Danger Growing For Nazi Troops

MOSCOW, Nov. 27 (AP)—Danger deepened hourly for Hitler's battered spearhead at Stalingrad today, the latest battle dispatches indicated, as fresh strength poured into the aggressive Red Army garrison over a newly won land route and fast-wheeling field columns cut across the besieger's lifelines to the west. A confused war of movement swirled across the broad steppes west of Stalingrad and it was impossible to define battle lines clearly, but overnight dispatches said that in some places the Red offensive gained such momentum that fleeing Germans were frustrated in efforts to burn war planes on fields overwhelmed too swiftly to permit take-offs.

Dozens of planes were reported captured undamaged at one airbase in a sector described only as hilly. Overnight reports pushed to 115,600 the number of Axis soldiers said to have been killed or captured in the nine-day-old drive, with possibly another 150,000 wounded.

FDR Sticks To His Guns On Gas Rationing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP)—Farmers and war workers will be allowed necessary gasoline to meet their needs, Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers told Senate investigators today in reiterating that immediate nationwide rationing is "an absolute necessity." Jeffers went to Capitol Hill backed by President Roosevelt's order of yesterday that nationwide gasoline rationing should go into effect Dec. 1 to conserve rubber, despite protests from Congress members.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP)—Faced with a Presidential order directing that nationwide gasoline rationing go into effect on Nov. Dec. 1 as scheduled, leaders of a congressional opposition bloc were confronted today with the alternative of either giving up or carrying the fight to the floor of congress.

They hurriedly called a meeting to decide whether to proceed with legislation that would stay rationing by statute for 90 days to six months but privately they expressed belief that there was little they could do.

A special senate war investigating committee, seeking to develop "the facts on both sides of the rationing issue," called Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes, Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers, Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Transportation Director Joseph Eastman before it today.

The committee planned to go to Kansas City next week to hear midwestern mayors, civic officials, and representatives of oil companies.

"There has been so much complaint, both from the mid-west people and mid-west congressmen against extension of gasoline rationing Dec. 1 that the committee thought it best to hear both sides of the rationing issue," Chairman

Texas Governor Calls On Public To File Protests

AUSTIN, Nov. 27 (AP)—Opposition to extension of gasoline rationing should not and will not stop despite President Roosevelt's direction that motor fuel restrictions begin Dec. 1. Governor Coke R. Stevenson declared today.

Answering a question at a press conference the governor said he believes the President does not understand the situation.

"He has been devoting his time to the well organized and effective military program and has not had time to consider the rationing proposals," Governor Stevenson explained, adding:

"Henderson and those associated with him certainly have not given the President correct information about gasoline rationing."

"Would you include Rubber Administrator Jeffers in that statement?" he was asked.

"I would if I thought Jeffers had any information to give," was the reply.

It was the governor's opinion that protest resolutions from civic organizations and governmental subdivisions should and will not stop now that the President has spoken. Governor Stevenson has contended that the rationing program does not take into consideration the difference between travel and economic conditions in rationed states and those to fall within the program December 1.

300 Girls Imported For Military Dance

COLLEGE STATION, Nov. 27 (AP)—A big two-day dance is planned on the Texas A. and M. college campus this week-end.

Three hundred girls from the Texas College for Women were to be imported from Denton to take part in staging a Field Artillery Ball sequence which is a highlight of the picture, "We've Never Been Licked" being partly filmed there.

2 Dead, 12 Hurt As Negro Troops Battle Police

PHOENIX, Nov. 27 (AP)—A big section of the city was turned into a battleground early today by a wild gun fight between Negro soldiers and military and civilian police in which two men were killed and 12 wounded.

Bullets flew for nearly three hours before the riot was quelled.

Twenty-eight blocks in the eastern end of the city still were being patrolled by armored cars today and the last of the soldiers were being removed from houses.

More than 100 military and civilian police battled soldiers who had obtained guns and ammunition.

The trouble began about midnight with a fight between a Negro trooper and a Negro girl. The soldier resisted arrest by a military policeman and was shot. From then on the turmoil mounted with such rapidity that the actual sequence of events was clouded.

Ordinary citizens were being ordered after civilian police were first called. About 150 soldiers were lined up on the sidewalk preparing to board busses to return to their camp. Chief of Police Don Steward said, when a jeep carrying military police arrived, followed closely by a car filled with soldiers.

A shot was fired, by whom it is not known.

Five Pampa Women Sign Up For WAAC

Second Lieut. Rose L. Smothers was pleased today as Pampa and Gray county women responded to the appeal to join the Women's Army Auxiliary corps.

Applications had been completed by five women at the U. S. army recruiting station here today for enlistment in the WAAC.

Lieutenant Smothers said she already had enlisted 30 of the women needed to form a Panhandle platoon of 50, and still had to call on Sharrick and Canadian for more recruits.

She spoke twice today over Radio Station KPND in the interest of recruiting women for the Women's Army Auxiliary corps.

Woman Slayer Spends Last Hours Listening To Radio

LAKE CHARLES, La., Nov. 27 (AP)—Calm and apparently unafraid, Mrs. Annie Beatrice (Toni Jo) Henry, convicted and self confessed slayer, awaited execution in Louisiana's portable electric chair here at noon tomorrow.

Deputy Sheriff Gibbs Duhan said Mrs. Henry, convicted of the killing of Joseph P. Callaway, Houston, Texas, salesman in a frozen rice field near here in February, 1940, slept late Thanksgiving morning and apparently enjoyed the wild duck and dressing which was on the Calcasieu parish prison's menu.

Deputy Duhan said the condemned woman had refused to read newspapers and had turned to the radio for entertainment. Reading her Bible has been her main solace.

Dubbed the "Tigress" during her three murder trials, the woman has been a model prisoner, Duhan said, and has not suffered a day's illness since her imprisonment 33 months ago.

Mrs. Henry, a self styled "prostitute at 13, and dope fiend at 16," in a signed confession admitted she fired the fatal shots after she and her companion, Finnon Burks, had forced Callaway out of his car into the rice field where he was stripped and killed as he knelt begging for his life. Burks also is under death sentence but the date of execution has not been set.

The state supreme court twice granted Mrs. Henry new trials on grounds of prejudicial conduct in the lower court but her third conviction was upheld.

Governor Sam Jones has declared he will not interfere and there were no apparent legal moves open to her.

Mrs. Henry will be the first woman to be electrocuted in the state and the second white woman to die for murder.

Allies Tighten Traps On Axis

Defiant French seamen were reported to have scuttled the entire French naval squadron of 62 warships at Toulon today as Adolf Hitler, ruthlessly crushing the last of France's free homeland under the Nazi boot, seized the big French naval base after overcoming resistance. A Vichy broadcast said German troops marched into Toulon at 4 o'clock this morning.

By The Associated Press
Associated Press War Editor
Adolf Hitler crushed the last of France's free homeland under the Nazi boot today as Axis troops seized the big French Mediterranean base at Toulon and overwhelmed French resistance after part of the French fleet had been scuttled.

Thus Hitler trampled another solemn pledge into the dust, putting all France in the same category of conquered nations as Norway, Belgium, Holland, Greece and Yugoslavia.

