Germany Claims Rostov Fallen As U. S. Built Planes Enter Battle

PRESIDENT'S PERSONAL CHIEF-OF-STAFF—In his office at the state department is shown Admiral William D. Leahy who has been appointed by President Roosevelt as his personal chief-of-staff. Thus, the well-known naval officer and more recently America's ambassador to France, becomes more prominent.

Olsen Gives Insight Into Air Program

The men and women who are supervising construction of the huge air force installation east of Pampa last night when 325 residents of Pampa and guests attended a buffet dinner and dance at the new high school. They were told that they were considered Pampanos already and that they were to "make themselves at home." The address of welcome was made by Frank Culbertson with the response by Col. Norman B. Olsen, project engineer.

Reds Admit Nazis At Gates Of City

By CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH
Associated Press War Editor
Germany proclaimed today that Rostov had been stormed and captured, although not yet mopped up, and Moscow reported that unprecedented numbers of United States-built planes—especially Douglas Boston bombers—had taken to the Caucasus skies to bolster Russia's fight for life.

The Hitler command announced today capture of Rostov, capital of the northern Caucasus, on the main railway and pipeline which tap the oil and mineral wealth of the deep Caucasus, and the Russians, while not acknowledging the claim, said the battle had reached the city gates.

Pampa News To Put Election Returns On Air

Democrats of Gray county and the rest of the State of Texas will go to the polls tomorrow to take part in the first 1942 political battle—the first Democratic primary.

Assistant Secretary Of Agriculture In Pampa This Morning

Grover Hill, assistant secretary of agriculture, came to Pampa Friday, "seeking information" on agriculture and livestock conditions which he will take back to Washington to be used in the department's war program.

First Dirt For Cofferdam On Red River Turned

DENISON, July 24 (AP)—First dirt for a coffer dam on Red river at the site of the $50,000,000 Denison dam was dropped in the stream today, the initial step in nudging the river into the Texas bank and through the outlet works of the dam.

Leo Voted With Nye, Wheeler, Crowd Told

(By The Associated Press)
Texas reached the penultimate stage today in a bitterly fought U. S. senatorial race which has held chief attention in an otherwise comparatively quiet political campaign.

The three senatorial candidates took to the hustings for the last time before the Democratic primary election tomorrow, which it was estimated may bring out as many as 700,000 votes or more.

SNAKE BITES FLIER
3,000 Feet In Air
MELBOURNE, Australia, July 24 (AP)—Snake-bitten 3,000 feet in the air, U. S. Army Lieut. Robert Vaught, 24, of Johnson City, Tenn., gave this report on a perilous adventure recently.

While flying 75 miles from his base, Vaught noticed a peculiarly marked snake near his left foot. He put the plane into a slip to try to slide the snake into a corner, but when he touched the rudder bar the snake struck him twice. Vaught then seized the snake and threw it out.

I HEARD
That City Recorder C. E. McGrew decided to wash off the driveway in front of the police station today. He borrowed Ed Anderson's garden hose and went to work. Chief Ray Dudley soon appeared on the scene and whenever someone would stop to razz the judge, the chief would order them to move on and not bother the prisoner while he was working out his fine. The judge finished his job.

Col. Thompson Confident Of Big Majority

Col. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Texas Railroad commission visited with friends and supporters in Pampa Friday, in a swing through the Panhandle in the interest of his candidacy for reelection to his second full elective term.

Thompson expressed confidence of a big majority, then turned to a discussion of the war and the relation of Texas oil to the conflict.

"Oil will win this war," the fiery red-haired veteran of the first World War declared. "More than 30 percent of all the oil left to the United Nations is in Texas. We are ready to meet the defense needs of our country with the production from more than 100,000 wells in the state."

GERMAN SUB CREW BURIED
IN U. S.—A U. S. Army guard acts as pallbearers for 29 Nazi submarine crew members who died when their craft was lost in a running battle with U. S. destroyers. The bodies were brought to the naval base at Norfolk, Va., and were interred at the national cemetery at Hampton, Va., with full military honors by the army and navy. This is an official U. S. error's race? There are nine in the race. There are five in the race for state treasurer, two in the race for commissioner of the general land office, two in the race for superintendent of public instruction, four running for commissioner of agriculture, 14 for the two railroad commissioner offices.

Phillips said that many conflicting statements had been made concerning the amount of new metal required to build the Berger plant. He said the latest estimate was 13,465 tons.

He defended the manufacture of synthetic rubber from petroleum, asserting that his company had been making butadiene for two years and had long since passed the experimental stage. He added that its process patents are "100 per cent American."

Six months' work has already been done on the Berger plant, he said, and it is scheduled for completion next April first, simultaneously with the completion of a styrene plant and synthetic rubber plant at the same location, comprising a complete synthetic rubber production unit.

Phillips Says Rubber Plant Not Canceled

WASHINGTON, July 24 (AP)—Frank Phillips, head of the Phillips Petroleum Co., denied yesterday reports that a contract with the company for construction and operation of a butadiene plant at Berger had been canceled by the government.

Phillips declared that highest preference ratings for the plant are still in effect but further purchases have been temporarily withheld at the request of the defense plant corporation.

Victory Bond Campaign Still Short Of Quota

A final effort will be made in the next seven days by 18 retail clerks of Pampa to make a success of the Retailers for Victory movement to the extent of reaching Gray county's goal for July of $144,300 in the sale of Victory bonds.

A check-up is being made today by the chamber of commerce office to see the standing of the various clerks in the contest which closes next Friday night, July 31.

Headlines in the news of the war situation should be sales talk enough to put this bond selling campaign over, the retail clerks declare. See any of the following retail clerks to purchase a bond:

Glamour Jumper

Some jumpers are made for practicality, others are made just to be pretty. Today's is the latter kind. The wide belt which buttons in front, the full skirt, the soft blouse all combine to make this one of the most appealing, colorful, prettily-fitting frocks you've worn in a long time. Try it with a white, sheer blouse and a cherry red skirt—for instance!

Pattern No. 8225 is in sizes 11 to 19. Size 13 suspender-top skirt requires 2 1/2 yards 35- or 39-inch material; long-sleeve blouse, 2 yards.

For this attractive pattern, send 15c in coin, your name, address, pattern number, and size to The Pampa News, Today's Pattern Service, 211 W. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill.

Clothing Material Lecture Heard By Hopkins HD Club

A lecture on clothing materials was given by Mrs. Julia E. Kelley, Gray county home demonstration agent, at the meeting of the Hopkins Home Demonstration club, in the home of Mrs. Herbert Cisco.

"Examine a garment carefully before you buy. See if it has adequate seams for the kind of material it is. Be sure a garment is fade-proof and sanforized. Be sure there is a guarantee against fading."

"We have to be very careful in selecting our materials during wartime to get the best possible buy," said Mrs. Kelley.

Baptist Boys Organization Names Officers

Officers of the Royal Ambassadors of First Baptist church were elected to a meeting held Wednesday morning at the church.

Regular meetings of the organization are held weekly at 10:30 a. m. each Wednesday at the church. Boys between the ages of 9 and 12 are invited to attend.

Mrs. Gladys K. Davis is counselor and Mrs. Bo Barrett, co-counselor, of the Ambassadors. Other officers are: G. D. Holmes, ambassador-in-chief; Keith Lane, first assistant ambassador; James Gallimore, second assistant ambassador; Garnet Reeves, Jr., chapter recorder; Bob Thomas, chapter scribe; Richard Crossman, chapter steward; Emmett Riggs, chapter herald; Jimmy Dale Martin, chapter custodian.

