Astronauts grab extra zzzzz's to prepare for tasks ahead

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts, orbiting with nagging technical problems, plunged into a second day of troubleshooting this morning. Mission Control pared their work schedule and delayed a key test of the shuttle's robot arm.

Day Three was "zero-gravity day," with one major goal: "Get the crew back on the straight and narrow" for the tasks ahead.

Some work was going better than expected. Astronauts Jack R. Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton were told today that scientific experimenters are "very excited about the excellent data" coming down.

Capsule Communicator David Griggs said one of the successful tests involved firing a fast-pulsed electron gun mounted in Columbia's cargo bay. The idea was to study the impact of electrical changes generated by the beam. Among the other experiments was one measuring ultra-violet radiation from the sun.

Before Lousma and Fullerton had awakened, flight officials tinkered with the work schedule and decided to delay a grab-and-lift test of the 50-foot arm in Columbia's cargo bay.

Officials had told the exhausted pilots to sleep at least an extra hour this morning, vowing, "We won't call you; you call us." Predictably, that didn't hold up and a sheepish capsule communicator David Griggs said at 8:22 a.m., "We just couldn't wait any longer."

Lousma reported that the shuttle commode was out of order, but in any event he and Fullerton slept better on Tuesday. The wake-up music was the Marine Corps Hymn, and when it ended, Col. Lousma reported back, "I'm standing up by the way."

So it was a better start than Tuesday.

"They didn't get a good sleep Monday night," explained flight surgeon Dr. Sam Poole. "They've had a very busy day; they've not eaten a lot. With a good night's sleep they'll be back on track." Poole reported Lousma had no difficulty Tuesday with the motion sickness that bothered him on launch day.

Flight director Neil Hutchinson altered the schedule, ordering up a lighter work day for today, saying, "If you don't get the crew up to speed and feeling well, you don't get much work out of them."

Despite the crew's problems and a number of technical snags, Hutchinson described Columbia as a smooth-flying ship that should be able to complete its seven-day mission.

In adjusting the flight plan, NASA essentially swapped days three and four and today became zero-gravity day, so-called because jet thruster firings are to be held to a minimum to allow extensive scientific testing. The Wednesday agenda — more ambitious — in which Columbia would fly nose to the sun for thermal testing, would be accomplished on Thursday instead.

Reporters can now phone in from N.M. desert site

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — On the gypsum sand flats of the White Sands Missile Range, it's hard to reach out and touch someone. It's easier to find a rattlesnake than a telephone.

Reporters by the hundreds are descending on the area to cover the return of the space shuttle on March 29. A reporter without a telephone is like a violinist without his fiddle.

Hearing anguished cries, the American Telephone and Telegraph

Company decided to haul out its doomsday equipment, created after the Three Mile Island nuclear accident in 1979 demonstrated the need for emergency communications.

The unit, mounted on a 40-foot flatbed trailer, was driven to the Northrup Strip at White Sands, where it arrived Sunday, according to Ivo Cook, Mountain Bell's government marketing administrator in Las Cruces.

Police say Stewart has lived in Pampa about six months, and is on probation in Toledo, Ohio.

Police nab suspects in city burglary ring

Pampa police believe they have cracked a burglary ring responsible for numerous Pampa break-ins during the past few months.

Two 16-year-old juvenile males and one adult have been arrested in connection with at least 11 burglaries, and police believe the arrests may clear even more.

Through the combined efforts of uniformed officers and detectives at the department, three separate arrests were made Tuesday, at 4, 6:30 and 11 p.m.

Taken into custody were the two juveniles and Charles Thomas Stewart, 21, 823 West Wall. Stewart was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford today for burglary, and his bond was set at $5000.

The juveniles are being referred to the Juvenile Probation Department for a detention hearing and or final disposition.

Police believe the following burglaries were cleared with the arrests:

January 26 — Pampa Foreign Car, 812 West Kingsmill. Entry made through rear door. About $20 taken.

March 8 — Marcum Pontiac, 833 Foster. Entry made by prying off outer layer of building. $400 cash, a tape recorder and several other items taken.

March 11 — J.D. Roth Trucking Terminal, 821 West Brown. Entry made through window. About $50 taken.

Bangladesh government topples in army coup

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Bangladesh's army commander, after months of disputes with the civilian government over its alleged corruption, seized control of the Asian nation today in an apparently bloodless coup, the official Dacca radio reported.

Lt. Gen. Hussain Mohammad Ershad, saying he wanted to save the country from corruption and certain disaster, imposed martial law and proclaimed himself its chief administrator and head of the government, according to Radio Bangladesh broadcasts monitored in Calcutta, India.

It quoted him as saying he would appoint a president of "my own choice" and a council to advise him.

Ousted President Abdus Sattar, in a broadcast statement, said he "fully supported" the army action.

Bangladesh radio reported separately that the capital city of Dacca remained quiet but nonetheless had been placed under a dusk-to-dawn curfew. Government and related offices were closed and all banking transactions banned. The nation's schools also were shut.

In Tokyo, a spokesman for the Japanese Foreign Ministry said it had received unconfirmed reports from its embassy in Dacca of fighting north of the Bangladesh capital. The report added that Dacca itself was "peaceful" with military troops stationed in the city.

Ershad moved to strengthen his position by naming the heads of the navy and air force, Rear Adm. Mehboob Ali Khan and Chief Air Marshal Sultan Mehmood, as his deputy martial law administrators. The country was divided into five zones, with a regional martial law commanders placed in charge of each.

In a radio address hours after the coup, Ershad said he had seized power "to protect the freedom of the nation, (restore) law and order and save the nation from a crisis."

The 52-year-old career officer said Bangladesh was "facing a crisis on every front — economic, political, social and law and order."

Ershad said Sattar admitted last February when he restructured his Cabinet that many of his ministers were corrupt. Nonetheless, some of the same men were appointed to the new Cabinet, he complained.

"This government has completely failed," the military leader declared. "The people expect the army to come to their aid."

The 75-year-old Sattar, who spoke on the state radio, said the situation had deteriorated to the point that "in the interest of the Bangladeshi people, military rule has become necessary."

Ershad announced the dissolution of Parliament and the suspension of the government and constitution. He said he would appoint a council of advisers to assist him. He said "a new president will be elected to run the administration," and indicated that the person chosen would take direction from the martial law administration.

"A new constitution may be formed," he added without elaboration.

Pampans ask city for stricter animal control law enforcement

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

An open letter signed by nearly 200 Pampans asks the Pampa City Commission for stricter enforcement of animal control laws.

The letter is being circulated by Karin Sutherland, 510 N. Somerville, following last week's savage dog attack on a 2-year-old Pampa boy.

The toddler was attacked by the parents of Dusty Romines, Freddie and Dawn Romines. The Romines child is undergoing rabies shots in connection with the mauling.

The toddler was attacked by two dogs, one identified as a Pit Bulldog cross, weighing about 40 pounds. Because the second dog could not be identified or located, the doctor treating the boy began the series of rabies shots.

The child was mauled so badly in the attack that three hours of surgery and more than 100 stitches were required.

Sutherland said she is circulating the letter to the city commission because, "I was concerned for my kids. Kids in this town have been chased and terrified by dogs. I have called the city manager and chief of police, but they just gave me the runaround," she said.

Ordinances on dogs inside the city limits are contained in the Pampa City Code Under "Definitions," the code says: "(1) 'Dog' shall mean both the male and female. (2) 'At large' shall mean (A) not under the control of the owner either by leash, chain, cord, or other suitable material attached to a collar or harness or (B) not restrained securely within an enclosure or fence. (3) 'Owner' shall mean (sic) any person, firm, or corporation owning or keeping or harboring or having control of or custody of a dog."

The next two code sections on dogs make it unlawful for an owner to allow a dog to be "at large," and gives the city responsibility to impound dogs at large.

The code states: "It shall be unlawful for any owner of any dog to allow such a dog to be at large within the corporate limits of the City of Pampa," and "It shall be the duty of the dog catcher or any of his deputies, or any city policeman may while on duty, to seize and impound, subject to the provisions of this article, all dogs found at large within the corporate limits of the City of Pampa."

The remainder of the city ordinances on dogs goes on to provide for mandatory rabies vaccination of dogs inside the city limits and provisions and costs for claiming impounded dogs and provisions to kill unclaimed dogs.

Any violation of the dog ordinances can result in a maximum $200 owner fine, each and every day the ordinance is violated.

The open letter and signatures, addressed to the city commission and editor of The Pampa News, states: "This letter is in regard to the serious dog crisis in Pampa. For several years, we have witnessed the indifference the city commission has shown to the problem. Is it conceivable that you would be held responsible, at least in part, if a child should die as a result of a dog attack?"

"As the current law stands, a dog can maul or even kill a child, and both dog and owner go scott free. If the dog mauls our children, you are responsible. After all, it is the city commission's responsibility to make the city ordinances, is it not? Is it going to take vigilante action to wake up our commissioners to the fact that a stronger dog law is urgently needed? Why should decent, law-abiding citizens be tempted to take the law into their own hands to protect their children?"

"If a dog law is impossible to enforce, why even have one? You might ask Trent Watson, Mrs. Heaton, Dusty Romines...or, if you wait...the next victim."

"Remember, commissioners, it's your responsibility — or your guilt."

"Signed Concerned Citizens." The Pampa Animal Control office operates under the jurisdiction of the city and police department. Currently, there are three full-time employees of the office, who must staff the facility every day of the week, including Sunday.

Sutherland said, "This town is more for animals than for people. It's time we wake up and do something. If my dog attacked a child, he would be destroyed."

"These are unprovoked attacks, and the dogs involved are not strays. If people care about an animal, they make sure it can't get out of the fence," Sutherland said.

City Manager Mack Wofford said the letter to the commission was delivered to his office Friday. He said he wrote a letter about the matter and mailed it to each commissioner. Wofford said there is a possibility that the commission could hold a public discussion on the animal control issue at a later date.

Self-confessed murderer tells of 13th victim

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Robert Dale Henderson, who admitted to 12 killings last January, has told of a 13th — that of a Texas woman he said he strangled and left on a roadside, the Fort Myers (Fla.) News-Press reported today.

