Two factories strike despite martial law

Polish Americans pray, speak out

By EDWARD MILLER
Associated Press Writer

Polish-Americans burned a Soviet flag in Chicago, marched to the Soviet mission to the United Nations in New York and bowed their heads in prayer across the nation as the Polish government cracked down on the Solidarity labor movement.

From the pews and pulpits to the streets and union halls, Polish Americans expressed worry about relatives in their homeland and fears that Soviet tanks might rumble into Poland's big cities.

"It's not the first time the Polish people have walked on thin ice. They have a long history of it, but we have a strong faith that things will work out," the Rev. Matt Sienkiewicz said after a special Mass for Poland was sung at St. Hedwig Church, the oldest of four Polish-American Catholic churches in South Bend, Ind.

Many Polish-Americans were on their way to Mass Sunday when they heard of the declaration of martial law and detention of labor and political officials in Poland the night before.

The president of the Polish-American Congress, Aloysius Mazewski of Chicago, said Wednesday will be a day of mass demonstrations in major U.S. cities under the organization's sponsorship.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 people turned out in Chicago for a 90-minute protest Sunday at the Polish Consulate. They torched the red flag of the Soviet Union, and rally organizer Chris Rac said. "This is what will happen to the Soviet Union if they invade Poland."

About 300 demonstrators protested in front of the Polish Consulate and the Soviet Mission to the United Nations in New York City, chanting "Down With Communism" and "Freedom For Poland."

In Baltimore, members of the local chapter of the Polish National Alliance voted not to accept the Christmas tree usually sent them by the Polish embassy in Washington.

In Philadelphia, Cardinal John Krol called the actions of the Polish government "distressing, but not surprising" given Solidarity's 15 months of agitation against the communist regime and its recent demands for a national referendum on a new, non-communist government.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Workers at two of Warsaw's biggest factories went on strike today. Solidarity sources said, but a threatened general strike to protest the crackdown on the independent labor movement failed to materialize.

The day-old martial-law regime, which put the military in charge of power plants and coal mines Sunday, militarized still more factories today. The Soviet Union, in an apparent warning to the West, declared that the actions by Poland's Communist leadership were an "internal affair."

Members of the temporarily suspended Solidarity union distributed leaflets in Warsaw Sunday calling for a nationwide walkout in defiance of the government's proclamation of martial law and its suspension of the right to strike.

Spokesmen for the temporarily outlawed Solidarity labor union told reporters of work stoppages by thousands in the giant Ursus tractor factory and the Warsaw steel mill. The reports could not be independently verified.

Initial checks of other large factories in some districts of the capital found no strikes or protests by members of Solidarity, many of whose leaders were seized Sunday when the government imposed martial law.

Employees on the first shift at the steel plant began work at 6 a.m. but put down their tools after a mid-morning break, the sources said.

"Nothing is going on, as you can see for yourself," said a steelworker outside the giant steel works. But there were no outward signs of a strike, such as banners or flags.

Conflicting reports emerged from the Ursus factory, in a Warsaw suburb. Some workers said employees were on the job, but other sources said work had stopped in several departments.

Earlier today a Solidarity member at the steel mill said authorities had "fished out the most important (union) men. But there are others to take their place, so some time will have to elapse before they arrive at some decision."

Government officials said arrests would be an "ongoing process," but Solidarity sources said some detainees had already been released.

Solidarity sources said as many as 3,000 members of the union may have been rounded up in the capital alone. Earlier estimates put the total number interned in the entire country at about 1,000.

Government leaders conferred with Solidarity chief Lech Walesa in an attempt to avert a general strike. But Warsaw Radio carried no word from him today.

Poland's Roman Catholic prime minister, Archbishop Josef Glemp, appealed the workers in a broadcast sermon. "Do not start a fight between Poles. Do not give your lives away."

Pope John Paul II also appealed restraint, saying: "Polish blood cannot be shed, because too much was spilled in the last war."

Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski, general who is also head of the Communist Party and defense minister, cracked down on Solidarity after 17 months of general unrest, a steadily worsening economy and tension that saw the legalization of the Soviet bloc's first independent labor union and its increasing insistence on major economic and political reforms to rebuild the near-bankrupt economy.

Although it gave in repeatedly to Solidarity's demands, the government had hinted repeatedly that it would order the army to take action if the union continued to challenge it. The also had been recurrent fears of Soviet military intervention.

The last straw apparently came Saturday when the union leaders' meeting in Gdansk called for a nationwide referendum to retain or reject communism unless the government met their demands for economic and political reforms before the end of the year.

Reagan warns Soviet Union of risks of Polish intervention

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the tempo of Poland's long labor crisis quickening, President Reagan is warning the Soviet Union of the risks of intervention as two key members of his foreign policy team hurried home.

The State Department had no immediate comment on initial reports from Warsaw that many workers appeared to be staying home today in response to the crackdown.

"We're still monitoring it," said Joe Reap, spokesman for a special team organized over the weekend to keep track of developments in Poland. Reap would not give any details of the information he said was reaching the State Department this morning, but said there was "no indication of any major developments yet."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today's daily written briefing prepared for Reagan by the National Security Council indicated "that it is generally quiet this morning" in Poland.

Speakes said at mid-morning that Reagan had no meetings on tap to review developments.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. abruptly canceled a long-planned and important trip to six nations in the Middle East and South Asia and headed home from Brussels, Belgium today.

Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger, who was in London when the Polish government announced its crackdown against the independent trade union Solidarity, was back in Washington by nightfall Sunday.

With top policy-makers being assembled for quick decisions if necessary, U.S. officials awaited anxiously for word on what would happen when Polish workers were due to report to their jobs early today for the first time since the crackdown.

In Poland, officials of the military regime said they were conferring with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa in hopes of heading off a nationwide strike urged by union militants.

Reagan met Sunday with Vice President Bush, Weinberger, CIA Director William Casey and several other top advisers shortly after returning to the White House from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

"Several times, along with the whole free world, we have made it plain how seriously we would view any interference in Poland," Reagan told reporters enroute from his helicopter to the White House.

Soviet and Polish diplomats in Washington were summoned to the State Department for separate talks Sunday, but details were not made public. The Pentagon said U.S. intelligence had spotted no sign that Soviet forces near Poland were being mobilized.

Haig, who said the United States and its allies were taken by surprise by the suddenness of the Polish move, said "None of us have ascertained an Soviet readiness measures which would be a source of alarm."

He said the immediate U.S. policy will be to "express our concern and watch very, very carefully."

The Reagan administration clearly believes the stakes in Poland are high, especially if Soviet troops intervene.

For months the United States and NATO allies have discussed a wide range of political and economic options including possible trade sanctions, the Soviet Union acts in Poland.

Negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on reducing medium-range missiles in Europe are barely two weeks old.

County studies toxic waste disposal

Gray County Commissioners will consider several items including the resolution proposed by Swisher County officials pertaining to the disposal of toxic waste materials during regular session on Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in the Gray County Courthouse.

Commissioners will also consider an adjustment in values for property insurance, and the drainage easement for Highway 70.

The construction easement from Phillips concerning Site 3 of the McClellan Creek Watershed will be discussed, as well as the service agency for the fiscal year 1982 CETA program.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons will be authorized to advertise for a semi-dump trailer. Precinct 2 Commissioner Ronnie Rice will be authorized to advertise for bids for a truck tractor.

A request from Northern Natural Gas Company to cross a county road with a pipeline will be considered. A lease agreement for office space in the County Annex will be discussed with the representatives of the ASCS.