The last thin veil of "collaboration" between Vichy and Berlin was ripped aside to the crackle of gunfire by stout-hearted French troops who fought briefly but long enough to permit the scuttling of French warships in Toulon Harbor.

Sixty-two French warships, including three battleships, are based at Toulon.

The German high command said Hitler and Premier Mussolini ordered the occupation "to prevent the French Mediterranean fleet from putting to sea as planned" and that in addition "unsure contingents of the French army" would be demobilized.

A Vichy broadcast said Hitler had ordered the immediate demobilization of all French naval and army forces and had placed Field Marshal Gerd Vonrunstedt in supreme command in France.

The broadcast quoted Hitler's letter to old Marshal Philippe Petain as saying:

"On Nov. 12, 1942, orders were given by French authorities to the defenses at Toulon to open fire in the event of an Anglo-American landing in this town. Existence of this order has been proved."

The communique said German and Italian troops "nipped in the bud the resistance of elements instigated by Anglo-Saxon influence which flared up at isolated points and in a few hours carried out their allotted tasks."

"Part of the French fleet has scuttled itself in spite of the countermeasures."

Roosevelt Expected To Fill Court Post

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt's announcement that he planned to fill a Supreme Court vacancy soon revived speculation today that he might turn to Congress for a successor to James F. Byrnes who resigned his Associate Justiceship to come economic director.

The two leading Congressional candidates for the place were believed to be Senate Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky and Senator Brown (D-Mich.), who sponsored the Economic Stabilization bill and who was defeated for re-election by Judge Homer Ferguson, Detroit Republican.

Barkley had the backing of many of his colleagues, who signed a petition to the President in his behalf, but Brown was said to have the support of Senator Norris (Ind-Rep), whose recommendations on court appointments have carried considerable weight in the past.

Norris himself, also defeated in the Nov. 3 election, has been mentioned as a possible appointee but has told friends he would not accept because of his advanced age, 81.

Allied And Axis Armies In Clash Outside Of Tunis

By The Associated Press
LONDON, Nov. 27—Allied spearheads were reported today to have landed to a point 15 miles from Tunis and to have clashed with Axis forces at Mateur, a communications junction 25 miles south of Bizerte, in an effort to drive a wedge between the fortified capital and the Naval base at Tunis.

Both developments were announced in a Berlin radio broadcast.

The position of the tank force striking at Tunis was not stated, but an Allied communique earlier announced that British First Army

Japs Hold Main Buna Positions

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Nov. 27 (AP)—Reinforced by strong and well-equipped Marine units, Japanese troops crammed into the narrow Buna-Gona beachhead are holding their major positions in the face of daylong air assaults and steadily but slightly abated pressure from Allied ground forces.

Comparatively meager official reports from the New Guinea front today showed little geographical change in the battle picture in the last 24 hours.

But a check on the Japanese dead confirmed earlier indications that the enemy, despite severe blows by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's aerial squadrons, had succeeded in bringing reinforcements into action.

Since the night of Nov. 19 United States and Australian bombers have sunk a Japanese cruiser, four destroyers and two landing boats, have heavily hit and probably sunk a fifth destroyer and damaged another moving toward the 12-mile shoreline still in Lieut. Gen. Tomoyoshi Hori's hand.

Surgeon Advises Pampa Parents To Establish Curfew

Captain M. W. Adler, post surgeon at the Army Air Force Advance Flying school at Pampa, advised parents to establish a curfew in their own homes and see that their daughters are in their homes at a certain hour when he discussed "How the Health of a Community is Affected by an Army Camp."

The monthly meeting of High School Parent-Teacher Association this week in the high school auditorium. "The army establishes a curfew on the men in service and parents should assume the responsibility of looking after their daughters," he continued.

Captain Adler pointed out that the men were healthy and free of disease when they stepped from the train in Pampa. Social diseases that the man contract must come from the community.

Numerous questions on army life were answered by the post surgeon following his address.

B. G. Gordon, program leader, introduced Captain Adler following the invocation by Rev. Robert Boschen of First Presbyterian church and a 15-minute concert played by the high school band directed by Ray Robbins.

Mrs. Luther Pierson, president of the high school unit, presided over a brief business session in which Mrs. E. L. Anderson, president of Junior High School P. T. A., who reported on the state convention held recently in Houston.

Review Follows Lunch For 20th Century Culture

Members of Twentieth Century Culture club met in the home of Mrs. Fred Roberts this week for an annual luncheon. Hostesses for the event were Mmes. Fred Thompson, W. B. Weathered, V. L. Hobbs, and Fred Roberts.

The Thanksgiving motif was carried out in the table decorations, while the menu featured creamed thickens, hot biscuits, green beans, buttered potatoes, celery, pickles, olives, and pumpkin pie with coffee.

Following the luncheon, a brief business session was conducted. Each member took cookies to be placed at the U. S. O. headquarters for soldiers stationed at the Pampa air base.

Mrs. Paul H. Briggs, a new member, was welcomed into the club by the president, Mrs. Joe Key.

The program consisted of a book review, "See Here, Private Hargrove," given by Mrs. J. M. Collins. The author of the book is Marion Hargrove, a private at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, at the time the book was written.

"A lot of these other fellows are being promoted," the sergeant declared. "Why is it that you don't get a promotion?" Private Hargrove shuffled the toe of his shoe in the dust, hung his head meekly, and replied, "Well, I guess I'm just not the executive type."

At intervals throughout the review, Mrs. Collins read characteristic passages from the book in order to reveal the author's style.

The following members were present: Mmes. C. W. Briscoe, Douglas Carver, J. M. Collins, Wesley H. Davis, Henry Ellis, H. H. Hahn, V. L. Hobbs, Rufe Jordan, Joe Key, Lyle Owens, T. A. Truman (D-Mo) told reporters. The President's order, announced last night, emphasized that the need for extending what Mr. Roosevelt preferred to call "military rationing" as a rubber conservation measure was becoming more acute daily.

"We must do everything within our power to see that the program starts Dec. 1 because victory must not be delayed through failure to support our fighting forces," the President said in identical letters to Jeffers and Henderson.

The effect of the President's order was to reject pleas, mostly from members of congress from oil-producing states, that nationwide rationing was unnecessary. These members last week formed an unofficial 15-man committee which recommended a 90-day delay.

Their clamor led to a resumption of hearings by a special subcommittee of the house interested in commerce committee studying the overall gasoline and rubber situation. Both Jeffers and Henderson, testifying at the hearings, declared nationwide rationing was necessary as a rubber conservation measure.

They repeated their contention in radio broadcast, last night in which they were joined by Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson and Rear Admiral Claude A. Jones, assistant chief of procurement and materials. There was talk of a congressional move to oust Henderson from the rationing picture. Representative Anderson (D-NM) said opposition to rationing would largely disappear if the program was shifted from Henderson's office to the office of defense transportation headed by Joseph B. Eastman.

Representative Boren (D-Okla) termed the President's order "a dangerous error" and said the rationing of gasoline to conserve rubber was "comparable to rationing water to save coffee, or amputating a leg to cure a tooth-ache."

Meanwhile, the public roads administration estimated that about fifty percent of all automobiles using rural highways exceeded the national speed limit of 35 miles per hour, a study showing the average speed of passenger cars being 37 miles and of trucks 36 miles.

was not ascertained. Steward said the soldiers in the car behind the jeep were armed with rifles and at least one Tommy gun. The soldiers awaiting the buses scattered and the battle was on.

