

Libyan planes shot down in exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two U.S. F-14 jet fighters shot down a pair of Soviet-built Libyan SU-22 fighter planes over the Mediterranean early today in a one-minute clash about 60 nautical miles off the Libyan coast after an "unprovoked attack" by the Libyans, the Defense Department said.

None of the Americans in the two-man F-14s were hurt, officials said. One Libyan pilot was seen parachuting from his stricken plane.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told a news conference the attack was clearly over international waters and was unanticipated. Libya, however, considers that its territorial rights extend 200 miles to sea.

Weinberger said the United States planned no retaliation as a result of the attack, but that the naval force to which the planes are assigned would finish its planned exercise Wednesday afternoon on schedule.

The Pentagon announced the 1:20 a.m. EDT incident before dawn and Weinberger appeared at the hastily called news conference later to read the official statement, which said:

"Two U.S. Navy F-14 aircraft involved in a previously announced routine exercise in international air space over international waters in the south central Mediterranean were attacked by two Libyan SU-22 fighter aircraft.

"After being fired upon, the F-14s from the aircraft carrier Nimitz took action in response and shot down both Libyan aircraft."

"The U.S. government is protesting through diplomatic channels this unprovoked attack, which occurred in international air space over 60 nautical miles from the nearest land."

Since the United States and Libya do not have direct diplomatic relations, Weinberger said the U.S. protest would be channeled to the Libyan government through the Belgian government.

At the State Department, officials said the administration may seek a meeting of the U.N. Security Council to denounce the Libyan action.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said council members were informed of the incident this morning through the council president, U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim also was notified.

Sources in Brussels, meanwhile, quoted senior NATO officials as saying the North Atlantic Council, made up of representatives of the 15 alliance nations, will meet at the request of the United States to discuss the incident.

Weinberger praised the performance of the F-14 crews, saying "I think they carried out their mission extremely well."

Air Force Lt. Gen. Philip C. Gast, operations director under the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the mission of the F-14s was to fly patrol over the fleet, which includes two aircraft carrier battle groups and their escorts. The second carrier is the Forrestal.

Military officials said that such patrols are normal procedure and that one of their purposes, in addition to guarding the fleet, is to warn unwary aircraft from possibly wandering into an area where missile firing exercises are being held.

Weinberger and Gast both said the pilots of the F-14s were acting under rules permitting them to defend themselves.

"If an enemy aircraft conducts a hostile act, the (U.S.) aircraft commander has the right to defend himself," said Gast.

Libya has claimed jurisdiction over air space and waters reaching out some 200 miles. The United States does not recognize that claim but has generally regarded international waters and air space as extending out three miles.

Weinberger did not address the three mile question at the news conference but noted that the incident occurred about 60 nautical miles at sea and said "there isn't a basis to any claim that these were national waters."

Libya's official news agency, JANA, in a dispatch apparently prepared before the case, denounced the "provocative maneuvers" by the U.S.

6th Fleet in the Gulf of Sidra. The last time anything like today's incident occurred was in March 1973, when two Libyan Air Force jets fired on an unarmed U.S. Air Force C-130 about 83 miles off the Libyan coast. The American plane escaped.

Weinberger said President Reagan was notified after the clash and "approved the action taken" plus the continuation of the naval exercise, which Weinberger said had been made a matter of public record in advance with a formal notification to mariners. That notification, officials said, was issued on Aug. 12 and announced an open-ocean missile firing exercise in the Mediterranean for Aug. 18 and 19.

Safety emerges as issue in air controller strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teams of federal investigators and private consultants will examine computer tapes and tour air traffic control centers to determine whether the nationwide controllers strike has increased the chance of an aviation disaster.

With the strike and subsequent firing of 12,000 controllers now in its third week, safety is emerging as the key issue with little sign of going away despite government assurances that it is no more hazardous to fly today than before the walkout.

Smarting from a barrage of allegations that safety has been impaired by the strike, the Federal Aviation Administration has hired a consulting firm to put together its own independent analysis of the air traffic control system.

"There is no reason to believe the system has deteriorated in any way" as far as safety is concerned, Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said Tuesday.

Lewis said he wants a "tough, hard, critical report" on safety conditions from the Virginia-based consulting firm, Flight Safety Foundation Inc., which has among its clients more than 400 aviation-related organizations and companies.

Lewis said most pilots say it is safe to fly despite the strike, although internal memos within the Air Line Pilots Association disclosed this week that some pilots have had serious concerns about the reduced controller staff now directing air traffic.

Byron Whitehead, a spokesman for the association, said the FAA has made recent adjustments that have eliminated those concerns. The association's executive board was briefed on the safety issues Tuesday and union president J.J. O'Donnell was to give details of that meeting later today.

FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms said Tuesday that the number of reports of near misses has declined substantially since the strike, although he conceded all such incidents may not be reported to the agency.

As of Tuesday, the FAA said it had received 11 reports of near misses since the strike began, compared with 31 during the same period a year ago. There were 566 near misses reported in 1980.

The National Transportation Safety Board, an independent agency that investigates air crashes, decided unanimously Tuesday to investigate the air traffic control system with a fact-finding report to be completed within eight weeks.

Board member Patricia Goldman said the move was in response "to a public concern" about air safety after two-thirds of the normal air traffic controller corps was fired for engaging in the illegal strike that began Aug. 3.

"There is no question that the public is nervous and frightened because of the reports" about recent air incidents,

Mrs. Goldman said in an interview Tuesday.

Barbara Dixon, a spokeswoman for the federal safety agency, said the board's task force would examine a broad range of issues, including a comparison of traffic density before and after the strike, procedural changes adopted since the walkout, controller qualification and training, working hours and reporting of near misses.

The Flight Safety Foundation presumably will examine similar areas.

But the foundation's president, John Enders, said in an interview he doesn't expect any substantive findings until December, although Lewis said he wanted a preliminary report within 30 days.

In other developments Tuesday: —The head of the Portuguese controllers union acknowledged that the group's two-day boycott of planes to and from the United States was largely symbolic and had little effect. The protest ended at 8 p.m. EDT Tuesday.

Enders said controllers from Portugal, Spain, France and Italy would meet Friday to draft a global boycott proposal to be considered the next day by the International Federation of Controller Associations.

—Representatives of several private groups were to present proposals to the Transportation Department today for expanding the training program for new controllers.

Japan to restrict imports of California fruit

By The Associated Press

Japan said it would begin restricting imports of California fruit today, fearing a fruit fly infestation would be carried across the Pacific, and state legislators began hinting of support for "retaliatory trade restrictions."

As the Japanese boycott went into effect, several states renewed calls for a domestic quarantine of all California produce susceptible to the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Texas filed suit Tuesday against the U.S. Department of Agriculture to force a total ban, saying the fruit and vegetables are trucked through Texas to the Southeast.

And in Florida, another round of aerial spraying of malathion was to begin today, with the pesticide to be targeted on an area near downtown Tampa, not far from where five medflies were found. The area is just west of Florida's lucrative citrus belt. State officials have blamed California for the infestation.

Japan's agriculture ministry, fearing the fruit fly would spread to the Orient, said it would restrict all citrus and other fleshy fruit from California as of today. No restrictions, however, have been placed on fruit loaded for shipment to Japan before today.

Japan is the largest foreign buyer of California produce. Last year, it imported about $120 million in products that are potential hosts for the medfly.

Gray Davis, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s chief of staff, said Tuesday Brown told Japanese Ambassador Yoshio

Okawara that although Brown opposes trade restrictions, there is strong sentiment among California legislators for retaliatory restrictions on Japanese products if the boycott were imposed.

No specific legislation was mentioned by Brown to the Japanese, Davis added.

Japan's move comes more than 14 months into California's battle against the medfly, which can attack more than 200 varieties of fruits and vegetables.

Although the state has sprayed more than 700 square miles with malathion, imposed quarantines and spent $56 million to fight the insect, the fly has continued to spread. Last week, it was discovered in the state's richest fruit-growing area, the San Joaquin Valley.

State officials fear other nations may follow Japan's lead. South Korea, Taiwan and the island of Yap have imposed sweeping embargoes of California produce, but none is a major market for the state.

Okawara met Tuesday in Washington with Deputy Secretary of State William Clark to discuss Japan's embargo, and President Reagan's press spokesman, Larry Speakes, said in Los Angeles the USDA had tried to persuade Japanese officials to limit the boycott.

A hearing is scheduled Saturday in U.S. District Court in Dallas on the suit filed by Texas Attorney General Mark White against the USDA to force it to quarantine the entire state of California and fumigate all produce bound from California to Texas.

Gutierrez brothers draw life sentences in prison

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Two Dumas brothers faced life prison terms today for the Christmas night slaying of an Amarillo policeman who had stopped a car in which they were riding for a routine traffic violation.

It took a jury 7½ hours of deliberations Monday and Tuesday before deciding on punishment for Victor Gutierrez, 24, and his brother, Guadalupe, 20.

District Attorney Danny Hill of Amarillo said prosecutors were "very excited" about the life sentence handed down just before noon Tuesday. They had been convicted Friday in the shooting death of Berry J. McGuire, 26.

After convicting the brothers of capital murder, jurors had only two choices of punishment — death by injection or a life prison term. Jurors voted 10-2 against the death penalty by deciding that the brothers do not constitute a threat to society through future acts of violence.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue from Amarillo.

Miami victim identified as Tahlequah man

A man found dead with stab wounds in the throat and chest in a roadside park near Miami has been identified by relatives as an Oklahoma man. However, officials with the Pampa District Attorney's office here are waiting for a fingerprint analysis from Oklahoma City authorities for a positive identification.

The victim, described as about 5 feet, 9 inches tall with auburn hair, was identified "visually" by a brother-in-law Tuesday as Ross Sherman Williams. Penny Burt said today Williams, 21, was a resident of Tahlequah, Okla.

Fingerprints taken from the stabbing victim's body were sent to Oklahoma City for comparison with fingerprints on file there, officials said Tuesday.

"We feel pretty certain that this man is Ross Sherman Williams," Burt said. "But we're waiting for the fingerprints to come in the mail to be sure."

Williams' relatives were contacted through a name and address on a suitcase found near the body at the roadside park where it was found. Burt said the name written on a name tag on the luggage was that of a sister to Williams.

The body was discovered by a Pampa couple, Gary and Susie Montgomery, about noon Monday. The Montgomerys and their three sons were on a family outing, looking for wild grapes near the rest area, seven miles east of Miami off U.S. 60.

Describing the discovery, Mrs. Montgomery said, "The boys had to go to the bathroom, so we drove over to the park. We saw him (Williams) lying there, a sleeping bag was thrown over him. We drove by once and he didn't move. We backed up and honked and yelled at him and he still didn't move," she said.

Walking over to the inert form, the Montgomerys saw the man was dead. His hair, hands and feet were all that were showing beneath a sleeping bag thrown over him. A suitcase and a 10-speed bicycle with a child carrier were nearby. The victim's shoes were lying near his feet.