Israeli law extended to Golan Heights

JERUSALEM (AP) — The government decided today to apply Israeli law to the Golan Heights, in effect annexing the territory captured from Syria in the 1967 Middle East war, a parliament official said.

Dalia Goren, secretary of the opposition Labor Party faction in the Knesset (parliament), told The Associated Press the government had informed the party of its intention to propose the legislation to the house this morning.

With government backing and the likelihood of considerable support from members of the Labor Party, the bill was thought sure to be accepted.

Applying Israeli law to the Golan would make the territory a part of Israel. Until now it has been under military law.

Israel Radio said the leftist Mapam faction of Labor, former Foreign Minister Abba Eban and the Shinui (Change) faction had announced they would oppose the bill.

The decision was certain to provoke outrage in Syria, which has been embroiled in a dispute with Israel since last spring over Syrian anti-aircraft missiles in Lebanon. Israel has threatened military action to force the removal of the missiles, and the Reagan administration sent special envoy Philip C. Habib on four diplomatic missions to the Mideast trying without success to resolve the missile crisis.

A strong "Golan Lobby" has been pressuring the government to annex the Golan by applying Israeli law to it, in view of Syria's refusal to negotiate peace with Israel.

The government has refrained from such a move, fearing strong American protest. Last March it defeated a bid by a small right-wing party in Parliament to pass such legislation.

Israel Radio said the government reached the decision at a special morning Cabinet meeting chaired by Prime Minister Menachem Begin right after he came out of hospital, where he had been treated for a hip fracture.

Robbery report false; clerk charged with theft

"A burglary report filed with the Pampa Police Department on Saturday was false," according to Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman.

Gloria Killough, 28, 320 N. Faulkner, a clerk at Allsup's No. 81, Amarillo Highway, has been charged with theft over $200. The clerk reported that she had been robbed at knifepoint of $150 and three rolls of quarters while working at the store.

After further investigation by the Pampa Police Department, the report was found to be false, and the theft charges were filed against Killough, who is in custody at this time in lieu of $1,500 bond.

Mobil employees leave Libya

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Sixty-seven employees of the Mobil Corp. and their families departed on a chartered jetliner today in line with President Reagan's evacuation orders.

It was the first large group of Americans to leave Libya since the White House last Thursday invalidated U.S. passports for travel to Libya and warned it would take further legal steps if necessary to force the estimated 1,500 Americans here to pull out. A handful of Americans trickled out this past weekend.

President Reagan said their safety was imperiled because of what he called increasing Libyan hostility toward the United States.

"We are complying with the U.S. executive order in a safe and orderly manner," said Doyle Marrs, 51, president of Mobil's Libyan subsidiary.

Mobil had announced last month it was considering ending its operations in Libya, although no decision has been made yet. Exxon Corp. last month shut down its operations here.

The chartered Lufthansa 737 jet was scheduled to fly from Tripoli to Frankfurt, West Germany, and London. The Americans were then going to fly to their U.S. hometowns, or wherever else they liked, for Christmas vacations.

The evacuees were divided on whether they were happy to leave. Some said they were tired of increasing shortages of consumer goods in Libya, while others said they liked the extra pay they received for a hardship post, and the career advantages of working for an oil company in such an important oil-producing country.

"I'll miss all my friends at school," said 14-year-old Karina Verbrugghen, a native of St. Paul, Minn. She was flying out with her mother, Hanny, and her 8-year-old brother, Sandor.

The father, Mobil airplane pilot Henry Verbrugghen, and 30 other key American Mobil employees were staying in Libya for an indefinite period.

Libya has expedited exit visas and generally cooperated with the Americans here in an apparent effort to show its good will and possibly persuade them to stay. Libya does not want to lose the skills of the U.S. community, and does not want the world to think foreigners are not welcome here, according to Libyan government officials.

Man treated here after Oklahoma shooting

Eusbaldo Nevarez, 21, 1002 Galveston, of Wellington, was treated at 2:35 a.m. at Coronado Community Hospital for a gunshot wound suffered during a ruckus in Oklahoma.

According to a spokesperson at the hospital, Nevarez was not seriously injured, was treated and released.

The man had first attempted to receive treatment at Shamrock Hospital where they referred him to Coronado Community.

The Shamrock Police Department said that the shooting had taken place in Oklahoma, but their information is not complete at this time. The matter is under investigation.

Defense spending differences still to be settled by Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - With major votes on domestic spending cuts behind them, the Senate and House still must resolve differences over money for President Reagan's proposed arms buildup before adjourning.

Differing versions of a defense appropriations bill - $196.6 billion from the House and $208.7 billion from the Senate - remain to be reconciled as the first session of the 97th Congress nears an end.

A House-Senate conference committee was tentatively scheduled to meet today, setting the stage for Senate action in time for Congress' self-imposed adjournment deadline Friday.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said the Senate might be able to finish its work by midweek. Some House members expressed similar sentiments.

Baker said the defense spending bill was "the only big item we have yet to dispose of."

The biggest obstacle to adjournment was cleared last week as Congress approved a stopgap spending bill giving Reagan his minimum demand of $4 billion of the $8.4 billion in domestic reductions he asked for in September. This was on top of $35 billion in reductions Congress approved last summer.

Baker said other items remaining to be dealt with included Social Security, a $7.1-billion military construction bill and a measure to protect the identities of undercover intelligence agents.

In the House, the major remaining issue was an $11 billion farm bill. Both sides are lobbying for the support of more than 180 members who remain undecided.

The Reagan administration is backing a compromise 4-year commodity price support package which passed the Senate last week after being grudgingly approved by House negotiators.

But the plan under attack in the House by an unusual coalition of pro-farm interests complaining about low support levels and consumer interests angry over what they say will be a costly sugar support program.

Without congressional action this week on a farm program, the government will be forced to implement a 1949 law that Agriculture Secretary John Block says will be expensive and disrupt American agriculture.

Single pay scale for workers in Libya

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) - First Col. Moammar Khadafy confiscated millions from the bank accounts of the rich. Then he shut down thousands of small food and clothing shops and replaced them with government-run supermarkets.

The Libyan leader's next step toward a centralized economy is scheduled in January. A single, government-controlled pay scale is to go into effect for all workers in the country.

The new wage law, announced earlier this month by the government-controlled news media, is similar to the U.S. Civil Service salary system in some respects. All employees of Libyan companies will be placed in one of 16 salary grades, according to the jobs they perform. Within each wage grade, there are 10 graduated steps reflecting an employee's education and years on the job.

The lowest annual salary under the new law is $3,366. The highest, with maximum seniority, is $27,324 a year.

The law is designed to narrow the gap between the highest- and lowest-paid workers in the Libyan economy, in keeping with Khadafy's socialist goals.

Many workers in the oil industry will be hurt, Western oil executives say. But the pay of some poorer Libyans will nearly double. One social worker expects her salary to jump from $366 a month to $660.

Western diplomats and businessmen say the changeover probably will disrupt the economy for some time. Besides creating huge bureaucratic problems for those trying to assign the country's 3 million workers to the appropriate pay classifications, Western analysts believe the more skilled, higher-paid workers will produce less when they realize hard work won't get them a bigger pay check.

U.S. has few cards to play in Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration has few cards to play in trying to deter the Soviet Union from crushing the Solidarity movement in Poland.

Grain and high technology sales could be suspended. But economic sanctions, particularly cutbacks in food shipments, require the strong support of friendly governments.

And business being business, it is very hard to arrange an effective boycott. The Carter administration found that out twice during its last year in office - when it tried to punish the Soviet Union for its military move into Afghanistan and again when it tried to isolate Iran economically for taking Americans hostage.

