Lennon suspect pleads guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark David Chapman pleaded guilty today to the murder last December of ex-Beatle John Lennon.

Chapman changed his plea to guilty during a session with Acting Justice Dennis Edwards in Manhattan Supreme Court.

After scores of spectators and reporters were shepherded into the room, Edwards made the announcement.

The defendant, Mark David Chapman, has exercised his right to withdraw his not guilty plea, to plead guilty to the charge of murder in the second degree. That plea has been accepted by the court, Edwards said.

The judge set sentencing for Aug. 24. Chapman faces a maximum of 25 years to life in prison and a minimum of 15 years to life.

Assistant District Attorney Allen Sullivan told the court that Chapman in withdrawing his plea of not guilty or not responsible has... in some detail expressed a knowing, intelligent and voluntary waiver of his right to trial.

Chapman's lawyer Jonathan Marks, said that Chapman had pleaded guilty against his advice. Marks, while acknowledging his client had shot and killed Lennon, had said he would seek to prove he was not sane when the act occurred.

Chapman was accused of shooting

Lennon at point-blank range Dec. 8 as the musician and his wife, Yoko Ono, returned to their flat at the luxury Dakota apartment after a late-night recording session.

There had been much speculation that Chapman would insist on pleading guilty, thereby closing inquiry into his reasons for killing a man to whom he long had idolized.

Thirteen witnesses had been slated to testify for the defense. Marks said Sullivan had planned to call about 35

Air controllers back to work, strike averted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide strike by air traffic controllers was averted today after all-night negotiations produced a tentative contract settlement just two hours before the threatened walkout.

The agreement was announced by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization and confirmed by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Although final details were still being ironed out, controllers around the country reported for work as usual as the 7 a.m. EDT strike deadline passed.

A strike would have grounded about half the nation's commercial flights, costing the airlines an estimated $80 million to $100 million a day and the economy in general two to three times that much.

Airport control towers around the country reported normal operations today with no major delays and airlines told passengers who had booked backup reservations to use regularly scheduled flights.

There were no immediate details on the settlement, which is subject to ratification by the 14,800 union controllers and approval by Congress. It was hammered out by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis and union president Robert Poh in 15 hours of bargaining Sunday and through the night after the two sides had ignored a midnight negotiating deadline.

The union had begun taking a strike vote, and the government moved to implement emergency plans that would have used about 5,000 supervisors and non-union controllers to direct air traffic. About 400 military controllers also were available if needed.

Lewis had said the government was prepared to move quickly in the event of a strike to seek civil damages and possibly criminal prosecutions of individual controllers and union officials. Federal injunctions in New York City and Chicago are in effect prohibiting a controller walkout.

As federal employees, air controllers faced a maximum criminal penalty of $1,000 fines and one year in jail for striking, though that never has been enforced. Civil penalties for violating the federal injunctions could range into the tens of thousands of dollars a day.

The Federal Aviation Administration, meanwhile, prepared during the night to impose emergency restrictions that would have reduced the number of daily flights from about 14,200 to 8,500.

A strike would have come at a peak travel time. The airlines carried about 297 million persons last year, an average of 812,000 a day, but June and December are the busiest months.

Details of the FAA contingency plan depended on how many controllers were off the job.

Safety will be maintained even if it means keeping more aircraft on the ground, said FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms.

Priority was given to long-distance runs, with transcontinental and international flights hardly affected. For example, only three of 19 nonstop flights from Chicago to Los Angeles were to be canceled.

Timetables for flights shorter than 500 miles were pruned sharply under the plan, as were schedules of many cargo, commuter and air taxi flights since people on shorter trips would be more likely to have alternate transportation.

The 17,000 controllers direct air traffic from 23 regional control centers and more than 500 airports around the country.

Bus hijack suspect in mental hospital

SAYRE, Okla. — A Missouri man accused of hijacking an Oklahoma City-bound bus near Amarillo Saturday morning has been taken to an Oklahoma mental hospital for observation, Beckham County officials said today.

Beckham County District Attorney Richard Dugger of Sayre said today that Larry Darnell Wallace, 25, of St. Louis, Missouri, is in the Western State Mental Hospital in Ft. Supply, Okla. for observation.

Dugger said Wallace was taken by Beckham County sheriff's deputies to the mental institution Sunday.

Wallace had been in the Beckham County Jail since Saturday morning on charges stemming from the hijacking.

Dugger said, "At the present time, no charges have been filed against Wallace in Beckham County." He said he believed charges would be filed in Texas.

A spokesman for the Potter County District Attorney's office in Amarillo said at press time today that no charges against Wallace had been filed.

A man put a .38-caliber revolver to the head of the bus driver, Michael Banfield, after the Greyhound bus with 32 passengers left Amarillo.

Beckham County officials said at the time of the hijacking the man yelled that he wanted the FBI to arrest him. The driver of another bus witnessed the takeover and notified Texas police who followed the bus.

The passenger held the driver hostage for about two hours before surrendering to Texas and Oklahoma authorities about five miles inside the Oklahoma border near Erick.

Police said the hijacker threw his gun in a ditch after stepping out of the bus and surrendered to officers who had followed them on about 10 cars.

No one was injured in the incident.

Hunt for vandals continues, reward fund grows

By DEBORAH BRIDGES Staff Writer

Pampans are still picking up the pieces today from a Saturday morning glass-breaking spree that affected at least 130 families in the north section of the city, and will cost an estimated $15,000.

Glass dealers in Pampa said today they have been flooded with calls today from citizens needing glass to repair their vehicles and homes following the devastating attack by vandals in the early morning hours last Saturday.

Police said today an intensive investigation of the 130-plus glass breaking incidents is continuing in an effort to find the culprits.

First National Bank officials say they have received a large response to the reward fund opened this morning by victims of the vandalism. Glenda Marcum said early today that $150 had been taken into the fund and that several oil companies had called to say they had mailed contributions to the reward fund.

District Attorney Harold Comer said today that a committee will be formed for the disposition of the reward money, and that he is drafting a document to outline the procedure for the presenting the reward money.

Comer said a committee comprised of himself, the chief of police, and probably two local citizens will be formed to arbitrate any disputes of the reward money and to decide the police for payment of the reward funds.

"We must be convinced that the testimony led directly to the arrest and conviction of the vandals," he said.

He added that every effort will be made to maintain the secrecy of the individual's identity.

The District Attorney's present position is that there will be no plea bargaining in this case," Comer said today.

A vehicle belonging to Comer's daughter, parked in front of the District Attorney's residence, was one of those damaged in the vandalism.

Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman said today, "It appears to be a young person's crime." He said he thought probably two or more persons were involved in the incidents.

Ryzman added he had no damage estimate on the total glass breakage. A final count of the reports had not been made, he said.

"It's more than 130," he said.

Comer said if juveniles are convicted, the parents will be responsible for $5,000 of the damages. If the conviction is not reached until Aug. 1, the parents could be responsible for $15,000 of the damage under a law recently approved by Governor Bill Clements.

A spokesman for Elco Glass in Pampa said they had received "at least" 50 calls by 10:30 a.m. today. "We had 30 to order, some were in stock, and some people said they would look elsewhere," she said.

"It's twenty times more than usual," she said. "We only get four or five a day," she added.

A spokesman for Elliott's Glass here said they had had about 20 calls early today. Most were orders for door glass, and some windshield, he said.

An employee at Ford's Body Shop reported a large number of calls today with orders already for $1,500 to $2,000 in glass. He said most of the orders were for door glass or the back windshield glass.

Paving improvements on city commission agenda

A public hearing on the paving of Somerville Street west to the New Coronado Apartments and three items concerning the improvement of State Highway 70 from 21st Street to Loop 171 will be included on the Pampa city commission's 11-item agenda Tuesday morning.

The commission will meet Tuesday in city hall at 9:30 a.m.

The paving of the extension of Somerville Street past the Pam and the Coronado Apartment complexes will be paid for by the city and through an assessment of the total costs to the adjoining landowners.

The award of bid for the street improvement project will also be considered Tuesday.

Three items involving the improvement of Perryton Parkway and Highway 70 from 21st Street to Loop 171 — a $3.5 million project — will be considered by the commissioners Tuesday.

Commissioners will consider authorizing City Manager Mack Wofford to write a letter to the State Highway Department reaffirming the city's intention to improve the highway. — A contract for engineering services for the highway improvement will be considered.

— And a financial advisory contract with Rauscher, Pierce and Reines, Inc. for the certificates of obligation, will be considered for approval.

Bids will be opened for the purchase of two police units and for air conditioners Tuesday, in addition to the awarding of bids for 2-inch waterline construction in the Overton Heights No. 7 addition.

Commissioners will act on first reading of an ordinance rezoning a 24.30-acre tract with the north and south boundaries at projections of 23rd and 22nd streets and the east-west boundaries being the west boundary of Block 2 of the Sunset Unit Addition and the east right of way of Price Road. The ordinance changes the agriculture zone to a single family residence area.