The situation was brought under control about 3 a. m. At least 50 soldiers were arrested and taken to the city jail. One group of five was reported armed with a rifle.

Several civilians, including two Negro girls, were jailed. A Negro soldier killed still had not been identified. The other man killed was Robert Riley, 44, Negro civilian, whose body was found slumped at the wheel of a car, a bullet wound in his head.

Most seriously wounded was 1st Lt. August J. Esmann, 39, of a white military police detail. Esmann, former basketball coach, high school football coach, was shot in the abdomen.

The wounded were two white military policemen, two city patrolmen, two Negro military policemen, four Negro soldiers, and a girl. Col. Fred Ellis, commander of the troops, said a board of officers is investigating.

troops, striking northeastward, had captured Mejez El Bab, 30 miles southwest of Tunis, over stiff resistance and were "advancing successfully."

Mateur lies athwart the railway line and one of two highways between Tunis and Bizerte, in which Hitler has concentrated the majority of German and Italian troops in Tunisia. London commentators estimate their number at 20,000. It is 40 miles northwest of the capital. Eastward, toward the Mediterranean coast, runs another highway between Bizerte and Tunis.

The Morocco radio said all ground engagements this far, fought amid the first showers of the Tunisian rainy season, had been on a small scale. It reported the French forces under Gen. Henri Honoré Giraud were advancing rapidly eastward in cooperation with the British and American program.

The Berlin radio declared the German air force had gained air superiority over Tunisia "with lightning speed," but offered no statistics in support of the statement.

"Naval and land forces have been able to pour men and materials into the country," the Nazi agency said. "Deployment of Axis forces is still in progress and consequently fighting is restricted to a few minor brushes between the units."

ment of the French (Vichy) government." The official German news agency, said Hitler himself gave the order, which sent German troops arching into the base last night.

A German communiqué said the "up was effected" to protect this area against further violation by the British and American aggressors" following the Anglo-American "offensive in North Africa."

Toulon lies across the Mediterranean from Tunisia, where U. S. Army and British troops were now giving a wedge between Axis-held Tunis and Bizerte.

On the Tunisian front, spearheads of Lieut.-Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson's Anglo-American expeditionary force were reported to have advanced within 15 miles of Tunis, the Axis-held capital, and battled Axis troops at Mateur, 25 miles south of Bizerte.

Still another Allied column was finally credited with routing the Germans from Mejez El Bab, 30 miles southwest of Tunis.

If successful, the effect of these uncoordinated thrusts would be to split the Axis forces in Bizerte and Tunis and also cut off the route of Axis escape southeastward to Libya.

United Nations headquarters in North Africa said Allied troops were now "advancing successfully" northward—in the direction of Tunis and the Gulf of Gabes coast—after capturing Mejez El Bab over stiff resistance.

A German broadcast reporting that the Allies had surged forward within 15 miles of Tunis indicated that they had advanced 15 miles through the 30-mile-deep perimeter of Axis defenses guarding the Bizerte-Tunis sector along the north coast.

On the flaming Stalingrad front, heroic fighting raged against the "felines of Hitler's imperiled siege rines and latest reports indicated that the fast-wheeling Red armies are now driving back from the east to strike at the invaders' rear. Citing the capture of seven towns in the Don river bend, Soviet headquarters announced:

"In this sector, the Red army troops that were remaining enemy units into the eastern banks of the River Don."

This apparently meant that the Russians now were actually driving the Germans back toward Stalingrad, tightening the noose after cutting off all but a 20-mile-wide avenue of escape.

Official Soviet dispatches said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's eight-day-old offensive had rolled up a tally of 115,000 Axis troops killed or captured and possibly 150,000 others were wounded—a grand total of 265,000 knocked out of action.

Russian reports said the Red armies had already severed many, if not a large majority, of all roads of supply and escape and were "cleaning up the estimated 300,000 survivors of the Axis siege armies into a 45-mile-wide strip between the Don and the Volga."

Front-line dispatches said that battle swirling across the frozen steppes was so confused it was impossible to define the lines clearly, but reported that in some places the Russian offensive had gained such momentum the fleeing Germans were overwhelmed before they could burn planes on airfields.

Overnight, the Stalingrad garrison struck out at German troops still holding positions in the ruined city, recapturing four large blocks in the northern factory section and killing 950 Nazis.

The extent of the German rout was high-lighted by a Soviet communiqué reporting the capture of 1,963 guns, 3,823 machine guns, 50,000 rifles, 1,320 tanks, 9,000 horses and 108 supply dumps.

The battle for Tunisia, key north African buffer zone between Allied-occupied Algeria and Italian Tripolitania, was developing steadily after a week of only minor clashes, while the Allies moved 300 miles eastward across the rugged Atlas mountains.

London quarters estimated the Axis now had 20,000 German and Italian troops in the French colony, and the Berlin radio reported that "naval and land forces have been able to pour men and materials into the country."

A Nazi broadcast also asserted that the German air force had won air superiority over Tunisia "with lightning speed," but offered no supporting evidence.

The Germans' vaunted "superiority," however, did not prevent U. S. Army planes from inflicting new havoc on the Nazi-held airdrome at Tunis, where 10 enemy planes were caught on the field and heavily bombed.

countered," Allied headquarters said. An Italian communiqué reported, vaguely, "an engagement of armored cars ended in favor of Axis forces, which destroyed numerous enemy armored cars," but failed to note the locale of the action except that it was in Tunisia.

In the far Pacific Allied warplanes violently strafed Japanese troops crammed into the narrow Buna-Gona beachhead in New Guinea as the enemy, newly reinforced, still held off American and Australian forces.

A check on Japanese dead, disclosing new uniforms and equipment, showed that the enemy had succeeded in landing fresh reinforcements along the 13-mile shoreline despite heavy blows by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's aerial squadrons.

United Nations headquarters said there was little change in the battle picture in the last 24 hours, with Allied troops maintaining a steady pressure from three sides. The French were previously reported to have cleared they would defend the base against "all aggression" and Hitler himself had set Toulon aside as a special unoccupied zone when the German Army swept into the former free part of France on Nov. 11.

The new move, violating still another of Hitler's pledges, apparently meant that Germany was preparing to seize powerful remnants of the French fleet as Toulon or mistrusted the French. DNB, resorting to the familiar Nazi explanation for many of Hitler's sudden betrayals, declared:

These Are Facts

We can clarify the Communist situation in our own minds by considering a few more hard, cold facts. This will enable us to understand, once for all, that Wendell Willkie was wrong when he argued that the demoralization of William Schneiderman, secretary of the Communist party in California, had something to do with those freedoms which are the cornerstones of democracy.

The Communist party is not, like the Republican, Democratic or Socialist, a voluntary co-operation of like-thinking men and women.

The Communist party is an official administrative agency of the government of Russia—as slavishly controlled by Josef Stalin as are the Soviet embassies, consulates, and other arms of the Soviet government.

No person can become or remain a member of the party unless he or she accepts the orders of Stalin, any more than an embassy or consular employe could retain his job if he was not wholly obedient and did not work first and always for the interests of the Soviet.