Henderson, 36, is now being held in the Putnam County Jail in Palatka, where he is to stand trial on first-degree murder charges in the shooting deaths of a store clerk and a retired physician.

Henderson told Florida lawmen he killed a woman in Livingston, Texas, in either 1976 or 1977, the newspaper said. Henderson then reportedly said he tossed the woman's body onto the side of a road in the resort town 120 miles northwest of Beaumont. He said he didn't know who she was.

Fatheree to head campaign for McDonald house

David Fatheree of Pampa, a member of the Board of Directors of Children's Oncology Services of the Texas Panhandle Inc., the not-for-profit organization that will build and operate the Ronald McDonald House in Amarillo, is spearheading support in the Pampa area for the House.

Fatheree, owner of Fatheree Insurance Agency, said that the Ronald McDonald House concept is a dream come true for families in our area.

"Nothing could be more traumatic than to have to travel to a distant city to receive medical treatment for a critically ill child. Not only is the family under a great emotional strain, but for many, the cost of long-term medical treatment can wipe out a family's savings. The Ronald McDonald House provides an alternative to some of the hardships faced by giving these families both emotional and financial support," Fatheree said.

Helping families through the devastating reality of a child being treated for cancer, leukemia, heart disease and other serious illnesses is what a Ronald McDonald House is all about. This "Home Away From Home" provides temporary lodging for families of critically ill children during periods of hospitalization or outpatient treatment.

The history of the first Ronald McDonald House began with Fred Hill, a football player with the Philadelphia Eagles. His child had been stricken with leukemia, and he discovered the need for such a facility near the Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, where his child was being treated.

Few hospitals provide sufficient live-in accommodations for families. Hill's dilemma was the catalyst that inspired the Eagles and the McDonald's owner — operators around Philadelphia to launch a fundraising drive to establish the first Ronald McDonald House. Today there are over 37 such Houses across the United States and Canada, with another 20 in the building or planning stages.

The proposed $1 million Ronald McDonald House in Amarillo will house up to ten families when completed. Families will receive use of private bedroom, plus use of common living areas, kitchen, playrooms, and laundry facilities. Each family staying at the House will be a temporary volunteer, responsible for the maintenance of their own room and other areas they use in the House. Although the House will ask for a nominal donation of about $10 a night per family to cover costs of operation, this fee is waived in hardship cases. Referrals for use of the House will come from Amarillo hospitals and medical treatment centers.

For more information about the Ronald McDonald House, contact David Fatheree or write: The Ronald McDonald House of Amarillo, P.O. Box 12011, Amarillo, Texas 79101.

Military installs three-man junta in Guatemala to halt corruption

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Military officers who ousted Guatemala's right-wing president and installed a three-man junta say they acted because elections earlier this month were rigged to prolong an unpopular and corrupt regime.
Tanks and troops ringed the presidential palace in the Tuesday coup but no violence was reported. It was the first military takeover in 19 years in Guatemala. Central America's most populous nation racked by hundreds of political killings and a leftist rebellion.
Junta leader Efraim Rios Montt, a retired general who ran unsuccessfully for president eight years ago, told reporters he would dissolve congress and rule by decree with junta colleagues Gen. Horacio Maldonado Shad and Col. Francisco Gordillo.
In a televised address later, Rios Montt promised reforms and asked leftist guerrillas to lay down their arms, saying "subversion should not continue."
Rios Montt said ousted President

Gen. Fernando Remeo Lucas Garcia fled the country by plane. It was not known where he sought sanctuary. Nor was there any word from Lucas Garcia's elected successor, Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara, who had been scheduled to take office July 1. The U.S. Embassy in Guatemala said it had received word that Guevara was safe.
Guevara, a close associate of Lucas Garcia, was elected March 7 amid widespread allegations that the voting was rigged.
Rios Montt told a news conference the ousted right-wing president and his successor had "imposed a government on us that does not represent the people."
Rios Montt, wearing a military uniform, promised elections to choose a new government but set no date. He also said "there is no state of siege in the country."
Coup leaders, described as junior military officers, also seized state-run radio and played martial music mixed with announcements that the rebellion was prompted by "corruption following a fraudulent election."

Rios Montt ran unsuccessfully for president in 1974 as candidate of a coalition headed by the center-right Christian Democratic Party. His two junta colleagues held high posts during Lucas Garcia's four years in office.
The junta leader vowed to "change Guatemala's image by way of its foreign relations, especially with the United States," which has criticized the country's human rights record.
The United States stopped military aid to Guatemala in 1977 after a dispute stemming from the government's refusal to accept human rights conditions.
Right-wing "death squads," paramilitary groups reportedly linked to the government and wealthy landowners, are blamed by Roman Catholic Church and human rights groups for most of the estimated 300 political killings reported each month.

Signs point towards lower inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's still more a hint than a prediction, but economists see increasing signs that the nation may be entering a new era of low inflation.
After nearly two decades of steadily worsening inflation, economists say, the price spiral may be unwinding during the 1980s, released from some of the same forces that fueled double-digit inflation during the 1970s: oil, wages and the government.
"Underlying inflationary pressures are slowing substantially," said Donald Ratajczak, who issues inflation forecasts for Georgia State University's College of Business Administration. "Double-digits may no longer be a significant possibility in this decade."
The optimism expressed by Ratajczak and other economists does not simply reflect the swift decline in the inflation rate that has occurred in recent months. With the economy beset by a sharp recession and high unemployment, it is typical for price increases to slow substantially.

Going beyond that, the economists' encouragement comes from several seemingly fundamental changes in the nation's economic behavior, including reduced dependence on imported oil, wage concessions by some of the largest unions, increased price competition within large industries and a steadier anti-inflation policy carried out by the federal government.
These factors could lay the groundwork for a new low-inflation environment that will last even when the economy is growing strongly again and unemployment comes down.

In the same way expectations of high inflation fed on each other to keep the wage-price spiral rising, newly emerging expectations that inflation is coming down could help achieve the reality of "dis-inflation."
"Certainly, there are some genuinely encouraging signs," said Alfred E. Kahn, former President Carter's chief inflation fighter. "Most heartening are the wage givebacks. They're getting more widespread." Kahn said, noting concessions the United Auto Workers union has granted the auto industry and those the Teamsters have granted trucking companies in return for increased job security.
The Labor Department reported Tuesday that consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 3 percent in February.

Committee approves lower pollution standards for automobile engines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Energy and Commerce subcommittee, in a major environmental issue, has voted for an industry-supported revision of the Clean Air Act that would relax federal air pollution standards for automobile engines.
The vote Tuesday came despite the presence of protesters wearing surgical gauze masks who objected that the proposed change would permit a doubling of the levels carbon monoxide and oxides of nitrogen allowed for 1980-model cars.
In other congressional business Tuesday:
—Congressional sources said Senate leaders are proposing creation of a bipartisan committee to look into whether the FBI abused its powers in its Abscam probe.

—A key Senate Armed Services subcommittee voted to block the Reagan administration's plan to temporarily house up to 40 of the new MX nuclear warhead missiles in existing Minuteman silos. The unanimous, closed-door vote, disclosed by a congressional source, would delete production funds for the MX missile until Reagan decides on a permanent basing plan.
—The Senate voted 69-25 for an amendment that would give Congress the authority to veto most types of federal regulations. Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., who introduced the amendment, argued that Congress, not federal bureaucrats, should have the final say on whether such regulations are put into effect.

Reagan award prompts dissent, protest

NEW YORK (AP) — Protesters organized a dinner of cheese and ketchup that mocked a black-tie affair and 10,000 demonstrators surrounded a hotel where President Reagan accepted a leadership award some religious leaders said he didn't deserve.
Tuesday night's protest, which police said was the biggest here since demonstrations outside the 1980 Democratic National Convention, was sparked by Reagan's visit to the New York Hilton in midtown Manhattan to receive the annual Charles Evans Hughes Gold Medal awarded by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.
The decision to award the medal to Reagan stirred dissension in the conference.
The award honors "courageous leadership in government, civic and humanitarian affairs," Irving Felt, debases the "meaning of the English language."

At the alternative luncheon, held at Fordham University's Lincoln Center campus, Rabbi Arnold Wolf renounced the brotherhood award he got from the NCCJ 20 years ago, saying the award Reagan had dishonored his own.
City planner Elinor Guggenheimer said she was returning her 1974 award, "which I thought I would treasure all my life."
"But I simply cannot think of one instance in which (Reagan) has been concerned with a single humanitarian thought or action," she said.
The menu was cheese, to symbolize surplus cheese the administration gave to the poor, and ketchup, because of a suggestion that ketchup was an appropriate vegetable for school lunches. The suggestion was later withdrawn by the administration.

Harding charges his indictment resulted from a 'witch hunt'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Treasurer Warren G. Harding says his indictment on two counts of felony official misconduct was the product of a politically motivated "witch hunt."

Harding, the subject of a Travis County grand jury investigation since January, was charged Tuesday with having two treasurer's office employees do campaign work on state time.

The two counts are third-degree felonies. If convicted on both counts, Harding could be sentenced to up to 20 years in prison and fined up to $10,000.

Harding's lawyer, Robert O. Smith, said the two secretarial employees — Charlotte Fulton and Emma Franzetti — had only addressed "thank you" notes, and that did not violate the law.

The indictments said Ms. Fulton's work was on Dec. 31 and Ms. Franzetti's on Jan. 25. The notes were to contributors to Harding's officeholders fund, said Smith, who accompanied Harding to a Capitol news conference two hours after the indictments were returned.

"The courthouse crowd hatched this setup when it appeared that I would have no opposition for re-election," Harding said in a prepared statement at the news conference.

"One of the three grand jury commissioners who picked this grand jury is the Travis County Democratic chairman and a close personal friend of one of my opponents," Harding said, in an apparent reference to Ann Richards, a former Travis County commissioner who filed for treasurer just before the Feb. 1 deadline.

The party chairman is Barbara Vackar, who could not be reached Tuesday evening.

At a campaign appearance in Midland, Ms. Richards said she was "stunned and shocked" by the indictments. She was asked in Odessa later if her campaign would benefit from the allegations against Harding.