In final action, city fathers will consider approval of current accounts payable.

Khomeini fires Bani-Sadr, calls for arrest

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary patriarch today fired fugitive Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr one day after the fundamentalist-dominated Parliament declared him incompetent, the official Pars news agency said.

The Majlis, or Parliament, called on the 81-year-old Khomeini to remove Iran's first elected president — the French-educated leader of moderate and leftist factions in the Khomeini-inspired revolution that ousted the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi 2 1/2 years ago.

Iman Khomeini, the leader of the revolution and founder of the Islamic Republic of Iran, this morning ratified the measure taken by the Majlis and dismissed Abolhassan Bani-Sadr from the presidency, Pars reported.

The presidency will be taken over by a triumvirate of leaders from the Islamic Republican Party who led the campaign against Bani-Sadr — Ayatollah Mohammad Hussein Beheshti, the supreme court president; Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of the Majlis; and Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai.

The constitution requires that the election of a new president be held within 50 days.

Shortly after Sunday's parliamentary impeachment vote, State Prosecutor Ayatollah Ali Qudوسی called on the public to track Bani-Sadr down and arrest him.

The president was last seen Tuesday, according to authorities in Tehran. Rumors circulated that he had escaped from the country, but one source said he was still in Tehran and was moving from one hideout to another.

In a public summons over Tehran radio, Qudوسی said, "All the heroic people of Iran are asked to arrest Bani-Sadr wherever they see him and hand him over to the security committees or the Islamic revolutionary guards."

The statement said Bani-Sadr "is facing prosecution over several matters" — he is hereby summoned to the office of the revolutionary prosecutor general. Anyone or any authority helping him to cross the border will be liable to severe prosecution.

The arrest order came as government firing squads worked overtime in Tehran, executing Bani-Sadr's supporters. Tehran radio said 23 of them, including four women, went to their deaths Sunday.

Little hope for climbers buried in avalanche

PARADISE, Wash. (AP) — When the 100-yard-wide wall of ice snapped from the glacier high atop Mount Rainier, Larry St. Peter said he and his fellow climbers stood transfixed in awe for a moment.

"All of a sudden there was a crack and a snap," St. Peter said. "The thing I remember vividly was everybody just going, 'Ooooh,' kind of like they were watching a Fourth of July display."

Just as suddenly, however, chunks of ice as big as automobiles rained down on the 29-member climbing party, burying 11 of them in an avalanche of ice and snow that roared across Ingraham Glacier near Disappointment Cleaver shortly after sunrise Sunday.

Searchers held out little hope today for the survival of any of the 10 climbers and one guide. Mount Rainier Park Ranger Larry Henderson said there was a slim chance that the bodies could be uncovered even if they could be found.

Two teams with a total of 22 mountain rescue volunteers, park rangers and climbing guides left here for Camp Muir at the 10,000-foot level of the 14,410-foot peak late Sunday. The search party spent the night at Camp Muir, a guide service camp, before leaving for the icefall scene at daybreak today.

"The likelihood of being able to remove them is extremely slim," Henderson said. "The first evaluations are not good at all as far as being able to do anything."

In another climbing accident Sunday, five members of a Portland, Ore., group were killed after they fell while descending Mount Hood, authorities said.

The Hood River County sheriff's office said four of the climbers died on the mountain, while authorities at the Portland Adventist Hospital said another died after reaching the hospital.

Sheriff Robert D. Lynch reported that all 12 climbers in the party were involved in the same fall. He said five of them, including the man who died, were taken off the mountain in critical condition.

The injured were taken by Air Force Reserve helicopters to local hospitals.

The fall occurred at about 9,000 feet elevation on Eliot Glacier, which is on the northeast side of the 11,235-foot mountain about 50 miles east of Portland. Mount Hood is about 100 miles south of Mount Rainier in Oregon.

Once the extreme avalanche danger subsides on Mount Rainier and stormy weather improves enough to allow a helicopter to reach the area, chain saws and other tools may be flown in to help searchers remove the ice chunks, said Park Superintendent Bill Briggie.

Dennis Robertson, along with St. Peter, of Edmonds, was a survivor. Robertson said no one moved as the wall of ice fell, but "Then the guides yelled to run."

A block of ice slammed into Robertson's shoulder and he was "sent flying. Two rope teams just disappeared from sight."

Those who escaped reported bumps and bruises but no major injuries. The missing climbers may have been swept into a 100-foot deep crevasse, witnesses said.

A climbing party of six guides and 23 customers left Camp Muir before sunrise on a summit attempt conducted by Rainier Mountaineering Inc., said Jerald Lynch, president and co-owner of the private guide service. The other owner is famed mountain climber Lou Whittaker.

Three members had tired and decided against making the summit attempt before the accident. One guide led them back down, leaving five guides and 20 other climbers, Lynch said.

At Ingraham Flats, about 11,000 feet up the mountain, three guides separated from the party to check avalanche conditions ahead, while the remaining rope teams of four, five or six rested below, he said.

The 11 missing climbers were identified by the National Park Service as Jonathan Laitone, 27, Ann Arbo Mich.; Mark Erlund, 29, Renton, Wash.; Ira Liedman, 30, Hatfield, Pa.; Craig Tippie, 28, Bellevue, Wash.; Michael Watts, 36, Mercer Island, Wash.; David Kidd, 30, Arlington, Wash.; Henry Matthews, 38, of Auburn, Wash.; David Boulton, 29, Seattle; Ronald A. Farrell, 21, Bellevue; Gordon Heneage, 42, Seattle; and Tom O'Brien, a guide in his early 20s, Seattle.

Mount Rainier, one of the most popular climbing peaks in the United States, is located about 60 miles southeast of Seattle.

Weather

The forecast calls for fair and warm conditions today and Tuesday with high temperatures in the upper 90s. Overnight lows will be in the upper 60s and winds will be 10-15 mph.

Mount Hood fall takes five lives

HOOD RIVER, Ore. (AP) - An entire party of 12 mountain climbers was involved in a fall on Mount Hood that claimed five lives, authorities say.
The five members of the Portland-based Mazamas climbing group died Sunday when they fell at the 9,000-foot level while descending the 11,235-foot mountain, according to the Hood River County sheriff's office.
It was the second accident on a mountain in the Pacific Northwest Sunday. Eleven persons were presumed dead after being buried in an avalanche of ice and snow earlier in the day on Washington state's Mount Rainier, about 100 miles north of Mount Hood, after they fell while descending Mount Hood.

Authorities said four of the climbers were killed on the mountain, while officials at Portland Adventist Hospital said another died after reaching the hospital.
Sheriff Robert D. Lynch reported that all 12 climbers in the party were involved in the same fall. He said five of them, including the man who died at the hospital, were taken off the mountain in critical condition. Three survivors walked out.

The names of the victims were not immediately available.
The injured were taken by Air Force Reserve helicopters to the Portland hospital and to hospitals in Hood River and The Dalles.

Lynch said the Mazamas climbing group was descending the mountain at the time of the fall.
The sheriff's office had reported earlier in the day that the climbers were affected by an avalanche, but Sheriff's Sgt. Greg Sandercock said his office subsequently learned that no avalanche occurred.
He said the earlier report got garbled because one of the climbing party who "might have been a little dazed" contacted another group of hikers after walking part way down the mountain.
Two weeks earlier, David H. Turpele, 52, of Portland and Bill Pilkenton, 17, of Newberg, were killed in falls while on a group camping trip in the same area of Mount Hood.

Suspect says drugs caused murders

DALLAS (AP) - A 21-year-old suspect in the murders of two young North Dallas residents says the slayings would not have occurred had he and an accomplice not been "high on drugs."
"All I ever wanted to do was grow to be a rich man," Fletcher Thomas Mann said in a copyright story in The Dallas Morning News Sunday.
Police say the killers took $76.10 from three people in a Park Lane apartment last Sept. 11. The nightmarish robbery resulted in the rape and stabbing death of 22-year-old Barbara K. Hoppe, the shooting death of 23-year-old Christopher Bates and the attempted murder of his roommate, 23-year-old Robert Lee Matzig.
"It was real dumb, and we were high on acid and stuff like that," Mann told the News.
Mann, who has been charged with two counts of capital murder in connection with the slayings, is being held in Bullitt County Jail in Shepherdsville, Ky., on unrelated rape and robbery charges.

"I decided to tell the police because they were going to drag my parents into all this," Mann said. "I felt bad about that girl (Ms. Hoppe), but it doesn't bother me any more. It's done and you can't undo it."
Mann said he and his friend saw the trio watching television through a sliding glass door in the apartment "and we figured it was a rich area, and they looked rich, and we could get some money."
"We knocked on the door and they told us to come in, and so we went in and threw down on them (drew guns), and tied the two guys up. While I was tying up the second guy, (his partner) was having sex with her (Ms. Hoppe). Then I went in and did it too."
When he later saw his accomplice choking Ms. Hoppe, he said, "I wanted to get it over with... I went into the kitchen, got a butcher knife and handed it to him and he stuck it straight through her heart."

