

Galtieri in trouble after surrendering islands

By The Associated Press
Thousands of furious Argentines rampaged through Buenos Aires cursing the ruling military junta for its defeat on the Falkland islands, but Argentine President Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri hinted he doesn't consider the hostilities over.

"Sooner or later the Malvinas (Argentina's name for the Falklands) will be ours," Galtieri said in a televised address Tuesday night.

Galtieri, who is also army commander, canceled plans to give the speech publicly after crowds pelted the pink presidential palace with coins and stones, screaming "Coward!" and "They killed our sons!"

Police firing tear gas and rubber bullets scattered the estimated 5,000 demonstrators, who burned two buses and broke shop windows as they retreated.

Britain, triumphant, said it will hold some of Argentina's defeated Falklands troops as hostages until the military junta formally agrees to make peace and leave the islands alone.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher ruled out any future Argentine say in the running of the islands, rejected a call from the Labor opposition for a United Nations trusteeship and vowed she would "not negotiate on the sovereignty of the islands in any way except with the people who live there."

"I hope we have restored once again the dominance of Britain and let every nation know that where there is British sovereign territory it will be well and truly defended," she told the House of Commons Tuesday.

There was still no official announcement of a surrender from Argentina's Joint Chiefs of Staff even though Britain holds 15,000 Argentine troops as prisoners on the windswept archipelago 250 miles east of the tip of South America. Galtieri did not mention in his speech the terms under which Argentina would withdraw its troops, and Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez was the only official to mention the word "surrender."

British Defense Secretary John Nott

said Tuesday night he believed the fighting was over but raised the possibility Argentina could continue to strike at British forces from its bases on the mainland.

"I believe it is (over)," he said in a television interview, "although I cannot be certain whether they will continue hostilities from the mainland."

Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore, commander of the land forces on the Falklands, said Tuesday night that the commander of the Argentine garrison at Stanley, Brig. Gen. Mario Benjamin Menendez, had promised that Argentine forces from the mainland would not attack British forces.

"General Menendez has just given me an assurance that there will be no attacks from mainland Argentina on us or our ships or aircraft in this area," Moore said in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview.

Mrs. Thatcher said she had sent a message to the Argentine junta through the Swiss Embassy seeking confirmation that Argentina considered all hostilities in the South Atlantic at an end.

She said Britain would continue to hold some of the captured prisoners, including commanders and officers, until a confirmation was received. Nott said Britain was entitled to hold the prisoners under the Geneva Convention governing the rules of war.

British commanders were astonished when they learned they had captured

Probe of fatal train derailment has begun

MITTELSTADT Associated Press Writer
EMERSON, Iowa (AP) — Railroad crews worked through the night to remove the wreckage of an Amtrak passenger train from the flooded tracks where it derailed, killing one passenger and sending 16 others aboard to the hospital.

The National Transportation and Safety Board, meeting in Council Bluffs, Iowa, Tuesday night, appointed four committees to investigate the derailment of the San Francisco Zephyr early Tuesday morning three miles west of Emerson in southwestern Iowa.

In all, 150 people were injured, mostly suffering cuts and bruises.

An Amtrak spokesman said the railroad believes floodwaters from adjacent farms washed out part of the Burlington Northern Railroad tracks.

Burlington Northern crews were on the scene early today removing the last of the wreckage from the tracks.

Engineer Joe Schwartz, of Omaha, Neb., a 30-year railroad veteran, said he and another crew member had been talking about the water along the railroad right-of-way just before the 12-car, two-engine train jumped the tracks.

"We came around a curve, saw the water and put the train in emergency," Schwartz said. "Then, we derailed."

Jack Crandall, head of Iowa Disaster Services, said, "The engineer said he was going 76 mph and was rounding a bend and suddenly there was no track in front of him."

School officials say:

Texas will become a magnet for illegal aliens

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Congress should help pay to educate the growing number of illegal alien children in Texas classrooms now that the Supreme Court has ruled they are entitled to free schooling, public school officials say.

"They had impact aid for the Cuban and Vietnamese children that have been brought in. We were hoping to get some type of subsidy to help us," Assistant Superintendent Tom Keller said Tuesday.

Keller and others said they were not surprised at the Supreme Court's ruling on Tuesday that the children of undocumented workers are entitled to a free education.

The court struck down a Texas law that had allowed school districts to charge tuition or refuse admission to illegal aliens.

Brownsville schools began enrolling illegal aliens in November 1980 after the system lost a federal district court fight over its policy of refusing such children admission.

About 1,600 illegal aliens from Mexico and Central American countries are among the 30,000 students enrolled in Brownsville — and illegal alien enrollments are even higher in Houston and Dallas.

Dallas school officials predicted Tuesday that the ruling could bring as many as 5,000 aliens into the Dallas Independent School District during the next few years.

"I would not be surprised at all to see our illegal alien enrollment double next year," Superintendent Linus Wright said.

The district had about 1,300 illegal alien students during the 1981-1982 school year, he said.

The superintendent of the Houston Independent School District, Billy Reagan, said the cost of educating the expected influx of alien children would be "phenomenal."

He said the ruling would serve as a

"magnet for these people."

"I'm hoping this now will be an impetus for Congress to move and insist that present immigration laws be enforced," Reagan said.

The HISD ended the school year with an

Work still available

Recession hits Pampa, but not hard

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

The recession has finally hit the Panhandle.

But Charles Vance, of the Texas Employment Commission's Pampa office, said there are still jobs available here, and he estimates the unemployment rate is hovering at about four percent in the area.

That's a rise in unemployment from about 2½ percent two months ago, Vance said, due to layoffs in oil-related industries, but compared to state and national figures, the central Panhandle jobless rate is low.

Vance said this is an estimate, and the official unemployment rate here for this month will not be released until August.

The national unemployment rate for March, calculated by the national Bureau of Labor Statistics and released May 7, was 9.7 percent, the highest since 1941. That figure means 10.3 million people in the nation were out of work at the end of winter.

The state is finally suffering a bit as well. The last estimate of state unemployment was 6.4 percent, and in some counties on the Mexico border, the unemployment rate is hovering around 30 percent.

The national high unemployment record was set in the Depression in 1933, when 24.9 percent of America was out of work.

In Pampa, however, you needn't be out of work — if you're willing to change jobs.

Vance said there are shortages here in several occupations: auto mechanics, administrative secretarial and bookkeeping work, and unskilled labor, particularly food service jobs.

Food service jobs are not easily filled here, he said, because of a shortage of "people willing to work a lot of hours and evenings."

He said there is also a constant turnover in retail businesses, domestic work, agriculture, electronics work and health care. There is a "continual demand for nurses' aides," he said.

Any sort of unskilled labor is "holding its own pretty well," Vance said.

Vance said the average unemployed person in the area is a high school graduate, young (20-35 years old), often a breadwinner for a young family.

Most of the people registered for unemployment benefits at Vance's office are not native Pampans. They have come from other parts of the country, generally the north or northeast, and have moved here in the past few months for oilfield jobs.

Those jobs disappeared when oil drilling in the area became less profitable in past weeks.

"In my opinion, the economy in general here is still expanding," Vance said, even though the oil and oil-related industries are in a slowdown.

Vance said in the past 10 years, Pampa's unemployment rate has never gone above four percent, to his knowledge.

"In my experience, Pampa feels the recession last, and when it does, the economy picks up again," Vance said. He said economic lulls here are shorter and less severe than most parts of the country.

People still call his office from other areas, asking for jobs, he said. Most of

County OKs new ambulance pact

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

Gray County bosses Tuesday added their okay to previous city approval of an ambulance contract with Pampa Medical Services.

The county approval means the non-profit corporation is given the nod to begin operations here July 1.

The joint city-county ambulance contract requires both entities to pay $4,360 per month, or an annual joint subsidy of $104,640.

"We feel this is the answer to a major problem," County Judge Carl Kennedy said about the new ambulance contract.

Pampa Medical Services will take over ambulance duties from the Pampa Fire Department, which has been responding to emergency calls since the May 25th collapse of Pampa's private ambulance company, Metropolitan General Inc.

The new non-profit corporation will provide the city and county with two new, "advanced - life - support" ambulances, staffed by paramedics and emergency medical technicians, according to ambulance officials.

Before approving the contract by unanimous vote Tuesday, commissioners heard a report on the planned service from Tracy Skeen and Joe Zillmer, the men who created Pampa Medical Services.

Skeen is president of Amarillo Medical Services, the non-profit corporation which provides ambulance service in Amarillo.

Zillmer is presently field supervisor at AMS and will move to Pampa to become president of PMS.

The men said response time to emergencies under PMS will improve, and said their "state-of-the-art" equipment and trained paramedics can save lives.

Skeen said there are no problems with the July 1 start-up date for PMS operations.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, commissioners ended debate over a two percent bingo tax and decided to impose the levy.

The issue had been considered at several other meetings, but commissioners previously tabled imposition of the tax.

The county can levy a two percent tax on gross proceeds, including door admissions and sale of food and beverages, from legal county bingo games, but until Tuesday, the panel stalled action on the bingo tax.

Since the first $2,500 in gross bingo game proceeds is exempt from tax, commissioners previously said local operations are too small to make collection of the bingo tax feasible.

The officials also believed creating the tax might just force local bingo operators to comply with mounds of more state paperwork, while the county reaped little revenue in return.

However, the panel later said another governmental entity could jump in and assess the tax, if Gray County did not tax the legal games of chance.

With that idea in mind, commissioners Tuesday voted to levy the two percent charge. However, Commissioner Jimmy McCracken said the tax "probably won't amount to much."

Commissioners said any bingo tax collected by the county would be used to fund local organizations, such as the Senior Citizen Center and Satellite School.

Another item listed on Tuesday's title abstract, prepared on the nurses' quarters and grounds for what was once Highland General Hospital.

The county sold the hospital and property to Hospital Corporation of America, present operators of Coronado Community Hospital, but the county retained the quarters and 1.67 acres of ground on the south side of the plot.

Judge Kennedy said the title document on the nurses' quarters was provided without compensation by a local abstract company.

Commissioners also approved three requests from Cabot Corporation to cross county roads with natural gas pipelines.

While considering the pipeline proposals, commissioners said the road-crossing requests during county meetings are the only records of pipelines for tax purposes.

"I guess if they didn't cross the roads, there would not be a record," Kennedy said.

Talk about taxing the pipelines led McCracken to remark, "Probably only one-third of them (county pipelines) are on the rolls."

"How do you prove it?" Kennedy asked.

Commissioners approved the three Cabot requests to cross county roads with "eight-inch PVC — low pressure" lines.

In connection with a Texas Highway Department project on highway 70, commissioners approved kicking in $52,200 for its share of curb- and-gutter work on the state job to widen the road to four lanes.

'We feel this is the answer to a major problem'

Something new: take her on a pre-divorce cruise

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Before heading to divorce court, a psychologist is inviting combatant couples to spend three days with him on a 33-foot cruiser as a $1,650 solution to their problems.

The psychologist, Ricardo Girona of Toledo, says so far he's had no takers on his Lake Erie cruise-workshop, which he calls a unique approach to marriage counseling.

"In all the years I've been practicing psychology, I've never heard of anything like it," says Girona, who spent 14 years on the faculty at Bowling Green State University.

"This isn't anything kinky," Girona added. "It isn't called the 'Love Boat' or anything like that."

county agenda was "approve number of ballots used in the Democratic Run-off."

However, the officials really did not know why the issue was listed for their consideration. "I don't understand why the commissioner's court gets involved in a party election. They (the Democratic Party) pay for it," Kennedy said.

County Clerk Wanda Carter did not attend the meeting, and her representative could not explain why the "number of ballots" used in the election needed county approval.

In addition, only absentee ballots were presented for the panel's approval.

Still, commissioners approved the item, even after discussion revealed "there were some missing ballots" from the June 5th voting.

"Did you get that solved? I understand there were more ballots than people," Kennedy said to the deputy county clerk.

"Yes, Lefors just miscounted," she replied.

In other action the officials received a enrollment of about 5,000 aliens, who cost the district at least $7.5 million to educate, he said.

Attorney General Mark White said in Austin the decision underlines the need for either better immigration enforcement or impact aid for school districts like Brownsville.

"I have consistently stated and continue to state that the children should be educated and should not suffer because of the actions of their parents or the inaction of the federal government in enforcing the law," White said.

Gov. Bill Clements in Houston echoed local school officials in predicting an increase in illegal aliens moving to Texas.

"We have created a situation that makes illegal immigration, primarily from Mexico, attractive. I don't think anyone could possibly reach any other conclusion."

Clements said at a Houston news conference.

He said Texas would comply with the ruling, but he added the state may need federal funds to do it.

The Brownsville lawyer who represented illegal alien children in the suit said it was a victory for many children who otherwise might have been expelled.

"Hopefully, it will help kids who didn't apply for admission because they didn't want to go through it and then be told to leave," said Linda Yanez.

Ms. Yanez said that one of her clients was denied admission but his brothers and sisters, who were born in the United States, were enrolled. It is not uncommon along the border to have resident aliens, illegal aliens and U.S. citizens within a single family.

Court leaves welfare for aliens up in air

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court says illegal alien children have a right to free public education, but whether they and their parents are entitled to other government benefits such as welfare and food stamps remains unresolved.

The court, by a 5-4 vote Tuesday, ruled unconstitutional a Texas law forcing illegal alien children to pay tuition to attend public schools.

The court said illegal aliens are entitled to many of the constitutional rights enjoyed by U.S. citizens — but it did not specify where the dividing line is for the millions of people illegally living and working in the United States.

"The possibility of the entitlement to other government benefits has been opened, rather than closed, by this decision," said Washington lawyer Joseph C. Zengerle.

Illegal aliens now are excluded from such federal and state benefit programs as food stamps, Medicare.

collectors item and a unique way to support the rodeo.

The Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt, which has been so popular in the past, will be held again this year. By following clues offered daily through the local media, one lucky Pampan has the opportunity to find the hidden horseshoe and win a $114 box seat for all three rodeo performances.

General Admission Tickets will once again be offered through local merchants for the convenience of spectators.

Saturday, July 5, will be the big day for rodeo activities as the day begins with a parade. Last year approximately 35,000 people witnessed the Top O' Texas Rodeo Parade. In addition to Saturday's parade, the Fine Arts Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce have scheduled a Western Art Show to be held on the lawn of City Hall and the County Court House. The art show will begin at 11 a.m.

A week full of western activities is planned for the Top O' Texas Rodeo and everybody is invited to get in on the fun.

11,000 Argentine troops at Stanley alone, Defense Ministry sources said. The British had estimated the garrison's strength at 7,000 and the total Argentine force on the islands as 8,500. Mrs. Thatcher said Britain might need help in feeding and transporting prisoners to the mainland and indicated the United States was prepared to help.

"The United States stands ready to assist in any way it can to resolve this conflict," President Reagan said without elaborating. "We hope the tragic loss of life which has thus far occurred in the conflict can now be brought to an end."