Other countries, some long-standing U.S. allies, stepped in to sell food to the Soviet Union and trade with the revolutionary regime in Tehran.

Beyond economic sanctions, another possibility would be to break off the just-started arms limitation talks in Geneva.

The Soviets would like to keep the United States from deploying new nuclear missiles in Western Europe beginning in 1983. But with the negotiations just underway, there is no agreement for the United States to threaten to tear up if the Soviets clamp down on Poland.

For the moment, then, the administration is concentrating on warnings, rather than action, to discourage Soviet intervention.

"Several times, along with the whole free world, we've made it plain how seriously we would view any interference," President Reagan said Sunday.

"The Polish people should find a solution to their current difficulties through a process of negotiation and compromise among the parties involved," Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said. "Above all, they should be permitted to do so without outside interference."

Beyond these kind of warnings, U.S. officials will say only that the Polish government's crackdown on Solidarity is under study. No U.S. official has even hinted at the possibility of U.S. military action.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who is not under the same verbal constraints as current policymakers, told an interviewer Sunday. "Militarily, we can't do anything, and we shouldn't pretend that we're going to do anything."

U.S. analysts view the immediate potential problem not as one of an imminent Soviet invasion, but use of the Polish government to try to break the back of the reform movement.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, who was President Carter's national security adviser, says the suppression is "clearly being done at the Soviets' behest" and that U.S. policymakers should keep that in mind as they make their decisions.

State tax questions will be answered

AUSTIN - A representative of State Comptroller Bob Bullock will be in Pampa on Dec. 16, to assist area taxpayers and answer tax questions.

According to Claudia Stravato, manager of the Comptroller's Amarillo Office, Vera Sharber, Enforcement Officer will meet with Gray and Carson counties taxpayers at the Gray County Court House in Pampa from 2 to 4 p.m.

Questions about taxes, the filing of tax returns or assistance on returns can be answered quickly and efficiently in these face-to-face meetings, Bullock said.

Hospital's professional building construction reported on schedule

Construction of the new Professional Building at Coronado Community Hospital is right on schedule according to CCH Administrator Norman Knox.

"So far, we haven't had any serious delays due to the weather," Knox said, "and hopefully, they'll be able to wrap up most of the exterior work before the winter weather hits this area."

So far, basic site preparation is complete, as is basic framing and masonry work, according to Randy Pilkinton, supervisor for Bill Averitt of Lubbock, contractor for the project.

Roofing crews are about 90 percent complete, Pilkinton said, as work is currently underway on installing the skylights for the interior atrium.

The 15,000 square foot building is targeted for completion in April next year, Knox said.

The hospital administrator said the facility will house eight to twelve physicians along with the satellite laboratory and radiology units.

"We'll have a lab and x-ray station to handle out-patients and provide direct services for physicians," Knox said.

"The Professional Office Building is being built by Hospital Corporation of America (HCA) to attract key specialists to the area, Knox said, "we are still looking for speciality areas, such as in orthopedic surgery, a gynecologist and in internal medicine."

Legislature faces questions on financing college construction

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Just how Texas will finance construction and maintenance at 17 state colleges and universities will be a prime problem in 1983. It also was a crucial issue in the 1981 Legislature but went unsolved.

What the 1983 session does with the political hot potato may depend a lot on the outcome of the 1982 elections.

Gov. Bill Clements has sworn to wipe out the state property tax that provided funds for construction at the 17 schools from 1956 until 1980.

Speaker Bill Clayton, who favored increased tuition to help the floundering colleges, will no longer be in the Legislature.

Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland, who advocated a decreased property tax for the colleges, is considered a likely candidate for land commissioner.

"The debate over construction funding, plus recent suggestions that college construction in general should be pursued more cautiously than in the past, have raised questions about the building needs of Texas schools," said Rep. Ernestine Glossbrener, D-Alice, in a recent report by the House Study Group she heads.

"Dollar estimates of these needs have varied widely and the debate over how best to judge building needs continues," she said.

Until 1980, Texas had three ways of financing construction: 34 public senior colleges. Five schools were financed by Permanent University Fund, built around the University of Texas and Texas A&M. Twelve depended entirely on state legislative appropriations. Seventeen used money from a state ad valorem tax first levied in 1947 for that purpose.

The tax was 10 cents per $100 valuation but this was before the 1978 Legislature passed the Peveto bill saying all property must be assessed at 100 percent of its market value. As a result, in 1980, the Legislature virtually abolished the assessment ratio by setting it at .0001 percent, which would allow the state to collect only $1 tax for every $1 billion worth of property.

Later the attorney ruled that as long as this tax was law the Legislature could appropriate general revenue funds for construction, unless the constitution was changed. Then in November, voters refused to remove the property tax provision from the constitution.

As a result the 17 state schools cannot get money for property taxes and the Legislature cannot appropriate general tax money for construction purposes.

The 1981 regular session tried to solve this standoff, proposing a construction fund from half of the state's revenue surplus. It passed both houses in different forms then died in conference committee. In the 1981 special session the Senate approved a college building fund financed by a 3-cent property tax, but the bill died in the House.

The 17 schools are not totally without construction funds now. Some have been able to use money left over from earlier property tax allocations. Others acquired building funds from private sources.

But all agree the day is coming soon when they must have a source of state funds for new construction and maintenance.

Arkansas legislation is the product of current legal, scientific thinking

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — State witnesses are to testify this week in the trial of a federal court lawsuit against Arkansas' creation law that a two-model approach to the origin and development of life is sound educational policy.

Deputy Attorney General David Williams discussed the testimony Sunday.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which filed the lawsuit in May, rested its case Friday after a week of testimony in U.S. District Court. The ACLU says the Balanced Treatment for Creation-Science and Evolution-Science Act violates the constitutional separation of church and state, violates academic freedom and is vague. The ACLU's 23 plaintiffs — scientists, clergymen and educators — say creationism is religion without scientific support.

Creation-science is the name given by the law to the view that the universe, the Earth and living things came into existence from nothing 20,000 or fewer years ago. Creationists usually assign the act of creation to God, but the law prohibits using religious writings in teaching creationism.

The statute, signed into law in March, takes effect in September 1982. It says public schools must teach creationism if they teach evolution.

Attorney General Steve Clark said on a radio talk show Sunday that parallels or similarities between creation-science and the Bible are beside the point. "The best evidence of intent is what's embodied in the act," he said. Clark said the law's intent is to offer an alternative theory to evolution based on valid scientific evidence.

The legislation is the product of legal and scientific thinking of a resurgent creationism movement headed by Henry Morris, Duane Gish and Wendell Bird, all of El Cajon, Calif. Bird is a lawyer. Gish and Morris are scientists.

Shortly after the trial began Dec. 7, Judge William Overton made clear that he would let each side have its say about as it wants. Last week, he overruled every objection that evidence offered by the other side was irrelevant. Each side made objections anyway for whatever value they may have on appeal.

Testimony ranged from an ACLU witness' discussion of the potential benefit of the sickle cell trait in a malaria-ridden environment to a state witness' testimony that UFOs are "a satanic manifestation in the world for the purpose of deception."

The ACLU presented 17 witnesses, depositions from seven others and more than 130 exhibits, including segments from the writings of Morris, Gish, Bird and other creationists. The witnesses said creationists were dishonest, unscientific, illogical and religiously motivated by a fundamentalist, literalistic interpretation of Genesis.

The witnesses said the statute defines as creation-science what no credible scientist regards as science.

Norman Geisler of Dallas Theological Seminary in Dallas was the state's first and only witness last week. He said one can have religion without God and can believe that there is a God without being religious. Satan believes there is a god but does not worship him, Geisler said.

