Strategy Conference Called in Electrical Strike; Organized Labor Supports Yale and Towne Walkout

Mayor Charges Company With Intimidation

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 3 — (AP) — A resumed peace meeting between representatives of labor and the strike bound Yale and Towne Manufacturing company had hardly gotten under way today when Mayor Charles E. Moore charged that the only intimidation he knew of in connection with the dispute came from the company.

Moore's charge was made directly in answer to Weldon P. Monson, company attorney, who had asked whether the mayor endorsed what he, Monson, called attempted intimidation of the company by means of mass picketing and the scheduled city-wide work stoppage by organized labor later today.

NEGOTIATIONS RESUMED
Monson, in a lengthy presentation of the company's case before a crowd that packed the small city court room where negotiations to end the nine-week work stoppage which has kept 3,000 Yale and Towne employees idle were being resumed, asserted that the attempted union coercion extended to both Mayor Moore and Governor Raymond E. Baldwin, who has been active in trying to effect a settlement.

THE AMERICAN WAY
Shot back Moore: "The only intimidation I have seen has been from the Yale and Towne company."

Replied Moore: "There is no guy who can intimidate me but I'll tell you how they have tried. I was slandered and the City of Stamford was slandered because I wouldn't send police to crack skulls."

Aye, There's the Rub!

For 30 years, John McIlroy, of Passaic, N. J., has been rubbing, rubbing, rubbing. At 8 o'clock each morning, he starts out with his tools, a batch of erasers of assorted sizes and new sections of advertising posters. He travels through New York's subway stations, erasing or covering up the mustaches, beards, eye-glasses and other "artistic" additions which would-be humorists pencil in on the ads. McIlroy, pictured above on the job, estimates that he has erased 36,000 mustaches during his career.

Homma Trial

(Continued from page 1) geles, that he was "honor bound" not to speak badly of Homma in the latter's presence. Defense counsel had objected that many of the specifications filed against Homma in his trial "for violations of the laws of humanity" were vague, and the prosecutors introduced additional details. In establishing "widespread rapping and brutal mistreatment of American and Filipino women," they said, they would offer proofs that such actions, for which they blame Homma, included the "inhuman" treatment of an unnamed, married American woman at the swank Rosario apartments two days after the fall of Manila. As the result of her treatment, they said, the woman was sent to an asylum as insane. Homma, the prosecution asserted was directly in charge of all Japanese forces in the Philippines at the time. As the trial opened, prosecutors told the U. S. military commission hearing the case that Homma has no rights under the American constitution and is "being tried for violations of the laws of humanity." Lieut. Paul W. White, Lincoln, Neb., of the prosecution staff, said the Japanese government had informed the U. S. army Homma is not entitled to be treated as a lieutenant general. Although not discharged dishonorably in the western sense of the term, the stooped and aged Homma is in complete disgrace at home because of his military failure in the Philippines in 1942. White explained, Homma, with overpowering numbers, required too long to conquer Bataan and Corregidor to please Tokyo and thus delayed Japan's southward advance. Homma's appearance in court in a white suit instead of in uniform presumably is because of this reported disgrace. Europe today faces the danger of chaos because for four months the Potsdam Declaration has remained little more than a blueprint. Hundreds of thousands of Europeans will die this winter unnecessarily because of our failure to act. —Henry Morgenthau, former Secretary of the Treasury.

Y and T Walkout

(Continued from page four) pany had conducted a newspaper campaign and had been helped by "inspired editorials" and photographs. He asserted W. Gibson Carey, president of the concern, had been among the company officials who had inspired news stories reflecting on the way Stamford was maintaining "law and order." "I'm going to enforce the law in Stamford as I see it," concluded Moore. Present also was Jerome Y. Sturm, attorney for International Association of Machinists (AFL), the principal union affected, who at one point broke in on the wrangle, to protest that he thought "we were going to talk about the contract." The company has refused to accede to the union demand for 30 percent wage increase and a closed shop. Moore joined with Sturm in asking Monson to be brief. Organized labor planned a general walkout today in this city of 65,000 as disputing parties in the bitter Yale and Towne Manufacturing company strike got together in another effort to settle the differences that have kept 3,300 workers idle nine weeks. David Abrams, chairman of the recently formed Combined Stamford Labor Organization, said yesterday 10,000 AFL and CIO members were all set to stop work and hold a mass demonstration at 11 a. m. (CST) today in front of city hall. Meanwhile a conference room in city hall was readied for the scheduled 9 a. m. resumption of negotiations between officials of Yale and Towne and of the International Association of Machinists (AFL) striking for a closed shop and a 30 percent wage increase. Such service workers as barbers, bartenders and motion picture projector operators have promised to take part, and Abrams said a number of retail businessmen had agreed to close their shops. At a negotiation meeting last week, the company countered the union's demands by proposing a contract providing for an open shop and no wage increase, and the conference broke up with an outburst of angry words from both sides. Local Politics (Continued from page 3) who hold permanent exemptions, under a new provision of law, must renew their exemptions yearly, and during the poll tax paying period.

