

City scraps utility rate increase

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

City Manager Mack Wofford Tuesday said a 10 percent increase in utility rates had been scrapped from budget proposals, and the estimated revenue from city sales tax was increased from five to 13 percent in Tuesday's budget study session.

A Pampa citizen's questions about recent tax notices, increasing property values and taxes by at least 100 percent, were skirted with noncommittal answers by Pampa city commissioners Tuesday afternoon during a study session of the proposed $6.2 million operating budget for the 1981 fiscal year.

Nina Spoonemore of Pampa asked commissioners at the conclusion of the 90-minute study session what actual increase in revenues the city would need to meet the 1981-1982 budget.

City officials said an increase of 16 percent.

Mayor H. R. Thompson said the city did not have the tax figures yet. "We have to get them from the school."

Mrs. Spoonemore commented, "I realize my tax notice is misleading, but the way it looks, my taxes will be 150 percent higher this year. If we could expect a 15 percent or even 20 percent increase in taxes, we could sleep better at night. Now how much do you think our taxes will be?"

City Manager Mack Wofford answered, "We don't have the figures. It would be difficult to say. We don't know what the taxes will be individually."

Mrs. Spoonemore said, "Most people feel the taxes are going to be prohibitive, especially those older people who are on a fixed income."

As the dozen persons attending the study meeting were leaving the commission room Tuesday after adjournment, Commissioner O. M. Prigmore asked, "When are we going to bring up that tax rate?"

No one answered Prigmore's question, but Thompson said the city manager's estimate included in the budget did not include the $5,000 homestead exemption given by the school district.

Wofford added the city proposed to use the identical exemption for persons over 65 years old as the school does.

Thompson commented, "I wished I had thought to have mentioned that. That lady would have felt better if I had."

Prigmore said if the commission did agree on the tax exemption, "that increase will be less on the elderly."

During the study session, Wofford announced that the 10 percent increase of utility minimum rates which would have cost about $160 per month per household in Pampa had been cut from the budget proposal.

"From the first two meetings, it appeared the commissioners didn't want that," Wofford commented.

The city manager that without the 10 percent increase the budget would still remain at the $6.29 million figure. He warned the commissioners that due to rising costs, "No doubt the time is coming when we eventually will have to adjust the city utilities rate."

To balance the budget, Wofford said the city sales tax revenue estimate was revised from a 5 percent increase from the 1980 figures, to a 13 percent increase.

Wofford outlined for commissioners the three areas of increase in the budget which he said would equal about the 16 percent total increase of the budget.

These included the purchase of a 1,000-gallon pumper for the Pampa Fire Department to replace the 7-year-old model the department now has, a hydrostatic waterline cleaning machine, two side-loading garbage trucks and 96 three-year containers to convert the commercial waste collection system.

In addition to the capital items, Wofford said the budget proposes a 12 percent increase in salaries and benefits for city employees and a $200,000 street improvement program.

Commissioner Clyde Carruth commented, "Most of the comments I receive is from people who want the streets improved and then kept up."

Thompson added, "I don't think that (the $200,000 allotted in the budget) will be enough to get the streets back in shape."

Prigmore said, "I'd like to see that a couple of capital items are cut and put into the street program."

Following some discussion about the streets, the commissioners instructed Wofford to file the budget with a provision that if after the public hearing it was decided to cut two of the capital expenditures, the $250,000 specified to the items would be placed in the street improvement funds.

Prigmore suggested that hydraulic sewer cleaning machine and the sanitary waste disposal trucks and containers be stricken from the coming year's budget.

He pointed out that although Wofford said the sewer cleaning machine would save the city $20,000 per year and pay for itself in four years, the city paid only $6,500 in contract services for sewer cleaning in 1979 and $15,000 in 1980.

Wofford said the contract estimates he had received show prices have gone up 10 cents per linear foot.

Regarding the buying of two side-loading garbage trucks and the three-year containers, Prigmore commented, "You say you have mailed us something that shows you have saved the $107,000 per year you said you would be converting to this system. I have problems with that when I look at the costs of that (sanitation) department."

He added, "It says here indicating the preliminary budget figures) that you spent $160,000 in 1979 before the conversion, $195,000 in 1980, and projected $200,000 for this year. Where is the saving coming in?"

Wofford said, "Well, we went from 30 men to 18."

Prigmore said, "I don't care if you went from 30 men to 100 — it's the actual dollars I care about."

Wofford said the budget would be filed, "with the alternative in it providing that if we can't justify the purchase of two pieces of equipment, the money will revert to the street program."

Prigmore asked if the two new employees proposed in the preliminary budget would be included in the "cost of living increase kitty."

Wofford said the two employees would equal two percent of the 12 percent increase.

"That's not a realistic way to present it because you're not giving that money to the employees," Prigmore commented. "I didn't know that also included two people. I think we should know that," he added.

Wofford said, "I'd prefer not to talk about that right now. If I say employees will get a 10 percent salary increase and someone only gets eight percent, then I'll be in trouble."

Commissioners Tuesday also gave the city manager the go-ahead to implement a three percent city motel-hotel tax to be placed on the overnight room charges of hotels and motels within the city limits.

Wofford said the tax would bring in from $20,000 to $25,000 per year. He suggested the money be used in the upkeep of M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Prigmore commented, "I thought we agreed six months ago that if the (motel-hotel tax) would be a good thing and that we would go through with it."

Wofford replied that at the time hotel-motel owners objected to it as giving an advantage to motels that were out of the city limits.

The city manager said at the conclusion of the meeting that the budget would be filed with the city secretary by Thursday or Friday.

Commissioners Coyle Ford, Prigmore and Carruth were present at Tuesday's meeting, in addition to Mayor Thompson. Commissioner Melvin Hammons was not at the meeting.

Agencies may be eliminated in budget cuts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, struggling to control the federal deficit in the face of persistent high interest rates, is ordering a new wave of budget cuts which may wipe out whole government agencies.

The new cuts for the 1982 fiscal year, which starts next month, would be over and above $35.2 billion in reductions already approved by Congress, $14 billion still being sought by the administration and $75 billion planned for 1983 and 1984 in the drive to balance the federal budget.

And that still may not be enough to hold the 1982 deficit to the $42.5 billion promised by Reagan, administration officials say.

"That is still our goal," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Tuesday as Reagan prepared to end his month-long California vacation and fly east today. "But we have to face reality."

Some senior administration officials, who declined to be identified, said that without further cuts the deficit could soar above $60 billion.

In Milwaukee, budget director David A. Stockman said the administration would unveil its latest plan in a week or so.

He said a possibility was the wholesale elimination of federal agencies and further cuts in the federal work force. CBS reported Tuesday that 70,000 to 80,000 federal jobs would be eliminated.

The Chicago Tribune quoted administration sources today as saying that from 80,000 to 100,000 positions would be cut, with the departments of education and energy bearing the brunt.

Responding to a question from South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow at a Midwestern governors' meeting, Stockman said, "We are going to announce some changes in federal employment levels and agency termination levels that will warm your hearts, even in the middle of winter in South Dakota."

Ed Dale, an Office of Management and Budget spokesman, refused to say how much more would be cut from the budget but said every agency would be vulnerable.

"The president is going to take a sharp knife on these 1982 budgets in order to hold the line," Speakes said. "We realize it's going to be a difficult job."

He said Reagan would be looking for further savings in already hard-hit social programs and probably would make cuts "across the board" in every department and agency.

Earlier, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III said Reagan had agreed to trim $20 billion to $30 billion from his record military spending plans for 1983 and 1984. Another $45 billion would be cut in those years from already-paired social programs.

Speakes said Reagan will hold a Cabinet meeting in Washington on Sept. 10 to consider the budget cuts.

The flaw in Reagan's budget plans, Speakes said, is the persistence of higher-than-expected interest rates.

Haynes to file civil suit in Grandstaff shooting

A civil case involving "wrongful death" will be filed by Houston attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes unless evidence turns up that points to criminal negligence in the shooting death of 6666 Ranch foreman James Grandstaff on Aug. 11, in Carson County.

"We don't know when we will be filing the suit," Haynes said today.

An investigator for Haynes has been in Borger questioning all sources in the case.

"He will be back there sometime to see what else we can find out," Haynes said.

"It just seems that certain things in the case peak the interest. The fact that they moved the pickups driven by Grandstaff and Cox from the scene is very interesting. They cite the fact that it was raining as the reason there are no photos of the actual placement of the trucks," Haynes said.

"But as far as I can tell, even if it is raining, you can take a photo, or at least realize that it will stop raining sometime," Haynes said.

Haynes said that he has been retained in the case by Mrs. Grandstaff.

James Grandstaff was fatally shot when he apparently came upon a police search for a fleeing fugitive near his 6666 ranch house. Borger police officers apparently thought Grandstaff was the Oklahoma fugitive who fired at them while leading them on a high speed chase through Hutchinson County and Carson County.

The shooting death investigation was taken to the Carson County Grand Jury, and no indictments were returned during the two-day session. The grand jury did request additional information about the shooting and will reconvene when the information is available.

The case of the Oklahoma fugitive Lonnie Cox and the high speed chase were taken to Hutchinson County Grand Jury where two indictments of aggravated assault were handed down.

Wife and ex-husband arrested in murder of former Pampan

BORGER — A former Pampan, Carroll Lee Hudson, 38, was found dead of multiple gunshot wounds, sitting in his vehicle parked on a rural road north of Borger Tuesday morning. Hudson's wife and her ex-husband have been charged with murder in connection with the shooting, Borger police said today.

Janet Marilyn Hudson, 32, and Michael Lynn Bridges Sr., 35, of Borger were arrested at 12:30 a.m. Tuesday by Borger city police. Bond was set at $50,000 each by City Magistrate Jim Layton.

Hudson has been transferred to Spearman Jail, while Bridges was taken to Hutchinson County Jail in Stinnett in lieu of the bail. Hutchinson County Sheriff Lon Blackmon said today. He said Hudson was taken to Spearman because the Stinnett facility has no place for women prisoners.

Borger police today said officers had arrested a traffic violator in Borger who told them of a situation involving the Hudson family. At this time, Hudson and Bridges drove up and were arrested.

A Hutchinson County deputy sheriff later found Hudson's body in his car on a country road on the north edge of Borger, one mile south of the old county dump, police said. Hudson had been shot "multiple" times, police said.

A .22 caliber handgun was taken as evidence, police said.

Justice of the Peace Nadin Spinks pronounced Hudson dead at the scene and ordered an autopsy by the Borger pathologist at North Plains Hospital.

Officials said the autopsy report has not been returned.

The Hudsons lived northeast of Borger, west of the Phillips Refinery, police said. Officers said they did not know how long the couple had been married.

Services for Hudson are pending with Alexander Funeral Directors of Borger.

Hudson was born in Pampa and moved to Borger when he was five years old. He attended Borger High School and worked for Phillips Petroleum Company five years as an operator at the Rock Creek plant.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, Michelle Hudson of California; his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Young of Borger; his father, Thomas Hudson of Pampa; three brothers, Edsel Hudson of Tulsa, Okla., Melvin Hudson and Bobby Hudson, both of Borger; and a sister, Mrs. Yvonne Brey of Crosby.

Medfly outbreak blamed on fertile flies

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — The California medfly infestation can largely be blamed on the intentional release of thousands of flies from Peru that were supposed to be sterile, officials have confirmed.

The Mediterranean fruit fly population exploded in late June after more than 50,000 insects supposedly sterilized in a Peruvian laboratory were released in Northern California. The batch was among 4.5 billion flies intended to halt the spread of the insects without aerial pesticide spraying.

Medfly project chief Jerry Scribner said Tuesday the renewed outbreak was "95 percent caused by an accidental release of at least 50,000 fertile flies from Peru."

The fertile batch was released June 14. Some of the flies undoubtedly mated before release, said spokeswoman Annie Zeller. The population explosion started within two weeks.

The analysis came as three more medflies were found in Los Angeles, where the pest emerged over a week ago, and as the Nevada Agriculture Department announced it would set traps to learn if motorists are crossing the state line with the pest.

Twenty flies have been found in Los Angeles County within the last two weeks, but County Agriculture Chief Paul Engler said he was "cautiously optimistic" that officials have the upper hand.

California officials say they will almost double the number of traps in the state, from 80,000 to 150,000. The $4.5 million cost probably will be picked up by the U.S. Agriculture Department.

AWACs restricted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Undersecretary of State James L. Buckley today listed broad restrictions, including "stringent security protections and limitations on operations," on President Reagan's proposed sale of sophisticated radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

Buckley said "detailed arrangements" have been worked out but did not reply when asked if the Saudis have agreed to them in writing.

He was interviewed on ABC's "Good Morning America" along with Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., an opponent of the proposed sale who said, "I want to see something in writing."

Safe driving urged over Labor Day

AUSTIN — Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) officials predict 48 fatalities in accidents on the state's streets and highways during the coming Labor Day weekend.