When sure she was dead, the pair returned to the living room and demanded money from the men, Mann said. But when only $10 to $15 was offered, they became angry and Matzig and Bates offered to cash checks to placate them, he said.
After cashing about $160 in checks, the men were driven to a vacant field, where Bates was shot in the back of the head and Matzig was shot in the neck.
"I did it to the guys," Mann said.
"The dead girl - I wish that would never have happened. If we hadn't killed her, we wouldn't have had to kill them. It didn't bother me about the guys at all. Once we killed her, it had to be done."
Mann, who says he has been arrested at least 30 times, is scheduled to undergo psychiatric testing before his trial on rape and robbery charges in Kentucky.
"I am going to make them think I'm crazy," he said.

Socialists Party takes 75 seats in French National Assembly

PARIS (AP) - President Francois Mitterrand's Socialist Party won a rock-solid majority of at least 75 seats in the French National Assembly, enabling him to enact his economic and political program without the Communists.
With 480 of the 491 assembly seats decided, returns from the runoff parliamentary elections Sunday gave 283 seats to the Socialists and their allies of the Radical Left Movement, a moderate party despite its name.
Completing the rout started by Mitterrand's victory in the presidential election May 10, the conservatives after 23 years in power won only 152 of the 284 seats they had held. This included 82 for the Gaullists led by Jacques Chirac, the mayor of Paris; 63 for former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's Union of French Democracy; and seven for other rightists.
The Communists were cut to 43, half their holding in the last assembly, and two other leftists were also elected.
The turnout was 75.8 percent of the eligible voters, compared with 70.9 percent in the first round June 14.

Premier Pierre Mauroy said his government would resign today, the customary procedure after general elections. Mitterrand was expected to ask him to form a new Cabinet.
Negotiations were expected soon between the Socialists and the Communists, who aided the Socialist victory by withdrawing their candidates from the races in which Socialists ran ahead in the first round. Communist Party leader Georges Marchais said he expected his party to be represented in the new Cabinet, and Mitterrand may reward it with one or two minor posts.
But the Socialists have said the Communists must accept Socialist positions on economic and foreign issues, such as the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and Moscow's deployment of SS-20 missiles targeted on Western Europe.
By rewarding the Communists, Mitterrand would be encouraging the emergence of more moderate leaders. The party's dismal showing in the elections is expected to lead to changes in its leadership.

The Socialists have also been debating how far and how fast to go in implementing their economic program, which calls for nationalizing several industrial groups and the remaining private banks.
The party's left wing wants Mitterrand to make good on this plank of the party platform while the moderates, conscious of the financial and international impact of such policies, are urging restraint.
Mitterrand needs parliamentary approval for these moves. He already has taken a number of actions by decree, including raising the minimum wage and other social benefits and creating about 55,000 public service jobs.
He also has reduced pension and health insurance charges to business in hopes it will create more than a half a million more jobs to reduce the 1.8 million unemployed, 7.5 percent of the work force.
The new assembly will meet July 2, the second Thursday after the election, to begin a two-week session.

Rental scheme dupes six families

SPRING, Texas (AP) - Things are a bit crowded at the three-bedroom home at 6026 Knotty Pine Lane in Spring's Postwood subdivision.
Sheriff's investigators say at least six families are victims of a rather well-planned leasing scheme.
Three families - from Colorado, Minnesota, and Ohio - are sharing the home while trying to find the couple investigators say received $4,700 or more as deposits and first and last month rents from six different families.
"It sounds like somebody did a good con job," said sheriff's Lt. Marvin Hopkins.
June Mills, president of the subdivision, said Sunday the house had been vacant only a week and the real owner, who could not be reached, had nothing to do with the scam.

Ms. Mills said the man posing as the owner "must be real sly."
"He must have known someone in this neighborhood because he knew too much," she said. Each family, she said, received copies of newsletters delivered only to residents of the subdivision.
Jay Reese, 31, his wife, Linda, and their three sons were the first family to arrive at the house Saturday. He said five other families showed up later in the day, each telling the same story on how they had answered a newspaper ad and paid money to a couple described as the "friendly-looking kind that could talk you into anything."

The Reeses shared the house over the week end with two other families, the John LaTourneau from Nisswa, Minn., and the Don Cooks from Cincinnati.
"God, was I fooled," said Cook, 28, a mechanic and father of three.
He said the couple was very informative.
"They told us a church was to be built around here soon, and we found later that was true," he said.
Marge LaTourneau, with two young children, said she remembers the woman, in discussing deposit and lease terms, telling her, "We're not real legal-beagles."
The three couples spent much of the weekend trying to find the couple that was last seen driving rapidly past the home Saturday.

Clements gets his turn in special session and 'must' controversies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The 140-day state lawmaking session just ended was called the "67th Legislature" but the July 13 meeting of senators and representatives will be "the Clements session."
That's the difference a special session makes to a Texas governor.
In a regular session the governor must sit back and see what the 181 legislators do before he even gets a chance to approve or veto any issues.
He can talk with leaders in each chamber and twist arms, but legislators are not notoriously disrespectful of governors. They even overrode one of the governor's vetoes in 1979.
In the upcoming July 13 special session it's a different story. Gov. Bill Clements not only sets the time of the session but he picks what legislators can talk about. He can gather votes by adding another subject or two to the agenda.
He still has his veto - which he can make after they all go home. Or if he doesn't like their results, he can call them back into another special session.
And the home folks will be eager for their representatives and senators to do something because the 30-day sessions will cost from $500,000 to $1 million.

Clements has already hinted he will open the session to other issues after some of the "must" controversies are settled.
The "must" list includes repeal of the state ad valorem tax, redrawing districts for Texas congressmen and extension of state laws to allow licensing of physicians. He said a "tune up" bill on the 1979 Property Tax Act and a water development fund were only slightly less important.
Meanwhile, he said, he has about 1,000 other requests, including those for gasohol, state veterans land bonds and initiative and referendum.
Clements stirred up considerable controversy in 1979 by threatening to call a special session that summer for initiative and referendum, wiretapping and other Clements' issues unsuccessful in the regular session. Later, he cancelled the special session because he said he feared it would be overwhelmed by politics in connection with Speaker Bill Clayton's problems with a bribery indictment. Clayton later was acquitted.
This time, Clements thinks he has cleared the way for the special session. He said the five original subjects on the agenda were cleared with both Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Clayton. In fact, the water bond development fund, which would be financed by state financial surpluses, is Clayton's idea.

And Clayton has given the legislators time to go home and talk with their constituents.
Gov. Pat Neff didn't bother to do that in 1923 by calling a special session the day after the regular session ended. The unhappy legislators met for about an hour then adjourned a second time.
Almost all Texas governors have used the special session privilege to their benefit.
There have been 90 in the last 120 years. Most have been marked by the personality and power of the governor who called them.
Gov. Dolph Briscoe called special sessions on school financing and on a mph speed law.
Gov. Preston Smith had four special sessions and Gov. Price Daniel had three.
Gov. Dan Moody set an all-time record with five sessions during the second term of his administration.

New rust formula up for patent

PALACIOS, Texas (AP) - Shipyard owner Roger Lovell isn't talking about the contents of his reputed rust preventative and corrosion cure, but that Lovell knows is about to be patented.
The only morsel the 52-year-old inventor will let drop is that the method application is more important than the recipe.
Lovell has spent the last six years developing and testing the methodology for which he'll receive a patent Tuesday. Patents have been granted or pending in 13 foreign countries.
Two Texas A&M chemical engineering professors, a handful of businessmen, an independent Louisiana engineer and the chief of the paint branch of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Galveston all say Lovell's patent is legitimate and has passed a number of tests.
If the product does what it's supposed to do, it could be a landmark accomplishment in the estimated $100 billion plus battle against rust and corrosion waged by consumers, businesses and governments each year.

"Lovell Coat," as it is called, goes beyond what companies like Rust-Oleum and Ziebart do to prevent rust, Lovell says.
As any rust prevention process must do to be successful, Lovell Coat stops the electrical current that flows through all types of metal, he said.
The current flows when moisture and air come together in a metal. If oxygen can be kept out when a coating is applied, no chemical reaction will take place.
Portions of a report issued by SJB Engineering Inc. in Baton Rouge, La. - in cooperation with a non-profit testing organization from New Orleans - say Lovell Coat does what its inventor claims.