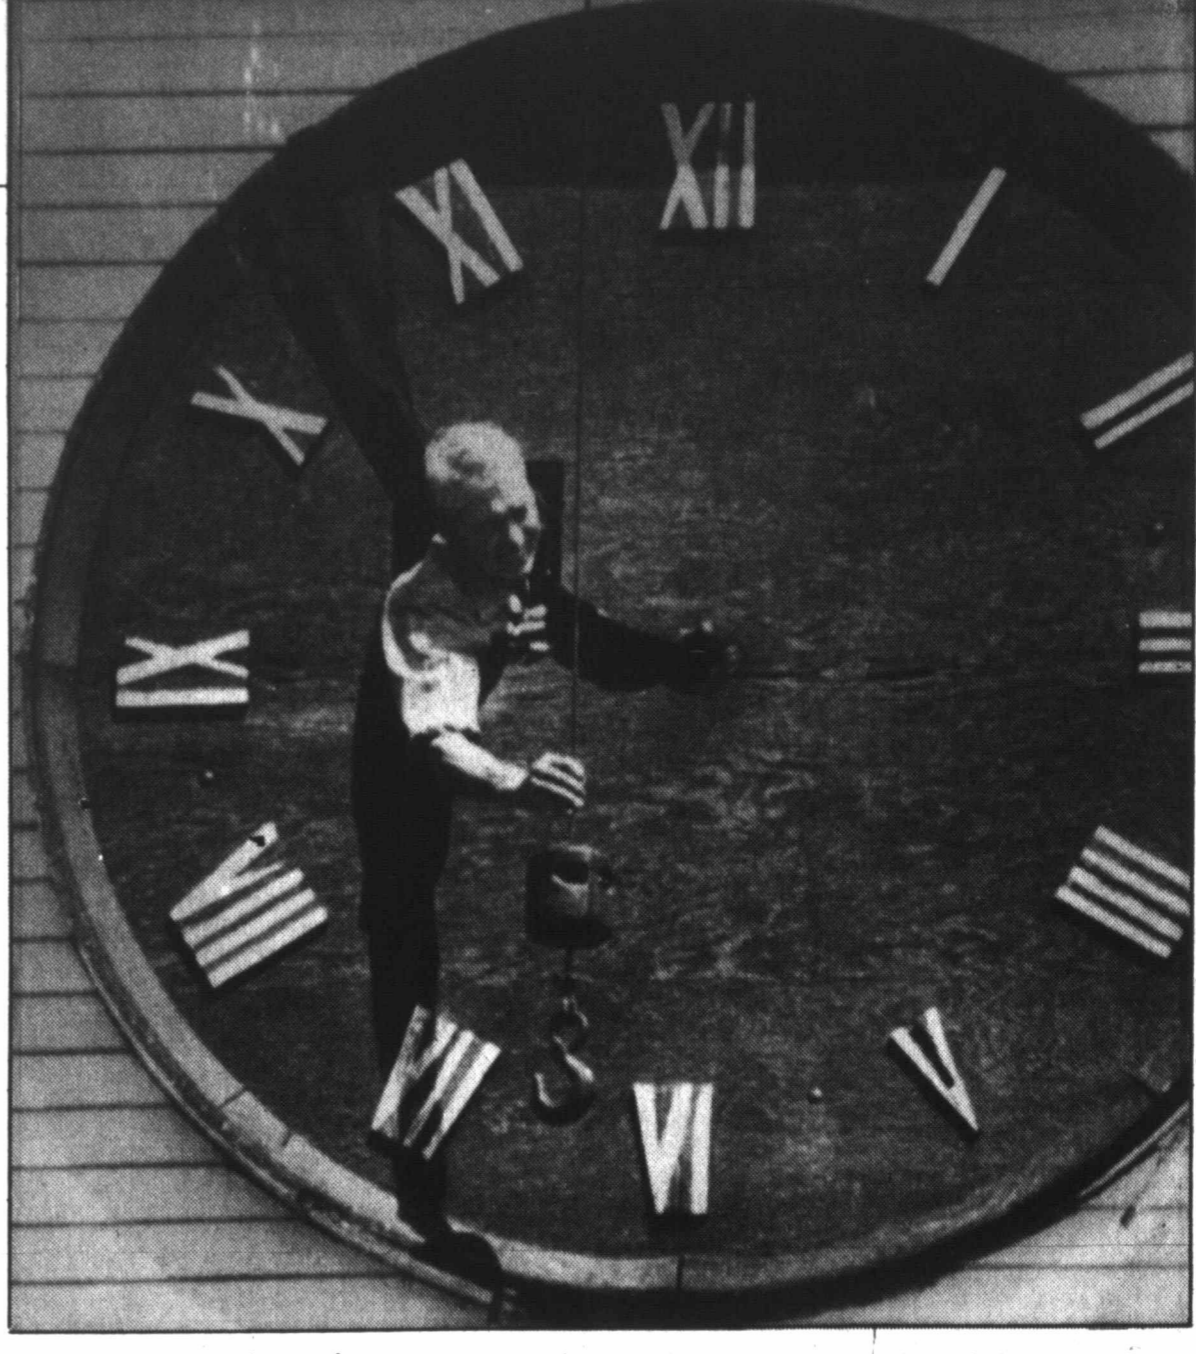

In his speech Galtieri blamed Argentina's defeat on the United States, "which surprisingly became the enemy."

The United States supported Britain in the undeclared war that began on April 2 when Argentina invaded the Falklands, a British colony claimed by Argentina since 1833 and home to 1,800 British-descended islanders and 600,000 sheep.

The British dispatched a naval task force that eventually totaled 100 ships and 9000 troops to retake the islands. Britain says 243 British soldiers were killed in land, sea and air battles and three civilians died in the shelling of Stanley, the Falklands capital. British analysts put the cost of the war at $2.16 billion and the price is expected to soar if Britain maintains a large military presence on the islands, as Mrs. Thatcher has indicated it will.

Argentina has listed more than 420 men as dead or missing in the 74-day war. But Britain claims to have killed at least 250 more.

Beirut braces for Israeli rush after ceasefire attempts fail

By The Associated Press
Beirut residents braced for a possible Israeli invasion today after Syrian and Israeli tanks shattered a four-day-old truce and Israel's Christian Lebanese allies battled Palestinian guerrillas in the war-devastated city.

Lebanese state television warned Tuesday night that although Israeli forces have said they will not storm Palestine Liberation Organization enclaves in predominantly Moslem west Beirut, the capital's 1 million inhabitants should prepare for an invasion "because one cannot trust Israel's assurances to the contrary."

PLO commanders in Beirut said guerrillas were hastily reinforcing positions to repel an Israeli attack. Reporters saw bulldozers heaping mounds of dirt onto streets, apparently to stop tanks.

The guerrilla organization's chief spokesman, Mahmoud Labadi denied Israeli reports that the PLO was crippled and its leader, Yasser Arafat was hiding in the Soviet Embassy.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin flew to the United States Tuesday, the 10th day of Israel's invasion of Lebanon to destroy the PLO and rout Syrian forces. He is expected to ask President Reagan to deploy U.S. forces in southern Lebanon after an Israeli pullout to keep PLO gunners from shelling northern Israeli targets.

As dusk fell Tuesday, anti-PLO Lebanese Christian militiamen who control Beirut's eastern sector shelled and machine-gunned Palestinian positions on the west side, dropping flares to direct gunners. Guerrillas returned the fire in shootouts that tapered off early today, residents said.

Earlier, Israeli and Syrian tanks blazed away at each other for four hours around the Lebanese capital's airport, breaking the truce established Friday between the Jewish state and its Syrian foe.

The Tel Aviv military command, reporting the clash, said Syrian forces and Palestinian guerrillas bombarded Israeli troops with tank fire east of the airport and the Israelis fired back.

Beirut radio stations said the Israelis and Syrians battled again as an Israeli armored column moved south from the Beirut suburb of Hadath and drove through the Syrian held town of Sheifat, four miles south of Beirut and a mile east of the airport.

In the Lebanese city of Sidon 19 miles south of the capital, PLO guerrilla units launched a brief mortar barrage Tuesday.

After Israeli forces invaded Lebanon June 6, they quickly overran Palestinian strongholds in southern Beirut and drove 50 miles north to the capital. Israeli forces and their Lebanese Christian allies ringed Beirut on Monday, blocking all escape routes for PLO guerrillas in the city.

The tank battle Tuesday came after about 1,000 Syrian troops in the Beirut area rejected an Israeli ultimatum to leave, Lebanon state television said. In Damascus, a government statement said Syria rejected the demand because its troops were there under a peacekeeping mandate from the Arab League.

Reagan's horse dies

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's personal riding horse, severely ill for several days, has died at Reagan's ranch in the foothills above Santa Barbara, his foreman says.

"He just sort of folded up," ranch foreman Lee Clearwater said Tuesday of the horse, a 20-year-old Thoroughbred named Little Man. "The president had already said that if he (the horse) couldn't make it to put him down."

Word of the death was relayed to the White House on Friday as Reagan flew back from his European summit. Clearwater said, adding that a veterinarian from nearby Solvang put the horse to death humanely Thursday.

Clearwater said he was with the horse "day and night for about 10 days," but the horse had lost sight in its left eye and it was clear it would not recover.

Farmer hurt in freak accident

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

A farmer west of Pampa narrowly missed serious injury Tuesday when his clothing caught in a combine, pulling him into the machine.

Derrell D. Conklin, 29, Route 1, Box 88 - B, Pampa, was working on his farm off Highway 152 when his clothes caught in the machine at about 11 a.m.

Pampa Fire Department officials said Conklin was trapped in his clothes and bruised badly, but did not suffer bad cuts in the machine.

Conklin's daughter called the hospital, fire officials said, told them her father was trapped in a combine and "bleeding badly," and said the farm was located "by the gas company."

Ambulance personnel at the fire department did not have enough information to find the farm, but finally located Conklin by calling his wife at the farm house.

His wife reportedly did not know about the accident. She gave them directions and said she would meet them near the main road.

Meanwhile, state highway patrolmen had heard the fire department's radio traffic about the accident. One unidentified patrolman remembered seeing a combine in a field in that general location.

The patrolman drove to the scene and freed Conklin before he could be seriously injured.

A fire department ambulance took Conklin to Coronado Community Hospital, where he was treated for abrasions. A hospital spokesman said today that doctors are still concerned over possible internal injuries Conklin may have suffered.

Conklin was reported in good condition this morning and was undergoing observation in the intensive care unit of the hospital.

Funnel clouds threaten, but skip over Skellytown

Towering clouds hovered over the Pampa area Wednesday night, but Pampa was spared the storm that brought some tough weather to the north Panhandle and reportedly spawned funnel clouds near Skellytown.

The Amarillo office of the National Weather Service issued a tornado warning for Carson County at 8:45 p.m. Wednesday in effect until 9:30 p.m.

Funnel clouds were sighted west of Skellytown at 8:30 p.m., according to NWS, and were reported by Jim Wise of Skellytown.

The Carson County Sheriff's Department reported no damage from wind or hail last night, however, and no officers saw the clouds.

At 8:35 p.m., the NWS radar picked up indications of an isolated heavy thunderstorm south of Borger, moving southeast at 20-25 mph toward White Deer.

A line of thunderstorms was also indicated south of Dalhart and northwest of Clovis, N.M., moving to the south at 20-25 mph.

The bad weather has moved out of the area, however. The extended forecast calls for partly cloudy days and fair nights.

Parents will discuss school problems here

Parents of Pampa students will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Flame Room at Energas Co. to discuss problems facing students in the Pampa school system.

The meeting has been organized independent of school and civic organizations by individual parents.

A representative of the group said the meeting will not be a "gripe session," but an effort to foster better communications between school and home, and to uncover problems that schools have not been able to solve.

All interested adults have been asked to attend.

Federal judge drops grocery chains from antitrust lawsuit

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed all but two large meat packers as defendants in a 1975 antitrust suit brought by beef producers who accused grocery store chains of fixing beef prices.

U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham dropped two dozen grocery store chains as defendants in the suit, said the retailers' lawyer, Wilson Herndon.

The two packers left as defendants are Iowa Beef Processors Inc. and Missouri Meat Processors Corp.

The suit is a combination of 23 cases filed by an estimated 1,400 to 1,800 producers, who asked for several hundred million dollars in damages.

The retailers, which include Safeway Stores Inc., the Kroger Co. and the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. Inc., later were dismissed from the suit. But that dismissal was appealed to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which sent the case to Higginbotham's court.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1977 that sellers have no standing to sue indirect purchasers, but the appeals court gave the producers a chance to prove a direct relationship with the grocery stores, Herndon said.

They failed, according to Higginbotham's decision issued Monday, which releases the retailers from liability for damages.

Herndon said the ruling "effectively dismisses" the retailers from the suit.

The retailers dismissed from the suit are Albertson's Inc., American Stores Co., Hardin-Mayfair Inc., Borman's Inc., Circle-K Corp., First National Stores Inc., Food Fair Inc., Giant Food Inc., Grand Union Co., Colonial Stores Inc., Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. Inc., Jewel Cos. Inc., Kroger and Lucky Stores Inc.

Warrant issued in abduction of mother, daughter found in grave

KERMIT, Texas (AP) — Law enforcement officers want to question a paroled Odessa man about the abduction of a Kermit woman and her daughter, who were found stabbed and buried in a shallow grave.

Michael Eugene Sharp, 28, was named in an aggravated kidnapping warrant issued Monday by Peace Justice Lee Rutledge.

"Winkler County sheriff's officials said Tuesday the warrant resulted from information supplied by the woman's 14-year-old daughter. The girl, who was naked and bound by the hands, escaped from her abductor Friday and traveled five miles on foot over rugged terrain before reaching help.

Sheriff Bill Sage said Sharp's co-workers had seen a composite picture developed from Selena Kay Elm's description of her abductor and had said Sharp "was probably the guy." The workers also said Sharp had been driving a blue pickup like the one described as having been used in the abduction.

Sgt. Mike Eggleston said records showed that Sharp had a tattoo similar to that described by the survivor.

"That's the way we clearly identified him — a large winged horse on his upper left chest," Eggleston said.

He said investigators waited outside

Sharp's home until midnight Monday but he did not return.

He said Sharp, also known as Michael Eugene Owensby, had worked for at least a month at an oil drilling site two miles from where the bodies of Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, and Christi Mechelle Elms, 8, were found.

Sage said that their investigation indicated Sharp probably knew Ms. Broadway, but declined to elaborate.

Eggleston said authorities had determined the slayings occurred one-half mile inside the Ector County line and that therefore any murder charges in the case would have to be filed in that county.

Grand jury indicts roofer in spa attacks

DALLAS (AP) — A county grand jury has indicted a 24-year-old man in connection with a bizarre series of sex-related offenses, including attacks of women at health spas.

Steven Charles Phillips, a roofer, was named Tuesday on felony charges of burglary, assault, rape and sexual abuse. He is accused in three separate attacks May 14 and May 15 on two Dallas women and another woman in nearby Carrollton.

The indictments allege that Phillips raped and sexually assaulted a 29-year-old woman after breaking into her North Dallas apartment, forced a 22-year-old woman to disrobe at a gunpoint and committed a similar act against the manager of a Carrollton health spa.

Prosecutors said Phillips has been identified in connection with an attack in which 23 customers at a figure salon were ordered to strip and the manager was threatened unless she also complied.