The rank and file Communists do not formulate policy. They execute orders. Those orders come from party officials. The secretary is the liaison man between the rank and file, on one hand, and Moscow on the other. His contact is with the Comintern.

The Comintern is located in Moscow, in a Soviet government building. Its members serve during Stalin's approval. Their activities are financed out of the Soviet treasury.

Josef Stalin, of course you know, is the head of the Russian government. Those who obey his orders are functioning as agents of the Russian government, in the interest of that government, which may or may not correspond with the interest of the United States and its government.

Says the Bible: "No servant can serve two masters. For either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other." This does not apply alone to Russia. It applies to the United States and any other nation. It applies to Germany and its Bund; we do not discuss that because no American questions the inability of a man or woman to be loyal simultaneously to Germany and to the United States. We discuss Russia because too many have forgotten that "no servant can serve two masters."

William Schneiderman and his comrades chose to serve Russia. Their party instigated strikes, slow-downs, and disorders which, during the period of Hitler-Stalin alliance, hampered American production of war goods. That is one reason we have not been able to provide Russia with all the material of war she wants. That is one reason why we have had to delay establishment of a second front so long.

And that has been, is and will be one reason why thousands of American men will die who will not have needed to die if the Communist party members had not put orders from Moscow ahead of loyalty to the United States.

We cannot continue to tolerate divided allegiance.

This Is Vicious

Henry Kaiser's medical chief has charged publicly that he has been warned his doctors will be drafted if they do not stop treating Kaiser employes under a 50-cent-a-week family insurance plan. If this is true, it is doubly vicious.

First, because health insurance for the lower income groups is accepted as a proper and desirable social development. Second, because some think he can use the military draft as a weapon to enforce his economic and social concepts upon others.

Let the draft be used this way, even for a desirable end, and its usefulness will be ended overnight. The draft must be completely impartial and automatic, or there can be no draft.

At Least, They Tried

The Washington experiment in using tire casings without inner tubes was a flop. The B. F. Goodrich company, on the other hand, is making casings specifically designed for such use, which are successful. Up to now, they work only in the case of big truck and bus tires. It is regrettable that the other stunt did not work out. But Washington's city officials deserve credit for having tried.

The Nation's Press

AN OPEN LETTER TO SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATES
(Imperial Valley Press, (El Centro) Calif.)

The election campaign is over now. This newspaper supported some of you who were elected. We are going to tell you the price we demand for that successful support. We opposed some of you who were elected. We are going to give you our pledge, which has already been implied in the support we gave to those of "our men" who won.

First, to the winners who had our support. We came to your aid because we believed you were best qualified to hold the jobs you sought. We believed you would best represent the interests of the people, be they Democrats or Republicans. We helped you, in short, because we believed we would have less fault to find with you, in office, than with your opponents.

One thing we demand of you: use every energy you have to serve the whole people. That is the payment we ask for your support. Remember always that there is a greater interest than that of any pressure group. Remember that you were elected because the people believed in your integrity—and do not let that integrity be tarnished. When you are tempted, as you will be, to do what you know is wrong because in doing so you will please a large bloc of voters, remember that the people voted for you because they believed you would represent them all, truly and to the best of your ability.

We will criticize you in the future, sometimes very harshly. That is a right we reserve, even though you entered office with our full support.

A MUCH NEEDED BOOK

I have just finished reading John Rustgard's latest book, "The Bankruptcy of Liberalism." It is a timely book. It is a needed book. It is a book that should be read in every class room, in every home where there is intelligence enough to read. It is a plain book. It is easy to understand. It is a consistent book. It does not contradict itself. It is a harmonious book. It is in harmony with natural laws. It is an informative book. It explains why we are so rapidly losing our inherent rights. It is not a book that adds much optimism to the immediate future. The author is convinced that we will win the war, but says, "whether we are destined to achieve what has become designated as winning the peace, does not seem so certain."

Here are a few opinions of prominent students of world history quoted in the book that do not lend too optimistic views:

"Referring to the Western nations, Aldous Huxley declares that 'judged by the only acceptable criterion of progress, the world is in retrogression.'"

"On the same subject, Dr. Carrel makes this significant observation: 'Men cannot follow modern civilization along the present course, because they are degenerating.'"

"H. G. Wells expresses the same views in the following vigorous language: 'Mankind which began in a cave and behind a windbreak will end in the disease-soaked ruins of a slum.'"

"Not less emphatic was Professor William MacDougall when he came from Oxford to Harvard some years ago. 'When,' said he, 'I see America with invincible optimism dancing gaily down the road to destruction, I seem to witness the greatest tragedy in the history of mankind.'"

"To this testimony may be added the opinion of a scientist of the first order, Henry Fairchild Osborn:

"If I were asked: what is the greatest danger which threatens the American Republic today? I would certainly reply: The gradual dying out among our people of those hereditary traits through which the principles of our religious, political, and social foundations were laid down, and their invidious replacement by traits of less noble character."

"George Barton Cutten states his own conclusions in no less vigorous language, as follows: "The handwriting is so plainly etched upon our walls that to ignore the warning would condemn us as not only mildly indifferent but as criminally negligent, for if signs can be read aright we are rushing madly on to race suicide and extinction, so far as this continent is concerned. With our race will inevitably go our civilization. Of course, there are many who refuse to be alarmed and sit calmly by, even as they did in the decadence of Egypt, Greece, and Rome, not comprehending and apparently not caring what fate awaits their race and nation."

These quotations by these great thinkers should cause people to bestir themselves enough to read further into this great book and learn from the wisdom of Mr. Rustgard, the octogenarian, the causes of our degradation. I will quote a few gems in a later issue.

The book is available in the library in the city in which this newspaper is published.

News Behind The News

The National Whirligig

TROUBLES: Basic difficulty in this nation's rationing system is that there has been hardly any correlation between military and domestic programs. It seems almost incredible, but insiders insist that the Army and Navy have never sat down with Leon Henderson and told him how much gasoline, oil, food, coffee etc. they need for the armed forces abroad, our Allies and for softening up peoples subjugated by the Nazis.

Every commodity placed on an A, B, C or X card basis was computed and allocated by the Hendersonians without full knowledge of the demands which such a movement as the North African campaign would impose. For some strange reason the makers of war never relayed their plans and requirements—even in a vague form—to the economists. And as our conquests of new territory expand, the pay in Washington foresee the evolution of a profitless society in the United States as a consequence of Federal policies and the tremendous financial burden which the war will impose. They suspect that present-day financial decisions and regulations are designed largely to condition the American people for worse to come.

While only a few corporations are borrowing from banks, the highest rate Henry Morgenthau pays for new money is two per cent. He shells out less than one-half of one per cent for short-term notes. With automobile, real estate and commercial loans rapidly disappearing, heads of complaining institutions, especially the smaller ones, insist that they cannot survive. The twenty-five thousand dollar limitation on salaries, as well as the freezing of almost all incomes, marks another step in the direction of slight reward for earners.

The latest tax bill, with maximum rates of eighty per cent on companies and ninety on individuals, leaves hardly enough for operating expenditures. A prospective public debt of three hundred billion or more may force the adoption of novel levies that will flatten every pay envelope and pocket-book.