Mrs. Montgomery said she could see no sign of struggle and little blood.

The couple notified Roberts County Sheriff Eddie Brines. Williams was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Newt Cox and an autopsy was ordered.

The body was taken to Amarillo for autopsy by pathologist Dr. Jose Esquivel-Diaz late Monday.

Burt said the cause of death was apparently from multiple stab wounds. She said the autopsy report would probably be returned to the district attorney's office later this afternoon.

District Attorney Harold Comer said Tuesday a household butcher knife was found about 11 feet from the body. The knife was taken as evidence.

Rattlesnakes placed on Pampa woman's automobile

Pampa police today are investigating an incident which occurred Monday evening when a Pampa woman found some unwelcome visitors — live snakes — on and around her automobile.

Vicki Heiskell of 725 E. Kingsmill told police she was leaving her residence late Monday when she found a rattlesnake under the left windshield wiper of her vehicle. A second snake was on the ground, and a third was wrapped on the door of the auto, Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said today.

A man at the house, identified in the police report as Mr. Heiskell, killed the three snakes. No one was bitten.

Police are continuing look into the possibilities that the three rattlesnakes were placed on the auto as a means of harassment.

Ryzman said if someone is found to be responsible for the snakes, the charges could be anything from disorderly conduct "on up."

No arrests in connection with the incident had been made at press time today.

Outlook gloomy in OPEC price cut

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC's president said today more obstacles have cropped up at the oil cartel's emergency meeting on restoring price unity, and Venezuela's oil minister said he doubts the ministers can reach a binding decision.

"There are problems, more than we visualized," the president, Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, said. "The mountains are higher and the rapids are deeper than we thought." He did not elaborate.

Venezuela was insisting on a base price of $36 for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil, while Saudi Arabia, the biggest producer in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said it would go no higher than $34.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, said Tuesday after two days of preliminary negotiations, that a unified price formula could be worked out. But he insisted he would agree to boost his base price of $32 by no more than $2, and even that "would be very hard" to accept.

"We are happy with $32," he said. He added that if $34 was agreed on, it must be "frozen for a long period of time."

Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti was equally adamant that his government would not reduce its base price of $36. He said Venezuela can sell all the oil it wants to at that price even in today's glutted market. "If the others accept $36 a barrel," he said, "we'll have a decision."

Polish workers strike nation's newspapers

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A two-day strike by union printers kept the official Communist press from reaching Warsaw streets early today, but the government insisted that its two main dailies had been published.

Other major cities were also reported without newspapers, but local editions appeared in Bydgoszcz and Szczecin in defiance of the strike, said officials of Solidarity, the independent labor federation.

The government radio and television services were not affected by the printers' walkout demanding more exposure on the national and local media for Solidarity.

Kiosks in Warsaw, where the nation's major papers are published and printed, were without daily newspapers. Some were closed, with red and white Solidarity signs on their windows. Those that were open sold other goods and weekly publications.

"A newspaper?" asked one female vendor with a laugh. "There is a strike. Come back in a few hours and maybe I will have Trybuna Ludu."

Solidarity spokesman Seweryn Jaworski said Tuesday that Trybuna Ludu, the Communist Party's chief newspaper with a nationwide circulation of 1.1 million, was being printed at military printing plants, and the government was planning to deliver it in army trucks.

"The government will try to break our strike," he said, "but we have appealed to readers not to buy newspapers and to kiss sellers not to sell the dailies."

PAP, the official news agency, carried a press review quoting from Trybuna Ludu and the army daily Zolnierz Wolnosci. Warsaw Radio said the two papers appeared, but the party daily had only four pages and the army paper was printed in its usual six-page format in a military printing house.

Boat hijack leader talks with French officials

PARIS (AP) — The leader of a band of anti-Khomeini Iranians who hijacked an Iranian gunboat last week met today with French naval authorities at the Mediterranean port of Toulon to discuss giving up the vessel. Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson announced.

Cheysson said the 160-foot gunboat Tabarzin would be returned to the Iranian government if it was surrendered. He said the possibility of asylum for the hijackers was being studied, although Iran's foreign minister warned against their being given refuge.

A French tug towed the Tabarzin from Marseille Tuesday night and it anchored 2 1/2 miles off the French naval base at Toulon. It was flying the imperial Iranian flag.

A spokesman in Paris for the monarchist group that sponsored the hijacking said the leader of the commandos Adm. Kamal Habibollahi, was negotiating with the French for fuel to continue his journey. He claimed the ship was still the seat of government for "Free Iran."

Cheysson said officials were not sure if any French laws had been broken and that was being reviewed.

Twenty heavily armed Iranian exiles, members of the pro-monarchy Azadegan group, seized the gunboat and its 31 Iranian crew members Thursday off the coast of Spain and sailed to the Moroccan port of Casablanca. It was one of three French-built gunboats being transferred from France to Iran. The other two were not attacked and were reported Tuesday in Oran, Algeria, on their way to Iran.

At Casablanca, the commandos threatened to blow up the gunboat, loaded with a large number of weapons and ammunition, unless they were provided with fuel and provisions.

Moroccan officials said they feared an explosion would destroy the port and complied with the demands. Then the hijackers took the boat to Marseille, France's chief Mediterranean port. They were believed heading for Egypt, where the late shah of Iran's heir, young self-proclaimed Shah Reza II, lives in exile.

Reminding France of the Iranian government's anger when it granted ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr asylum after his escape from Iran, Foreign Minister Mir Hossein Musavi said: "This adventurist act has once again put France to the test."

"Granting asylum to pirates is undoubtedly tantamount to legalizing terrorist actions on the high seas," Musavi declared, according to Tehran Radio.

Meanwhile, Bani-Sadr in an interview with The Associated Press said the U.S. government had given him permission to emigrate to the United States. But State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said the claim was "totally false," and another U.S. official in Washington called it "hogwash."

Reagan will hold line on defense

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan is vowing to balance the federal budget by 1984 without retreating from his plan for the largest defense buildup in American history.

Faced with reports that increased military spending could undercut efforts to eliminate budget deficits within three years, Reagan ordered his defense and economic advisers during an afternoon of meetings Tuesday to come up with a way to achieve both goals.

Reagan said later he is convinced he can hold the 1982 budget deficit to $42.5 billion in spite of reports it could go much higher.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said any decisions on additional spending cuts are weeks away but said social programs could suffer even more financial trimming in the drive to balance the budget.

"We will keep the social safety net," Speakes said. But he added, "Certainly we will be looking closely at social programs and definitely we will seek to achieve some budget saving. But we will protect the truly needy."

If more budget cuts are needed,

Speakes said they probably would not come from the defense budget, where Reagan is committed to 7 percent annual growth after adjusting for inflation.

Reagan has vowed to seek what amounts to the largest defense buildup in U.S. history — more than $1.6 trillion between 1983 and 1987.

Neither Reagan nor Speakes would comment on reports that budget director David A. Stockman wants to reduce planned increases in defense spending by as much as $40 billion through 1984.

Telephone installation delay expected

Customers applying for phone service in the Pampa area should be prepared to wait.

In spite of long range planning, Southwestern Bell Telephone officials say they are having difficulty keeping up with supply and demand.

Applications are being taken, phones are being sold, but the telephone lines in the central office are full. New phone customers must wait for other telephones to be disconnected before new connections can be made, said an official of Bell Telephone's Amarillo office.

"Plans are being made for expansion. On Sept. 6 they will have some relief in that (Pampa) office," according to Doug Brooks. "They haven't refused service to anyone because they didn't have any equipment," said Frank Barrett, manager of Residence Installation and Maintenance. Brooks refused to give his official title or make any direct statements to the media.

David Ortiz, manager for the Pampa office, added "The order to complete this equipment was scheduled for December and because of the growth, there in Pampa, we have expedited that to Sept. 6 with additional equipment coming in also."

"From now until Sept. 6, hopefully there will not be a delay in any installation of new service, but if there is, we hope that it would be very minimal," Ortiz said.

Ortiz went on to say, "Right now we're doing what we can to stay afloat because we have grown so much in Pampa that we are just trying to hang in there."

Pampa's August sales tax rebate doubles

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Pampa's August sales tax rebate more than doubled the payment made in August 1980, a recent report from State Comptroller Bob Bullock's shows.

City sales taxes are collected along with the state's sales tax by merchants and businesses and rebated monthly by the Comptroller's office to the cities in which they are levied.

Pampa's net payment for the period ending Aug. 7 equaled $226,776.08, as compared to the 1980 August payment of $109,719.85 — a difference of $117,056.23.

The total year - to - date difference in payment, though not as dramatic as this month's rebate, is still a healthy 21.46 percent increase from 1980 figures.

The 1981 payments to date for Pampa equal $1,029,729.25. By August 1980, Pampa had received $847,759.49 in sales tax rebate payments.

Plainview, a sister city to Pampa in size and population, showed an smaller increase in rebate payment for August. Plainview received a check for $141,508.18 this month, as compared to a payment of $81,347.63 in August 1980 — a difference of $60,160.55. The city is also running far behind Pampa for the yearly payments at $655,278.31. Bullock's records show Plainview's sales tax income has increased only 4.39 percent since 1980.

While Borger's sales tax receipts are still less than Pampa's, the city has a yearly increase of 27.36 percent. Bullock's figures show Borger's August payment of $166,347.98 also doubled their 1981 payment for this month which was $80,586.40.

Miami's August payment is more than 5 times as large as the payment the city received in August 1980. Miami was paid $6,025.91 for August as compared to a payment of $1,170.81 at this time in 1980. The city shows a whopping 63.49 percent increase in payments for the year.

Canadian's sales tax rebate check of $37,359.36 was twice what the city's payment for August 1981, the comptroller's report shows. In 1980, Canadian was paid a rebate of manager of the Lubbock office, explained "They were predicting a very mild growth pattern in the area and then they deregulated the oil and gas industries and a lot of companies moved into the area."

"In July of 1980 there were 11,022 telephones connected in Pampa, in July of 1981 there were 11,575. We have forecast 12,158 for 1982," Bode said.

"There is another job scheduled to start right after the job is completed on Sept. 6. The combined job will bring in 1,000 lines to the area. There is a 400 line unit primarily designated for touch tone and there will be 400 terminal lines for business phones. That will be the most immediate relief we can provide the area," Bode added.

"They have also updated the forecast which means they can get more money to the area for growth," Bode said.

Whites charge election law violates rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, whites are trying to take advantage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act by asking the federal government to disapprove a local election law change which they say discriminates in favor of blacks.

The four white Richmond, Va., city council members, along with 25 white business and civic leaders, asked the Justice Department on Tuesday to use its authority under the act to block a new redistricting plan for the council.

The whites claimed that the council's five black members unfairly drafted the plan, based on the 1980 census, to guarantee a permanent black majority.

During the past 16 years, black civil rights groups have come to view the act as the nation's most important civil rights law, arguing that it allowed thousands of blacks in the South to register, vote and gain political power.