State's Republicans eat steak, Democrats dine on hot dogs

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Republicans ate steak with President Reagan and paid $1,000 for the privilege, while Democrats helped their gubernatorial candidate by coughing up $5 for a Weiner roast and a bottle of beer.

A who's who of GOP leaders, including former President Gerald Ford and White House Chief of Staff James Baker, joined 3,500 others at Tuesday night's black-tie dinner that raised more than $3.5 million for the re-election campaign of Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

A few blocks away at a downtown hotel, about 2,000 enthusiastic Harris County Democrats raised money for their candidate, Texas Attorney General Mark White, by auctioning off party mementoes and handing out videotapes of "Bedtime for Bozo," a movie starring the president.

Walter Mischer, a Houston businessman and chairman of the GOP dinner, said contributions totaled $3,551,000. Clements' aide Mary Jane Maddox said the amount topped the previous record for a fund-raising event for a single candidate, which she said was $2.9 million at a previous dinner for Clements.

Reagan praised Clements as a "great governor" and told the audience, "The best future governor of Texas is the present governor of Texas."

"He has reduced the number of state employees and cut taxes at the same time. He has brought in corporate executives to lend their expertise to make state government more efficient. He launched an effort to control waste and fraud," Reagan said.

Among the speakers at the Democrats fundraiser was humorist John Henry Faulk, who said he was offended by the GOP affair.

"I am fascinated by the crassness of having a $1,000-a-plate dinner when within five miles of where they are holding it, there are families that a $1,000 represents an entire year's food budget," Faulk said.

White was in Wyoming on a legal matter and could not attend, but telephoned and said, "I understand the Republicans are going to raise $3 million. Tell them they'll need a lot more than that to beat Mark White."

A few hours before the dinner, Clements appeared at a news conference flanked by former Democratic governors John Connally and Preston Smith, who gave him their endorsements. Clements also claims the endorsement of another Democratic former governor, Allan Shivers.

The Republican incumbent said he already had "well over $3 million" in his campaign treasury before Tuesday night's donations were counted.

Clements said he was "comfortably ahead" of White in GOP-commissioned polls and boasted "I fully intend to win" re-election in November. He declined to reveal any poll figures.

However, White said, his polls indicated Clements was trailing in the race.

Clements, who spent $7 million four years ago to become the state's first Republican governor in 105 years, said he hopes to spend less than that this year, but he said he did not know how much this year's race would cost.

In the 1978 race, "I had no name identification, and there was a lot of money spent in the primary," said Clements, who had only token opposition in this year's Republican primary.

Draper to head Baptists

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Conservatives have retained the reins of Southern Baptist leadership, electing their standard-bearer, the Rev. James T. Draper Jr. of Texas, to head the nation's largest Protestant body.

His victory marked the fourth consecutive year in which the conservative-fundamentalist wing of the 13.8-million-member denomination has won its presidency in contest with moderates.

He's a "very solid conservative," said a leading tactician of that camp, the Rev. Paige Patterson of Dallas.

Patterson told reporters the result should "mean a deeper awareness to the fact that a large segment of Southern Baptists hold to the inerrancy of Scripture, and don't want it questioned in our institutions."

That insistence on "inerrancy" — that the Bible is word-for-word without error in literal fact — has been the rallying cry of conservatives. Beyond that lay the presidential power in picking trustees of agencies and institutions.

While the conservative tide has held firm since 1979, the contest was stiffer this time, with the election Tuesday forced for the first time into a second ballot in which Draper beat the moderate Rev. Duke McCall of Louisville.

Draper, 46, who had led a field of four candidates in the initial round, got 8,331 votes in the second, about 57 percent, to 6,292, about 43 percent, for McCall, 67, long-time head of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

"Compared to the recent years, it was a surprisingly close race," commented Porter Routh of Nashville, the denomination's former chief administrator, now retired.

"It seems to me McCall's strong showing should signal some moderating influence in the conservative drive," he added. "Baptists have a tendency to come together in the center after the dust has settled, and the results this time should add to that tendency."

In late-night voting, the convention later elected a moderate, the Rev. John Sullivan of Shreveport, La., as first vice president. He has been among the original four candidates for the presidency.

His winning the second highest office by an overwhelming 68 percent of the vote in competition with a conservative layman, U.S. Rep. Albert Lee Smith Jr., of Birmingham, also added a balancing note to the new leadership.

Draper, 46, has been pastor of the First Baptist Church in the Dallas suburb of Euless for about seven years. He previously served churches in Bryan, Iredell, Tyler and San Antonio, Texas, and in Kansas City, Mo., and Del City, Okla.

There, he preceded the outgoing Southern Baptist president, the Rev. Bailey Smith, a strong fundamentalist, who presently leads that Del City congregation.

Draper, born in Hartford, Ark., the son and grandson of Southern Baptist preachers, is married and he and his wife, Carol Ann, have three children. He is the author of four books, and enjoys golf and racquetball.

He's a "spirit-filled, God-appointed preacher," the Rev. Morris Chapman of Wichita Falls, Texas, said in nominating Draper. "He's a man with a mission heart."

The convention, which runs through Thursday, had before it a swarm of about 50 introduced resolutions, many taking opposing sides of issues, and reflecting the friction over policy within the big denomination.

One resolution would denounce the "vicious and libelous" attack on McCall made in a partisan publication distributed at the convention, accusing him of having a "drinking problem."

The attack was contrived, McCall relates, from an incident on a Chinese riverboat in which he later joked to his staff that he had faced a "drinking problem" because the only available beverages were caffeine-containing tea, which his heart doctors had forbidden, and Chinese beer.

Dehydrated, he says, he sipped the beer, but didn't finish the glass. "I didn't like the stuff," he adds, saying it's the only time he knows of that he's ever taken any alcoholic beverage.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to have this letter printed in hopes that the very kind gentlemen who assisted my son and his girlfriend at their accident scene on the evening of April 25th, will see it and know how thankful we are for their help.

The accident scene was outside of Pampa and happened around 11:30 p.m. The girl tried to stop five passing motorists before the men stopped in the truck and gave aid. Without their help, my son and his girlfriend would be dead. It is nice to know there are still people around who are willing to stop and help someone in need.

My son is slowly recovering and his girlfriend has since been discharged from the hospital. We want them to know how grateful we are for their help. We have no way of knowing who they are, as they left once help arrived. God bless them.

Silent spending

The Reagan administration's campaign against leaks has seen such worthies as the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the deputy secretary of defense, two under secretaries and the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force "volunteer" to be hooked up to polygraphs. This is beginning to stir resentment in the Pentagon. A career officer, John Tilson, a West Pointer and twice the recipient of the Silver Star for services in Vietnam, stands accused and faces dismissal.

There are at least two ironies in the present discontent over the crackdown on leaks from the Pentagon. The first is that all this repressive activity has not been instigated because somebody suspected somebody of leaking important documents to the Russians, the Cubans, or to any foreign power that might be suspected of wishing ill on the people of the United States.

The current crackdown, it is becoming clear, came about as a result of leaks to U.S. reporters and staff members of congressional committees that are supposed to have authority over Pentagon spending. What dangerous information was the stealth bomber, a new design for laser weapons, atomic secrets? No, it was Pentagon budget estimates.

On Jan. 7, about 30 top Pentagon officials got a confidential briefing on the amount of money the Pentagon might ask Congress for in the next five years. The administration budget estimates had suggested that the total would be around $1.5 trillion. The slide show the members of the Defense Resources Board got, however, suggested that the estimates might be a little on the low side — by as much as $750 billion over five years.

Deputy Secretary of Defense Frank Calucci pleaded at the meeting for those present not to disclose these higher figures. After all, it wouldn't be seemly for taxpayers to know how much the Pentagon wanted to gouge them. But the next day, the higher figures appeared in the Washington Post. Somebody must have leaked the information, and thus was born the Reagan administration campaign against leakers.

The completion of the irony is that a distinguished officer faces punishment for "leaking" information that taxpayers have a right to know. What he leaked wasn't even classified, simply declared to be "official information."

The second irony arises from the perception by most reporters with experience covering the Pentagon that the number of leaks usually increases with the level of frustration and dissatisfaction experienced by Pentagon employees. The present anti-leak campaign, calling into question the integrity of dozens of experienced, respected military professionals, is increasing this unhappiness. It can almost be predicted that the number of leaks will therefore increase and the anti-leak squads will find themselves scurrying about in an increasingly fruitless endeavor.

The administration should do two things. First, it should repent of its intentions to keep budget projections secret from taxpayers, and desist from such petty deceptions. Second, it should call off this absurd and hopeless effort to plug leaks, and permit people in the Pentagon to get back to work with a minimum of paranoia.

Draft registration should be ended

Has President Reagan yet learned that abandonment of sound principles and campaign promises carries a heavy price? How does he feel about the cynical (and perhaps lawless) attitude government officials are being forced to take to rescue draft registration?

According to a transcript of a meeting of the Military Manpower Task Force, federal officials may be conviving to selectively prosecute for blatantly political purposes. They figure they've got to run a few exemplary trials to convince some $27,000 non-registrants (those are official figures; actual figures are probably higher) that they'd better register for the draft. But they would like to do it in such a way that they don't stir up too much opposition.

John S. Herrington, assistant secretary of the Navy for manpower, was quoted as telling other participants: "I think we ought to proceed really cautiously on this particular point. . . I think the cases should be quiet. And pick the right jurisdiction so you don't end up in New York or Chicago and end up in Omaha or somewhere like that for your first few trials."

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger got the point right away. "Not the District of Columbia," he responded.

Selective Service director Thomas K. Turnage was not to be outdone in the cynicism department. "There can't be any selective prosecution, but I understand there is some moral names," he was quoted as saying.

Selective Service has reportedly referred 225 names to the Justice Dept. Let's try to understand what's happening. It appears that at the April 12 meeting several high-ranking federal officials conspired to miscarry justice for cold-blooded political reasons.

If more than 500,000 young men have violated the law, then they should be prosecuted as soon as the violation comes to the attention of law enforcement officials. This prosecution should occur without any consideration of territory, area, or potential protests. If a law can't be enforced through this kind of evenhanded, impartial administration of justice, then justice is a joke, and we might as well be living in a dictatorship ruled by whim.

There is a reason, of course, why federal officials would consider such dubious contractions. The clearly is that draft registration is reason unjust and unjustified.

When federal officials have to worry about massive protests in the wake of an attempt to enforce a law in an evenhanded way, it is time to take another look at the law. Reagan has had the option of eliminating draft registration from the outset of his administration by the stroke of a pen. He still has that option. He should be true to himself and do it.

FOIA: vital tool for citizens

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — At a time when the Freedom of Information Act is the object of constant attacks from those who prefer secrecy in government, a court case in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas demonstrates why the law must be preserved.

The civil suit was filed by Texas Rural Legal Aid on behalf of three farm workers who allege that they suffered adverse health effects two years ago after walking through a field sprayed with a pesticide called Carbofuran.

That compound is a product of the FMC Corp., a major producer of chemicals and machinery, which had registered the pesticide with the Environmental Protection Agency in accordance with federal law.

That law requires producers to share with EPA — in secrecy — information about the chemical components of pesticides. In addition, EPA maintains — in secrecy — health and safety data about the pesticides registered with the agency.

Without the FOIA, none of that information would have been available to the farm workers, who claim they suffered dizziness, vomiting and rashes — all symptoms of pesticide poisoning — immediately after being exposed to Carbofuran and continue to experience long-term health problems.

Although EPA has not yet released the information, a federal judge in U.S. District Court in Brownsville, Texas, recently ruled that the FOIA requires disclosure of the data.

That action followed by less than a month the publication of a study providing more than 500 examples of how the FOIA has been used in recent years to provide access to government records to a wide variety of individuals and organizations.

The 180-page study, published by the Washington-based Campaign for Political Rights, is titled "Former Secrets: Government Records Made Public Through the Freedom of Information Act." Among the examples cited:

— Records released by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration revealed a serious safety problem in Ford Pinto gas tanks and led to the recall of 1.5 million autos.

— The Food and Drug Administration banned two carcinogens, Chloroform and Red Dye No. 2, after a consumer group obtained documents showing the substances were hazardous.

— Following the release of documents showing a possible increase in cancer among pregnant women taking the hormone DES, the Surgeon General issued an advisory warning those exposed to the drug of the potential danger.

— Defense Department audits of Washington offices maintained by the country's 10 largest military contractors showed that those corporations had charged the government for more than $2 million worth of questionable lobbying expenditures.

— The Conservative Caucus obtained material from 17 federal agencies and departments to support its allegation that the government was providing unnecessarily generous funding to "liberal-left" groups and causes.

— Military veterans obtained data about their serious health hazards to which they were exposed when they were subjected to the testing of atomic weapons in the 1950s and to Agent Orange during the war in Southeast Asia.

Despite that impressive record, the FOIA has been the object of ceaseless criticism from a coalition that includes President Reagan, much of the business community and others unwilling to accept the concept of "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Those critics recently received a major setback when the Senate Judiciary Committee voted 18-0 to approve a package of very limited amendments to the FOIA proposed by Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., a staunch supporter of the law.

Those modest changes were a substitute for a package of draconian amendments drafted by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who led the Senate campaign to undermine the FOIA until he was subjected to pressure from a coalition of journalism, civil liberties and public-interest organizations.

The committee's action means that the FOIA probably will remain essentially intact for at least another year, thus providing one of the most effective tools available to citizens concerned about what the federal government is doing for — or to — them.

Opposition to technology

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

If American industry is to survive in the future, it will have to make much greater use of modern technology, including robot machines. The Japanese already are using these in great numbers. They expect to use these to make increasing inroads in markets long dominated by American companies.

Unfortunately, labor unions are fighting the robots tooth and nail. They are demanding that American manufacturing companies refrain from employing new technology.

How the unions think is revealed in a newsletter issued by the International Association of Machinists. Here is an excerpt from the union newsletter:

"Brothers and Sisters, if you remember a few months ago I informed you of a Robot in the Lab. Well it is planned to be put on the payroll. Where is it going? From what I know, it is heading for Burr & Blend Area so

Brothers and Sisters, be prepared to be taken over by Modern Technology. I wonder if the supervisor in that area will treat the Robot as other employees in that area.

"Brothers and Sisters this is a serious problem facing American workers in this country. Ten years ago Robots and Modern Technology was something in the future, well now it is here upon us. The American industry is saying that it is doing this to be competitive with foreign industry. Robots and Sisters there are over 5,000 Robots at work in American industry today. Aero - Space Industry is already putting Robots to work. This past month Brother Crane and myself attended the machinist Aero Conference, and this was a big issue with the other Locals, as everyone knows there are over 150,000 Auto workers laid off while the Robots are still working in these plants. Brothers and Sisters we had better remember this in Negotiations next year, in order to protect our jobs from Robots and Technology."

Reading this union newsletter, one understands why American industry is in trouble and the economy is deteriorating. Instead of welcoming new machinery, designed to boost output, the unions are determined to cancel its good effect. Of course, that's the surest way of depriving American companies of sales and of hastening unemployment.