Strikes

(Continued from page 1) strike of 700,000 CIO-United steelworkers is scheduled to begin. 3. The fact-finding board in the oil wage dispute called for a progress report from 11 oil companies negotiating with the CIO oil workers on the union's demand for a 30 per cent wage increase. The panel, which had recessed to give the union and management a chance to settle their differences, telegraphed the companies that hearings would resume here Jan. 7 in any case where agreement has not been reached. "Having no response as to progress of conference from you to date, will you kindly wire us immediately the status of negotiations," the telegram added. The strategy meeting was called by CIO President Philip Murray, who also heads the Steelworkers' union. He will discuss the situation with President R. J. Thomas and Vice President Walter P. Reuther of the CIO-United Auto workers, Albert J. Fitzgerald, head of the CIO-United Electrical workers, and others. Reuther conferred yesterday with the president's fact-finding board working on its report to Mr. Truman on the General Motors strike. The corporation withdrew from the proceedings when the board said it would consider "ability to pay" as one factor in passing on the merits of the union's demand for a 30 per cent wage increase.

Ceilings

(Continued from Page One) Friday the effective date was reached. In holding out for Sunday, the agriculture department took the position dealers should be given a chance to dispose of citrus fruit for which they paid more than the ceiling prices which were suspended last November 19. OPA noted that the original suspension order had warned that ceilings would be re-established without warning if prices were not kept in line. Stabilization Director John C. Collet finally ruled there was no justification for holding up the order until Sunday. On OPA official said that under a plan for re-establishing retail ceilings, prices for citrus may be a little higher for a few days than they were just before the suspension. This will last, he added, only until retailers are back on the usual basis for calculating ceilings. At all sales levels excepting retail, sellers are required to return Friday to maximum prices which were in effect when controls were suspended. OPA said that when ceilings were lifted, citrus was selling generally at less than top prices and a bumper crop was on the way. The agency added it had expected prices for preferred sizes and qualities to rise, but that increases also had occurred for regular grades. In a statement on December 17 Collet warned that unless prices were trimmed at once, his office would "act forthwith to reimpose ceilings." Since that time, according to OPA, "prices for fresh citrus, oranges particularly, have continued to increase."

Traitor

(Continued from Page One) in the stone-walled prison courtyard ended a fantastic career which led him from fascist street fights in England to an infamous place as Hitler's number one English language broadcaster. Nazi Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels paid Joyce $60 a week for his radio work, which consisted of four daily broadcasts. Joyce, who came to England from America at 15, became a follower of Sir Oswald Mosley while a student at London university and was a member of his British fascist group until 1933, when the two parted amid rumors of a quarrel. Later Joyce organized a "national socialist league" in Britain, which he headed until he departed for Germany in August, 1939. Joyce based his unsuccessful defense largely on the contention that he was an American citizen and hence could not be found guilty of treason to Britain. Unless we can learn how to make every nation in the world forget the word aggression, we may wake up some morning to find that somebody got in the first licks at us—much to our sorrow.—Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander, army ground forces.

OFFICE CAT

An Irishman entered a barber shop for a shave. After he was seated and the barber applied the barber was called to the adjoining room, where he was detained. The barber had in the shop a pet monkey which caused amusement by imitating its master. As soon as the barber had quitted the room, the monkey seized the shaving brush, dipped it in the lather and proceeded to apply it to the Irishman's face. When the operation was finished to the monkey's satisfaction, the little animal picked up a razor and, after stropping it, turned to Pat to shave him. Irishman (firmly) sitting erect—Stop that! Ye kin tuck the towel in me neck and put the soap on my face, but begorra, yer father's got to shave me. Benjamin Franklin was born Jan. 17, 1706. No matter how frosty the morning may be or how blustery the night winds, it isn't really winter-time until the first snowfall edges the meadows and the highways with ermine. —Bayonne, N. J., Times.