Texas DPS director Colonel Jim Adams warns that unless drivers are especially cautious, the 78-hour weekend beginning at 6 p.m. Friday could be a replay of the tragic July 4 weekend.

"Traffic accidents during the last July 4th weekend took a total of 60 lives, 16 more than had been estimated," he says.

Drunk driving and excessive speed were the major contributing factors in the fatal accidents recovered over the holiday, according to data supplied by the DPS Statistical Services Division.

None of the drivers or passengers killed during the Independence Day holiday were wearing seatbelts. In addition, 35 percent of these fatalities resulted from the person being thrown from the vehicle.

"Last year in Texas, about 1200 lives would have been saved if all occupants of passenger vehicles had used safety belts," Adams says.

DPS Regional Commanders have been instructed to use additional highway patrol troopers during the three-day Labor Day holiday.

"DPS patrol officers will be enforcing the laws and assisting motorists by watching for drivers who exceed the speed limit and those impaired by alcohol or drugs," Adams says. They will also be looking for vehicle defects, he adds.

Adams says Operation Motorcade will be in effect from 6 p.m. Friday until midnight Sept. 7.

During the July 4 holiday, 73 percent of the fatal accidents occurred between 8 p.m. and 4 a.m.

Khadafy threatens attack of Mediterranean nuclear depots

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) - Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy threatened to attack American nuclear arms depots around the Mediterranean if the U.S. Navy again challenges his control of the disputed Gulf of Sidra.

"We are warning the peoples of Sicily, Crete, Turkey and all the states of the Mediterranean that if America again attacks the Gulf of Sidra, then we will intentionally attack the nuclear depots in their countries and cause an international catastrophe," Khadafy declared in a speech Tuesday on the 12th anniversary of his overthrow of King Idris.

"We are willing to die for the Gulf of Sidra," he declared. "We will make the Gulf of Sidra into a new Red Sea with our blood."

It was over the disputed gulf some 50 miles off the Libyan coast that two U.S. Navy jet fighters shot down two Libyan fighters that fired on them during Navy maneuvers on Aug. 19. The Reagan administration held the maneuvers in the northern part of the gulf as a challenge to Khadafy's eight-year-old claim, which no other nation recognizes.

Khadafy also told a crowd of 25,000 in Tripoli's Green Square Libya will not lower its oil price under any circumstances, even though its production and revenues are way off because of the worldwide oil glut.

"Maybe we won't sell our oil for one, two or three years," he said, "and we will live in austerity for this period, but we will never kneel."

Diplomatic sources estimate Libyan oil revenues for the second half of 1981 at $4 billion to $5 billion, compared to $8 billion in the second half of 1980.

The North African nation, which sells about 475,000 barrels a day to the United States, charges $40 a barrel for its high-grade oil, the highest price in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Algeria and Nigeria also charged $40, and there were predictions that Libya and Algeria would be forced to come down after Nigeria cut its price to $36 a barrel last week.

Khadafy also attacked President Reagan in his speech, saying "He was a failure as an actor, and now he is a failure as a president. I am surprised he leads the greatest state in the world."

The anniversary celebration included a three-hour military review during which Soviet-built tanks and missiles rumbled past the reviewing stand and air force planes bowed from the Soviet Union flew overhead.

Also in the parade were two dozen American jeeps and scores of other American, Japanese, British and West German vehicles.

"You can buy anything if you have the money," said Khaliffa el Azzabi, the director of foreign information.

Nazi slave-labor boss dies at age 76 on visit to London

LONDON (AP) - Albert Speer, the Nazi slave-labor boss who spurred German war production despite massive Allied air raids, died during a visit to London, the city blitzed by the bombs and rockets of the war machine he ran. He was 76.

Speer, whose post-war memoirs provided the most detailed account of the inner working of the Third Reich and made him a rich man, died Tuesday of an apparent stroke.

The man who once said he was "mesmerized" by Adolf Hitler and served him as chief architect and production chief, was in Britain for a television interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

After recording the first segment of the interview Tuesday morning, Speer returned to London's Park Court Hotel, where he collapsed in the afternoon. He was taken unconscious to St. Mary's Hospital and died there at 8:30 p.m., 2:30 p.m. EDT, the hospital said.

The BBC said Speer was being interviewed for a documentary about Hitler's proposed cultural center in the dictator's hometown of Linz, Austria. Speer, the project's chief architect, was questioned by Cambridge University historian Norman Stone, who said the ex-Nazi "showed no sign of strain."

Speer, who engineered Hitler's rise to power and later put his organizational skills to work running the Third Reich's enormous industrial complex, was convicted by the Nuremberg War Crimes tribunal in 1946 of crimes against humanity.

Described at Nuremberg as one of Hitler's "closest personal confidants," Speer was convicted for his expansion of the slave labor system, using civilians from occupied countries to power the Nazi war machine. The only senior Nazi to admit responsibility for his crimes, Speer served a 20 year sentence at Spandau Prison in West Berlin.

Speer was born March 19, 1905, the son of a prominent architect in Mannheim. As a young architect in 1931, two years before Hitler rose to power, Speer joined the Nazi Party and rose quickly through the ranks on the basis of his expertise in organizing the giant rallies that marked Hitler's ascension.

While still in his 20s, Speer was given the task of designing a new Berlin, complete with a quarter-mile-long marble chancellery, that was to reflect Hitler's view of Nazi grandeur. Like most of the dictator's other projects, the Berlin development was stalled when Germany invaded Poland on Sept. 1, 1939, starting World War II.

Three years into the war, Speer became Hitler's minister for armaments. Under his leadership, German aircraft production rose from 12,400 planes in 1941 to 45,000 in 1944 despite round-the-clock Allied bombing of German manufacturing centers. Some experts say Speer's production expertise extended the war by two years.

In his memoirs, part of which were smuggled out of prison, Speer claimed that toward the end of the war he turned against Hitler's policies, and entertained ideas of pumping gas in the Fuehrer's bunker. However, he said Hitler's power over him persisted.

Speer's death leaves former Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess as the only senior member of the Nazi hierarchy still alive.

South Africa captures Soviet officer, two killed in invasion

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) - South Africa captured a Soviet sergeant major and killed two Soviet lieutenant colonels during its Angolan invasion, a Defense Ministry spokesman said today.

In a telephone interview from Pretoria, the spokesman said Sgt. Maj. Nikolai Fyodorovich Pestretsov, who was earlier identified as a warrant officer, was captured during a skirmish in Angola about 30 miles north of the South-West African border.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, did not provide names of the slain Soviet officers or details of their deaths.

He said more than half of the South African forces in Angola had been withdrawn and the rest would be pulled out "according to schedule." He could not say when the troops would return to South-West Africa because they were "still having problems with land mines."

An informed source estimated that the force totaled 4,000 when the invasion began Aug. 24. South Africa's defense minister said Tuesday that the Soviet casualties in Angola prove the Namibian guerrillas are controlled and supported by the Soviet Union.

"There can be no doubt that the terrorist organization SWAPO is controlled by and given ideological and material support by the Soviet Union," said Defense Minister Magnus Malan in a statement.

"Earlier, it was generally believed and acclaimed that Soviet Russia was only indirectly involved, but now the opposite has been proved, namely the direct involvement of military personnel on the lower levels of terrorist movements."

SWAPO is the South-West Africa Peoples Organization, which has been fighting a bush war for 15 years to try to end South Africa's control of South-West Africa, or Namibia, as the big territory between South Africa and Angola is called by black Africa and the United Nations.

South African forces make periodic raids into Angola to attack SWAPO bases there. This time, informed sources reported, the chief targets were radar and anti-aircraft missile batteries installed by the Soviet Union and its East European allies in southern Angola to aid SWAPO and the Angolan army.

The South Africans advanced more than 60 miles into Angola, then announced last weekend that they were withdrawing. A field commander of the invasion force told visiting reporters that the radar installations and missile batteries were destroyed and an estimated 450 Angolan troops and SWAPO guerrillas were killed.

South Africa said Tuesday that its forces had not completed their withdrawal because land mines were delaying them.

In Washington, a senior Reagan administration official said the Soviet Union and East Germany have had 1,000 advisers in Angola for some time, assisting Angola's Marxist government and the Namibian guerrillas. He said the Soviet Union is a major supplier of arms to the Angolans, and some of these are being used by SWAPO.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union accused the U.S. government of displaying a "high-handed disregard" of world opinion by vetoing a U.N. Security Council resolution condemning the South African invasion of Angola.

"Even the United States' closest NATO allies have not dared to challenge the world public so blatantly," said the official Soviet news agency Tass.

The United States said it vetoed the resolution Monday night because it did not mention the estimated 20,000 Cuban troops in Angola and the Soviet military advisers there as contributors to the situation in the area.

The other two members of the North Atlantic Alliance on the Security Council are Britain and France. Britain abstained on the vote while France voted for the resolution along with the other 12 members of the council.

Iran elects new prime minister; 55 executed since assassinations

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Iran's Parliament elected Ayatollah Mohammad Reza Mahdavi Kani prime minister today, and Tehran Television announced the execution of 55 more leftists since the assassination of Kani's predecessor and President Mohammad Ali Rajai two days ago.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, said the Majlis endorsed Kani, a 50-year-old religious and political leader, by a vote of 178-10 with eight abstentions. However, Tehran Radio reported a vote of 178-0, with 10 absentees and eight abstentions.

Kani succeeds Mohammad Javad Bahonar, who was killed with Rajai Sunday by a fire bomb at the prime ministry in Tehran. Bahonar succeeded Rajai as prime minister, and Kani was interior minister in both their cabinets. Meanwhile, Tehran Television announced 55 more opponents of the government from the leftist Mujahadeen-Khalq had been executed in 10 cities since the assassinations Sunday. The announcement gave no details.

This raised the total number of announced executions to 531 since the underground guerrilla organization launched a campaign of assassination and sabotage following the ouster of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr on June 22. But Mujahadeen leader Masoud Rajavi, who escaped to France with Bani-Sadr July 29, claims that more than 700 of his guerrillas have been executed.

The Majlis vote was never in doubt since Kani was the choice of the clergy-dominated Islamic Republican Party, which has an overwhelming majority in Parliament and the full support of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the supreme leader of the revolutionary regime.

Kani studied theology under Khomeini and was jailed and banished during the reign of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The Majlis empowered him to form a new cabinet that will schedule the election of a new president not later than Oct. 19, 50 days after Rajai's death. Meanwhile, the new prime minister becomes a member of the Presidency Council, which is exercising the presidential powers.

Solidarity gets 20 minutes of prime time

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Poland's communist regime reluctantly gave Solidarity 20 minutes of national TV and radio time, and Lech Walesa used it to say his 10 million union members want to serve their country, not take over the government.

"If there are problems we should sit down and talk," the chief of the independent labor federation said in the prime-time broadcast Tuesday night. "There is no time for stupid polemics, no time for accusing us of wanting to take over power, because we don't want power, we want to serve the community." The labor leader said Solidarity is demanding its own regular TV and radio programs and newspaper columns not to attack the government but to "explain things."

"We are not concerned about taking over power," he declared. "We want fast communications... We have plenty on paper but in life we have less and less... (there is) nothing in the shops, and life is becoming worse. We are not steering toward confrontations, we want to dominate this disquiet."

In an interview published Monday, Walesa told the Roman Catholic newspaper Slowo Powszechnie: "The authorities are losing social acceptance and social support. This situation forces us to take upon ourselves responsibility for the fate of the nation."

The government gave Solidarity the TV and radio time after a printer's strike two weeks ago kept newspapers off the streets for two days and the union threatened to black out the mass media.

Cleanup begins as flooding moves south

By The Associated Press
The rain-swollen Lavaca and Guadalupe rivers chased South Texans to higher ground for a second day as they churned over their banks downstream from where floodwaters claimed the lives of at least five people.

In Cuero, the steadily rising Guadalupe River Tuesday flooded parts of the city about 80 miles southeast of San Antonio.

The National Weather Service said the Guadalupe River had fallen to 41.5 feet at Cuero early today. The river is at or near crest and should remain at or near 41.5 feet today.

At Victoria, the Guadalupe reached 30 feet early today and was expected to crest at 30.5 feet sometime Thursday.

Most of the heavy rainfall had ended before dawn today, but forecasters said the flooding would continue for some time.

"Several river additions are completely under water," said Dewitt County Sheriff Bob McMahan. "And some livestock have been lost down the river."

No injuries were reported and residents were warned in time to evacuate their homes and save most of their property, officials said.

Rampaging floods, triggered by a tropical depression that dumped up to 18 inches of rain over parts of South Texas, claimed five lives Monday, including three teen-age brothers.

Hundreds of evacuated residents in Gonzales and Lavaca counties returned home Tuesday to start massive cleanup operations and survey the damage from the muddy torrents.

Lavaca County Sheriff Hilmer Woytek said evacuated residents of a nursing home and county jail inmates remained in temporary shelters Tuesday in Hallettsville.

"We had 6 feet of water in the jail. It's the worst we've ever had," he said.