The same IAM newsletter expressed outrage that a major aerospace company was "cutting up the job descriptions to your occupations to suit their individual qualms." What the machinists want and have are rigid job classifications that prevent companies from assigning employees to areas where they are needed. For example, machine operators would not be permitted by the union to paint machines when painting is needed. Workers in many industrial plants in the United States sit idle for hours out of each day because they can complete their assigned tasks in a short time and may not be assigned other duties. All this wasted time goes in the price of American goods and makes them uncompetitive on world markets. The annual report of Caterpillar Tractor Company are paid twice as much as Japanese workers doing the same job.

Union restrictions on industrial work are one of the least discussed and publicized problems in the United States. Yet this problem is central to the recession the United States is experiencing today.

Buck Rogers to the rescue

By PAUL HARVEY
Pseudo - science comic strip cartoonists have tried for decades to tell us that future wars would be fought in space.

But only the Soviets were paying attention.

The United States — true enough — was first to land on the moon.

Also, with TV eyes we have explored deep space, other planets, have made enormous contributions to scientific knowledge of our universe.

Meanwhile, since their first sputnik, the Soviets have been content to explore the airless ocean above our own planet.

While we have been gathering moonbeams, the Ruskies have been preparing for star wars.

The Soviets are now ahead of us in space-based laser weapons.

As we become increasingly dependent on satellite communication and ballistic missiles, the Soviets are increasing their capability to shoot down our satellites and intercept our missiles.

Tardily, our government is wakening to what's up. The General Accounting Office just this last month urged the Pentagon to get busier on directed-energy technology; laser, particle and micro-wave beams.

Gradually, however, we are increasing our funding of space research for military purposes. Half a billion plus has recently transferred from NASA's budget to the Defense Department.

NASA's purely civilian scientific programs, which formerly comprised 36 percent of the research and development budget, will be down to 28 percent next year as our nation shifts its emphasis to technology with potential military applications.

Our space shuttle is a mostly - military project.

So the arms - race is on. Satellites are being chased down and destroyed by hunter - killer satellites.

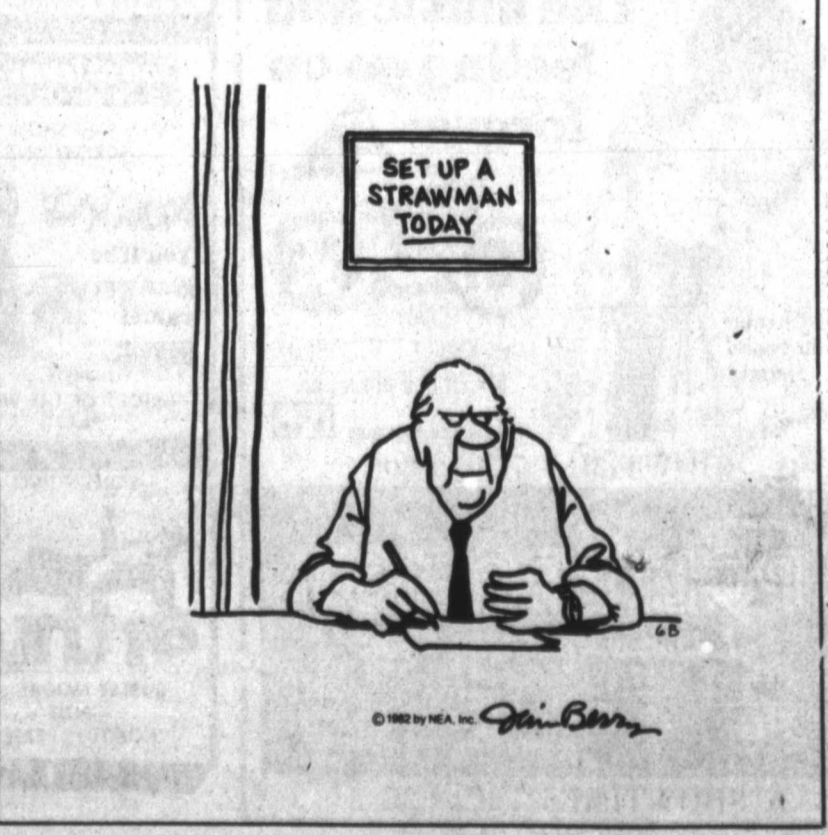

The United States and the U.S.S.R. are being driven back to the conference table to re - re - consider (cq) weapons limitation because the potential for doomsday increases with every liftoff.

I'm yet unconvinced that's bad.

Cain clobbered Abel with a club and men have been fighting ever since.

Through the development of the slingshot, the crossbow, the catapult, gunpowder, the cannon and blockbuster bombs — men continued to wage periodic war on one another.

More take home pay is due next month

WASHINGTON (AP) — A typical worker with a spouse and two children who earns the median weekly income of $467 will take home an extra $6 a week under the federal income tax cut that will show up in paychecks starting July 1.

The amount of federal income tax withheld from that worker's paycheck will drop to $53.60 a week, a reduction of 10.1 percent. That is down 14.8 percent ($9.30) from the $62.90 withheld before the first step of the gradual tax cut enacted last year went into effect on Oct. 1.

The cut in withholding will range from 40 cents a week for a single person earning $100, to $13.40 for the $1,000-a-week married worker.

As a rule, the drop in withholding is fairly close to the actual tax reduction at each wage level, meaning most taxpayers are unlikely to see a major shift in what they owe the government or get in refunds when they file their returns next spring.

The Internal Revenue Service has mailed new withholding tables to give the nation's employers time to prepare for the second stage of the tax reduction. The third step, also in the 10-percent range, is due to show up in paychecks July 1, 1983, unless Congress changes plans in an effort to reduce the federal deficit.

Taxes were reduced last Oct. 1 at a rate that would average 5 percent on a full year's basis, but that was barely felt because it was in effect for only one quarter of the year. And although tax rates went down an average 10 percent on Jan. 1, most taxpayers have seen no benefit at all because the change has yet to be reflected in withholding rates.

Thus, the reduction in withholding next month will provide, for most Americans, the first noticeable benefit from the tax cut worked out by Congress and President Reagan.

For most workers, the extra money they will pocket starting next month will not be enough to offset the increase in Social Security taxes that took effect on Jan. 1 and the higher income taxes that result when a worker's pay raise pushes him or her into a higher tax bracket.

As an example, the Treasury Department says, the one-earner, four-member family at the median income level — $467 a week or $24,300 a year — will end up with a combined federal tax increase of $127 this year. The $137 rise in Social Security taxes alone wipes out almost half the income tax cut.

The Social Security tax on each covered worker was 6.65 percent of the first $29,700 earned in 1981, a maximum tax of $1,975. This year, the rate is 6.7 percent of the first $3,240, a maximum tax of $2,171.

Hinckley's actions make federal judge angry

WASHINGTON (AP) — With his trial suddenly nearing an end, John W. Hinckley Jr. has angered a federal judge by blurting out "You're Wrong" at a psychiatrist called by prosecutors trying the case against the presidential attacker.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker will decide today whether to permit more defense witnesses, perhaps including Hinckley, who is charged with shooting President Reagan and three other men.

Parker sharply rebuked Hinckley for his courtroom conduct Tuesday and vowed, "I don't intend to let it go unnoticed, nor do I intend to see it repeated."

After testimony ended for the day Tuesday, chief prosecutor Roger M. Adelman surprised the courtroom by telling the judge, "Your honor, tomorrow morning we will rest our case."

"What did you say?" asked the startled Parker. "Did I understand you to say there is no more live testimony?"

"That's right," Adelman said. "We make these judgments as we go along and we feel that we are in a position where it is prudent to rest our case now."

Adelman had been expected to call two more psychiatrists to rebut the defense contention that Hinckley was insane.

Hinckley has acknowledged shooting four men, including Reagan, on March 30, 1981, but he contends he is innocent by reason of insanity.

Parker had asked opposing lawyers earlier to prepare legal memorandums on whether Hinckley waived his right to testify when he did not take the stand while the defense was presenting its case.

Hinckley's lawyers made clear at earlier bench conferences that their client wanted to take the stand, but they advised against it at the time. They never closed the door on the possibility.

The last prosecution witness, prison psychiatrist Sally Johnson, testified Hinckley's reason for shooting the president was not to win the love of actress Jodie Foster.

"You're wrong," Hinckley blurted out. The comment was not loud enough to be heard by everyone in the courtroom.

Minutes later, as his lawyers were talking with the judge at the bench, Hinckley glared at Mrs. Johnson and mouthed:

"Go to hell. Go to hell." And, "I hate you, you bitch."

After the jury was dismissed and Hinckley started to leave, the judge said to his bodyguards, "Wait. Bring the defendant back."

Parker said court personnel reported to him that "immediately before the last recess, Dr. Johnson made a statement and you retorted — you responded to it...."

"I don't intend to let it go unnoticed nor do I intend to see it repeated."

"Do you understand what I'm saying?" In a weak voice Hinckley responded, "Yes I do."

Entered burning apartment, face traffic ticket

DALLAS (AP) — He may be a hero, but Jessie Thomas says he didn't feel like one when he was ticketed for driving over a fire hose after he left a burning apartment that he had searched for victims.

Thomas, 38, said Tuesday he faces $52 in traffic citations after he stopped at the apartment fire last week in the Dallas suburb of Garland.

He said he smelled smoke last Wednesday at the English Village condominiums, then heard the building manager scream that a child might be inside the burning unit near him.

"First, I screamed to nearby neighbors to get out of their apartments," Thomas, an auctioneer, said. "Then I ran over and kicked in the door, but the smoke was so thick I couldn't see anything, so I ran back to my apartment and threw a wet towel over my head."

"I crawled around in there for three or four minutes until I was sure no one was inside," he said.

A police officer cited Thomas for backing over a water hose as he drove from the scene. He was ticketed again not far from the complex when the same officer pulled him over for making an improper start from the stop sign.

"When the police officer cited me the first time, I said, 'I'm the one who went in there and risked my life to save the little boy next door,' and he said, 'You're also the one who ran over the fire hose,'" Thomas said.

Man charged with indecency after children found in motel

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A man police said was making money from the labors of children selling candy has been charged with sexually molesting one of the 34 young people found crowded in two motel rooms here.

LI Ricardo Cuellar said Bilal Muhammed Ali, 40, of San Antonio was being held in the El Paso County Jail today in lieu of $100,000 bond. He was charged with indecency with a child and Cuellar said more charges may be filed today.

"Some of the kids complained of being over-disciplined with a leather strap," he said.

Cuellar said the 34 children — found Monday night crowded into two rooms at a central El Paso motel — were not being fed properly and were not being paid the 75 cents Ali claims they received for every $2.50 box of candy sold.

Child welfare officials said Ali arrived in El Paso Sunday after traveling through several Texas cities with the children he hired to sell candy door-to-door.

He said child welfare authorities "really cracked the case open" Tuesday when they interviewed the children, most of whom were from the San Antonio area. Ali was arrested after a 12-year-old girl told the authorities she had been molested by him.

In an interview, Ali denied the children's allegations, saying they were well-fed and that his operation was a way for poor children to earn money for school.

Ali is founder and president of a two-year-old firm called Action Youth Self-Help Inc., which recruits children for the door-to-door sales force.

He said the group left San Antonio less than two weeks ago and traveled in two vans through San Angelo, Lubbock and Amarillo before reaching El Paso.

Another slow start on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Huse and Senate negotiators are making a slow start in forging a compromise 1983 budget as Republicans from both chambers first try privately to work out their differences with help from the White House.

The bipartisan group of budget conferees from the House and Senate began work Tuesday but did little more than make opening speeches.

Another session was scheduled this afternoon as the legislators try to fashion a compromise between the $784.3 billion outline adopted by the Senate last month and the $765.2 billion package endorsed by the House last week.

The full House and Senate each must ratify the compromise.

House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., characterized the disagreements as "almost a family matter within the Republican family to mediate."

Soviets stressing adversary relationship

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union is taking a hard — and even sarcastic — line toward the United States as the two countries approach negotiations on a new treaty to reduce strategic nuclear weapons.

While President Reagan has soft-pedaled the "adversary relationship," Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko used the U.N. special session on disarmament as a platform for attacking U.S. weapons policies.

Accusing the Reagan administration of trickery and "concoctions of all sorts," Gromyko said Tuesday a "military frenzy" and "a spirit of militarism" were driving the United States to seek supremacy over the Soviet Union.

The aim, Gromyko said, is "to keep it scared, as simple as that — to keep it scared."

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev took a loftier tone in a message to the special session in which he unilaterally renounced the first use of nuclear weapons.

And yet, in the message read by Gromyko, the Soviet leader apparently could not resist baiting the United States and its allies a bit.

Brezhnev questioned whether North Atlantic Treaty Organization doctrine was based on the "dangerous premise" of possibly using nuclear weapons first.

Reagan, who addresses the session on Thursday, has played down differences with Moscow since he outlined his treaty proposal in a Mother's Day speech last month.

"Basically, the primary problem today," he said May 24, "is reducing the store of nuclear arms that threaten the peace of mind, certainly, of all the people of the world, and do pose a threat to all of us physically."

Reagan may strike a tough stance in his U.N. speech. But, so far, his recent statements sharply contrast Gromyko's — and the president's own scathing attack on the Soviets in his first presidential news conference January 1981.

In classically Cold War rhetoric, Reagan then said the Soviets "reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat."

Beneath it all was the Soviet contention that there is a rough equivalence in weapons now between East and West.

U.S. wants strong Lebanese government

By R. REGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, seeking to take advantage of the situation created by Israel's invasion of Lebanon, is working to establish a strong central government in the war-torn nation to assume control after the withdrawal of foreign troops.

Philip C. Habib, President Reagan's special Mideast envoy, is engaging in discussions to that end in Israel, Lebanon and Syria, and the administration has appealed to all interested parties to support his mission.

Left open so far is the question of whether U.S. troops might participate in an international peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has indicated that U.S. participation is a possibility.

But Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said

Tuesday he would oppose sending U.S. troops in Lebanon on any basis. And Israel's U.S. Ambassador, Moshe Arens, has been saying in recent days he doesn't think it would be necessary.

But the Israeli government does look to the United States to play a leadership role in determining the future course of events in Lebanon, and Washington appears ready to play such a role.

The administration's emerging post-invasion strategy is evident from public and private statements by administration officials, including Haig.

The goals of Israel and Washington in Lebanon coincide in most important respects. Where there have been differences, Washington has been moving steadily toward the Israeli view.

After first voting approval of a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for an immediate and unilateral withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon, Washington is now linking an Israeli withdrawal to a withdrawal of Syrian forces as well.

Syria has had 30,000 troops in Lebanon since 1976 as part of an Arab peacekeeping force. Haig said Sunday the Syrians have been there "too long." At the same time, the administration is no longer pressing Israel for an immediate withdrawal and seems recoiled to an Israeli presence for some time.

The administration has remained firm in its refusal to criticize the Israelis for their invasion of Lebanon and the substantial casualties that followed. The silence has given rise to widespread speculation in Washington and other capitals that the administration tacitly approved of the invasion.

Mexican woman identified apartment of border patrol agent, investigator reports

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two Mexican women driven around an El Paso neighborhood by an investigator were able to point out the apartment of a Border Patrol officer accused of violating the women's civil rights, the investigator has testified.