STOOGES: Explanation based on Axis internal affairs may be released as an official alibi for the ideological somersault which prompted General De Gaulle's repudiation and aroused bewilderment among anti-Fascists everywhere. Americans are inclined to believe in Eisenhower's good intentions. In the midst of unknown dangers the general may think he is justified in assuming that anyone who is not an open enemy can be accepted as a temporary helper. But liberal groups in the United States are shocked to the marrow even though they are keeping mum until the whole truth is out.

The scandalized Fighting French in New York do not wish to joggle the Administration's hand. But secretly they warn that, if the Dalain clique is recognized and allowed to consolidate power, their reign will be torn to ribbons the moment the French people have an opportunity to act on their own.

De Gaulle fears that Uncle Sam unwittingly is sowing the seeds for a blood-civil war following the struggle. According to the reports of their underground, the majority in both occupied and so-called unoccupied zones is opposed to the Vichyites. The Popular Front holds them responsible for not only the tyrannies of the armistice but also the original military debacle in 1940. It will never again tamely submit to their domination—or to

Last winter on Broadway a young actor named MacDonald Carey made a hit in the play, "Lady in the Dark," which won him a Paramount contract. Subsequently Paramount purchased the play, which is now being brought to the screen. Although Carey created the romantic role in the play on Broadway, another actor, Ray Milland, will play the part in the screen version. The studio decided that MacDonald Carey wasn't the type. "Topper" in interview questions along Jeannette MacDonald's recent concert itinerary came when one high school student asked her: "Since you have sung in so many pictures with Nelson Eddy, how do you feel about the romance between you and him?" "Jeannette did a double take, then replied: "I like Mr. Eddy, but I've been married five years and my courtship took up two more, so that rather covers the time I've been acting with Mr. Eddy."

LONDON NOTE

Food is still the big problem in London, according to Pat Morrison, who recently returned from an entertainment tour of army camps in England and Ireland. Citrus fruits, she says are given only to expectant mothers and little children. "I had a lemon given me on the plane going over and when the headwaiter at the Savoy in London saw it his eyes popped and he looked so astonished I gave it to him. He lifted the lemon gingerly and when I asked him what he was going to do with it, he replied: 'Do madam? I think I'll frame it!'"

Horrors! What If Your Senators Were Generals?

By PETER EDSON
The Pampa News
Washington Correspondent

To get the full drift of how completely silly and antiquated is the Senate procedure over this poll tax bill, all you have to do is consider what might have happened to the African campaign if, instead of being commanded by Generals Eisenhower, Clark, Patton and Doolittle, the invasion had been commanded by U. S. senators.

Supposing Senator De Alben W. Barkley of Paducah, Ky. had been in command instead of General Eisenhower. Supposing Senator the Hon. Wall Doxey of Holly Springs, Miss., had been given the job of preliminary reconnaissance entrusted to General Clark. Supposing command of the armored force had been given to Senator Theodore G. Whatham Bilbo of Poplarville, Miss., instead of to General Blood and Guts Patton. And supposing command of the airforce had been given to Senator Kenneth McKellar of Memphis, Tenn., instead of to Gen. Jimmy Doolittle.

All such comparisons are obviously odious, and they are beside the point of rightness or wrongness of the poll tax issue itself. But some kind of a contrast of this kind is necessary to present this matter in the Senate in its utter futility and to show that in wartime this is no way to run a Senate or a war.

Picture therefore, Commanding General Barkley trying to get his general staff organized for an invasion of Africa. The minutes of the staff meeting would run something like this, with apologies to the Congressional Record.

FIGHTER WORDS

GENERAL BARKLEY. I move that we proceed to the consideration of an invasion of Africa, to amend an act of the Vichy government and to prevent pernicious political activities by Adolf Hitler.

GENERAL BILBO. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The Chief Clerk of the meeting called the roll. Generals Barkley, Bilbo and Doxey answered to their names. General McKellar was absent and a lot of other generals seemed to be in Washington, Australia, Hawaii, Iceland, Guadalupe, Panama, and Guanting. A quorum was not present.

GENERAL BARKLEY. There seems to have taken place an exodus equal to the exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt, but it's the children of Rommel that we're interested in. (Laughter.) But if General McKellar were here, it would be a quorum. I move that a sergeant be authorized and directed to issue warrants for the arrest of Gen. Kenneth McKellar of Memphis, Tenn., and that he be hog-tied and gagged, and brought in to this staff meeting.

GENERAL DOXEY. A parliamentary inquiry.

GENERAL BARKLEY. The General will state it.

GENERAL DOXEY. Is the motion of the General from Kentucky debatable?

GENERAL BILBO. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The Chief Clerk called the roll. Three generals answered to their names. General McKellar was still missing.

GENERAL DOXEY. A point of order.

GENERAL BARKLEY. Points of order are not debatable, but the General from Kentucky would like to have a statement of the relevant facts for his own information.

GENERAL BILBO. Would the motion of the General from Kentucky be debatable after 2 p. m.?

GENERAL BARKLEY. The morning hour ends at 2 p. m., but it would not be debatable after 2 p. m.

GENERAL DOXEY. I appreciate that, I can readily understand the position of the General from Kentucky, because I am sure he is more familiar with the facts. We have a rule known as Rule XXV, which

Today's War Analysis

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

SOMEWHERE IN LIBYA. Nov. 26 (Delayed)—Marshall Rommel is likely to try to recoup the fallen fortunes of himself and master by making a stand at El Aghella, on the great Gulf of Sirte.

No one here doubts the determination of the Germans to pay any price in blood in an effort to maintain a foothold in North Africa—for this is essential to control of the Mediterranean. Without that domination Hitler can no longer even hope for victory in the European war.

How much of a stand Rommel can make at strategic El Aghella must depend as I see it on two things:

(1) Whether Axis forces in Tunisia can hold Bizerte and Tunis against the Allied offensive from the west.

(2) What striking power remains in Rommel's army. He has suffered huge losses in men and materiel and the troops have been run ragged by the speed of a retreat of more than 500 miles that, in the early stages, was a debacle.

The greatest danger to the Axis must lie in the threat to Bizerte and Tunis.

If these two strong positions should fall, the defenders would have to retire in the hope of making a junction with Rommel, presumably at Tripoli, thus consolidating the Axis strength in North Africa. Such a contingency likely would force the marshal to abandon the idea of holding El Aghella and make a dash for Tripoli forthwith.

What strength Rommel can muster for the defense of El Aghella is a matter of speculation. It seems to me it must depend in a large degree on how much help Hitler can manage to deliver to his captain through the tough Allied sea and air blockade.

If the Nazi marshal must depend on the resources which he brought through with him on the mad race from E. Alamein, then he undoubtedly will be in a difficult position. The fine fighting machine which he commanded a few short weeks ago before his debacle has suffered serious attrition.

Apart from the 75,000 men Rommel lost in casualties and prisoners, his sacrifice in tanks, warplanes and other equipment has been colossal.

I have just had a remarkable demonstration of the shattered state of an unforgetable air trip over the line of his retreat.

There, scrawled across the sands and over the escarpments of the desert, was the story of one of the great routs of military history. It was pictures of the shattered hulks of warplanes, tanks and motor transport and in the mountains of supplies abandoned in the frenzied rush to escape. Here and there it was emphasized by enclosures within which stood rows of new white crates for the shattered ambulatory offerings to Hitler's ambitious Wehrmacht.

