Construction Men For Celanese Here

There's no question about it—Celanese Corp. of America is getting ready to build. Just what day of the month ground-breaking activities will be held was not quite clear this morning, but advance construction men of Brown and Root, Houston, general contractors, arrived in Pampa Wednesday.

One Dies As 90-Ton Plane Fails Takeoff

EL PASO — (AP) — One crew member was killed when a 90-ton bomber faltered on a takeoff here yesterday, then careened to a stop in the center of Fort Bliss.

The 14 others in the plane leaped to freedom just before the crippled craft burst into flames. Killed was First Lieut. H. R. Dow of Holt, Maine, a radar operator.

The huge B-50 bomber took off from Biggs Air Force Base, adjoining Fort Bliss, Enigma trouble developed and the pilot, Capt. E. J. Wells, fought to reach a cleared area. The plane skidded over a barracks about two miles from where it left the runway. It upset a school bus, smashed two cars and ripped through a wire backstop before skidding to a stop on a tennis court.

Seven-year-old Michael Cardmon, son of a Fort Bliss officer, received a broken leg when struck by a piece of the craft. Sgt. Norman Waddell, Fort Bliss fireman, was seriously injured in fighting the flames. Seven others received minor burns.

The 141-foot wings narrowly missed the Pampa plant. The products coming out of the Pampa plant will be shipped by tank car daily to other plants where they will be used in the (See PLANT, Page 2)

It Looks Like Spring Here; But Don't Bet

Don't be making any bets on spring being here to stay. A look at the Texas weather report tells us to expect a little cooler temperature late tomorrow.

Yesterday, the high here was 77 degrees. On the Mexican border of Texas a high of 97 was recorded and Daltart at dawn had silt to 37.

Gen. Ridgway Says Threat Of War Close

SENDAI, Japan — (AP) — Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, new United Nations commander, warned today that the United States is "under imminent threat of war."

"On his first inspection trip as supreme commander, Ridgway told the 223rd Regiment of California's newly arrived 40th Division: 'To all intents and purposes you're here in war.'"

"We stand under the imminent threat of war which can be unleashed at the time and place of choosing of other people."

"However good you think you are, and I know you are good, you've got a long way to go to reach the standard of veteran (American) seasoned combat troops who are just across the water. I am confident you'll use every minute of the time you've got because you don't know and I don't know when the chips will be down."

The 200-mile trip from Tokyo was unprecedented. MacArthur never inspected a Japan garrison outside Tokyo. It became even more unorthodox when a crowd of youngsters, some of them girls, besieged the new commander for autographs.

Allied Troops Launch Attack North Of Newly Seized Dam

TOKYO — (AP) — Allied troops today launched a limited attack north of the newly captured Hwachon power dam and reservoir on the east-central front in North Korea. The allies seized the big hydro-electric grid Wednesday after Reds who had defended it stubbornly for days slipped away to the north.

Thousands of allied doughboys poured into the dam and reservoir area. United Nations riflemen struck north from Hwachon at the west end of the reservoir. They traded fire with an enemy group of undisclosed strength but later withdrew.

Chinese Reds pulled back all along the central front in the mountainous area west of the reservoir. Behind front lines, American engineers and Korean road crews were working day and night to take over the Hwachon dam and reservoir.

Heavy rain slowed the allied push on the western front. Chinese mounted a daylight, company-sized counterattack 10 miles inside Red Korea north of Yonchong. Allied artillery and a late afternoon air strike threw back the attack.

UN forces inched forward up the last hillside before Chongju, 17 air miles north of the border. Other allied troops near Chogyong, southeast of Chongju, and 16 air miles inside the Redland.

Behind front lines, American engineers and Korean road crews were working day and night to take over the Hwachon dam and reservoir. Red casualties Wednesday totaled only 445, about half the usual daily score, indicating little action.

A South Korean force on the east coast moved 25 miles north of the Red border before it met Red opposition. Two air alerts were sounded along the front Thursday. A blackout was enforced Wednesday - Thursday night for the first time in the war. An unidentified plane flew over the front but there was no report of any bombing.

Allied air authorities have been on the alert for days for a possible strong Red air smash-outskirts of Yanggu Wednesday night. Heavy Red mortar shells fell into the city Thursday afternoon.