"Unquestionably yes, it's going to have some impact. I think that I'm the front-runner (against Harding) without any doubt about that," she said. "It's going to help me. Sure it is."

Harding was without opposition until days before the Feb. 1 filing. His office attracted four contenders after news of the investigation broke.

The other candidates seeking the treasurer's office are Democrat Lane Denton, Waco businessman and former state legislator; Democrat John Cutright, Austin businessman; and Republican Millard Neptune, prominent Austin businessman and state party supporter.

Denton said Tuesday that the indictment probably puts Harding "out of the picture" for the Democratic nomination.

Cutright said Harding should resign because the charges involve "official corruption and incompetence... He owes it to the people to step down and give them a chance to study the other candidates in the race without his legal problems clouding the issue."

Neptune said the indictments probably will increase his fellow Republicans' interest in the race and "if we come up with a really good, winning candidate in that slot, I will step aside."

Harding testified before the grand jury voluntarily earlier this year, as did his son, Glenn. The younger Harding resigned from his job at an Austin brokerage firm shortly after his grand jury appearance.

The treasurer's office deposits millions of dollars in state funds in banks and Harding's son sold bonds and municipal securities banks use to secure deposits.

Smith called the charges against Harding "unwarranted" and said they indicated that the grand jury couldn't substantiate any charges more serious than misapplication against the treasurer.

"You don't give a parking ticket to somebody you're going to indict for murder," he said.

California man admits conspiring to smuggle armed helicopters

DALLAS (AP) — A California employment agency director admits being part of a conspiracy to smuggle armed helicopters to the Middle East.

Carl Michael Kulungian, 34, of Los Angeles, pleaded guilty to a federal indictment that he violated the Neutrality Act by conspiring to smuggle fully armed Bell Cobra attack helicopters from Texas to Libya and Iraq.

Kulungian was arrested March 6, along with two other men, to conclude an undercover customs investigation. Arrested with Kulungian at an Amarillo motel were Spanish businessman Alfonso Lopez Quesare and Paulo Marcucci of Italy.

A federal indictment said those three were part of a seven-man ring that violated the Neutrality Act by planning the operation.

Kulungian entered the plea Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Robert Porter during a bond hearing. Porter ordered that Marcucci continue to be held without bond.

The judge reduced Quesare's bond to $1 million, but said Quesare would not be allowed to leave the country without a court hearing. Members of Quesare's family, who said they came here from Spain for the legal proceedings, said they could not raise the money and Quesare remained in jail.

Porter said he would sentence Kulungian on April 14.

Two Los Angeles men, Thomas R. O'Connor and Max Field, were named in the indictment and were held in California on $500,000 bond each. Two Italians, identified as Serverio Nuccio and Daro Ronca, were indicted but remain at large.

"This is really an intriguing case but we can't reveal any more than is in the indictment," said U.S. Attorney Jim Rolfe, after the indictment was opened March 16.

Kulungian, Quesare and Marcucci were arrested after customs agents posed as salesmen for Bell Helicopter Textron Co. to infiltrate the ring, the indictment said.

The indictment accuses Field and O'Connor of meeting with undercover customs agents in early January to discuss the sale and exporting of the helicopters.

Gun-toting stewardess captures arson suspect

DALLAS (AP) — Her feet planted wide apart and her pistol gripped in both hands, Theresa Quinn pointed the gun at an arson suspect and told him not to move or she would shoot. She held him at gunpoint for 20 minutes until help arrived.

Ms. Quinn is not a police officer. She is a 29-year-old flight attendant for American Airlines. But she meant business.

"I'd have shot him in the head if he came toward me, and in the legs if he'd tried to get away — but I was scared to death. I've never killed anything before," said Ms. Quinn.

She said she grabbed her pistol and went after the man when she saw him skulking behind her house as fires ripped through the neighborhood.

Police arrested Lawrence Berg, 32, and charged him with seven counts of arson, accusing him of setting house six fires and trying to set a seventh.

Berg has been awaiting trial since he was indicted in Collin County last month on burglary and arson charges, said Dallas police officer Andrew White, who made the arrest.

Berg told police he had been unemployed since losing his job as a liquor store clerk two months ago. He remained in city jail after Municipal Court Judge Reginald Middleton set bond at $70,000 — $10,000 on each charge.

Ms. Quinn said she was standing on the deck of her swimming pool, watching firefighters battle a series of six house fires that erupted in the affluent, north Dallas neighborhood in less than an hour.

She said she became suspicious and went for her gun when she saw a man sneaking into a nearby garage.

"Out of the corner of my eye, I saw this man running up beside the fence and he was crouching real low like he was hiding from something," she said.

"I came around the corner and caught him literally with his pants down — he was urinating," she told laughing reporters. "I held it (the gun) to his head and told him to put his hands up. He wanted to finish what he was doing but I told him to keep his hands in the air... I told him I wanted him to keep his hands where I could see them.

"He kept trying to tell me he was looking for the man who had set the fires. I said, 'Well, I saw you do it. Just save your story for the police.'

"He said, 'What will you do if I start walking to my car?'" she continued. "I said, 'I'll shoot you.' He said, 'You might do that,' and I said, 'It'll cost you a bullet to find out.'

The six mid-afternoon fires erupted in a three-block area, with the sixth fire breaking out 50 minutes after the first one was reported, said Dallas Fire Capt. W.A. Richardson.

Firefighters said they suspected arson as soon as they arrived to fight the first one and saw other fires spreading against the wind.

New police chief now must win confidence of assistants

HOUSTON (AP) — Lee P. Brown, the Atlanta public safety commissioner who headed the investigation into the slayings of 28 black youths, easily won confirmation as Houston's first black police chief.

But the 44-year-old Brown still must get the support of assistant and deputy police chiefs who criticized the selection of Brown but now have the job of carrying out his policies.

The City Council confirmed Brown's appointment by an 11-3 vote Tuesday despite opposition from the 2,500-member Houston Police Officers' Association.

About 200 people crowded into the council chambers cheered and applauded after Mayor Kathy Whitmire certified the vote, making Brown the eighth police chief in as many years and the first selected outside the Houston Police Department in 40 years.

Christine Hartung, one of the three dissenting council members, told Mrs. Whitmire she respected her choice but added, "I feel that with the morale (in the police department) the way it is, it would have helped to have found someone in the community."

Brown's nomination drew negative responses from assistant and deputy police chiefs, who were angered the mayor selected an outsider, and the Police Officers' Association, who claimed Brown lacked adequate management skills.

Brown met with nine assistant police chiefs for about four hours after the council meeting and said he believed he could overcome any pessimistic feelings.

"My anticipation is to work with all people who want to make the police department here a showcase for the national and to roll up my sleeves and get to work," Brown said.

Brown said he would finish his duties in Atlanta this week and would assume his new responsibilities in the nation's fifth largest city next month.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Giving the game away

Observers of the regulatory process in America have an interesting opportunity just now to see how regulations are really put in place, and who stands to benefit from them.

Airline fares and routes have been substantially deregulated over the last several years. As one might have expected, there's been a good deal of pushing and shoving as a result. New companies have entered the fray for the first time since regulation was imposed. Prices have gone up and down. This month most airlines are engaged in a price war on transcontinental flights. A number of companies are feeling an economic pinch from all this competition.

And, as might have been expected, we're starting to hear some calls for re-regulation, pleas for government to impose some "order" on the "chaos" of the competitive marketplace.

World Airways president Edward Daly wants the Civil Aeronautics Board to require an airline to "justify" any fare which is less than half of something called the Standard Industry Fare Level, a totally mythical "reference" fare dreamed up by the CAB that supposedly permits an "average" carrier to earn a "reasonable" profit. Daly's commendably honest about why he wants this government intervention. His airline, he says, is losing money on the super-low fares, and he's tired of it.

Perhaps Daly should be drummed out of the pro-regulation fraternity for his straightforwardness. That approach is seldom preferred in those circles. A favored method is to persuade a couple of politicians, a few "consumer advocates" and a labor leader or two to work themselves into a well-publicized lather about the potential that exists for instability if this "cutthroat competition" is permitted to continue. The object of this public relations approach is to fuzz up the question of who will benefit most directly (usually companies that aren't doing too well in the marketplace) from the proposed regulation. Some "public interest" mumbo jumbo is usually invoked.

Daly's transparent and above-board approach threatens to give away the whole game. By operating so openly, he may impel citizens to ask the question "who will benefit?" about other proposed regulations.

Cocaine's rising popularity

Most of the news about the rising popularity of cocaine comes from the entertainment world. But most of those getting hooked on this "in" drug are not celebrities. They are, to use a recent term from Hollywood, ordinary people.

If John Belushi's sad death from a combination of heroin and cocaine was startling to his fans, it was not as alarming as the statistics coming from the National Institute of Drug Abuse. The number of Americans severely dependent on cocaine is now estimated at between 100,000 and 200,000, and if the trend of the past few years continues, the number could surpass the 500,000 believed to be addicted to heroin.

Deaths associated with cocaine quadrupled between 1975 and 1980. Persons who have sniffed, injected, smoked or swallowed cocaine now constitute a major category of drug abusers showing up in hospital emergency rooms and entering treatment programs to break their habit. That cocaine is "safe" compared with other psychoactive drugs is a dangerous myth.

What does this mean? For one thing, cocaine now accounts for more income than marijuana on the underworld market.

But more pertinent meaning is for our society as a whole. We see yet another insidious drug working its way into our midst, even as we worry about the implications of the pot-smoking habit that took root among young people during the 1960s.

Officials of drug-abuse agencies believe the use of cocaine would be even more widespread if it were not so expensive. That's the irony. Those who are "doing cocaine" are typically well-educated members of the upper middle class — people who ought to know better.

By DON GRAFF

The soft life is over, the years when it was mostly a matter of deciding how much to raise prices and sitting back to watch the money roll in from the captive customers.

Now comes the tough part, accepting production cutbacks to tighten supplies and apportioning the consequent income loss among the members of the team. It is not going to be easy, but if OPEC is going to function like a real cartel — and thus keep a firm grip on the economic power it seized almost a decade ago — it will have to do so.

