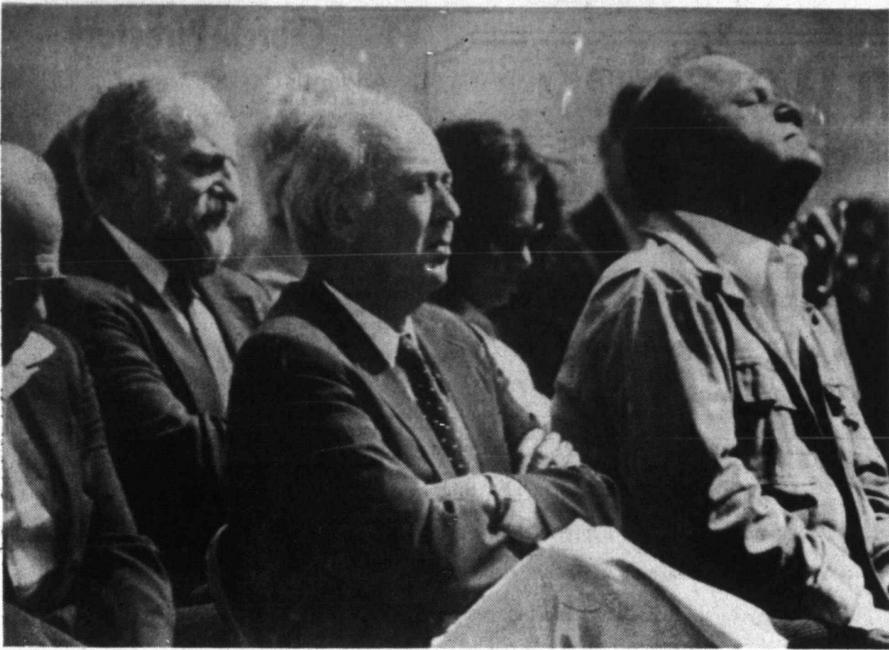

With the 1979 fuel shortage in mind, the Legislature voted to require the Division of Disaster Emergency Services in the governor's office to prepare a statewide plan that would include "provisions for energy emergencies."

Lawmakers appropriated $5.6 million, which will be added to nearly $50 million in federal funds, to clean up seven hazardous chemical waste sites. A House committee had identified 57 dangerous or potentially dangerous industrial dumps.

Sen. James "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said the sites to be cleaned are near Houston and at San Antonio, La Marque, Grand Prairie, New Waverly, Dickinson and Crosby, which the House Environmental Committee listed as "probably the worst known site in Texas."

State agencies also were given more authority in regulating injection wells to prevent pollution of underground fresh water.

The legislative policy chairman for the Sierra Club, however, described as a "sham" a proposal to govern the disposal of toxic wastes.

Bedroom community's residents object to high-rise condominiums

ALAMO HEIGHTS, Texas (AP) — A complex of luxury condominiums whose selling prices start at $300,000 apiece might be considered an asset to many Texas communities.

But in Alamo Heights — an affluent San Antonio bedroom community where residents traditionally have objected to height — plans for such a posh high-rise condominium complex costing $45 million have been met with disdain, controversy and a lawsuit.

One attorney, who objects to the condominium plans, contends outcome of the lawsuit against the City of Alamo Heights may set a precedent on whether zoning ordinances are worth the paper they are written on.

Architect and developer Robert Callaway decided earlier this year that he wanted to build two high-rise buildings — one 12 and one 8 stories tall — on a thickly wooded 17-acre tract at the headwaters of the San Antonio River, about three blocks from the Alamo Heights business district.

But Callaway was confronted with single-family zoning and a longtime city ordinance forbidding any residential structure more than 2½ stories, or 40 feet, tall in this community of old homes and old money.

The taller of the two proposed high-rise buildings would rise 165 feet — about 125 feet taller than any other dwelling in this city of about 7,000 people. It would be located across the street from several homes nestled on finely landscaped and manicured estates.

Callaway convinced the city council in February to re-zone the 17 acres to allow multi-dwelling structures, by a 3-2 vote.

Then he won another 3-2 vote of the council in April granting him an exception to the height requirement despite objections by more than 1,000 people who signed a petition. Callaway agreed to lower the buildings to 10 and 6 stories before the council acted.

Attorney Doug Harlan, who lives in the area, contends that Callaway managed to thwart the zoning and height requirements by being a member of the "good old boy" clique that rules Alamo Heights.

Callaway disagrees. He contends the undeveloped 17 acres is a unique site in Alamo Heights, which is a city that has seen San Antonio grow around it and has few open spaces left for development.

The developer has countered a lawsuit filed by several individuals and members of the Old Alamo Heights Neighborhood Association with a suit of his own, claiming $9,000 a day in damages for a nine-day delay of the proposed project by a temporary restraining order issued by District Judge James Onion Onion dissolved the order which prevented a vote of the city council, clearing it to approve the high-rise project on April 3.

Callaway contends he is transforming a jungle filled with old abandoned autos, tires and brush into a well landscaped condominium complex of which any community could be proud.

"We spent a lot of money just cleaning the debris, tires, old automobiles and trash people have thrown on it 20 or 30 years," Callaway said. "We have tremendous landscape budgets on our projects — sensitive to the environment, landscaping, the environment, everything else. We're talking about $300,000-up condominium homes."

Harlan said throwing out the longtime residential height requirement could be the beginning of the end of what has made Alamo Heights an enviable place to live since it was established as an independent city in 1922.

"It is a way of life," Harlan said. "There are previous few places anywhere in the country anymore that really are little communities where you have a nice neighborhood, where you have single-family houses with a mix of small apartments and duplexes and churches and schools. Dogs can play in the street, people jog and neighbors know each other and they talk and they have block parties."

Kay Hays, president of the association, said it filed a lawsuit because it feels the city council acted illegally in granting the zoning change and height variance to Callaway. She said because no other residential unit had been more than 2½ stories tall, that Alamo Heights has no standards for any building taller than that.

Harlan said the Alamo Heights Fire Department does not have equipment to fight fire in high-rise buildings and the city has no standards requiring such fire safety.

Mrs. Hays said her group, which flew a balloon adjacent to the high-rise site to show residents just how tall the high-rises would be, was discouraged that so many older homes in Alamo Heights were being torn down and replaced with apartment units and condominiums that are not required to meet any standards.

"You're changing the whole atmosphere in Alamo Heights and we don't particularly want 130 families on a piece of property that has zero population," she said.

Callaway, however, said he expected the city would prevail in the lawsuit and he was going ahead with plans to build the condominiums.

He contends opposition to the plan has died down considerably since he won the city council vote and the last city election failed to change the 3-2 margin in his favor on the council.

"We will start the road system, utilities and there will be months and months of that. We're going ahead as planned. I think most of the objection has subsided," the developer said.

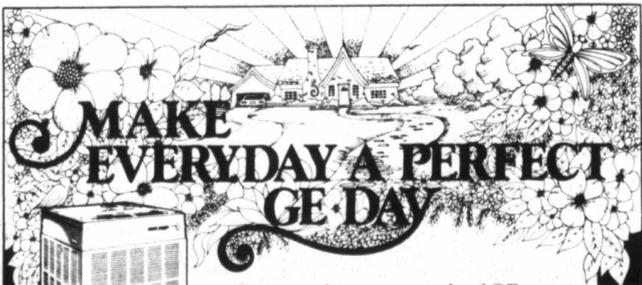

James Drought, attorney for the Neighborhood Association, said he expected trial of homeowners' lawsuit to take place within 60 to 90 days.