"Lovell Coat apparently stops the electrochemical action by encapsulating in oil (the vulnerable) active sites on the metal surface, thereby preventing flow of electricity on the surface and the resulting metal corrosion," the report reads.
Lovell figures he has spent close to $400,000 developing and testing his process.
Roy Carlston, manager of field technical services for Rust-Oleum Corp. in Vernon Hills, Ill., said no product has yet totally succeeded in preventing the chemical reaction that causes rust.
Lovell applied his formula to the aluminum hull of a 45-foot U.S. Army Corps of Engineers survey boat three years ago.
"This system seems to have some merit," said plant manager James Brown.

Armadillo racing causes flap

DALLAS (AP) - Armadillo racing is drawn thousands to bars, amusement parks and chili cook-offs in Texas. But people who go to these events don't realize that an armadillo long in the wild and not in an arena yelled at, says a spokeswoman for a Dallas-based group opposed to the ces.
"If you asked people if they'd like to thrust into a noisy, smoky arena, get punched at, kicked at, yelled at and have their thrown on them as they're being led to race, they'd say, 'No, I wouldn't like that,'" said Sandra Williams, vice president of Sound Animal Control.
The group claims a membership of 600 and used the occasion of the annual World Champion Armadillo Race in San Angelo Saturday to voice concern for the armor-coated mammal and popular Texas symbol.

Saturday, an armadillo named "Greased Lightning" delighted trainer Carl Newsome of San Angelo by setting a world record of three seconds in the 40-foot World Champion race.
Ms. Williams says she wants to know whether anyone asked the entrant how he felt about racing.
"It's not a sport. It's not entertainment. It's just a matter of who can scare an armadillo across a line quicker."
The hard-shelled, hump-backed animals often are painted so they can be distinguished and even have been injected with drugs to spur them to victory, maintains Mrs. Williams, who admits she never has been to such a race.
Sam Lewis thinks she should attend one. As president of the World Armadillo Breeding and Racing Association, he organizes the annual race in San Angelo.

"In all probability, we're saving more armadillos through the races than we were before we had races," he says.
"At least now, people might respect armadillos a little more and give them a chance to cross the road, instead of running over them when they see them on the highways."
Wild armadillos usually are captured in nets or by hand shortly before the day of the race and returned to the wilderness soon afterward, Lewis said.
The World Champion Armadillo Race does not allow the animals to be injected with drugs, he added. He said a veterinarian even is on hand to check each contestant.
Mrs. Williams remains unconvinced, and says her group may push for city ordinances prohibiting armadillo racing.

Settlement of Hughes estate unlikely for years, judge says

HOUSTON (AP) — Even if the heirs of Howard Hughes' estate are determined in a trial that will begin next month, the judge who is trying the case says he doubts any of them will collect a dime for six to eight years.

Judge Pat Gregory says appeals of any decision he reaches probably would not be resolved before 1984.

And an ongoing appeal may result in a new trial. The Howard Hughes Medical Institute, cut out as an inheritor in an earlier ruling, is seeking a reversal.

Three women who claim to have been married to Howard Hughes when he died are among 500 people who will try to stake claims to the eccentric multi-millionaire's estate when testimony begins July 13.

Gregory estimates the trial will last until late November.

At stake is a fortune estimated at anywhere from $180 million to $490 million.

The court may go into three phases of determining heirship, Gregory said.

First to be considered are claims from three women, each of whom says Hughes was married to her when he died in 1976, and a woman and two men who say Hughes was their father.

If none of those claims is found to be valid, the estate will be divided equally between relatives of his mother and father.

"We will determine the maternal side first," Gregory said.

"There are fewer claimants and the evidence seems to be more concrete on that side of the family than the other."

The father's side not only has more claimants, he said, but also more contestable issues. Gregory said thousands of old records and documents pertain to these contentions.

Hughes — a Houston native, aeronautical genius, record setting pilot, movie maker and recluse — died in 1976 at the age of 70.

He is known to have been married twice, once in 1925 and again in 1957, with both marriages ending in divorce. He is not known to have any children.

Among the women claiming to be Hughes' widow is actress Terry Moore. When she met Hughes in 1947, she was a starlet making the film "Mighty Joe Young."

Ms. Moore says a ship captain married her to Hughes in 1949 aboard a yacht bound for Mexico. She also said Hughes fathered a daughter born to her in a Munich hospital in 1952. The child died shortly after its birth, she said.

The marriage was kept secret, Ms. Moore said, because she was afraid the announcement would "wreck my image" and ruin her acting career.

Other pending lawsuits concern whether Texas, California or both have a claim to state inheritance tax. That decision probably will be decided in federal court, Gregory said.

CIA hangs out 'help wanted' sign

HOUSTON (AP) — Recruiting CIA agents is becoming easier because of the nation's conservative mood and the agency's use of newspaper advertisements to recruit its future spies, the CIA's Southwest regional recruiter says.

And that's especially important now, William B. Wood says, because many original Central Intelligence Agency employees who were hired in the late 1940s are reaching retirement age.

In an effort to step up recruiting, the agency began placing the display advertisements in newspapers two years ago.

"A lot of the very bright young people who were on college campuses during the Vietnam era are not interested in us because their philosophy and concept of the U.S. is that we should not play a dominant role in the world scene," he said.

But that's all changing now. A recent ad in Houston drew about 70 applications, from which Wood said six or eight people eventually will be chosen to begin training in Washington, D.C.

The job involves gathering and processing information from across the world about events and people that can affect the national security of the United States, Wood said.

The ads don't use the word "spy." Instead, they refer to "information-gathering specialists."

Wood speaks of "case officers" who will perform, among other things, "clandestine operations."

"But I don't hesitate to use the word espionage when interviewing people," he said. "In fact, it's a good way to learn about the personality of a person to see how he or she reacts to that word, because that's what most of them will actually be doing."

The CIA begins four one-year training classes each year, with about 30-40 trainees in each.

For those who make it, the beginning salary is $18,000 to $22,000. Wood said the agency still is looking for recent college graduates, but the newspaper ads are aimed chiefly at people in their mid to late 20s and early 30s who may be thinking about changing careers.

The ideal job applicant is well-educated and has many interests, and is especially intrigued with foreign affairs, he said.

That person should be "an astute observer, tough-minded and capable of making tough decisions."

Wood said. But above all, he said, the CIA candidate must be a leader with persuasive skills, be able to work independently and be content to lead a low-profile life.

Drug use is one of the leading reasons for rejecting an applicant in recent years, Wood said.

An applicant must submit to at least three interviews, a psychological examination and a lie detector test. He must also fill out an exhaustive application form which requests a variety of personal information.

Grand jury to investigate drownings of arrested youths

MEXIA, Texas (AP) — A special Limestone County grand jury will be empaneled to investigate the drownings of three youths who were in the custody of sheriff's deputies when a small boat carrying them overturned in Lake Mexia late Friday, authorities said.

Meanwhile, one of the three officers who had been transporting the trio across the lake after their arrest on drug charges has been suspended pending the outcome of the investigation.

The body of the third drowning victim, a 19-year-old Dallas youth, was recovered from Lake Mexia Sunday.

Limestone County Sheriff Dennis Walker had called off the dragging of the lake Sunday morning amid speculation that Steve Booker may have escaped after he jumped from the boat and began swimming toward shore.

Booker and the two other youths had been arrested for drug possession. His body floated to the surface about 9:25 a.m. Sunday, a sheriff's department spokesman said.

Chief county deputy Bill Fletcher said deputy Kenney Elliot, the senior officer involved in the incident, was suspended.

Another sheriff's deputy who was in the boat said Sunday that Booker leaped off the gunwale of the small aluminum craft when it began to swamp. He said Booker's leap was not an escape attempt.

Reserve deputy Kenneth Archie said the boat began taking on water over the bow after traveling about 40 yards. Booker jumped off the craft first, then was followed by three deputies who were in the boat, Archie said.

On Saturday the bodies of Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, were recovered from the lake, just east of Waco in North Central Texas.

Several witnesses said the youths were handcuffed when their bodies were pulled from the water and searchers removed the handcuffs before bringing the bodies to shore.

But Waco pathologist Dr. K. P. Whittrick, who performed autopsies on the youths Saturday evening, said there were no cuts, bruises or handprint marks on either body. He said the two youths died from drowning.

The three teen-agers were being taken to a temporary sheriff's headquarters across the lake late Friday after deputies found them with "marijuana, pills and a syringe" at an annual Juneteenth celebration, Walker said.

The Juneteenth celebration commemorates June 19, 1863, the day Texas blacks received word of the Emancipation Proclamation 2½ years after it was issued by President Abraham Lincoln.

Bolivian pilot blamed in near miss of Braniff, small jet at Brownsville

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — "Pilot deviation" by a Bolivian Air Force pilot has been blamed for an incident in which a commercial jetliner crossed paths with a small executive jet Sunday at Brownsville International Airport.

William L. Anderson, Federal Aviation Administration facilities director at the Brownsville airport, said the two aircraft passed within 1,600 feet of each other as one was descending for a landing and another was climbing after takeoff.