During cross-examination, Geisler linked UFOs and Satan. "Credible scientists such as Carl Sagan believe in extraterrestrial life without nearly as much evidence," Geisler said. Sagan is a Cornell University astronomer.

Hundreds flocking to front-yard spectacular

HALLSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Each year David Romero combines his passions for gardening, Christmas and "old junk that nobody wants." The result is a holiday wonderland in his front yard.

His East Texas home, ringed by more than 2,000 colored lights, is visited by hundreds of people who are willing to spend 50 cents each for the pleasure of viewing Romero's handiwork during the Christmas season.

"Christmas is my favorite holiday, and I love showing that to people," says Romero, a 68-year-old landscaper.

"I've had old ladies from Longview break down and cry sobbing. 'We've never seen anything so beautiful,'" Romero said.

Romero starts assembling his showplace in September each year. Turning on all of the light pushes up his electricity bill from $7 a month to $150.

He has a sculptured Japanese garden filled with angels, wise men, toy trains, wishing wells, miniature chapels and reindeer in trees.

A former greenhouse is home to Santa Claus and his wife preparing their Christmas tree.

The baby Jesus lies in a straw bed in a life-size nativity scene crafted from papier-mache and chicken wire.

Wreaths are made from horse collars and grapevines, and trees are decorated with costume jewelry from Goodwill stores. Wind chimes made of metal meltings from a nearby steel plant jingle along with the classical music that fills the air.

Inside a store-window facade, a mountain town is caught in a blizzard. Railroad insulators blink with lights and form trails through a light-draped tumbleweed forest.

Drug makers moving from cities

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Drug manufacturers and dealers are moving to rural areas to try to escape detection, but sometimes their maneuvering backfires, law enforcement officials say.

William D. Hornaday, public information officer for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency's regional office, said methamphetamine production is impractical in cities because it has a distinctive odor.

"So they've moved out to rural areas. But the counterforce is that people in rural areas don't ignore their neighbors. They know what's going on around them, so the chances of detection are pretty good," he said.

The move of Texas drug dealers from cities to nearby rural areas follows a national pattern.

Nine men seeking entertainment

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Nine men armed with 18 weapons and a bomb and dressed in camouflage fatigues apparently were just trying to have a good time when they were arrested while attacking a bullet-riddled car, an official says.

"They were just doing it for recreation. They weren't planning any serious coup anywhere," said Lt. Tommy Blackwell of the Travis County Sheriff's office.

He said "Goodbye to Colonel Khadafy" was written on the homemade pipe bomb.

The nine men, all from Austin and ranging in age from 19 to 22, were arrested Sunday afternoon 13 miles east of Austin in a rural area of northeast Travis County, just east of Decker Lake. One of the nine was identified as a Marine private.

"They had a four-pound bomb and were going to detonate it under a car they had absolutely tore to smithereens," sheriff's office spokesman Curtis Weeks said. "It (the car) had been burnt, and looked like it had four- or five-hundred holes in it from various types of weapons."

"They were all doing military-type training. I don't know for what ends," Weeks said.

Deputy Sheriff Arthur Munoz arrested the men, handcuffing them while a farmer held a gun on them. Weeks said. The farmer, who lives nearby, had alerted authorities after hearing the weapons being fired. Weeks said.

Weeks said semi-automatic guns were among the 18 weapons confiscated.

"For nine people, that's a lot of weapons," Weeks said.

He said the bomb was made from a four-inch plumbing pipe about 18 inches long. Authorities exploded the detonator, he said.

Bias on television news

It is interesting the extent to which liberal-left mentality dominates television airways.

Though all three of the major networks have news departments which take it upon themselves to try to give Americans for Democratic Action perspective to whatever they are commenting out, we would like to offer a few recent examples, using CBS News as the laboratory.

Example 1: Morley Safer becomes the focus of an article written by Robert Elegant in the current issue of "Encounter," a leading English journal of unarguable quality. Concerning the extent to which the American press consistently distorted the American position in South Vietnam, Elegant, a man with substantial academic credentials as well as several years personal experience of reporting from Vietnam, was likened by Safer to a "propagandist in the tradition of Joseph Goebbels. All in all an attack vicious as to indicate a mentality quite different from that of Jane Fonda or William Kunstler."

Example 2: Lem Tucker, a black member of the CBS news staff, recently delivered a commentary on the works of Dr. Thomas Sowell, a white black associated with the Hoover Institution at Stanford, likening Sowell to a traitor. Sowell, an individual with substantial credentials in scholarship, omitted the offense of compiling data to indicate that blacks are being harmed by the welfare state to a much greater extent than they are being helped. Many of Sowell's conclusions ran counter to the policies enunciated by black leaders who see the destiny of their people tied to the socialist welfare state. By the time Tucker got through with his comments, essentially one black trying to discredit another, his remarks degenerated into nothing but personal vilification, likening Sowell to Vidkun Quisling.

Example 3: Roger Mudd, commenting immediately after President Reagan's recent speech to the National Press Club concerning forthcoming disarmament talks with the Soviets, asked an associate if the talk was not "largely PR," a rhetorical question. (In other words, Reagan was not sincere in his efforts to minimize potential nuclear confrontation in Europe.)

The foregoing are just random examples of what one receives as a general diet from television "news people." If you doubt this, make a mental note to count the number of buckets of cold water thrown on Reagan, particularly on CBS, at the conclusion of any presidential speech.

Apparently, it is too much to ask that balance obtain on the part of these pundits who seem to know in their heart that anything other than policies advocated by the Americans for Democratic Action are evil. As to why this mindset prevails is open conjecture but as Professor John Greenway has commented, "it is a learned behavior implanted neither by genes nor by experience but by the strangest bunch of intellectuals any nation has ever been damned with."

We need a recession

By CHARLES D. VAN EATON

The economy's real output of goods and services fell at a 1.6 percent annual rate during the period April through June and at a 0.5 percent annual rate during the period July through September. Does this mean the economy is heading into a recession? From the beginning of October until now, the economy's output of goods and services has continued to fall and is currently contracting at an annual rate of a little over three percent. Unemployment rates, as statistically estimated, also are rising. Does this mean the economy is heading into a recession?

Maybe we are moving into a recession, and maybe not. It's too early to declare a full-blown recession. But, given what has happened to key monetary variables over the last seven months, a recession is probably upon us.

The big issue is, of course, whether the Reagan program of cuts in marginal tax rates and cuts in federal spending is to blame for the decline in the rate of economic activity. The answer has to be, no. The first phase of the cut in tax rates has just gone into effect and it is so small that it will not succeed at this stage in overcoming the effect of inflation's pushing taxpayers into higher marginal tax brackets. Furthermore, the proposed spending cuts are not fully in place. In fact, given the recent actions of some congressional committees, it is not even certain that total federal spending will be cut anywhere near the amounts specified in the initial budget resolution passed last summer.

Why then may we be moving into a recession? Largely because the economy appears at last to be attaining a victory over inflation.

Inflation is a monetary phenomenon. When the capacity of the banking system to create money is expanded at a rate greater than the capacity of the private economy to absorb money at unchanged prices, prices rise. This is exactly what has been happening over the past few years. From the end of 1976 through the end of 1980, the broadly defined money supply grew at annual rates near seven percent. Real output has not been able to expand anywhere near this rate. The result has been rising prices and, by necessity, rising interest rates.