Mind Your Manners

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

- 1. Should civilians go out of their way to be helpful and courteous to men in uniform?
2. Should women in uniform wear heavy makeup?
3. Should a civilian tell a service man what is wrong with the way the war is being fought—by way of making conversation?
4. Should friends of a woman, whose husband is away serving in one of the armed forces, invite her as often or often to their homes as they did when her husband was with her?
5. Should the wife of a service man cut out all entertaining because her husband is away and she is living alone?
What would you do if—
(a) An acquaintance of yours who means nothing to your grown son or daughter is to visit in the city where your son or daughter lives?
(b) Don't let your child in for being obliged to entertain someone who means nothing to him?

Answers
1. Yes. 2. No. 3. No. 4. Yes. 5. Not if she wants to keep up her friendships and a certain amount of social life.

Better "What Would You Do" solution: (b)—unless there is some good reason for wanting the two to know each other.

THE REV. T. M. GILLHAM, above, pastor of Friendship Baptist church near Post, will occupy the pulpit of Central Baptist church here Sunday.

Regular meetings of the organization are held weekly at 10:30 a. m. each Wednesday at the church. Boys between the ages of 9 and 12 are invited to attend.

"Truth" To Be Topic Of Lesson-Sermon

"Truth" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 26.

The golden text is: "The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Hebrews 4:12).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day" (Psalms 25:5).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit, life, truth, love, combine as one—and are the scriptural names for God. . . . No wisdom is wise but His wisdom; no truth is true, no love is lovely, no life is life but the divine; no good is, but the good God bestows" (page 275).

BIBLE PROCLAIMS ECONOMY OF PLENTY, PROSPERITY FOR MANY ENRICHMENT. BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance.

Ever since 1918 the story of Noah after the flood has been associated in my mind with a great sermon preached by the late Dr. Charles E. Jefferson. It was during the meeting of the National Congressional council at Grand Rapids, Mich., and the sermon was at a noon-day service in a local theater. Already, under a fiercer armistice, there was evidence of the extent to which the nations that had won the first World War were in many respects lacking the peace. The high ideals of democracy and justice were being betrayed by selfish interests, and statesmen were being dominated by motives of revenge and of power politics.

Dr. Jefferson likened the post-war world, with its opportunity of rebuilding, to the situation of Noah after the flood. With the brilliant word imagery of which he was a master, he pictured this world with all the old debts and barriers washed away, every stone favorable for a new beginning in a clean world. But in that day of opportunity Noah got drunk!

How tragically that story has been repeated in human history! Over men like Noah, with elements of good character and with the favor of the Almighty, have failed in the day of opportunity, setting back again and again the cause of human progress.

Yet, this dark picture is not the outstanding thing in the story of Noah. In the midst of much that reflects ancient ideas, our lesson brings strongly before us the supreme fact of human opportunity and the supreme hope of the modern world. It is this fact of human opportunity and the supreme hope of the modern world. It is this fact of human opportunity and the supreme hope of the modern world.

It is a covenant for man's welfare and enrichment. The Bible in almost all of its pages, as in our modern world, so often speaks of the day of opportunity, setting back again and again the cause of human progress.

What is this day of opportunity? It is the day of opportunity, setting back again and again the cause of human progress. It is the day of opportunity, setting back again and again the cause of human progress.

Allred Given Great Ovation At Houston

FORT WORTH, July 24—James V. Allred, given a resounding ovation last night at a home-town rally in Houston, brought his U. S. senatorial candidacy here today for the wheels, the Nyes—and those who are in the first place in the race for the nomination.

In Houston, his residence during the three years he served as federal district judge, Allred continued to emphasize the issues of winning the war and writing a real peace treaty, and deplored W. Lee O'Daniel's "hysterical attacks" Allred said were brought on by the junior senator's knowledge that "Jimmy Allred is sweeping this race like a prairie fire."

Allred addresses a Tarrant county election-eve rally tonight.

In Houston, Allred hammered home the platform upon which he is seeking election. "The nation's first objective, he said, should be to win the war. The second, he added, should be to win the peace. Third, proper provision should be made for the welfare of the men in the service both now and after their return to peacetime pursuits; and, fourth, machinery looking to rehabilitation should be set up at once. He denounced racketeering and strikes and called for an all-out support of the nation's command-in-chief in whose hands, he said, rests the destiny of the world.

Allred coupled his plea for election of a "fighting war senator" with a summation of isolationism in this country and warned that the peace, after it is won on the battlefields, cannot be entrusted to the wheelers, the Nyes—and those who voted with them.

"We are facing realities now," he continued. "We refuse to be lulled to complacency by men who told us before the war there was no danger who tell us now the war is no issue. That kind of leadership caused the president's pre-emption program to lag. It can make this war last longer now."

Allred paid tribute to the Texas state, declaring "The newspapers have rendered a splendid service in re-creating the record of isolationism of a present senator. That record had been glossed by the senator himself and the people weren't informed. Now they pretty well have a real record, and a rising trend sweeping Texas to replace the senator with a more efficient and less-minded servant."

Allred invited the white light of publicity on his own record, and said that after examination of that record he had "no fears as to the election the people will make at a ballot boxes Saturday."

Around Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, July 24—The movies long have been raged against and ribbed for the things they have done to history and good fiction, but if John Steinbeck's fans are uneasy about what's going to happen to "The Moon Is Down" I can offer assurance that it's in good hands. In fact, I am willing to eat a copy of the script if the movie doesn't turn out to be twice as good as the book and 10 times better than the play.

This offer is not based wholly on the well-proven adaptive skill of Nunnally Johnson, who's writing the script, but also on the camera's advantages as a medium. Johnson doesn't see how the picture could miss, since it will be able to show so much that otherwise could only be talked about in the tale of a small Norwegian town occupied by a few German soldiers.

DRAMATIZES CONFLICT

Johnson has a lot of respect for this work by Steinbeck, and he believes that the author's viewpoint was unfairly interpreted and criticized as a somewhat absurd preaching of the inevitable triumph of gentle goodness over evil. However, there's going to be some righteous and violent anger in the movie.

"The main reason the play was disappointing," Johnson suggested, "was because it failed to show the actual conflict between natives and invaders."

"The play seemed to imply that if you frown at a German soldier he becomes neurotic and discouraged, but that was about all the play could do. On the screen we can show 1500 people watching these guys unfold and they feel haunted. We can study the feeling of a German who has ordered a glass of beer and is conscious of all the hating, watchful stares, and who begins to wonder whether the stuff may be poisoned.

PACKS A PUNCH

"We can show, too, the killing of the soldier, and the business of the railroad siding being blown up five times, and the arrival of the dynamite. The camera can put in most of the guts that the drama lacked."

Johnson doesn't believe that patient resentment is going to squeeze the enemy out of Norway or of Steinbeck. He does believe, as Steinbeck did, that it's a good idea to represent the Germans as human beings who can develop jitters and limags.

Market Briefs

NEW YORK, July 24 (AP)—Light bidding for selected rails and industrials helped cushion general declining tendencies in today's stock market.

Dealings were slack throughout and the failure of any real selling pressure to appear was the most encouraging feature of the session. Transfers were around 250,000 shares.

Stocks in the resistant area included Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Montgomery Ward, J. C. Penney, Pepsi-Cola, American Smelting, Western Union, and Consolidated Edison.

On the other side of the day were American Can, Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse, Sears Roebuck, Chrysler, American Telephone, Texas Co., Anacosta, Glenn Martin, and U. S. Gypsum.

Bonds were mixed and major commodities lower.

FDR Signs Pipeline Bill

WASHINGTON, July 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt today signed legislation authorizing the construction of a pipeline and a navigable barge channel across Florida. The measure is designed to help relieve the shortage of transportation or moving oil and gasoline to the eastern seaboard.

The bill also provides for deepening and enlarging the intra-coastal waterway from its terminus to the Mexican border.