Leaves From a Correspondent's War Notebook

By HAL BOYLE
MANILA—(AP)—Some memories of the late General Patton.
When Patton went ashore at Fedala, French Morocco, on the morning of Nov. 8, 1942, as commander of the Western task force invading North Africa, it was his first appearance on a battlefield since he had been wounded in France 24 years before.
Patton was clad in fatigue clothes and had both his famous ivory-handled pistols strapped to his sides, ready for action. He rode inland standing upright in a tank with his helmeted head poked through the turret opening.
One of the first sights he saw was a full colored standard around in fancy class triple-A dress uniform with row upon row of colorful ribbons shining on his chest like a rainbow.
"What in hell are you, anyway—a Christmas tree?" snorted Patton.
Rolling onward, he halted his tank before a group of soldiers stretched out in the sun. He beckoned imperiously to a sergeant and asked where a certain unit could be found.
"Over there, sir," said the sergeant, sitting in a sitting posture and gesturing idly with one arm.
Patton's temper promptly blew up like an overworked boiler.
"Damn you!" he shrieked. "Get to your feet when you address your commanding officer!"
The general's high-pitched rage brought the sergeant soaring upright to rigid attention almost as if the law of gravity had been repealed.
Patton immediately became mild again. After he moved on a soldier said, "he sure ate you out that time, Sarge."
"I had it coming," replied the sergeant with a grin.
That sergeant is only one of at least a dozen oldtimers in the Second armored (Hell on Wheels) division that I since have heard boast about "how the Old Man dressed me down."
Regular troops, who came to believe firmly in the need for the strict discipline to which they are held, usually liked Patton, who was definitely a soldier's soldier.
Patton was so confident of promotion that when we sailed for Africa he carried with him the three-star flag of a lieutenant general, although he was but a two-star major general at the time.
Months later he got his third star.
The general rarely took cover during trips to the front and once argued strongly against the use of "dig or die" posters that urged every man to have a foxhole handy at all times. He didn't like the psychology. He believed in keeping in motion and taking advantage of the terrain.
"It costs fewer lives eventually," insisted Patton, who firmly advocated risk-taking and bluntly told junior officers it was their duty to be killed.
One of the best Patton yarns,

Writer Relates More Memories of General Patton

BY HAL BOYLE
MANILA—(AP)—More memories of General Patton:
Patton was known to the public as perhaps the most spirited, ruthless, aggressive Allied military leader of World War II.
This aspect of his character has been overemphasized to the detriment of other qualities. One reason this great general never lost a campaign or major battle was the fact that he was an astute army politician and knew thoroughly the importance of supply.
Lesser men might gamble with what was on hand but Patton had the salesmanship and prestige to insist on getting what he wanted in the way of troops and supplies before he undertook an important task. Thus when he was sent from Morocco to rebuild American armies shattered at Faid and Kasserine Pass he insisted on assembling the First Armored and First and Ninth infantry divisions and fighting them for the first time as divisions.
At El Guettar, I saw Patton's usual calculated disregard for his personal safety during a visit to a frontline command post on a hilltop. Although numerous American dead lay around and the Germans were heavily shelling the road area and bombing it, Patton drove up in a command, stepped out and stalked stiffly, erectly forward.
He never ducked once. Truth requires me to report that this correspondent, devotedly true to his responsibilities to his employers, his readers and his own skin, earnestly hid the dirt every time an enemy shell whistled near—and I don't remember hearing more whistling.
One curious thing about Patton's career—never before printed to my knowledge—is that his greatest fame came from an order given him by a man generally regarded as one of the most cautious American military commanders. The man was Gen. Omar Bradley, now Veterans' administrator and, in my opinion and that of many observers, the best all-around army leader produced by any nation during the war.
After breaking out of the Normandy crust and cutting off Brittany, the impetuous Patton wanted to turn west and strike the conquest of the peninsula. It was Bradley, always cool and never emotional, who ordered him to turn east and speed across France toward Metz and the Siegfried line in one of the boldest gambles of the war.
Gen. Courtney Hodge's First Army beat back fierce German counter-thrusts at Mortain, thus enabling Patton to surge on across France under Bradley's orders.
Patton carried his rank proudly and well. I know of no man, with the possible exception of the late Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, Denver, commander of the Third Army's "Spearhead" division, who could wear a uniform so splendidly. No, not even Douglas MacArthur. Quixotic, violent, sentimental, brave and successful, he went to his grave the most loyal man to a stern code I ever had the privilege to know. He died spitelessly by the lights he lived by. Some who come after may question his thirst for glory; none can doubt the devotion he gave to his creed—or the profit it paid America.

probably apocryphal, concerns an interview he gave to an infantryman who was complaining about German air attacks.
"Well, of course, our planes can't be everywhere at once," Patton quickly explained.
The next day Messerschmitts strafed a front-line post that Patton was visiting.
Hitting the dirt like any doughboy, Patton cried angrily, "where in hell's our air cover?"