Immigration and Naturalization Service investigator Nicolas Gallardo said Tuesday the women identified Border Patrolman David M. Davila's apartment as the place where they allegedly were coerced into having sex with two patrol officers.

Davila and fellow patrolman Robert M. Jacques are charged with violating the women's civil rights by forcing them to have sex, and with obstruction of justice for allegedly falsifying official reports.

Gallardo testified that he drove the women around Davila's neighborhood after they said that was where the activity had occurred. He quoted the women as saying, "That's it," when they saw Davila's apartment.

Former Fort Bliss soldier William Ward testified Monday that he and fellow soldier Warren Palmer brought the women into El Paso Oct. 18, 1980, through a hole in a fence near the International Bridges over the Rio Grande.

He said the four were stopped by two Border Patrol agents, who released the men and said they would turn the women over to Mexican authorities.

The women, Alicia Ortiz and Norma Munoz-Pro, said they were told the soldiers would get in trouble if the women did not have sex with the patrolmen.

Ms. Ortiz since has married Palmer.

Ward identified Jacques and Davila Monday as the officers who "stopped" them. However, INS investigator Ralph Page, under questioning from defense attorney Jack Luscombe, said Tuesday that Ward had been unable to identify the men from photographs only a month after the incident.

But Page said Ms. Ortiz was able to identify one of the officers from photographs and Ms. Munoz-Pro identified both.

Page said investigators became suspicious of Davila after the women identified his apartment as the site of the sexual activity.

Luscombe attempted to prove that his clients and their patrol car did not fit the descriptions given by the soldiers and the women in investigation reports. Both soldiers said the patrol car had red flashing lights on top, but photographs of the car showed the only red lights were behind the grill.

Troubled Poland draws attention of the Pope

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Troubled Poland was seldom far from the thoughts of Pope John Paul II as he hurried through a day-long visit to this tranquil city.

The pope — whose next trip is likely to be to Poland in August — referred subtly but often Tuesday to events in his native, martial law-administered country, where an open challenge to Communist rule was crushed last December in a sweeping military crackdown.

John Paul returned to the Vatican Tuesday night. The pope invoked the word "solidarity" 47 times — an indirect but inescapable reference to the independent Polish labor movement suspended when the Warsaw regime decreed martial law — in an hour-long speech to the 149-member International Labor Organization.

The pope also met briefly and unexpectedly with Solidarity activists who were outside Poland when martial law was imposed, made a point of blessing the bearer of a "Solidarnosc" banner and often wove events in Poland into the broader context of his appeals for social justice, human dignity and workers' rights.

The pontiff's address to about 1,800 ILO delegates was the cornerstone of his 13-hour visit to some of Geneva's best known international organizations.

He told them that workers' rights to associate freely are "severely threatened, often flouted."

Workers, he asserted, have a fundamental right "to form freely or join an association of their own choosing, and to run it."

Byrd says Donovan should take a leave of absence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd says Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, whose alleged ties to organized crime are under investigation, should take a leave of absence "for the best interests of our country."

The West Virginia Democrat said Tuesday on the floor of the Senate that President Reagan should ask Donovan to step down, pending the outcome of the federal investigation.

In a letter to Reagan, Byrd said he wasn't prejudging the case.

"But I do know that the welfare of our great nation must come before the interests of any individual," he said.

In Houston where Reagan was attending a fund-raiser Tuesday night, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that the president stands by Donovan and that he would not take any action until completion of the special prosecutor's review.

When asked earlier in the day if Donovan's resignation had been requested, Speakes said, "I've not heard it discussed."

In another development, Leon Silverman, a special federal prosecutor, said he has asked the FBI to investigate whether the killing of Fred Fuino, a Teamster Union official, is linked to the Donovan case.

Threatened police walkout is stopped

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mayor Randy Tyree broke a 4-4 City Council tie shortly before a midnight deadline to boost the city's property tax rate and fund a pay raise for police who had threatened to strike in the middle of the 1982 World's Fair.

Meeting Tuesday night three blocks from the site of the fair, the nine-member council whittled at Tyree's $66.9 million budget for four hours before junking their substitute and returning to the original.

The new spending plan has a 64 percent property tax and a 9 percent pay increase for the city's 340 uniformed police officers. With the raise, starting patrolmen would earn about $13,500 a year.

Bank failure rate is rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial banks, caught in the clamp of high interest rates and a weak economy, have been failing so far this year at the highest rate since the early 1940s, says a federal banking regulator.

William Isaac, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., says a dozen commercial banks have failed since January out of the nearly 14,800 banks whose accounts are insured by the fund. In addition, six mutual savings banks have been merged into stronger institutions.

Seven commercial banks failed in all of last year, according to figures from the insurance corporation. In 1976, 16 commercial banks failed, the most since the 20 that closed in 1942.

Isaac said in an interview Tuesday that the current failure rate — averaging more than two a month in the first five months of the year — "is higher than we have traditionally experienced since the beginning of World War II."

In comparison, savings and loan associations, much more restricted in their operations than commercial banks, have been suffering their worst financial crisis since the Depression. Eighty-five percent of the S&Ls lost money in the last half of 1981.

Diet, cancer may go together

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diet appears to play a role in most common cancers and Americans may be able to reduce their risks by eating less fats and salt-cured foods and more vegetables and grains, the National Academy of Sciences said today.

In a major study of the link between diet and cancer, the academy's National Research Council said current evidence indicates many cancers are influenced by what people eat.

"In general, the evidence suggests that some types of diets and some dietary components tend to increase the risk of cancer, whereas others tend to decrease it," said a report issued by the study committee.

"The mechanisms responsible for these effects are not fully understood," it continued, "partly because nutritive and non-nutritive components of foods may interact to exert effects on cancer incidence."

The committee, made up of prominent scientists and food experts, said there is not enough data to specify what percentage of cancer risks can be attributed to diet.

There also is not enough information to say how much any improved diets might lower these risks, it added.

But the committee said some evidence was strong enough to recommend dietary guidelines designed to reduce the risks of developing cancer, including the following:

—Eat less food high in any kind of fats, saturated or unsaturated. The main sources of fat in the American diet are meats, whole-milk dairy products and cooking oils, said the study.

—Eat more fruits, vegetables and whole-grain cereal products daily, especially those high in vitamin C, carotene (a substance that converts into vitamin A in the body) and other protective products.

Advice for the individual investor

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — James Cloonan founded the American Association of Individual Investors after determining that "there was very little real help out there" for the small, serious, long-term investor.

"Brokers know very little about investing," he said carefully in an interview this week. A cool, low-key, trim man, younger looking than his age of 50, he reflects and says exactly what he needs to say. "Most mutual funds do a bit worse than dart-throwers," he said softly, no tone of accusation in the words. He does, in fact, believe that no-load mutual funds may have a place in some portfolios.

"Bank trust departments," he continue in the same considered manner, "are among the worst investment managers in the country."

Investment advisers in general? "If anyone had a way to make 'excess' returns he wouldn't tell you," he answered. "If you can make 35 percent why should you tell someone else?"

But, he says, if individuals are provided with education, guidance, materials and psychological help, all of which the nonprofit, Chicago-based AAIL offers, they can do well on their own.

"Well," however, may be less than many small and (unsuccessful) investors are accustomed to seeking. "Nobody, unless lucky, is going to outperform the market drastically," Cloonan states flatly.

The first step toward that goal, he continued, "is to stop being worse than average and then develop to better than average." The suggestion, of course, is that the best way in which to take that step is to join the AAIL.

Cloonan, formerly a professor of marketing and quantitative methods at DePaul University, consultant, and chief executive officer of Heindol Securities, founded the nonprofit AAIL in February 1979.

The association has grown to 39,000 members who pay $35 a year for, among other things, a monthly journal, once-a-year analyses of taxes and no-load mutual funds, and computer programs. Home study materials and seminars also are available, but at additional cost.

Prosecutors seek aid of renegade CIA agent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Renegade CIA agent Edwin P. Wilson, arrested by U.S. authorities after being lured from his Libyan haven, is being urged to tell prosecutors what the spy agency knew about his alleged supplying and training of terrorists there, government sources say.

Wilson, who worked at the CIA from 1951 to 1971, was arrested Tuesday in New York as his plane arrived from the Dominican Republic, here he was denied entrance after presenting a phony Irish passport, the Justice Department said.

The CIA has denied any official dealings with Wilson or his alleged co-conspirator, Frank Terpil, in connection with their Libyan activities — and reaffirmed that position after Wilson's arrest.

Wilson, 53, was being held on $20 million bail at an undisclosed location pending a court hearing in New York today.

One intelligence source, who asked not to be identified, said prosecutors had talked with Wilson even before his arrest about cooperating with their investigation into illegal shipments of explosives and terrorist training for radical Libya.

Asked if Wilson would agree to cooperate, the source said, "I wouldn't be surprised."

Language of lopsided logic grows

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Between you, me and the lampshade, this language of lopsided logic that I have dubbed "Obverse English" is catching fire like a snowball in hell.

Readers continue to favor me with prime examples of mangled mots that keep our everyday speech forms full of zest and mystery. And, I might add, keep the listeners on "tent hooks," as a lady in the book store said the other day while hunting for "a really good murder."

Helen McDermott, an Atlanta reader, writes that she has just had a visit from her mother in New Jersey, "who says she hates flying and is always glad to be back on terror firma." Well, mom has a point there.

One of my elderly neighbors resisted cable TV when it came down our road, because, she said, "I'm not going to subsidize those X-ray movies."

She shall be nameless here in keeping with the journalistic tradition of protecting a good source. Since first we began delving into the illogical delights of Obverse English, the language that does a pratfall in falling trippingly from the tongue, this particular neighbor has been a gold mine of lopsided linguistic nuggets. Just last Saturday in the supermarket, she complained that there was no one on duty at the delicatessen counter, because "all the help are running around like chickens with their legs cut off."

Broadcasting, live or taped, keeps our language lively with impromptu ascents into the wild blue heights of giddiness, where logic dissolves and the spoken word floats free and unfettered.

Herb Saltford, from Poughkeepsie, N.Y., sends me a newspaper account of California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s experience as host on a radio talk show:

"Brown, in his second stint as a talk-show host, mostly answered questions from callers and discussed questions on farming and pesticide use for several guests."

Cameroon making mark

MADRID (AP) — Cameroon's soccer team gave cause for a celebration in that African nation merely by qualifying for the World Cup finals.

And on Tuesday night the "Indomitable Lions" earned the first point by a newcomer in the 24-nation tournament.

The only black African team in the final, Cameroon made up for inferior technical skills with strength, speed and agility to hold vastly experienced Peru to a scoreless tie in La Coruna.

"I'm absolutely delighted," said Cameroon Coach Jean Vincent. "Today's result is already an exceptional achievement."

New Zealand, where rugby is more popular than soccer, made a less impressive but nonetheless respectable cup debut. It fell three goals behind Scotland, battled back with two of its own, then lost 5-2 — but earned a standing ovation from the pro-Scottish crowd at Magala.

Three other nations are in their first cup final, thanks to a decision by the 150-nation Federation of International Football Associations to expand the tournament from 16 teams and allow more to qualify from outside Europe and South America, the sport's traditional strongholds.

Algeria and Honduras play their first matches in the tournament's 52-year history today against two-time cup winner West Germany and host nation Spain, respectively, while England battles France. Kuwait, the other newcomer, opens first-round play Thursday against Czechoslovakia.

For countries such as these, a draw or even a goal can be a moral victory. "We came to Spain to learn from the soccer giants," said Algerian Coach Maheddiene Khalef. "If we don't succeed in getting into the second round, it will not be doomsday."

The presence of teams lacking in international experience is bound to result in some lopsided scores, such as the 10-1 thrashing Hungary gave El Salvador in Elche Tuesday night. It was the most goals ever scored by one team in a single tournament game and equaled the record nine-goal victory margin.

Hungary, which leads Belgium, Argentina and El Salvador in Group Three, got three goals in six minutes from Laszlo Kiss, who took an early lead in the World Cup scoring sweepstakes.

Cameroon, a country where soccer caught on only a decade ago, won more than a symbolic victory by shutting out Peru. It moved into a four-way draw with the three other Group One teams, a day after Poland and Italy also finished 0-0 in their group match.

New Zealand's loss put it at the bottom of Group Six, behind Scotland, tournament favorite Brazil and the Soviet Union. Scotland, notoriously vulnerable against lowly ranked opposition, was led by John Wark's two goals.

Rangers top Mariners 5-2

SEATTLE (AP) — The red-hot Seattle Mariners went into their Tuesday night game with struggling Texas with 15 victories in 20 games.

But rookie first baseman Dave Hostetter, called up from Denver May 28, drove in three runs with a pair of homers into the Kingdome's leftfield stands to lead Texas to a 5-2 victory over Seattle.

The former University of Southern California star came to the Rangers with four days left in spring training as part of the trade that sent Al Oliver to Montreal.

At Denver last season, Hostetter hit 27 homers and drove in 103 runs.

His Tuesday night batting heroics gave him six home runs in his short stint with Texas.

"The six homers don't surprise me," said Texas Manager Don Zimmer. "We knew how strong he was. To me, he's a Frank Howard with strength."

Major league roundup

By The Associated Press

LaMarr Hoyt fired a masterful three-hitter to become major league baseball's first 10-game winner this season as the Chicago White Sox blanked the Oakland A's 7-0 Tuesday night.

Hoyt, who won his first nine decisions, says he's been bothered by stiffness in his right forearm and bicep recently. "It happened two starts ago in the Texas game," said Hoyt, 10-3. "I could still pitch, but I was in some pain."

YANKEES 5, RED SOX 4

Ken Griffey's two-run homer off reliever Mark Clear capped a three-run eighth-inning rally as New York downed Boston.

With the Red Sox leading 4-2, Dave Collins led off the eighth with a double, chasing Boston starter Bruce Hurst. One out later, Collins scored on Andre Robertson's single and Griffey, who earlier extended his hitting streak to seven games, homered to right field.

BREWERS 6, ORIOLES 3

Bob McClure didn't give roommate Robin Yount an ultimatum, but his meddling about needing some support certainly helped.

Yount clubbed a two-run homer in the first inning and put Milwaukee ahead with a two-run triple in the eighth following a crucial two-out error by Cal Ripken Jr. as the Brewers whipped Baltimore.

ROYALS 7, TWINS 4

Bud Black posted his first major league victory and John Wathan had two hits and scored three times as Kansas City handed Minnesota its 23rd defeat in its last 25 games.

The Royals ripped Al Williams, 2-5, for two runs in the first on an RBI single by Willie Aikens and a run-scoring double by Hal McRae.

BLUE JAYS 2, ANGELS 0

Dave Revering poked a two-run homer in the ninth inning to back the five-hit pitching of Jim Clancy as Toronto snapped California's three-game winning streak.

"Now that the trading deadline is gone, it's time to start playing some baseball," said Revering, referring to the 8 p.m. EDT cutoff point for major league trades. The first baseman has been played for three teams in the past 12 months.

National League scores

The defending world champion Los Angeles Dodgers, sitting 7½ games behind the Atlanta Braves in the National League West, haven't been settin' the league on fire this season.