Military Hospital in Australia Organized

MELBOURNE, July 24 (AP)—A staff of American surgeons and physicians, members of a Harvard unit, is organizing a huge military hospital in a small Australian town for treatment of American fighting men.

This will be one of the largest hospitals, civil or military, in the southern hemisphere and will be under Major A. Thorndyke, Jr. Each doctor is an expert in his field.

Special ambulance planes will bring the soldiers to the hospital from field stations.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, July 24 (AP)—With interest in the market at a low ebb, grain futures declined slightly today. Traders said they had seldom seen such small dealings in all pits.

Hedge selling and mill buying were both light. Many traders remained on the sidelines because they believed congress would be informed Monday whether the new anti-inflation program would require additional legislation.

Wheat led the downturn and was weakest at the finish. Closing prices were 1/2-cent lower. September 1.18 1/2, December 1.22 1/2, 1.21 1/2; corn was 1/4-cent down, September 90-89 1/2, December 93. Rye lost 1/4-cent, soybeans 2 1/2 cents, and clover going against the trend, closing 1/4-cent higher.

 W. T. Bentley of the El Paso Times, wondered about use of the word "mentor" to mean "coach." So he took a drastic step. He went to the dictionary. "Mentor," he discovered, means (1) friend to whom Odysseus, when setting out for Troy, instructed the care of his house and education of Telemachus, (2) hence a wise and faithful counselor or monitor. "Mentor," he said, "is a word that should be used by a teacher or instructor. Bentley says he does not go for that loose teaching in instructing kind of business, and therefore he is going to continue calling a coach a coach.

ATTACK! ATTACK! ATTACK!

America's attacking on both the fighting front and the home front today!
 We're giving the Axis a "bitter taste of what's to come."
 We're fighting the inflationary dash column that blows prices sky high here at home, too.
 And every one of us who saves at least 10% of his pay in War Bonds is an important soldier in the attack!
 Join the attack yourself!

For an August campaign in the 11-man race for the unexpired railroad commission term, and in the nine-man contest for lieutenant governor.
Five men were seeking the position of state treasurer and four were in the race for state commissioner of agriculture.
Coke Stevenson planned to wind up his quiet campaign for governor with a radio speech tonight, and Hal Collins continued his stump and radio tour with the O'Daniel party. Withdrawal of Chalmers L. Somerville from the race left Stevenson, Collins, Hope Wheeler, Gene Porter, and Alex M. Ferguson as the contenders.
Twelve of Texas' 21 representatives in congress are unopposed in the primary.

tragedy would probably visit Pampa in the form of a crash but that Pampans should realize that tragedy cannot be averted in such a program. He then turned to the brighter side of the picture and gave several humorous experiences while he was stationed at Randolph field.
In closing, Col. Olsen said, "our object is the same as yours, to win the war."
Crawford Atkinson, president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, presided at the dinner. Members of the reception committee and the visitors and newcomers were introduced by Garnet Reeves, chamber of commerce manager.
Mrs. H. M. Gone led the crowd in the singing of "God Bless America" after which the "Three Little Sisters"—Lois Castka, Mary Ella McClear and Vontell Alexander, with Norma Dea Hall, accompanist—sang several numbers.

Washington, July 24 (AP)—The trial for their lives of eight alleged Nazi saboteurs entered its fourteenth day today amid an air of expectancy as one prominent participant in the case who declined to be quoted by name suggested that "something big" might happen soon.
Members of the prosecution staff were in conference in Attorney General Biddle's office beyond the scheduled 9:30 a. m. meeting time of the military commission of seven generals.
Biddle hurried into the heavily guarded trial area about 15 minutes late, while some of his aides in the proceeding continued in conference.

Hull Speech Hit By Jap Author

TOKYO (from Japanese broadcasts), July 24 (AP)—The impression created among the people of Japan by U. S. Secretary of State Hull's speech last night is that it contains "hardly an iota of improvement upon what the United States has proposed before, including Woodrow Wilson's league and Frank Kellogg's peace machinery," the Domei agency declared today.

Ford Presents Tire Replacement Plan

DETROIT, July 24 (AP)—The Ford Motor company announced today it has presented for government approval a "tire replacement plan" which contemplates the use of the rubber substitute thiolol to keep the automobiles of war workers on the road.

The plan, said Charles E. Sorenson, Ford vice-president and general manager, is designed to solve the problem of essential transportation for Ford workers and will be offered to the entire United States war industry if approved.

Farmers Who Burn Wheat Stubble May Lose AAA Payments

Gray county farmers and other farmers over the state who burn wheat stubble may lose AAA payments, Charlie L. Thomas of Pampa, member of the state AAA committee, cautioned today.

Reports have reached the committee that stubble burning is being practiced extensively in some areas. AAA regulations provide that if a farmer permits his land to become a serious wind or water erosion hazard, the county AAA committee may withhold payments on the farm, Thomas explained. Burning wheat stubble lays the land open for wind erosion damage.

"Dry weather this winter might result in serious wind erosion damage on fields which have been burned over," he continued.

Weather conditions during harvest last year required that an abnormally heavy stubble and matted wheat stalks be left on the ground, Thomas said, so that some farmers found they could not work the land at all without burning. Good harvest conditions this year resulted in a normal stubble which can be plowed under.

Thomas reminded farmers of the tremendous wind erosion damage their land suffered in past years. He urged them to consider the costs they would bear in damaged land and loss of AAA payments if the stubble burning resulted in creating a wind erosion hazard.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE for QUALITY

In all our years in the grocery business our one big aim was to serve Quality Merchandise at reasonable prices. For a long time now, it has been inconvenient for you to drive down to our store, but all that has been solved in the new underpass. Our high standard has been maintained... the underpass will make it easy for you to drive over and avail yourself of our Quality Merchandise. The reason we can give you standard quality merchandise at lower prices than other stores can on specials is that we own and operate our own store and overhead is at a minimum.

There Will Be A Runoff Says Moody

By POTTS BOSWELL

FORT WORTH, July 24 (AP)—Dan Moody moved in his race for the U. S. senate toward the finish line—a first primary election early at Austin tonight—with the assertion that he could "take care of either Allred or O'Daniel in a runoff."

And there will be a runoff, Moody told a responsive crowd in Capps park at Fort Worth last night, adding: "If all the people who are saying that I am the best man vote for me I'll lead the ticket in the first primary."

His forecast was tacked at the end of a measured address in which the former governor pressed his theme that the campaign, because of the war, was the most important for senator ever conducted in Texas.

He scheduled an 11 a. m. appearance at La Grange, a 1 p. m. radio address, and a speech at Brenham, Tex., at 3 p. m. today before moving in for his 8 p. m. rally at Austin.

The campaign has gained importance, Moody told the Fort Worth crowd, "because of the part which the senate shall have in moving the war to victory; in enacting laws which will keep domestic life going while we fight; in securing a lasting peace, and because of the part the senate will have in meeting the problems of the after-war world."

He criticized the campaigns of opponents W. Lee O'Daniel and James V. Allred; outlined the stands he said he would take if elected to the senate, and declared that O'Daniel apparently had "changed front" on the subject of a death penalty for saboteurs.

"The candidate owes it to the voter to state his views upon public questions and what he proposes to do if elected to the senate," said Moody.

"Neither of my opponents has attempted to make any such statement except in the most general terms."

He said that O'Daniel, while governor, had filed with the secretary of state without his approval, a bill which the legislature enacted making sabotage an offense punishable by death or not less than two years in the penitentiary.

"He stated that he could not consistently approve the bill because of the death penalty it provided," said Moody.

"At that time he was not willing to have a statute on the books under which the death penalty could be inflicted by a jury even in a case where an enemy by the use of a bomb or other such device might destroy an object of great military value and in the act take the lives of workmen."