The Braniff 727 jetliner and the Bolivian Air Force executive jet used the same flight corridor, even though the Bolivian craft had been instructed to use another flight path, Anderson said.

"What we had was a pilot deviation. The Bolivian aircraft deviated from its authorized course," Anderson said.

He disputed a Brownsville air traffic controller's claim that the two craft had passed with 200 feet of each other during the 3:45 p.m. incident.

The incident occurred about 18 miles north of the Brownsville airport, which lacks radar equipment, he said.

Paul Dugdale, a controller at the Brownsville flight tower who was on duty when the incident occurred, said the pilots of the two aircraft didn't learn of the incident until after it was over. Dugdale said Sunday that the two aircraft passed with 200 feet of each other.

Braniff flight 295, en route from Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport to Brownsville with 87 passengers aboard, had descended to 8,500 feet when FAA air traffic controllers at Houston's Intercontinental Airport saw on their radar screens that plane was about to "merge" with a Sabreliner executive jet owned by the Bolivian Air Force, Dugdale said.

The Bolivian jet, with six people aboard, was bound for St. Louis following its takeoff from Brownsville when it climbed over the Braniff craft at an elevation of 8,700 feet, Dugdale said.

But Anderson said the two craft never got closer than 1,600 feet and were that far apart when the Bolivian craft crossed over the commercial airliner.

Raymond Chanaud, a spokesman for Braniff in Dallas, said the pilot of the 727 didn't file a report on the incident, "apparently because he didn't think there was a major safety problem."

"It's up to an airline pilot to file a report on a near-miss," said Anderson. "If the (Braniff) pilot couldn't see the other plane, he might not have considered it a near-miss."

Tunnel collapse kills man

WILLIS, Okla. (AP) — A Texas man was killed after a home-made tunnel collapsed on him Sunday evening near Lake Texoma in Marshall County.

Mark Joseph Zwigg, 20, of Gainesville, Texas, and two women were digging in sand dunes along an old river bottom area near here when the cave-in occurred, authorities said.

Marshall County sheriff's deputies reportedly dug the body out of the sand about 9 p.m. after the cave-in.

Financier's death ruled suicide

EARLE, Ark. (AP) — A 61-year-old lawyer, identified during a federal trial as a financier for an abortive plot to overthrow the government and the Caribbean island of Dominica, has been found shot to death, authorities said.

Data bank idea deserves hearing

The Reagan administration is committed, and rightly so, to maintaining its "safety net" of social welfare programs for those truly in need. It is also committed, and with equal justification, to reducing the fraud and abuse that afflict too many welfare programs.

To this end, the administration is proposing creation of a National Recipient Information System — in effect, a computerized data bank that would contain the name, age, address, social security number and "benefit status" of all the estimated 25 million Americans receiving some form of public assistance.

Information held in the data bank would be made available to federal, state and local agencies attempting to identify persons receiving unwarranted aid payments, whether by fraud or simple bureaucratic error.

Not surprisingly, the very mention of a national data bank has aroused instant opposition. An American Civil Liberties Union spokesman decried the prospect of "an unprecedented national surveillance system" and a massive invasion of privacy.

A calmer view would conclude that there is nothing at all unprecedented about the proposed data bank. The Internal Revenue Service, the Social Security Administration, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Defense have long maintained computerized files that, taken together, include considerable information on the majority of Americans.

As for invasions of privacy, the strict privacy law now on the federal statute books would seem to be more than ample bulwark against any unauthorized use of data on welfare recipients.

Nor is there anything revolutionary about the data bank proposal. Joseph Califano, former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare during the Carter administration, put forth a similar suggestion for 1979.

If local, state and federal agencies are ever to pare welfare fraud and waste to its irreducible minimum, something like a national computerized data bank will probably be necessary. The idea at least deserves a fair hearing in Congress, and hopefully overwrought objections will not be permitted to scuttle this proposal before it can even be discussed.

It is refreshing to see members of Congress haggling about which method to use to cut taxes rather than how to raise them so we won't notice right away. In noting this change in climate in the nation's capital, we note also that neither side is proposing genuine reductions. Even the vaunted Kemp-Roth-Reagan proposal will do little more than offset tax increases already built into the system. Still, advancing by inches is better than going backwards.

While our legislators are in a tax-cutting mood, for whatever brief period that inclination may last, we'd like to suggest another candidate.

The United States started levying federal inheritance, gift and estate taxes in 1916. The idea was to break up large fortunes and redistribute inherited wealth. It has never done that, even assuming that's a good idea, which it isn't. In 1979 more than 76 percent of inheritance tax returns represented gross estates of less than $300,000.

Inheritance taxes contribute less than 1 percent to federal revenues, but their effect on the economy is drastic and lamentable. They are purely taxes on capital, exercising an adverse effect on work, savings and capital formation.

Inheritance taxes hit the middle class most drastically. Small businesses and small farms are hurt the most. Examples abound of wives or children being forced to sell all or part of a farm or small business when the principal owner dies. Coming at the grief-stricken, trying time they do, inheritance taxes are especially cruel.

Inheritance taxes strike at the heart of the most constructive of American, or human, virtues, the desire to build something of value to give to those you love. A good deal of this country's progress can be attributed to this desire to make the next generation's lot in life a little easier.

Far from breaking up the big fortunes, inheritance taxes have created a double system of taxation. Those who can afford counsel and advice to plan their estates can usually find ways around the laws. Those with more modest estates generally bear the brunt of the taxes. The rich get richer.

There are numerous proposals circulating in Washington to reform inheritance taxes by granting larger exemptions or more complicated special categories for certain types of holdings. This superficial, piecemeal approach is not satisfactory. Inheritance taxes are destructive at all levels. They should be abolished, pure and simple.

It should hardly be necessary to add that what we advocate at the federal level applies with equal vigor to inheritance taxes in California.

Sometimes nothing fails like success. Or to put it another way, you can lead a smoker to the truth but that doesn't mean he's going to read it.

That seems to be the message, or the significance of the message, contained in the report of the Federal Trade Commission on its five-year study on the effectiveness of the health warnings that cigarette packages and advertising are required by law to carry. Among other things, the FTC discovered that fewer than 3 percent of all adults exposed to the warnings are bothering to read them.

And that makes discouraging reading for those who have been waging a public information war against the hazards of smoking for decades and scored their greatest legislative victory 16 years ago when Congress mandated the warnings. These were supposed to bring home to every smoker every time he or she lit up the risk being run.

The fellows in the U.S. Surgeon General's office in particular may well be asking themselves what they have been doing wrong. The answer is really nothing in their approach to the issue as a medical problem. An immense amount of research has been undertaken on the negative relationship between smoking and health and is readily available to the public.

But smoking is more than a medical problem. It is also social and psychological. The pressures encouraging the smoking habit remain immense in American society. Just check the cigarette ads. Even with those subliminal warnings, the suggestions of joy to be derived from the product are overpowering. The currently "in" ad features one or more beautiful young people exulting over the flavor of their poison to a degree that could raise questions as to what's in those little tubes in addition to regular tobacco.

Further, the capacity of individuals to tune out truths they do not want to know is awesome, as demonstrated by some additional FTC figures. Despite the intense informational effort of government and private health agencies, the study indicates that some 20 percent of the public is still unaware of tobacco's much publicized and debated cancer connection, and more than 30 percent does not know that smoking is a factor in heart disease. Among women, it is news to almost half that smoking increases pregnancy risks.

And there is more. The problem is also politically charged, as Joseph A. Califano Jr. coincidentally confirms in his current best-selling insider's guide to the Carter administration, "Governing America."

The former secretary of health, education and welfare takes time out from analyzing various major and minor political skirmishes between the good guy (guess who?) and the bad guys (virtually everyone else) in Carter Washington for an illuminating chapter on his own involvement with smoking and health going back to the mid-'60s. As a key aide in the activist Johnson administration, he had been unable to persuade a president who had firsthand evidence in his own heart condition of the consequences of smoking to move forcefully on the issue. The political obstacles raised by the tobacco growing and processing industry in this case outweighed the social goal.

Similarly in 1978 when, as a cabinet member, Califano was in a position to launch his own anti-smoking campaign and did so with highly publicized zeal. His support from a president whose own convictions and lifestyle should have made him the firmest of allies was muted at best. Again, the political price of fighting this particular good fight was too high.

But back to the warnings. The FTC thinks the problem may be that they have simply become too familiar, and the message stale: It suggests the possibility of several differently worded warnings, such as are used in Sweden, each emphasizing the connection between smoking and a different ailment. Such a change would require action by Congress, and inevitably more politics.

That is not a prospect to encourage the anti-smoking crusaders. Considering this administration's laissez-faire philosophy and its dominance of the governing processes, the chances of a legislative success appear slimmer than at any time in the last two decades.