The oil exporters are in trouble, as you probably already know. And even if you don't, you've probably had pleasant experience with the consequences in the declining prices on the pumps at your local stations.

The reason is a world oil surplus that has several causes — a decline in consumption in large part the result of energy conservation measures in the importing countries, increased production in non-OPEC countries and the deliberate flooding of the market for the past year or more by the No. 1 exporter.

That, of course, is Saudi Arabia and its overproduction has been anything but a wasteful extravagance. It has been a deliberate campaign to demonstrate beyond all doubt to OPEC colleagues the Saudis' control of the oil market and to compel those colleagues to accept Saudi views on production and marketing. Those are that production should be matched carefully to existing demand and that the impulse to raise prices to what the traffic of the moment will bear, and sometimes beyond, should be restrained in order to avoid either destabilizing the industrial economies or causing them to swear off too-expensive oil as a primary energy source.

The Saudis certainly succeeded in the first respect. But there is some question as to whether they may not have overdone it in the second. The betting at the moment is that after a period of breast-beating in the causes of national independence and Islamic honor, OPEC price-setters will go along with the Saudis.

But it could be too late. Conservation and conversion to alternative energy sources is already well advanced in the industrial countries. Some experts believe it is too far advanced to be reversed. Insulation is not going to be ripped out of homes. Fuel-efficient new equipment is not going to be scrapped. Detroit is not going to stop a retooling in which it has already sunk billions. Western Europe, over strenuous American opposition on political grounds, is going ahead with the multi-billion-dollar piping in of Soviet natural gas for the very purpose of easing dependence upon OPEC oil.

Also, OPEC no longer has the exporting business largely to itself. Since the first oil shock in 1973-74 that quadrupled prices, new heavyweights have come on line. While they have not been undercutting OPEC, neither have they been playing its game. The leaders in recent price cuts have been Britain and Mexico, not for the manipulative purposes of the Saudis but for the businesslike reason of adjusting the supply to the demand.

Nevertheless, it may be too early to count OPEC out — or even down. If really pressed, the Saudis with their enormous production could almost clear up the glut themselves. They have already announced a production drop for March of a million barrels a day and say they could go lower without financial distress. Much lower if they wanted to put up with a little distress, possibly canceling an AWACS order or two.

It could happen. But if it did, the return to a tight market and OPEC-determined prices would only confirm the importers in the wisdom of their conservation and conversion policies.

The Saudis very likely will be able to get the troops back into some sort of line. But it is very unlikely to be as formidable a force again.

And for that, OPEC's own overachievement will be primarily responsible. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

In welfare state, inflation is built-in

By OSCAR COOLEY

Several states have constitutions which forbid the state government to operate with a perennially unbalanced budget, and a balanced-budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution is in the making. Thirty-one states, at this writing, have petitioned Congress to call a constitutional convention for the purpose of amending the constitution to require a balanced budget except during an emergency such as a major war. Only 3 more states need vote for it, and such a convention would have to be called.

For the U.S. to operate without increasing the national debt would be virtually impossible if, at the same time, we are to continue transforming this country into a welfare state. Here is why:

As producers, people create goods and services and sell them for money. As consumers, they buy goods with money and consume them. But what is money?

Once it was a commodity, such as gold or receipts for gold. By tacit consent, we accepted it in payment for goods we wanted. We called it money, but it was really just a commodity, though a rare one and therefore valuable. It took sweat to produce, and so it increased very slowly.

Today, most of our money is bank debt to depositors, who spend it by writing checks. The important difference between gold and bank debt is that the latter takes no sweat to produce. As the government budget increases, Washington has to have more and more money, so it issues bonds and sells them to the nation's banks, which pay for them by giving the government deposit credit. The government offers whatever rate of interest is necessary to get the banks to buy the bonds. In short, the banks incur debt to the government and the latter spends the debt as money. It goes into general circulation, becoming part of the nation's money supply.

As long as the nation's money increases at about the same rate as its goods, no inflation need result. This is true when private enterprise does all the bank borrowing. A loan is granted to an enterprise when the banker can see that it will enable the firm to increase its production and thus get income, out of which to pay its costs, including its debt to the bank.

This is not the case when the U.S. government borrows from the banks in order to spend on welfare, or to make its ever-increasing transfer payments, which are those that call for no return and which therefore generate no production.

We become more and more a welfare state, or a country in which more and more of the people turn to the government for their welfare, their bread and butter. They assume the government owes them a living, and by its lavish spending it encourages them in this assumption. In such a country, the money supply is bound to become excessive. Fewer people work and produce. They live on the easily obtained government payments. Fewer goods — but more and more dollars — are produced.

What can the result be but continuous inflation? It is built-in, once a welfare state policy is adopted.

The rip-off society

By PAUL HARVEY

In Chicago's western suburb is one of those restaurants good enough to attract visitors from across town and reasonable enough so that neighbors eat there frequently.

It's called THE HOMESTEAD, owned by Ashley Ricketts, whose family has deep roots in Chicago and generations of experience as restaurateurs.

What Ash has tried to do is to provide a dining atmosphere that's borderline elegant; tablecloths and silver silverware, candles, fresh flowers on each table; neat, polite and prompt service and fireplace warmth for those who have to wait.

The meat- and -potatoes menu for the regulars is enhanced by some gourmet specialties — but most significantly, prices are moderate.

Comparable food in comparable surroundings in Chicago frequently runs $40 per person. At THE HOMESTEAD a similar four-course meal and beverage is closer to $10.

But customers are forcing the prices upward.

I said customers are forcing higher prices — by stealing the silverware.

A restaurant is a microcosm of all industry. Its problems relate to supply, demand, inventory, cash-flow, traffic-handling and race-relations.

And crime. Mostly the customers are the criminals.

The price of a restaurant meal is increased by the diner who sues because he slipped on a step or because the beans were "too hot."

The price is increased by the diner who empties the basket of rolls into her chairside shopping bag.

Also the butter.

Also the salt and pepper, still in the shakers.

Table decorations where they are not bolted in place.

And ashtrays.

And silverware.

The FBI's CRIME REPORT says shoplifting increased another 17 percent last year. Other than school-agers, most shoplifters are women between 20 and 50.

In the restaurant business, it has been traditional to allow for a percentage of steaks "going out the back door" in the pockets of employees.

Recently, the far greater loss has been going out the front door in the pockets and parcels of patrons.

The doggie-bag tradition may have encouraged thievery. It is but a short step from taking home uneaten food to taking home appurtenances.

All that government has done to contribute to the something-for-nothing psychology inevitably rubs off on mostly-nice people.

Every restaurateur knows some dear souls whom he would not for the world offend, but they are picking the pockets of everybody in the place when they walk off with the cream pitcher.

California is feeling the recession's bite

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "You know times are hard when a couple thousand people show up to apply for 300 jobs — and just apprentice slots at that," said a machinist at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard who lived through the Depression. The man was talking about the 2,400 people who lined up for blocks on two days recently to put their names on an applicant list for low-paying apprentice jobs ranging from shipfitter to painter.

"I don't care which job I get," said 26-year-old Henry Godfrey of nearby Norwalk. "I just want a paycheck." Godfrey has been out of work since July 20, when he was furloughed from his job as a lumber supply salesman.

Traditionally, California's diverse economy has been insulated from the brunt of national recessions. But it's starting to feel this one:

— In Fresno, the Ironworkers Union local announced in February it would have nine openings for apprentices. More than 100 people showed up. Half a dozen slept outside the union hall for a week so they'd be first in line.

— More than 2,000 people turned out to apply when Von's supermarket opened a new store in Fresno and announced it would hire 65 to 70 new clerks — many of them part-time.

— In Riverside, 575 people — mostly young women — stood in line for hours, hoping to snare one of 100 job openings at a new restaurant.

— In Los Angeles, 600 people — accountants, MBAs and even fired air traffic controllers — showed up for a two-day "job fair" in early March to apply for Internal Revenue Service positions that won't exist until next fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1, if then.

"Unemployment is the highest it's ever been in California," says Gera Curry, spokeswoman for the Employment Development Department in Sacramento.

During February, the last month for which figures are available, the rate was 8.9 percent, with 1.069 million people out of jobs in a total state labor force of slightly over 12 million.

Nationwide, joblessness averaged 8.8 percent in February — just slightly less than the California rate. But 19 states had double-digit unemployment rates, with Michigan the worst at 16 percent.

California unemployment ranges from a high of 37.9 percent in small Sierra County, population 3,150, to a low of 5 percent in even tinier Alpine County, population 1,150.

Sierra County, a mountainous Gold Rush county between Sacramento and Reno founded in 1849, suffers high unemployment every winter as its one lumber mill closes down, the U.S. Forest Service lays off workers and prospectors lured by tales of gold in the rivers go on welfare until the weather warms up.

In other logging counties of Northern California, whose chief industry has been reeling from high interest rates, inflation and recession for two years, joblessness ranges from 20 to 28 percent.

"But hardest hit — in sheer numbers of people unemployed — are Los Angeles and Alameda counties," says Ms. Curry.

In Los Angeles County, with 8.9 percent unemployment a month ago, its 3.7-million-member labor force, 284 companies with 29,328 workers have closed their doors for good since 1980, she says. In Alameda County, where the jobless rate is 8.6 percent, 62 firms with 13,862 employees went belly up in that time.

"For California as a whole, more than 82,000 jobs have been lost due to plant closures and layoffs since 1980 because of the bad state of the economy," Ms. Curry says.

Workers in the auto, tire and rubber, and lumber and construction industries have borne the brunt of the layoffs.

"We in no way want to minimize the impact of the recession on California," says Michael Ackley of the state Economic and Business Development Department in Sacramento. "It is very serious, and we are working very hard to overcome it."

Ackley's agency is in charge of keeping California industries from going elsewhere and enticing new companies to locate here. While California is not doing as well as in the past, it still is faring better than other states.

From 1980 to 1981, he said, non-agricultural wage and salary employment in the state grew by 1.9 percent, from 9.85 million to just under 10.04 million. That was well below the 5 percent average annual growth from 1976 to 1980.

"But it is still nearly double the rate for the rest of the country," he said. Employment in the 49 other states grew by 0.98 percent from 1980 to 1981, he said.