"The validity of the permit to build the high rise and the zoning amendment are still at issue in the lawsuit," said Drought, who further contends a three-fourths vote of the council was necessary to amend the city charter.

Harlan argues if opponents of the high-rise lose the suit, it spells hard times ahead for residents of any city who want to control their communities through zoning ordinances.

"If they get away with this, it would be so precedent-setting that zoning ordinances, in my judgment, don't amount to anything. If they survive our legal challenge and the courts uphold what they've done, then, why have zoning ordinances? They don't exist."

Religion in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Roman Catholicism in 1980 registered its biggest membership gain in 15 years, passing the 50-million mark, but its corps of priests, nuns and seminarians continued to decline.

At the same time, overall church membership in the nation remained at a virtual standstill at about 133.4 million.

However, the number of Roman Catholics rose to 50,449,842, an increase of 637,664 over the year before, and the biggest gain since the 766,248 increase in 1965.

"There seems to be a return to the church," says Thomas H. Walsh, business manager of P.J. Kenedy & Sons which compiles the annual statistics for the Official Catholic Directory.

He notes that "a lot of people had turned the church off" following the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65, but apparently now were returning, with baptisms and conversions also up.

However, some of the membership gain came from the heavy influx of mostly Catholic Cubans and Mexicans, with particularly large increases in the most affected regions of California and Florida.

The new figures also showed a continuing shrinkage in the numbers of priests, which fell to 58,398, down 432, and of nuns, which dropped to 122,653, down 3,864.

The decline in nuns has been heavy since the 1966 peak of 181,421, but had seemed to level off in recent years until the new sharp drop in 1980.

Meanwhile, overall church membership in the country remained almost unchanged at a total of 133,469,690, a gain of only 80,914 or .06 of a percent, far less than the population growth of 1 percent.

The overall figures were reported in the 1981 Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches compiled by the National Council of Churches.

As in recent years, most major mainline Protestant denominations continued to shrink, while the losses were almost evenly offset by gains in conservative denominations and Roman Catholicism.

However, the losses slowed in the mainline Protestant bodies, and were reversed in the Episcopal Church, edging upward again. Southern Baptists continued strong growth, now totalling 13.6 million.

The overall totals show about 73 million Protestants, 50 million Roman Catholics, 6 million Jews and 4 million Eastern Orthodox Christians.

The 1981 Catholic Directory reports a total of 12,468 seminary students studying for the priesthood, down 758 from a year ago, and continuing a steady slide since the 1965 peak of 48,992.

However, the drop is somewhat mitigated by the fact that most high school-level seminaries have closed down, with only older, advanced students now counted. A much bigger percentage of current seminarians actually become priests than when the younger prospects also were counted.

Religion roundup

ATLANTA (AP) — Local church congregations, rather than shrinking away like dinosaurs into extinction as had been predicted a decade ago, survive as "the most pervasive and powerful" of Christian organizations, a researcher says.

James Hopewell, director of the Rollins Center, set up with a grant at Emory University to study the viability of local congregations, says they had been expected in the 1960's to fade away and be replaced by new alternatives such as communes.

"This hasn't proved to be the case," he says. "In fact, those new forms of religious associations have not proved too helpful... The local congregation is the most pervasive and powerful form of Christian organization there is today."

NEW YORK (AP) — Studies on anti-Semitism by the American Jewish Committee find that "on balance... the Jewish position in the U.S. remains secure."

The report says that while the number of anti-Semitic incidents has risen sharply in the last year, "it would be a mistake to interpret the recent outbreaks as signaling a new and dangerous wave of anti-Semitism in the United States."

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 3,000 Salvation Army officers and soldiers from 11 eastern states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands were gathered in New York this week for three days of street-corner evangelism, music-making and marching.

The occasion is the Army's Eastern Territory Congress, starting this Friday, June 12, which plans to set in motion a major effort to strengthen and reaffirm the Army's goals of spreading the gospel and helping the needy.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

★ A NEW BIBLE... ★

for ME!

She really is delighted because her church is presenting her with a new Bible. She understands and appreciates this gift, because in earning it she has committed many verses to memory, and thus learned to value God's word. The churches desire that all would study and learn to love God. Plan to attend church and share in this knowledge and joy.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Wilson says lack of Arab reaction to attack intriguing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The most intriguing thing about Israel's bombing of a nuclear reactor in Iraq earlier in the week is the lack of outrage from other Arab countries, says Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas.

"You haven't heard anything from Syria. Nothing from Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Sudan. Even (Moammar) Khadafy has said nothing. To me, it indicates a tacit acceptance, and perhaps some relief that it happened," Wilson said Thursday afternoon.

He expressed his views in a news conference called explicitly to give his complete endorsement to Israel's attack. Had the country waited another 2 to 3 weeks, it might well have opened itself up to a nuclear attack from Iraq, he said.

"The United States — even the United States — would act similarly if such an example were to occur in Cuba. I don't think Israel had any choice," Wilson said.

"The best time to kill a snake is when you've got the hoe in your hand. They acted no differently than Egypt would have if Libya had been the one with the nuclear reactor."

He called Iraq the most barbaric and murderous of all nations.

There's no question, Wilson said, that if Iraq had been allowed to proceed with construction at its nuclear site, it would have proceeded to bomb Israel.

"Iraq is the only Middle East country that never even signed the ceasefire with Israel in 1948, and they have never tried to keep secret what they intended to do with it once they got it built," Wilson said.

Unlike most other nuclear reactors, there was no possibility Iraq's could have a peaceful purpose such as electrical power generation, Wilson said.

Based on briefings he received from intelligence personnel in two congressional subcommittees, Wilson said he is convinced it was a matter of "two or three weeks" before Iraq's nuclear reactor would have been armed.

"I don't think Israel had any choice," he said.

Although few of his colleagues have talked publicly of their feelings about the bombing, Wilson said he feels the House and Senate is overwhelmingly in support of Israel.

Congressmen have been silent, "I think because, since the Vietnam War particularly, it's anathema to even suggest the use of force. But when somebody's loading their gun, that's the time to shoot them. And that's what Israel did."

As an aside, Wilson said it's gratifying to note "that some pro-Western country CAN carry out a successful military operation. Certainly the United States can't. And wouldn't it if it could."

Israel went to Baghdad with six F-16 planes carrying two 2,000-pound bombs each and connected on the target with 11 of the bombs. There's speculation that even the 12th "dud" was planned.

"They're not back in the reactor yet because of the missing 2,000-pound bomb still around somewhere," Wilson noted.

The Reagan administration has asked Congress to consider whether the sale of military planes to Israel should be cancelled, but Wilson said he feels the administration is doing only what it has to do to keep from openly condoning the bombing.

"I think the administration reaction was carefully thought out, but I don't think it's anything that Israel has to worry about. I think (the statement) was cosmetic, but they felt they had to do something."

Asked whether, at the briefing of congressmen, that Pentagon officials appeared pleased with Israel's success, Wilson smiled and paused several seconds before he answered.

Interstate gas pipeline approved

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. probably will appeal a federal agency's approval to build a natural gas pipeline from Oklahoma to Arkansas, Arkla president Sheffield Nelson says.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission approved Thursday the 285-mile gas pipeline from McAlester, Okla., to near Searcy.