Then, said Moody, "the senator, down at Henderson, discovering that he is defeated in this campaign, and in a desperate effort to save his waning fortunes, said that he favored inflicting the extreme penalty under military law in a hurry on all spies."

"He didn't use the term 'death penalty' but he wanted you to think that he had changed his mind about the death penalty."

Moody said that if elected he would "stand for bringing into this struggle the ultimate resources of material wealth and manpower of the nation."

Canadian Rotarians Attend Area Meeting

Special To The NEWS

CANADIAN, July 24—Bassett Bryant, president of Canadian Rotary club, Sam Allison, J. C. Wilborn, John Caylor, Herman Mowery, and H. S. Wilbur attended the meeting of the 12th district Rotary assembly in Amarillo Tuesday.

The out-of-town speaker expected for the weekly luncheon of Canadian Rotary club was unable to be present. R. M. Hobby and Darrell Wiggins discussed timely topics and there was group singing conducted by Herbert Hill, local musician.

Priority System On Employees Established

Because of the critical shortage in some kinds of workers in war agencies, the importance of transferring federal employees not actively engaged in war work to agencies active in the war effort was stressed today by Vaughn Darnell, secretary, local board of U. S. Civil Service examiners.

In order to give those federal agencies actively engaged in war work priority in securing employees over other agencies not so engaged, President Roosevelt issued an executive order authorizing the establishment of a priority system on transfers among the various federal agencies. Transfers of this priority classification are now being made from government agencies with low priority ratings to war agencies with higher priority ratings. Such transfers are made without the consent of the agency with the lower priority rating. However, federal agencies should not accept applications from employees of other government agencies, but should make requests for the transfer of such persons through the Civil Service commission.

Federal employees in agencies not now actively engaged in war work who desire transfer to war agencies should not seek releases from their present agencies, but should apply for transfer to the Transfer unit, 10th district office, U. S. Civil Service commission, Customhouse, New Orleans, La. No transfer will be made without the consent of the employee.

An employee transferred to another agency with a higher priority rating through the Civil Service commission is entitled to re-employment benefits as follows, provided he is still qualified to perform the job, and makes application within 40 days after termination of his services or 40 days after the present emergency ceases to exist:

1. He shall be reinstated within 30 days of his application in the same agency or department, and in approximately the same location, in his former position or in a position of like seniority, status, and pay, providing that such a position then exists.
2. If such a position does not exist, and such a person is therefore not reinstated within 30 days of his application, his name will be entered on the re-employment list and be considered for certification to positions for which he is qualified elsewhere in government service.
3. No employee reinstated under this order shall be discharged without cause within one year after his reinstatement.

Persons with a classified civil service status will retain their classified status when transferred to an agency with a higher priority rating.

All positions in the executive department of the federal government are subject to war service transfer regulations with the following exceptions:

1. Transfer to positions requiring confirmation by the senate.
2. Transfers to and within the field service of the post office department.
3. Transfers to positions under the jurisdiction of the board of legal examiners.

Persons appointed to the federal service temporarily or for the duration of the emergency under emergency regulations issued as the result of an executive order of the president are eligible for transfer,

Eighth Wonder Of World Turns Up In New York

By JAMES T. CARTER

NEW YORK, July 24 (AP)—The eighth wonder of the world is in town with two remarkable gentlemen who are no small shucks themselves.

It runs on "lamp oil," wears galoshes and can go like the dickens in a creek bed, but it came to grief on an Eighth avenue sidewalk yesterday.

It's a 1920 Model-T Ford and its owners are two young fellows from Johnson county, Ky., which they describe as "feudin' country" and where a Model-T Ford is a common sight.

But their strange vehicle, with a cowbell for a horn and its radiator boiling, wasn't a common sight yesterday when a blowout in its right front tire sent it up on the sidewalk near one of those new-fangled subway entrances.

"It wasn't our fault," said George Henry Egbert, 22, and fresh out of Paintsville, Ky., "but this cop came over and tried to hand us a summons."

"Lucky for him he changed his mind," said his cousin, Carlton E. Johnson, 24. "Down in Johnson county there never was a chief of police that retired from office."

The Kaintucks were spared a feud with the New York City police when passersby, fascinated by their ancient rattletrap, talked the cop out of giving them a ticket for blocking the sidewalk.

While repairing the old Model-T, the lads told how six months ago they left their farms near Paintsville to work at the Glenn Martin airplane plant in Maryland. They decided to drive to New York.

"We don't have to worry none about this here gas rationing," explained George Henry, "because we burn lamp oil."

"He means kerosene," apologized Carlton. "Back home we call it lamp oil."

"The rationing don't bother us neither," they added. "We put galoshes on our tires when they get worn out."

What they meant by "galoshes" was that they fitted two old tires together, one inside the other, so that if one had a hole in it the other would cover it—their car, then, having only four wheels, carrying eight tires, plus five or six old spares kept in the back.

He Found Out All Right

COFFEYVILLE, Kas., July 24 (AP)—Motorist H. V. Alloway decided to drive to a repair shop to see if his brakes needed fixing.

"They did."

His car crashed through the plate glass window of the shop before he could stop.

Brake repairs cost $5. The window cost $109.

'There Ain't Gonna Be No Runoff,' Boasts O'Daniel

(By The Associated Press)

HUNTSVILLE, July 24 (AP)—Declaring "there ain't gonna be no runoff," Senator W. Lee O'Daniel told an audience last night there was a big "ground swell" that would turn into a landslide of votes for him in the Democratic primary election tomorrow.

Reiterating that the war was not an issue, he said an issue was a question on which people were divided—and there was no division of opinion concerning the war effort.

Referring to a charge by his opponents, Dan Moody and James V. Allred, that he was not interested in the war, O'Daniel declared he had one son in the service and another was ready to go.

During his term in the senate, he added, he had backed every war measure, and while governor of Texas he said he had supported a strong National Guard.

He forecast that the war would not last more than two or three years.

He accused his opponents of conducting a whispering campaign against his family, but he gave no details.

Earlier at Lufkin O'Daniel declared the chief issue before the voters was the threat to freedom of "communistic labor racketeers."

The junior senator mentioned anti-strike legislation enacted while he was governor, asserting it had enabled Texas plants to produce war materials without the interference of labor trouble.

"I have sent thousands of copies of the same bill which I introduced in the senate, and speeches on the same measure, into every one of the 47 other states to try to bring about passage of a national anti-strike law," O'Daniel said.

Referring to his opponents as "the Gold-Dust Twins," O'Daniel accused them of "trying to get the common citizen senator out."

Miami Pastor Takes Army Chaplainship

Special To The NEWS

MIAMI, July 24—The Rev. R. A. Pryor, pastor of Miami Baptist church, received his appointment as chaplain in the U. S. Army and will leave today for Fort Eustis, Va. He is a World War veteran.

Rev. Pryor is a native Texan and a graduate of Baylor university and the Baptist seminary at Fort Worth. He has held pastorates at Clovis, N. M., Adrian, and Miami, and was a missionary to the Indians at Farmington, N. M., for five years.

He is entering up his work under appointment as a first lieutenant and will be accompanied by his work by his wife and daughter. He has one son, age 20, who is a civilian flying instructor at Fort Sill. He preached his farewell sermon Sunday night and the other churches in Miami dismissed their congregations in order that all might attend.

Rev. Pryor has been very prominent in civic and community welfare work.

After Election

Almost daily informed Washington correspondents report new phases of war effort which are being handicapped by politics and selfishness.

The tendency on the part of both administrative and legislative agencies is to "let it wait until after election."

For example, there is the tax program. The treasury asked for a minimum of $8,700,000,000. The house is providing $6,250,000,000.