The amount of credit money the banking system can create is limited by the excess reserves which are available to the system. The Federal Reserve board of governors has the capacity to reduce the rate of growth of bank reserves. Over the past seven months the Fed has put the brakes on the growth of bank reserves. From July 1980 through January 1981, the Fed expanded reserves 3.8 percent. From February 1981 to the present, bank-reserve growth has been held to only 2 percent.

Inflation is a destructive force. Once it is set in motion it tends to accelerate not because of some magic but because of the interplay which develops between its impact on the decision-making process of persons in the private sector and politicians who fear the consequences of stopping it.

When prices start rising it is natural to believe that they will continue to rise. In such an environment, buying now rather than later makes sense. Borrowing rather than saving makes sense. From the perspective of producers it makes sense to incur higher costs in the form of higher wages and expensive equipment in order to expand production if it is believed that sales can be made at higher prices. This can go on and on only so long as prices in fact continue to rise.

But prices can't continue to rise unless accommodated by an expanding money supply. If the reserve base of the banking system is not expanded sufficiently, many buyers, borrowers, and producers will find themselves unable to complete their plans. In the fact of contraction, Congress and the White House have, in the past, acted to pressure the Fed to expand the banks' reserve base and continue the inflation spiral.

The present Federal Reserve board of governors appears to be determined not to repeat the mistakes of the past. There is good reason to believe that they are not going to fund inflation further. If they stick to what they are doing, the current contraction of output will continue until actual price reductions begin to occur. At that point the economy should stabilize at a level of sustainable real growth.

The tax-rate cuts combined with federal spending cuts also have a potential for generating real output growth. It's absolutely essential that the Fed stand its ground and the Reagan administration continue with its program. If they do, the recession is to be brief and, ultimately, beneficial.

By BUTLER SHAFER

The world of sports reflects the same cartelizing sentiments that one finds in other areas of economic endeavor. Those who are the producers and suppliers of any good or service desire a system of competition that is polite enough not to provide any substantial threat to the interest of fellow competitors. Having finished the writing of a soon-to-be-published book on the development of business attitudes toward competition and regulation, I am quite familiar with the efforts of competitors to temper the pace in order to preserve the positions of all (always with some sort of government backing, mind you.)

Professional sports have long been enmeshed in such attitudes. The system by which players are drafted, along with the rules that severely restrict the freedom of players to move from one team to another, are among the more obvious examples of how professional sports maintain an equalized form of competition. The consequence of all this is a style of play in which the so-called "best" teams in a league are not all that much better than the "worst"; a pattern of competition in which mediocrity becomes the norm. This is not to suggest that the players are not any good: they are. Rather, the quality players are so distributed among the leagues that no one team is ever able to develop any long-term superiority. To paraphrase Andy Warhol, we are fast approaching a situation in which every team in every sport will get to be champion once.

One can see the consequences of this watered-down system of competition in a variety of sports. The Philadelphia Phillies won the 1980 World Series. But finished only with the sixth best record in the National League in 1981, and didn't even qualify for the divisional playoffs. Last year's Super Bowl winner — the Oakland Raiders — did not even win its own division, finished with only a 9-5 record, and yet was named the "champion" of professional football. This same team has thus far compiled only a 5-6 record in the 1981 campaign.

Let me emphasize: there is nothing illegal or dishonest in any of this. It is just that the owners of professional sports teams recognize that they can make more money if league championships get spread around more, and if the final determination on who gets into the championship playoffs can be delayed as late as possible. Even though the Kansas City

Royals finished the 1981 baseball season having lost more games than they won, they managed to get in the playoffs. This kept Kansas City fans in the ballpark.

College athletics embarked upon the path of mediocrity a few years ago. Following the 1971 football season, in which three Big Eight Conference teams — Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado — finished as the No. 1, 2, and 3 team in the nation, other members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association decided it was time to temper the pace of competition, to water down the quality of play so that, on a given Saturday, the Northwestern and the Oregon and the Vanderbilts could beat the Oklahomas and the Penn States and the Alabamas. The NCAA — under the influence of the Boll Weevil States and the Mud Flats Schools of Mines, passed rules severely limiting the number of scholarships colleges and universities could award athletes. As a result, by the late 1970s and continuing today, there are no dominant teams around. There are more and more upsets, not because the coaches and players at Bilgewater A & M really figured out how to play as well as the people at Texas or Michigan, but because the NCAA rules brought the previously outstanding programs down to the level of the also-rans. The entire scene is not unlike the role of the Handicapper — General in one of Kurt Vonnegut's novels, a functionary whose task was to burden the competent in order to equalize performances.

It is encouraging that this vulgar practice at the college level is being challenged. Many of the schools that want a return to the more freely competitive environment that characterized college football in the 1960s have formed the College Football Association. This new organization is not only challenging the Handicapper-General system of rules that is slowly turning college football into as dull a game to watch as the professionals provide, but is even proposing to have expanded television coverage of college games. Instead of having just one television network deciding upon the one game for everyone to watch — a decision that has an apparent bias in favor of Big Ten teams and USC — sports fans may actually get a choice. But you can be assured that the gang at the NCAA will resist these efforts: consumer choice is not something favored by members of a cartel.

Today is Monday, Dec. 14, the 348th day of 1981. There are 17 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Dec. 14, 1911, Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen became the first man to reach the South Pole.

On this date: In 1542, Mary Queen of Scots took the British throne following the death of James V.

In 1916, the people of Denmark voted to sell the Danish West Indies to the United States for $25 million.

In 1937, Japan established a puppet Chinese government at Peking.

And in 1939, the Soviet Union was expelled from the League of Nations.

Ten years ago: President Nixon and French President Pompidou met in the Azores, agreeing on measures to improve the international monetary situation.

Five years ago: The Communist Party in Vietnam held its first congress since 1960, at which time it had decided to wage an armed struggle for control of the country.

One year ago: Hundreds of thousands of Beatles fans gathered in cities throughout the world at memorial services for John Lennon, slain six days earlier in New York.

Today's birthdays: Country singer Charlie Rich is 49. Actress Lee Remick is 46.

Thought for today: When people say, "She's got everything," I've only one answer: "I haven't had tomorrow." — Elizabeth Taylor, U.S. actress (1932- )

Who's minding the store?

By D.R. SEGAL

The very best thing about newspapers is that you don't have to have anybody around running them. The other day I called one of our papers and they said the publisher was at a meeting out of town, the ad director was at a convention and the editor was packing his bags for a trip. We have a publisher who is rumored to have a phone in his golf cart, but I understand it's just a beeper. You know how rumors are.

I know a fellow who lived in New Orleans and edited a daily newspaper in Mississippi, and a North Carolina newspaper executive who lives in Paris. In both instances things seemed to bump right along. I think during my career I spent too much time at the office, which probably annoyed everybody and made them less productive. If I had it to do over again, I would find some hobby that would keep me out from underfoot and not always be around sticking my beak into things that were none of my business. A newspaper person without a whole lot to do is a pest.

It is fashionable to complain about newspapers that are controlled by "absentee owners," but I have found that most owners are pretty much absentees even when they live right there in town. It is hard to find them, especially if you want to complain about the service or get the editor fired. They are always in Abyssinia hunting lions or having tea with Ron and Nancy. The only good time to catch them is on payday, and then they'll just refer you to somebody who is out of town and won't be back until Thursday.

Newspapers have it all over most businesses which require some attention. A fellow who drives a Greyhound bus can't lollygag around the house all day and figure the bus is going to drive itself down to San Diego, no siree. Hamburgers don't fry themselves and pineapples don't just jump in the can, but newspapers and Old Man River they just keep rollin' along. It's really a nice line of work to be in, not being very taxing either on the mind or body, and maybe that's why it doesn't pay much or give you any prestige in the community. Probably if Horace Greeley came back to life and went down to the office somebody would say, "Hi, Horace boy, been out of town?"