But Pitcher Jerry Reuss, coming off a one-hitter against the Cincinnati Reds, stopped San Diego 3-0 Tuesday night, limiting the Padres to only five hits while striking out seven.

The victory, his third shutout of the season, raised Reuss' record to 7-5. It also was the 150th of his career.

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta beat Houston 7-0, St. Louis edged Montreal 3-2 in 11 innings, Chicago whipped Philadelphia 8-5, Pittsburgh trimmed New York 13-3 and San Francisco defeated Cincinnati 4-3.

Braves 7, Astros 0

Bob Walk's four-hitter and Atlanta's 14-hit attack strengthened the Braves' claim that they are for real this season.

In registering his first shutout of the season, Walk struck out five and walked one in improving his record to 6-4. He threw 2-3 innings of no-hit ball before Ray Knight singled to right-center.

CARDINALS 3, EXPOS 2

The Cardinals opened their lead in the NL

East to four games with their victory over the second-place Expos.

Willie McGee was the unlikely hero, breaking out of a 1-for-16 slump to deliver an RBI-single with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning.

McGee's hit scored Lonnie Smith, who had a leadoff double off loser Ray Burris, 2-8.

CUBS 8, PHILLIES 5

John Johnstone cracked a two-run homer in the third inning to spark the Cubs to their second straight victory after losing 13 in a row. It was the fourth consecutive defeat for Philadelphia.

PIRATES 13, METS 3

The entire Pirate lineup got into the offensive act as they battered New York pitchers for 17 hits in the romp.

Jason Thompson did most of the damage, stroking two doubles and a home run and driving in five runs. It was Thompson's 14th homer of the season, but only his first in June.

GIANTS 4, REDS 3

Tom Seaver, 3-7, continued to have his troubles, lasting only 11-3 innings in the Cincinnati loss. He pitched to 11 batters, with eight of them reaching base by hit or walk.

Winborn, Dalton win Ladies' Partnership

Pampans Sue Winborn and LaVonna Dalton placed first in the Championship Flight of Tuesday's Ladies Partnership Tournament held at the Pampa Country Club.

The pair scored an 18-hole mark of 60 strokes to top the 30-team field entered in the tournament.

Winning the First Flight were Gwen Hensley and Cindy Chapman, Shamrock, with a 58. Second Flight winners were Dot Allen and Mary Fain, Pampa, who scored a 62.

The annual tournament, open to non-club members, is scored on the lowest score on each hole for each competing pair.

Complete results were:

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT — 1. Winborn and Dalton, 2. Terrie Schneider, Fran Wilson, Pampa, 63. 3. Nita Hill, Linda Stevenson, Pampa, 64 (playoff for 2nd).

FIRST FLIGHT — 1. Hensley and Chapman, 2. Margaret Lawyer, LaWanda Baker, Pampa, 62. 3. Beith Heiskell, Nancy Chase, Pampa, 63.

SECOND FLIGHT — 1. Allen and Fain, 2. Helen Cook, Lula Kuhn, Pampa, 64. 3. Ann Sanders, Fay Cunningham, Spearman, 65.

Malone said MVP

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets officials say center Moses Malone will accept an award today as the National Basketball Association's most valuable player.

Now the new owner of the team just wants Malone to sign a new contract.

Charlie Thomas, a car dealer who bought the Rockets along with Houston businessman Sidney Shlenker Tuesday, has said keeping Malone with the club is one of his main goals.

"I think he's necessary to having a first-rate team and we'll do what we can to keep him here," Thomas said.

Houston General Manager Ray Patterson said the 6-11 center would be named the MVP today in San Diego.

"He's on the plane right now," he said Tuesday afternoon.

Malone averaged 14.7 rebounds a game to lead the NBA during the 1981-82 season. His 31.1-point average was second in the league.

The Rockets have offered Malone, who became a free agent with the end of the playoffs, a contract reportedly worth $1.9 million a year for the next three seasons.

Malone led the Rockets to a 46-36 record for the season that just ended, the third best in the history of the franchise. Seattle eliminated the Rockets in the first round of the NBA playoffs.

Glo Valve tops Dunlap

Grant Gamblin's no-hit pitching paced Glo Valve to a 9-4 victory over Dunlap Industrial Engine in Monday night National Little League action.

The win improves Glo Valve's record to 4-1 for second half play and 11-1 for the season. Dunlap remains in first place with a 5-1 second half record.

Glo Valve managed 10 hits during the game, with Gamblin collecting three of them. Chad McDougall had two hits.

The wide-open play saw each team commit six errors, allowing Dunlap their four runs in spite of a no-hit situation.

Skellytown tops Shamrock in LL

SKELLYTOWN — Skellytown's Senior Little League Team defeated the Shamrock squad 8-6 in a Monday evening game at the Lions Club ballpark.

Will Brown was the winning pitcher, facing 28 batters and allowing five hits. Steve Snapp and Randall Hugg shared pitching chores for Shamrock, giving up 9 hits to 37 at-bats.

Brent Birdwell and Will Brown each scored two runs for Skellytown. Pitchers Snapp and Hugg scored two runs each for Shamrock, with Hugg belting a home run for one of his scores.

Craig Stadler: game belies appearance

Stadler image no bother

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Craig Stadler, the golfer who doesn't look like a golfer, refuses to get all hot and bothered about images.

"I guess I don't fit the mold people expect of a pro tournament golfer," says the paunchy, mustachioed Californian, rated by many as the player to beat in the 82nd U.S. Open Golf championship, starting Thursday.

"I admit I look like any ordinary guy. I don't know why people make such a big deal over it. One good thing is that they at least know I am around. I only wish they'd appreciate me more for my golf."

Winner of the Masters, the first of the Grand Slam events, he is the only player to have won three tournaments on the tour this year and he is the leading money winner with $312,058.

Such dignitaries as Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Tom Watson are labeling him as one of the chief threats for the title over Pebble Beach's exacting ocean links.

Stadler is a pillowy, jovial fellow with a heavy reddish mustache, a receding hairline and a 46-inch waist.

They call him "The Walrus."

Stadler is more amused than annoyed at the nickname, the constant references to his poorly distributed 200 pounds and what has been hailed as an explosive temper.

"That's exaggerated, too," he says. "Sure, I get sore when I make a stupid shot. But it only lasts until I get to my next shot. That's better than letting it seethe in your gut and letting it all out when you get home."

Stadler has become the hero of the truck drivers and the brick layers and little old ladies who do their crocheting on the subways.

He's the prototype as well as the idol of the guy who carries his own bag around the park courses and afterward douses his frustration with a half-dozen beers.

Winner of the National Amateur championship while a sophomore at the University of Southern California, he failed to pass the TPA qualifying school in 1975 but finally made it in 1976.

Hindered by an ungovernable temper, he struggled through his first few years and didn't win his first tour event until he captured the Bob Hope Desert Classic in 1980.

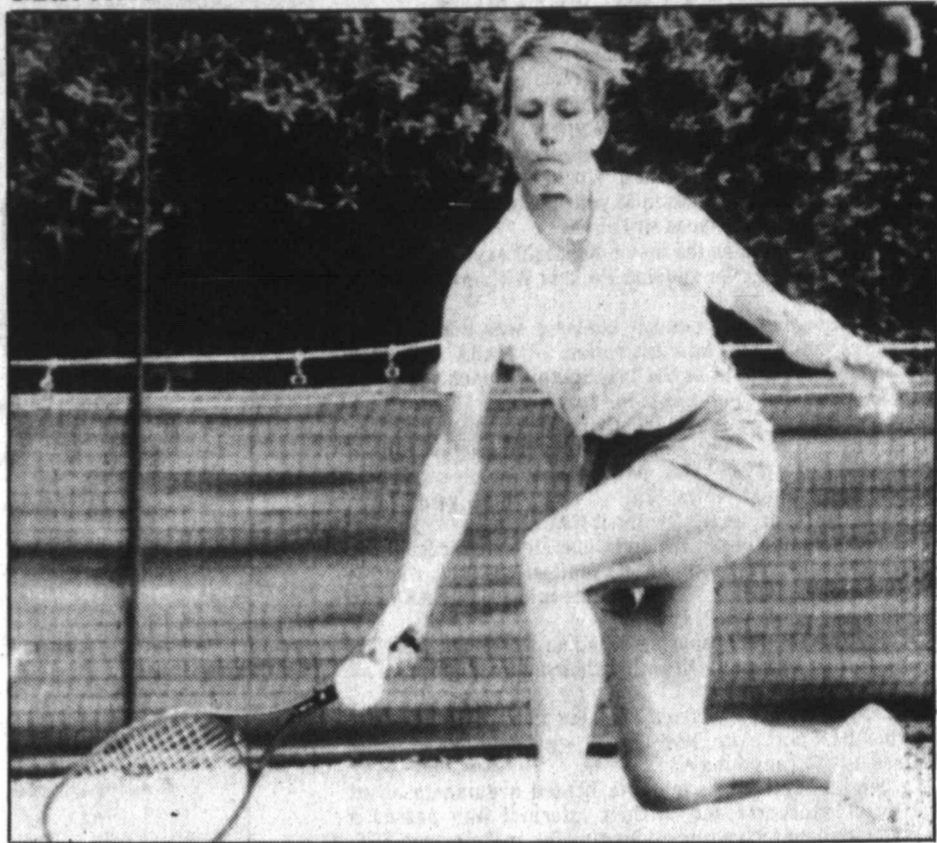

Two years later, he's the golfer to beat.

"He could be the next dominant player," says Palmer. "He makes his golf swing work for him. It all depends on his attitude and desire."

Stadler's fresh, down-to-earth image is quite unique in a game in which players look so much alike you can't tell them apart until you toss them on a putting green and watch their stroke.

Stan Wood, former golf coach at USC, said Stadler was always basically shy and tended to minimize his feats. "I never once heard him brag," said the former coach.

Top golfers preparing for game's chief event

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The finest golfers in the land had their last chance to practice on the demanding Pebble Beach course today, preparing for the 1982 United States Open championship, an event many of them consider the tour's crown jewel.

"Worldwide, perhaps the British Open is more important," said Jack Nicklaus. "But to an American, this is the biggest event, because it is our national championship."

It holds particular significance, of course, for Nicklaus, who is bidding for a record fifth Open title. The only other men to win the title four times are legendary names out of golf's history books — Willie Anderson, Bobby Jones and Ben Hogan.

And, the Pebble Beach layout has been kind to Nicklaus. He won his third Open crown here in 1972, the only other time Pebble Beach hosted the event, shooting a 290 that year, the highest winning score in any pro golf event since 1963.

Nicklaus has also won three Bing Crosby titles and two of that tournament's four rounds are played at Pebble. And in 1961, he captured the U.S. Amateur championship here. So his familiarity with the course and record of success over it, coupled with the incentive of a fifth Open championship, makes him one of the favorites.

Young Player's ability impressive

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gary Player sounds almost envious when discussing the physical ability of his 20-year-old son, Wayne.

"Obviously, he's much stronger than I am or ever was. On drives, it's no contest; he's got me by a good 25 or 30 yards," said Player, 46, after a practice round Tuesday on the Pebble Beach course where the 82nd U.S. Open Golf championship will be played.

The father said Tuesday. "She told me, 'I've followed you on golf courses for 27 years, had a lot of heartaches and joys. But I'm going to walk with Wayne.'"

"I got the message," Wayne Player is one 14 amateurs in the 153-man U.S. Open field. He finished his two-year army tour of duty in South Africa six months ago.

Others in that category include hot-shooting Craig Stadler, winner of three events including the Masters and the leading moneymaker on the tour this year with $312,058. Besides the Masters, Stadler has captured the Tucson, Ariz., opening event of the year, and the Kemper in his last start.

Then, there are Tom Watson, Lanny Wadkins and Ray Floyd, each of whom has won two events this season.

The chip, Wayne, is bigger than the block, Gary, by about 1½ inch in height and 15 pounds in weight.

Gary Player will tee off 1½ hour after Wayne in Thursday's opening round. The tournament ends on Father's Day, and the U.S. Golf Association believes this is the first father-son combination in Open history.

"I think I've lost my wife,"

"My aim is to be the low amateur in the Open. I expect a lot of myself," said Wayne, who at age 17 joined his father in the 1979 British Open field.

Early this month, Wayne shot rounds of 66 and 67 for an 11-under-par total of 133 to lead the field in an Open sectional qualifying test at Atlanta.

"His swing is good enough for him to turn pro right now," his father says. "But some things can come only with experience."

Watson, winner of the Los Angeles and Heritage tournaments this year, has had his share of success at Pebble Beach. He has won two Crosbys here and is familiar with the course, playing it frequently when he was a student at Stanford.

"I've won here twice," said Watson. "That might give you a little edge. But those tournaments were in wet conditions. What if it's dry?"

Fem jockey to ride again

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — J.R. Anderson is a jockey, not a gambler. But he figures it's a pretty sure bet his wife, jockey Mary Bacon, will be riding again in just a few months.

Bacon appears to be winning her fight for life in the neurological intensive care unit at Herrick Hospital a week after she was nearly trampled to death in a spill at Golden Gate Fields racetrack.

Both her eyes are blackened, her nose is broken and she's still listed in serious condition with swollen brain tissue. She slips in and out of a coma but her mind is lucid and her voice is firm when she awakens. She recognizes the voices of her husband, sister and daughter but it's still painful for her to open her eyes.

Mary Bacon has survived one of horse racing's scariest ordeals and Anderson and everyone else who knows the gutsy 34-year-old veteran believes she'll be up on a horse again if her health allows.

"You know, she broke 39 bones before this accident but she's come back every time," Anderson said Tuesday. "She'll be capable of riding again. Whether I'll let her, I don't know. I guess I'll let her do whatever she wants if she comes out of this. She'll do it anyway. Nobody ever tells her what to do."

Anderson and Bacon have been married for three years. He's asked her to quit racing several times, but she's always refused.

"She's a fighter," Anderson said. "She's coming out of this slowly but she'll make it."

McEnroe is favored to win at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Though he faces tough opposition in the early rounds, top-seeded John McEnroe is an odds-on favorite to retain his Wimbledon men's singles tennis title.

Wojtek Fibak of Poland, one of the strongest unseeded players in the field, will be McEnroe's second-round opponent in the most prestigious of all tennis tournaments. Fiery Ilie Nastase of Romania, twice a finalist at Wimbledon, could follow if McEnroe gets by Fibak.

That rotation was created in a draw Tuesday at the All-England Tennis Club.

In the opening round, McEnroe meets American Van Winitsky, ranked 45th in the world. That match Monday will be the traditional center-court opener reserved for the defending champion.

Seeded second is Jimmy Connors, who is rated at 7-2 by British bookmakers to capture his second Wimbledon singles crown in eight years, while Mats Wilander, the 17-year-old Swedish star who won the French Open in Paris earlier this month, is given a 14-1 shot at winning the championship.

South African-born Andrew Pattison, who now lives in the United States, is Connors' first-round foe. John Alexander of Australia looms as the second-round opponent.

Chip Hooper, the 6-foot-7 American with a service estimated at 135 mph will try with such an upset against Peter McNamara of Australia, the No. 7 seed.

Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland is Wilander's opponent in the first round.

Wilander won the French Open crown earlier this month with a week-long series of upsets.