Cuero officials opened a center for evacuees early Tuesday afternoon, although most schools were able to hold classes, said McMahan.

He said county jail inmates accompanied sheriff's officials to help families move valuables and furniture.

Most residents in Lavaca County, where flooding was most severe, had no flood insurance, officials said.

"Fifty or 60 homes were flooded here," said Shiner city secretary Ila Stratman. "That water's a bad thing. Flood insurance is so terribly high and hardly any company will write it (for areas near rivers)."

Three Shiner youths drowned Monday when fast-rising waters swept away a home where they had taken refuge, officials said.

Gregory Hights, 16, said his three brothers were carried away by swirling waters that demolished their mobile home.

Hights said he and his brothers, Glenn, 17, Johnnie, 15, and Bradford, 12, had gone to a nearby frame house after their mobile home was flooded out early Monday morning.

Hights and his 15-year-old brother crawled onto the roof before the murky water carried the house downstream, tearing it apart, he said.

"I was with Johnnie on the roof when he fell off," Hights said. "He was calling my name. He said, 'Greg, Greg.' — I couldn't do anything."

The 16-year-old survivor was found clinging to a tree by rescuers who had tried in vain to reach all four youths before the house was swept away.

Authorities said the bodies of Samuel Goode, 27, of Hallettsville, and Herman Rayne of Yoakum were discovered Tuesday morning near flooded Rocky Creek.

Lavaca County Sheriff's officials said the two men were in separate vehicles and were swept away while trying to cross the rain-swollen creek on U.S. Highway 77.

Forecasts called for mostly cloudy skies over the state today with scattered showers and thunderstorms expected over Southwest Texas, South Central Texas and East Texas.

Hights were to be mostly in the 80s and 90s except in the Big Bend area where highs were to be near 100.

Most of the heavy rainfall in southern and southeastern sections of the state ended before dawn today, but a few showers lingered in Southwest Texas near San Angelo and heavy thunderstorms developed in North Texas, north of the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Dense fog was reported in Northeast Texas.

Indictment expected in Martin shooting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Charles Goff's story about shooting his cousin Rep. Mike Martin in a "controlled hit" has not been contradicted by any testimony grand jurors have heard, an investigator said.

Austin Police Lt. Pete Neal said Tuesday it "was a possibility" grand jurors would return a felony indictment in the case, and it would "more than likely" name only one defendant.

He said the indictment probably would stem from the investigation — not the shooting — indicating it could be a perjury charge.

Neal said Goff probably would not be charged in Travis county.

Grand jurors have looked at Martin's financial records, but Neal said, "I don't think right now there is going to be anything come out of the investigation of the finances."

Martin, 29, R-Longview, was wounded in the elbow by shotgun fire on July 31 near his recreational vehicle here. At first he said he did not know who shot him or why. Later he said he was the target of a hit man for the "Guardian Angels of the Underworld," a satanic cult.

Now Martin says the shooting is related to Gregg County politics.

Goff, who testified to the grand jury last week, said Martin asked him to be the gunman in a "controlled hit" intended as a political stunt to gain publicity for Martin.

Neal, who has worked on the case since the day of the shooting, emerged from the grand jury room Tuesday and said investigators had found "nothing" to disprove Goff's claim.

"His story was the thing that brought the investigation to an end," Neal said.

The lieutenant said there were some problems with Martin's story about the shooting since the first day.

"I think we all probably kind of felt that way. There were things that just didn't make any sense," he said.

Assistant District Attorney Allen Hill would not comment on the possibility of an indictment. He agreed with Neal that there was no felony committed at the trailer park where the shooting occurred.

Hill said any indictment would be returned on Thursday at the earliest.

The prosecutor said he has not offered to drop the case if Martin would resign his House seat.

"Because of all the confusion, statements and misstatements... and the doubts raised by some about the adequacy and integrity of the police investigation... it would be in everybody's interest for this matter to be fully resolved," Hill said.

Martin, who ignored one subpoena and avoided another, testified before the grand jury last week. Neal said Martin answered some questions. The investigator would not say if Martin invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination to avoid any questions.

Cousins rest case in Hughes estate battle

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for Howard Hughes' five first cousins took a parting shot at the claims of 100 distant relatives and then bowed to allow another group of would-be heirs to present its side in the bitter estate battle for the billionaire's fortune.

Wayne Fisher, who is defending the claims of two of the first cousins, rested his case Tuesday after producing documents and clippings he said virtually destroyed the case of 100 distant cousins.

"What it all boils down to is evidence. We've got birth certificates after death certificates, letters and photographs. That's hard evidence. And all they have are excuses because they don't have documents, rumors and innuendos to explain their case," said Fisher.

Robert C. Hughes and about 100 other second, third and fourth cousins contended the late Elspeth Hughes Lapp — who provides the blood link for the first cousins' estate claims — was an impostor and not the true daughter of the tycoon's uncle, New York playwright Rupert Hughes.

Robert C. Hughes testified Tuesday that Rupert's natural daughter was named Lelia Babcock Hughes and that she drowned in 1920. He said Elspeth was the daughter of Rupert's third wife and was substituted for Lelia.

But the Alabama high school agriculture teacher said the documents that would have supported the argument of the distant relatives were stored in a family truck that burned in 1940.

Fisher, however, introduced documents and clippings that identified Lelia as the daughter of a prominent St. Louis, Mo., family unrelated to Hughes.

Robert C. Hughes, appeared unshaken by the clippings and documents, insisted his story was true and added, "It is my hope to still put the real story before this court."

Justices sworn for appeals cases

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' new court system of appealing criminal cases to 14 Courts of Appeals throughout the state began Tuesday with the swearing in of 23 new justices for the intermediate courts.

The new justices, all appointed by Gov. Bill Clements as authorized by the 1981 Legislature, join the justices already serving on the 14 former Courts of Civil Appeals.

Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Joe Greenhill told the appointees the new appeals system was "the most advance step forward for the Texas judiciary in 100 years."

Greenhill administered the oath.

"I assure you, you were chosen on your merit, on the quality of the person involved," said Clements.

Clements said he knew only two of the judges before they were appointed. All must be approved by the Texas Senate when it meets again.

Making Texas' 14 Courts of Civil Appeals into a system of intermediate courts of appeals was approved by voters in a 1980 state constitution change.

Formerly, all appeals of criminal cases went direct from district courts to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which is swamped with a backlog of more than 3,000 cases.

Appeals of judgments handed down by the Courts of Appeals can be carried on in criminal cases to the Court of Criminal Appeals and in civil cases to the state Supreme Court.

Former Cannon commander injured in West Germany

CANNON AIR FORCE BASE, N.M. (AP) — A U.S. Air Force brigadier general who was injured when an explosion rocked the headquarters of the U.S. and NATO air commands in West Germany was assigned to Cannon Air Force Base for 1/2 years.

Brig. Gen. Joseph D. Moore was assigned to the 27th Tactical Fighter Wing at Cannon from November 1977 until May 1979, officials said.

Moore suffered a shattered right knee and a chest wound involving the rib cage, which subsequently caused one lung to collapse, when the explosion took place Monday at Ramstein Air Force Base, said Moore's wife, Beverly.

Moore, 46, underwent surgery and was out of the intensive care unit Tuesday.

He said from Ramstein in a telephone interview with the Clovis News-Journal.

Moore, currently assistant deputy chief of staff for operations at Ramstein, is doing well but will be hospitalized from 2-3 weeks, Mrs. Moore said.

While assigned to Cannon, Moore led the first deployment of F-111D fighters overseas, officials said.

Col. Kirk James, the current commander of the 27th Tactical Fighter Wing, said, "On behalf of the men and women of the 27th TFW, I wish to express our concern and well wishes for all injured by the explosion at Ramstein Air Force Base, Germany."

"I am particularly saddened that Brig. Gen. Joe Moore, former 27th TFW commander, was among those seriously injured."

West German authorities said the explosion appeared to be the work of terrorists who planted a bomb beneath an automobile.

Witnesses said the bomb, which went off as the first stream of civilians and military personnel were reporting for work, shattered car windshields and blew out windows and interior walls in nearby buildings.

OPINION PAGE

Thumbs-up feeling

It's far too soon, of course, to conclude that President Reagan's policies have rescued the nation's economy from the twin curses of inflation and stagnation. The proof, if and when it comes, won't be available for a year or more.

Even so, there's a decidedly refreshing optimism in the air that contrasts sharply with the pervasive gloom and doom of a year ago.

A 1980 New York Times - CBS poll found that two-thirds of Americans were markedly pessimistic about the future well-being of both themselves and their country. That same question drew dramatically different answers in June. By a 2 to 1 margin, those polled reflected a new thumbs-up feeling that things were, in fact, getting better.

It can't be entirely coincidental that some significant economic indicators are showing heartening improvement as well. Inflation declined to an annual rate of 7.4 percent for the second quarter of this year. If the new mortgage loan rates that affect relatively few consumers are subtracted from the Consumer Price Index, the inflation rate for most families fell to 6.5 percent during April, May and June. And more encouraging, the inflation rate for July dropped to 5.5 percent.

Gold and silver prices - indirect inverse barometers of the strength of the American economy - plummeted during the last 12 months. A conclusive measure of international confidence in the world's largest economy is the strength of the dollar in foreign money markets. And for most of this summer, the dollar has been ringing up successive highs against the German mark and the Japanese yen.

Unemployment, the traditional price paid for fighting inflation, is declining. The July figure of 7 percent is the lowest in 15 months.

In one sense, these heartening indicators tell us little about what Reagan's supply side economics will mean for the economy. The tax and budget cuts the president won from Congress won't begin to affect the economy until later this year.

But the psychological boost provided by Reagan's leadership, and the new discipline he has prompted in Congress, is indeed making itself felt.

And the results constitute the kind of good news for which we've been waiting a long, long time.

Democratic debacles

Any number of public opinion polls, not to mention the one recorded at the ballot box last November, suggest that the middle class is increasingly deserting the Democratic party.

And no wonder. Voters rightly hold the Democrats primarily responsible for the inflation, punitive levels of taxation, and intrusive government that is the tangible legacy of New Deal liberalism.

Reagan, disparaged by the Kennedy - Mondale - O'Neill wing of the Democratic party as a political accident, offered something the Democrats could not match - the plausible promise of an American renaissance.

It is worth noting that throughout the tax and budget battles of the last few months on Capitol Hill, the various Democratic alternatives were never more than watered down versions of what the president himself was proposing.

In truth, Reagan's party has captured not only the White House, the Senate, and a working coalition majority in the House, but the political agenda as well.

House Speaker Tip O'Neill, the very caricature of the New Deal Democrat, is known to believe that all of this is nothing more than a political aberration palmed off on the nation by an ex-actor's skillful use of television.

He's dead wrong. The Democratic debacles of 1980 and 1981 are but the culmination of a slide that began a decade ago.

The percentage share of the popular vote won by Democratic presidential candidates in the last four elections has been 43, 38, 50 and 41. And the 1980 election not only saw the Republicans take control of the Senate for the first time since 1952, but also win a full 50 percent of all votes cast for U.S. representatives.

While the Democratic party is hardly dead, it does have a profound problem. The New Deal coalition that kept it in power for most of the last half century is history, and there is nothing on the horizon to take its place.

Time to repeal a costly law

There is a little old porker in Washington known as the Davis-Bacon Act.

It is a law that has so much fat built into it that it is costing the taxpayers of this country upwards of $2 billion a year.

The law requires that "prevailing wages" be paid to workers on federally financed construction projects. Those "prevailing wages," however, are determined by the U.S. Department of Labor and that department usually simply sets the "prevailing wage" at the union wage level, even though the true prevailing wage might be considerably lower than the union scale.

The Wall Street Journal, in an editorial on April 22, illustrated the problem with a story. E. D. Plummer, a paving company in Washington Township, Pa., a rural community of 9,600 about 130 miles from Philadelphia, does a lot of road work. On private jobs, Ken Plummer Sr. pays flagmen $4 to $5 an hour, a decent wage for a flagman in Washington Township. But, when he does a government project, he must pay the flagman $10.80 an hour. Same man, same work, same flag, the Journal pointed out.

The difference is Davis - Bacon, and it is eating a hole in the wallet of the American taxpayer. It is not the contractor who pays the difference; it is the taxpayer. Nobody else.

In a 1979 report, the General Accounting Office, which serves as a watchdog for Congress, estimated that $500 million a year taxpayer money could be saved by repealing Davis - Bacon.

Then, a study by the American Enterprise Institute, a private research organization, indicated the saving could amount to $1 billion a year.

Now, it turns out that a Carter Administration study, which was kept under wraps, found that $1.9 billion a year is being spent unnecessarily under the Davis - Bacon Act and a similar measure enacted in 1965 - the Service Control Act - which requires payment of "prevailing wages" on government contracts for services.

It is not clear why the Carter Administration never released these findings, but a good guess is that it didn't want to offend union officials, who strongly support keeping these laws on the books.

Just whether the Davis - Bacon Act has ever done any good is debatable, but whether it is working harm is obvious.