In the light of the FTC findings, the anti-smokers might have better luck if they ceased attacking the health issue head on and pressed instead for a remedial reading campaign.

Do you smoke or read?

But what is the price tag?

By ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON (NEA) — While President Reagan is deftly fitting a noose around the neck of each of the country's governors, the intended victims are celebrating the forthcoming hanging as a major advance in federal-state relations.

That's the most appropriate way to describe the governors' reaction to the White House plan to transfer from federal to state government the responsibility — but not adequate funds — for administering scores of domestic social programs.

What is euphemistically described as "the federal-state partnership" has in recent decades been based in large measure upon a lopsided arrangement under which the states have only a token role in running programs established, regulated and financed by the national government.

The states "administer" those programs in the same fashion that most people "administer" medicine to themselves: They carefully follow the directions on the label and are terrified of any deviation from the doctor's prescription.

With a history of being pushed around by the federal government, the governors were understandably jubilant when Reagan announced plans to consolidate many "categorical grant" programs into "block grants" given to the states with far fewer restrictions.

Because the governors (and state legislators) have been clamoring for such discretionary authority for years, they lunged at Reagan's offer — without examining the price tag.

The White House proposes to consolidate 84 "categorical" programs, funded this year with $14.7 billion from the federal treasury, into six "block grants" that would receive $11.2 billion in financial support from Washington next year.

The governors always have claimed they would gladly accept a 10 percent reduction in funding in return for flexibility, arguing that compliance with irrelevant, misguided and trivial federal regulations costs at least that much.

The Reagan proposal embodies a cut of more than 30 percent, however, without even adjusting the figures upward to compensate for inflationary pressure on the economy.

Even the National Governors' Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures have belatedly recognized that "the administration has proposed a substantial cutback in the federal involvement in intergovernmental domestic programs in both the near and long term."

Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., expresses the same view in pithier terms when he warns of "deep budget cuts dressed up to look like block grants and sent to state capitals."

The programs being folded into block grants involve many of the nation's most delicate social issues — including elementary and secondary education, health services and preventive health, nutrition, social services for the elderly and emergency assistance for low-income families.

The two new proposed health services block grants, for example, are supposed to cover migrant health, drug abuse, alcoholism, child immunization, rat control, genetic disease, hemophilia and a host of other programs.

Other block grants cover activities such as educational aid to disadvantaged and handicapped children, energy assistance for low-income families, child abuse and foster care.

Since all of those programs cannot be maintained at current levels with drastically reduced funding, state officials will have to either eliminate some entirely or scale down most of the activities.

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, June 22, the 173rd day of 1981. There are 192 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On June 22, 1941, Germany invaded the Soviet Union during World War II.

On this date:
In 1773, Dominican friars established the first settlement in what is now California.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte was forced to abdicate for the second time.

In 1937, Joe Louis became the world heavyweight boxing champ by knocking out Jim Braddock in a match in Chicago.

And in 1940, France and Germany signed a World War II.

Ten years ago: Britain and the six nations of the European Common Market agreed on terms for Britain admission to the organization.

Five years ago: The Soviet Union announced it was withdrawing some military units from Afghanistan while President Carter and leaders of six other western nations opened a two-day summit in Venice, Italy.

Postal Service studies 20 - cent stamp

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service, turned down twice on requests to raise the price of a first-class stamp to 20 cents, is considering doing it anyway.

The board of governors called a special meeting for today on ways to increase mail charges, and sources said a major option likely to be considered was bypassing the independent Postal Rate Commission and charging 20 cents for a letter, starting this summer.

That has never been done before, and it could trigger lawsuits.

First-class mail rates increased from 15 cents to 18 cents on March 10.

The Postal Service wanted 20 cents then, which would have been the biggest jump ever, but the rate commission turned it down and repeated that stand earlier this month when asked to reconsider.

The commission is charged by law with reviewing Postal Service proposals and recommending its own to the board of governors, which has always gone along before.

To impose a new rate unilaterally, the nine-member board would have to vote unanimously and show that the 18-cent rate approved by the commission is not enough for the agency to break even, as Postmaster General William F. Bolger has repeatedly contended.

Sources said the board's other option was to begin a new rate case with the commission, a step that could lead to an increase next year to 21, 22 or 23 cents to mail a first-class letter.

Postal officials refused to speak on the record about the possible increase this summer.

Reagan's battle of the budget returns to House floor this week

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's congressional allies say the administration's entire economic program, including any tax relief this year, may be at stake as the budget-cutting battle returns to the House floor this week.

Faced with what one White House official called "the toughest fight on the economic package so far," Reagan is using the telephone and presidential persuasion to campaign for more stringent cuts than those fashioned by Democratic-controlled House committees.

He made more than a dozen phone calls to members of Congress last week, with more calls expected this week.

A meeting with six governors was on the White House agenda today, followed by a session Tuesday with federal advisory groups and a speech Wednesday to a national Jaycees meeting in San Antonio, Texas.

The administration contends that the $37.8 billion package of cuts supported by House Democrats for fiscal 1982 would fall billions of dollars short of the permanent changes needed to put federal spending on track toward a balanced budget in 1984.

The full House begins consideration of the issue this week, but a final vote is not anticipated until after Congress returns from its 10-day Fourth of July recess, starting Friday.

Meanwhile, the Republican-controlled Senate is expected to act swiftly this week on a similar package of cuts more to the administration's liking.

In other congressional activity, Senate conservatives pushed for a vote today on perhaps the toughest anti-busing restrictions ever enacted, raising warnings from critics that the action would hamper school desegregation efforts.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the Senate Budget Committee chairman, said Sunday that the spending cuts are a "cornerstone" of the Reagan economic plan, which is "hanging in the balance."

If House conferees are "way apart from the president in a number of major items, there is a real probability that we would not get that bill out of conference," Domenici said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Flood relief denied

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Federal officials have denied a second request for emergency financial aid following the May 24-25 flooding that claimed 13 lives in Austin and surrounding Travis County, a spokesman for Texas Gov. Bill Clements said Sunday.

The request for disaster area designation was denied once by the Federal Emergency Management Administration, which later consented to review the flood damage. Travis County officials trimmed their damage estimate and FEMA officials re-inspected the area earlier this month.

Gen. Ben Lewis, deputy administrator of the federal agency, informed Clements Sunday that the appeal had been rejected, a spokesman said.

President Reagan has ordered the Small Business Administration to provide low-interest loans to businesses damaged in the flooding.

Oklahomans die in crash

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Two people have died after a car carrying three Oklahoma City residents struck a palm tree on Interstate 35 and turned 360 degrees in mid-air, police said.

Dead on arrival at a local hospital was Rosario Jimenez, 50, who was driving the 1973 Chevrolet Impala when the accident occurred early Saturday, officials said.

Her mother-in-law, 80-year-old Francisca Sanchez, died about 2 p.m. Saturday in a local hospital.

The third occupant of the car, Mrs. Jimenez' husband Alberto, remained hospitalized in stable condition Sunday with chest injuries.

Pope tested for lung inflammations

ROME (AP) — X-rays and blood tests were taken on Pope John Paul II today as doctors tried to learn why he has a nagging fever that is delaying his recovery from a would-be assassin's gunshots.

Doctors said the tests on the 61-year-old pontiff would help determine if he has pneumonia or pleurisy, an inflammation of the membrane that covers the lung and causes difficult, painful breathing.

X-ray technicians said the pope had a chest X-ray, an X-ray of his abdomen and a barium enema. The chest X-ray would reveal if he had pneumonia, pleurisy or any other lung infection and the X-ray of the abdomen and the barium enema would show if there were any abscess formations or any scar tissue in the large intestine, doctors said.

John Paul was returned to Gemelli Hospital Saturday after running a fever for several days. His doctors at first feared he had an infection in his intestines, where he was shot May 13 as he greeted crowds in St. Peter's Square.

"The pope may have a lung infection but we don't think there is anything wrong with his intestines," hospital spokesman Dr. Giuseppe Pallank said Sunday.

Dr. Emilio Tresalti, chief medical officer for the hospital, said the pope's life was not in danger. Dr. Luigi Candia, one of the pope's doctors, said he was on a normal diet, indicating the fever was not caused by intestinal infection.

Tresalti said doctors would probably not issue a medical bulletin on the pope's condition today. He refused to characterize the pope's condition or say how long he would be in the hospital.

Tresalti said the pope's temperature was normal this morning, but it fluctuated as high as 100.4 degrees Fahrenheit during the day.

Doctors were tight-lipped about the pope and the hospital press office was closed today without explanation. The Vatican press office also issued no statements.

Lower inflation rate forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Braked by moderating prices for food and fuel, inflation in 1981 is likely to fall from double digits to the lowest level in four years, private economic forecasters say.

One projection is as low as 5.1 percent, though most are in the 8 percent to 9 percent range.