The missing $2,450,000,000 is needed to help finance the war. Also, experts generally agree, at least this sum should be taken from the public to help avert inflation.

Congress is expected to provide the amount in a supplemental tax bill. Now? Oh, no. After election.

We can't possibly acquire or make enough rubber to supply our most pressing war needs from mid-1943 to around the middle of 1944. Unless tires now being worn out in pleasure driving are saved for war use, we are going to find ourselves in trouble.

Informed opinion is that civilian tires are going to be requisitioned—perhaps all, perhaps those in excess of five per motorist. Now—while they still have a lot of wear in them? Oh, no. After election.

If tires are not to be taken, the next best way to save them in part is thought to be nationwide gasoline rationing to restrict their use. That is seriously considered. Now? How about waiting until after election?

President Roosevelt outlined the essentials of a successful price control policy to avert inflation, and gave Leon Henderson the job. Two vital points were wage control and farm price control. It is becoming increasingly apparent that, to a limited extent at least, a reluctant Washington is going to be forced to do something about these. Now? No—after election.

The idea of politicians seems to be that by catering to pressure groups, between now and November, the politicians can be re-elected.

We doubt that it will work that way. We have a feeling that with American men on and near the fighting fronts, and other millions on their way, the people are more interested in winning this war fast than in preserving the old, soft ways of living.

Hitler isn't waiting until after our elections. Hirohito isn't waiting. Only our politicians are waiting.

If they continue to wait until after election, and if because of their procrastination this war is prolonged and thousands more of Americans are killed, we wonder how much they will enjoy the privilege of staying in Washington.

Farley Versus Roosevelt

The Democratic battle over the New York governorship is not a private fight. Rather, it is the preliminary maneuver to determine whether the president or his former buddy, Genial Jim Farley, shall control the 1944 presidential convention.

If the president can prevent Farley from nominating Attorney-General Bennett for the governorship, the former postmaster-general will be pretty well washed up as a political figure. But if Farley wins—he will have a better than even chance of doing—he will expect to swing a big stick over the 1944 nomination.

A lot of many observers are convinced that this is the only real moment of the fight. They feel that Racket Buster Dewey will obtain the Republican nomination and win the governorship, whoever the divided Democrats may choose.

THE RUBBER RUCKUS IS ENCOURAGING

(Chicago Tribune)

The most encouraging thing about synthetic rubber at the present time is that any one connected with plans for its manufacture is engaged in an unholy row. The row is principally over what particular process is to be used to make butadiene, which is the principal ingredient of buna rubber, which, in turn, is a most promising synthetic for use in tires.

The encouraging thing about the ruckus is the clear indication that we can make all the rubber the country needs. There is no dispute as to the quality of the product. Butadiene, however manufactured, is merely an ingredient which will end up in the same synthesized product. There are, in addition to the buna rubbers, at least three other synthetics—butyl, neoprene, and thiolok—which, while they are not all suitable for tires, have special advantages for other purposes.

The only question remaining is the process to be adopted. This, it may be noted, would be no question at all if the country were still operating under a profit economy. With an assured market for the product such as is offered today, all of the processes which offered chances of success would be put in operation and the most efficient one would eventually freeze out its competitors.

Unfortunately, the profit system has been suspended for the duration. The necessity of conserving every possible pound of critical materials demands that a choice be made between two or more highly technical processes, concerning which most of the experts have a strong bias one way

THE MOST PERFECT POPULAR GOVERNMENT

As we see our form of government changing so rapidly, a definition given by Solon 500 years before Christ as to what is the most perfect popular government, is timely. To the question "Which is the Most Perfect Popular Government?" Solon answered:

"That where the least injury done to the meanest individual, is considered as an insult on the whole constitution."

But, in order to make this understandable, we will have to define a constitution. I know of no better explanation than that given by Thomas Paine in his book, "The Rights of Man." I quote:

"A constitution is not a thing in name only, but in fact. It has not an ideal, but a real existence; and wherever it cannot be produced in a visible form, there is none. A constitution is a thing antecedent to a government, and a government is only the creature of a constitution. The constitution of a country is not the act of its government, but of the people constituting its government. It is the body of elements, to which you can refer, and quote article by article; and which contains the principles on which the government shall be established, the manner in which it shall be organized, the powers it shall have, the mode of elections, the duration of parliaments, and by what other name such bodies may be called; the powers which the executive part of the government shall have, and in fine, everything that relates to the complete organization of a civil government, and the principles on which it shall act, and by which it shall be bound."

In another place, Paine explained the origin of constitutions, by saying, "for as man must have existed before governments existed, there necessarily was a time when governments did not exist, and consequently there could originally exist no governors to form such a compact with."

"The fact therefore must be that the individuals themselves, each in his own personal and sovereign right, entered into a compact with each other to produce a government; and this is the only mode in which governments have a right to arise, and the only principle on which they have a right to exist."

Paine also said, "and government without a constitution, is power without a right."

In Paine's "Rights of Man," he describes governments at that time in a manner that seems to explain the governments of today. He said, "Governments now act as if they were afraid to awaken a single reflection in man."

When a constitution is formed, if it is to do no injury to the meanest individual, as Solon so wisely prescribed, it must be based on treating all people equal. There must be no coercion that takes away from any individual his natural and inherent rights that existed before government was formed.

Any law that applies to one group and does not apply to another would be doing an injury to the group to which the law applied.

It is time we examined what we have done to our Constitution since 1913.

We then discarded the kind of a popular government that the great statesman Solon said was the most perfect popular government. And it is because we did this that we have had the worst and longest depression in our history and find ourselves divided and facing the darkest time in our history.

USUAL EXCUSE FOR LABOR UNIONS

The customary apology for defenders of the miraculous way of raising wages by collective bargaining is that things change; that we must give labor unions time; that there are other crooked things besides labor unions.

But labor unions can never correct their errors by continuing to exploit their fellowman. Robbery does not become good with time. Neither does any combination of men ever improve their morals or ever become beneficial to all mankind that is formed for the purpose of keeping other people from having equal rights. This is the crux of all labor unions methods of benefiting workers.

Yes, our understanding changes and our knowledge broadens but principles that are wrong now will not be "righted no matter how much time we give them to change. We cannot have a good robbery, a good lie, good covetousness any more than we can have a good labor union which practices the policy of special privileges to some at the expense of others.

No, labor unions, so long as they follow the policy of secrecy, the policy that some men have rights that other men do not have, will never be beneficial to mankind as a whole.

or the other. The bureaucrats are being forced to pass judgment on technical questions concerning which they have inadequate knowledge and are also under political pressure from the farm bloc.

Unless a wide superiority can be established for one of the competing methods against the other, the rational thing to do is to put all into operation. The more methods tried, the more likely it is that eventually a process will be found to make synthetic rubber more cheaply than by any process now available. The main thing is to get going. The nation, threatened with the confiscation of its tires, has not forgotten that both the accumulation of an adequate stockpile of plantation rubber and the erection of any substantial synthetic rubber production facilities before Pearl Harbor. The one thing that will not be tolerated now is further delay.

FARMING UNDER FIRE

(New York Sun)

One of the most unusual citations of the war went with the recent award of the George Medal to Gilbert W. J. Mitchell, a British farmer, and the award of the British Empire Medal to Mr. Mitchell's wife and to Miss Grace Harrison, a worker on the Mitchell farm. That farm is "at the nearest point to the Continent" and its buildings are "probably the most vulnerable in the country." The fields have been exposed to gunfire from the French coast and to bombs and machine-gun bullets from German planes. During intense air activity, the citation reads, "work on the land had to be stopped, but in spite of all the difficulties and dangers there was no change in the routine of milking and attending to the stock." On various occasions Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell and Miss Harrison were forced to take shelter from enemy fire under the tractor or the binder.