When the Congress goes back to Washington after its August recess, one of its first official acts ought to be put the Davis - Bacon into the fire and let it fry.

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

Jim Martin has described the political "left" and the "right" as but "two wings on the same bird of prey." There is no doubt that both the "liberal" and "conservative" branches of the tyrannical power structure are bent on maintaining their own peculiar police-State systems. The "liberals," on the one hand, seek to subject the whole of the economic life of the nation to the detailed supervision of armies of government regulators. There is scarcely an area of economic life that is free of laws, regulations, rules, reports and other intrusions enforced by the people - pushers and transactions - snoopers of various administrative agencies.

The "conservatives," on the other hand, have always had their own strange brand of Statism. While demanding that the economy be "freed" of the "liberal" strain of tyranny, the "conservatives" have busy themselves with policing the personal, noneconomic behavior of men and women. While the "liberals" seem content to police the manner in which we produce and trade with one another, the "conservatives" are bent on regulating our sexual habits, our lifestyles and our political beliefs and practices.

Encouraged by the election of Ronald Reagan, a number of "conservative" groups seem to have declared war on the personal "liberation" that grew out of the 1960s. We are familiar, of course, with the anguished wrenchings of the Moral Malcontents. But another group of religious "conservatives," calling itself the Committee on Moral Concerns, has surfaced in California with a bill - now seeping onto the floor of the California legislature - that would require clergymen, doctors, nurses and teachers to report to police and other government agencies any suspected sexual activities engaged in by unmarried teenagers. Apparently not content to take backseat to the Ayatollah Khomeini in trying to turn back the clock and place women back in the medieval world of chastity belts and State-certified bundling boards, this group of self-proclaimed "moralists" is all together prepared to turn teachers, ministers and the family doctor into intelligence agents of the State in matters of sex. This crowd reminds me so much of H.L. Mencken's definition of a "puritan": "one who lives with the haunting fear that someone, somewhere may be happy."

Meanwhile, back in Washington, D.C., a Senate subcommittee - chaired by yet another "conservative," Alabama Senator Denton - has begun an investigation of terrorism and violence in society. While, on the surface, there might seem to be little objection in having the U.S. Senate deal with "terrorism," it is evident that the scope of this subcommittee's work will go beyond simply airline hijackings, bombings and assassinations. The committee chairman indicated that his group will be looking at those persons and organizations who have strong feelings of dissatisfaction with our present society. What with the political philosopher, Secretary of State Alexander Haig, offering up a rebash of the 1950s "all-our-troubles-are-the-product-of-Russian-conspiracies-and-intrigues" bilge, the entire venture is sure to call forth the spirits of Senator McCarthy and the House Un-American Activities committee, one again to pry into mailboxes, wastebaskets, and the inner recesses of men's minds.

And if the "conservative" police-State tactics should prove abusive of the limits on police set by those gawdawful "liberal" judges in the 1960s, fear not. President Reagan, in issuing pardons to two former high-ranking FBI officials convicted of authorizing secret break-ins, has let the rest of us know just what he meant when he campaigned on a platform of "freedom" and "law and order." What the president had in mind, apparently, was that the police should be "free" to impose the State's brand of "law and order" upon the rest of society. Employing the kind of logic that was totally rejected at the Nuremberg trials, Mr. Reagan declared that the FBI officials' actions were based on their "belief that they had grants of authority reaching to the highest levels of government."

We thus bear witness to the spectacle of a man who, like his immediate predecessor in office, was elected by men and women who believed in his rhetoric of "freedom" and opposition to the "powers of government." Just like Mr. Carter, Mr. Reagan is wasting little time in stripping his own words of meaning, giving to the very agents of State power an apparent license to do with the rest of us as they "think best."

And to think that it's all been done in the name of "morality." (Butler D. Shaffer teaches law at Southwestern University in Los Angeles.)

Public Schools under Fire

By OSCAR COOLEY

Are the public schools of the United States propaganda mills for statism? Samuel L. Blumenfeld holds that they are. It is the central theme of his book, "Is Public Education Necessary?" (Devlin - Adair, Old Greenwich, Conn. 06870.)

Blumenfeld has a point but he labors it. His book would be more effective if it were not so dogmatic. Americans are not so easily persuaded that Horace Mann was a socialist, nor do we easily conceive of New Harmony as "the beginning of the long road to the Gulag Archipelago."

But undeniably the public schools, in which most of us were schooled, are government owned and operated. Their costs are met by taxes, not tuition fees. Children are required to attend them or counterparts. They teach a uniform curriculum. And, generally speaking, they cast public education in a not unfavorable light.

However, the schools do not advocate Marxism, and they, like most American institutions, condemn communism and the doing of Soviet Russia. Many who attended public school are not aware of any serious conflict between the ideal of individual freedom and the teaching of the public schools.

In school we learned that this is "the land of the free." That its institutions - not least the public schools - are sound. They add up to the American way. In school we learned to pledge allegiance to the flag and to be prepared to fight and die for it if necessary.

Yet, it is indubitable, as Blumenfeld says, that our public schools are controlled by voters, not owners, and are financed by taxpayers, including corporations, not by parents as such. They are state, not private, enterprise.

They require children, up to a certain age, to go to school, a requirement a private school cannot exert. Americans accept this coercion because the vast majority believe all children, 6 to 16, should be in school. For their own good and for the good of the nation, all should learn the basics.

As to just what the basics include there is some disagreement. I learned, painfully, to do square root but cannot do it now because I later learned simpler ways of arriving at roots and powers. All will agree everyone should learn how to add, subtract, multiply, divide, and do percentage. Everyone who expects to get and spend money should understand decimals. All should learn how to read, write, and spell in the tongue of the land, which is English.

The public schools venture into far more than these basics. Should they? Why not let the parents decide how much more schooling their offspring should have?

Once, farm families wanted the child's labor on the land so much that some resented his being forced to spend his time in school instead. Some contended such work would better develop both his brawn and his brain.

Blumenfeld's book is well worth reading as a history of the beginnings of the public school system in America. The first schools set up in colonial Massachusetts were to inculcate the Puritan religion. In Ralph Waldo Emerson's time, the Unitarians introduced an unorthodox note, and the state school system, championed and energetically promoted by Horace Mann, was strongly secular. Freedom of religion, along with freedom of speech and press, was written into the first clause of the Bill of Rights. But the public schools, from long custom and to this day, pay at least lip service to Christianity.

The economic recession of 1980 - 81 has reduced the availability of tax revenues for schools. If, rather than cutting their services, the public schools charge tuition fees, they may move, as have the state universities, toward a pay - for - service system. If they do, they could hardly continue compulsory attendance. Public schools then would be hardly distinguishable from private schools.

Fair trial for whom?

All my life I have sat at the feet of some older man hungering to make his wisdom my own.

Having known little of my father (he was killed when I was three), I have tended to adopt other fathers:

Homer McKee, the uncommonly perceptive Hoosier Philosopher.
Judge H.I. Green of Danville, Ill., who looked like a Supreme Court justice should look and had a Lincoln-esque gift for reducing complexities to their elements.

More recently the late David Lawrence, publisher of U.S. News, and the retired editor of the Wall Street Journal, Vermont Royster.

Royster, in retirement, seems even more discerning.

Let me paraphrase him on the subject of crime and the courts.

At the scene of the attempted assassination of President Reagan there was a world of witnesses.

After multiple television replays, surely most everybody had formed conclusions about whether John Hinckley Jr. was guilty.

It is going to be ultimately easy for any defense attorney to argue that any jury is prejudiced. Hinckley cannot get "a fair trial."

A "fair trial" for whom? In current trial procedure a prospective juror may be disqualified if the lawyers think he may have knowledge or opinion about almost anything connected with the case.

That is a perversion of the jury system.

The "jurata" of Norman times, forerunner of the modern jury, were men carefully selected because they WERE familiar with the matters at issue.

In English common law jurymen were always freemen of the same county, chosen precisely because they would know something of the character and reliability of any witness - as well as of the accused.

When we drafted our Bill of Rights, the Sixth Amendment provided that the jury shall be drawn "from the state or district wherein the crime shall have been committed."

This was purposely to avoid putting the defendant's fate in the hands of some distant court knowing nothing of the accused, the circumstances, the witnesses.

Only recently has trial procedure been distorted.

Now what constitutes "a fair trial" requires a jury of ignoramuses. Impartial has come to mean ignorance.

In our preoccupation with the rights of the accused we have neglected the rights of the victim.

What about a fair trial for them? Mr. Royster says television coverage of historic crimes can be construed as prejudicing any prospective juror. If defendants can go free on that plea, then it's open season on presidents and popes.

Foreign investment groups bought blocks of Gulf stock

SPOKANE (AP) — Two major foreign investment concerns bought large blocks of Gulf Resource & Chemical Corp. stock just days before the Houston firm announced plans to shut down its Bunker Hill Co. mining and smelter complex in Kellogg, Idaho.

"Outsiders are buying up the stock," Spokane Stock Exchange Secretary Ben Harrison said Tuesday.

Large scale stock purchases were disclosed in filings required by the Securities and Exchange Commission for acquisitions exceeding 5 percent, he said.

"They want it for the coal and other energy holdings," he said.

The purchases were made by the London-based Hanson Trust and a Canadian investment combine composed of the Belzberg Interests of Vancouver, British Columbia, and HCI Holdings Ltd. of Toronto.

Hanson Trust bought 5 percent of Gulf Resources stock and the Canadian combine purchased over 6 percent, Harrison said.

The purchases were made prior to Aug. 25 when Gulf announced it planned to close Bunker Hill because the northern Idaho operation lost $8 million in the first half of this year and was costing the corporate parent $3 million a month.

Harrison said the billionaire Hunt family of Dallas still holds about 9 percent of Gulf's stock through Placid Oil Co., which was turned back in a bid to buy all outstanding Gulf stock for a reported price of $400 million.

The SEC report indicated that the Canadian combine did not expect to acquire more than 10 percent of Gulf's stock. The Wall Street Journal Tuesday reported that Hanson Trust's disclosure statement indicated that company might reduce or increase its stock in Gulf Resources at any time.

The Wall Street Journal also reported that Hanson Trust representatives and Gulf Resource officials met briefly on Aug. 20, but a Gulf spokesman later said no understandings or agreements came out of the session.

Some Spokane market analysts believe closure of the Bunker Hill complex could lure investors to Gulf. In addition to profitable coal operations, the company has substantial and growing oil and natural gas interests.

When Gulf executives announced plans to close the lead, zinc and silver mine in Kellogg, they said it was part of a new, long-range strategy to withdraw from the metals mining and refining business and expand its coal, oil and gas operations, which have been generating significant profits.

Stock price reaction to Gulf's decisions has been almost negligible on the Spokane Stock Exchange, Harrison said.

He said those in the know had anticipated the closure, so the market discounted the move. Now, investors are waiting to see what developments, he said.

Gulf stock closed at $26 a share on Aug. 25, the day the shutdown was announced, it closed at $25.25 Tuesday.

Washington Water Power Co. stock, which some thought might be affected by the closure, was also holding its own Tuesday at $16.50.

Bunker Hill is the utility's largest electricity and natural gas customer.

WWP Executive Vice President Paul A. Redmond said the utility anticipates "no impact on our stock prices or our ability to raise money."

"We also do not anticipate any layoffs or change in employment."

Mother who lost custody of sons critical after overdose

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman found unconscious just hours after a judge ordered her sons returned to their father in New York was listed in critical condition at a Houston hospital early today from an apparent drug overdose, hospital officials said.

Family Court Judge Bruce Wettman ordered Harriet Berne to surrender custody of her two sons Tuesday in a case that may have been the first test of a new federal law controlling the interstate flight of estranged parents with their children.

Houston fire department paramedic Walton Segree said he found the woman lying unconscious on her living room floor with three empty pill bottles nearby. Fire department dispatchers said they received a call from a man who reported an overdose.

Mrs. Berne had left Rochester, N.Y., with her sons two years ago despite a ruling by a New York court that gave custody of the children to her ex-husband, Dale Berne, 43.

Mrs. Berne, 37, was free on $3,000 bond pending an extradition hearing Thursday. She faces a state charge of custodial interference in New York and a federal charge of unlawful flight.

She was arrested last week in Houston, where she has lived and taught school since 1979 using the name Judy King, when police acted on a tip from a babysitter who recognized the boys' pictures in a magazine article about children kidnapped by their parents.

Berne said the arrest ended his two-year search for the couple's two sons.

Wettman said Tuesday he felt he had no choice but to return the children to their father.

"I felt like my hands were pretty well tied in what direction I had to take," he said.

Scott Berne, 11, tried to reassure his 7-year-old brother, Mark, who asked, "Can I say bye to my mother?"

Scott asked the judge, "Are we going to see her again?"

"Obviously the boys were upset," Wettman said. "It was probably the hardest job of the whole mess to see those kids. It will take time, but I feel they understand what happened, even though they are not real happy with it."