The slow, deliberate UN drive appeared to be nearing the line between Chornwon and Kumhwa, 34 miles northeast. Behind it, the Reds were believed to have massed 600,000 men for an expected spring drive.

Says Can't Appease Communists In Asia

WASHINGTON — (AP) — General Douglas MacArthur told Congress today the U.S. cannot appease communism in Asia "without simultaneously undermining our efforts to halt it in Europe."

The Communist threat is a global one, he declared, and added: "We can't divide our effort. In effect, this was a direct challenge to the Truman administration's position that Europe must be the place where this country will concentrate its efforts against communism."

It was MacArthur's disagreement with this view—his contention that greater efforts must be put into the Korean war—that led President Truman to dismiss him from his Far Eastern commands eight days ago and brought the general back to this country for a dramatic appearance before Congress.

The 64-year-old general was given a swelling, three-minute ovation when he came into the House chamber before a joint meeting of the House and Senate. He wore a field uniform and no medals.

At the outset, MacArthur said it was with a sense of deep humility and great calm that he occupied the rostrum. "I do not stand here as advocate for any partisan cause, for the issues are fundamental and reach quite beyond the realm of partisan consideration," he said.

"They must be resolved on the highest plane of national interest if our course is to prove sound and our future protected."

He said, too, "I address you with neither rancor nor bitterness in the fading twilight of life, with but one purpose in mind: to serve my country. (applause.)"

Only yesterday in San Francisco where he received a tumultuous welcome on his return to this country for the first time in 14 years, MacArthur had disclaimed any political aspirations.

He told the San Franciscans he hoped his name would never be used in a political way and he did not intend to run for any political office.

Developing his views of what this country's Far Eastern policy should be, MacArthur told Congress by way of background that "the people of Asia found their opportunity in war, just past, to throw off the shackles of colonialism and now see the dawn of new opportunity, a heretofore unmet dignity, and the self-respect of political freedom."

"Mastering half of the earth's population, and 60 percent of its natural resources," he continued, "these peoples are rapidly consolidating a new force, both moral and material, with which to raise the living standard and the adaptation of the design for modern progress to their own distinct cultural environments."

MacArthur turned then to his strategic conceptions. He said the Pacific is a shield for all the Americas and all free lands of the Pacific Ocean area.

"We control it to the shores of Asia by a chain of islands extending in an arc from the Aleutians to the Marianas, held by us and our free allies," he continued.

"From this island chain we can dominate with sea and air power every Asiatic port from Vladivostok to Singapore — with sea and air power, every port, as I said, from Vladivostok to Singapore — and prevent hostile movement into the Pacific."

President Outlines Alliance In Pacific

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The administration has laid down a three-point "program of action" designed to combat communism in Asia and protect the Pacific Islands.

The plan was outlined in part yesterday by President Truman. In filling in detail last night, Secretary of State Acheson urged the nation to "hold a steadfast course in Korea" and steer clear of any idea of extending the conflict there.

Acheson made this plea on the eve of the arrival here of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. MacArthur was relieved of his Far Eastern commands when the President decided the general's policy views were not in accord with his own.

MacArthur favored air strikes at Communist installations and supply lines in Manchuria, and the use of Chinese Nationalist troops against the Chinese Reds. Mr. Truman and his advisers contended these moves might touch off World War III.

Acheson said last night, in a speech to the Women's National Press Club, that if there is any widening of the Korean fighting the Kremlin and Red China must be held responsible.

"The American people will never choose this course," he declared. "They will not fall into the trap of seeming to have it without direct criticism of the despoiled Far East commander or his proposals Acheson declared that to extend the fighting would 'gravely imperil world peace.'"

China Cleared Of Red. HONG KONG — (AP) — A three-man Tibetan delegation to Red China said today that Chinese Communist soldiers have been withdrawn from Tibet. Chinese Reds entered the high, remote country last October. Pressed for details, the delegation said "no further comment."

Arthur Vandenberg Succumbs In Sleep

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — (AP) — Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, one of the United States' most respected statesmen, is dead at 67. The Michigan Republican, a foreign policy expert whose advice and leadership were sought by the heads of both major parties, died last night in his sleep after several years of illness. He had undergone several major operations in the last two years.

Vandenberg's death at his home here meant the loss of one of the founders of the United Nations and one of Congress' foremost advocates of a bipartisan, unified foreign policy in the cold war with Russia.