The pipeline will carry as much as 170 million cubic feet of gas a day from the Arkhoma Basin, along the Oklahoma-Arkansas border. At Searcy, it will connect with a long-line transmission line that will carry gas to other areas.

Ozark Gas Pipeline Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Texas Oil and Gas Corp., will operate the pipeline, which is owned by Texas Oil and Gas and three other companies.

Pack rat collects clothes, loves playing 'dress-up'

HOLLAND, Pa. (NEA) - Ruthanne Bowen belongs in a time long past. The trouble is that she can't decide just which time.

They all look good to the irrepresible pack rat with a very particular passion. She collects - no, hoards - old clothes and anything to do with the making of those clothes.

"Wouldn't you have just loved to live in the 1870s?" she asks over her shoulder, pawing through a deep hat box in the basement of her husband's pharmacy. "People were so absolutely practical then. It must have been wonderful to wear these things every day."

In that basement is an eclectic assortment of straw hats, colonial breeches, lace collars, pearl buttons, fringed flapper dresses and pointy-toed shoes. She revels in the collection, discovering something every time she roots through the bags and boxes and racks.

"Do you know what this is?" she asks. "Why, I think it's a hair collector - you know, what people put strands of their hair in. Hair was considered very valuable years ago, and people saved it to make things out of. This is just great. I love coming down here and poking around."

It's appropriate that Mrs. Bowen is fascinated by hats and shoes and everything worn-in-between.

Her grandmother was a milliner. Her uncle collected beaver hats and rich-looking coats for theatrical productions. Her mother treasured the clothes of the family's ancestors.

"Everybody hated to throw things out," she says. "And I'm just like them... I guess you can tell."

Awhile back Mrs. Bowen ran an antique shop with the clothes as featured items. But it got to be too much like work and not enough like fun, so today she sells hat pins and starched cuffs and Victorian bonnets on an occasional basis.

"When it gets so I can't move down here, I sell off some of this stuff," she says, digging through a trunk that has to be in here somewhere."

She lectures and produces fashion shows for women's groups, too. Last month she carted armfuls of her treasures to a local vocational-technical school to speak with a class on fashion design.

"The girls went crazy over these clothes," she recalls, perching a hideous black hat with oversized flowers and braided ropes on her head. ("Somebody must have thought she was gorgeous in this thing," she says with a giggle. "You couldn't fit anything else on this hat if you tried.")

"Anyway, the girls tried on the clothes and took pictures and couldn't believe people actually made everything by hand years ago. The thing that really got them were the hat pins," continues Mrs. Bowen, her voice muffled as she holds two such pins held between her teeth while she struggles to arrange a wide hat over her tight brown curls.

"I showed them, like this, how you stick the pins through the hat and catch some of your hair to keep the hat from blowing off," she says. "They thought that was barbaric or something. But I explained that hat pins had a purpose back then, that they weren't just something people collected for show."

Modeling finds and rummaging through the disarray to find more. Mrs. Bowen gives a running commentary: "Aren't these outrageous? Ladies wore these cuffs to keep their blouses clean in the office. And these men's spats; nobody could get them on over their shoes today..."

"Horsehair lasts forever. People made hats and purses and things out of it, and they're still good as new. The hair doesn't wear out..."

"Flapper hats from the 1920s. You'll tell by the shape. True flappers wore tight ones, like helmets or sort of like bathing caps. They fit down around the head and little spit curls stuck out around the edges..."

"This green dress is from the flappers' time, too. The drop waist is typical; so is the pleating and the crepe fabric. Everybody thinks that flappers wore miniskirts, but actually they wore all different lengths as the mood suited them..."

"Aren't these a scream? These are men's undies, all handmade. The guy who wore these must have been a real chubby. They buttoned. Can you imagine anybody buttoning on their underwear today?"

"This pretty thing is a wedding hat for a Czechoslovakian woman. The black ribbons are for when she wore it after the ceremony; they showed she was married..."

"If I can get to them - ah, here they are - these are men's tuxedos from the 1940s. Not so long ago. They can be worn today with a little modification. Classy, huh?"

"Bloomers! Aren't they great? You wore these under full skirts. Oh, they're so ugly!"

"Everybody who comes down here flips over these Victorian tops. See the stays inside? Kind of like a built-in bra. They kept the bodice stiff. You'd have to be pretty skinny to get into these things; that's why nobody buys them from me, I guess. My mother used to tell me about people being sewn into dresses. I can see why..."

"Now this is an old nurse's coat and uniform. As far as I can tell, it's from the World War I period. Neat, huh? Looks real official. I had a man's old war uniform, and sold it to a guy. But it was so small! I can't believe they had soldiers that small!"

One of her favorites is a wedding dress from the 1890s. "Isn't it elegant?" she asks. "I'd get married again just to wear it!"

Mrs. Bowen pauses, as much for breath as to take stock of the marvelous mess.

"You're taking your life in your hands to come down here," she says with a grin. "I swear I could die down here and nobody'd find my body for weeks! I really should stop collecting. But I can't help it. Old clothes are just so beautiful!"

CLOTHES COLLECTOR Ruthanne Bowen poses in and with two of her favorite outfits: a vintage bathing suit and a wedding gown from the 1890s. "I'd get married again just to wear it!" she exclaims.

you imagine anybody buttoning on their underwear today?"

"This pretty thing is a wedding hat for a Czechoslovakian woman. The black ribbons are for when she wore it after the ceremony; they showed she was married..."

"If I can get to them - ah, here they are - these are men's tuxedos from the 1940s. Not so long ago. They can be worn today with a little modification. Classy, huh?"

Dear Abby

New wife thinks three's a crowd

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Bill and I have been divorced for nine years and have three teen-aged children who live with me. Bill remarried five years ago, and he and his wife, Ella, live nearby with their 2-year-old daughter. (I am single.)

I have remained friendly with Bill's family and am invited to all their family get-togethers. When Bill married Ella, she made it clear that she would not attend any family gathering that included me.

Naturally, Bill refused to attend those family affairs without Ella, so they both stayed away. Bill's parents are very unhappy because Bill and Ella no longer attend the family Christmas Eve celebration. I feel that if I'm invited, I must be wanted.

There was a death in Bill's family recently, and Bill called and asked me to please stay away from the funeral because he and Ella were going to be there and Ella would feel uncomfortable if I was there. I stayed away.

Do you think I should decline any further invitations from Bill's family in order to allow Ella to attend? I don't like feeling that it's my fault because Bill and Ella miss his family gatherings.

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: If you are invited, that means you are wanted, so go if you wish. If Ella stays away because your presence makes her uncomfortable, that's her problem, not yours.

DEAR ABBY: Now that football training has nearly begun, I would like to bring up something that has bothered me for a long time. The boys love the sport and they love to win, but year after year they are told to "hit hard." As one coach told his team of 8-year-olds, "You'll know you've hit hard enough when you leave the other guy bleeding!" (This is building character?)

As a mother I want to speak out against this kind of brutality. My son's coach tells the boys that they have to be mean to play good football. The "meanest" boys are praised, and the gentle ones are subjected to verbal degradation.

Many of the boys say they don't hit hard because they don't really want to hurt the other boy. Now maybe I've missed something somewhere along the line, but I think the child who doesn't want to hurt anybody seems to have the right idea.

Abby, isn't there enough meanness in this world without encouraging our young men to be meaner?