We got away from Cairo in a British bomber just as the first rays of the fast climbing sun laid a dash of crimson along the eastern horizon of the great Nile delta. There were ten passengers and a crew of thirteen, making a much debated total of 13.

It appeared that one passenger was missing, as was brought out in an animated exchange between the sergeant in charge of loading the plane and the driver of the motor bus which brought us to the airport.

"I was told to collect 10 bodies," declared the cockney driver deviously, "and 'ere they are as per specifications."

"Ten, eh?" responded the sergeant. "My bombier took for the air and raked off toward the blue Mediterranean."

And so began a memorable trip. The skipper brought the plane down to a height of 250 feet so that the ground beneath lay like an open picture book. We swung over the line of the sea.

Everywhere is the record of a great victory and a great collapse—torn earth and the wreckage of the latest design in machines and equipment of war. But most impressive

HARVESTERS BATTLE GAMELY BUT LOSE TO SANDIES 39-7

Horned Frog Cage Five Has Promise

FORT WORTH, Nov. 27 (AP)—We won't win the conference basketball championship, but we'll play a pretty good game if the boys keep hustling as they are now.

That's Coach Hub McQuillan's late November evaluation of cage prospects for the 1943 season at Texas Christian University.

Coach McQuillan has a nucleus of four senior lettermen around which to build. These are Max Humphreys, Bob McHenry, Swede Pelto, and Floppy Blackmon. In addition, he has two squadmen from last year, a junior college transfer and four sophomores.

At least two additional candidates will join the cage squad when the football season closes—Billy Hearne, freshman numeral winner last year, and Bob Balaban, squadman of '42.

Negotiations are under way for several December non-conference games for the Frogs, and Coach McQuillan plans to enter the Oklahoma City tournament during the Christmas holidays.

District Title Won By Amarillo Team

Amarillo won the game, the district 1-AA title, the autographed football presented at the hall, and about everything else in the Thanksgiving day classic between the Harvesters and the Golden Sandstorm at Butler field yesterday, but they never took away the fight from as scrapping a bunch of boys to ever wear the Green and Gold.

Even though they lost 39 to 7, the heaviest defeat ever chalked up against them in all the years of district 1-AA competition, the Harvesters played a brand of football that was better in nearly all respects than any game they have played this season.

Bruised and battered by injuries received at the start of the season, facing a team that had plenty of reserves, the Harvesters, if they had been any other team but the Harvesters, would have folded up in the third quarter when the score was 33 to 0 against them.

They fought on, never quitting, and in the fourth quarter, Dunham passed to Robbins, who trotted over the goal line for Pampa's lone touchdown and the first score to be made on the Sandies at Butler field this season. Dunham added the extra point.

The Harvesters' passing attack never worked better than in the game yesterday, but poor tackling and poor pass defense spelled disaster for the Green and Gold.

In the first quarter, after gains by Hoskins and Irwin, Ray Daniel went through right guard for Amarillo's first score. Irwin kicked goal. Ray Daniel set up the second touchdown in the middle of the second quarter by intercepting one of Dunham's passes. He took the ball on Pampa's 44 and almost got away before being down on the five.

Hoskins went through for the touchdown. Irwin missed the try for extra point.

Irwin, Hoskins, and Cline, scored touchdowns for Amarillo in the third period.

Amarillo made the final score of the game late in the fourth quarter when Billy Lynch caught one of Ray Daniel's passes on Pampa's 22 and ended up at the end zone.

The win over Pampa was the Sandies 10th consecutive victory of the season. They will play the Wichita Falls Coyotes for the championships of District 1-AA and 2-AA, probably on December 5, and probably at Wichita Falls.

Tulsa U. Is Singing Praise Ball And Pass The Invitation

By BEN FUNK

TULSA, Nov. 27 (AP)—Okay, pass the invitations. Tulsa's Golden Hurricane—unbeaten, untied and unworried in the best year of its football history—is ready for a New Year's date.

A season in which Tulsa scarcely had a bad moment was climaxed yesterday with an smashing 40-7 triumph over Arkansas, the Hurricane's tenth victim of the 1942 campaign. Tulsa piled up 427 points to 32 for the opposition.

In this football-mad city, nobody doubted that Tulsa would get a bid to a major bowl. The only question was: "Which do you think it'll be?"

The Sugar Bowl, the Orange Bowl and even the Rose Bowl figured in the speculation.

Coach Henry Frka was about the only person in town who wasn't talking.

"There isn't anything I can say about 'hot games,'" commented cautious Henry. "Other people do the planning and talking."

C. I. Pontius, university president, admitted Tulsa would like a bowl invitation but he declined to say whether the school had received any feelers.

Wherever the Hurricane goes, Coach George Cole of Arkansas thinks it will do all right.

Said Cole:

"Tulsa is as good as any team I've seen this year."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP)—At the end of the first period of the Penn-Cornell game yesterday, the Penn boys had had something like 18 shots at the goal from 30 yards or less in three games and had scored just one touchdown. . . . From there on they couldn't be stopped—at least not by Cornell. . . . Which explains why you seldom see a grid coach over 30 whose hair retains its natural color. . . . Off that one game, our vote goes to Penn as the best team we've seen this season (we haven't seen Boston college) and another vote goes to Franklin Field as a swell place to watch a game if you don't get up so high the players look like exceptionally agile chessmen. . . . So far as we know, Cleo Caligaini, the Penn tackle, is no relation to Cal Cagni, the fighter, but we'd hate to meet him up an alley either.

4 Games Left In Southwest Loop

By The Associated Press

Four more games will bring the Southwest conference football campaign to a close—none of them meaning anything in the championship standing.

Texas won the title yesterday by defeating Texas A. and M., 12-6.

Tomorrow Southern Methodist meets Texas Christian at Dallas and Baylor tackles Rice at Houston.

Dec. 5 Rice and Southern Methodist play the final conference game at Houston while A. and M. has an inter-sectional date with Washington State at San Antonio.

Rice and Baylor will be playing for second place in the final standings anybody came from New York to Philly to look at the bright lights?

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Quite a discussion some of the boys were having down at lodge meeting last night, Judge... you know, in the anteroom before the election of officers."

"Sure was... and Herb was dead wrong. The alcoholic beverage industry does account for more taxes than any other industry. I checked the figures in my office this morning. Why the figure on alcoholic beverages is pretty close to a billion and a half dollars a year. Lucky thing we haven't got prohibition or the government would have to make up the money some other way. And there's only one answer to that—more taxes. You know what that would add up to?... about $25 more taxes a year for every man and woman in the country. In other words you and Sue would have to pay about $50 more in some form of tax. I guess about the only ones who'd come out ahead on that deal would be the bootleggers and gangsters."

Amarillo Pays $20,000 To Own Victory Football

They came, they saw, they bought.

Before a crowd of 11,000 spectators at the All For America Thanksgiving day football game between Pampa and Amarillo high schools at Amarillo's Butler field yesterday, $72,050 in Victory bonds were sold.

To O. V. Beck of 2815 Hughes, Amarillo, went the white football, used on the opening kick-off, and autographed with the names of both Pampa and Amarillo football squads.