A burning barrage balloon, shot down by Nazi pilots, fell across the tractor, but the fire was quickly extinguished by Mr. Mitchell. These heroic farmers not only saved their own crops, but saved as well those of neighbors who had declined to continue farming to the tune of machine-gun bullets.

SITTING IN ON THE SECOND-FRONT TALKS

People You Know

By Archer Fullingim

Did you ever hear of "Arkansas pie"? That's what Mrs. B. M. Montgomery calls it, and if anybody has a right to call it that she has because she hails from Hamburg, Ark. Yesterday, I ate some of Mrs. Montgomery's Arkansas pie, and you make it just like you make a peach cobbler, except you use slices of fresh tomatoes, and you serve it with whipped cream. It was delicious. Mrs. Montgomery has been making Arkansas pies ever since she was six years old and used to make them for her daddy.

And while on the subject of food, your mouth would water if you could see her garden. Crowder and calico peas just now coming in, bushels of huge onions already harvested. String beans, quill cantaloupe, cucumbers, tomatoes, strawberries, cabbages, beets. Her garden is so good that it's even better than Jess Turner's. Things jump at the chance to grow for Mrs. Montgomery just as fish jump at Rufe Thompson's hook, spurring all the work in the garden and already she has worn out a hand-pail. But she says she has to keep busy to keep her mind off her son, Franklin, who is in the navy. She doesn't know where he is now. He was supposed to have a furlough but didn't get to come. She hopes that some day she'll look up and there he'll be. When "the boy" joined the navy, his aunt, Mrs. Franklin L. Morgan of Los Angeles, sent Mrs. Montgomery a bronze platoon which is now at the front of the Montgomery house. Mrs. Morgan put the plaque at her front door in honor of a relative who was in the First World War. Inscribed on the plaque are the following words: "This is the home of a soldier defending the cause of God, humanity, and America."

So you see our motives have not changed so much since then. We are still fighting for God, humanity, and America. A daughter, Mrs. Audrey Sutherland and her daughter, Linda Sue, are visiting Mrs. Montgomery.

Ed Homens is the dandiest boy I ever heard of, and I heard him before I saw him. It was at the White Deer picnic Wednesday night. He was auctioning off the hogs and calf for funds to buy Victory Bonds. I thought at first it was Col. Peppert, the famed auctioneer who spels the sale of J. P. Osborne's cattle. Then I could see it was a kid, but a boy he ought to be a lawyer, a radio announcer, or an auctioneer, and I'm sending word to J. P. Osborne that it would be foolish to hire a high-powered auctioneer when Ed Homens lives only at Conway. The kid is only 18 and he's lithe and blonde. He can talk faster than any auctioneer I ever heard of, and he's a great kidder and has a smile that takes. I asked Ed how he learned to be an auctioneer and he modestly replied that he learned it while playing cards. He followed him to the auction and he was quick to keep his card until John Klara came along. A guy's got to be pretty good when he can talk a banker into things.

News Behind The News The National Whirligig

By RAY TUCKER

DOUBTFUL: Although the Board of Economic Warfare has drawn hardly any public criticism because it clothes its activities in secrecy, few emergency agencies have aroused such sharp dissatisfaction as this one has among the domestic and foreign interests it is supposed to serve. Vice President Wallace is its nominal head, but the over-worked Wallace has abdicated in favor of a group of military marines with questionable knowledge of export problems or international relations.

Executive Officer Roy B. Lord, an army colonel, has refused licenses to numerous old-line firms long engaged in trade with our "Good Neighbors" in South America. Immediate effect is to break down their selling and distributing facilities, which will be essential in the postbellum period. He has also antagonized Latin importers. A Panama company which was purchased by A. A. to grow food for natives and our soldiers in the Canal Zone sought to buy tractors and other machinery in this country. The request was held up so long that the planting season passed and the corporation is out of pocket for preliminary expenditures.

Pro-Ally newspapers have begged for supplies of newsprint but in vain. Instead of carrying the needed white paper, vessels arrive in port loaded with North American liquor, empty pop bottles and other trivial cargo. Although sewing machines are staple household and industrial gadgets in many primitive communities, clearance for repair parts has been denied or smothered in red tape.

When Sterling Products, Inc., which had several brushes with the government because of its erstwhile connection with the German Dye Trust, applied for the right to peddle three million dollars' worth of drugs down there, the application was referred to approval in five days. Competitors have to wait months, and then an okay is doubtful. Note: Sterling's go-getting salesman here is Thomas G. Corcoran, whose brother is a Sterling official.

TRADE: Postwar reconstructionists' dreams of improving world wage and living standards have become increasingly visionary as a result of a preview staged across the border in Mexico. The experience apparently suggests, as Alf Landon sagely remarked, that other peoples may not desire to be lifted by an abrupt tug at their economic bootstraps.

Several domestic mining and smelting corporations, financed by the R. P. C. and virtually guaranteed against loss, are now engaged in extracting vital magnesium ore, which is a key war product. They are paying native labor between forty and sixty-three cents a day, amounts given for an hour's work in this country. Production costs per ton are estimated at two dollars, but the mineral is delivered at Houston at a total figure of ten dollars a ton. The Laredo Times investigated the situation and vouches for these facts.

First class this procedure appears to be exploitation rather than improvement of our sister republic. We seem to be repeating the mistake which many American and British interests made in South America, China, India, the Dutch East Indies, etc. But responsible officials here reply that a higher scale, especially one equivalent to that prevailing in the United States, would upset the general level in Mexico and promote internal difficulties. Since our future foreign trade will depend on helping low-standard nations to buy our goods through increasing their purchasing power—the basic argument for victory.

Miracle Man Kaiser Stirs Aircraft Storm

By PETER EDSON

Henry J. Kaiser's proposal to build 5,000 tremendous 200- or 500-ton flying boats in shipyards has set more Washington aviation "experts" to dodging figures on tablecloths than any proposition since the president's original wisecrack about building 50,000 airplanes back in—when was that?—1939 of '40. That was a crazy idea, too, at that time—but look what happened. The country is building 60,000 airplanes this year and hopes to double it next.

They don't laugh when Mr. Kaiser sits down at a drafting board, for he has done so many impossible things that he can't be kissed off as another crackpot and anyhow the jump from building ships to building airplanes is no greater than the jump from building dams to building ships. After all, the three devices of dam, ship, and flying boat have one great factor in common—they take water to run 'em, and Kaiser has built both ships and dams faster than anyone in either business before.

This idea of a shipyard building flying boats isn't as silly as it sounds, either. Before the war, the German shipyard that built the luxury liners Europa and the Bremen did some experimenting with aircraft, and came out with four Diesel-powered 19-ton experimental trans-oceanic craft that landed in mid-ocean, taxied up to a floating mat towed by the Schwabenland, were hoisted aboard for refueling, and then catapulted back into the air.

But Washington aviation experts can pick more flaws in the Kaiser flying boat proposals than there are in a Nazi's moral character, and they're doing it.

One Liberty ship can haul 10,000 tons of cargo. Even if Kaiser can build a 200-ton flying boat—three times bigger than the 70-ton Martin "Mars" which is the biggest flying boat ever built and which can haul only 14 tons of cargo—it would take 700 of these Mars boats or over 200 of the Kaiser-on-paper 200-ton boats to haul as much cargo as one lonesome Liberty ship. And we're building 3,300 Liberty ships.

Most pertinent objection to the Kaiser proposal is that there isn't enough material available to build the planes already designed, tested, and on order as fast as they could be built in existing aircraft factories. The sad fact is that the aircraft plants already built have been forced to shut down from time to time for lack of materials. Mostly aluminum, but also steel, copper, propellers, or semi-manufactured parts like castings and shapes.