Theme will be "Salute to H.M. Baggarly . . . Mr. Democrat and Country Editor."

Baggarly continues to write a political column each week in the Herald, a weekly paper he sold to Wendell Tooley about 2 1/2 years ago.

He first became associated with the paper as a journalism teacher in Tulia schools, and he later put his experience in laying out the page of high school news to work in managing the newspaper while the owners were on vacation.

Baggarly gave up teaching in 1947 and purchased a third interest in the Tulia Herald. He quit after a year but was coaxed back in 1950, and by mid 1955 he owned controlling interest in the paper.

Two collections of his writings have been published — "Texas Country Democrat" and "Texas Country Editor." At one time, he turned down an offer to be a White House assistant to President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Baggarly was winner of the fourth Mary Kate Tripp Award from the West Texas State University Journalism Department as a "tribute to an area journalist who exemplifies the highest ideals of the profession."

Banquet tickets are $20 each. They may be purchased in Tulia at the banks, the Tulia Herald or from Norma Blount. Tickets may be purchased in Amarillo from Mary Jo Spradlin, 702 S. Florida.

CONTROLLERS POST BOND. Striking air traffic controllers Paulette Charbonnet and John Stroh leave federal court in New Orleans Tuesday after posting bond where they are accused of criminal contempt for not returning to work. A trial for Charbonnet and Stroh and three others was set for Aug. 27.

Three officers charged with criminal negligence in deaths of three black youths

GROESBECK, Texas (AP) — A state grand jury has accused two deputies and a probation officer of criminally negligent homicide in the drownings of three black teen-agers packed into a small boat that had no life jackets or running lights.

The misdemeanor indictment was handed down Tuesday against Limestone County Deputy Sheriff Kenny Elliott, reserve deputy Kenneth Archie, both 23, and Limestone County probation officer David Drummond, 32.

State District Judge P.K. Reiter said he would set bond for the three men today. If convicted, each man faces a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

The officers were indicted in the June 19 deaths of Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, and Steve Booker, 19, of Dallas.

The trio, arrested during a Juneteenth celebration for alleged possession of marijuana, died when a 14-foot boat the officers were using to ferry the youths to a command post across Lake Mexia capsized about 80 feet from shore.

Juneteenth is a holiday in Texas marking the day Texas slaves learned of the Emancipation Proclamation.

The panel accused the three law officers of violating the Texas Water Safety Act by putting the victims into an undersized motorboat that had no safety equipment.

Testimony at a court of inquiry indicated the boat was designed to safely carry from 500 to 600 pounds.

Elliott and Drummond, both white, and Archie, a black, swam to safety when the boat flipped over just before midnight on June 19.

Witnesses said the three victims were handcuffed when the boat overturned, but an autopsy later showed no evidence that the men's hands were bound.

Toxicology reports showed no drugs in the bodies of Booker or Freeman when they drowned. A toxicological examination of Baker has not been completed.

Elliott, who has worked as a dispatcher since the incident, declined comment Tuesday on the charges. Both he and Archie were subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury. Drummond appeared voluntarily.

Three other witnesses, including a parolee supervised by Drummond, a Texas Fish and Game ranger and the Limestone County chief parole officer, testified before the grand jury.

The jury questioned witnesses for about seven hours Tuesday, then deliberated about an hour and a half before issuing the indictment.

Limestone County Sheriff Dennis Walker said Archie and Elliott will not remain on duty. "Other than that, I have no comment," he said.

Limestone County Attorney Patrick Simmons and Texas assistant Attorney General Gerald Carruth presented the case to the grand jurors.

"I'm satisfied they (the grand jurors) are satisfied," Simmons said after the indictments were returned.

He said the jurors heard little new information about the drownings.

The panel spent the past two weeks studying a 460-page transcript from a court of inquiry conducted by State District Judge P.K. Reiter the week after the drownings.

Elliott and Archie both took the Fifth Amendment during the inquiry.

The drownings sparked a storm of protest from minority groups who claimed the arrests were racially motivated. The Justice Department said June 22 it was investigating the drownings at the request of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A memorial service attended by about 1,000 people was held two weeks ago to honor the victims.

Arguments over 'lost will' dragging on

HOUSTON (AP) — No one knows what key No. 47 opens. It belonged to Howard Hughes, and some would like to think it could unlock the "Lost Will" they believe the eccentric billionaire left when he died.

The so-called Lost Will is one of at least 40 documents to surface since Hughes died April 5, 1976, on an emergency medical flight from Mexico to Houston. Most of them already have been thrown out by various courts.

Beneficiaries of the Lost Will — which purportedly leaves the bulk of the vast estate to the Florida-based Howard Hughes Medical Institute — admit they have not located an original copy.

They have only a tissue carbon copy. But they say a mystery key, stamped "47" and found among Hughes' personal effects, may open a strongbox somewhere that contains the original.

Attorneys for Texas and several cousins opposing the Lost Will scoff at the notion, saying there is no Lost Will.

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute, a tax-exempt research foundation which owns the multi-billion-dollar Hughes Aircraft Corp., unsuccessfully attempted to probate its carbon copy will in California and Nevada courts.

In Houston, Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who ruled last month that Hughes died without leaving a valid will, swiftly rejected the purported will after HHMI failed to identify two witnesses who signed the will or another person who had read it.

Gregory's decision was appealed in July to Texas' 14th Court of Civil Appeals, and a ruling is expected late this year.

The Lost Will is neither dated nor signed by Hughes, but its beneficiaries say it is probably about 55 years old because they say it was found along with a letter from his lawyer dated May 30, 1925.

Within hours after his death, an extensive search of every place Hughes visited, lived and worked was launched in efforts to find a will.

They found none, but searchers uncovered an envelope marked "keys" in California among some of the recluse's personal items. In the envelope were two sets of keys to safety deposit boxes. All but one was identified.

And that remaining key, labeled simply "47," has led to speculation by the holders of the Lost Will that it could open a lockbox somewhere containing the original will.

Attorneys for Texas and others contesting the Lost Will say even if there were such a will, HHMI still would not be entitled to the estate, worth from $180 million to $2 billion.

If the Lost Will is valid, they say, the tycoon, must have intended for his fortune to go to the Howard Hughes Medical Research Laboratories, the that of any member of the general public."

But Lost Will beneficiaries argue that even though the exact name in their document is different, Hughes' intent was to leave his wealth to the medical research institute he later founded in his name.

While one group of attorneys argues over the validity of the Lost Will, another series of hearings is under way in Gregory's court to divide Hughes' estate on the assumption that the eccentric entrepreneur died without a will.

Appeals courts judges appointed by Clements

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements appointed five additional court of appeals judges Tuesday, completing the 24 appointments necessary to get Texas' new system of criminal appeals rolling on Sept. 1.

Clements named Charles R. Schulte of El Paso on Tuesday as a judge of the 8th Court of Appeals. Schulte, 59, currently serves as judge of the 41st District Court in El Paso.

Appointed to the 4th Court of Appeals in San Antonio were James D. Baskin Jr., 58; Antonio Gallardo Cantu, 42; John E. Clark, 48; and Shirley W. Butts, all in private practice in San Antonio.

Clark is a former United States district attorney.

The San Antonio and El Paso appellate courts are among several that the Legislature enlarged to handle the additional workload they will receive when the 14 courts of civil appeals begin handling criminal cases on Sept. 1.

Clements also named judges of several new district courts created by the Legislature.

John R. Lindsey, 54, of Jacksboro will be judge of the 271st Judicial District, and Benjamin Martinez, 42, of Eagle Pass was appointed judge of the 293rd Judicial District. Lindsey is Jack County judge, while Martinez is in the private practice of law.

Clements appointed Homer David Peoples judge of the 285th Judicial District, Paul Rivera, 288th; Tom Rickhoff, 289th; and David Berchermann, 290th, all in San Antonio.

Rickhoff, 47, is Bexar County district clerk. Peoples, 36; Rivera, 50; and Berchermann, 34, are in private practice.

Gerry Holden Meier was appointed judge of the new 291st District Court, and Edward Keaster was named judge of the 292nd, both in Dallas.

Clements also filled three Dallas judicial vacancies caused by the elevation of district judges to courts of appeals.

Justice of the Peace Pat McDowell will succeed Judge James K. Allen; County criminal court Judge James Edgar Kinkeade will replace Judge John Vance; and attorney Nathan L. Hecht of Carrollton will succeed Judge A. Joe Fish.

Clements appointed John Luther Smith, 58, a San Augustine lawyer, as judge of the new 273rd District Court.

The governor named Phil Adams, 35, of Gainesville as district attorney of the 235th district; Brock Smith, 32, of Bridgeport as district attorney of the 271st; and Amado Jose Abascal III, 27, as district attorney of the 293rd. Adams and Abascal are in private practice, while Smith is district attorney at Decatur.

Jeffrey Lynn Van Horn of Lockhart was appointed criminal district attorney of Caldwell County. Van Horn, 35, is assistant district attorney now.

In other appointments, Clements named his general counsel, David Dean, 33, and oilman W.C. Perryman, 55, of Athens to the special interim committee on the criminal justice system.

Clements reappointed Claude L. Chambers of Grapevine to the Texas Civil Air Patrol commission for a term extending to May 31, 1987. Chambers, 70, owns a real estate and investment business.

Martin misses grand jury session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Longview Rep. Mike Martin, the shooting victim reluctant to talk to investigators, has missed his second date with grand jurors looking into the case.

"It's obvious there is a problem. I have no earthly idea what it is," said Les Smith, Martin's former spokesman who testified before the grand jury Tuesday.

Smith and other Martin associates who testified say they don't believe Martin's story about being shot by a hooded gunman from an occult group known as the "Guardian Angels of the Underworld."

Martin, a 29-year-old Republican, was hit in the arm by shotgun fire on July 31 outside his recreational vehicle here. At first he said he did not know who shot him or why. Now he maintains he was shot by a gunman for the occult group.

Martin, Smith, legislative aide Les Roebber, Gregg County GOP Chairman Wayne House and political adviser Jim Beasley were subpoenaed for Tuesday's grand jury session. Martin could not be found to be served with the subpoena.

The other four testified during a session that lasted more than three hours. They also took lie detector exams here Monday night.

It was Martin's second missed date with grand jurors. He was served with a subpoena for last Tuesday, but did not show up. Assistant Travis County District Attorney Allen Hill said

Dallas is seeking return of trolleys

BOSTON (AP) — The city of Dallas isn't exactly going back to the horse and buggy days, but officials there are looking for some 1945-era trolley cars to use in a downtown historical development, or for transportation to a fair grounds.

The dozen trolley cars that Dallas city official Rodney Kelly has his eye on originally came from Dallas, but were sold to Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority 20 years ago for $3,500 each when Dallas switched to buses only.

The MBTA has the 36-year-old Presidential Conference Cars in storage and might not put them back into service when a high-speed trolley line is constructed.