Besides luring new companies here, Ackley's agency is persuading companies already doing business in the state to expand here rather than elsewhere.

In recent weeks, he said, two Northern California-based computer technology firms that had considered building in other states, including Arizona and New Mexico where wages are lower, announced expansions near Sacramento that will create 10,000 jobs.

TRW Inc. is planning a sizable expansion in San Diego County, Northrop is taking over a closed Ford Motor Co. plant in Pico Rivera and Rockwell International is gearing up for the B-1 bomber program, he added.

But it will be years before those jobs materialize. In the meantime, the jobless are left to collect up to $136 a week in unemployment benefits while they compete for work in an increasingly crowded job market.

A LITTLE SHOP TALK. Raymond Donovan, U.S. Secretary of Labor, left, listens to Ford Motor Co. chairman Philip Caldwell during a tour of Ford's Rouge engine plant in Detroit on Tuesday. Earlier in the day Donovan signed an agreement with the United Auto Workers to re-train laid-off workers to work in the aerospace industry. (AP Laserphoto)

No evidence of budget concessions

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the tiniest of steps, President Reagan and Democrats in the House of Representatives appear to be edging toward compromise on the administration's deficit-plagued 1983 budget plan.

But so far there is no evidence of specific concessions by either side, and officials say emphatically that an agreement is a long way off.

"There has been absolutely no change in the position of the president on the budget," White House spokesman David Gergen said Tuesday. Reagan has asked for a $75.6 billion spending plan that rejects big tax increases and continues the administration's Pentagon buildup.

But Gergen also said that Reagan authorized White House Chief of Staff James Baker to talk with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. "to assure the speaker that we wanted to listen to any proposals or ideas and that we would like to keep the lines of communications open."

O'Neill told reporters of the call, and said, "Politics has been the art of compromise all through the years."

Asked whether he believes Reagan wants to compromise on his budget this year, the Massachusetts Democrat said, "That remains to be seen."

Democratic aides were more hopeful. "It's a good sign that the White House wants to find a way out of the stalemate," said one official, asking not to be identified by name.

The development came as Senate Republicans demonstrated their own impatience with Reagan's refusal to compromise.

The major sticking point is the projected federal deficit under Reagan's budget, which according to the latest administration estimate would be a record $96.4 billion in the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

Senate GOP Leader Howard Baker hinted strongly that Reagan should meet with O'Neill to see whether a compromise is possible. "The problem is what the speaker and the president can come to terms on," he said.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the tax-writing Finance Committee, said, "We'd like to have some signal from the White House that we're going to be able to do business."

And Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said the Budget Committee he heads will begin work on a budget next Monday, although he and other panel members predicted Reagan's plan won't be approved.

Republicans and Democrats alike are concerned that the deficits in Reagan's budget will keep interest rates high and choke off an economic recovery expected later this year.

Senate panel wants MX funds withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key Senate Armed Services subcommittee is proposing that Congress withhold production funds for the MX missile until the Reagan administration decides on a permanent system of deploying the multiwarhead nuclear weapon.

In a 9-0 vote Tuesday, the strategic and nuclear forces subcommittee rejected the administration's plan, which is to put the MX missiles in existing Minuteman silos until a permanent basing plan is approved. If Congress upholds the panel's action, the administration would be unable to deploy the first 40 MX missiles in the Minuteman silos as now planned.

The subcommittee vote, behind closed doors, was disclosed by a congressional source who asked not to be identified.

The vote was to delete $1.7 billion in early production funds, "plus some R&D (research and development) money on the basing mode," the source said.

"The subcommittee voted that way because Minuteman basing does nothing to solve the problem of vulnerability" to Soviet attack, he said.

Use of the Minuteman silos, under the administration's schedule, would begin in 1986. A decision on a permanent basing plan is supposed to be made in 1984, with permanent deployment in 1989.

NATO defense ministers in apparent accord

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Western alliance defense ministers end a two-day meeting here today in apparent accord on key policy issues aimed at curbing U.S. and Soviet nuclear firepower.

The meeting of 13 ministers, who consider nuclear questions twice a year, was due to close with a communique and a news conference featuring NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns and U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

A senior U.S. official reported "a high degree of agreement" among the ministers in Tuesday's secret sessions in a resort hotel at the foot of the Rocky Mountains.

The United States seems to have nailed down North Atlantic alliance backing for President Reagan's proposal to forgo deployment of 572 new U.S. medium-range missiles in Western Europe if the Soviets scrap about 650 similar weapons already in firing positions.

Weinberger also appears to have assured the United States of alliance support for rejection of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's latest attempt to block the U.S. deployment, which is scheduled to begin late next year.

A week before the ministers met, Brezhnev announced a unilateral freeze on deployment of medium-range missiles in the western Soviet Union.

The senior U.S. official, briefing reporters under ground rules protecting his anonymity, said the NATO ministers feel Brezhnev "seeks to legitimize the current Soviet superiority" in such weapons, including 300 advanced triple-warhead SS-20 missiles. NATO has no similar weapons now.

At the same time, the NATO ministers will come away from this meeting with a U.S. commitment to move speedily toward opening negotiations with the Soviet Union on reducing strategic nuclear weapons, the long-range missiles and bombers that constitute the main nuclear punch of the superpowers.

The United States and the Soviet Union already have started talks in Geneva on how to reduce shorter-range nuclear missiles on both sides in Europe.

The senior U.S. official quoted Weinberger as telling his fellow defense chiefs that "we are in the final stages of preparing" possible proposals to be placed before Reagan and the National Security Council, a preliminary to opening strategic weapons negotiations with the Soviets.

Three indicted in gold jewelry heist

HOUSTON (AP) — An Air France employee and two other men have been indicted on charges accusing them of stealing more than $300,000 worth of gold jewelry from two Italian couriers at Houston Intercontinental Airport.

Gerald Thomas Vertucci, 43, of Houston; Victor A. Mendez, 32, of Deer Park, N.J.; and Anthony J. Romanello, 44, of Almont, N.Y., each were charged with four counts of theft in the Dec. 3 heist.

Borger wins again at Optimist Park

Borger has taken a liking to Optimist Park. After trouncing Dumas, 16-1, last Saturday to win the Pampa Invitational Tournament, the Bulldogs continued their run-scoring rampage Tuesday afternoon for a 22-2 win over Pampa.

Pampa was ahead 2-0 after one inning, but the lead was shortlived. Borger pulled within one in the second and then jumped on top, 5-2, after three innings.

Borger collected 13 runs on six hits in the fourth as the Bulldogs batted around twice.

Philip Bailey and Scott Hunt led Borger's 13-hit attack. Bailey had two base hits and knocked in a run while Hunt had three rbis on a single and triple and scored twice.

Brian Bowen and Brian Welborn had a hit and an rbi apiece for the Harvesters. Steve Flaherty and Danny Guerra had one hit apiece.

Brad Knutson, who went the first three innings on the mound for the Harvesters, was the losing pitcher.

Pampa hosts Lubbock Monterey in a Saturday doubleheader, starting at 1 p.m. at Optimist Park.

Mavs notch first victory over Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It might not be the biggest win of the year for us, but it was a good one."

Those were the sentiments of Dallas forward Mark Aguirre after his three-point goal in the final seconds of a 118-116 National Basketball Association victory Tuesday gave the Mavericks their first win ever against the Los Angeles Lakers. Aguirre sunk a 24-foot shot from the corner with seven seconds remaining.

"They came in and played a superb game. We did not lose, they beat us," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. He complained that the Lakers had to go out on the road with "Seattle breathing down our necks."

"I'm not pleased at all with the way we played," he said. Mavericks Coach Dick Motta said his team, a second-year franchise, had been waiting for an opening to use the play that won them the game.

"We have talked about that particular play, because it has the three point option, and I told Mark not to be afraid to take it," he said.

The victory ended a four-game losing streak for Dallas and a five-game winning streak for Los Angeles. It was their 10th meeting with Los Angeles.

Aguirre finished with 23 points, 13 of them in the third quarter, while rookie Rolando Blackman added 20.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar showed no ill effects from a hurt ankle he suffered Sunday night as he led all scorers with 32 points. However, the 7-foot-2 superstar missed five freethrows in the last five minutes of the game which was tied seven times in the final quarter.

Abdul-Jabbar scored 21 of his game-high total in the first half as the Lakers led by as many as 11 early in the second quarter.

The Mavericks narrowed the deficit to three at 62-59 by the half behind Aguirre and Jim Spanarkel, who scored six points apiece.

Many fans at Superdome will watch televised NCAA finals

By The Associated Press
The semifinals and finals of the NCAA Basketball Tournament may make a unique sort of history — a "pay TV" attraction at the actual site of the event.

More than 61,000 tickets have been sold to both Saturday's semifinals and Monday night's championship game. Just how many spectators will be able to see what they have paid for is another story.

"What it amounts to is they are paying $16 to sit in the Superdome and cheer for their team and watch the game on television," says Bill Curl, public relations director for the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans. The best view from those distant seats, says Curl, is afforded on the Superdome's six giant TV screens.

About a third of the seats are bad ones, so bad that the NCAA went to great pains to inform buyers that some of them were as far as 375 feet from the court. Tickets for the worst 3,000 seats are stamped "Distant Vision."

Those paying $16 for the three games will have to peer over a set of rolling bleachers. The basketball court is situated along one side of the football field and a bank of seats from the other side rumbles across on rails to provide the basketball configuration.

"NCAA officials have made the greatest effort to educate ticket buyers in the history of the industry, sports or otherwise," says Cliff Wallace, general manager of the Superdome.

In fact, adds Dave Cawood, the NCAA's director of public relations, "It almost came to the point where we were asking, 'Are you real sure you want to buy these tickets?'"

Those who can see the court will watch North Carolina and Houston in the first half of Saturday's doubleheader, followed by Georgetown and Louisville. The winners meet Monday night for college basketball's national championship.

Although Georgetown has a sharpshooting guard in Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, Coach John Thompson says "defense is the thing that carried us right from the start (of the season). There is no excuse for an off-day on defense."

Both Georgetown and Louisville like to use a full-court pressure defense most of the way.