Bjorn Borg, a five-time Wimbledon champion, and four other players ranked in the top 10 in the world, were passing up the tournament. Also not competing were Guillermo Vilas and Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and American Eliot Teltscher.

Led by top-seeded Martina Navratilova and second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, all of the top women's singles players drew first-round byes.

Zina Garrison of the United States, who captured the Wimbledon junior girls title last year, takes on American Leigh Ann Thompson in one of the top first-round matches. Garrison, who also won the junior title at the U.S. Open in 1981, reached the quarterfinals at the French Open earlier this month.

Lloyd beat Mandlikova in the finals here a year ago after capturing the Australian and French Opens.

King is shooting for her 21st Wimbledon title.

It really is NACA

By R.D. GERSH
Associated Press Writer

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Born from a hot war, retired because of a Cold War, NACA is not a typographical error.

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, established in 1915 with the scent of World War I wafting from Europe, had 25,000 employees in 65 years, and Abraham Leiss is determined to root out those still alive.

If we can put a man on the moon, he might say, we can find his former colleagues for reunion No. 2 in Williamsburg next November.

Actually the man-on-the-moon business was the National Aeronautics and Space Administration — NASA — which replaced NACA in 1958 after the 1957 Sputnik launch narrowed the public focus of aeronautics to the space race.

"I doubt there's any airplane flying today that didn't go through a NACA wind tunnel," says Leiss, a retired NACA-NASA employee who now works for a consulting company in Newport News, Va. "I don't think you'd have planes like the 747 or the DC-3 without NACA."

NACA was a small organization by current standards. Those 25,000 employees represent all its staff from 1917, when it started hiring, to 1958. At its peak in the mid-1960s, NASA had 32,000 and now has about 21,000.

Some of the NACA people gathered in North Carolina six years ago, but Leiss wants to gather them again "before we all die out."

Leiss says 650 people — from 37 states and Australia — met in Asheville, N.C., in 1976 and "we spent more time reminiscing than anything else."

The reminiscers did have some heated arguments about supersonic transports and in their informal way passed a resolution calling for continued funding for an American SST. That never got off the ground.

Available at that reunion was a specially minted cast bronze coin showing a twin-winged airplane, a jet plane, clouds and the legend "43 Years of Outstanding Service to the United States," on one side and "1915-1958 NACA" with stars on the others.

ORNAMENTAL INSECTS

Homeowners should begin to check ornamentals for small bagworms. Bagworms are easily controlled if insecticides are applied while worms are very small and feeding actively.

The first generation of elm leaf beetles should be controlled at this time. Additional generations will occur through the remainder of the summer that will also warrant control.

Spider mites are also infesting some of the evergreen shrubs and trees at this time.

In general, homeowners need to make frequent checks of their landscape plantings for the presence of various insect or disease problems that might be developing. Many times an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

HOW, WHEN TO WATER GARDEN

When, how and how much to water are common questions asked by gardeners.

Watering is one of the most enjoyable aspects of home gardening but it is also one of the most misunderstood. Misuse of water in your home garden often causes many problems, among them soil crusting, poor root growth, blossom drop, cracked fruit, nutrient deficiencies and various types of plant diseases.

Regardless of how you water your garden, remember to apply sufficient water to wet the soil to a depth of at least 6 inches. How often to water will depend upon climatic conditions, rate of growth, stage of maturity of your garden, and soil type.

Check the soil, not the plants, to determine when to water your garden. Looking at plants for symptoms such as wilting to determine when to water is a serious mistake. Plants wilt for many reasons, such as diseases, too much fertilizer, heat or perhaps too much water. If soil is relatively moist an inch or so deep, you don't need to water. Remember, heavy soils will need watering less frequently than sandy soils.

Most gardeners water by flooding or furrow irrigation. For this method to be effective, it's best to have plants on raised beds so water can go between them. With flood or furrow irrigation, apply water slowly to soak the soil thoroughly.

Watering with a sprinkler is probably the most convenient method. However, with our salty lake water, Pampa residents should never water with a sprinkler.

When using a sprinkler, turn it on early enough in the day to allow foliage to dry off before nighttime. Wet foliage in combination of cool nighttime temperatures often results in serious types of foliage diseases.

Drip or trickle irrigation is a relatively new concept which is gaining popularity. This type of system literally drops water onto the soil surface near plants so that it seeps slowly into the soil. This method is much more efficient than either furrow or overhead watering although the initial cost is high. However, being more efficient, these systems generally pay for themselves within a short period of time.

Paying attention to how, how much and when you water can make the difference between success or failure of your garden.

VINES FOR PATIOSHADE

Many of us are faced with a frightening prospect this summer.

The new patio on the west side of the house that was so warm and cheerful last winter will turn into a searing inferno.

Sure you've planted some very nice trees around the patio but it will still be a few years before they flood the area with delicious shade.

The question is: what can you do right now about the intense heat and outrageous air conditioning bills you'll soon face.

The easiest, quickest solution to this patio problem is to build a simple but sturdy overhead structure and plant annual vines along the sides for quick summer shade. Being annuals, these vines will flourish and provide welcome shade during the growing season but will be killed by the first frost, thus allowing maximum sunlight penetration to help warm your home during the winter months.

Uses for annual vines are numerous and varied. You can use them to decorate a barren wall in matching colors, soften the ever lines of brick or stone fences, twine around an empty birdfeeder, or add a rustic note to trellis, wood fence or downspout.

Unightly views can be hidden easily by covering a ready-made trellis with quick-growing annual vines.

These vines have delicate tendrils which attach themselves to the structures on which they climb. The annual vines don't have the holdfasts often associated with their perennial counterparts. Thus they won't damage brick, mortar or wood.

The thunbergia or black-eyed Susan vine flowers in yellow, bright oranges or maize and white, most with a dark center eye. The heart-shaped, medium-green foliage will take a decided back seat to the cascades of flowers provided during the warm months ahead.

Thunbergias can be trained to a low trellis or fence where they will climb gracefully to a maximum height of six feet (great for smaller areas but probably not large enough to do a good job covering a patio; try morning glory or moon vine for this purpose).

All thunbergias require an average garden soil, some protection from searing heat and a deep watering once a week. (Keep an eye out for spider mites, however, and treat promptly if detected.) Still another advantage of this vine is its tolerance of very light shade.

Other annual vines which are super performers include morning glories and moon vines. Both are extremely easy to grow from seed which can be planted outside directly in the place it's needed.

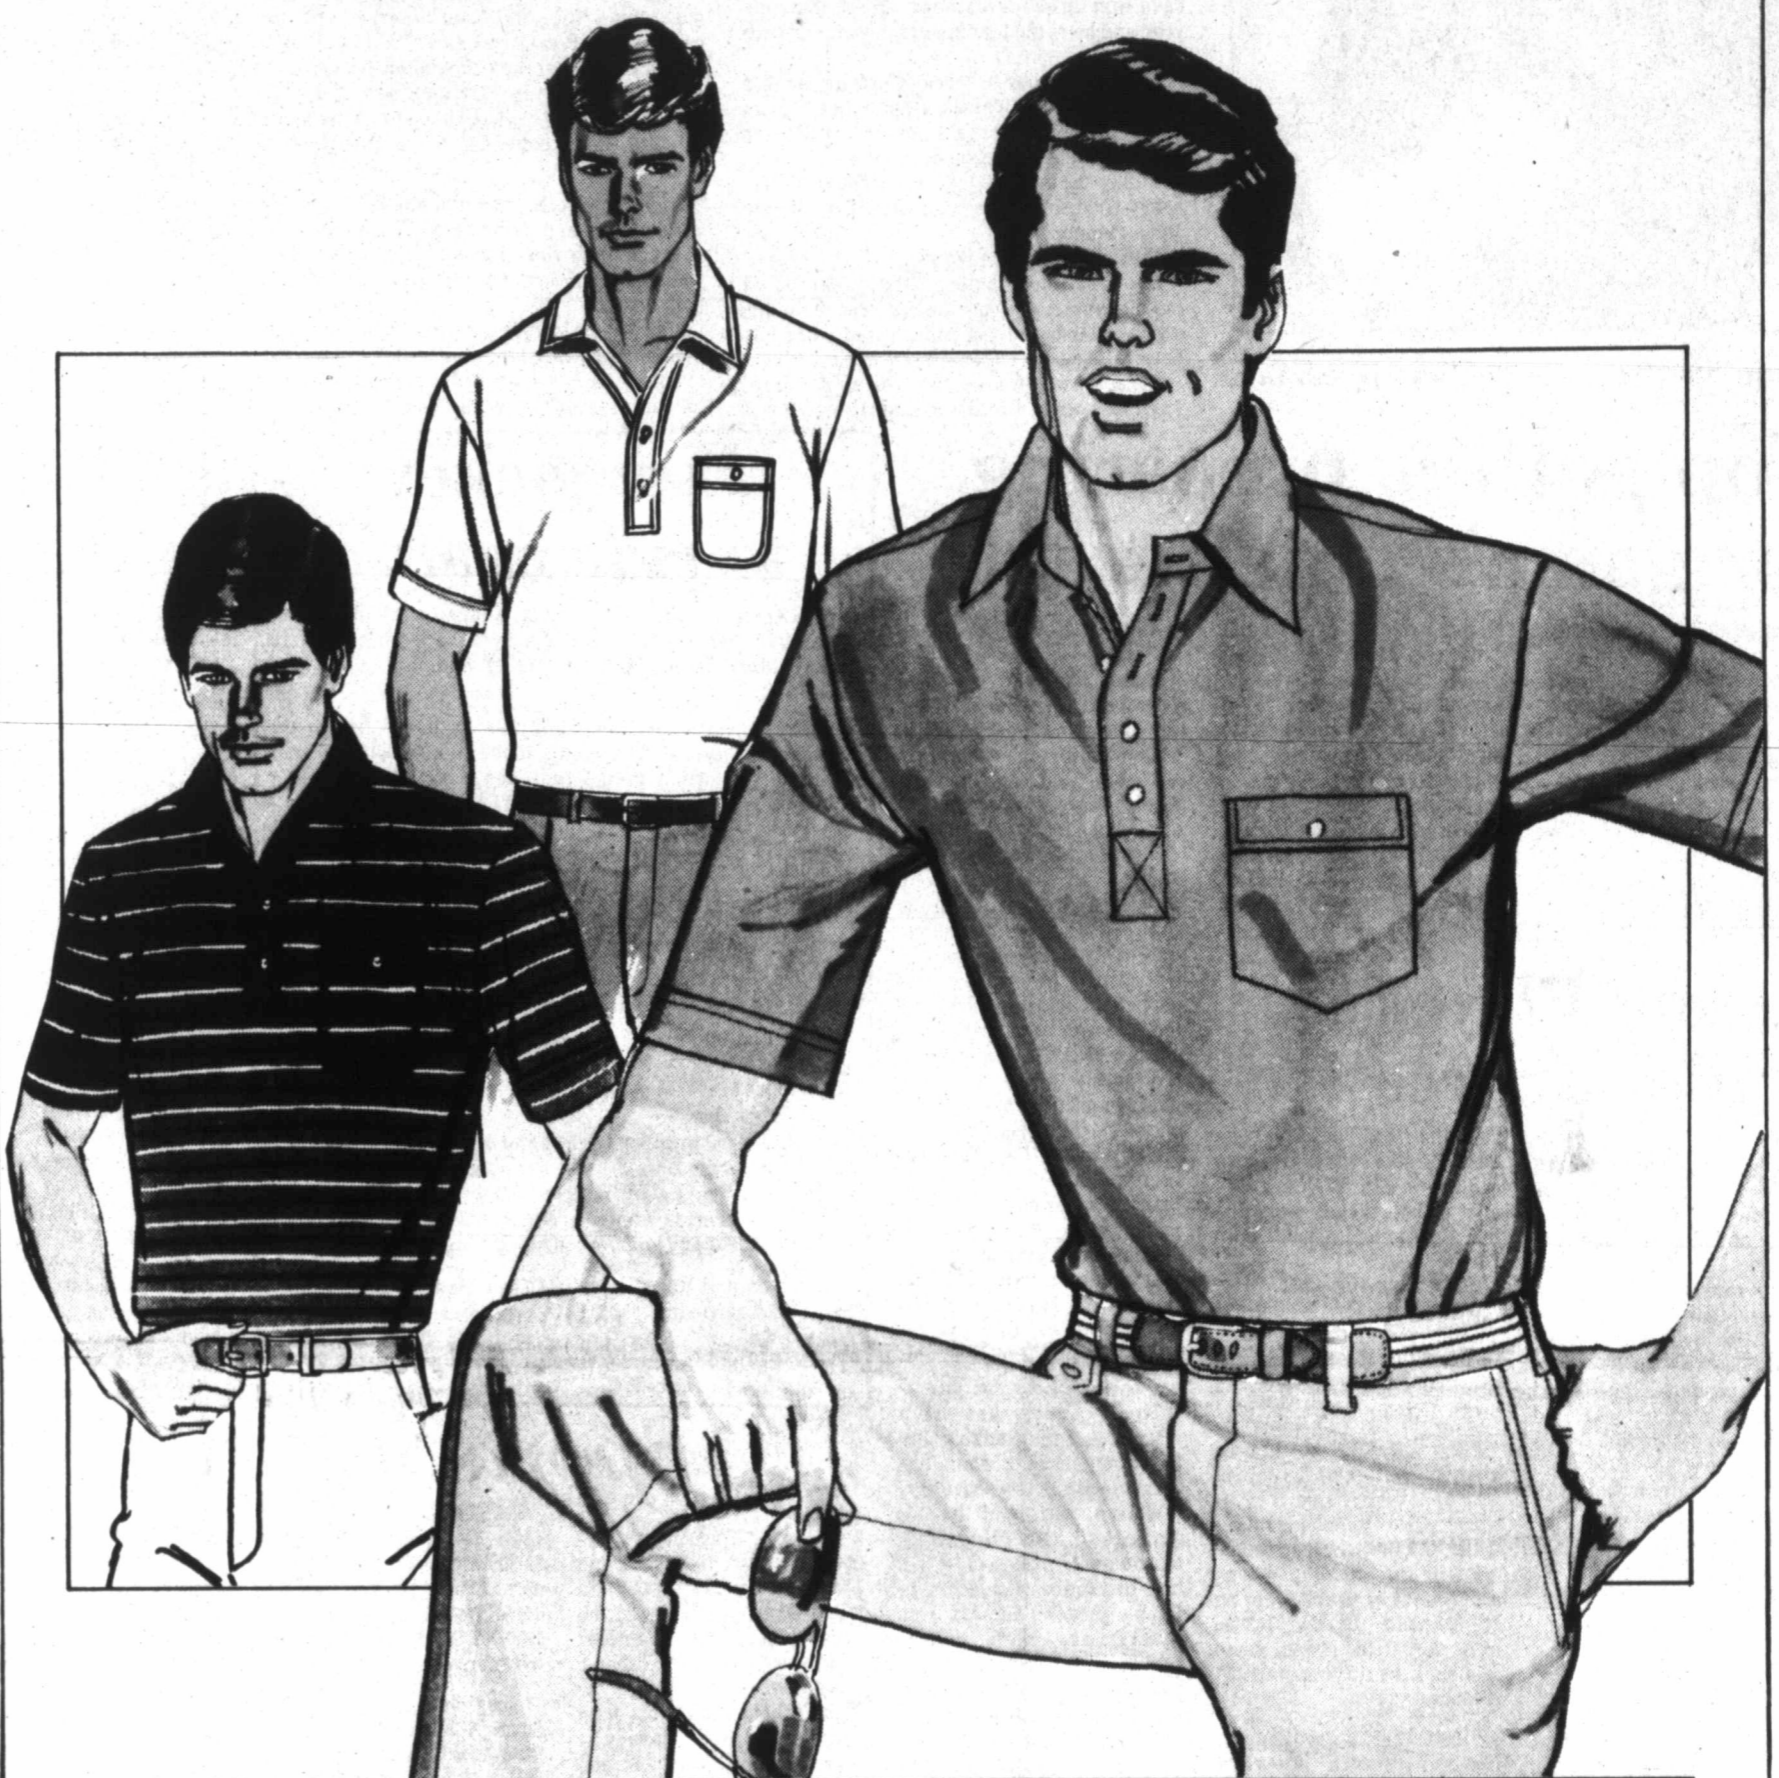

The night-time beauty and fragrance of moon vines is a real treat and the dazzling display of morning glories is a real addition to your summer landscape.