Kelly had hoped to pick up the cars for $1 each, but Paul DiNatale, spokesman for the impoverished transit system, said, "We're not about to give them away for $1 apiece."

He said several other parties have expressed an interest in the cars, including a local scrap dealer who wants the whole lot.

"Some people think because they are old they don't have any value, but it's not true," DiNatale said after he welcomed Kelly to town Tuesday. "It would cost $750,000 just to build a replacement for one of them."

Kelly said the cars can be refurbished and put back into service, but that bids would have to be taken to get an idea of the total cost — purchase price, transportation to Texas and refinishing costs.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Assessing the cost of Brown

President Reagan has refused to declare the Medfly counties of Alameda, Santa Clara and San Mateo a federal disaster area. Perhaps he should have looked a little more deeply and declared the governor's office a semipermanent disaster area.

We're not sure government involvement in the problem was necessary in the first place, and we're reasonably sure the "let George do it" attitude fostered by reliance on government has permitted the problem to become much more serious than it would have been had it been left to those landowners and farmers with a direct interest in the problem.

As taxpayers, we'll now pay the estimated $6 million for the aerial spraying, plus the $23 million that's already been sunk into the never-never - land ground assault that Brown and his minions tried to use at first. That's almost $30 million, a fairly hefty subsidy to agriculture in California.

Had the governor's office been less afflicted by indecision and naval contemplation, the problem might have been handled less expensively and with less violation of individual rights. In June, 1980, the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture recommended aerial spraying in a 50 - square - mile area would have cost about $1.3 million.

We question the genuine need for government action, and episodes like this make us wonder if it is ever possible for government to act intelligently. But the difference between a relatively intelligent government approach and the Bad News Brown Approach is over $28 million - the difference between $1.3 million and almost $30 million.

Perhaps he would be capable of less harm in the Senate, but we're inclined to think that such talent would eventually find an outlet even in the World's Greatest Deliberative Body.

High interest rates

Some recent economic statistics suggest that inflation may be tailing off, with some economists putting it at under 10 percent. Yet the prime rate still hovers around 20 percent, and mortgage rates are sky - high. How can this be so? Aren't interest rates a reflection of the price of borrowing money and therefore closely tied to the inflation rate? Can't we expect lower interest rates very soon?

There is a relationship, but it is not necessarily a direct one. The inflation rate is one of the factors that determine interest rates, perhaps the most important one. But interest rates also reflect supply and demand in the credit markets. When the demand for credit is high, even in periods of lower inflation, interest rates will be significantly higher than the inflation rate.

At the present time the demand for credit is especially high, largely because of - you guessed it - borrowing by the federal government. The stated deficit for Fiscal Year 1980 was $59.6 billion, which had to be borrowed from lenders, competing with private borrowers. But that figure seriously understates the actual amount of government borrowing.

In fact, in FY 1980 the federal government went to the credit markets for $124.4 billion - more than 35 percent of all borrowing by everyone. What accounts for the "invisible" half of the real deficit is "off budget agencies" like the Federal Financing Bank, which purchases the obligations of such subsidized lenders as the Export - Import Bank, the Farmers Home Administration and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

In the last ten years direct federal loans and loan guarantees outstanding have more than $200 billion in 1970 to over $800 billion today. New commitments have been increasing at between $100 billion and $150 billion per year. Some politicians like to pretend that these programs don't cost the taxpayers anything, but there is no free lunch in the government credit game either. These loan programs don't create credit, they just spread it around, competing with private borrowers for a limited amount of available credit and allocating it to politically favored individuals and groups. We all pay for this activity in the form of higher interest rates for everybody.

Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman proposed to chop $13.6 billion from the Carter FY 1981 credit budget and $21 billion from the FY 1982 budget. That would bring the loan and loan guarantee figure for FY 1982 down to "only" $128 billion, still a huge amount.

This modest cut is a laudable step in the right direction, but it should be followed by deeper cuts. High interest rates not only damage the real estate market, but practically every business that even thinks about borrowing money - as well as the individual seeking a loan. Until interest rates fall, economic growth is likely to be slow and the economy as a whole is likely to remain mushy.

Simply by reducing its own credit demands the federal government can do a great deal to reduce interest rates. It is in the interest of most consumers for the government to do so. The sooner the better.

Letter to the editor

Dear Editor

I know I speak for my fellow umpires Buddy Dodson, Ken Griffin and Dale Blackard in expressing our appreciation for Pampa - style hospitality in the recent Southwest Regional 13 - year - old Babe Ruth Tournament.

We were treated royally, especially our accommodations at the Coronado Inn and the facilities at Optimist Park.

The tournament was run very smoothly, thanks to the hard work of tournament director Jim Tucker and many, many others. As chairman of our Noon Optimist Club baseball committee, I know of the great reputation the Pampa Optimist Club has in operating youth programs.

Dear Editor:

In a position such as mine I find it difficult to write this letter. I do so only because the injustice you did to Lt. Preston Bailey is so great.

Lt. Bailey is a credit to the Pampa Police Department and to the city of Pampa. He is fair to everyone. His concern for the safety of our school children has admittedly led to the writing of citations to persons who have knowingly or inadvertently broken the city's traffic laws. Isn't this one of the main reasons that we hire police officers? I always thought police were supposed to enforce laws and uphold city ordinances.

My concern is that the city's main

I have many fond memories of playing sports in Pampa and I'm glad the folks in Del Rio, Lubbock and Miami, Okla. had the privilege of being kept abreast of all the happenings by one of the best play - by - play men in the country - Warren Hasse.

Also, I was much impressed by the progressive look both downtown and in other areas that Pampa projects.

media should have a responsibility to report the news in an accurate manner to the public. Yesterday in doing this you seemed to personally attack a man who has dedicated the major portion of his life to protecting the lives and property of the citizens of Pampa. I ask you, were you reporting the news of a car accident involving a policeman in pursuit of a traffic violator as you very briefly mentioned; or were you attacking a police officer for doing the job he was hired and sworn to do? As for the answer it is obvious to me where you stood on this question.

GNP and public spending

By ROBERT J. WAGMAN
WASHINGTON (NEA) - Liberals and other advocates of high government spending have long argued that such spending represents about the same percentage of the gross national product that it did decades ago despite its steady growth in dollar terms.

This argument has been heard with renewed frequency in the debate over the administration's proposed budget cuts.

But the GNP figures released monthly by the Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis are misleading because they fail to show that government spending has in fact increased sharply as a percentage of the GNP.

The GNP represents the total value of the nation's output of goods and services. The government breaks down the GNP into its various components:

personal consumption expenditures, gross private domestic investment, net exports of goods and services, and government purchases of goods and services, which are further broken down into purchases by federal, state and local governments.

For example, the figures for the first quarter of 1981 put the annual GNP at $2.853 trillion and government purchases of goods and services at $576.5 billion, or about 20 percent of the total. The liberals contend that government spending has hovered around 20 percent for decades.

But actual federal expenditures go far beyond the half - trillion spent on goods and services. Excluded from that amount is the biggest single category of government spending: so called "transfer payments" to Social Security beneficiaries, welfare recipients, participants in the food - stamp program and so on.

Federal transfer payments stood at an annual rate of $272.4 billion during the first quarter, while the total of all goods and services purchased by the federal government (including wages to its employees) came to only $221.5 billion. State and local transfer payments added another $41.2 billion.

The figures for government purchases also do not take into account interest payments on the national debt ($67.8 billion, according to the first - quarter calculations), federal grants - in - aid to state and local governments ($90.1 billion) or so - called "off - budget" expenditures ($12.6 billion). Included in the last category are federal appropriations to the Postal Service and to such agencies as the Federal National Mortgage Association.

When all of these amounts are added up, actual government spending comes to nearly $1.061 trillion, which is 37.2 percent of the GNP.

Transfer payments were not a significant portion of government expenditures 20 or 30 years ago. They would have had little effect on the percentage of the GNP devoted to government spending had they been included in the figures at that time.

But the growth in transfer payments over the intervening years has been nothing short of explosive. Similar growth has been seen in interest on the national debt. So, the inclusion of this spending now would nearly double the percentage.

Some experts say that another statistical quirk further downplays the effect of government spending on the total GNP. Purchases of goods and services by recipients of transfer payments are recorded under personal consumption expenditures as growth of the private sector. But these purchases actually represent growth in the public sector because public money is being spent.

This does not mean that there is some conspiracy to conceal the size of government spending. Each quarter the Bureau of Economic Analysis publishes all of the data that is contained here.

As a bureau spokesman put it: "Our quarterly figures which are updated monthly, are meant to show trends in how our economy is operating, so we use broad categories. But we also publish detailed monthly tabulations of all other categories of government expenditures. We can't be blamed if our numbers are misused. We don't misinterpret them."

Less than meets the eye

By ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON (NEA) - Politicians, pundits and pollsters have sought throughout the past three months to elevate special elections to fill vacancies in the House of Representatives into plebiscites on President Reagan's popularity.

But a retrospective examination of voting patterns in the series of five such contests suggests, notwithstanding the efforts to transform them into referendums on the president's job performance, that there's less there than meets the eye.

Congress now has a full House (a situation as rare in politics as in poker) but additional strained interpretations can be expected as new vacancies are created in the only two states scheduled to elect a governor later this year - Virginia and New Jersey.

One of the few generally reliable axioms in an era of volatile and unpredictable politics is that it's very difficult, if not impossible, to transfer popularity (or unpopularity) from one politician to another, especially in off - year elections.

There are, of course, exceptions to that rule, the most recently notable of which occurred in the midst of the Watergate scandal, when Democrats were victorious in four of the five 1974 special elections held in congressional districts considered to be bastions of Republican strength.

But no similarly unmistakable pattern has emerged this year.

There has, however, been no lack of effort to link those races to the president's presumed popularity (or lack thereof). Politicians in both major parties have been anxious to misinterpret a single victory in an isolated district as a harbinger of a national trend in the making.

In fact, off - year congressional elections are (and probably ought to be) most heavily influenced by the idiosyncracies of the candidates in the race, the characteristics of the district and the dynamics of the campaign.

In addition, this year's results have done little more than reinforce the widely accepted theory that the party in control of the White House tends to fare somewhat poorly in such contests, presumably because of the voter's proclivity to give the benefit of the doubt to the party out of power.

The GOP was able to retain handily the seat in Michigan's predominantly rural, overwhelmingly Republican 4th Congressional District.

But the Republicans were unable to capture the seat in Maryland's 5th Congressional District, in the Washington suburbs, where voters register Democratic by a 3 - 1 margin.

In Pennsylvania's 3rd Congressional District, located in Philadelphia, the exigencies of local politics required the winner to run as a Republican, but he is a lifelong Democrat publicly committed to voting with that party in the House.

The natural antipathy toward those in power was displayed most obviously in Ohio's heavily Republican, rural and conservative 4th Congressional District, where the GOP candidate eked out a victory by fewer than 400 votes.