"We've played with it and against it every day," says Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "Hopefully, we'll be able to handle it. I'm sure they feel the same way. It will create some problems for us and create some problems for them."

"Georgetown's overall talent and quickness is very similar to our own. It's a team very similar to our own, with the exception of the center spot, where they're a lot bigger (7-foot freshman Pat Ewing).

"They like to run and shoot the good shots off the transition. I think the game will be won by the team that plays the best defense. That's usually the way it works in tournament play."

Dodger hurler ends holdout

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela's first workout of spring training would officially end a bitter holdout by the 21-year-old left-hander and the Los Angeles Dodgers hope the rift is over for good.

"What's happened is in the past," said Dodgers vice president Al Campanis. "It's all over and now that's it's over, he's part of the family."

But Valenzuela did not appear to be in the best of moods when he checked in to the Dodgers camp Tuesday night. He refused to be picked up at the airport in West Palm Beach by Dodgers officials, preferring to drive to training camp with a bodyguard. The club asked him to hold a news conference, but he declined, saying he was too tired and wanted to get to bed.

At the airport, however, he told a sports writer for the Palm Beach Post, "I am very anxious to get back with the Dodgers."

"I have been working out in Los Angeles, working and throwing every day, and I think my condition is very good. I think I am ready to pitch."

"I really don't care how much money I play for," said Valenzuela. "I just want to get out there and play baseball."

He said his holdout was for the "principle of the thing."

Valenzuela said he decided to end his holdout because he felt a responsibility to his new wife, felt pressure from his friends and family and was anxious to get started at spring training.

"I watched on TV but I wished I could have been out there playing, too," he said. "I was willing to wait it out. I had principles to fight for and I waited patiently for it to be worked out."

Valenzuela was 22 days late after holding out for $850,000 — a half-million dollars more than the Dodgers were willing to pay the pitcher who won the National League Cy Young and Rookie of the Year Awards in 1981. Los Angeles renewed his contract under terms of the Basic Agreement and although Valenzuela finally agreed to report, he refused to formally sign the renewed contract.

That was a technicality according to Campanis. "By signing a 1981 contract, he agreed to sign a 1982 contract (because of the renewal clause)," Campanis said.

Houston's Williams may turn pro

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Rob Williams says the "odds are better" that he will skip his senior year in college and enter the National Basketball Association draft in May.

Williams, the No. 3 scorer in Houston history, led the Cougars into the Final Four, scoring 25 points in the 99-92 win over Boston College in the NCAA Midwest Regional championship.

The Cougars meet favored North Carolina in the NCAA semifinals Saturday in New Orleans.

Williams, a junior, said he believes his senior year would be anti-climactic after this season.

"I think it's automatic now the NBA would be interested in me," the 6-foot-2 guard says. "They know I helped my team get into the Final Four and have been playing pretty well down the stretch. People have a way of forgetting all the bad stuff when you play well in postseason."

The "bad stuff" included a preseason knee operation, a wrist injury and a slump in which he hit 13 of 50 shots in one th e-game span.

NIT finals may depend on Bradley defensive ace

NEW YORK (AP) — If there is a key matchup in tonight's National Invitation Tournament championship game, it could be how well Bradley's David Thirkill defends the Big Ten's leading scorer, Purdue guard Keith Edmonson.

Bradley Coach Dick Versace calls Thirkill "The Sheriff," and the senior guard certainly laid down the law Monday night, holding Oklahoma's David Little to eight points as the Braves rolled to an 84-68 semifinal victory.

Thirkill, says Versace, "is the consummate defensive player in America today. He has absolutely the finest technique of any basketball player at the college level that I've ever seen."

In Edmonson, who is averaging 26.4 points in the NIT, Thirkill should have his hands full when the title goes on the line at 8 p.m. EST in Madison Square Garden.

Edmonson and sophomore center Russell Cross, Purdue's one-two scoring combination, had 25 points apiece in a 61-60 semifinal victory over Georgia.

"If we can do a job on Cross and Edmonson, that would be a terrific defensive challenge," says Versace.

Both Cross and Edmonson are destined for the pros, says Versace, "and you never really stop pros. You just try to chop them down a bit."

Purdue Coach Gene Keady is puzzled about why Edmonson, a 6-foot-5 senior, hasn't received more national recognition.

"Maybe it's because our style of play is team-oriented and we don't stress the star system," he says. "He (Edmonson) can get the points if he needs to, but I'm not sure why he doesn't have more of a star status."

Both coaches say they'll stick with their basic styles of play that they displayed in the semis, when Purdue used discipline and careful shot selection while Bradley put on a 23-5 burst in the second half to break its game open.

Likening Bradley to Georgia, another fast-breaking team, Keady said, "I don't think you're going to stop them. I think you're going to have to control the tempo more than anything."

"We don't have a lot of quickness. We're just going to try to play our game," Keady said, adding that if the Boilermakers try to run with Bradley, "they'll blow us out."

"I think the main thing is for us to get our butts back on defense and try to stop all five of them," says Keady.

Braves pound Rangers

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Atlanta Braves erupted for 12 hits off Texas pitchers Doc Medich and Jon Matlack en route to a 7-4 victory over the Rangers Tuesday.

Catcher Bruce Benedict broke a 4-4 tie in the eighth with a single off Matlack that scored Chris Chambliss with the go-ahead run. The Braves added a couple of insurance runs in the ninth on Claudell Washington's RBI double and Dale Murphy's run-scoring single.

Donnie Moore, who worked the seventh and eighth innings for Atlanta and shut the Rangers down on one hit, picked up the win. Matlack was the loser.

Pampa tennis teams compete at Snyder

Kristie Haynes of Pampa finished in a three-way tie for first in the girls' division of the Snyder Tournament last weekend.

Miss Haynes, seeded No. 2 in girls' singles, defeated Terri Deaver, Snyder, 6-0, 6-0 and Drenda Kaider, Midland Lee, 6-4, 6-7 and 6-3. She won another match by default.

Miss Haynes fell to Ann Lawrence of Sweetwater, 6-3, 6-2.

In girls' doubles, Tricia Hawkins and Leslie Eddins finished second, losing to Pam Smith and Mindy Allredge, Snyder, 6-1, 7-6 in the finals. Enroute to the finals the Pampa pair defeated Mickey Johnson and Marie Dickson, Sweetwater, 6-4, 6-4; Tammy Martin and Janelle Stroble, Midland Lee, 6-3, 6-3 and Cindy Oates and Roja Gordon, 6-4, 6-3, San Angelo Lakeview.

In the boys' division, Mike Spence and Greg Trollingier of Pampa took fourth in doubles.

"They were in every match they played, but they just couldn't get the points when they needed them," Pampa coach Stacey Foster said.

Revolution changes Nicaraguan life

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A red-and-black flag, symbol of a guerrilla uprising, flutters over Sandino Airport, where Cuban and Soviet airliners sometimes park three abreast.

Young men in military fatigues scrutinize travel documents and question travelers. They wear pistols on their belts and call each other "comrade," roughly the equivalent of "brother."

In Managua and other Nicaraguan cities these days, pictures of Marx and Lenin adorn adobe walls, along with such slogans as, "Death to the bourgeoisie and the CIA."

Troops with automatic rifles still surround the "Bunker" that ousted President Anastasio Somoza used as his headquarters, but the guards now carry Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles instead of U.S. M-16s.

Mercedes-Benz automobiles and escort vehicles bristling with guns still shuttle officials from the same palatial residences to luxurious offices, but now they ferry former guerrilla fighters savoring the spoils taken from the previous regime.

At the Inter-Continental Hotel — where Somoza's friends and business cronies once held forth in the bar bemoaning the perils of communism — North Koreans and Libyans are among the guests.

Revolutionary change has come to Nicaragua — some claim for the worst, others for the better.

The Marxist, nine-member Sandinista Directorate has the country firmly in the grasp of its rapidly growing army, now 14,000 personnel, and its militia of 40,000 — in contrast to Somoza's 8,000-man National Guard and 4,000 reservists.

But the Sandinistas also claim to have made social gains. As one example of these, they point to a six-month literacy campaign in 1980 which, with the help of funds from the United States and other Western nations, they claim to have taught 500,000 of the nation's 1.2 million Somoza-period illiterates how to read. About 2,000 Cuban teachers were brought in for the campaign but were reported to have left when it ended.

The Sandinistas' political opponents and many ordinary Nicaraguans, however, contend the Sandinistas are organizing a Cuban-style dictatorship that is growing increasingly intolerant of dissent.

They claim the government is chipping away at personal liberties, censoring the press and squeezing businessmen who have stayed on. The Reagan administration claims the Sandinistas also are exporting their revolution, funneling arms from Cuba to the leftist guerrillas in nearby El Salvador who are fighting to bring down the U.S.-supported junta there.

Billy Graham will go to Moscow

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham announced Tuesday he has accepted an invitation to address a conference of religious leaders in Moscow and preach in a Soviet church.

Graham said he accepted because it presents an opportunity to witness for Christianity in a country where he has never done so before.

In a statement released by the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association here, the evangelist said he had been invited to attend a worship service May 9 at an Orthodox cathedral in Moscow and speak to the congregation during the morning liturgy.

That evening, Graham said, he will preach at the Moscow Baptist Church, which has 5,500 members.

On May 11, Graham is scheduled to address an international conference on nuclear war. The National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States also has said it will be represented at the conference, which opens May 10, according to the Soviet news agency Tass.

Dear Abby

It's easy to separate the men from the boys at the bedroom door

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 27, single, attractive and no prude. After a second or third date with a guy (whom I know only casually), he wants me to go back to his apartment, assuring me that his intentions are honorable, but my instincts tell me otherwise.

When I politely refuse, he gets mad, then grudgingly takes me home. I never hear from him again.

On those rare occasions when I do go back to his apartment, as soon as the front door is closed, he starts making physical advances. When I refuse them, he gets angry and then takes me home, and I never hear from him again, either.

Surely there must be a way to continue dating a guy without ending up in the bedroom before it is mutually agreeable. But how? Sign me...

NO WIN

DEAR NO: If a guy drops you because you won't go to bed with him, his message is clear — all he wants is a bed partner. You're better off without him. (That's how you separate the men from the boys.)