He received the football, presented by Mayor Fred Thompson of Pampa, for his purchase of $20,000 worth of bonds, the highest bid received on the football, awarded to the highest bidder.

So interested were the persons who gathered in the southwest corner of the field that even after the second half started, the bidding was still going on.

To Mason King, who acted as auctioneer, and Pat Flynn, both of the Amarillo News-Globe, is due a large share of the credit for the successful sale.

Proceeding the sale, the combined Sandie and Harvester bands, directed by Ray Robbins of Pampa,

How to Help YOUR EYES Do Their Job

Every able-bodied person is busier now than in many years... working directly or indirectly in some phase of America's war effort. And we're all going to be even busier. How well each job will be done, and how fast, depends on how well we can see. And that seeing, given good eyes to begin with, depends on good light!

10 Ways to Protect Precious Eyesight and get the most efficiency from Electricity you use

1. Shade every light to eliminate glare.
2. Use indirect reflector lamps wherever possible.
3. Avoid sharp contrasts between brightly lighted surfaces and dark backgrounds.
4. Guard against light reflected into the eyes from shiny surfaces.
5. Keep fixtures, and especially globes clean.
6. For close eye-work, do not work in your own shadow.
7. Use the right size globe.
8. When redecorating, use light colors on walls and ceiling.
9. Rest your eyes by closing them occasionally.
10. If your eyes feel strained or unduly tired, see a competent eyesight specialist.

SERIAL STORY THE EDGE OF DARKNESS

BY WILLIAM WOODS

THIRD STORY: Little Kjerfve, who had argued the pastor's case, surprised the men who plot revolt against the Nazis by offering to undertake the dangerous trip to lead Steve Hammer to safety in neutral Sweden. The meeting ends, and Dr. Stensgard walks with Gerd Hansson to the hotel just as they reach to kiss themselves free to face with Major Ruck.

HELP IS COMING
CHAPTER XI
COMING from behind the trees, and seeing the tall, dark figure of Major Ruck gazing down at them, the doctor caught hold of Gerd's arm and turned to flee.

They whirled in the darkness, and for a moment could not find the path. They heard the major cry out in a low voice behind them, "Stop. Stop." And then he was across the clearing and had his pistol in the doctor's back. Stensgard struck his arm against a tree, but did not feel the pain. He twisted and lashed out in cornered desperation. The major caught him by the shoulder and whispered, "Be quiet, you fool. Do you want them to hear you in the hotel?"

Gerd felt the breath catch in her throat. She looked up at the giant towering over them, saw him thrust his pistol in the air, and thrust his shock of fair hair back with a free hand. "What do you want?" she whispered. "Who are you?" The doctor, pinned by the major's elbow against a branch, was still trembling beside her.

"Where's the guard? Don't they have one here at night?" Gerd nodded quickly and pointed. "At the back," she whispered. "He'll be around in a minute." Ruck glanced sharply about and up at the hotel windows. He let the doctor go, and beckoned to both of them with the pistol in his hand. Then he vanished, and they saw him a moment later, skirting the trees along the side of the hotel. Breathless, and still not quite knowing what had happened, they hurried after him.

When Ruck had gone far enough to get out of range of the windows, he turned to face them again. "Come, Sister Gerd," he said. "Now we can get down to business."

And the innkeeper, in spite of the fact that she had been watching Ruck carefully, could think only one thing: "I am undoubtedly older than he, but he called me 'sister.'" They called her "mother" Gerd down in the village, even the older men.

They had no more than 10 steps when the doctor caught them and tapped Ruck on the shoulder. "My dear sir," he said as importantly as he was able. "You must realize . . . " "Got over your fright, my dear Stensgard?" "Eh?" The doctor drew himself up. "Eh?" "Wait," Ruck put a finger to his lips and listened ahead down the path. Then, seeming satisfied, he reached quickly into his pocket and brought out a small book which he pressed into Gerd's hand. "A dictionary," he said. "An Oslo edition, 1937. I give it to you now in case we have no opportunity later. Have you ever heard of the book 'Eid'?"

"The dictionary," said Gerd. "What about the dictionary?" "You are an intelligent woman," Ruck said slowly. "Yes, the dictionary. We chose this edition, English-Norwegian, because it is printed in single column. For every word we will flash two numbers. The first designates page number, the second, the number of the word on that page. So, 212-9 would mean the ninth word on page 212. Is that clear?"

Gerd was listening intently. "Beginning tomorrow night . . . " The words came very fast and low. "You will have a man stationed every night between midnight and 4 on the plateau half a mile up from the hotel. He must have a good pair of glasses and keep a watch out to sea to a point due west of the center of the village. He will be signaled by a British ship lying about 12 miles off shore. He must answer the signals with a light of at least 20 candlepower brilliance. One flash for yes, two for no. These signals must come at precise 30 second intervals."

Gerd nodded again. "Due west," she whispered. "Twenty candlepower. One . . . yes. Two . . . no. Thirty seconds between answers. Page and word number in the dictionary?"

"My good man," said the doctor, "when may we expect . . . " "I'll be damned if I know," Ruck answered laughingly. "I only carry the news." He pressed both his hands, then turned, and was gone into the darkness. The doctor pulled out his handkerchief, and began mopping his face once more.

"My God," he said. "My God." Suddenly they heard Ruck's voice behind them again. "Don't go near the storehouse," it whispered. "He's got a guard there waiting for you."

AUTUMN had come in one leap down from the hills. Back in the valleys the trees had been punched for days with a September red. Farmers had finished the apple-picking, and in the elder mills, with men walking slowly behind the long wheel spokes of the presses, had been oozing the sweet juice into barrels. Hogs had fed rich on crushed apple meigs. The cows, with the summer gone, were almost dry.

About 10 o'clock there was a little flurry on the square. One of the boys ran out, and came back in to report that the captain had come down with two armed soldiers, and was going on an inspection tour of the village.

August 10 o'clock there was a little flurry on the square. One of the boys ran out, and came back in to report that the captain had come down with two armed soldiers, and was going on an inspection tour of the village.

Once outside, he dispatched the two soldiers who had accompanied him to the house of Sixtus Andresen, the schoolmaster, to give the old man official notification that his cottage, which was the last in the village on the road southward, was required for military purposes, and that he would be permitted 48 hours to leave the premises with all his personal effects.

For weeks a great and secret plan had taken all his thought. By day it was manifest in long drills and marches for the men, exercises in aiming and quick firing, runs placed in awkward positions where by a rule of strategy they had no right to be. At night he spent long, lonely hours at his desk, working over this at first seemingly impossible scheme. Now, slowly, the secret that had seemed always just out of reach had broken wide open in front of him. "It will work," he swelled up in his throat. "One blockhouse where the schoolmaster's cottage is—besides what I've already done—and it will work."

Half an hour later the men reported to him at the hotel that they had found the old man in a black suit and a bow tie, surrounded by books in his study. He had taken the order very calmly, said that he was thankful for the 48 hours, and with a great deal of old-fashioned courtesy, even invited them to sit down for tea.

pressive was the clear indication of speed. After the first bloody stand, panic seized the Axis forces. Signs of combat lessen and the marks of speed increase. Here you can see mountainous evidence of the devastation wrought on Axis tanks, warplanes and transport by the British and American air forces.