ONE LAD'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'd say you made a winning point.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old student who travels to and from the city every day. I always get a seat both to and from work. My question is whether I should give up my seat to an older person. I also put in a long day and would rather sit than stand. What do you suggest?

DAVID

DEAR DAVID: Everyone would rather sit than stand, but only one with a tender conscience would ask that question. When you are truly tired, defer only to the truly needy.

'Pareo' scarf can make entire wardrobe

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) - Scarfs are often used to vary beach and patio dressing, but the "pareo" from Echo Scarfs can make a whole wardrobe. The pareo is a huge square large enough to wrap the body, rather like a big beach towel. However, the pareo comes in a series of colorful floral border prints.

The pareo can be varied simply by the way you fold and knot it. Two ways of shoulder tying create over-dresses for a body stocking or even a swimsuit. Make a sun-suit by tying the pareo first in front, then passing it between the legs, rolling up the edge and tying around the waist.

Used with a smaller scarf in the same print, Echo's pareo becomes a variety of skirts. The second scarf, which should be 36-inches square or more, is used to make a bandeau, a midriff-barer top or a halter. The pareo itself can be tied in front with a rosette knot, wrapped sarong style or tied on one hip in a handkerchief-point effect.

To get instructions for pareo dressing, send a self-addressed envelope for the free booklet "Pareo Dressing by Echo" to Echo Scarfs Inc., 32 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

What a pear!

Here's the diet version of a classic dessert. Place three halved ripe pears in a steamer. Pour over a mixture of one-half cup hot water, three tablespoons brown sugar and one teaspoon butter. Cover, bring to a boil, then simmer 20 minutes. While pears cool, cream together in a pan three tablespoons cocoa, two tablespoons water and three tablespoons sugar. Simmer five minutes. Serve each pear half over a scoop of vanilla ice milk and top with hot chocolate sauce. Makes six servings, 220 calories each.

Chinese dish has asparagus, veal

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Because that epicurean vegetable, asparagus, is still available in reasonable supply in June, we pass along a Chinese recipe using it that was much enjoyed at our house.

Chinese friends who cook beautifully have been telling us for some years that you don't necessarily have to own a wok to make Chinese dishes. Some of them have used black iron skillets. Now one of them has been experimenting with skillets and saucepans with that latest nonstick surface — Silverstone. A number of manufacturers are making cookware of this sort; in trying it in our own kitchen we have found it the best of the nonstick surfaces to date.

Here then is a Chinese asparagus - and - veal main dish made in one of these new saucepans. Veal was used because these days its lean quality highly recommends it. Good veal is expensive, true, but this dish calls for only half a pound of the meat and makes four servings. If you try this flavorful offering, we think you will enjoy it.

CHINESE VEAL AND ASPARAGUS

1 1/2 pounds asparagus
1/2 pound veal, thinly sliced
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Peanut oil
Sauce, recipe follows
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon water

Break off tough ends of asparagus and discard; wash asparagus. Cut diagonally into 1 - inch - long by 1/2 - inch - thick pieces. Cut veal into 2 - inch - long pieces. Stir together the cornstarch, soy sauce and 1 teaspoon of the oil until smooth and mix well with the veal.

Make the Sauce and reserve.
Over medium heat preheat a 3 - quart saucepan with a nonstick surface (or a wok); add 2 tablespoons of the oil and the asparagus; stir - fry for 2 minutes. Stir in sugar and water. With a slotted spoon transfer to a hot platter and keep warm.

Using medium heat, reheat the clean, dry saucepot or wok; add 2 tablespoons of the oil. Add the veal and its marinade and stir - fry just until the meat changes color. Stir the reserved sauce and pour it, stirring, over the veal to heat; do not overcook. Spoon over the asparagus and serve at once.

Sauce: Stir together until blended 1 teaspoon cornstarch, 1/2 teaspoon sugar, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, 1 tablespoon dry sherry, 1 teaspoon white rice - wine vinegar and 1 tea. spoon sesame - seed oil.

Retired president keeps to himself

By Tom Tiede

PLAINS, Ga. (NEA) - They say the best time to catch a glimpse of Jimmy Carter these days is at mid-morning. That's when he strolls from his highway home here to his nearby office; along the way he sometimes waves to camera-snapping tourists or stops to exchange greetings with the passers-by.

"Hello, Mr. President."

"Good to see you."

"How you?"

"I'm fine. Shopping?"

"Yes, sir. Groceries."

Those who see him say the town's most notable resident is friendly and looks well. They report that he dresses in jeans, and his long-sleeved sport shirts are ever pressed and impeccable. Sometimes he is trailed by an associate or two, and glum Secret Service agents secure every step of his route.

The office here is a converted brick house; a sign in the driveway carefully advises the uninvited to keep on moving.

Carter spends several hours a week in the Plains office. Wise says he's on the phone a good lot and also answers mail. Primarily, however, he works on the plans for his presidential library; the plans are far from being complete, but indications are the library will probably be built in Atlanta.

Atlanta say Carter is seeking advice concerning the library. He is known to want it to be significant and highly educational but not pretentious. He recently visited the Lyndon Johnson library in Texas and believes it's too big; the thinking is the Harry Truman library in Missouri is more to his liking.

Carter is also shopping for suggestions regarding his presidential memoirs. Wise says he doesn't want it to be self-serving, but it won't be apologetic either. Carter is said to be receiving as much as $2 million in advances for the manuscript, and Wise reports he's working on it five to six hours a day.

That $2 million will constitute the bedrock of Carter's financial security in years to come. But he won't have to worry about inflation in any event. He has been a millionaire since before his presidency, and he recently sold the family peanut warehouse for a personal share of more than $1 million.

Wife Rosalynn may also be soon to contribute to the couple's tidy fortune; she is preparing to write a book of her own. And, of course, Carter has a retirement income. He receives a $69,630 pension from the federal government and is also allotted from $200,000 to $300,000 to maintain offices.

Large as it is, Carter's income is not out of line for recently retired presidents. Lyndon Johnson returned home to far more money. And Richard Nixon has earned several million dollars since resigning the office. Even Gerald Ford's personal worth has quadrupled from what it was a few years ago.

Ford, in fact, may be in a wage-earning class of his own now. He is alleged to be making nearly $1 million from sundry occupations. Newsweek magazine recently reported that he serves on seven corporate boards and is a consultant to five others. Also, he makes up to $15,000 a night at speaking engagements.

Apparently, Jimmy Carter thinks Ford has gone too far. He says that it's inappropriate to commercialize White House service. Some people claim this may be one reason the former chief executive has not gotten out more in Plains; it's no secret this rural hamlet wrote the book on peddling the presidency.

When Carter was elected, Plains became one of the most shameless tourist traps in the nation. Ten thousand people would visit on the weekends, and residents organized hasty corporations to sell cheap trinkets, bad peanuts and square-inch plots of Carter Country; the latter were $1 each, remember?

Tour trains developed. And kids sold stones they swiped from the president's yard. Local names became internationally familiar, television documentaries were filmed, and a thoroughly discredited pornographer named Larry Flynt sent in agents to purchase and scandalize the only newspaper in town.

President Carter repeatedly asked for moderation, but his own close relatives were the worst offenders. A cousin doubled prices in his worm store, a sister tried to hawk interviews and a brother, Billy, soon became so outrageously disreputable that he was paid to wear a suit of armor made of beer cans tabs.