There are still some good men around who prefer a woman who won't go to bed with a guy she hardly knows. Hang in there!

DEAR ABBY: My 13-year-old grandson is a nice-looking, intelligent, quiet boy. He does very well in school but is not particularly athletic. Last year he began to have trouble with his peers, becoming the butt of their teasing. He has become withdrawn and a loner. His apparent unhappiness has become upsetting to his parents, although they try not to show it.

How should this problem be handled? Is there some literature on the subject that we can give him to read?

CONCERNED GRANNY

DEAR CONCERNED: Reading is not the answer. Although his parents may mean well by not showing their concern over their son's withdrawn behavior, they aren't helping him by ignoring it. The boy needs to verbalize his feelings, not hide them.

If he can't (or won't) talk to his parents, he should be counseled by an understanding professional who is not emotionally involved.

DEAR ABBY: I had a boyfriend who said he liked me, but I guess he liked another girl better because he broke a date with me to be with this other girl. Abby, I tried everything to get him back. I wore black satin jeans, makeup and high heels, but it didn't work. What should I do?

FIFTH-GRADE WORRIES

DEAR WORRIES: You're much too young to be "dating," but make a note of what didn't work to get a boy to like you. And thank your lucky stars for the valuable lesson you learned early in life.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of an exceptionally beautiful son. Believe me, this is not just another mother talking. My problem: Whenever I take this boy into a supermarket or walk him down the street, strangers stop and tell me how beautiful he is.

Of course, I'm proud and pleased, but almost everyone who sees him says, "He's much too beautiful to be a boy. He should have been a girl!"

Abby, although he's not yet 2, remarks like these are not healthy for a boy to hear.

Most people mean well, but they need to be reminded that repeated remarks can influence the development of a small child. If you agree, I hope you'll use this in your column.

NERVOUS IN NORTHRIDGE

DEAR NERVOUS: I do, and I shall.

Dr. Lamb

Coping with hot flashes

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have found that menopausal hot flashes are treated very casually. Many people consider this a laughable condition. Several years ago I had a mastectomy, radiation therapy and chemotherapy. The chemo stopped my menstrual periods. Because of breast cancer I was advised not to take estrogen. I tried Bellerigal, which didn't help.

I have severe and frequent flashes during the day and an awakened several times during the night. A restful night is a rarity. The embarrassment and discomfort of suddenly having a flushed face and perspiring body — making one's clothing seem to grow to the body plus giving one the feeling of being unclean — certainly are not amusing.

These hot flashes have contributed greatly to an unsatisfactory sex life and a deteriorating marriage. Do you find these complaints common from "change of life" women?

DEAR READER — They are certainly not rare. Some women sail through the menopause without problems, usually because they are producing enough estrogen from the adrenal gland to help prevent sudden changes in hormone levels.

You do have some other problems that may be contributing to your hot flashes. Night sweats and flashes do occur in other conditions besides the menopause.

You might talk to your doctor about trying some other newer methods to control hot flashes that would not pose the same risks success in some cases using progesterone, the other main hormone produced by the ovary. It is not related to cancer in any way. Others have had success with Inderal. It neutralizes the adrenaline effect that seems to be involved in causing hot flashes.

It is probably also a good idea to avoid coffee, tea and colas containing caffeine. Caffeine increases the adrenaline response.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, which may be helpful. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Your column on antacids raised a question in my mind. Can the blood in the overall system acquire acidity even though the stomach and the digestive tract seem to be entirely free of excessive acid? How about using ordinary baking soda in water? It seems to relieve the lassitude that occurs. I am 82 years old so time is of the essence.

DEAR READER — What happens inside your stomach and in the opening in the long digestive tube is quite different from what occurs inside the body enveloped by the skin and the lining of the digestive tract — your muscles, circulation and vital organs.

The acidity inside your body is kept very constant. We call it the pH of the body. There is a chemical buffer system in your body to keep it in extremely narrow limits. The main buffer is a balance between sodium bicarbonate and carbonic acid. If the acidity of the internal body is changed even a little, it can be fatal. A narrow level is maintained regardless of the acidity in your stomach.

Sodium bicarbonate is absorbed through the digestive tract and can affect the body's acidity. That is one reason it is not recommended for use as an antacid.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

Persons to whom you've been kind in the past have not forgotten your good deeds. Today you could be in for several surprises this coming year when they work out ways to repay you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) No matter how bad conditions are, it's futile to wallow in self-pity. The only way to transform things is to force yourself to make a positive change in direction. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're right to always be a kind and giving person, but not to the extent to where your generosity is abused. Don't be put upon by the greedy or lazy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have a tendency to go off in several directions at once. Today, unless you stick to one course of action, you might be a source of annoyance to your pals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Say what needs to be said today, not what sounds the smoothest. Remember at all times the old adage, "To thine own self be true."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be careful in romantic interludes today. You could lack your usual good sense and get caught up in a situation which would not be to your advantage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Anticipating negative results is your worse enemy today. This could cause you to be timid in situations where assertiveness is called for.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's fun to daydream about all kinds of wonderful things, but today your little flights of fancy could steer you down an impractical and unproductive path.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Some days all of us can leave our common sense at home when we go shopping. Unfortunately, this may be your nemesis today. Be practical and prudent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Normally you're frank and open and everyone knows where you stand, but today you may pretend to be something you're not. The one you kid could be yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The time to be upset about something is after it has happened, not before it occurs. Don't spoil what could be a pleasant day with apprehensive thoughts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Before opening your heart and your purse today, make certain the person telling you his sad tale is not merely using a clever sales ploy. Don't be taken in.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Success may be denied you today through no one's fault but your own. If you're not willing to help yourself, don't expect others to do so.

Business crusade underway for American Cancer Society

Kerrick Horton and Sybil Qualls have been named co-chairman of the American Cancer Society's 1982 educational and fund raising Cancer Crusade which is already underway. The appointments were announced by Mike Keagy, president of the Gray - Roberts Unit, who said, "These women accepted this responsibility because they want everyone to know that "Cancer Can Be Beaten", the theme of this year's Crusade.

The national 1982 Cancer Crusade chairman is Kirk Douglas, noted film star, television actor and producer.

The business crusade is slated for March 26 through April 2. According to Ms. Qualls, "The Kiwanis Clubs are taking the lead in this phase of the crusade. Letters are being mailed to all larger businesses with the request that gifts be mailed in the return envelope."

Smaller businesses will be contacted in person by local volunteers. All area businesses are urged to support this effort. Ms. Qualls said, "We hope that gifts from the business community will exceed $5,000."

The special gifts drive, headed by Bob Phillips began on March 2. Phillips stressed the fact that "Although the special gifts drive was to have ended on March 15, we will appreciate any additional contributions through April 6."

Ms. Horton emphasized the fact that sixty percent of all funds raised by the society remain in Texas for use in local programs. For example, "This past year alone more than $2,000 was spent by the local unit in patient services. These included hospital equipment, transportation to and from treatment, gift items and rehabilitation visits."

The public education program of the local unit last year reached an audience of more than 6,000 individuals of all ages in the Pampa area.

Ms. Qualls highlighted the importance of each individual contribution when she said, "The cure for cancer may well be in your pocket and your generous contributions to our efforts."

The residential phase of the crusade will be held on Sunday, April 4. Regarding this drive, Ms. Horton said, "More than 400 volunteers will call on each residence in Pampa distributing educational literature as well as seeking monetary gifts. Details will appear in The Pampa Daily News on that day."

Mayor H.R. Thompson, Jr., right, has proclaimed April as Cancer Control month in Pampa. The Gray - Roberts County Unit of the American Cancer Society has already begun its annual educational and fund - raising campaign. The special gifts drive headed by Bob Phillips started on March 2. The business crusade under the direction of the local Kiwanis Clubs is scheduled for March 26 through April 2. On Sunday April 4 more than 400 volunteers recruited and organized by crusade co-chairman Kerrick Horton, right, and Sybil Qualls will visit each residence in Pampa distributing educational literature and seeking donations. A similar house - to-house canvass will be conducted in all area towns. "The 1982 goal which has been set for our unit is 18,000. However, we hope to exceed this amount," said Mike Keagy, president of the local unit.

Erma Bombeck's At Wit's End

This column could be the most important document you've read since the small print of your credit union loan.

Listen to this. Scientists at Yale University have just concluded some people, especially those who are overweight, can gain weight just by looking at fattening foods. It's true. They discovered that when people carrying extra pounds looked at food, smelled it, or even listened to it sizzle, their bodies released increased levels of insulin which accelerated their conversion of sugar into fat.

And all these years, I believed my cadaver friends who waved a piece of cake under my nose and coaxed, "It won't hurt you just to smell it!"

Have you any idea how many times I've listened to cereal snap, crackle and pop and thought it was just another waltz? Or the TV commercials I've watched in ignorance while I outgrew my chair?

And when I think of the times I've sat in a theatre next to three boxes of buttered popcorn, I could kill them for costing me two beauty queen titles.

But the most revealing thing about this survey is that we don't have to inhale food to suffer its consequences, and where have we heard that before?

I'm taking my anti-eating crusade to the airlines. Why should I have to sit next to a person who stuffs calories into every opening in his face and gain weight for what he eats?

I don't want to stand in a crowded elevator any more next to a man with a banana breath or wait in a doctor's office with a woman pigging out on candy bars.

I'm going to put a sign on the office doughnut pusher's desk saying, "Thank you for not eating." And then I'll target restaurants and convince them they should have two eating sections: the serious side where they cook at your table and wheel a dessert cart around for you to see, and a godforsaken place where diners may pick at their lettuce alone.

As for grocery shopping, it's what I've suspected for years. They should have a sign over the door that reads, "CAUTION: This store causes fatness. Shop at your own risk."

Just writing this column has probably put a pound or two on me, but it's not the first time I've had to eat my own words.

EUBIE BLAKE

TOM T. HALL

Names in the news

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer and songwriter Tom T. Hall is entertaining thoughts of making his voice heard as a candidate for governor of Tennessee this year, the state Democratic Party chairman says.