The fleeing Boche and Italians didn't even pause at Halfaya (Hell-fire) pass—a strong position south of Baria where they would have made a stand if capable of holding it all.

Here the escarpment shoots up from the desert and forms a plateau which continues westward. The so-called pass isn't a pass at all, but a zig-zag highway from the desert to the top of the escarpment. Actually there are two highways, four miles apart, and either of them could be defended indefinitely by a well-equipped army.

Rommel had no time for defense here, however. His whole anxiety was to escape the merciless punishment being dealt out by pursuing air fleets. So his troops, transport and tanks fled up the serpentine roads and raced on towards Tobruk and the west.

The marks of outright panic continue to the neighborhood of Tobruk, where Rommel took a deep breath and pulled up his socks. From there on the speed was maintained, but evidence of a debacle was lacking.

GENERAL BILBO. Will the General yield?

GENERAL DOXEY. The distinguished General from Mississippi is glad to yield to the distinguished General from Mississippi.

GENERAL BILBO. Speaking of quorums, I suggest the absence of one, but it will take the five days to introduce the subject, 20 days to argue it, five to conclude.

ROUND AND ROUND

The Chief Clerk called the roll. General McKellar entered the room and was counted present.

GENERAL MCKELLAR. You can't do this to me.

GENERAL BARKLEY. We just did. (Laughter.)

GENERAL MCKELLAR. I've been insulted.

GENERAL DOXEY. A point of order. I move the record of previous proceedings be read, and all misplaced commas be put back where they belong, so that the General from Tennessee will know what's been going on, in his absence.

The record was read, all commas were taken out, then put back in again.

GENERAL BARKLEY. I move that we proceed to the consideration of the invasion of Africa.

GENERALS DOXEY, BILBO and MCKELLAR. I object. A point of order. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

This goes on for days and days until everyone gets so tired they finally decide to abandon the whole matter. Silly, isn't it?

Experiments Indicate Dandelion May Help Solve Problems Of Rubber

By ROBERT E. GEIGER
AP Features Writer
DENVER—Some of the first dandelion rubber plants grown in the west have been a success but don't depend upon them to yield new tires in the near future.

How To Relieve Bronchitis

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

Actually, preliminary investigations have indicated that growing dandelions might be hooked up with the American sugar beet industry and that present sugar beet equipment in 67 huge western factories is suitable for partially extracting rubber.

But again, don't count your tires before they're grown. The situation, agricultural experts agree, is very complex and only a meager start has been made toward solving it.

The facts are these:
1. First cuttings from U. S. forest service experimental plantings of Russian dandelions in Montana have been harvested.

2. The yield was estimated by R. A. Coster, in charge of Montana plantations, at from 4,500 to 5,000 pounds of roots per acre, capable of producing from 150 to 200 pounds of rubber per acre. This yield was greater than the average in Russia but it was from irrigated land whereas in Russia dry land is utilized.

3. The plants matured in about one-half the time it takes in Russia.

4. The locations in the United States where it appears the dandelion will grow best coincides exactly with areas present sugar beet growing areas. In Russia the roots have been processed in sugar beet factories. This is important because it would eliminate the necessity of building American processing plants requiring strategic materials, such as steel.

"From initial experiments, I would say that the Russian dandelion appears to be a successful crop on the Montana plantations where it was planted," says Coster. Additional experiments must be carried on, however, to determine the quality of the rubber.

"The most immediate major sources of natural rubber are the wild rubber trees of tropical America but there is no prospect that they will provide full relief," F. W. Erandes, head pathologist in charge of rubber investigations for the department of agriculture, said recently.

"That is why the Russian dandelion, which yields rubber the same year it is planted, has been brought in as a pinch hitter on a team that has only one big-name regular, the cultivated Para rubber tree," he said.

Western agricultural experts say the possibilities of synchronizing the production of sugar beets and dandelions on a huge scale, using the same factories for processing both sugar and rubber, are not too promising.

For one thing, the growing of sugar beets is part of an agricultural crop cycle in which the crops are diversified so that the soil is enriched instead of impoverished. These crops include, besides sugar, other important foods and livestock feeds. If dandelions are raised, these food crops would have to be eliminated unless more land could be brought into production near sugar factories.

And farmers of the west already are beset by a labor shortage, scarcity of machinery and other factors that limit production.

Plenty Ready To Stir Up 40-Hour Week Controversy

By HERMAN ALLEN
The demand for suspension of the 40-hour week is only a little snowball on top of Capitol Hill right now. But there are plenty of people in Congress who would like to give it a push and send it booming right out into Pennsylvania avenue and from there right into every factory in the nation.

What would this mean to the war effort?

In the first place it would be best to clear the air by emphasizing that the 40-hour law does not put a flat time limit on the length of time anybody may work. It merely says that after a man has worked 40 hours in any week no must be paid overtime rates for any time he works the rest of the week.

To suspend the 40-hour week would merely mean that a worker could put in more than 40 hours before his overtime pay would begin.

Washington labor circles declare the effect on production of war goods probably would be very little. War production is on an overtime basis right now. The government is paying the overtime, so it wouldn't save the employer anything. It would, of course, save the government a lot of money.

On the other hand, such a move might be of great benefit to non-war industry, retail stores and so on. Many of these concerns, faced with rising costs and taxes, cannot afford to pay much overtime and may not be able to get help to run extra shifts of only 40 hours.

In connection with lengthening work hours, it is of interest to note what happened in Germany. A report to the International Labor office on the German situation says:

"When hostilities broke out it was considered necessary to give the government greater freedom of action. By the war economy order of Sept. 1, 1939, all restrictions on normal hours of work for adult men were abolished.

"Less than three months later it was found necessary to restore the regulations in a certain measure.

The president of the National Employment office observed: "Attention must be paid to the physical and mental limits to any extension hours. Any abuses lightly committed in this respect will have to be paid for sooner or later."

Shortly thereafter the government decided to restore a limit to the working of overtime in excess of the normal 8-hour day, the limit being fixed at 10 hours a day as a general rule and 12 hours for some jobs which involved lengthy periods of time when the worker was simply required to be present.

The German labor protection order of December 12, 1939, said: "Even though it is necessary to increase output, exaggerated demands on labor must be avoided."

Britain had a similar experience. The British found that after a certain number of hours, depending on the type of work, errors increased and the value of overtime work fell off.

U. S. Manpower Commissioner McNutt recently observed that it was his opinion, too, that returns diminished according to the type of work. For example, a precision worker making delicate aviation instruments would suffer nervous fatigue much sooner than one operating a punch press.

Soldiers Invited To Singing Session

Soldiers are especially invited to join the fifth Sunday singing meet to be held all day, beginning at 11 a. m., Sunday at the Harrah Methodist church, 709 Barnes, of which the Rev. E. L. Naugle is pastor.

Patriotic and folk songs will be sung as well as religious numbers. It has been announced by James Miller and C. H. Ward, members of the committee arranging the program.

Singing will be held in the afternoon, after a sermon by the pastor at 11 a. m., and lunch at noon. Everyone attending is asked to bring their own lunch, but coffee will be served at no charge.

"It's a fine thing to join these community sings at any time, but even more so now, as we all realize what a powerful effect music has on the morale of a nation at war," said Mr. Miller.