The Reagan administration is predicting inflation of 10.2 percent this year, but it may be forced to lower that forecast in its mid-year revisions next month.

Inflation — as measured by the government's Consumer Price Index — shot up 12.4 percent from December 1979 to December 1980, marking the first time since World War I that prices increased more than 10 percent for two years in a row.

The rate was 13.3 percent in 1979, 9 percent in 1978 and 6.8 percent in 1977.

In April, the consumer price index was 10 percent higher than a year before. The government releases its inflation figures for May on Tuesday.

Economists are adjusting their estimates mainly because of slower-than-anticipated increases in food and energy prices. The worldwide oil glut and American conservation efforts are holding down rises in fuel prices.

Texas couple overcome by smoke in hotel fire

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Fire officials were investigating today the cause of a one-room blaze in which about 100 guests and staff of the Hilton Hotel here were evacuated.

A Corpus Christi, Texas, couple — Steven and Marjorie Avery — were treated and released from a Tulsa hospital for smoke inhalation. No other injuries were reported.

Eddie Smith, a club manager estimated damage at $10,000, but Joe Walker, assistant Tulsa Fire Marshal, said smoke and fire damage to the four-story building was estimated at $100,000.

One of the Hilton managers, who asked not to be identified, said the room was unoccupied when the blaze was discovered by a maid shortly after 1 p.m.

"We really didn't have that many people in here," said the employee, who noted the fire occurred at a time when most guests were checking out. "It was nothing major," he said.

The fire was contained to a bed in one room, which had walls made of brick and concrete blocks, the employee said. Smoke spread through the air conditioning system to all 400 rooms, causing most of the damage.

Avery, 54, and his 52-year-old wife, were among hundreds attending a week-long Oral Roberts evangelistic conference.

"They said they smelled smoke and left their room to investigate, but the smoke was so dense they turned to go back to their room to find the door had swung shut, locking them outside in the smoke-filled corridor," said Bruce Crain, assistant fire marshal.

Firefighters permitted people to return to the hotel about 45 minutes after the fire, but guests from the third floor were moved to a nearby motel, said Eddy Mason, a hotel manager.

All rooms in the hotel except the one in which the fire started were expected to be available for occupancy today, Smith said.

Fire Chief F.H. Leighty said late Sunday the cause of the fire remained undetermined.

Rest important with rheumatoid arthritis

AUSTIN — Rheumatoid arthritis, the most serious form of arthritis, is a pain! Over five million Americans have it. Two-thirds of them are women. Not only does rheumatoid arthritis hurt, but it hurts at the worst possible time of life. Its victims are usually between the ages of 20 and 40. It is during this age span that most people are trying to establish both families and careers.

Currently there is no known cure for arthritis, says the Texas Medical Association, although the disease can be controlled by proper medication, diet and exercise.

It is an unpredictable disease. One day it seems to have gone away completely for no reason, only to reappear in full force perhaps a day, perhaps a month or more later. It affects not only the joints, but the entire body as well. Fatigue is one of its most annoying symptoms.

How do you cope with widely varying energy levels at the very time of life when you feel like you need all the energy in the world and then some?

One answer is pacing. Pacing is a way to deal with changing levels of energy without becoming a yo-yo.

Prevent yourself from going from spurts of frenzied activity to a bed-ridden state because you're burned out. Plan your day to allow for periods of rest, whether at home or at work, says T.M.A. Set aside a few minutes each hour to stretch or meditate or just to put your feet up and relax. If you're having trouble with one particular joint, try to rest it.

Vary your activities so that you don't exhaust any one part of your body. If you become even the slightest bit fatigued, take a short break. If at all possible, try to take a couple of quick naps throughout the day.

Most importantly, stop whatever you are doing before you become tired, even if it means not finishing something right then and there. You can go back and do a better job later, when you are more rested. If you wait until you are exhausted may be too late. You may have already pushed yourself too far and provoked a flare up. This can mean being totally out of commission for a few days or more.

Listen to your body. Pain and fatigue are symptoms that should be taken seriously. Although it may seem at first that you are "glooming off" by paying attention to your body's warning signals, you will actually wind up being more productive. You will be able to work steadily and not in fits and starts.

Remember that you are living and working for the long distance, not the short sprint.

Berry mousse fast to make

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press
Food Editor

Like many other cooks these days, I love to serve guests delicious desserts that can be made quickly. A recipe I cherish for Raspberry Mousse, made with frozen, sweetened red raspberries, fits into this category. And because the mousse itself is frozen, it is made well ahead of serving.

The recipe I'm offering is enough for a dinner for four, but the formula is easy to double for a dinner for eight.

Another feature of this Raspberry Mousse: it may be served various ways. Frozen in individual dessert dishes, it's ready to be topped with cut-up fresh fruit, as I suggest in the following recipe. Or it may be topped with whipped cream and garnished with fresh red raspberries. It may also be frozen in a single container and scooped into dessert dishes alongside vanilla ice cream: the combination is great.

For a large party, a friend of mine likes to use the Raspberry Mousse a special way. She bakes a sponge cake in a 10-inch tube pan, slices the cake into three layers and sprinkles each with a little kirsch. Then she sandwiches the layers together with a quart of slightly softened vanilla ice cream, leaving the top plain. Properly protected, the cake goes into her freezer. On the day she is entertaining, she defrosts the cake and garnishes the top with scoops of the Raspberry Mousse (which has also been stored in the freezer) plus sweetened fresh raspberries flavored with kirsch.

RASPBERRY MOUSSE
10-ounce package frozen whole red raspberries in syrup, undrained
1/2 cup heavy cream
1-3rd cup confectioners' sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons domestic or imported kirsch, if desired
Mixed cut-up fresh fruit: pineapple, membrane-free orange sections and strawberries or raspberries

Thoroughly crush raspberries in their syrup to make a thin puree; force through a fine-mesh strainer to eliminate seeds. Beat cream until thick, adding sugar and salt; add-pureed berries and beat gently to Turn into four 1/2-cup soufflé or other individual dessert dishes or glasses; freeze until firm; cover tightly; store in freezer. Before serving, let stand briefly at room temperature or in refrigerator to soften somewhat. Top with the mixed fruit. Makes 4 servings.

Dear Abby

Adulterer out of bed, on wagon

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to the bed-hopping wife, WEAK IN ILLINOIS, missed the mark. She said, "I've gone from one adulterous affair to another until now I can't even count them. I'm not oversexed; in fact, I'm just the opposite. I get nothing out of these affairs, and can't for the life of me understand why I deliberately get myself into such miserable situations that offer no sexual fulfillment, knowing if I'm caught I'll lose my husband and children. Can't something on the order of Alcoholics Anonymous be organized for compulsive adulterers?"

You replied, "I can't imagine a compulsive adulterer phoning another compulsive adulterer and being talked out of it."

Abby, I am a recovering compulsive adulterer who tried two psychiatrists, one psychoanalyst, three group therapies, various religious approaches and finally exorcism! Understanding what motivated me did not give me the power to control my actions. I lost my wife and children, and I was about to lose my second family when I found a program based on the principles of Alcoholics Anonymous to help compulsive "lustlers" control their lust in the same way compulsive alcoholics control their drinking.

It is "Sexaholics Anonymous," a fellowship of men and women who share their experiences and help each other conquer their common problem.

I am now free from the obsession of sex, and have not had sex with either myself or anyone other than my wife for the last five years. That is a miracle for which I thank God and Sexaholics Anonymous.

In 1979 we received authorization from Alcoholics Anonymous to adopt its 12 steps, but there is no organizational affiliation between S.A. and A.A. There are no dues or fees. Like A.A., S.A. is entirely self-supporting and accepts no outside contributions. The only requirement for membership is a sincere desire to stop lustling and help other sexaholics to achieve sexual sobriety.

SET FREE IN L.A.

DEAR FREE: Until I received your letter, I had never heard of "Sexaholics Anonymous," and after checking it out, I am convinced that yours is a serious, legitimate program. If there are others out there whose lives have become unmanageable because of compulsive lustling, information about this newly formed organization can be obtained by writing to: P.O. Box 300, Simi Valley, Calif. 93062.

DEAR ABBY: My son is a newspaper carrier. He just came home terribly disappointed after attempting to collect his paper route bills. Apparently many people do not realize that newspaper carriers are in business for themselves. They must pay for the newspapers out of their own pockets, and collect the money in order to stay even. If the carrier fails to collect from the customer, the carrier is out of luck!

My son's enthusiasm for his paper route has dropped to the point where he is thinking of quitting. I would hate to see that happen, Abby, because his paper route was his first step toward financial independence and maturity.