They never really miss you much. (D. R. Segal is president of Freedom Newspapers Inc.)

The pushers and the pushed

By PAUL HARVEY

Historically, the world has been divided between the pushers and the pushed.

The fat lean on the lean until the fat get lazy and the lean get angry. Voltaire said it: "History is the pattern of silken slippers descending the stairs and the thunder of hobnail boots coming up."

There is less political polarization in our nation than anytime in a generation; possibly less than anytime.

Now, instead, we are divided between the pushers and the pushed.

And the pushers with their sleek clothes, or no clothes, with their hard drugs are in control of the fast lane.

Most every TV program and print ad pushes you to conform or move over.

The citizens who built the city are pushed aside by an undisciplined tide.

Our nation is pushed off balance by an uncontrollable avalanche or uninvited.

Even the backward nations are pushed further into backwardness because they breed more than they can feed.

The pushers and the pushed. I'm feeling pushed by television, by its distortions of values and the worst-to-come as cable empties its sewers into our sitting rooms.

And worse, I feel myself yielding to the moral desensitization, the ethanasia of conscience. And there is scant hope in history. Historically, almost inexorably, nations struggle then ripen then rot.

Almost inexorably. There have been three times in history when our British cousins were in just such a fix as we are in now — headed for a collapse of principle.

Yet each time the British people reached what Jenk Jones has called "the stomach turning point" and pulled themselves back upright again.

It happened under George Fourth, under William Fourth — under the Stuarts.

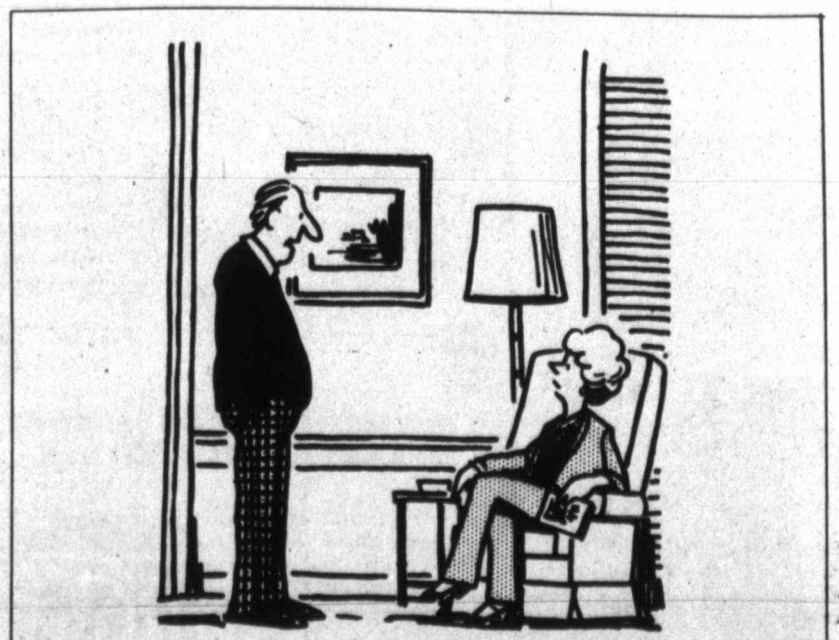

Surely Britain had a foot in the grave under William, but when the people reached that "stomach turning point" they returned righteousness to politics — they began again to call a bum what he is — a bum — and junk what is — junk — and dirt what it is — dirt.

And sin what it is. And standing on their toes and reaching for the stars, Britain, under Victoria, soared onward and upward to unprecedented peaks of power and prestige.

That is our hope. That Americans will reach the stomach — turning point. Politically we have. Socially we have not.

Dear Abby

The right to know isn't always claimed

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A 23-year-old unwed mother, signed "Raising a Child Alone," asked you to ask your readers, "Wouldn't the parents of the baby's father want to know that they had a grandchild, even though their son refused to assume any responsibility for it?"

I cast my vote in favor of informing the paternal grandparents. Perhaps they are people of moral excellence who would react in a positive way, offering love to a fatherless child who will need every bit of love and concern he can get.

It is unfair to ignore an innocent child because of the circumstances of his birth. A child is a person — not an embarrassment to be hidden away. I would want to be told.

LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES: Yours is indeed a compassionate and generous attitude. But my mail from grandparents has been running 2-to-1 against "wanting to know." Read on for an opposing point of view:

DEAR ABBY: As the grandfather of eight legitimate grandchildren, I would not want to be informed that I was the paternal grandfather of an illegitimate child!

If my daughter had a baby, I would know for sure that it was my grandchild, but the child of my son's latest conquest could be anybody's baby. Sign me.

EIGHT IS ENOUGH

DEAR ABBY: Our only grandchild is nearly 5 years old and he still believes in Santa Claus. His grandfather and I have bought him some wonderful Christmas presents and we want the boy to know that they came from us, but his mother insists that he be told that all the gifts he finds under the tree on Christmas morning are from "Santa." I don't think this is fair to us. What should we do? Our daughter-in-law doesn't accept criticism very well. GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Take the Christmas gifts to your grandchild and present them in person.

DEAR ABBY: I can't remember if it's you or your sister (I get both papers), but it doesn't matter because you are both equally guilty of this offense and I doubt that you will print this anyway. The point isn't whether you cop a day off by running some golden oldies, but rather the annoying way in which you do it. Example: "A reader from Schleppville has requested a rerun of that marvelous letter I ran last year, signed 'Tired of Living,' so here it is."

Abby, everyone takes vacations and days off. What they don't do is take a lot of bows while doing so. Just because readers pay their money for a newspaper doesn't mean they're not going to be cheated once in a while, but please don't insult us by pretending that you are accommodating one of your millions of daily readers by rerunning his favorite letter.

If you decide to become honest about this, just ask that reader to enclose a self-addressed envelope and send him a copy of his favorite column, and please spare the rest of us the boredom of rerun city!

D. FROM BIG D

DEAR D: Sorry the reruns bore you. I'm told those "golden oldies" are appreciated by many. Readers?

Everybody needs friends. For some practical tips on how to be popular, get Abby's Popularity booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Dr. Lamb

Is her heart rate too fast?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter is 25 years old and her pulse rate is 100. I think that is too high. She also has trouble sleeping. Otherwise she is in good health, no fever or complaints. She seems nervous to me and smokes a lot of cigarettes and drinks a lot of coffee. Could this have anything to do with her high pulse rate? My pulse is only 64 to 72 and you would think mine would be higher. Should she see a doctor?

DEAR READER — You will get a lot of different answers about pulse rate, because it is highly variable. I presume you are talking about a resting pulse rate. For adults it is commonly said that the normal range is from 60 to 100 but that includes a lot of people who have a higher heart rate because they are not in optimal health. A person who is in good physical condition, does not smoke, does not will excess coffee, cola, tea and other caffeine-containing beverages and has no illness should have a heart rate closer to 70, as you do.

Fit young men often have heart rates of 50 or even below, especially those who are athletes.

Cigarettes will increase a person's resting heart rate as much as 10 to 20 beats a minute. Coffee can do the same thing. Stopping these habits in a healthy person often results in a remarkably lower heart rate. In these cases it is my opinion that the high heart rate is an indication that the coffee and cigarettes have affected the body adversely.

Anxiety can also elevate the heart rate and that may have something to do with your daughter's high resting rate. The causes of high normal or too high heart rates is discussed in more detail in The Health Letter number 9-8, Your Heart Rate: What It Means, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Incidentally, the coffee may be causing your daughter to be anxious as well as having a high heart rate.