The only contest in which either party lost control of a seat occurred in Mississippi's 4th Congressional District, which includes the state capital of Jackson. In that election, a Republican was replaced by a Democrat.

The Republican in that race, probably more than any of the other GOP contenders, sought to identify himself with Reagan and his program. The president even made an amplified telephone call to a campaign rally in which he told the Republican candidate, "We're waiting for you up here."

When the dust had settled, one knowledgeable Republican political operative here concluded that the party lost the seat because "our candidate failed to establish his own identification apart from being Ronald Reagan's candidate."

That trenchant observation ought to (but probably won't) dispel the perennial misconception that local elections are somehow disguised plebiscites on how the president is faring.

Jaws

What happens when you live on "The Island" is that people like to fish. There is nothing wrong with this except it's no fun to fish if you can't serve it to your guests for dinner. There's nothing wrong with this, except that everybody is always catching the same fish at the same time.

When the bluefish are biting, there is a bluefish on every table on the island. Then there seem to be nothing but flounder on your plate.

Everyone seems to have striped bass in the same week. And then we're all overdoing on fluke.

The thing about the fish dinners is that you have to go through a certain ritual before you get to eat.

During the cocktail hour you must listen to how the fish was caught. The other night at Scudder's we were mesmerized as our host described how his 11 - year - old grandson pulled in a 14 - pound bluefish, the very one we were going to eat that night.

Not since "Jaws" had there been such a battle between man and a denizen of the deep. The bluefish, having chomped on the grandson's hook, was so angered he attacked the boat and tried to bash in the stern.

But the grandson, a true scudder, held fast, determined to win the prize. The bluefish broke the line, but the grandson threw out another one, and the furious blue bit hard on it, determined to pull the boy over the side. Scudder told us he put the throttle in full gear, determined to make the blue run for its money as the lad held on for dear life.

The blue finally knew he had met his match, and after one more attempt to wreck the boat and drown all aboard, finally gave up and was pulled over the side where it flopped on the deck for a good five minutes before expiring and being thrown in the ice cooler for the long journey home.

So what we were having for dinner wasn't bluefish but the proudest moment in Scudder's life.

The next night we went to Brack's. His story was different. He had been out all day long with his house guests and they had nary a bite. On their way back to port they forgot to pull in all the lines. Damned if the line in the water didn't start wiggling and twisting. The fish literally jumped into the boat almost at the dock, and that, Brack told us happily, was why we were having bluefish for dinner instead of the large steaks that Betty Brack had ordered just in case the fishing party had no luck.

The following day at lunch Mrs. McCartney announced she had a surprise for all of us. Mr. McCartney had made the only dish he excels in, which he modestly named "McCartney's Secret Hagen - Daz Bluefish Chowder."

It was our turn the next evening and my wife and I discussed the menu. We thought as a surprise we would serve Virginia ham. My wife was sticking pieces of pineapple on the ham when there was a knock on the door. It was Scudder. He was holding a wet newspaper package. "You're not going to believe this," he said, "but my grandson caught another bluefish. Since we're coming to your house tonight we didn't want it to go to waste, so we thought you'd like to serve it for dinner tonight."

"You're too generous," I said. "Why don't you let the boy eat his own fish?"

"He hates bluefish," Scudder explained. "But you raved so much about ours, we couldn't think of anyone who would appreciate it more."

Family survives through faith and conviction

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Until June 22, Nick Mostis made his dues his only contribution to Local 221 of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization.

"I was the original doubting Thomas," Mostis said. "I did not trust the union at all."

After 23 years as a controller, Mostis was looking forward to retirement, something that was rightfully his as of April 9. The date came and went, however. Mostis said he couldn't afford to retire from his $38,000-a-year job with two children in parochial school and years of house payments left on his North Olmsted home.

After consulting with his wife, Mostis decided to stick it out one more year. Age 50 was a little young to retire and with retirement benefits a key issue in contract bargaining, he thought he had everything to gain.

Then came protracted contract negotiations, the Aug. 3 Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization strike, and finally, his dismissal notice last Monday because he had walked out. Mostis was a dean of traffic controllers at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport.

"We knew what would happen," said Mostis. "It was like we handed him (Reagan) a script. We didn't underestimate him, but the swiftness of his action was a minor surprise."

He said the decision to strike wasn't difficult. "My only misgiving is, and I pray every night, that because of this action, nothing disastrous will happen," he said.

The family can hold out financially through the end of August, he said. They have about $900 savings in the bank.

So far, the couple says, their friends are staying behind them. An anonymous gift certificate for food showed up in their mailbox and fellow parishioners at St. Brendan's Roman Catholic Church have promised to help the family keep up house payments.

Mostis said the hardest moment since he walked out came on a weekend retreat he led for 37 youngsters from St. Brendan's Roman Catholic Church in North Olmsted.

"The toughest thing I had to do was to tell those kids how I could be teaching them about God, love and right and wrong when I was a convicted felon," he said, referring to the labeling of controllers as criminals.

"I just told them that a convicted felon died on the cross for me 2,000 years ago," he said.

UNCERTAIN FUTURE. Striking air traffic controller Nick Mostis sits with his wife, Donna, in their suburban Cleveland home wondering about their future. Although Mostis could have retired in April, he remained on the job and chose to join his fellow controllers from Cleveland Hopkins Airport when they struck Aug. 1. (AP Laserphoto)

CONTINUED TO WORK. Air traffic controller Bill Christensen pauses at Chicago's O'Hare Airport as DC-10 makes final approach overhead. Christensen's decision to cross his union's picket line during the nationwide controllers' strike boiled down to a promise. "The whole issue is the oath I took not to strike," Christensen says. "When I take an oath... I also make it to God."

Decision to work based on promise

By MELISSA JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — For Bill Christensen, the decision to cross his union's picket line during the nationwide air traffic controllers' strike boiled down to a promise.

"As a Christian man," he said, "when I take an oath for someone or with someone... I also make it to God. So if I break it I not only break it with the government, I break it with God. That's not right to me."

Christensen, a 2½-year veteran of O'Hare International Airport's control tower who earns $33,000 a year, said two weeks into the walkout by fellow PATCO members that he is as firm, and even as enthusiastic, as ever in his decision to work.

"I told them two months ago that I wasn't going to walk if they went," he said.

"The whole issue is my oath that I took (not to strike)," said Christensen, 33, a member of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization for seven years. "If it wasn't against the law, maybe I would have gone — maybe. But I took a sworn oath."

"I have no misgivings. I'm totally confident in my decision."

Christensen said the strike hasn't changed his life, which revolves around his wife, his 10-year-old daughter and 8-year-old son who attend private school, and his church.

He said he endured stony silence from many co-workers once his decision became known.

"One day you're OK and the next day you're like a disease. They hate to be around you. To have them shun you and treat you like that, it does affect a person," said Christensen. "But I didn't lose any sleep over it."

Christensen worked 12 hours overtime the first week of the strike at O'Hare, where he said one other PATCO member refused to strike from the beginning and at least a half-dozen have since returned from the picket lines.

But the atmosphere in the tower is relaxed, Christensen said, and the skies are safe. "If it were dangerous, I wouldn't be up there. I'm a professional. I wouldn't jeopardize my career."

Christensen now makes his way through O'Hare by a little-known route to avoid confrontations, but before he changed his path, he said, he was heckled twice.

"But I respect everybody that went because it was a hard decision for them. It means a job. It means their career. As far as I'm concerned they're done. They're fired. I think President Reagan had to make a decision, he made a decision and I think has to live up to it. But I'm not happy that anybody lost his job."

And he added: "I've got three priorities in my life. The first is my God. The second is my family. And the third is my job. Everything or everyone else is last. I guess in this case, PATCO was fourth or fifth."

Most Americans feel churches should speak on social issues, not on politics

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans believe churches and the clergy should speak out on social issues, but they are strongly against churches and the clergy becoming involved in politics, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

The poll also said most Americans have not heard enough to have an opinion of the Moral Majority, and those that those who have heard of the conservative religious-based political lobby have an unfavorable opinion of it.

The poll of 1,601 adults contacted by telephone Aug. 10-11 said 51 percent believe churches and members of the clergy should express their views on current social questions. But 66 percent said churches and members of the clergy should not be involved in politics, like backing a candidate for public office.

In addition, 71 percent said religious convictions should not be a basis for political action.

The poll said 52 percent have not heard enough to have an opinion of the Moral Majority, which claims 4 million members, including 72,000 priests, rabbis and ministers.

The poll said 28 percent have an unfavorable opinion of the Moral Majority, while 12 percent have a favorable opinion and 8 percent are not sure.

The 2-year-old Moral Majority, led by the Rev. Jerry Falwell of Lynchburg, Va., raises money and campaigns for conservative candidates and causes.

Falwell is known to have the ear of President Reagan, who recently called him seeking support for his nomination of Sandra Day O'Connor to the Supreme Court, but Falwell and the Moral Majority also have drawn criticism from conservatives such as Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and religious figures such as the Rev. Billy Graham.

Graham, for instance, last month said Falwell's mixing of politics and religion "dilutes the gospel."

Falwell has spoken against homosexuals, abortion, laws against school prayer, popular television programming and drugs. He has proposed a Moral Majority legal defense arm that would be "a conservative version of the American Civil Liberties Union."

"We have the liberals, pro-abortionists, porno kings and secular humanists upset," Falwell said in a recent computer-printed fundraising letter from the Moral Majority.

The latest AP-NBC News poll said 64 percent of Americans have not heard or read enough to have an opinion of Falwell, a Baptist minister, while 24 percent have an unfavorable opinion of him, 7 percent have a favorable opinion and 5 percent are not sure.

The poll said people who had been to college, those who identified themselves as liberals or moderates and those who said they are interested in politics were less likely to have a favorable opinion of Falwell and the Moral Majority.

The unfavorable opinions of Falwell and the Moral Majority cut across political party and religious affiliations.

Even those who said they approve of church and clergy involvement in politics were split over whether they favor Falwell and the Moral Majority. Protestants who identified themselves as born-again Christians also were more likely to say they have an unfavorable opinion of Falwell and the Moral Majority.

As with all sample surveys, the results of the AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,600 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of such chance variations. That is, if one could have talked this past week to all Americans with telephones, there is only one chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of additional reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Hinkley moved to Quantico

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., charged with attempting to assassinate President Reagan, has completed court-ordered psychiatric tests and was transferred Tuesday to a military brig near Washington, the Justice Department said.

Department spokesman Tom DeCair said Hinckley made the 85-minute trip from the Federal Correctional Institution at Butner, N.C., to the brig of the Marine Corps training base at Quantico, Va., aboard a Marine Corps helicopter in the custody of U.S. marshalls.

Hinckley is accused of wounding Reagan and a Secret Service agent outside a Washington hotel March 30. The FBI announced recently that its extensive investigation had concluded Hinckley acted alone.

Justice department sources who declined to be identified said they expect a federal grand jury here to return an indictment in the case by the end of this week or early next week.