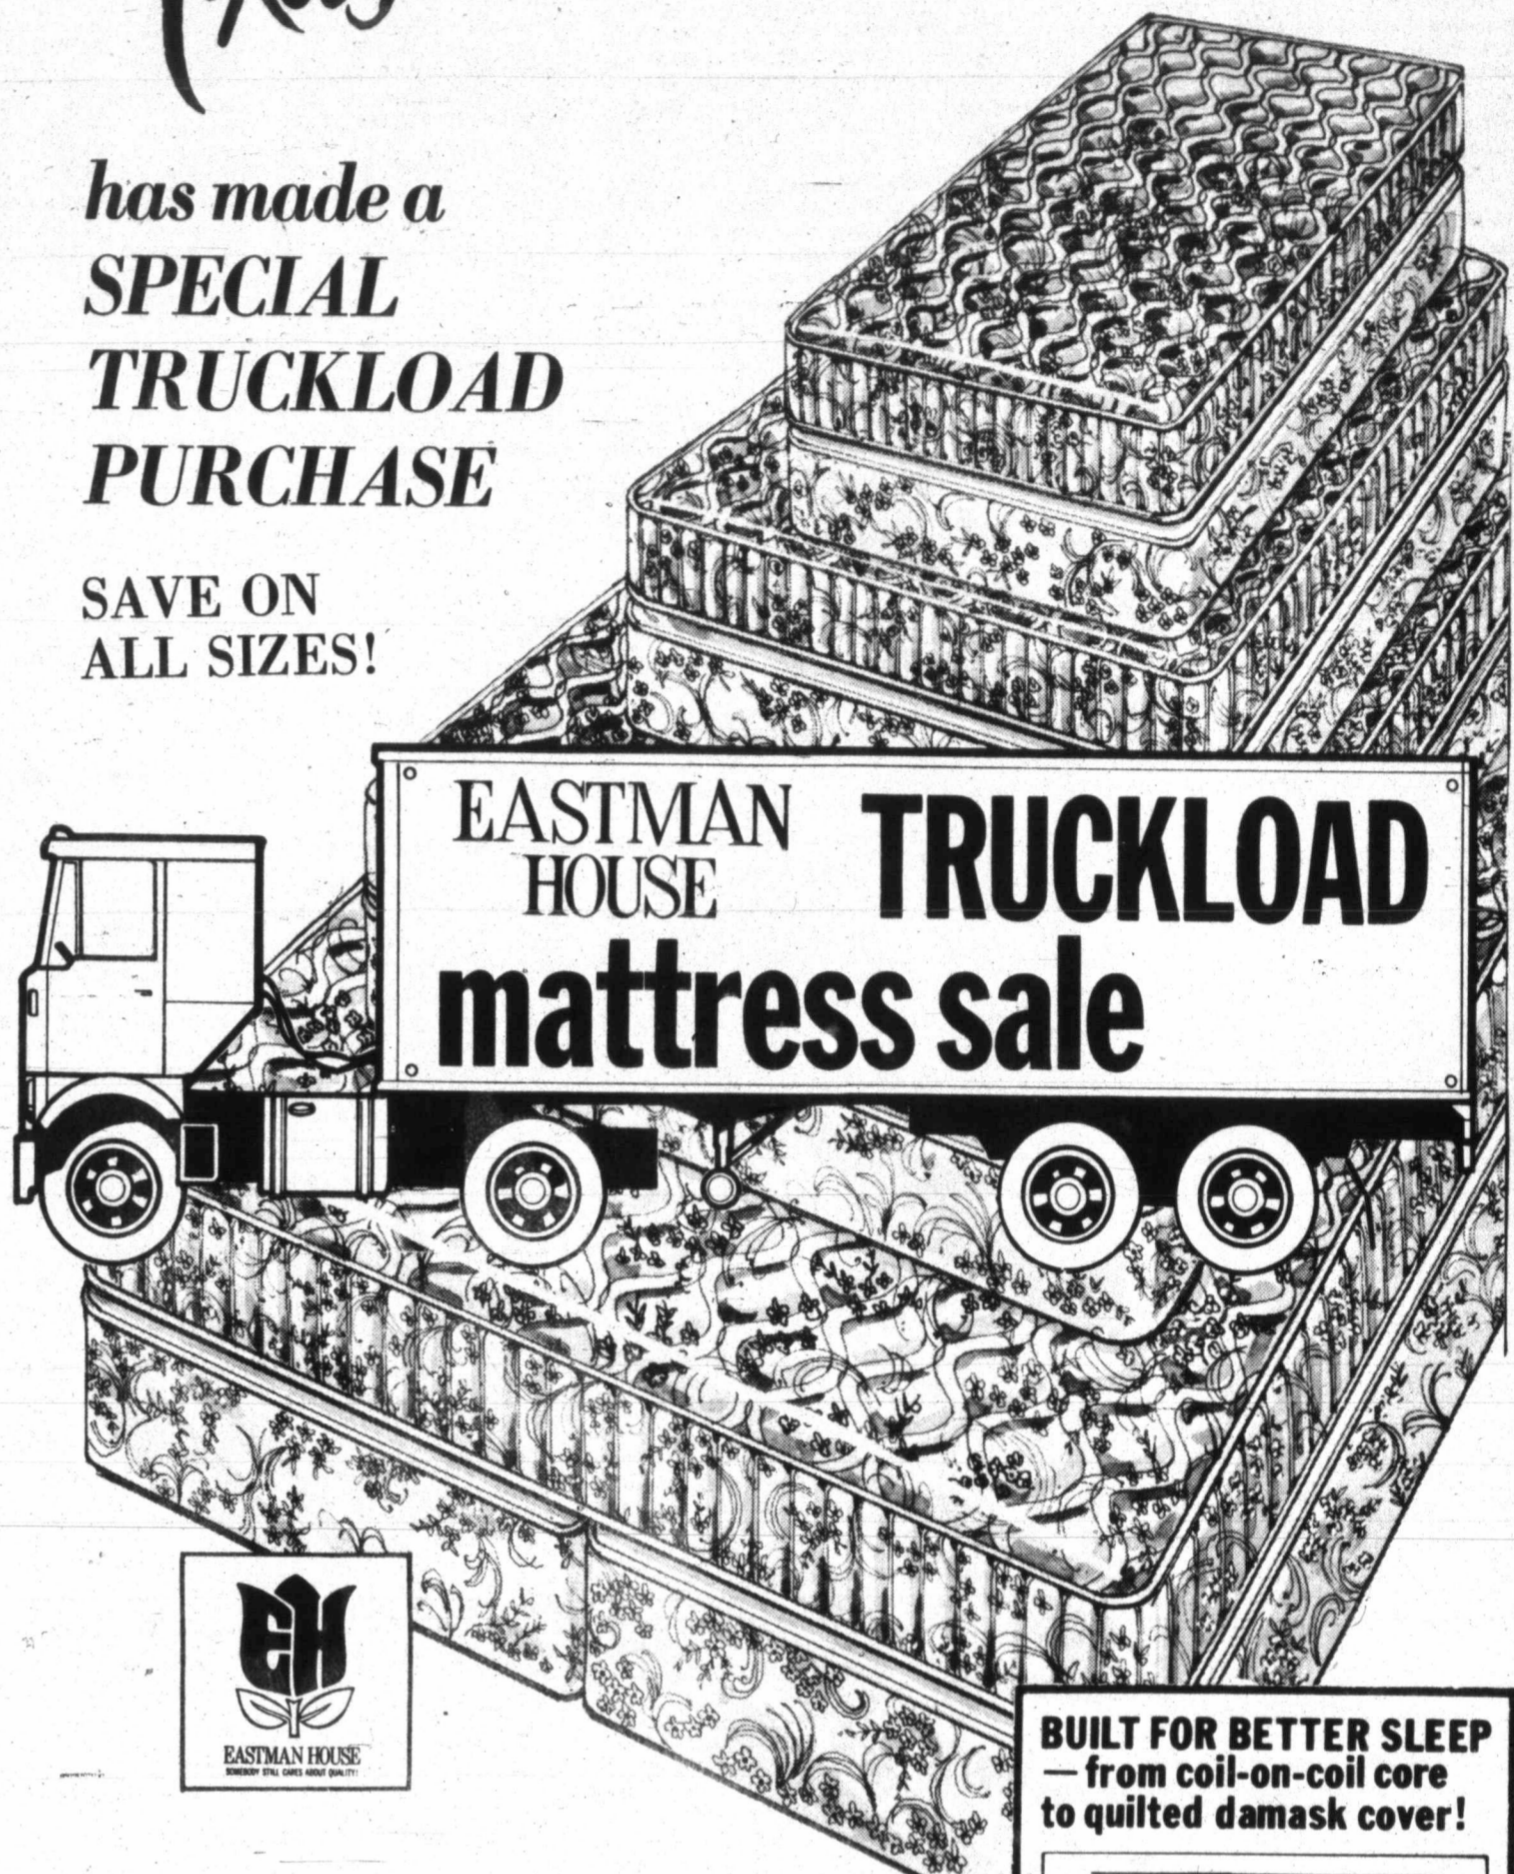

The judge asked Berne to "afford the mother the opportunity to properly part with the children."

Berne said he planned to return to Rochester Tuesday night.

Grocery prices show decrease in August

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Shoppers are finding lower prices at the supermarket — particularly for pork chops, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which shows grocery bills dropped by six-tenths of a percent during August.

More than one-fifth of the items checked by the AP declined in price last month and many of the decreases were substantial. In part, the price trends at the supermarket reflect what's happening on the nation's farms: The U.S. Department of Agriculture says farmers are getting paid less for many key crops than they were a year ago.

The AP drew up a random list of 14 commonly purchased food and non-food items and checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in four cities last month and decreased in eight cities. It was unchanged in the 13th city. Overall, the marketbasket bills decreased an average of six-tenths of a percent.

The marketbasket bill measured by the AP has declined in five of the first eight months of 1981, dropping in February, March, April and May, as well as in August. It increased in January, June and July.

Looking at prices for the past year, the AP found that the marketbasket went up at the checklist store in five cities over the last 12 months and decreased in eight cities. Overall, it was an average of 1.6 percent lower at the start of September than it was a year earlier.

Pork prices xm cit to the $42.5 billion promised by Reagan, administration officials say.

"That is still our goal," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Tuesday as Reagan prepared to end his month-long California vacation and fly east today. "But we have to face reality."

Some senior administration officials, who declined to be identified, said that without further cuts the deficit could soar above $60 billion.

In Milwaukee, budget director David A. Stockman said the administration would unveil its latest plan in a week or so.

He said a possibility was the wholesale elimination of federal agencies and further cuts in the federal work force. CBS reported Tuesday that 70,000 to 80,000 federal jobs would be eliminated.

Responding to a question from South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow at a Midwestern Governors meeting, S. man said, "We are going to announce some changes in federal employment levels and agency termination levels that will warm your hearts, even in the middle of winter in South Dakota."

Ed Dale, an Office of Management and Budget spokesman, refused to say how much more would be cut from the budget but said every agency would be vulnerable.

"The president is going to take a sharp knife on these 1982 budgets in order to hold the line," Speakes said. "We realize it's going to be a difficult job."

He said Reagan would be looking for further savings in already hard-hit social programs and probably would make cuts "across the board" in every department and agency.

Earlier, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III said Reagan had agreed to trim $20 billion to $30 billion from his record military spending plans for 1983 and 1984. Another $45 billion would be cut in those years from already-pared social programs.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed during January than during December. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

Up 27.5 30.2
Down 22.0 22.0
Unchanged 44.5 41.8
Unavailable 6.0 6.0

The AP did not try to weight survey results according to population density or actual family expenditures. The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes were selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one survey date were not included in overall totals.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
BRENNHAM, Texas (AP) — Bidding to lease 12,700 acres of West Texas land dedicated to Washington County schools has stirred up a controversy involving a number of local officials, including County Judge Gus Mutscher, the former Texas House speaker.

District Attorney Charles Sebesta said Tuesday he figures a grand jury investigation into the leasing should conclude by the end of September.

Mutscher calls the investigation, sought by a potential opponent in next year's elections, politically motivated.

"The main thing I am concerned with is to see everyone involved gets a fair shake," Sebesta said in a telephone interview.

The controversy arose when the county commissioners court voted in July to lease the county's school land in Tom Green County to somebody other than the high bidder.

"The mechanics of the way the thing was handled are the greatest problem. Whether it was intentional or criminal, I don't know. That's what the grand jury is for," Sebesta said.

He said a minimum of 10 or 12 people would be called to testify, including bidders on the land lease.

"I would like to wrap it up by the 30th of the month," he said. Republican lawyer Bill Neinst, who plans to run against Mutscher for Washington County judge next year, requested the investigation, Sebesta said.

San Angelo cattleman

Hanie Ivey, who had sub-leased the land from the current leaseholder, won a seven-year grazing lease for $433,054. San Saba Mayor Jack Miller said he entered a higher bid.