Glenn L. Martin has stated publicly that his Baltimore plant could build eight times as many aircraft as it is now building. But Kaiser's company is on record that its west coast plants could build twice as many planes as they are now building if they could just get materials. Kaiser's company is on record that its west coast plants could build twice as many planes as they are now building if they could just get materials. Kaiser's company is on record that its west coast plants could build twice as many planes as they are now building if they could just get materials.

Behind the materials shortages there are other bottlenecks which aircraft manufacturers say would impede the Kaiser efforts. Machine tools, for instance. Planes can now be assembled in a matter of hours, by assembly line methods. But tooling up to do this job takes a year, and even Kaiser could not beat his estimated 10 months in getting ready to make his first plane.

Kaiser has stated that the planes on his drawing board are beyond anything Jules Verne could have imagined, and experienced aircraft designers admit they must be. Increases in the size of airplanes has been gradual. The army's B-19 experimental ship—biggest land plane ever built—was six years in the making. The B-19 has a gross loaded weight of 82 tons, and a wing span of 212 feet. It can carry a useful load of 20 tons. Its power plant is four 2,000-horsepower engines, developing a total of 8,000 horsepower, or about one horsepower for every 20 pounds of gross load.

At that ratio, it would take 20,000 horsepower to life a plane of 200 gross tons into the air. In other words it would take eight 2,500-

Today's War Analysis

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Wide World War Analyst Secretary of State Hull's constructive program for a better world after the carnage has ended must be recorded as one of the major developments of the war.

Anomalous though it may seem to talk about peace problems at the moment when vast armies are locked in a death struggle to determine the course of the conflict, yet this is precisely the time when it may be most beneficial. Mr. Hull's great document, in which we have a mingling of the spiritual and political, reaches out in four directions:

It is a pillar of fire for the Allied peoples as they march for victory. It affords encouragement to the enslaved peoples of the occupied countries. It rebukes neutrals for their "absurd and suicidal" policy. And last, but not least, it sets the pace for the populations of enemy countries to abandon their support of a barbaric aggression for which many of them have had little heart.

The soft-spoken gentleman from Tennessee has brought a wealth of wisdom to the world's task. He remains the evangelical prophet who for so many years tried to persuade Europe that it was headed for war; and he still, so to speak, carries his dueling pistols in his tail pockets, for he has mixed charity with firmness.

There are many facts to this new-world diamond which will blaze so brightly when the light of peace is turned upon it. We are to build for "human freedom and Christian morality." And at long last Mr. Hull may get a chance to place on the shores of Lake Geneva, Mr. Hull doesn't specify the future of the agency, but the trend of events leads one to envisage a pooling of the world so long as necessary by the big four of the Allies—the United States, Britain, Russia and China. There lies the power, which can maintain order while reconstruction is carried out. The time has passed when we can afford to depend on soft language that Hitler within bounds.

Speaking of Hitler reminds us of another duty which the Allies must perform. As Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles put it recently, we must mete out swift, inexorable justice to individuals, groups or peoples responsible for the war. The mainprinciple of all this, of course, the Nazi Fuehrer and he, together with his captains, must pay the price.

Still, while we must exact justice there's one thing which we mustn't do if we are to get the new world we want—and that is to approach the peace with hatred in our hearts. The Earl of Selbourne, British minister of economic warfare, last month assured the house of lords that "Britain will never propose a revenge peace." And that clearly also is the underlying thought in Secretary Hull's program.

horsepower engines, probably arranged as four tractor engines and four pushers. Six-motored planes have been built in Europe, though the largest number of engines used in the United States today is four. The jump from the 70-ton Mars and the 82-ton B-19, which have wingspreads of over 200 feet, to aircraft of 200 tons—let alone the 500-ton planes that Kaiser also mentioned—is a development so great that most aircraft designers can't figure it in one step. Henry J. Kaiser has made his reputation by doing things that couldn't be done.

The verdict today is that he'll have to perform a miracle to build his 200-ton airplane, but unless you want to get caught out on the end of a limb, don't say that he won't do it.

SERIAL STORY BANNERS FLYING

BY MARY RAYMOND

CHAPTER I

WHEN the Colton twins—Christie and Janet—were born, everybody in Westwood said they were as alike as two peas in a pod. But they were not many weeks old before their great-aunt Lawrence remarked dryly: "As alike as sunshine and moonshine." Which, later, proved an apt comparison.

All through their baby days it had been Christie who audaciously led, planned and executed the nursery activities. The difference was more marked in later childhood and was emphasized during high school and college.

They had the same lovely brown hair with golden lights in it; the same blue-grey eyes, fringed by incredibly long lashes; the same curving, sweetly-molded mouths, the same youthful, lithe figures. Only it was Christie who glowed and sparkled, and Janet who went about in a soft reflection of that glow.

It was Christie who was high in the air, now, circling over the modest Westwood airport. And Janet who stood on the ground, her blue eyes anxiously glued to the circling plane.

Janet did not know that at the moment the courage and confidence of her twin was at low ebb, and that Christie's anxiety more than matched her own.

Tommy Colton, their brother, was watching, too. But he was not troubled. Christie's unenvied luck would always hold out. Now, if Janet were in that plane, you'd really have something to worry about. Bill Blake, the young mechanic at the airport, was another cool observer; and some distance away instructor Russ Lawton, manager of the local airport—and, finally, Bart Sanderson.

Goodlooking Bart Sanderson had been known as Westwood's "flyingest fellow" before he went in for medicine. He had grown up flying any old crate he could get his hands on. During high school days he had hung around the airport, scoring parties and pretty girls. He had come home from medical college still indifferent to both and still a flying fan.

More than one person had suspected that if any girl could prick Bart's indifference, it would be Christie Colton. But, of course, Bart had his pride, and anybody knew that a young doctor-to-be, interning now in an eastern hospital, was no match for a daughter of Westwood's richest citizen.

Bart had had a few dates with Christie. When he danced with her there was that "certain something"—a look in his eyes—something that had never been a hint that he ever intended to ask popular Christie to marry him.

"Wonder if you're anybody in that plane," Russ thought, as Bart came toward him. But Bart's grim face was his answer. "He'd probably knock me down, if he knew I tricked her into a solo, although I probably saved her a bad case of nerves," Russ thought. He was feeling a little jittery. He wished Christie would come down out of that sky.

IT had been one of those days for Christie. She had given her lesson that afternoon in a blue mood. All this time, and Russ had never mentioned a solo. She probably never would go up alone. Everything she had done today was wrong, and Russ had been saying so in no ladylike manner. He was probably getting ready to wash her up. This was probably her last landing.

Russ had leaped out of the plane, loosening his safety belt. Then his arm shot up straight and rigid, his usual signal to take off. Christie's had moved in automatic obedience. Suddenly, her eyes glued to the control stick moving up there in front—by itself. Heavens, not by itself at all. She was moving it back here in the rear seat, just as she had so many times before when Russ was in front, his broad back hiding the stick from her. She was alone. She was up here with the ship and the sky. She was soloing.

"I'm glad to find you all in one piece," Bart said. "If you had stayed up much longer I'd have gone after you."

Her throat was tight. She had been shoved up here without warning. Now, how was she to get down? Oh, yes, she knew. Don't get frightened and cling to the stick, Christie. Easy now, you was the ether? Nice going, nice landing, Christie." Russ had sauntered up, looking pleased.

"I had a good teacher," Christie smiled at him. "Bart waited until they were spinning toward town in Christie's car: 'Something told me it was high time I came home. Gosh, Christie, I remembered you as kind of nice—but not this nice.' His voice shook a little.