Now, the heart rate can be much higher with vigorous exercise. Rates of 250 and over a minute have been reported in girls between the ages of 15 and 17 during skiing. Of course babies and young children tend to have much higher resting heart rates than adults.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been taking Atromid-S almost since it was first available for high cholesterol. My cholesterol was below 300 when I started taking it. Now it has shot well above 500 and evidently is still higher as the doctor wouldn't tell me what it was the last time I had it checked. I have in my mind that the Atromid-S has been making it climb. I am on a low-cholesterol diet and my weight has shot up also. It can shoot up five pounds overnight.

DEAR READER — Don't jump to conclusions. There are many things that can cause a high cholesterol. That includes liver disorders that prevent normal drainage of bile and low thyroid conditions.

The real clue is probably your weight. The sudden five-pound gain overnight is probably water retention unless you really eat a lot in one day. Then it can be retained undigested food.

But weight gain often results in a further increase in the cholesterol level. Before getting excited make a real effort to start eliminating excess fat by controlling your calories and starting a sensible daily walking program.

For a Merry Christmas, watch those fires

BY COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Christmas and cold weather mean more people will light candles and use their fireplaces.

Don't be one of the many who require hospitalization every year for injuries stemming from fireplaces and candles. Note the following precautions and keep your holidays happy.

FIREPLACES — Be sure that the fireplace was constructed for actual use and not just for decorative purposes.

— Open the damper before lighting the fire and keep it open until the ashes are cool enough to touch. If the fireplace smokes, open a window an inch or two to provide sufficient air circulation. A closed damper will help conserve heat when the fireplace is not in use.

— Fireplaces should not be overloaded. The National Fire Protection Association warns thousands of house fires are started each year by fireplaces.

— Never use gasoline or a charcoal lighter to light or relight a fire because the vapors may explode.

— Coal and charcoal should not be used in a fireplace.

— Don't stuff scrap papers, gift wrapping or Christmas tree branches in the fireplace.

— Always use a screen around the fireplace to keep sparks from flying out.

— Teach children about fire safety and never leave a small child unattended while the fireplace is in use.

— Keep flammable materials such as carpets, pillows, furniture, paper and Christmas trees clear of the fireplace area.

— Make sure that the fire is completely out before retiring for the night or leaving the house.

CANDLES — Never place lighted candles near draperies.

bedding, Christmas trees or greens, clothing, upholstered furniture or anything else that could burn.

— Never use lighted candles in molded polystyrene foam or other plastic holders, or near decorations made of these materials. When they burn they quickly give off highly toxic fumes which could be fatal. Instead use sturdy metal or heavy glass holders that won't tip over.

— Never place lighted candles in doorways, halls or other places where anyone passing by could knock them over or where the flames could brush clothing or hair.

— Never use lighted candles near open windows, doors or chimneys.

— Never leave candles burning in an unoccupied room.

— Never move a lighted candle. To change its location, first snuff it out, then move it and relight it.

— Never substitute a candle for a flashlight. Children have caused tragic fires by using candles to look for toys and looting under beds and in closets.

— Never permit lighted candles within a toddler's reach. Attracted to the flickering flames, they are too young to know the danger. Also, keep pets away from lighted candles.

— Never let children light candles unless they do it with adult supervision.

Keep eye safety in mind when choosing gifts

When shopping for children's holiday gifts, beware of those that pose threats to eyes, cautions the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness.

More than 5,000 eye injuries were linked to toys last year, and nearly two-thirds of these accidents were suffered by children under the age of fifteen. BB guns, darts, and bows and arrows — "toy weapons" — were responsible for hundreds more injuries.

"Ninety percent of all eye injuries are preventable," notes Edwin Schofield, President of the Texas Society. "Safety-conscious adults can protect children from eye damage — or even the loss of an eye — by picking toys and games carefully and by teaching youngsters how to respect toy hazards and their own safety."

"Holiday gifts hopefully will bring children many hours of enjoyment without jeopardizing their well-being," Mr. Schofield added. Playthings with projectiles have been proven dangerous to eyes and should be avoided. A U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission survey of hospital emergency rooms indicates that children under 15 were the victims of eye injuries predominantly from slingshots or sling-propelled toys, toy guns and other toy weapons with projectiles, and gas, air or spring-operated guns.

Eye damage also can result from toys and games with less apparent hazards. Building sets, skateboards and battery-operated toys were a few of those responsible for eye injuries to children last year, primarily children under 15. In some cases, the child may be too young to handle a toy. Often, too, play gets rough, and youngsters accidentally hurt themselves or playmates.

Most of these eye injuries happen, reports the Society, when children are not supervised. It's very important that parents show their children how to use their gifts properly. Does the child understand how to use the toy? Does he or she take a "harmless" toy and make it dangerous, for example, by pulling rubber tips off darts? Do older children keep their more complicated toys out of reach of younger brothers and sisters? When dangers are explained, does the child acknowledge and avoid them?

For a free copy of "Play It Safe — Your Child's Eyes Are At Stake," which contains important advice for parents to protect children's eyesight, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, P.O. Box 20 - 20, Houston, Texas, 77019. The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness is an affiliate of the National Society to Prevent Blindness, the nation's oldest voluntary health organization dedicated to sight conservation.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Diet facts & fallacies

These nutritional tips brought to you by DIET CENTER

Sherry Conklin 412 W. Kingsmill Hughes Bldg.

The holiday season has always reaped the most havoc on dieters' good intentions. This year, however, don't let yourself fall into this well-worn trap. You can enjoy the full spirit of Christmas without adding those extra pounds.

Here are a few suggestions from Diet Center to help you maintain control during the holidays. Before attending any holiday event, eat something with "staying power," such as fruits and vegetables, or drink a large glass of water. When you arrive, you will feel less hungry.

Sipping a glass of water or diet soda while at the party is also helpful. Select appetizers carefully and eat them slowly. Don't draw attention to your dieting "sacrifices." When you feel yourself weakening, ask the hostess if she needs help, or strike up a conversation with those around you. You will find that you can enjoy the spirit of the holiday season more than the food, and you will be more able to resist those holiday treats. Let your local Diet Center Counselor show you how you can lose weight and still enjoy the holidays.

MA'AM? I HAVE A QUESTION...

THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT THIS MATH TEST THAT I DON'T UNDERSTAND...

ALL THESE NUMBERS!

CINDY RAYMOND of Pampa won the 200 freestyle in the Odessa Invitational swim meet last weekend.

Pampa swim teams place at Odessa

The Pampa boys placed third while the Pampa girls took fifth in the Odessa Invitational swimming meet last weekend. Twenty-one teams were entered in the tournament. Amarillo High won both divisions, rolling up 237 points to win the boys' title. Odessa Permian was second with 151 points, followed by Pampa, 99; Abilene Cooper, 88; Amarillo Tascosa, 83, and Monahans, 80.

Clay Douglass and Cody Moore each placed in two events to lead the Harvesters. Douglass took fourth in the 200 individual medley (2:11.3) and fourth in the 100 breaststroke (1:16.3). Moore finished seventh in both the 200 individual medley (2:18.1) and 100 freestyle (54.6).

Pampa's medley relay (Reid Steger, Richie Hill, Clay Douglass and Cody Moore) took second with a time of 1:51.1. Others placing were Richie Hill, 10th, 100 fly (1:05.3); Reid Steger, sixth, 100 freestyle (54.2) and Raymond Hill, 12th, 500 freestyle, 6:14.3.