"I think it was the second highest bid," Sebesta said of the winning bid.

Mutscher, who became county judge after completing probation for a felony conviction of conspiracy to accept a bribe when he was House speaker in 1970, called the investigation "a poisoning of the judicial system" for political purposes.

The Brenham Banner-Press quoted Mutscher as saying, "Some people may not agree with our decision but that doesn't mean anything is illegal or the grand jury has any role in the matter."

Sebesta said it would be unfair to say Mutscher was a particular target of the inquiry. He said he did not know whether Mutscher even cast a vote on the lease.

"There's just a bunch of people involved — school boards, bidders, the county attorney. ... Gus is just one person involved in the process," he said.

Sebesta said the Washington County school lands in Tom Green County are worth anywhere from $12 million to $20 million, and some people in Washington County think the acreage should be sold and the money invested.

He said part of the problem in the lease to Ivey was the commissioners issued no specifications for bidders to follow — "One could bid on it for seven years, five years, three years. You could bid on cultivation, grazing, hunting rights."

"Let's keep this thing in proper perspective. There may or may not be something to it. That is why the grand jury is looking into it," Sebesta said.

While grand juries generally are forbidden to do anything other than return indictments and no-bills, Sebesta said either he or the grand jury would issue a report when the investigation ended. "Irrespective of what we find, I am going to clear the air one way or another," the district attorney said.

Two of three escapees from Georgia captured

ATLANTA (AP) — Two of three inmates who fled Georgia prisons in separate escapes Tuesday were captured within hours, state prison authorities said.

Still at large early today was Ronnie Sims, 30, of Athens, serving a life sentence for murder and attempted armed robbery at the Clarke County Correctional Institution. He escaped while on a road detail in Athens, prison spokeswoman Sara Englade said.

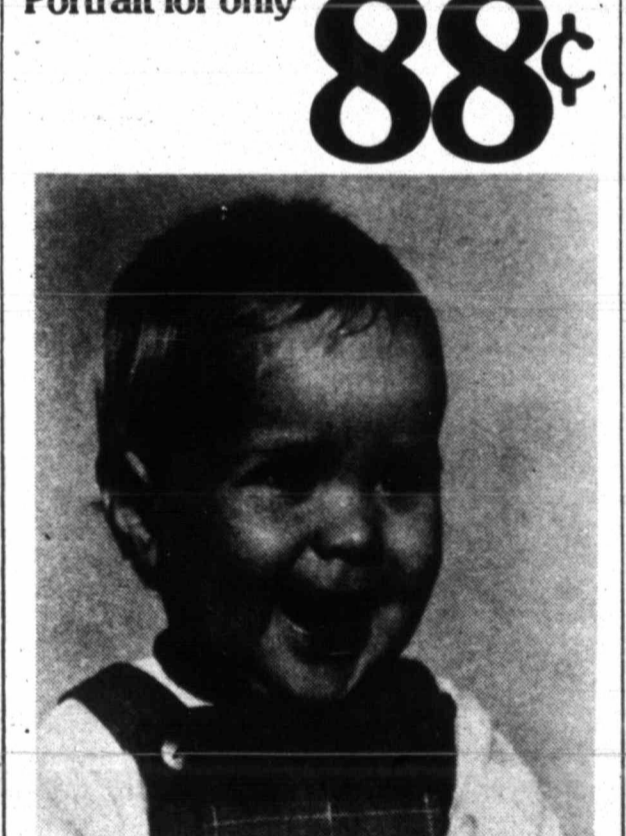

John Edwin Watson, 38, of Pasadena, Texas, who was serving four life sentences for murder and other charges at the Georgia State Prison near Reidsville, escaped from a work detail at a Georgia Forestry Commission nursery adjoining the prison, she said.

But Watson was apprehended by correctional officers Tuesday afternoon about two miles from where he had escaped, she said.

Alarmed about burglaries? Check your home

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

How safe is your home? The FBI estimates that there are over two million residential burglaries every year, and Americans spend millions of dollars trying to thwart the thieves.

Neil Solomon, vice president of the technical services division of Guardmark, Inc. of Memphis, Tenn., said sales of residential security devices totaled $610 million in 1978. By 1990, Solomon said, the market will more than quadruple — to $2.5 billion, according to estimates by Predicasts Inc., a Cleveland forecasting firm.

The best alarm cannot guard against things like unlocked windows or doors. "Carelessness by the occupant is a big cause of successful home burglary," said Solomon.

There is no such thing as a burglar-proof home, Solomon said. "All you can say is burglar resistant... What you're doing is raising the stakes to a level where it's not worth the burglar's effort."

Dead-bolt locks on doors and key locks on windows help raise the stakes and can provide a first and relatively inexpensive line of defense. Light also deters burglars. "If you can deny darkness, a shadowed hiding place, your chances for not being broken into are a lot better," said Solomon, who advises corporations and individuals on security measures, but does not sell alarm systems themselves.

An alarm system ups the stakes still further. The simplest — and cheapest — alarms are the ones which give off a loud noise to frighten an intruder away. Noise may not be enough to stop a determined thief, however.

More complicated systems send an alarm to a central reporting station which notifies the police. Prices for this kind of system range from $1,500 to $3,500 and up. Monthly service fees are extra.

Before you buy any alarm system, find out what kind of sensor is used to detect the presence of an intruder, what sort of protection there is against false alarms and what kind of service you will get from the company you are dealing with.

Ask the salesman for a list of current subscribers and contact them to find out whether they are satisfied.

Hot checks plague merchants, officials

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

Officials in the Gray County and the District Attorneys' offices are waging a battle with hot check writers, and it appears, with the aid of a few new procedures, the officials could be gaining ground.

The office of the county attorney handles all hot checks from $5 to $199.99 as misdemeanor offenses.

Hot checks written for $200 and up are sent to the District Attorney's office and are treated as felony offenses.

"This office handles 250 hot checks per month from local merchants," County Attorney Robert McPherson said.

"We were able to collect restitution from 72 check writers last month," McPherson said. "We also sent out letters to 300 delinquent check writers in July."

The office of the County Attorney has added an extra clerical assistant just to work on contacting the writers of hot checks.

Stacks of files stand in the office, each filled with hot checks brought in by merchants for collection and/or prosecution.

The office works to locate the check writers and to collect. If no collections are made, then charges are filed. McPherson said it is vital that merchants stress to their employees the importance of being thorough when accepting a check.

He listed these points:
1) Business establishments should set policies fair to all customers. That way no one customer will have any reason to feel they are being treated unfairly. It is a good idea for businesses to post a checklist containing names of known offenders.

2) Clerks and merchants are encouraged to be careful of low series numbers on personal checks. About 85 percent of all uncollected hot checks are new account more hot checks generally increases," he said. The county attorney's office recently has received from one check up to 15 checks, written to local merchants by the same writer.

"If the person continues writing hot checks, charges will be filed on each check — requiring as many individual bonds and court costs and check fees as it takes," he said. At present, eight cases of theft by check are scheduled on the Gray County court docket for this month.

Certain stores in Pampa rarely show up at the county or district attorney's offices with hot checks for

"I am usually wary of counter checks (those from off the counter of a bank without any name or account number on them). I feel that whenever I bring a check to the county attorney's office, they do a good job of collecting the checks," Dickens said.

Harold Butler of Furr's Family Center, 1420 N. Hobart, said that every check accepted by his store must have identification with it, usually a driver's license.

"Asking for identification doesn't always cut down on the number of hot checks we receive, but it does make collecting them easier," Butler said.

Bob Chamber of the Alco Discount Store in Coronado Center said, "We prosecute all hot checks."

"If a person writes a hot check, we send it through the bank twice, just to be sure that it wasn't a mistake. After the second time, we either call or write the party and add a $7.50 service charge on the check. If they do not respond, we send them the registered letter. They have seven days to make restitution after they receive the registered letter. If they do not respond to that, we go to the county attorney's or district attorney's office," Chambers said.

"Our policy is to see a driver's license for every check. We always ask for positive identification, just in case someone has taken a person's checks, the positive identification helps," Chambers said.

"The rash of hot checks has slowed down a little in the past two years. In 1977 we had a big hot check problem here. The office of the justice of the peace was trying to take care of the hot checks but there was just no policy," he said.

"The former county attorney David Martindale took a stance during the rash of hot checks and began to prosecute. The situation has slowed down since then," he said.

"Once you are prosecuted for a hot check, you can never cash a check in our store again," Chambers said. "We just don't want to take a chance twice," he said.

August was bad month for business

NEW YORK (AP) — The economic forecast index dropped just one-tenth of 1 percent in July — not a bad performance in view of the widespread feeling it will take a while to get the economy moving again.

But that was in July, a month or so ago.

Something worse than that probably occurred in August. There aren't many numbers to document the feeling, and whatever figures exist are subject to revisions. But the feeling is strong: August wasn't good.

Feelings can't be ignored, because they come from the same source as the numbers. Feelings are measures of economic activity. And while they can distort, they can reflect accurate observations too.

These are some of the observations: Car sales are dismally poor, well below industry expectations. Housing is sinking into an abandoned cellar hole. Small business, unable to absorb costs and often unable to raise prices is in a bad way. Companies of all sizes are closing plants and laying off workers, often in wholesale lots.

This is hardly the mood that was expected to follow a massive realignment of federal priorities, expressed in budget and tax cuts and designed to spur confidence, inspire investors, and encourage savers, risk-takers and business to commit themselves to the economic future.

Wall Street, not as representative of random opinions as it used to be but still an indicator of attitudes, has had a fainting spell, produced in part by the shocking realization that it had been listening to its own and Washington's advertisements rather than to the marketplace.

The most serious intrusion into this reverie was the realization that the Federal Reserve Board means to take a stand — a stand so strong that hopes of a sharp decline in interest rates have been abandoned.

The typical comment from analysts a week or so ago went something like this:

"This is a new beginning. The tax and budget bills weren't the very best, but they'll accomplish a lot. The country finally is pointed in the right direction again, and that's good news for investors."

Today, the mood is decidedly more reserved, and the once-confident voice of your broker may have a quiver in it as he observes:

"Things will get better, that's for sure, but first we're going to have to get by the Fed, which is hell-bent on having its way. Soon as those interest rates come down we'll be okay. When? I don't know."

The country is being torn two ways, the analysts are saying. Whipped into submission by a Federal Reserve that feels the nation has been too soft on itself, and exhorted to be tough and confident by a president who declares the future is there to be conquered for the good of all.

The economic numbers we rely on — to tell us what we already suspect — won't be ready for another 10 days or more.

numbers between 101 and 150.

3) Always check the finish on the black magnetic computer number on the bottom of the check. Magnetic ink is very dull — never shiny.

According to the county attorney's office, when a check is returned marked "insufficient funds or closed account," the merchant must send a certified letter to the check writer, stating that payment for the check, listed in the letter, has not been received. The merchant usually gives the check writer 10 days to make restitution and pay any service charge to the store for returned checks.

The check writer can be arrested from his home or his job, just wherever we find him," McPherson said.

"The check writer is brought into the county jail and must make bond as set by the justice of the peace. He appears before the county judge for arraignment and then goes to county court for trial," McPherson said.

"Then the hot check writer is faced with paying 1) bond, 2) the face amount of the check, 3) the check fee and 4) court costs," McPherson said.

"We find that once an offender writes a hot check — the chances of his writing prosecution or collection. It seems that discount and grocery stores, the high volume stores, have more hot check problems than any other stores.

Jim Dickens of White's Home and Auto, 1500 N. Hobart, said the policy at White's includes seeing identification on any check written at the store.

"It is just routine for our employees to ask for identification, and we rarely have to file charges on a hot check. We usually send the hot checks from our store to a large credit bureau who takes care of the situation," Dickens said.

Israeli apple trees thrive in South Texas

HONDO, Texas (AP) — A successful experiment with a dozen dwarf apple trees from Israel's Negev Desert has prompted optimism that the low chill plants could thrive throughout warm South Texas.

"They've done so well that I decided to put in another 400. Some of them will be ready to harvest next year," beams Medina County cattle and chicken rancher Tony Zerr, who recently finished harvesting 12 trees heavy with the fruit.

Zerr planted the first dozen dwarf trees three years ago on recommendation of County Extension Agent Eddie Holland and Dr. Loy Shreve, Texas Agricultural Extension Service horticulturist in Uvalde.

"I'm amazed at this apple crop," Zerr said. "I really didn't expect them to produce very well here, especially so soon, but I'll try anything once. I think this orchard will raise some eyebrows in the area when it reaches productive potential."

Zerr's miniature trees now measure just under six feet in height and have their branches tied to stakes to hold up apple-laden limbs.

He said the small size of the trees have two advantages — a person can stand flat-footed and pick the apples to hold harvest costs down, and more trees can be planted in a small area.

"You put them on a trellis like a grape vine. I plan on letting people who want to buy them harvest them," Zerr said.

Zerr runs 200 head of cattle and has 20,000 laying hens. He uses chicken manure to fertilize the trees, which are watered mostly by drip irrigation although bountiful rains this year eliminated that need.