Truly a pious man, he was often crude and bloodthirsty in speech, but rarely was profane. He simply spoke the soldier's language.
Nature controls erosion, largely by supplying a "vegetable covering" over the ground.

9th Armored First To Cross the Rhine
By NEA Service
Everybody but the nazis and the Nips accorded the Ninth armored division a conqueror's ovation for its historic capture of the Ludendorff bridge at Remagen.
Striking with lightning speed, scoring all risks, the Ninth, but with such rapidity that the nazis were caught completely unawares. Before they could establish defenses or demolish the bridge, the Ninth had moved across to create a bridgehead over which hundreds of allied troops crossed the Rhine.
Military authorities have estimated that the Ninth's feat saved a minimum of 5,000 American dead and 10,000 wounded.
The Ninth saw its first real action during the Von Rundstedt counteroffensive. For its contribution to the epic of Bastogne, one of the division's combat commands received a unit citation.
A veteran outfit now, the Ninth was committed to the offensive between the Roer and the Rhine rivers. The division couldn't be stopped, in seven hammering, battering days, it rolled from river to river. And then it made its great news at Remagen.
After its Rhine crossing, the Ninth raced to Limburg, they turned east to spearhead the First Army's thrust toward the Russian lines. The Ninth encircled Leizig, paving the way for the fall of that key city.
The division's final assignment was in the Sudetenland.
Attendance at county farm meetings jumped from a total of 12,000,000 annually in 1920 to 46,000,000 in 1940.

Accidents of All Types Killed 96,000 Persons in U. S. in 1945

NEW YORK—Accidents of all types killed 96,000 persons in the United States in 1945, or 1,000 more than in 1944, the statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company estimate.

"The motor vehicle toll in 1945," the statisticians estimate, "will be in the neighborhood of 29,000 persons, some 5,000 in excess of the

Weathered Heads March of Dimes In Gray County

DALLAS, Jan. 3.—W. B. Weathered of Pampa has been appointed Gray county director for the 1946 March of Dimes campaign to carry on the work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in its battle against the dreadcripper.

Entertainments of all kinds and cash collections for the March of Dimes are being planned to raise funds for combating the disease which cripples thousands of American children each year.

Last year 253 Texas counties participated in the campaign, raising $611,192 of which Gray county raised $7,636.37.

Contributions to the March of Dimes is our assurance that no victim of infantile paralysis will go uncared for, regardless of age, race or creed."

Half the contributions raised will remain in the county chapter for care and treatment of local patients, while the other half goes to the National Foundation for epidemic aid, education and research to find a means of preventing the disease.

Writer Discusses Many Questions On United Nations

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Lots of questions come rattling into Washington about the headquarters of the United Nations Organization (UNO).

It will be somewhere in the United States near New York or Boston. But how much will it cost? How many buildings? How long to complete them?

These are questions which can't be answered accurately now. This is a guess, but the new headquarters may cost $25,000,000, maybe more.

The headquarters of the League of Nations in Geneva cost about $10,000,000. The buildings were put up in the depression years of the 1930s in Switzerland where labor costs are far cheaper than here.

Costs of materials and labor in this country in the next few years probably will be pretty high. And UNO will need larger quarters than the old league had.

The assembly will decide on the site for UNO headquarters and then will appoint a planning commission to go to work on the layouts for the buildings.

This committee—according to present plans—will make its final recommendations no later than 1947. Work on the buildings should be borne by the members countries on a proportionate basis.

Now comes the question: Once the designs are drawn and all the preliminaries taken care, how long will it take to construct the buildings? One guess is as good as another on that.

HAD HEAVY SCHEDULES Two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Killbrev have recently been discharged. J. L. Killbrev, former MoMM3-c who was on the USS Oconto, an dA1B7 "Joe" Oglesby, on the USS Cleveland. Both were in the Fifth fleet.

Although both boys covered several of the same places they never met one another while in service overseas. J. L. was in reinforcements at Bougainville, Mindora and in the invasion of Okinawa. He was in the invasion of Luzon, was in Tokyo at the time MacArthur entered, and later helped transport occupational troops in Japan. He was in the South Pacific for 18 months, was discharged at Norman, Okla., Dec. 27, and expects to work for the Santa Fe.

Joe was in the invasions of Bougainville and Guadalcanal, participated in the campaigns for Corregidor, Gren Island, Truk, Saipan, Tinian, Guam, Peiliu, the Philippines, Iwo Jima, Okinawa, went in on the China coast and finally Tokyo. Joe was discharged at San Diego Nov. 28 and is working on a ranch near Pampa.

About half of the communities of the United States (64,000 villages and towns) have only highway transportation.