Amarillo High totaled 167 points in the girls' division while San Angelo Central took second, 124; Pampa, Monahans, 100; Midland Lee, 95; Pampa, 93, and Lubbock Monterey, 88.

Cindy Raymond, who owns seven school records, was the only first-place finisher for Pampa. She zipped to a 2:05.0 mark to win the 200 freestyle. Miss Raymond, a senior, also took second in the 100 breaststroke in 1:16.3.

Also placing for Pampa were Amy Raymond, second, 200 individual medley (2:22.7), third, 100 fly (1:09.0); Brianna Marsh, 12th, 100 freestyle (1:08.0); Julie Turner, sixth, 500 freestyle (6:28.7) and eighth, 100 breaststroke (1:22.2).

Pampa's medley team (Julie Turner, Cindy Raymond, Amy Raymond and Brianna Marsh) finished third in 2:08.8.

Missed foul shots hurt Pampa girls

CLOVIS—Too many missed foul shots, 17 to be exact, hurt the Pampa Lady Harvesters in a 50-42 loss to Clovis Saturday night in the Clovis Tournament.

"That really hurt us because we had been shooting 70 percent as a team," Pampa coach Jerry Johnson said. "We're getting there though. The first time we played Clovis they beat us 11 points. We cut it down to an 8-point deficit this time."

Pampa hit only 23 percent of its shots from the foul line while Clovis zeroed in on 70 percent of its tries.

Pampa trailed at halftime, 26-18.

Five NFL playoff spots still open

LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

Five down, five to go in the race for the National Football League playoffs, and it could go right down to the game of the regular season before the field is set.

Even clubs are still in contention for the five berths awaiting after the endgame games, in which teams clinched division and two others assured themselves of at least wild-card spots.

Things are so tight that only one of the 13 games played Saturday and Sunday — Chicago's 23-6 victory over Oakland — had no bearing whatsoever on the postseason picture. And tonight's nationally televised game between Atlanta and Los Angeles will help determine the Falcons' and other teams' fates.

On Sunday, the Cincinnati Bengals won the American Conference Central title for the first time in eight years, beating Pittsburgh 17-10. The Dallas Cowboys, meanwhile, reclaimed the National Conference East crown, downing last year's division champions, the Philadelphia Eagles, 21-10.

Both the Miami Dolphins and the Buffalo Bills clinched spots in the AFC playoffs. The Dolphins beat the Kansas City Chiefs 17-7 to remain atop the East, a half-game ahead of the Bills, who beat New England 19-10.

Miami and Buffalo play in the Orange Bowl next Saturday, with the winner becoming division champ and the loser taking a wild card.

In other games Sunday, Washington beat Baltimore 38-14; Green Bay defeated New Orleans 35-7; the Giants downed St. Louis 20-10; San Diego edged Tampa Bay 24-23; Denver topped Seattle 23-13; San Francisco, already the winner of the NFC West, beat Houston 28-6.

On Saturday, the New York Jets nipped Cleveland 14-13, while Detroit defeated Minnesota 45-7.

Eliminated from playoff contention during weekend play were four clubs — the Steelers, the Chiefs, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Oakland Raiders.

Those still in the chase for the five remaining spots are the Jets, the Broncos and the Chargers in the AFC, and the Eagles, Giants, Redskins, Buccaneers, Lions, Packers, Vikings and Falcons in the NFC.

So the AFC's playoff possibilities look like this:

—In the East, the Miami-Buffalo loser gets a wild card. The Jets can clinch the other wild card from the conference by beating Green Bay, or if San Diego loses to Oakland next Monday night.

—In the Central, only division-winner Cincinnati makes the playoffs.

—Denver takes the West if it beats Chicago or if San Diego loses. If the Chargers win so both they and Denver finish 10-6. San Diego wins the title through a better intradivision mark (6-2 vs. 5-3). Either West team can win a wild card only if the Jets lose.

The NFC is much more complicated, and took conference officials until late Sunday to figure out. Here's how it looks:

—In the East, Philadelphia can clinch a wild card if Atlanta loses to Los Angeles tonight or if the Eagles beat St. Louis next Sunday. The Giants can gain a wild card with a win over Dallas if Philadelphia loses or, if the Eagles also win, if Green Bay loses. Washington can win a wild card only if 8-8 teams are involved in the final decision.

—In the West, an Atlanta win tonight would eliminate both the Vikings and the Redskins. Atlanta can take a wild card with two wins plus a loss by the Giants. The Falcons would also take a wild card if a three-way tie developed with Philadelphia and Green Bay or if a four-way tie developed with the Giants, Philadelphia and Green Bay.

Bengals 17, Steelers 10
The victory gave the Bengals their first division title in eight years and eliminated the Steelers, 8-7, from the playoffs for the second year in a row. Ken Anderson passed for two touchdowns, and the Bengals' defense intercepted Pittsburgh quarterback Mark Malone twice.

Cowboys 20, Eagles 10
Since the first day of training camp, the Cowboys, 12-3, had aimed to take the NFC East title away from Philadelphia.

Danny White passed for two touchdowns, including an 8-yarder to Tony Hill that was set up when Eagles kick returner John Sciarra bobbled a punt late in the second quarter.

Dolphins 17, Chiefs 7
Touchdowns by Tony Nathan and Andra Franklin, and Uwe von Schamann's 39-yard field goal lifted the Dolphins to 10-4-1. Kansas City, 8-7, losing for the third straight week and the fifth time in seven games, was eliminated from the playoff race.

Hereford loses in semi-finals

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

A Richardson Lake Highlands rally capped by Todd Tschantz' 33-yard field goal and three interceptions propelled the Wildcats to a 10-7 Class 5A semifinal victory over Hereford Saturday night.

The field goal late in the third quarter at Lubbock's Jones Stadium resurrected Lake Highlands from an early 7-0 deficit. The Whitefaces had led after Wayne High's score on a 63-yard run.

The Wildcats, with a perfect 14-0 record, will fight for the Class 5A state championship next week against Houston Yates, which whipped San Antonio Churchill, 40-31, in semifinals action at Rice Stadium in Houston.

Wildcats quarterback Steve Hurst nabbed the first interception against Hereford at the Whitefaces' 23. Tailback Alvin Rettig put the ball in the end zone after three straight handoffs, tying the score 7-7.

Hereford quarterback Alan Wartes ended his team's chance to make the score 14-0 earlier in the second quarter by fumbling on the Lake Highlands 9. The Whitefaces achieved only 65 yards in the second half.

In the Yates triumph, quarterback Thomas Ledet dashed for 1 yard to lead the Lions to a come-from-behind 40-31 victory over Churchill, after trailing by 14 points earlier.

Yates drove 55 yards in eight plays before the scoring run with 40 seconds on the clock. Earlier in the fourth period, Ledet scored with a 7-yard run.

After the Chargers led with first-quarter scores by Doug Hodo and Tommy Sacre, the Lions tied it at 14-14 as Ledet connected on his 21st and 22nd touchdown passes of the year.

With 3:12 before the half, Ledet was dropped in the end zone for a safety, giving Churchill a 16-14 lead. Chargers' quarterback Cody Carlson added a touchdown pass to David Wynn to open the third period. But Yates contributed the next three scores of the game.

Ledet hit Keith Burnett with a 69-yard bomb in the third quarter. After a 37-yard Yates field goal by Lemuel Moton, Churchill led again with Tim Dimler's 1-yard run with 2:49 left in the game.

Ledet then directed the last minute drive for the Lions, highlighting a 35-yard fourth-down pass to sustain the drive.