Report makes suggestions on preventing future attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Treasury Department report praises Secret Service agents for their quick action when a gunman opened fire on President Reagan but is "full of recommendations" on how to prevent such attacks in the future, its author says.

The report, ordered by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan within days of the March 30 assassination attempt and scheduled for release today, recommends closer cooperation between the agents who protect the president and the White House staff that works with him.

The Treasury department oversees the Secret Service as well as the Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco, which quickly traced the pistol alleged to have been used in the wounding of Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady, a Secret Service agent and a city policeman.

In ordering the investigation, Regan had said "my initial impression is that the department functioned in a very professional and expert manner."

"I think the conclusion of the report would support that," its author, Treasury general counsel Peter Wallison said Tuesday.

However, Wallison said, the report is "full of recommendations" about

Reagan letter commends man for rescue.

HOUSTON (AP) — A club bouncer nicknamed "Superman III" after rescuing an 18-year-old woman from a knife-wielding assailant has received a copy of a letter of commendation from President Reagan.

"I feel real proud of myself," Jim Dickson said Tuesday. "I feel like I've contributed a little something for the betterment of mankind."

Dickson, 25, received the copy of the original letter from a news agency which obtained his address for the White House Appointments Office. He said he expects to receive the original within a few days.

The letter commends the 6-foot-2, 200-pound Dickson's actions in a July 2 incident during which he jumped from his motorcycle onto a moving car, then reached through the sunroof and wrestled with a man who was abducting 18-year-old Kim Carnes at knife-point.

The letter reads: "Dear Mr. Dickson, I want to commend you for your bravery and your cool-headedness in rescuing Kim Carnes. Your actions averted a terrible tragedy and I know Kim, her family, as well as all who know you, will never forget your caring enough to come to the aid of someone in such trouble. "From what I understand, your own family has experienced the trauma that comes when someone you love has undergone a similar assault. (Dickson said two of his "loved ones" had been assaulted.)

what might be done better in the future.

In general, he said, the Treasury Department just wants to make sure that "in dealing with the White House" all relevant questions are considered and decided before the president appears.

He said many of them boil down to a single point: "All we want is to be sure we get some sort of regularized procedures so we don't end up doing things on an ad hoc basis."

Wallison gave no indication that the words "ad hoc basis" could be used to describe agents' actions outside the Washington hotel where Reagan was wounded by a man who had mixed with reporters, photographers and other onlookers near the hotel exit.

Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy was wounded as he stepped between Reagan and the gunman. And agent Jerry Parr has been highly praised for his swift action in pushing Reagan into the waiting limousine.

There has been much discussion of how the man accused of the shootings, John W. Hinckley Jr., managed to get so close.

But Wallison said the report doesn't deal with such specifics as who should be allowed to get close to Reagan and how close they should be allowed. "We'll leave those kinds of questions to the political people and to people with more expertise in protection," he said.

The Secret Service has enforced noticeably tighter security precautions since the shootings, with reporters and others being kept at greater distances from Reagan.

Wallison also said the report did not concentrate on such specific matters as occasional Secret Service suggestions that the president wear a bullet-proof vest at some public appearances.

Pampa scrimmages AHS, Tascosa in volleyball

Results of the three-way scrimmage between Pampa, Amarillo High, and Tascosa Tuesday on the Harvesters' court was like reading a meter with the District 3-5A volleyball race printed on it.

Amarillo High was at the top, Tascosa was in the middle, and Pampa was holding down third.

"If pre-season ratings mean anything, they've got the teams rated just right if you went by the scrimmage," Pampa High coach Lynn Wolfe said.

The scrimmage held no surprises for Wolfe.

"I really couldn't tell a whole lot," she added. "I tried a lot of different people at different positions."

Pampa opens the season Saturday with a dual at Lubbock Coronado.

"We're going to need as many pre-district games as we can play to get organized," Wolfe said. "We don't have much experience and very little height. Our tallest girl is 5-9."

Pampa opens District 3-5A play Oct. 3 against Caprock. The Harvesters placed third in the final standings a year ago.

"I think we're stuck in third now," Wolfe said. "We were first, then second, and now third. I just hope we're not going to start going downhill."

Not surprisingly, Wolfe looks for Amarillo High and Tascosa to be the teams to beat in district play this season.

"They've always got large teams and large girls," she added. "They've got an abundance of depth on the bench which gives them good people every year."

The Sandies are defending district champions.

The 1981 volleyball schedule is listed below:

Cowboys trim roster

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Cornerback and punt-return specialist Wade Manning has been traded to the Buffalo Bills for the second time in two years as the Dallas Cowboys trimmed their National Football League roster to 60.

Manning, who was sent to the Bills last year but came back when he flunked the team's physical, was traded Tuesday for an undisclosed draft pick. He spent last year with the Cowboys on the injured reserve list.

The Cowboys also placed safety Randy Hughes and rookie defensive end Ron Spears on the injured reserve list.

Hughes reinjured his shoulder in Saturday night's loss to the Rams and Spears has a foot injury that will keep him out for at least six weeks.

Dallas waived Vince Skillings, a 6th-round draft choice from Ohio State, Nate Lundy, a 12th-round selection from Indiana, kicker Dale Castro of Maryland, wide receiver Leon Chadwick of Georgia Tech, kicker Steve Steinke of Utah State, Theodore Button, a running back from North Carolina and punter Allen White of North Carolina State.

The next roster cuts will come next Tuesday, when the Cowboys must have no more than 50 players.

American League baseball roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Rick Leach was a football hero and Danny Ainge made his fame in basketball in college.

Now the ball is bouncing in a different direction for both of them, as they seek to make it big in baseball. And Tuesday night, both did well on the diamond.

"I know I have major league ability and I know I can play," said Leach after his three-run homer helped the Detroit Tigers beat the Minnesota Twins 3-0.

"I'm a winner," added Leach after blasting his first major league homer. "All I can compare tonight with is beating Ohio State and going to the Rose Bowl."

Leach started at quarterback for the University of Michigan.

Ainge, an All-America basketball player for Brigham Young University, has been struggling with the Toronto Blue Jays. But Tuesday night, he reached base four times to help his team beat the Kansas City Royals 5-3.

"Basketball can't help but be on my mind when people keep bringing it up," said Ainge.

Ainge's three singles against the Royals raised his average to .199.

In other American League action, Milwaukee beat Texas 3-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before dropping the nightcap 8-6, the New York Yankees blanked Chicago 4-0, Baltimore edged California 6-5, Cleveland trimmed Seattle 5-2 and Oakland beat Boston 3-2 in 15 innings.

Leach's homer came in the sixth inning and it was all the runs Detroit needed as Milt Wilcox and Kevin Saucier combined on a six-hit effort. The victory was Detroit's fifth in a row, matching the Tigers' longest streak of the season, while sending the Twins to their fifth straight defeat.

Steve Kemp drew a walk off Minnesota starter Roger Erickson, 3-8, in the Detroit sixth and went to third on Kirk Gibson's two-out double before Leach lashed Roger Erickson's first pitch for his game-winning homer.

Lefors have scrimmages

Lefors will have its first intrasquad scrimmage of the football season at 9 p.m. tonight.

Head coach James Allen also announced that the Pirates will play Clarendon Junior Varsity instead of Valley at 6 p.m. Friday. The game will be played at Clarendon.

CORNER IS TOUGHER
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ronnie Lott, the No. 1 draft pick of the San Francisco 49ers this year, is a defensive back and insists that cornerback is a much tougher place to play than safety.

Lott, a hard hitter, starred for Southern California.

"So far as I am concerned," he said, "cornerback is more of a challenge. To be a good cornerback you have to have a lot of skills, whereas playing safety is not so demanding."

A BIG HELMET MAN

Off the field, Mike dons a helmet when he goes flying around the countryside on his motorcycle. He is the chairman of the Motorcycle Safety Foundation Wear-Your-Helmet Campaign.

"I wouldn't think of playing pro football without a helmet and I feel the same way about motorcycles," Mike said.

Official claims most effective way to battle crime is to rehabilitate criminals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the attorney general's campaign against violent crime says the single most effective way to curb such crimes would be to rehabilitate prison inmates.

But rehabilitation was not among the 64 recommendations presented this week to Attorney General William French Smith by the task force he created last April. Instead, the panel focused on putting more violent offenders behind bars.

It did recommend $2 billion in federal aid to help build new state prisons because existing facilities now are grossly overcrowded.

"I'm sorry they didn't address how we treat the people we lock up," said Associate Attorney General Rudolph Giuliani. The Justice Department's No. 3 official, Giuliani has been designated by Smith to oversee the violent crime policies the department eventually pursues.

While Giuliani was generally quite pleased with the work of the task force, his remark highlighted two points submerged in the furor over panel recommendations that would put new limits on the current constitutional rights of people accused of crimes.

—The Justice Department still has to pick which panel proposals it will push and what others it might add. And Giuliani made clear he anticipates seeking some federal money to demonstrate successful rehabilitation programs.

—No matter what the federal government does, the task of reducing the number of violent crimes is ultimately beyond its control and rests with state and local governments already anticipating the pinch of President Reagan's cuts in federal assistance.

The federal government brings 35,000 criminal cases a year, the majority for property rather than violent crimes. In 1979, the last full year for which the FBI has figures, there were 1,178,540 violent crimes reported to police in the United States. The overwhelming majority of these violent crimes of murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault did not violate federal law.

In addition, the federal government has reliable evidence that for each violent crime reported to the police in the United States, two others go unreported.

If the Reagan administration succeeds in making punishment swifter and surer and thus increasing confidence in criminal justice, citizens might report more crimes. That could send up the reported national totals up faster than the new policies drive them down.

Cheerleader refuses to cut hair; resigns

HOUSTON (AP) — A 14-year-old cheerleader has decided she'll turn in her pom-poms rather than cut her waist-length hair.

Tracy Mitchell refused to conform with a Deer Park High School rule on cheerleader hair length and says she will watch the football games from the bleachers this year.

She asked school trustees to change the rule, but the board refused to intervene after the Deer Escorts, a drill team governing the cheerleader squad, voted to keep the shoulder-length hair rule.

"I still can't believe the school board would do that to us," Tracy said. "I didn't fight the rule because I love my hair. I did it because I think it should be my choice how I wear it."

Drill team sponsor Cindy Farris contends the hair code promotes neatness, uniformity and team discipline.

Tracy admits it will be difficult to watch the games from the stands, but said, "I've decided all this was just meant to be and that there's nothing I can do about it. But I know I'm going to try out for cheerleader again next year — as long as they change the hair code."

Wife suspicious about hubby's Rx

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband's job requires him to be out of town quite a bit. Everything was going fine with our marriage until last month when he telephoned long distance to say that his company physician had advised him to spend a month away from his work and without any contact with his family!

I tried to reach the company physician to ask him about his advice, but his office informed me that the doctor will not be back until the end of the summer! I suspect my husband is having an affair.

Abby, would a doctor make such a suggestion? Do you think a man of good conscience would follow such a suggestion? I need your opinion.