Abby, please say something in your column about the importance of paying the newsboy. You wouldn't believe the number of people who move away without paying. Also,

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesia (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

How do you convince your children to eat fresh fruits instead of sugary, processed snack foods? This is a problem that we all face, and one that deserves serious attention. Perhaps, we should consider the fact that children seem to want what they can't have and resist those things that we know they should eat. Try the "take-away" system. Buy a variety of fresh fruits, wash them thoroughly and set them out in a basket. Tell your children that these fruits are not for them, but for grown-ups, or for you in conjunction with your diet. Reward positive behavior with a piece of fresh fruit and, over a period of time, they will come to associate the fruit with your approval.

The end result will be a change in attitude toward fruit, and your children will learn to enjoy it in place of sweet, processed foods. This will be an extremely beneficial change in your children's eating habits that are now being formed for the rest of their lives.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

June 23, 1981

There is a possibility this coming year that you could take a trip of considerable distance that you've always wanted to make. It will give you great pleasure and at the same time enhance your education.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try not to let your feelings and emotions take precedence over your logic today. If they are permitted to influence your judgment, mistakes are likely. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's best today that you borrow nothing from friends, but if you must borrow something from a pal be sure to return it in the same condition you got it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you're capable of operating rather well when the heat is on, but today you could blunder if required to make decisions under pressure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Think your ideas through very carefully today before acting. That which you do impulsively may have to be done all over.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard against being overly possessive today with one you love. The tighter you try to hold this person to you, the harder he or she will struggle to get free.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Steer clear today of discussing volatile topics on which you and your mate do not agree. It won't take much to light the fuse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) People doing work or services for you must be handled with extreme tact today. When issuing orders or instructions, choose your words carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't take any type of wild gamble today that could affect your income or holdings. Yielding to reckless impulses might prove to be very expensive.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you want others to do as you say today, you must first set the proper example. Otherwise, they'll have no reason to believe you're the one to lead them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today not to demand things that you wouldn't want others to ask of you if the roles were reversed. Be reasonable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Sometimes it is necessary to spend money in order to make money. Today, however, you must be careful not to spend it on the wrong people or things.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be able to distinguish today between being properly assertive or merely too pushy. The former breeds success. The latter will antagonize others.

Foster wins Amarillo Open

For the third time this summer, new Pampa High tennis coach Stacey Foster met David Webb in the finals of a tennis tournament and came away with the championship trophy. Sunday, it was at the Amarillo Tennis Open where Foster outlasted Webb, 7-6, 4-6, 6-1, in the Class A singles final. Foster also defeated Webb of Amarillo in the finals of the Pampa Tennis Open and the T-Bar-M Tournament. Foster and Webb, who were teammates at West Texas State, teamed up to win the Class A doubles title over Bobby Kleinecke, Bryan, and Bill Offord, Amarillo, 6-3, 6-1. Mark Elliott of Pampa advanced to the finals in Class B singles before losing to Gruver's Bruce Ammons, 6-7, 6-2, 6-0. Lynn Rush of Amarillo defeated Debbie Cole, also of Amarillo, 6-0, 6-1, to win the women's Class A singles championship. Barbara Oden, Amarillo, defeated Linda Cargill, Amarillo, 7-6, 6-0, in the finals of women's Class B singles.

Allison wins Gabriel 400

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Bobby Allison figured it was time some of the racing luck went his way. The 43-year-old leader of Grand National stock car racing's "Alabama Gang" came away the winner of Sunday's Gabriel 400 at Michigan International Speedway after a series of spectacular crashes five laps from the end put him on top. Allison, who holds a huge point lead in the NASCAR season championship, wound up crossing the finish line under a caution flag, waving to the stunned crowd as his Buick Regal cruised along at about 80 mph. "Usually I lose them like that," Allison said. "That's the first time in all the years I've been racing that I've won one of those." A spectacular finish appeared on the horizon as polesitter Darrell Waltrip held off challenges from Buddy Baker, Dale Earnhardt, Benny Parsons and Cale Yarborough after taking the lead 12 laps from the end. However, Kyle Petty blew an engine on lap 193, apparently oiling down the asphalt surface in turn two of the two-mile oval. On lap 196, Yarborough's car suddenly veered into the wall on turn two and Baker spun up near the wall. While a crowd estimated at more than 65,000 gasped at that site, Waltrip and Earnhardt came together and spun into the wall farther down the backstretch. Allison, who now has won four races this season and 64 in his NASCAR career, was able to avoid all the spinning cars and debris, then outraced Parsons, who spun but didn't hit anything, and Harry Gant, who had to slow down to avoid hitting the other cars. At that point, the pace car came onto the track and led the field through the last four slow laps.

Pampa little league roundup

Greg Clayton hit a two-run homer for Celanese, and Mike Lynn went the distance for the mound win. Defensive standouts were Danny Graves, Matt Walsh, and Sandra Farra. In other tourney games, Glo-Valve routed One Bull, 16-6; Citizens edged Cabot, 15-13; Gate Valve slipped by Moose, 9-8; Duncan breezed past Chase Oil, 14-4; Dixie Parts downed 100,000 Auto Parts, 14-4, and Gibson defeated OCAW, 17-9. Tonight, it's Glo-Valve vs. Citizens at 6 p.m., Gate Valve vs. Duncan at 8 p.m., Wil-Mart vs. Dixie at 6 p.m., and Celanese vs. Gibson at 8 p.m. Wil-Mart compiled a 12-2 record and a regular-season championship in the American Little League standings, and then edged Dunlap, 4-3, in the opening round of the City Tournament Saturday at Optimist Park. Following Wil-Mart in the final won-lost records were Gate Valve, 11-3; Chase Oil, 11-3; Citizens Bank, 9-4; One Bull Ranch, 6-8; Rotary, 5-9; Gibson, 4-10, and 100,000 Auto Parts, 0-14. Saturday's games followed a single-elimination format, while the remainder of the tournament will be double-elimination. Celanese came from behind to edge Rotary, 9-8, Saturday.

Graham wins Open title

ARDMORE, PA. (AP) — David Graham marched to the U.S. Open Championship title with poise, precision and perfection. He needed nothing fancy, no miracle putts, no fancy bunker shots. He reached 18 greens at the Merion Golf Club in regulation. He three-putted only once, and he was in the fairway 17 times. The first Australian ever to win the Open, the first foreign winner since Tony Jacklin of England won in 1970, Graham shot a final round 67, 3-under-par. For the tournament he was 68-68-70-67—273. He moved from three strokes behind George Burns III at the start of the final round Sunday, and literally swept aside Burns with his consistency. "Today would have to be as good as I've ever played in my life," Graham said. "I can't play any better." Burns, who led after the second and third rounds, tumbled from contention with erratic drives that left him in the rough time and again. He and Bill Rogers finished tied for second place, three strokes back at 276. "You can't win when you're putting for pars instead of birdies," Burns said. Rogers, a consistent big money winner on the tour but with only one victory, had a 69 on the final day after previous rounds of 70, 68 and 69. Graham was simply unyielding. He birdied four holes and bogeyed only one, No. 4, where he 3-putted. His 7-under-par was the second lowest ever in the Open. Jack Nicklaus, a contender until the final nine, won the Open last year at Baltusrol with a record 272. John Cook and John Schroeder tied for third place, six strokes back at 279. Nicklaus, troubled by poor putting, never put on the charge Graham and many others thought he would. He finished at even-par 280 with Frank Conner, Lon Hinkle, Samuel Rachels and Chi Chi Rodriguez. Jim Thorpe, who held the lead after the first day with a 66, finished at 281 along with Ben Crenshaw and Isao Aoki of Japan. Graham started the final round at four under par, three strokes behind Burns, the reluctant leader of the second and third rounds. But Graham applied pressure on Burns quickly. He birdied the first and second holes to move to within one stroke of Burns. When Burns bogeyed No. 4, the two front-runners were tied at 6-under. But Graham promptly bogeyed No. 5 and not until Burns bogeyed No. 10 were the two tied again. The coup de grace came on No. 14, a par four, 414-yarder. There, Graham dropped his second shot four feet from the pin and sank it for a birdie.

DANGERS IN THE FOREST
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Forestry work is one of the world's most dangerous operations, according to the International Labor Organization. One in four of the eight million permanently employed logging workers has an accident every year. When part-time workers are included there are an estimated 100 million people exposed to hazards. To help reduce accidents in this industry, ILO has published a "Guide to Safety and Health in Forestry Work."

Kathy Snider defeated Vi Vandebrook, 221-161, Sunday to win the second annual Pampa Merchants Women's Classic at Harvester Lanes. Oilseed production expected to rebound

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department experts say world oilseed production is expected to rebound in 1981-82, partly because of improved prospects for soybeans in the United States and possibly a larger rapeseed harvest in Canada.

Delays in seeding the current Soviet sunflowerseed crop is also an important factor to watch, since late seeding usually results in yield reductions caused by weather and disease problems.

Extremely wet weather in much of the major corn and soybean areas of the United States delayed planting those crops this spring.