Then Ronald Reagan was elected. Today the trinket shops are still open in Plains, but few tourists are here to frequent them. The touring train depot is overgrown with grass, the special attraction posters have faded badly, and Billy Carter's gas station is under new and less notorious management.

The mayor says business is down by as much as 75 percent. There is graffiti in the lavatory of the empty tourist park. Flynt has sold out, as have most of the other commercial opportunists. Carter's cousin Hugh, the worm man, says things may pick up this summer, but the opinion is not widely shared.

Meantime the disruption has taken a heavy toll. Particularly on the Carter family. No longer in demand, Billy Carter is now virtually broke and heavily in debt. He's accepted a job as a traveling salesman, and he says he may have to sell his property to take care of debts estimated at near $500,000.

Billy is also somewhat estranged from his brother. And so are others of the clan. The former president is reported to believe that, collectively, some of the Carters were a drag on his administration. As a result, he keeps his distance. A neighbor says he's friendly with them — "but not really warm."

Rosalynn Carter is especially cool to the offenders and, if gossip is believed, to the town of Plains as well. Some women here say she has not joined the social groups nor shown any interest in community work. They say she is bitter about her husband's election defeat and would rather be in Washington. The rumor here is that wife and daughter would like to move. At least to Atlanta. And the speculation is that Carter is not altogether opposed to the notion. O neighbor thinks the form president is just waiting on his mother dies (Miss Lillian 82) "and then he'll clear out of here."

But for now there is no indication the neighbor is right. And so far as his aides are concerned, Carter will live out his life in the gray hor on Highway 280. And that could be some time; the average lifespan of a president of office has been 12 years historically; Herbert Hoover lived for 35.

At 56, Carter seems to be a candidate for the extended life expectancy. Alwa; healthy, indeed even vigorous he still rises with the bird (5:30 a.m.) and goes to bed 11. He likewise continues to jog frequently during the week, and aide Phil Wise says he walks in the pinewoods on bicycles the roads.

Yet no one has found a real place for them. And the outlook is that Jimmy Carter will be no different. Like the rest he will probably fade away in dignity, under the eyes of the eternal Secret Service, an hope for the day the nation concedes that he may no have been such a bad president after all.

ROTC popular again after slump

By KEN KLEIN

Associated Press Writer
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — When young Iranian revolutionaries seized the U.S. Embassy in Iran, Florida teen-ager Cindy Kirby worried that America's power and pride had slipped to a low ebb.

Months later, she decided to do something about it. Inspired by patriotism and her concern that U.S. military might was "going down the hole," Miss Kirby joined the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps — ROTC — at Florida State University.

Nearly a decade after the anti-war movement focused its rage on ROTC, causing enrollments to plummet, the military is staging a dramatic comeback on American campuses.

"They're not even spitting on us anymore," says one ROTC instructor, referring to the turbulent Vietnam era when students wearing military uniforms were targets for insults and ROTC buildings were attacked by demonstrators.

Nationwide ROTC enrollment reached 92,172 in 1980, up more than 6 percent from the previous year. In 1974, overall enrollment declined to 63,266 students, says Pentagon spokesman Bill Caldwell.

"The Vietnam War was devastating on ROTC," Caldwell says. "But we've been climbing back since 1974."

The growth has occurred in Army and Air Force officer training programs, which account for most of ROTC's enrollment. The Navy unit — the smallest in ROTC — has been steady in the past four years.

"Air Force ROTC has been increasing about 10 percent a year since 1976," says a spokesman at Maxwell Air Force Base, near Montgomery, Ala.

Military brass and instructors cite two key reasons for ROTC's resurgence: increased student patriotism after the Vietnam conflict and skyrocketing costs of college amid a sluggish economy.

"The Iranian thing has given us a big booster shot of patriotism," says Maj. Ted Timberlake, who oversees a Junior ROTC program in five high schools in Lee County, south of Tampa in southwest Florida.

Timberlake says he's so encouraged by ROTC enrollment growth in high schools that he has launched a recruiting program in local middle schools.

Military instructors who witnessed the protest furor during the Vietnam conflict say today's students are more passive toward young people wearing uniforms and military-style haircuts.

"Our (ROTC) people are pretty well accepted by the general college population," says Air Force spokesman Richard Howland. "The University of California at Berkeley was a hot spot during the war, but we've got a fine ROTC detachment out there now."

Meanwhile, more students are seeking military scholarships. A four-year ROTC scholarship includes payments for tuition, books, lab fees and a $1,000 annual stipend.

"Plus, ROTC graduates have a guaranteed job waiting for them at the end of college," says Howland.

Florida State freshman cadet Jeff Grantham, a high achiever who had his choice of college programs, says he was attracted to Air Force ROTC because he doesn't have to borrow money to attend college. A member of the National Honor Society in high school, he was awarded a full ROTC scholarship.

Present interest rate gap is astounding

NEW YORK (AP) — Interest rate watchers have been studying the gap in recent days, and now declare they've never seen anything to match it.

They suggest that if you want to guess where the economy is headed you too should view the Grand Canyon of the monetary world, the gap, or the difference between the inflation and interest rates.

Here is one measure of its vast breadth: Inflation, averaged over the past 12 months or so, has been about 10 percent, but the current prime rate is around 20 percent. That makes the gap 10 points, versus a historical average of 3 points or so.

The gap is dramatized even more by comparing the prime interest rate with the 4.9 percent annual rate of consumer price inflation in April. That way, the gap comes to about 15 percentage points.

Compare inflation with new issues of "Aaa" Bell Telephone bonds and you also come up with a big gap, in the single digits but still much, much larger than what might be expected in more normal times.

However measured, the gap is the "widest in memory," says Albert Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc. "Something's got to give."

Which is to say, the gap is bound to grow narrower. But how? More inflation? Lower interest?

Fortunes are won and lost on such guesses, but Cox, for one, thinks interest rates will fall. And, in fact, there are indications the drop may have begun from the recent prime rate high of 20.5 percent.

"Interest rates are bound to give," he says, "and probably soon." He lists these reasons: "Lower monetary growth is necessary and that prerequisite is likely to be met in the months ahead. Look also for the following relevant news items: a price freeze by OPEC, downward revisions of food price forecasts, a string of weak economic reports, and a tax cut compromise by the White House accompanied by lower prospective budget deficits."

And finally, "single-digit inflation is likely to be reported during most months of this year's second half."

Cox will get some arguments about his views which, of course, is par for the economics craft. There are some, for example, who feel the gap might be narrowed by higher prices, and they are prepared to defend their views.

Lowering estate taxes

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers and ranchers have been concerned for years about high taxes that erode their estates. Now the Texas Agriculture Extension Service has developed a special program to help take the bite out of high estate taxes.

Three two-day seminars are planned which will help farmers and ranchers learn how to reduce taxable estates and learn new methods for passing their operations to the next generation.

These special seminars on "How to Lower Your Estate Tax Burden" are scheduled as follows: Lubbock, June 18-19; Wichita Falls, July 22-23; and Amarillo, Aug. 27-28.

Each seminar will begin with a discussion on estate taxes, including deductions, expenses and tax rates, points our Dr. Wayne Hayenga, a lawyer and Extension Service economist.

Basic estate planning devices will be explained in depth. Among these are wills, by-pass trusts, gifts, equalizing estates, disclaimers and property titles.