URGENT AND ANXIOUS

DEAR URGENT: You give me very few facts to go on, but if you suspect your husband of having an affair, you must have good reasons. The whole thing smells fishy to me, too. Every responsible physician has a substitute doctor covering for him in his absence. The only "covering" I see here is the company physician covering for a pal who needs an excuse to disappear for a month.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 10 1/2 years old, and my problem is a neighbor boy I'll call "Mike." He's 4. Mike keeps coming to my house and he rings our doorbell about 15 times! Then he'll ask if I'm home. If I am, I have to go out and play with him, and if I'm not home he just sits out in front and waits for me.

Sometimes Mike will go in our backyard and play on my swing set without asking anybody. If I tell him he can't swing on my swing without permission, he says he can because his mother said so. What should I do?

POOPED WITH PESTS

DEAR POOPED: You may need some cooperation from your mother and Mike's on this one. First explain to Mike that you can't play with him whenever he feels like it. If he rings your bell when you're not in the mood to play with him, say so. Then have your mother tell his mother that your swings should not be used without supervision. Better yet, they should be locked up, because if anyone is injured on them, the owner could be sued.

DEAR ABBY: When we have houseguests, we give them their own room, bath, house key and our extra car. We figure it's their vacation, and they should feel free to get up, eat, sleep and come and go as they please.

The question: When friends and relatives invite our houseguests to dinner or whatever, I don't think they should feel obligated to invite us, too.

My sister disagrees with me. What do you think?

FIRST-TIME WRITER

DEAR WRITER: It depends on what the invitation is for. If it's a larger party to honor your houseguests, you should be invited. But you need not be invited to accompany them to every coffee klatch, tea, beer bust, tour of the city, shopping tour, zoo, art gallery and museum. There is no "rule." And where no rule exists, common sense should prevail.

DEAR ABBY: I can sure feel for PATTY IN TACOMA, who's 25 and looks like 17. I've got the same problem, although I'm only 13 and get treated like I'm 9.

When I walk into a restaurant, I'm handed a "kiddie menu." Please don't tell me I'll appreciate looking young eventually. I've heard that so many times I could scream!

And please ask your readers not to ask us small, thin people if we have "anorexia." We're perfectly healthy—we're just small.

There are advantages to being small, however. How many 6-footers do you know who can crawl under a locked bathroom door in the airport and unlock it for all those little old ladies who forgot to bring their dimes?

Pampan attends education seminar

Elaine Ledbetter of Pampa attended the Sixth International Conference on Chemical Education, held Aug. 9-14 on the campus of the University of Maryland at College Park. More than 500 delegates representing 80 countries attended.

ELAINE LEDBETTER, left, of Pampa, discusses her "Keys to Chemistry" education program with teachers from the Netherlands at a recent international conference on chemistry education, held on the campus of the University of Maryland at College Park.

General theme of the conference was "Teaching Chemistry in a Diverse World." General sessions and small discussion groups developed the theme by devoting one day to each of three subjects: contemporary chemistry teaching; frontiers of chemistry and popularization of chemistry.

Mrs. Ledbetter presented a paper on her self-paced chemistry program for the general student and served as reporter for one of the small discussion groups.

Highlight of the conference was a trip into Washington to the National Academy of Sciences for a lecture by Sir George Porter, Nobel laureate and present director of the Royal Institute in London.

After the lecture, the group went to the State Department, where a reception and buffet was catered by the same staff that caters all White House functions.

One day was devoted to tours which included the National Bureau of Standards, Goddard Space Center, Smithsonian Institution, Aerospace Museum and sightseeing.

Mrs. Ledbetter said the meeting was a "tremendous success" and culminated two years of intensive planning by groups in all parts of the world.

When asked what she considered the major benefit of such a conference, she replied, "There are so many, but one is the opportunity for people from numerous cultures to come together to share views on chemistry and teaching and to come to appreciate one another and the conditions under which each of us must work."

"We in the U.S., even in our very poorest districts, have absolutely no conception of the poverty that exists in many parts of the world. I talked with teachers from some of these areas. Many are lucky if they have a pencil for each student, and paper is so scarce that they write on whatever happens to be available," she said.

FUTURE PAGEANT CONTESTANT? Cassie Elliott, right, 4-year-old daughter of Dean and Anita Elliott of Pampa, was one of 10 Little Misses appearing in the 1981 Miss Top O' Texas Scholarship Pageant Saturday night at M.K. Brown Auditorium. Her escort was 4-year-old Jeremy Nunn, left, son of Deborah Nunn and Kenneth Nunn, both of Pampa.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Racial mixing is more common in South Africa

EDITOR'S NOTE — Apartheid is a provocative political policy of strict racial segregation as practiced in South Africa. But there have been some significant, and subtle, changes in the racially-segregated nation of late. Here's a look at what's been happening in recent years.

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A popular weekend outing for blacks in Johannesburg is to ride the high-speed elevator to the top of the 50-story Carlton Center for a panoramic view of the city and a hamburger at the Wimpy bar.

Five years ago the casual mixing of whites and blacks in the Carlton Center's glassed-in observation deck and fast-food restaurant would have been illegal. Now it's an increasingly common sight in this racially segregated nation.

Until 1976, when the post office quietly began to remove "whites only" signs from entrances and elevators, access of non-whites to public buildings was rigidly controlled by the country's complex apartheid laws. Non-whites had to enter either through specially designated doorways or they couldn't get in at all.

Nowadays the races mix freely in public places like the post office. People of all colors use the public library. Black women wrapped in colorful tribal blankets share Johannesburg's city park benches with whites at lunchtime. Stylishly dressed blacks shop alongside whites in such big downtown department stores as Edgars, Garlicks and John Orr's.

It is part of the white-minority government's effort to remove what it calls "hurtful" discrimination against the non-white majority of some 23 million — blacks, Asians and people of mixed race, called "coloreds."

Removal of the apartheid signs from the post office was a milestone. In 1977 the government allowed certain hotels, restaurants and bars — primarily those dealing with foreign visitors — to have "international licenses."

This meant that hotels like the Carlton in downtown Johannesburg and Holiday Inns around the country could lodge non-white guests. A hotel, bar or restaurant without an "international license" could also accommodate a non-white — provided the owner telephoned a civil servant in Pretoria on a special "hotline" to ask permission.

In April, the law was amended to allow owners of bars, hotels and restaurants to decide for themselves whether to serve non-whites. Dawie de Villiers, minister of industries, commerce and tourism, says the "hotline" system had "proved very unsuccessful" because it caused South Africa a lot of bad publicity overseas.

The government's rationale for easing "hurtful" discrimination was summed up in a widely quoted remark in 1979 by Prime Minister P.W. Botha that the five million whites must "adapt or die" — meaning that they face a perilous future if they fail to reach an accommodation with the black majority.

Despite the concessions, the national party government remains committed to the basic structure of apartheid, or racial separation, which it legalized shortly after taking power in the 1948 general election. Many facilities remain segregated among them beaches, swimming pools, most transport and movie theaters.

Apartheid protects the privileged position of the whites through legal discrimination in employment, education and housing. It requires non-whites to live in separate satellite townships or rural homelands, and it denies them South African citizenship and the right to vote.

Black critics of the government like Dr. Nthato Motlana, a physician and community leader in the black township of Soweto outside Johannesburg, have called its concessions a mere "nibbling away" at the edifice of apartheid.

Botha's cautious moves to ease apartheid may seem grudging and belated to South African blacks and the outside world. But they have aroused stiff opposition among conservative whites, reluctant to alter racial attitudes and habits built up over three centuries.

Livestock ranges in better shape

WASHINGTON (AP) — The condition of livestock pastures and ranges are generally in much better shape across the nation than they were a year ago when searing heat and drought withered grass over large areas, the Agriculture Department says.

Hay production — especially alfalfa — also is expected to rise this year, meaning there will be larger supplies in many areas which suffered from feed shortages last winter.

The pasture and hay situation was included in the department's recent monthly crop report, overshadowed by estimates for bumper crops of corn, wheat, soybeans, cotton and other key commodities.

Looking at pastures and ranges, the report said that as of Aug. 1 pastures and ranges averaged 82 percent on the Crop Reporting Board's scale. A rating of 80 percent or above is defined as good to excellent.

Last year, pastures and ranges averaged a record low of 60 percent. The 10-year average for Aug. 1 is 76 percent.

The report said conditions varied by areas, reflecting sharp differences in rainfall.

"In the Southeast, where dry weather continued to hinder growth of grasses, conditions ranged from very poor to fair," it said. "Although some deterioration occurred during July in the Pacific and Northern Mountain regions, North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin, pastures were still in good-to-excellent condition on Aug. 1."

Generous rains in Kansas, Iowa and Missouri "encouraged good growth" last month, leaving pastures in mostly good-to-excellent shape as of Aug. 1.

The pattern continued in the Eastern Corn Belt and the Northeast, the report said.

But Texas ranges and pastures "deteriorated during July as grasses suffered from the effects of insects and dry soils." Dry weather in the Southwest and Central Mountain states left pastures in "very poor to fair condition" as of Aug. 1.

Production of all hay this year was estimated at about 137.8 million tons, up 5 percent from 131.1 million in 1980. The acreage for cutting is about the same as last year — 59.4 million acres — but the yield is up slightly to 2.32 tons an acre from 2.21 last year.

Alfalfa output makes up most of the total, estimated at 80.6 million tons, up 1 percent from 79.9 million in 1980. The average yield was put at 3.06 tons an acre, compared with 3.04 tons last year.

Production of all other hay is estimated at 57.1 million tons, up 12 percent from 51.2 million last year, with yields forecast at 1.72 tons an acre, compared with 1.54 tons in 1980.

Wisconsin is the biggest hay producer — 11.2 million tons estimated this year — but the crop is a major item in nearly all other states, particularly those where livestock production is important.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new analysis by the Agriculture Department says while relatively little farmland is lost nationally through increased surface mining of coal, the supply and quality of water may be affected greatly.

The report, issued Monday, estimated potential losses in farm income from increased strip mining at $16 million in the coal regions of the country, less than 0.2 percent of the $11 billion in farm income from those regions in 1979.

The largest loss — accounting for some $10 million — would be through expanded strip mining in all or parts of Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

In some areas, current uses of water "may be severely disturbed by coal development," the report said. Large quantities of water are needed for cooling coal-fired electrical generating plants, as a feedstock for converting coal to gas and as a vehicle in slurry pipeline transportation of coal.

Pollution from mining operations and thermal pollution from coal processing plants are other factors that could disturb water quality.

Single free copies of the report, "Coal Development in Rural America: The Resources at Risk, RDRR-29," can be ordered from: EMS Publications, 0054-South, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — The classic "My Fair Lady" is back on Broadway — with a real-life subplot straight from "42nd Street" — the tale of a young actress called to step in for an ailing star.

Understudy Nancy Ringham — a 26-year-old with seven performances under her belt and two lucky pennies in her change purse — was thrust into the limelight Tuesday night to co-star opposite Rex Harrison.