Shreve personally selected low chill apple trees that were developed in the Negev Desert of Israel and are adaptable to the mild South Texas climate.

The horticulturist said Hondo, located 40 miles southwest of San Antonio, was about the northernmost area the trees should be grown because they could be placed in jeopardy by late freezes that sometimes occur in the Texas Hill Country to the immediate north.

"Ordinary apples require 800 to 1,000 hours of chilling, which is the accumulated time when temperatures are 45 degrees Fahrenheit or less," Shreve said. "Yet, by comparison, these Israeli varieties require only about 300 hours of chill, and maintain a certain amount of disease-insect resistance."

The short Israeli trees can easily be covered to prevent freezing and are noted for early production, often in the second or third year, Shreve said.

Varities he recommends for this climate include Anna and Ein Shemer from Israel, and Dorsett Gold, a variety originating in the Bahama Islands. Other newer Israeli varieties are Elah, Adia 17, Ben Dagen, Michael and Maayam and Slor, but they are not yet available, Shreve said.

However, the fruit specialist warned that more work must be done to ensure the trees will thrive throughout the region.

"There's definitely a future for low chill-requiring apples in South Texas, but that means more experimental work is necessary," Shreve said. "Producers in the Hill Country may be flinching with trouble by growing these varieties exclusively, because a late freeze will wipe them out. Israeli varieties are adapted to South Texas which has a climate similar to Israel."

Holland said Zerr has economics on his side for commercial production of apples from the dwarf trees.

"One tree produces about a bushel of apples and the plot Tony has selected can accommodate about 800 trees," the extension agent said.

Interest rates revive old Washington joke

NEW YORK (AP) — The big tax cut favors big business over small, says the National Small Business Association, whose rolls includes 55,000 individuals and enterprises, none listed on a major stock exchange.

The NSBA wants to make its position clear, for at least two reasons:

First, it seeks to counter the position of some organizations that have little but praise for the cut. Second, it hopes in upcoming bills to correct some of what it sees as deficiencies hurting small business.

Its position contrasts sharply with that of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which claims that "contrary to some published reports," the new law "affords substantial tax relief for smaller entrepreneurs."

David Franasiak, chamber tax authority, says, "Business people are beginning to recognize the numerous benefits to smaller firms in the bill that may have been overlooked during the heat of debate."

Herbert Liebenson, NSBA president, agrees that some relief is afforded small business by the new law. Still, he says, it is skewed in favor of big business. What was overlooked, he says, was small business — in capital gains, for example, an area of great importance for small business operators considering the sale of their business.

Prior to passage of a tax cut, all parties agreed that capital gains taxes should be cut, but there were two different methods: raising the percentage of income that could be excluded from taxes, and reducing the overall tax rates.

The latter was chosen, to Liebenson's chagrin. "Increasing the exclusion would have treated every income level equally," he says. But "the method chosen, relying on overall rate cuts, does not."

At $200,000 of income, he states, a taxpayer under the new law will benefit from an overall rate cut from 70 percent to 50 percent, and a reduction in capital gains from 28 percent to 20 percent. That means a total tax reduction of 28.5 percent in the first year, says Liebenson.

At $50,000 of income, he continues, the reduction in the overall tax rate is to 38 percent from 49 percent over a four-year period, bringing with it a reduction in capital gains taxes to 15.2 percent from 19.6 percent, or a 22.5 percent drop.

The inequity doesn't end there, says Liebenson, explaining, "If the buyer is one of the 11,000 companies with nationally traded stock, then there would be no capital gains tax at all, because exchanges of the stock of one company for the stock of another are tax free."

Small businesses want tax cut equity

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's an old joke that Washington veterans are reviving as President Reagan tries to cope with the growing political furor over high interest rates.

The outgoing president hands his successor three envelopes marked No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3, with instructions to open the appropriate one after each year in office if the economy is souring.

One bad year goes by, and the new president opens the first envelope. The contents say: "Blame the previous administration." After another poor year, he opens the second envelope and reads: "Blame the Federal Reserve Board." After a third year of gloomy economic developments, he rips open the last envelope and finds the message: "Prepare three new envelopes."

With five months left in his first year, Reagan gives the impression that he peeked into the first envelope. Whenever he and his aides are asked why interest rates are persisting at record and near-record levels, they lay the blame at the feet of the Carter administration.

"We're paying the piper for four years of stop-and-go economic policies," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes recently said.

And, Reagan already has started to put some distance between himself and the Federal Reserve. One gets the feeling that, if interest rates stay in the stratosphere, it's only a matter of time before he follows the advice of Envelope No. 2 and turns on the nation's central bank.

"The Fed is independent, and they're hurting us in what we're trying to do as much as they're hurting everyone else," the president told a group of California Republicans.

Spokesman Speakes quickly explained to reporters that the "they're" referred to high interest rates, not the Fed, and that the president has "complete confidence" in the bank. But the hint of criticism came through.

At this point, Reagan has no legitimate complaint with the Fed's tight-money policy, because that's exactly what he ordered to fight inflation.

For years, it was government policy to risk rising inflation to keep interest rates low and stable. Now, the government is risking high interest rates to bring inflation down. Both Reagan and Fed Chairman Paul Volcker say they see eye-to-eye on this policy call.

The Fed, which regulates the nation's supply of money, has been keeping a tight grasp on the growth of credit in the belief that too rapid an expansion is inflationary. However, the combination of a tight-money policy that restricts supply and large budget deficits that increase demand for credit produces persistently high interest rates.

The administration's plan called for the Fed to stick to a tight-money policy while the White House cut spending en route to a balanced budget by 1984. In February, Reagan aides were predicting that the high interest rates they inherited from Carter would plummet by summer but that has not happened.

WPIX battles network

NEW YORK (AP) — WPIX-TV's David has been fighting the network Goliath in entertainment since 1948 and in news for more than a year. Goliath certainly hasn't been brought to his knees; then, again, neither has David.

"We've had our victories; they're little but so are we," said Leavitt Pope, president and pioneer of WPIX in New York. "There's something to be said for not being a big corporate structure. It's nice to plan something in the morning, do it in the afternoon and watch it at night."

Already, WPIX' profitable Independent Network News has grown from 27 stations at birth in June 1980 to 69 "partners," as Pope calls the non-network stations receiving 30 minutes of news some three hours after Rather. Chancellor and Reynolds have said good night.

Plans call for two new INN-type programs in the fall: 30-minute noontime news and weekend interviews, called "From the Editors Desk," a la the networks' Meet the Newsmakers for Issues and Answers shows on Sunday.

INN is a cooperative, gathering news from its partners' local efforts. INN's bureaus in New York and Washington and several foreign news suppliers. It does not have the central identity of the Cable News Network, all-day news created by Ted Turner, another network thorn.

"Ted gets all the publicity, but we have many times more viewers," said Pope. CNN's cable systems can reach 8 million homes while INN's markets can touch 50 million. A daily average of 2 million households watched INN the last two weeks in August.

Over the same period, 26 million homes were tuned into one of the three early evening network news broadcasts. "The networks can out-do us anytime they want. They have the people and the resources," said Pope. "But we're providing our stations with a service they can't get anywhere else."

Governor names Sept. 6 'Working Mothers' Day'

AUSTIN — Governor William P. Clements has signed a State of Texas Official Memorandum designating Sept. 6 as Working Mothers' Day, in recognition of the contribution made to our society by working mothers.

"In four out of five households today, two wage-earners are needed to support a family," said Allen M. Seigal, vice president of public affairs of National Child Care Centers, one of the organizations that worked toward creation of Working Mothers' Day.

"Fifty-four percent of women with children under the age of 18 are employed outside the home. That's 16 million American women. These women perform the almost superhuman task of serving as productive members of the work force, as well as nurturing mothers and homemakers," he said.

"Accepting this challenge and functioning with strength, humor and grace under pressure reflects the very best qualities of the American spirit.

Other available data on working American mothers include:

- Over 40 percent of women with children under the age of 6 are in the work force.
- Over 83 percent of the mothers who head single-parent families with children under 18 are in the work force.
- Over 68 percent of the mothers who head single-parent families with children under 6 are in the work force.
- Over 8.5 million families in America are maintained by working mothers.

It has been determined that working mothers contribute to a productive work force, to the self-sufficiency of one-parent families, and to the self-sufficiency of two-parent families. Clements said in the proclamation.

Fruit Cookies

CHIVE SPREAD
Concocted especially for low-cholesterol diets.

- 1/4 cup buttermilk
- 3 tablespoons nonfat dry milk
- 1/2 cup corn oil
- 2 teaspoons distilled white vinegar
- A few grains of turmeric
- 1 tablespoon (or more) minced regular or garlic chives

Salt to taste, if desired
In an electric blender at low speed whirl together the buttermilk and nonfat dry milk until blended; through the center cap of the two-piece cover, gradually add the corn oil, 1 tablespoon at a time, until all the oil has been added — the mixture will be the consistency of soft margarine. Stir in the vinegar, the turmeric (just enough to give a faint yellow color), the chives and the salt. Cover tightly and chill overnight to allow flavors to blend. Makes about 2-3rds cup. May be used as a spread for fish, baked potatoes, vegetables or crackers.

'My Fair Lady' opens on Amarillo stage

AMARILLO — "My Fair Lady," one of the most successful musicals in the history of the American musical theater, will open Sept. 4 at the Amarillo Theatre Centre for 10 performances.

The curtain will rise on one of the most ambitious productions offered in the 55-year history of the Centre. Auditions were held in late July to select the 40-actor cast, and rehearsals have continued since then.

The musical was adapted from George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," which was first made famous in 1912 with the legendary actress

Mrs. Pittick Campbell in the leading role of Eliza Doolittle. Alan Jay Lerner wrote the book and lyrics and Frederick Loewe wrote the music.

"My Fair Lady" first opened on Broadway in 1956 and immediately caused complete hysteria at the box office. Long lines and in many cases overnight waiting in sleeping bags proved to be the only way a pair of tickets could be bought for a performance a year away. Despite the inconvenience and inflated prices, some 3,750,000 people kept Julie Andrews and Rex Harrison recreating their roles for 2,717 performances.

The now-familiar plot line is the Cinderella story of Eliza Doolittle, a poor Cockney flower girl, who dreams of working in a flower shop and being a fine lady. Through a twist of events she meets Henry Higgins, an expert on phonetics. Higgins is finally convinced to take Eliza on as his student and to pass her off as a Duchess at an Embassy Ball. The transformation is a long and tedious one filled with beautiful songs and dances.

Murphy as her phonetics tutor and mentor, Henry Higgins. Frank Gregg will be seen as the befuddled Col. Pickering, Higgin's friend and sidekick. Bill Jordan will carry the audience through the show-stoppers, "With a Little Bit of Luck" and "Get Me to the Church on Time." Other well-known songs included in the performance are "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face," "I Could Have Danced All Night" and "Wouldn't It Be Lovely." Lewis Unger will hit the high notes in the very popular song, "On the Street Where You Live." Dolly Lynch will again grace the stage with her portrayal of Mrs. Higgins, Henry's mother. Advance reservations are recommended for best possible seating. "My Fair Lady" will run Sept. 4-6, 10-13 and 17-19. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m., with Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m. For more information, contact Amarillo Theatre Centre, 2019 Civic Circle, P.O. Box 2424, Amarillo, Texas 79105, phone 355-9991.

Dear Abby

Cash-hungry bride skips sentiment

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A sister I see infrequently is getting married soon. She let it be known through the family grapevine that she would prefer cash instead of a wedding gift. (Her reason is that her husband-to-be is a hotel manager; they will be living in the hotel and don't "need" anything.)

I wrote and explained that I knew her preference, but over the years I personally have derived much pleasure remembering the gifts each time I used their wedding gifts. I told her that I wanted to give her something special that she would know came from me. I then offered her a couple of choices of items I had in mind to send her.

She wrote back: "About the wedding gift. Thanks just the same, but I think I'll pass."
What should I do? Send her money, nothing, or what? The little cash I could send her would be lost in the bill-paying of her expensive wedding. Sign me...

SENTIMENTAL

DEAR SENTIMENTAL: She said, "I'll pass." So pass her.

DEAR SUCKER: That all depends on how much longer you want to remain silent.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had a letter in your column from a man who was concerned about his small behind. He complained that he couldn't find a pair of trousers to fit him, and he had to have all his trousers taken in by a tailor.

I have that problem and I've tried everything — including weight-lifting, but to no avail. You suggested that he wear a padded undergarment under his trousers. I would very much like to purchase one of these. But where?

NO BEHIND

DEAR NO: Write to Frederick's of Hollywood, 6610 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90028 and ask them to fill you in. (And out.)

LOOK 'EM IN THE EYE
Do you look 'em straight in the eyes?

Your personality is often judged — rightly or wrongly — from how you use your eyes, says Dorothy Taylor, a family life education specialist on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A & M University System.