There will also be a separate segment of the program devoted to treating beneficiaries fairly

First National pounds Cree in Babe Ruth play

First National Bank took over command of first place in the Babe Ruth League with a 25-10 win over Cree Company Thursday night at Optimist Park.

First National (8-4) is now a half-game ahead of Pampa Hardware (7-4) in the 14-15 division. Cree falls to 7-6.

The Bank was never threatened as it rolled up 11 runs in the first inning, and forced a halt to the game with the 10-run rule after five innings.

Coyle Winborn led the Bank's 12-hit attack with three singles and seven rbis. Troy West and Bill Fritz added two hits and two rbis each.

Toby Rithaler pitched a six-hitter for First National while striking out three. He went the full five innings, but Cree sent five pitchers to the mound in an effort to stop the scoring surge.

Todd Hardin had three hits and two rbis for the losers. David McQueen had two hits.

Pupco defeated Grant Supply, 10-5, in a 13-year-old game last night that was called after five innings due to rain.

Jeff Gaines was the winning pitcher while Wade Howard took the loss.

Pupco is now one game behind first-place Grant Supply in the league standings.

Tonight's action pits the Pampa Lions against Pampa Hardware at 6 p.m. in the 14-15 division. Richardson takes on Titan at 8:30 p.m. in a 13-year-old game.

Weather halts state schoolboy tournament

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University Interscholastic League officials hoped for clear skies and sunshine today so the rain-delayed state schoolboy baseball tournament could get underway.

All 10 semifinal games scheduled for Thursday were postponed after nearly six inches of rain fell here from midnight to mid-afternoon.

The revised schedule today called for six games on the artificial turf at Disch-Falk Field, the home of the Texas Longhorns, and four games at Nelson Field, which is used by Austin high school teams.

Bremont and Follett were matched in the 8 a.m. Class A opener at Disch-Falk.

The first game at Nelson was set for 2 p.m., so the field would have longer to dry out. It matched Shiner and Gladewater Union Grove, in 2A.

State championship games were pushed back a day to Saturday.

Here is the new schedule for first-round games today:

Class A
8 a.m. Bremont vs. Follett

Holmes meets Spinks in WBC title match

DETROIT (AP) — Three years and three days after he won the title, Larry Holmes defends his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship against Leon Spinks tonight.

Holmes will carry a 12-pound weight advantage, 212 1/2 to 200 1/4 for ex-champ Spinks, into the ring at Joe Louis Arena when he makes his 10th defense of boxing's most glamorous crown.

Also on the card are a WBC super lightweight defense by Saoul Mambly against Jo Kimpuani, and a pair of heavyweight bouts with undefeated Michael Dokes facing Briton John L. Gardner, the European champion, and Greg Page, also unbeaten, going against Alfredo Evangelista of Spain.

The Dokes-Gardner fight and the main event between Holmes and Spinks will be shown by ABC-TV, beginning at 9 p.m. EDT.

Holmes, 31, has won all 37 of his career fights, 27 of them by knockouts. Eight of those KOs came in successive title defenses after he outpointed Ken Norton for the crown June 9, 1978. His ninth and most recent defense was a 15-round decision over Trevor Berbick last April 11 at Las Vegas.

Before the Berbick fight, Holmes stopped Muhammad Ali, the same man Spinks beat in a stunning upset to win the universal heavyweight crown Feb. 15, 1978. Spinks, 27, was stripped of the WBC share of the crown because he refused to fight Norton, choosing instead to give Ali a rematch.

Norton was awarded the WBC crown and then lost it to Holmes in his first defense. Meanwhile, exactly seven months after he had beaten Ali, Spinks returned the World Boxing Association version of the crown to Ali on a 15-round decision that greased the skids for the ex-Olympic champion.

Spinks fought only once in 1979, suffering an embarrassing first round knockout against Gerrie Coetzee in Monte Carlo. But in 1980, he knocked out Evangelista, fought a 10-round draw with Eddie "Animal" Lopez, and stopped Kevin Isaac and Bernardo Mercado. The ninth-round knockout of Mercado came on the undercard of the Holmes-Ali fight in Las Vegas, Nev., and positioned Spinks for another shot at the crown.

The champion seems in superb condition under the firm training hand of Eddie Futch, who handled ex-champ Joe Frazier. Futch replaced Richie Giachetti as Holmes' trainer before the Berbick bout, a fight which ended the champion's string of knockouts.

Mambly, who celebrated his 34th birthday eight days ago, will be defending his 140-pound title for the third time. He won the crown from Kim Sang-Hyon Feb. 23, 1980 and defended against Eseban DeJesus and Termit Watkins last year. He carries a 29-12-5 lifetime record into the ring against the 31-year-old Kimpuani, a native of Zaire, who is 56-2 for his career.

Major Leaguers strike, talks continue

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, said early Friday morning that the first midseason strike in the sport's history is on.

Miller made the declaration at the end of another fruitless day of negotiations over the free agent compensation issue.

However, he said another negotiation session would be held starting at 10:15 a.m. EDT Friday, although he said he would not attend.

Ray Grebey, chief negotiation for the club owners, said the strike deadline is 2 p.m. EDT, Friday.

Miller had said previously that the strike could be headed off until the first game Friday, a National League contest in Chicago between the San Diego Padres and the Cubs which is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m. EDT.

"We made several efforts to try and resolve this and avoid the strike," said Grebey. "Unfortunately, the differences are very significant."

"We made some moves and they didn't work," he added.

"As you know, we have met most of the day and nothing has been accomplished," said Miller. "The strike is on."

Miller said the players made another proposal on the sticky compensation issue but that the owners said "they considered it and rejected it. We invited them to amend it or make a series of counter-proposals."

"We asked if they expected to have new proposals," Miller said. "If they did we would stay. But they said no."

Grebey said the Players Relations Committee, of which he is director, had no reluctance about meeting with the players and not with Miller.

He explained that there were two major areas of differences on which the sides were far apart, both of which concerned a pool of players from which teams which lost free agents could select.

"The Players Association said any settlement must include a pool of players that all teams must contribute to," he said. When asked if there was any way the owners could accept a pool where a team that did not select a free agent was contributing players to that pool, he emphatically said, "No."

When Grebey was told that Miller considered the players already on strike, he said: "We have a bargaining session at 10 in the morning. We don't take bargaining sessions lightly. If someone calls a strike before a bargaining session, I guess they're trying to tell us something."

"This issue can only be solved at the bargaining table, and we have two years invested in this. We will be here to continue negotiating even if there is a strike."

The comments were made following a 4 1/2-hour late-night meeting that ended about 12:30 a.m. EDT.

Brewers rally to down Rangers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The strain on Ted Simmons' face was evident, but the Milwaukee Brewers' players' representative hasn't forgotten his primary duties as cleanup hitter.

Simmons, weary from hours of consulting with and advising his teammates during baseball's contract talks, lined a homer and RBI triple Thursday night. Gorman Thomas and Roy Howell also homered to help Pete Vuckovich win his eighth successive decision as the Brewers defeated the Texas Rangers 6-3.

"I really don't think it's been different for me than anyone else," Simmons said of the negotiations. "Everyone is affected by this condition. At least, I've been able to make the separation of talking to the newspaper people and playing the game."

"I've had a lot to do," he said. "But everybody has been under some strain. People are still trying to do their jobs."

The Brewers, who had lost their previous four games, trailing 3-1 until Simmons lined his ninth homer with one out in the sixth.