The man who wrote Jeannie C. Riley's million-selling 1968 hit "Harper Valley P.T.A." and had hits of his own with "Old Dogs, Children and Watermelon Wine" and "I Love" has been encouraged to seek the Democratic nomination for governor, Chairman Bart Gordon said Tuesday.

Hall is considering running in the August primary and "he'd be a good candidate," Gordon said.

Hall, 45, long a supporter of former President Jimmy Carter, was unavailable for comment. Judy Marshall, the general operations manager for Hall's recording studio and song publishing interests, said he was relaxing in his cabin on Center Hill Lake.

NEW YORK (AP) — Eubie Blake, the 99-year-old songwriter and piano player, was given the first video disc of the Broadway musical "Eubie!" by RCA Chairman Thornton F. Bradshaw, who said it was "the first stereo produced in the video disc process."

"We want your music to reach both ears."

Bradshaw told Blake at a ceremony Tuesday at the RCA Building. The musical is made up of songs Blake wrote, in many cases for Broadway musicals of the 1920s.

Bradshaw also gave Blake and his wife, Marian, a machine for playing the disc, saying, "This is the greatest invention since the piano."

There also was a piano in the room and Blake, who has been familiar with that invention since the 1890s, played his own "I'm Just Wild about Harry" and "Memories of You" to the delight of assembled journalists and friends, using alternately ballad, rag and semi-classical styles.

MARRAKECH, Morocco (AP) — Even in Morocco, former President Richard Nixon's face stands out in a crowd.

CURTIS P - 40 WARHAWK of the "Flying Tigers" of China flying with the Grumman Wildcat of VF - 41 "Red Rippers" Squadron, USS Ranger, 1940.

The Confederate Air Force flies with vintage aircraft, soaring spirit

HARLINGEN, TX — The sounds of World War II are silent. The wartime factories, air bases and army posts are long closed; and, for many, the memory of war has faded into occasional ceremonial remembrances.

But at Harlingen's Valley International Airport deep in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas, rare piston-engine airplanes roar and patriotism indicative of the War flourishes. The airport is the home of the GHOST SQUADRON of the Confederate Air Force.

Organized in the late 1950s when WWII aircraft were being systematically destroyed, the CAF is a non-profit, educational organization dedicated to the preservation of the great combat aircraft. It now has approximately 7,000 members who accept the responsibility of locating, restoring and maintaining the vintage airplanes.

Each member holds the rank of "colonel," as each member is considered equal under the command of Col. Jethro E. Culpeper, who is perpetually in Washington, D.C., promoting the CAF. The colonels provide the knowledge of the aging aircraft, financial backing and endless hours of labor required by the unrelenting task of maintaining the aircraft in flying condition.

The GHOST SQUADRON attracts attention from all corners of the earth. It has been featured in several U.S. and foreign magazines and in newspapers nationwide. NBC has highlighted the CAF on "Real People"; CBS has reported on the annual AIRSHO, and the British Broadcasting Corp. featured the Flying Museum on an hour-long special.

But regardless of the attention rendered them, the members of the CAF emphasize the aircraft, the valiant ships which have such valuable lessons to teach.

The German planes — Messerschmitt ME - 109 fighter, the JU - 52 transport, the Heinkel HE - 111 bomber — that tell young and old of the German military build-up while the rest of the world was sleeping.

The "Tora, Tora" group of Japanese replica Zeros, Kates and Vals that illustrate the preparations on the other side of the world that again caught great nations unaware.

The fighters — like the P - 40 "Warhawk" and P - 38 "Lightning"; the P - 51 "Mustang" that many believe is the best aircraft ever designed; the Corsairs, Helldivers, Hellcats, Wildcats and SBDs that comprised the U.S. Navy.

The bombers — like the B - 29 "Superfortress," B - 17 "Flying Fortress," the B - 24 "Liberator" — all monumental ships that were the fortresses of the American flying forces during World War II.

The CAF maintains the "Flying Museum" in Harlingen, the International Headquarters and center of all CAF activity. But much of the activity that keeps the planes flying and the spirit alive goes on in sites outside Harlingen. The CAF has over 50 wings and squadrons throughout the United States and in Australia, New Zealand, England, France and Guam.

The highlight of each year at the Confederate Air Force Headquarters is the annual AIRSHO. The CAF has scheduled AIRSHO 82 for 7 - 10 October in Harlingen. The four days of tribute to the airpower heritage of the United States and other countries will be particularly significant this year because the CAF will be commemorating its "Silver Jubilee." Plans are being formulated now to honor the history of the CAF itself in conjunction with the dramatic re-creations of major World War II air battles that make up the CAF AIRPOWER HERITAGE DEMONSTRATION. Expert says breeder may replace current reactors

NEW YORK (AP) — A rapid buildup of fast breeder reactors in the remaining years of this century "would remove forever" the problem of dwindling supplies of fuel for conventional reactors, an expert says.

Unless the nation switches to breeder or another alternative to uranium-fueled systems, nuclear power will be extinct in the United States by about 2025, William H. Hannum told the Atomic Industrial Forum's annual fuel cycle conference here Monday.

Breeders are fueled by plutonium and have the potential to generate more nuclear fuel than they consume. Critics, however, claim the plutonium the reactors produce can be diverted for nuclear weapons by emerging nations or terrorists.

Cumulative production of uranium from "currently identified sources is unlikely to be sufficient to satisfy the needs of a light water reactor strategy to 2025, let alone for the lifetime of the reactors that may be commissioned by that time," said Hannum, deputy director general of the Nuclear Energy Agency of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris.

Hannum's presentation was based on a lengthy analysis he conducted with a group of international experts on the long-term outlook for uranium and fuel cycle services such as enrichment and reprocessing. Hannum said the full research paper would be released next month.

He maintained that nuclear power will be cheaper and safer to produce than coal- and oil-fired units.

The report suggested large-scale introduction of breeders worldwide is a question that is "only one of timing" based on need. Hannum noted countries dependent on outside sources for uranium — such as West Germany, France and Japan — lead the way in breeder interest.

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission earlier this month rejected a Reagan administration request to speed up the licensing process to permit construction on the $3.3 billion Clinch River breeder reactor at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

from across the United States and the world travel to Harlingen to participate in and to witness the flying demonstrations of the aircraft of the GHOST SQUADRON.

$2 billion deal for pro football

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The big guys are on the field, but it's the little guys in their easy chairs sipping beer on Sunday afternoons who made the National Football League's $2 billion television contract possible.

Big guys get the glory. Little guys buy cars, tires and transmissions. Big guys get bruises. Little guys buy beer.

But what makes the little guys stand tall in the eyes of the networks and their advertisers is that on football Sundays they're sitting in front of the TV — by the millions.

NFL football is the great American stag party. In homes with televisions, about 45 percent of adult U.S. males between 18 and 49 watch pro football.

That's about 20 million men. And there's no other time when so many are watching TV. Day-time TV is primarily for women, and men don't watch as much as women at night.

"The demographics for football are special because men are so hard to reach," said Dave Martin, director of broadcast media for the Campbell-Ewald advertising agency in Detroit. "Cable grew because men were watching movies and sports. Men are selective TV watchers."

Jerry Solomon of D'Arcy-McManus ad agency says: "Football is a sport that beer companies and automakers want."

It's a sport the networks need. Pro football is a cornerstone of their profits — and it will cost them $2 billion over the next five seasons to keep it.

The deal, announced Monday in Phoenix by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, is the most expensive TV contract in history, dwarfing the $646 million the networks paid for pro football for the past four seasons.

By comparison, the agreement baseball negotiated with NBC and ABC in 1979 pays major league clubs $200 million over four years.

The new agreement calls for ABC to continue broadcasting prime-time football while gaining its first Super Bowl in 1985. CBS will continue to cover the National Football Conference and have Super Bowls in 1984 and 1987. NBC will again be the network of the American Football Conference, with rights to the 1983 and 1986 Super Bowls.

An industry source said that CBS would pay $700 million to $750 million, ABC $650 million to $700 million and NBC $600 million to $650 million.

Why would they pay such sums?

In 1981, the CBS Broadcast Group, which includes the CBS television and radio networks and the group's news, sports and entertainment divisions, made a $300 million profit. The network televised about 4,500 hours of programming during the year, including about 100 hours of football.

An industry source estimates the network earned over $25 million for its 31 NFL broadcasts in the 1981-82 regular season and playoffs.

In addition, CBS televised Super Bowl XVI last January. It paid $6 million for broadcast rights and spent about $1.5 million on production. But with commercials costing $690,000 a minute, CBS made about $12 million.

Super Bowl sponsors reached more than 110 million viewers, making San Francisco's victory over Cincinnati the most-watched program ever.

There are 23.5 million men in America between the ages of 18 and 34. Over 45 percent, 10.6 million, watched pro football in 1980, according to the Simmons Market Research Bureau.

By comparison, 8.1 percent of men 18-34 watched the top-rated, prime-time

"Dallas." Even other sports don't measure up with male audiences: 16.1 percent for baseball, 24.4 percent for college football, 7 percent for golf.

"There's absolutely nothing that competes with the NFL franchise in terms of sustained interest and building an audience," said James Rosenfield, executive vice-president of the CBS Broadcast Group.

Last year, ratings for ABC's Monday night games and CBS' Sunday football broadcasts were the highest ever. That put the NFL in a strong position for the recently concluded negotiations. The money increase was important to the clubs' profit concerns but also for the upcoming negotiations with the players who are asking for 55 percent of pro football's gross revenues.

Besides the popularity of football, it's value for advertisers is enhanced because it is played in fall and winter, when Americans are more housebound, retail sales are strongest and Christmas is on the way.

Even during a recession, advertisers have paid the price. In the last quarter of 1981, advertising sales for sporting events were up 20 percent from the previous year.

"Marketing money is the last thing we can afford to cut back on," said Lee Miskowski, Ford Motor Co.'s general manager of marketing. "It's our connection to the consumer."

So the networks will do OK. They've gained an extra minute of commercial time, which could be worth over $150 million for the five years, and an extra pre-season game, worth another $30 million to $45 million.

Last year, ABC charged about $240,000 a minute for "Monday Night Football." Martin says the increase this year, will be "no more in percentage than years."