If you make a lot of eye contact, you are probably thought to be friendly, outgoing and self-confident, she said.

If you avoid eye contact, you may be seen less favorably — as evasive, shy, defensive or indifferent.

DEAR ABBY: I had chosen to ignore the letter written to you by the Rev. Father Andrew L. James, who classifies all priests as "Father," all ministers as "Mister," and suggests the term "Mother" for what he calls "the new Protestant Episcopal priestesses." One of our parishioners, however, was so disturbed by this stance that he cut out the column and asked me to make a reply.

While some Protestant churches do call their ministers "Mister," the Lutheran tradition has been to use the term "Pastor." This has not been affected by the fact that in 1970 our Lutheran Church in America along with the American Lutheran Church voted in national conventions to ordain women. This action took place several years after many other Protestant bodies had voted to include women in their ministerial rolls. Father James must be living in a time warp in Athens, Ohio, not realizing what his Christian sisters and brothers have been up to.

However, instead of fighting over trivialities, Christians should be loving one another. We worship the same God, and I am firmly convinced that our God can call anyone He wants to, whether it be a man such as Father James or a woman such as I, with a husband and three children. If we spend more time doing the loving thing rather than trying to impose our own "thou shalt nots" on others, think of the impact the Church of Jesus Christ could have on a hurting world!

I forgive you, Father James, for not loving me and not accepting me as another champion of the Gospel. Let us love one another. After all, that's what this whole thing is all about.

THE REV. EDITH B. ROBERTS, EASTON, PA.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I send flowers or a gift to someone in my family, another family member says, "Put my name on the card."
I always put her name on the card, but she has yet to give me a dime for her part of the gift.
How much longer should I let this go on without saying something?

YOUTH BOWLER. One of the better bowlers in the Pampa Junior-Senior Division is 12-year-old John Thomas, who carries a 146 average. John has been league bowling two years. Youngsters like John is one reason bowling never loses its popularity. They grow up to join more than 70 million adults who go bowling every year. This week has been declared National Bowling Week, designed to celebrate America's largest participatory sport.

Pampa volleyball team wins again

DUMAS—Pampa endured a height disadvantage, but rallied to down Dumas in girls' volleyball play last night. The Harvesters dropped the opener, 15-12, but claimed the next two games, 15-3 and 15-8. "Our lack of height hurt us," Pampa coach Lynn Wolfe said. "They had a big girl that was hurting us, but Lena Young started blocking several of her shots and that intimidated her a little bit."

Pampa, now 5-1, travels to Hereford Tuesday for a doubleheader, starting at 4 p.m. "We need better team work," Wolfe said. "We've got good individual players, but we need to be a quicker team that can handle the ball better." Pampa JVs also won, 15-12 and 15-8. Pampa's next home match is with Perryton Sept. 14.

Rangers pounded by Toronto

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — On Aug. 25, Texas pitcher Ferguson Jenkins beat the Toronto Blue Jays in Toronto but brusquely turned aside congratulations. "Anybody can beat the Blue Jays," Jenkins said at the time. To that point, Texas had played five games against the Jays and won all five. Since then, the Rangers have lost both their games with Toronto decisively. "Sure, it (Jenkins' remark) got us a little fired up," said Toronto outfielder Lloyd Moseby, after the Blue Jays battered four Texas pitchers — not including Jenkins — for 14 hits in a 9-3 win Tuesday night. "We have some pride as individuals and when you read something like that in the newspapers it's disrespectful to our personnel," continued Moseby, whose three-run homer in the fourth inning gave Toronto starter Jim

Clancy, 4-8, a 7-0 lead. "We wouldn't say that about Texas," Moseby said. "Personally, it didn't fire me up," said Toronto infielder Danny Ainge, who scored two runs in Tuesday's romp. "But a lot of the guys thought it was a pretty stupid thing to say." First baseman John Mayberry was more emphatic. "Sure, it fired us up. We went out there to prove it's not the truth," he said. "Go ask them tomorrow. Are you sure anybody can beat Toronto." Whatever the motivation, Blue Jays manager Bobby Mattick will take some more. "That's the most aggressive we've been all year," he said, munching on a post-game plate of smoked sausage. "That's the most hard-hit balls I've seen us get all season." Toronto shelled Rangers starter Danny Darwin, 8-7, early, logging single runs in each of the first two innings on run-scoring hits by Moseby and Ernie Whitt. Darwin walked Willie Upshaw and Otto Velez and surrendered a run-scoring single to Mayberry before trudging to the showers. Rookie relief pitcher Len Whitehouse gave a sacrifice fly to Al Woods before getting out of the inning. After Moseby's home run, Alfredo Griffen closed out the Toronto scoring in the fifth with a two-run single. Bobby Jones, just called up from the minor leagues, accounted for all three Texas runs with a two-run homer in the seventh and an RBI single in the ninth. Jones was one of five new players just added to the roster used in the game by Texas manager Don Zimmer.

Astros extend win streak to six

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston reliever Joe Sambito threw the pitch that New York's Ron Gardenhire couldn't hit Tuesday night and Mets reliever Mike Marshall threw the pitch that catcher Alex Trevino couldn't catch. The result of the ninth inning drama was that Houston pinch runner Scott Loucks trotted home with the winning run on Marshall's wild pitch with two out in the ninth that gave the Astros a 3-2 victory and extended their winning streak to six games.

Sambito pitched two outstanding innings of relief, but was taken to the limit by Gardenhire, who worked a full count before grounding out to end the Mets' final shot at victory. "I wanted to get that first at bat over with and get into the action real quick and I guess it came real quick," Gardenhire said after his first major league at bat. "I got here at 6 p.m. and played at 10 p.m.," he said. Time ran out for Marshall however in the bottom of the ninth when he yielded a double to pinch hitter Alan Ashby. Loucks replaced Ashby at second and took third on a grounder by newly acquired second baseman Phil Garner before scoring on Marshall's wild pitch. "I wasn't worried about throwing strikes. I just wanted to make quality pitches," said Marshall, 2-1. "I had two open bases and I wanted to make certain I didn't throw it down the middle of the plate so I snapped it real hard and tried to pull the break to the inside." The screwball got away from Trevino however, bounced in the dirt and Trevino chased it behind the plate as Loucks sailed home to end the game. "It's a tough pitch to catch and there aren't many who have learned to handle my pitches effectively," Marshall said. "I'm sure Alex will get better in time, but I can't concern myself with whether the catcher can handle my pitches."

Houston took the lead off Mets starter Pete Falcone with two runs in the fourth inning on a double by Art Howe and a grounder by Luis Pujols. Houston starter Joe Niekro held the Mets to only two hits through six innings. But Niekro walked Hubie Brooks to open the seventh and yielded a run-scoring double to Lee Mazzilli and departed for reliever Dave Smith. Smith yielded a single to pinch hitter Rusty Staub that scored Mazzilli with the tying run.

Oiler GM says Stabler is cleared of wrongdoing in gambling probe

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzog, saying he feels good about the National Football League's investigation of Oiler quarterback Ken Stabler, hopes the team can turn now to talk of football. "I feel very good about the way the league office has handled the situation,"

Herzog said Tuesday after Warren Welsh, chief of NFL security, questioned Stabler about his alleged association convicted bookmaker Nicholas Dudich, Perth

Amboy, N.Y. "They already had conducted their investigation and found nothing wrong," Herzog said. "They acted very promptly on the most recent events. I just hope we can finally concentrate on football."

and did not want to talk about the situation. "The most unfortunate part about this situation is that when Kenny throws an interception inside the 20-yard line, these questions will pop up," Herzog said. "It's extremely unfortunate."

Cowboy's streak on line in opener against Redskins

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry warns that the Cowboys' streak of winning 16 consecutive openers could be in danger this Sunday against the Washington Redskins because his team doesn't have a psychological advantage this year. The Redskins were fired to a fever pitch in 1980 by Coach Jack Pardee for the Monday-night opener and the Redskins fell flat, losing 17-3.

"We know what Danny can do," said Landry. Landry announced his starting lineup Tuesday and it included Rice rookie Mike Downs at free safety. Asked if he was nervous about having a rookie in his secondary, Landry said "He's been very good all summer. If he hadn't been we wouldn't have him back there."

The Dallas secondary will also have Dennis Thurman and Steve Wilson at the corners and Charlie Waters at strong safety. Waters will play with a cast on his right wrist courtesy of a tumble down the stairs at his home. "Charlie is optimistic his sprained wrist will be OK...he's sure he will play," said Landry. Landry has also decided to use the signal system from the sidelines to communicate plays to quarterback Danny White.

"I'm sure we will use it (the signal system) at least part of the time," said Landry. "It helps us speed things up. We use so many substitutes that we will be sending a lot of plays in that way."

Herzog said Stabler had been offended by the article. "Kenny's extremely hurt by the insinuations and allegations," Herzog said. "He feels he's contributed an awful lot during his football career and now his image has been tarnished somewhat." Herzog added that Stabler did not want to talk about the allegations.

Soccer signup Thursday

Thursday will be the last chance for youngsters to sign up for the Pampa soccer program. Starting at 2:30 p.m. and again at 3:30 p.m., members of the Pampa Soccer Association will be at the front entrance of all the elementary schools to pass out registration forms to interested youngsters. After a head count, teams will be formed according to age. Coaches of the assigned teams will then get in touch with each youngster to collect a $10 enrollment fee. Games will be played on Saturday while practice will be held on the weekdays. Practice will not exceed four hours per week.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)— Swedish film director Ingmar Bergman says the next film he shoots "will be my absolutely last one."

Bergman said the screenplay for the film, to be shot in Munich in 1983, is completed and is experimental and "a very controversial film."

"I have made so much film. Since 1941. And now I am growing old. Film-making is something for young people to pursue," Bergman, 63, told the daily newspaper Dagens Nyheter on Tuesday.

Bergman's internationally acclaimed films include "Wild Strawberries," "Persona," "The Seventh Seal" and "Cries and Whispers."

HOLLYWOOD (AP)— Actor James Garner, recuperating from broken ribs he suffered while filming his new "Bret Maverick" television series, is anxious to get back in the saddle, his publicist says.

Garner, 53, was at home with his wife, Lois on Tuesday. He was hospitalized for a week following the accident at Burbank Studios Aug. 20, when he fell from a machine that simulates the movement of a horse during close-up photography.

"He's looking forward to getting back to the show," said Garner spokesman Jerry Pam. The publicist said recovery will take several weeks. Garner created the Accused hit man's wife arrested for rifle purchase

HOUSTON (AP)— The wife of a man targeted as a suspect in the slaying of a federal judge has been arrested on a charge alleging she used a fictitious name to purchase a rifle 12 days before the assassination.

Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, 41, wife of convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson, was arrested here Tuesday just hours after she was indicted by a federal grand jury in Dallas.

Federal authorities have identified Harrelson, jailed here on unrelated state charges, as a key target of the massive investigation into the May 29, 1979, slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Don Ervin, Harrelson's Houston attorney and Mrs. Harrelson's former lawyer, labeled the indictment a ploy by the FBI.

"I knew they would do something to try to get her over a barrel..." They wanted her testimony and one way to get it to put a case on her and start working on her," said Ervin.

Mrs. Harrelson was advised of her rights Tuesday by U.S. Magistrate H. Lingo Platter and then jailed in lieu of a $500,000 bond set by U.S. District Judge Sarah Hughes in Dallas.

She could be sentenced to 5 years in prison and fined $5,000 if convicted on the charge that alleges that on May 17, 1979, she "made a false and fictitious written statement and misrepresented her true identity to purchase a firearm, a Weatherby model V rifle, from an authorized dealer in Dallas."

Ballistic experts have said Wood was killed by a single .243-caliber bullet a rifleman fired from ambush outside the judge's San Antonio townhouse.

Hank Shultise, a spokesman for Weatherby in California, said although the Mark V uses .240-caliber bullets, it is perfectly capable of firing a .243-caliber bullet.

The FBI would not comment on whether they had the rifle or if agents believed it was the same weapon that killed Wood.

A spokesman for Hunter Bradlee, a Dallas sporting goods store, said FBI agents came into the store three weeks ago asking to see "all the forms on Weatherby guns."

Braniff announces all-coach flights

DALLAS (AP)— The "whole new" Braniff International promised by company president John J. Casey takes off Sept. 9 with a nationwide "all-coach express" service and an expanded discount fares program.

The new marketing strategy, which Braniff officials hope will boost ticket sales, expands the airline's high density flights to cover national routes, as well as the standard southwestern regional routes.

Braniff has changed nearly half of its Boeing 727 fleet to all-coach planes to add additional seating capacity, Casey said in a statement released Tuesday.

The redesigned jets will be the mainstay of Braniff's new nationwide express service. All-coach express flights will offer seats at a 20 percent discount nationwide during peak periods and a 25 percent discount during off-peak times, Casey said.

"Before, we offered the two-tier pricing only in Texas," said Braniff spokesman Ray Chahaud. "Now we are going nationwide with our express service for the first time. No other airline has done this nationwide."