Ben Oglivie followed with a single, then tagged up and took second on Thomas' fly to deep left center. Robin Yount slapped an RBI single to tie at 3-3.

Howell put the Brewers ahead to stay at 4-3 when he slammed his third homer deep into the right center field bullpen with two out in the seventh.

A followup single by Cecil Cooper chased loser Ferguson Jenkins, 4-5, and Simmons tripled off the left center field wall against Steve Comer to make it 5-3.

The Brewers scored their final run in the eighth. Don Money reached on an error by Buddy Bell and Thad Bosley singled with two out, chasing Comer. Pinch-hitter Sal Bando, appearing in his 2,000th major league game, walked against John Henry Johnson to load the bases, and Johnson walked Cooper to force in a run.

Thomas' 15th homer leading off the second put the Brewers ahead 1-0.

Memories of an immigrant musician

His violin has been his best friend

PITTSBURGH (NEA) - Paul Sladek is one of this city's foremost violinists as well as the teacher of many others.

He figures that in the many decades he has taught violin and music - he taught at Duquesne University for 16 years - at least 28 of the Pittsburgh Symphony's violinists have been his pupils.

"I've lost track of them," Sladek says. "Several of them are playing for symphony orchestras all over the United States."

One of his top students was William Stone, who went to New York City to become a member of a national quartet. "Stone is a fine player, a natural," says Sladek. "He would come and stay with my parents and me and take lessons."

He counts as friends the late Fritz Kreisler, Joseph Gingold and Yehudi Menuhin. When Menuhin plays in Pittsburgh, he is likely to visit Sladek's home.

Sladek was born in Vienna in the days of Emperor Franz Josef I and the Austro-Hungarian Empire. At age 7, he was taking both voice and violin lessons. He received a two-year state scholarship to further his music studies.

Gene Wilder takes his job seriously

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) - He's a Wilder and crazy guy, and he can get Wilder all the time. But there is a very serious side to Gene Wilder and it's a shame we don't see it more often.

You see flashes of the deep Gene, the compassionate and tender Gene, in almost all his films - even in his current comedy release with Richard Pryor, "Stir Crazy." And more so in another current release, "Sunday Lovers."

"Sunday Lovers" is an odd film. Wilder hastens to make the point that he is responsible for, and connected with, only one of the four segments in the movie. "Sunday Lovers" is a series of four stories about love, each involving persons of a different nationality: American, French, Italian and English.

Obviously, it is the American segment that Wilder did. He wrote it, directed it and starred in it, with Kathleen Quinlan as his leading lady. Actually, Wilder says, he's only seen his own segment and has yet to view the total work.

Wilder is a Gene-Of-All-Trades, cinematically speaking. He can do a creditable job as writer, director, actor. But he is committed to all his talents. The way Wilder sees it, he is primarily an entertainer, and he thinks he should work for other people, as well as himself, and thus broaden his appeal.

"I am in the business of entertaining as many people as I can," he says. And that's why he does his highly popular movies - he lumps them all together as "Blazing Frankenstein" - such as "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein," and the films in which he has co-starred with Richard Pryor, such as "Stir Crazy."

My "Blazing Frankenstein" pictures are just as important to me," Wilder says, "as are the pictures I've written and directed, such as "Quackster Fortune" or "The Frisco Kid" or "Sunday Lovers." The latter group may not be as commercial, but they are more personal."

While he will continue to accept acting roles for others, he will not, he believes, do a dramatic part for film, though he might do it on stage some day.

"I'd be cheating the public," he says, "if I did a dramatic role in a movie. My name on the marquee has come to mean a particular kind of movie. It's like Laurel and Hardy - the public expected certain things from Laurel and Hardy movies. If they also got a good story, fine, but if they only got a good story and none of the things they expected from Laurel and Hardy, they'd be disappointed."

His future plans can be viewed against that explanation. His next will be a comedy thriller he'll do for Sidney Poitier, who will direct. Then comes another film with Pryor, although it will not be a sequel to "Stir Crazy." And then, one of his own. It will be called "Haunted Honeymoon," and in it he will play a pianist.

His grade-school teachers, impressed with his absolute pitch, recommended his joining the Vienna Boys Choir. For several years he traveled with the choir, performing before many of the crowned heads of Europe, including Franz Josef.

When he was 11 years old, he came to the United States with his parents and brother. The family settled in East Pittsburgh, where the elder Sladek went to work as a tool and die maker for Westinghouse.

"My father was a kind man who wanted me to be a great violinist," recalls Sladek. "He brought his family to the United States from Austria to give my brother, Richard, and me a chance to grow up in a free country."

"He realized the limitations his sons would have growing up in Europe. In those days, if you were not of the aristocracy or ruling class, you had very little chance of becoming a professional man or woman."

A few years later, the elder Sladek would pay his son's way from Pittsburgh to New York City so that he could take lessons from Hungarian violinist Leopold Auer.

"Every two weeks, I'd make the trip to New York," recalls Sladek. "Many students like myself would go there and spend a weekend studying with the violin master. His pupils included some of the finest violinists."

Those were exciting times for the young immigrant. He spent his weekends in New York City and often attended recitals at Carnegie Hall.

"My chance to perform in the great metropolis came years later when I played at the old Aeolian Hall on West 43rd Street," says Sladek. "I was on the same program as Albert Spalding. During my many visits to New York, I got to meet Fritz Kreisler and often he would take time and give me free music lessons."

When the family ran into financial difficulties, Sladek quit school and started to entertain for a fee. During one of his many local performances, he played a solo violin concerto for industrialist Andrew Carnegie.

"After the concert, Mr. Carnegie asked me to visit with him backstage," Sladek remembers. "I told him all about myself and how I was performing to help my family.

"He asked me if I was able to save any money. I told him I was putting a part of my earnings away. He took me by the arm and said: 'Paul, you are a boy after my own heart. I also got my start helping my parents and putting some money aside. You'll never regret what you are doing.'"

Though Sladek had been urged by many of his contemporaries to become a concert violinist and go on the road, he says he was content to stay in Pittsburgh and teach. Devoted to his mother, he put personal ambitions aside and stayed by her side for many years when she was seriously ill.

Sladek says that through the years his violin has been his best friend. He likes to tell of returning to Vienna to further his studies and becoming stranded when World War I broke out.

"The Austrians couldn't keep me; I was an American," he says. "Eventually I arrived in Trieste, Italy, on a hospital ship with only $1 in my pocket. This didn't faze me. I played on street corners for train fare in Rome, Naples, Venice and Florence, until my father was able to send money for my passage back home."

"The Italians loved to see a young American standing on street corners and playing some of the songs they loved best."

Back in the United States, Sladek started to teach and write. Among his many accomplishments was transcribing one of Brahms' waltzes for violin and piano.

He still talks with reverence about his mentor David Hochstein, who was killed in World War I. "David transcribed a Brahms waltz for violin and dedicated it to me," he says. "It is one of the highlights of my life."

One of his prized mementos is a letter from the famed musician, theologian and medical missionary, Albert Schweitzer, who congratulated Sladek and violinist James Dela Funte for transcribing Bach's piano concerto into a violin concerto.

Sladek also has the distinction of being the first violinist to have performed a piano concerto over the air. That occurred when he was a member of the KDKA Little Symphony at the East Pittsburgh radio station. He also introduced his "Caprice Villageois," "Berceuse" and "Mazurka and Elegy" over the station.