Whether an acre or a patio square, these vines will be a welcome, economical and colorful addition to your overall landscape. Plant and enjoy.

Summer Safety Tips

Use caution in summer driving

Fire and Safety Committee
Pampa Chamber of Commerce

Motorist should prepare themselves for summer driving, according to trooper Jerry Burgdorf, Safety Officer for the Department of Public Safety. With summer approaching many are planning vacations and he warned drivers that accidents can spoil vacation trips.

"Summer driving is different because the motorist is trying to get away from it all, and this means getting into an unfamiliar environment," he said. A good rule is to plan your trip before leaving and know highway numbers and streets that you will travel.

"For the urban driver the expressway can become a bore, luring the weary into a false sense of security. Drivers who normally drive on quiet country roads can panic in the confusion of the multilane mix of car and pedestrian city traffic," he said.

Burgdorf added, "Fatigue and lack of alertness is a serious problem on long freeway trips." He advised the motorist should stop every two hours to rest or change drivers and to never drive more than 10 hours each day."

He suggested that motorist check all hoses, fan belts, tires and to make sure the vehicle is in good mechanical condition before making any trip. He also advised motorist to get plenty of rest each night.

Burgdorf stated, "Motorist entering large cities should plan their trips to avoid rush hour traffic, obey speed limits, avoid the use of alcohol when driving, and be patient."

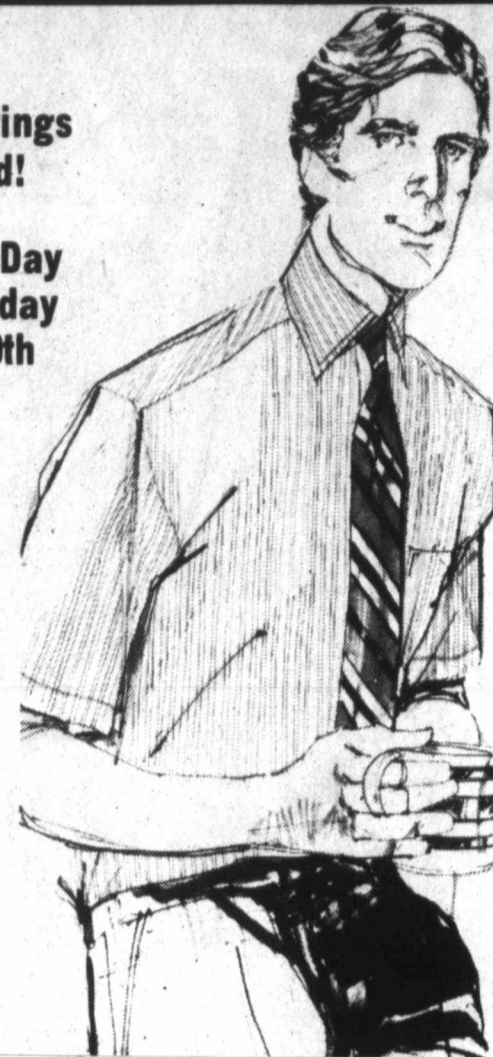

Drivers who think ahead, stay alert and drive defensively can have a safe trip and a great vacation.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthasias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Dear Abby

Mom issues sick punishment for playing doctor

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: At a recent family reunion, my 6-year-old nephew was caught by his mother playing "doctor" with his 5-year-old female cousin. She punished him by painting his genitals with Mercurochrome and forcing him to sit nude in front of all the relatives while they made fun of him.

Everything seems to be OK with the boy and mother at the moment, but the consensus among the half-dozen or so people to whom I have told this story is that the kid will be "emotionally scarred for life."

If so, I feel that I am an accomplice to it inasmuch as I permitted my nephew to be put on display and ridiculed. Is there anything I can do for the boy beyond some sincere praying?

HIS UNCLE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR UNCLE: The chances of your nephew being "emotionally scarred for life" are small. But if he seems affected by that humiliating experience, you can assure him that almost all kids play "doctor" out of natural curiosity, and he committed no serious crime. Add, too, that he should not repeat the deed. And you can tell the boy's mother that for her to have punished her son in that humiliating manner was both cruel and unfeeling.

***

DEAR ABBY: You used the phrase "gild the lily" in responding to someone who asked if one need send written thanks for a thank-you bouquet.

Abby, the correct quote is "To gild refined gold, to paint the lily." Then it goes on to say, "To throw a perfume on the violet, to smooth the ice, or add another hue unto the rainbow... is wasteful and ridiculous excess" (from Shakespeare's "King John"). It's a shame to see that lovely phrase misused.

PATTI THE PURIST

DEAR PATTI: Sorry, I've been saying "gild the lily" ever since I can remember. I undoubtedly picked it up from another "gildy" party.

***

DEAR ABBY: I have exactly the same problem as

"Macho Man," the 23-year-old man who can't seem to grow a respectable-looking moustache. He said he has tried many times to grow one, and he always gets disgusted and shaves it off because it grows in so sparse it looks ridiculous.

You told him to buy a false one at a "hair goods" store. Well, that would be out of the question for me, because everyone would know it was pasted on, and that would be worse than not having any moustache at all.

I am 27 years old and do not have any facial hair. I mean nothing — nada! Could I possibly have a hormone imbalance? Maybe so, because the rest of my body is also hairless. And get this — I am a full-blooded Italian, and Italians are noted for their hairiness. Am I normal? Or should I see a doctor about hormones?

HAIRLESS

DEAR HAIRLESS: An examination by an endocrinologist might put you at ease, but if your only problem is the absence of facial hair, and you are otherwise healthy, to worry about "hormonal imbalance" would be a barefaced shame.

***

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read about the "cruel" husband who gave his wife $50 and told her to go buy what she wanted for Mother's Day. What is she complaining about?

My husband once gave me a wheelbarrow for Mother's Day so I could clean the garden better.

Another Mother's Day he gave me a ladder so I could shovel the snow off the roof.

I'm 73 years old and I'm not complaining. I'm still using both the wheelbarrow and the ladder.

Hawaiian Cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

About five years ago a reader asked me for a recipe for a pineapple macadamia cake made in a large loaf pan. Just last year another reader asked for a new recipe for the cake — one that could be made in small-size loaf pans — to give as gifts.

Now comes still another request: a pineapple macadamia cake made in a small, fluted tube pan. We enjoyed developing this recipe. The cake is a wholesome dessert that's not overly sweet. Good for coffee klatches.

Now comes still another request: a pineapple macadamia cake made in a small, fluted tube pan. We enjoyed developing this recipe. The cake is a wholesome dessert that's not overly sweet. Good for coffee klatches.

HAWAIIAN CAKE

8 ounces glaze (candied) pineapple chunks

1 1/2 cups sifted cake flour

1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder

1/2 cup (1/4-pound stick) butter

1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla

1 large egg

1 large egg yolk

2-3rds cup milk

1/2 cup chopped unsalted macadamia nuts (from a 3 1/2-ounce jar), see Note

1/4 cup finely chopped shredded coconut

Slice the pineapple chunks 1-16th-inch thick — there should be 1 cup lightly packed.

On wax paper or in a bowl sift together the cake flour and baking powder.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer cream the butter, confectioners' sugar and vanilla. Add the whole egg and the egg yolk; at medium speed beat for 1 minute. Stir in the flour mixture in 3 additions alternately with the milk, just until smooth each time. Fold in the pineapple, macadamias and coconut. Turn into a buttered 6-cup non-stick fluted tube pan.

Bake in the preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 45 minutes. (Cake will have a crack on top.) Loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack; cool completely. Store in the refrigerator, but bring to room temperature before serving.

Note: If these are not available, use the whole salted macadamia nuts that come in jars or cans and chop them coarsely.

Portsmouth has a very historic past

By PRUDENCE HELLER
Associated Press Writer
PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Portsmouth rarely appears on the average American's mental map of England. There just isn't room for it, what with London, Oxford, Cambridge, the Lake Country, Stratford-on-Avon and all the rest.

But then it suddenly got into the news as the home of the British fleet that sailed in April to challenge Argentina in the Falkland Islands.

Before heading for Portsmouth, the average traveler will probably have visited London and seen the towering monument to Lord Nelson on Trafalgar Square. Well, Portsmouth is the port Lord Nelson sailed from to defeat the Spanish and French fleets of Napoleon in 1805 at Trafalgar. You can visit his flagship, the H.M.S. Victory, now a museum, in Portsmouth, which is also the home port of the royal yacht Britannia.

Portsmouth has played a leading role in Britain's naval life ever since Henry VII (1457-1509) built fortifications and docks here. Not many years later, in 1545, the French were occupying the Isle of Wight, across the body of water known as the Solent from Portsmouth.

Henry VIII ordered a warship built to evict the French. He himself went to Portsmouth to watch the ship, the Mary Rose, set sail — and sink, with nearly 800 men aboard. Someone had forgotten to close the cannon ports close to the waterline.

In the mid-19th century, the Mary Rose was located, 40 feet down, but nothing much was done about her. In recent years, however, salvage operations have been underway, and thousands of artifacts have been recovered. Many are on display in Portsmouth. And this year, salvage crews hope to raise the Mary Rose. Sightseers can go out and watch the work.

Portsmouth also has some vivid reminders of modern history — the scars of heavy Nazi bombings in World War II. Much of the city had to be rebuilt after the war.

The naval base is only one of many aspects of Portsmouth. The impressive Guildhall stands hard by the railpad station. And a couple of blocks away is an extensive modern pedestrian shopping area.

The birthplace of Charles Dickens is on Old Commercial Road. And you may want to visit the Cathedral Church of St. Thomas a Becket, founded in the 12th century. This is not where Becket was murdered, of course; he was murdered in Canterbury Cathedral.

Do not be dismayed if you're looking for a place to stay in Portsmouth and are told there is none — that everybody lives in Southsea. For Southsea is, in effect, Portsmouth's residential area.

Your bed-and-breakfast hosts may be a navy family which has bought a house and gone into the tourist business so it'll have something to do when the man of the family retires from service. Or you may choose one of Southsea's hotels, just in from the four miles of beaches, promenades and gardens that stretch from the medieval Round Tower at the entrance to Portsmouth Harbor across Southsea and on to Eastney, where you'll find the Royal Marines Museum.

One of the landmarks along the Southsea beach is the white, multiwindowed building of the South Parade Pier, where amusements, musical entertainment and boat trips are available.

The lawns and gardens along the esplanade include a rock garden, a rose garden, and bright medallions of flowers laid out in the grass — one of them honoring the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. As you walk along the beach and esplanade, you'll also pass the pier where the hovercraft to the Isle of Wight comes in.

Then again, you may just linger on the beach. There is sun in England. And the days are long well into September. It's a pebbly beach, but fascinating, with an endless variety of pebbles, including many semiprecious stones. The water is clean and cold.

Video art creates a wonderland

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
NEW YORK (AP) — More TV sets than are ordinarily seen in captivity outside a factory are assembled in an exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art here.

But it's misleading to suggest that they're captive. Rather, they've been liberated by Nam June Paik, the pioneer video artist, to play a lively variety of roles undreamed of by their makers.

This is the first retrospective of the video art created by Paik, Korean-born and now a resident of New York City, and it's the largest show devoted to a single video artist that New York has yet seen. There are more than 60 works in the show: more than a dozen video installations, environments, multimedia sculptures and music scores.

Paik arranges groups of TV monitors to bemuse visitors with bright multiple images; he uses functioning or gutted TV sets as frames, as found objects, as components of collages; he screens videotapes, and has live videocameras recording and playing back instant still lives.

Anything concretely or conceptually relating to video is fair game for his flexible sense of fantasy, and is equally eligible to inspire an electronically oriented sculpture, crack a multimedia joke or make a dark space glow with a poetic message.

A series of these darkened galleries introduces the visitor to Paik's wonderland. The first is Video Fish: it has a line of 15 monitors at eye level flashing dancing images, including videotapes of tropical fish, through 15 screen-sized fishtanks containing live fish, placed directly in front of the monitors.

In TV Clock, 23 screens each show one line, going from white through the colors of the spectrum against a dark background, in the positions of the minute hand of a clock as it runs around one hour. Moon is the Oldest TV shows phases of the moon in black and white from full to crescent, on 12 screens.

In the gallery for Fish Flies in the Sky there are mats on the floor so that visitors can lie down in comfort to look up at 33 TV sets beaming mixed videotapes down from the ceiling, accompanied by the sounds of breaking waves.

The title of Imagine There are More Stars in the Sky than Chinese on the Earth is more poetic than its actual seven blurred video images, but Laser Video is an intriguing roomful of repeated images, a walk-in Cubist picture come to flickering life.

Then there's the TV Garden — an enchanted environment in which the musical blossoms are the TV monitors glowing from a lush ground cover of potted palms. It's viewed from a slightly raised platform that runs around it. The monitors all show the same series of videotapes but in differing color tones, and the sound track ranges from "Nights in the Gardens of Spain" to electronic burlies.

Two daylight galleries contain a variety of whimsical sculptures and video artifacts of varying sizes. A solemn guard standing by the entrance to one room, Robot K-456 is a 20-channel radio-controlled construction of assorted hardware, lots of wires and transistor bits.

A reproduction a few inches high of Rodin's The Thinker hunches over, staring deeply into a mini-sized TV set, its postage-sized screen tuned to a local program. A similarly pensive stone statue of Buddha contemplates his own image being played back on the TV screen in front of him.

A single candle burns inside an empty TV set. A handsome antique carved wooden English mail box, more than 6 feet high, beams out slices of TV programs through its two slots, near a ceiling-high tower of 40 TV sets, a tapering pyramid of pulsating images with music.

Music is the theme of the TV Cello, playing its concerto. The cellist in the videotapes the cello plays of itself is Charlotte Moorman, a classical cellist who has collaborated with Paik on several projects. She is shown wearing two other exhibits, TV Goggles and TV Glasses.