"That goes for me, too," Christie said, a lump in her throat. "I'm going to argue with you—plenty," Bart was frowning a little. "About those flying lessons, Christie. It may sound funny coming from me, but I guess it's because I know the danger. With the world in such a mess, you have it figured out that you'd like to help some way. But there are lots of other ways. There was the girl I met on the train, for instance. She wishes she could do something to help morale, but isn't sure just what she could do."

Christie's heart seemed to skip a beat. "What girl?" she asked, trying to sound interested and natural. "A girl named Sandra Rydall. She's just back from Europe, had some kind of job with a magazine. Seems she had a pretty rough time when the kettle boiled over, and was mighty glad to get back and settle down. Maybe you'll see her around. She looks pretty social."

"Why did she pick our town?" Christie didn't like the sound of her own voice. It had an odd, almost resentful note in it. Instinctively, she had not liked this Sandra. Because Bart's voice when he spoke of her, had a very special sound. "Oh, I don't know. She just picked it." He added, "I believe she has some relatives here."

"I hope she's as ugly as sin," Christie thought, deciding, "but she isn't." (To Be Continued)

What's Behind Beef Shortage?

CHICAGO, July 24 (AP)—What's behind the shortage in beef? Cities throughout the country have reported shortages of both beef and pork this week. The shortage in pork isn't surprising to trade observers, who predicted it, but there haven't been forecasts of a beef scarcity.

The pork shortage can be attributed to the large amounts of that product going to the armed forces and the Agricultural Marketing Administration. The AMA is buying about 40 per cent of all pork produced in federally inspected plants, and the increase in production just isn't that great. But the AMA is buying very little beef.

What is happening, trade observers said today, is that the cattle coming to market aren't as heavy as in the past and don't carry as much meat.

Choice and prime cattle entering Chicago last week averaged 1,255 pounds, good 1,123 pounds, medium 973 pounds and common 928 pounds. And the marketing of the smaller weight cattle, compared with heavier types, was entirely out of proportion with records for past years.

What is true of Chicago, is true of all other markets.

'Once In 52 Club' Helps Soldiers

CHICKASHA, Okla., July 24 (AP)—A "Once in 52 club" devised by a Chickasha school executive has already financed weekly parties for visiting soldiers until next June, and the sponsor insists he's going to finish the whole year in one shot.

Women's clubs were worried by the continuing problem of paying for the Saturday night entertainments they arranged, so A. C. Streeter trudged up and down Main Street with his idea.

He found two firms or individuals to finance each of the parties; and he promised that each such contribution would be sought only once a year.

Texas, New Mexico Fliers Honored

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, July 24 (AP)—A group of United States army fliers was awarded silver stars by Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett today for parts in bombing attacks on the Japanese airdrome at Rabaul, New Britain.

The pilot of a flying fortress also received the silver star for a hazardous mission over Ambonina, in the Dutch East Indies, while four other fliers received purple hearts.

Those awarded silver stars included: Sergt. Durward W. Resmire, Portals, N. M., staff sergt. Purple heart recipients included Second Lieut. Eddie W. Iayman, Huntsville, Texas.

Iayman, navigator of a flying fortress, was awarded the purple heart for "a meritorious act and essential service" during which he received wounds in action June 30 over Kendari airdrome.

Speech Pleases Britain

LONDON, July 24 (AP)—Secretary Hull's speech calling upon all liberty-loving peoples to help defeat the Axis drew expressions of keen interest and satisfaction from well-informed British circles today.

There was no immediate official comment on the address, which was broadcast by shortwave from Washington last night.

Neutrality In War 'Absurd And Suicidal,' Says Secretary Hull

By WADE WERNER WASHINGTON, July 24 (AP)—The United States is calling on all peoples who hope to keep their freedom, regain lost freedom, or win new freedom to help defeat the Axis now.

Secretary of State Hull sounded the call last night in an address shortwaived to all countries.

friends, foes, defeated nations, and those still listed as rigidly neutral. He stressed that the conflict now raging is "not a war of nation against nation" but a worldwide fight by those who love freedom against would-be conquerors who seek to enslave all mankind.

Characterizing professions of neutrality in such a conflict as "absurd and suicidal," he pictured the worldwide war as a test of the caliber of nations and individuals.

"There is no surer way," he said, "for men and for nations to show themselves unworthy of liberty than by supine submission and refusal to fight, to render more difficult the task of those who are fighting for the preservation of human freedom—unless it be to align themselves freely and voluntarily with the destroyers of liberty."

Then, in a sentence apparently aimed at the militarily helpless inhabitants of Axis-occupied countries, he added: "There is no surer way for men and nations to show themselves worthy of liberty than to fight for its preservation, in any way that is open to them, against those who would destroy it all."

In further emphasis of the theme that those who would be free must show themselves willing to fight against the despoilers of freedom, Hull asserted that in this vast conflict the wholehearted support of Americans is dedicated to those who are:

- 1. Fighting for the preservation of their freedom;
2. Fighting to regain the freedom of which they have been brutally deprived; or
3. Fighting for the opportunity to achieve freedom.

After victory, Hull pointed out, will come the difficult period of transition from war to peace. During this period the United Nations must cooperate to provide quick relief for starving populations, to restore public order, and a semblance of normal life in war-torn areas.

Shortage Of Dressed Beef, Pork Reported

CHICAGO, July 24 (AP)—Meat eaters discovered today that the war had created a widespread shortage of dressed beef and pork.

Along the eastern seaboard, in some sections of the south, and as far west as Ohio, quality cuts of these meats were hard and sometimes impossible to get.

Some stores in Akron, Ohio, have announced they were out of meat, while six chain stores in the Providence, R. I., area were unable to offer any beef for sale.

Market experts blamed the pinch on a "squeeze" between uncontrolled livestock prices and the ceiling prices placed on dressed meat, giving as additional causes increased consumer demands, inadequate shipping facilities to some cities, and heavy buying for the armed forces and for lend-lease purposes.

No one seemed to know just how soon the situation would be corrected. Some Chicago meat dealers expressed hope that the situation would be eased in a week, while agriculture department officials in Washington said they believed the squeeze would disappear within two months, when hogs and cattle start moving to market in larger numbers.

Sea Tradition Maintained By Third McCormick

Special To The News

MIAMI, July 24—Jimmy McCormick who was recently called by Uncle Sam passed his physical examinations in a big way and is now at Norfolk, Va., taking a six weeks' training course and will then sail for an unknown port as second cook on an army transport ship.

According to a letter just received by his mother, Mrs. Ida McCormick, Jimmy is keeping the sea tradition of the McCormick family as his father, Johnnie McCormick, died of injuries and exposure after his ship was sunk by a Caribbean storm in September, 1941, and his only brother, Flakey, has heretofore been reported missing when the destroyer Simms went down in the Coral sea battle against the Japs on June 14.

Jimmy is 24 years of age and was reared in Miami and after attending high school was in a C.C.C. camp at Perryton for sometime. He and Flakey then went to California where they were employed until the death of their father called them home. Jimmy had been employed as a cook for two years on ships that carried him to many distant lands.

He was in San Francisco ready to sail again when he received notice of his father's death and got in touch with Flakey and returned to Miami. The ship, Liberty, on which Jimmy would have sailed at that time, was sunk in January.

Jimmy's father, Johnnie McCormick, was second cook on the Liberty, which was wrecked in the Caribbean in September, 1941, and 13 members of its crew, including his father, were rescued by the coast guard cutter Angala, but Mr. McCormick was badly hurt and did not live long thereafter. His body was shipped back to Miami for burial.

Mrs. McCormick has lived in Miami 30 years. Her husband came here from eastern Kentucky and had always been connected with the cafe business. Mrs. McCormick now owns and operates the only cafe in Miami.

Jimmy and Flakey have two sisters, Mrs. J. T. Marshall of Pampa, and Mrs. Johnnie Minor of Wichita Falls.