Sladek even found time to write a handbook on violin technique titled "Thirty Minutes a Day." The book is used in teaching by violinists such as Menuhin.

Sladek has a lot of praise for today's younger musicians. "They are really good," he says. "They know the music and they know the instruments."

"At my age, it's a pleasure to turn on TV or go to a music hall and listen to such fine young men like Itzhak Perlman and know that the violin is in good hands."

SPEAKING OF SOAPS
BY MARY ANN COOPER

Have you ever dreamed about being at an elegant reception chock-filled with stars. What would you say? How would you react? Well, forty-two New Englanders had that opportunity recently when they attended the Eighth Annual Emmy Awards as a result of winning a contest sponsored by Star Markets. Joining these very special guests at the Awards were Sonia Petrovna and Allen Fawcett from "The Edge of Night" as well as Linda Gibboney and Carla Dragoni from "All My Children." Despite the crush of the crowds gathered outside the Grand Hyatt Hotel which housed this year's telecast and the traffic jams that resulted from the swell of fans spilling out onto the street, the spirit of these pilgrims was not dampened. They cheered and cheered for Doug Watson from "Another World" as Best Actor and Judith Light from "One Life to Live" as Best Actress - they applauded when Larry Haines from "Search For Tomorrow" brought home the supporting role award as they did when ex-General Hospital star Jane Elliot did the same. Perhaps the greatest round of applause was heard, however, when General Hospital was named as the Best Serial of the Year.

Before departing for home the following day, these hearty souls were wined and dined at the famed Mama Leone's restaurant. Graciously joining them for lunch were the lovely Jada Rowlands and her handsome on screen hubby from the Doctors David O'Brien. Also on hand to add to the excitement of the occasion was Christopher Knight from "Another World." Amidst this much more subdued and homey atmosphere, these out of town visitors chatted and snapped pictures of their honored guests. All were especially pleased to learn that David O'Brien was a Bostonian himself and it wasn't long before all this talk about their home town made them just a bit homesick despite how at home they felt.

But, perhaps the one person who made them feel most welcome was Richard Simmons, the soap opera watcher's exercise and diet guru. Richard was a guest on "Good Morning New York" the day after the Emmys and the same day these New Englanders were in the studio audience. Richard warmly acknowledged their presence and heaped praise on Boston as his very favorite city.

Now a look at what's been happening and what will happen on all the afternoon dramas.

David O'Brien and Jada Rowlands star as Steve and Carolee Aldrich on "The Doctors".

The autobiography of Miss McCambridge

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) - There is a mutual distrust between the print and the television media, and I don't want to sound partisan, but those guys in TV should have their heads examined.

What angers me — and Mercedes McCambridge — is the way TV has been treating Mercedes McCambridge lately. To begin with, she is a fine actress, worthy of respect for her track record, which includes an Oscar and a bunch of other performances that should have won Oscars but didn't.

Now she has written a sparkling, angry, introspective autobiography, "The Quality of Mercy." It is a book that is so alive it almost jumps into your hands on its own. But she says that, except for one, the talk shows will not have her on to discuss it.

She did do the "Today" show, where she chatted with Jane Pauley, but that's all. The others — Griffin, Douglas, Davidson, Collins, Donahue, Carson — have turned her down.

Congressional notes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine years ago, when Loyd Hackler was administrative assistant to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, he invited the senator's staff and Texas reporters to his farm in West Virginia for a picnic.

Hackler is now president of the American Retail Federation, but he and his wife, Norma, continue to have the annual picnic and on July 4 will be hosting Bentsen's staff and Texas reporters, along with their families, for the 10th straight year.

The Hackler farm is about five miles west of Charles Town, W. Va., about an hour's drive from the nation's capital, and an invitation has gone out urging guests to take the opportunity "to breathe unpolluted air (well, maybe a little cow pasture odor), partake of West Virginia barbecue (Texas style, of course) and enjoy outdoor activities."

In addition to the barbecue, Hackler says, "there will be softball, volleyball, horseback riding, horseshoes, pasture walking, barnfist playing, tree climbing, maybe blackberry picking and honeysuckle smelling."

The event ranks among the annual highlights of Texas reporters who cover the Capitol — along with the Texas State Society Barbecue, which is open to all Texans in Washington.

The Texas State Society bash is scheduled a week from Sunday. Slated for Smokey Glen Farm, a few miles west of the northern Washington suburb of Rockville, Md., it will last from 2 p.m. until dusk.

It will feature a country and western band, barbecue and beer, softball, bingo, clowns and a hayride. Bentsen's office is handling reservations for that one, with a $10 price for adults and $5 for children under 12.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, left Thursday on the 21st annual trip of the U.S.-Mexico Interparliamentary Conference trip to Mexico.

De la Garza will head the group, which will return Monday afternoon from the trip to Manzanillo, Mexico.

Rep. Chick Kazen, D-Laredo, is the only other Texan among the numerous congressmen making the trip. The U.S. and Mexican delegations will discuss immigration problems, trade and other matters of joint interest, de la Garza said.

De la Garza and his wife were among the 100 guests at a White House luncheon Tuesday honoring President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico. Mrs. de la Garza sat at the same table with Lopez-Portillo and President Reagan, while de la Garza sat with John Gavin, the U.S. ambassador to Mexico, and with the Mexican ambassador to the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican task group headed by Rep. Jack Fields, R-Humble, has made several recommendations to prevent a reoccurrence of last winter's anthracite coal shortage in New England.

Fields is the only freshman in Congress named to head a task force. His 16-member group, which includes Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, is charged with examining short-term and long-range solutions to energy-related problems. It also has been asked to study the nation's dependence on other nations for strategic raw materials.

The group concluded that because of unexpected demand, bad weather and an inadequate distribution system, anthracite coal producers were unable to meet the demand for anthracite coal for heating New England homes last winter.

Fields said his group will also be looking into issues relating to oil and natural gas production, nuclear energy and American's dependence upon other nations for its raw materials.

Research has begun for a second paper which, Fields said, will examine a particular energy-related issue and make recommendations for making America energy-independent.

News briefs

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The USS Detroit suffered no apparent damage, and "not one drop" of the millions of gallons of oil it was carrying leaked after the supply ship aground, the Navy says.

The 793-foot ship floated free from a sandy shoal in the Chesapeake Bay early Thursday after 3 million gallons of fuel — about half the amount it was carrying — were pumped out to lighten its load. The 53,600-ton vessel returned to the Norfolk Naval Station under its own power, said Lt. Ross Kudlick, spokesman for the 2nd Fleet.

There were no injuries among the 500 crew members when the Detroit ran aground Wednesday. "There was not one drop of oil leaked," Kudlick added.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The "devastating effects of the drinking driver rage unabated," but hosts cannot be held liable if a guest gets drunk and is hurt in an accident, the California Supreme Court has ruled in upholding a state law.

The high court said in a 7-0 opinion Thursday it was "forced" to deny plaintiff Richard G. Cory, a minor, his claim against Michael Shierloh for providing the alcohol that got him drunk and resulted in an auto accident in Yolo County in February 1979.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The University of Tennessee should not honor "a convicted felon," a Republican state senator says in a request that the name of former Gov. Ray Blanton be removed from three campus buildings.

Blanton was convicted Tuesday of extortion, conspiracy and mail fraud in the issuance of 12 Nashville liquor licenses to his friends. He remains free pending appeal.