Cheryl Kennedy, originally cast as Eliza Doolittle, withdrew Monday night after her laryngitis developed into a severe case of nodes on the vocal cords.

"It's all happened so fast," said Miss Ringham, who as a child used to listen to the soundtrack that made Julie Andrews famous, "never dreaming that would someday be me."

While Harrison had been insisted on having a British actress play the part and had said Miss Kennedy was his personal choice, "he's been wonderful, helping me and being there during this trying time," his new co-star said.

With all 1,900 opening-night tickets sold and her parents, two brothers and a sister in front seats, the young singer — who a year ago was waiting tables in a New York restaurant — had "a few butterflies in the old stomach, to say the least."

LONDON (AP) — American songwriter Alan Jay Lerner has married for the eighth time, the Daily Mail reported today.

"The newspaper said the 62-year-old Lerner — who wrote the lyrics for "My Fair Lady," currently being revived on Broadway — was wed recently to Liz Robertson, 26, the actress daughter of a security officer in the Port of London.

Miss Robertson is appearing in a play at the Chichester Festival Theater, near the couple's honeymoon hotel in a Sussex seaside village, the newspaper said.

Lerner met his bride two years ago after Miss Robertson was given the lead role in a London revival of "My Fair Lady."

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter turned down an invitation to attend the ground-breaking of the Federation of Fly Fishermen here, but he did come to town for a fishing vacation.

Carter, his wife, Rosalynn, and their children, Amy and Chip, arrived here Tuesday by private jet. After chatting briefly with spectators, the Carters were driven to Yellowstone Village near Hebgen Lake where they plan to enjoy the trout fishing until Sunday.

Carter had been invited to attend opening ceremonies Thursday evening for a new building to house the fly fishermen, who are holding their international convention here this week.

But an FFF spokesman said he was told by an official in the Carter party the former president would not attend the ceremony.

Noontime parking garage collapse crushes vehicles

HOUSTON (AP) — Workers toiled for more than eight hours to make sure nobody was buried in the collapse of a parking garage that sent tons of steel, concrete and flattened cars crashing through the bowels of the three-story building north of Houston.

Crews began working shortly after the noon-time cave-in Tuesday to clear the debris and look for casualties. Police said they could not be certain no one was injured until the last car had been searched about 10 p.m. CDT.

Fire department officials said a 30-by-60-foot mid-section of the third level caved in, creating a domino effect that collapsed portions of the second level and crushed several cars "flatter than a pancake."

Ron Cates, an Amoco Oil Co. employee, said he had just parked his truck on the ground level of the garage when the building began to cave in.

"There was no forewarning at all," said Cates. "I just heard this tremendous loud blast all at once. Then I saw these cars sandwiched on top of one another. I saw some people in front of me and I yelled for them to get out. Then I started running."

John King, an oil company vice president whose office overlooks the garage said, "It sounded like a big jet plane going by. By the time we looked out, it was clear gone."

King said seconds after the collapse, he saw a man drive an expensive silver-colored sedan to within feet of the hole.

"He parked his car, got out and looked into the hole. Then he just walked away," said King.

Randall Parish, vice president of Friendswood Development Co., which owns the garage, said the building was a pre-fabricated structure built in 1978.

He said representatives of the building contractor, MacGregor Construction Co. of Houston, were on the scene Tuesday helping secure the rest of the structure and trying to determine what caused the cave-in.

Ex-bank officer pleads guilty

HOUSTON (AP) — W. Darrell Wiggins faces up to 30 years in prison and a $30,000 fine after pleading guilty to charges he embezzled nearly $17 million from the bank he worked for.

The former Allied Bank of Texas senior vice president entered the plea Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Ross N. Sterling. Sterling set sentencing for September 29.

Wiggins, an 11-year employee of the bank, told the judge he became involved in a scheme 10 years ago to sell unauthorized negotiable securities to help bank customers whose loan applications were turned down by Allied. He maintained he did not personally profit from the illegal transactions.

The bank filed suit to regain its losses from Wiggins' holdings, which included vast ranching properties in Texas and Colorado.

Wiggins was accused of siphoning amounts ranging from $875,000 to $7.2 million from the bank between December 9, 1980 and January 2, 1981.

He resigned his post in January after the bank discovered the $17 million loss.

A look at Texas

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Dallas man serving a life sentence for burglary of an auto walked off a work detail Tuesday morning at the Ellis Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections, a TDC official said.

The inmate, Melvin Blount, 30, was supposed to be working in the fields when he was missed Tuesday morning, according to TDC spokesman Rick Hartley.

There was no indication how Blount escaped, Hartley said, adding that TDC personnel and Department of Public Safety troopers were using helicopters and dogs to search for the inmate.

Hartley said no one was injured in the escape.

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. James H. Landes, executive director of the Baptist General Convention of Texas for the past seven years, said Tuesday he plans to retire at the end of 1982.

Landes, 68, was scheduled to retire in 1976, but has stayed on as chief executive at the request of the executive board. He said he will ask the board to start a search for his successor.

Landes, a native of Lewisville, Ark., was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Wichita Falls before he was named president of Hardin-Simmons University in 1963.

He was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Richardson in 1973 when he was elected to the executive director's post.

News at a Glance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur Adair Hartman, a career diplomat currently serving as U.S. ambassador to France, will be nominated to be U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, the White House has announced.

An administration source said Tuesday that banker Evan Galbraith would probably be chosen to succeed Hartman in Paris.

Hartman previously served in Saigon, Brussels and London as well as in various international relations posts in Washington. Before going to France, he was assistant secretary of state for European affairs.

The White House also announced that another career diplomat, Harry G. Barnes Jr., will be nominated to be ambassador to India. Barnes is now director-general of the foreign service and State Department's personnel director.

WASHINGTON (AP) — John R. Van de Water has been sworn in as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, but he is not expected to begin his duties until next week.

The swearing-in occurred Tuesday at the U.S. Embassy in Cairo, Egypt. Van de Water is out of the country attending a daughter's wedding.

Until he returns to the United States next week, board member Robert P. Hunter, who was sworn in Friday, will be acting chairman, the NLRB said Tuesday.

Both men were named by President Reagan June 18 and received recess appointments last Thursday to allow them to serve pending Senate confirmation when Congress returns from its August recess.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's armed services are meeting their manpower goals but a planned increase in military strength and a diminishing pool of military-age youth may pose problems in the future, a Pentagon official says.

Lawrence J. Korb, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, said Tuesday that for the nine months ending last June the Army and Navy hit 100 percent of their planned strength while the Air Force and Marine Corps reached more than 99 percent of their goals.

He said the quality of enlistees has improved significantly at the same time the numbers were increasing.

He warned, however, that future problems that may arise because of a diminishing number of young people, expected increases of about 200,000 in U.S. military strength and "the challenge to retain military members should an improved economy accelerate the civilian wage scale."

Museums of stuffed animals going out of style

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Corny dogs, cotton candy, whizzing, whirling midway rides, the motorized statue of Big Tex booming "Howdy, folks!" and waving his mechanical arm — these delight most children at the State Fair of Texas.

But not Steve Runnels. At age 5 he fell in love with the ancient death on display in dioramas at the Museum of Natural History in Fair Park.

And now — 30 years later — he is still at odds with popular taste, still fond of the old exhibits many find boring or a waste of the museum's precious resources.

Intended to be timeless, they are going out of style. Intended to be repositories of the past, the exhibits may be passing.

Runnels is the museum's "birdman" — the curator of ornithology. His beloved dioramas of dead Texas animals posed among hand-made trees with colored wax leaves, water-colored plaster rocks, dried grasses and glass ponds have lost their power to astound. They seem old-fashioned, as indeed they are.

The modern nature museum's dioramas are descended from 18th century curios cabinets.

"Science was brand new then, and everyone had their little collections, and it was kind of a Barnum & Bailey circus

Real life James Bond

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Eat your heart out, James Bond. In El Paso, there's a real-life private eye with enough electronic gadgetry, firepower and imagination to make Dr. No quake in his boots.

His name is Jay J. Armes and he claims he's never left a case unsolved.

"People say, 'You're just like 007,'" Armes says. "I say, no, 007 is like me."

Armes, who lost his hands in a childhood accident, wears pincher-like hooks which he says are no handicap to his work. His chauffeur-driven limousine has a video camera built into the trunk that allows him to see up to 17 blocks behind the car on a small television screen in the back seat. The limo is bullet-proof and has three telephones.

Armes' home is surrounded by a 20-foot wall and dozens of surveillance cameras. Inside, cheetahs and zebras roam free. Stepping into his office is like walking on to the set of "Goldfinger," the movie based on Ian Fleming's spy novel.

After going through a steel door and past surveillance cameras, a visitor sees a giant badge on the front door that bears the name of Armes' company — "The Investigators."

Push carpeting leads past stuffed ostriches — former pets — and into an elevator. Steel doors slide out of the way as the visitor enters Armes' huge private office, dominated by a curved desk covered with buttons that operate the electronic gadgets.

At a push of a button, the room's three video screens show different parts of the office building. Bookshelves slowly turn to reveal a non-alcoholic bar, camera equipment and a collection of automatic weapons.

Armes became a private eye after working as an actor in Hollywood in the 1950s.

His best-known case came in 1972 when he located Christian Brando, the son of actor Marlon Brando and actress Anna Kashfi, in hiding in Mexico. The boy had been reported missing by Ms. Kashfi during a custody battle with Brando.

Armes found the boy after three days of scouring the Mexican coast in a helicopter.

"It's probably the case everybody's heard the most about," Armes says. "But it's really not my best case. There are some that have never come out in public that were really something."

situation," Runnels said. "They had these glass-fronted cabinets — curio cases — with jars full of two-headed calves, or parasites found in somebody's body, things like that."

"The more garish the things were, the more exciting they were to the people."

The first nature museum in the U.S., the Peale Museum of Natural History, opened in Philadelphia in 1802. Its original collection — bottled snakes, mostly — grew, the museum moved to New York City and became a pioneer of "sculpture taxidermy," the modern way to "stuff" animals.

(They aren't stuffed. A mounted beast is actually a skin stretched over a man-made form.)

The public, Runnels says, is much more sophisticated now than it was when the Dallas museum opened in 1936, or even when he was a boy in the 1950s.

"We didn't have a television then, and I'd never seen anything like these animals," he said. "I was amazed. I just couldn't get over it."

"Now, we look at nature shows on TV, and we ask more and more for our senses. The museum has to struggle to keep up, to stay relevant." Visitors who are accustomed to seeing moving pictures of live animals tend to be somewhat underwhelmed with the dead "real" thing displayed in the museum, he said.

They notice the old-fashioned style and bad painting in some of the background pictures, the thin layer of dust lying on the glass pond in the raccoon case, the fading colors in the display of Dallas waterbirds at White Rock Lake as it looked before it was dredged and the brushy little islands destroyed.