It also undoubtedly meant a gain for the Democrats in the Senate. It falls to Michigan's Democratic governor, G. Mennen Williams, to name a successor to Vandenberg, whose distinguished career spanned 29 years in Congress.

Williams reportedly has four possibilities in mind — former U.S. Sen. Prentiss M. Brown, University of Michigan law professor John Dawson former Michigan Attorney General Stephen J. Roth and Noel P. Fox, head of the Michigan Labor Relations Board.

Vandenberg's death the Democratic majority in the Senate became 49 to 46. The expected Democratic appointment will make it 50 to 46.

ARTHUR VANDENBERG

Funeral services for Sen. Vandenberg will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday from the Park Congregational Church here. The Rev. Archibald Thompson, pastor, will officiate. The body will lie in state at the church chapel Saturday morning.

The place of burial has not been decided. With the senator's death was disclosed a story of his self-

Roaring Crowd Greet's Mac On Arrival In Washington

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The tall man in the trench coat paused on the top step of the ramp, paused for just an instant, as though he wanted to catch and keep this memory forever. He looked a little tired.

The lines around his mouth were a little deeper than usual and his dark eyes were weary. He stood there, with one hand on the ramp, just looking.

Then he smiled. He stepped aside and his wife hurried down the ramp ahead of him, a tiny, birdlike woman in a dress the color of claret. A surging roar welled up from the crowd. He hurried down the steps aronto the runway.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur was back in Washington, back in the city from whence came the order which stripped him of all his commands. It was 12:31 in the morning. For more than two hours before, people had been gathering. There was a little girl carrying a wooden stool, a burly teen-

Rotary Hears Major Cousins

Major Cousins, Canadian, the only lawyer in the United States to have the Supreme Court break its dignity and laugh, Wednesday at noon recounted the events leading up to the trial of the north for the Pampa Rotary Club.

What made the Court laugh? A one-eyed mare, ordered destroyed by the Canadian city officials in 1930.

Cousins followed the story from a few weeks prior to the mare's destruction at the city pound until Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes ordered it printed in the law books, only to be—well—the other night Cousins got a good laugh from the facts and arguments of a damage suit brought against Canadian by the mare's owner.

Briefly the mare was owned by a garbage hauler who worked under contract in Canadian at that time. The mare, it seemed, strayed from her corral at night and paid unwelcome visits to citizens' flower gardens and vegetable patches, eating and thoroughly enjoying them. A few days prior to the city election the mayor ordered her shot. The garbage hauler thought he was entitled to damages. Cousins, to whom he appealed for help, wrote a letter in a jocular vein to the city fathers. They didn't appreciate it and made an uncalculated and snappy reply to Cousins. Cousins was offended and took the case to court seeking damages for the garbage hauler. A jury awarded a total of $60 damages on the ground the mare had no market value, but had intrinsic value because of her one eye. Other humorous legal precedents found their way into the case. The city appealed, the higher courts threw it out on the grounds the city had no right to appeal under the system of courts.

It finally found its way before the Supreme Court after Justice Hall of the Texas Civil Appeals Court refused to publish the case. Chief Justice Hughes thought it worthy of publication and issued the order. It was printed in 1937.

In the absence of Fred Neelage, president of Rotary, Jack Sullivan, vice-president, presided at the meeting.

Funeral Held For Pampan's Relative

Funeral services were held this week in Amarillo for R. H. Egerly, son-in-law of Mrs. J. A. Stephenson and brother-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Stephenson, 167 W. Thine.

He had been a resident for about 20 years in Amarillo and was employed as an insurance salesman. Services were held at the Blackburn - Shaw Memorial Chapel in Amarillo and burial was in the Llano Cemetery.

MACARTHUR

(Continued from Page 1) was informed they were not available. He said he had warned that unless permission was granted to bomb Manchurian bases, blockade the China coast and use Nationalist forces to force the position of his command "for-bade victory in Korea."

Bluntly, MacArthur said the intervention of the Chinese Communists in the Korean fighting had called for "realistic adjustment of military strategy and such decisions have not been forthcoming."

MacArthur said he was not consulting in advance on the body said, "That's a Communist coming down," "too, early."

But it was the doors opened. The ramp was rolled up against the silver sides of the Bataan. The V-shaped pattern of military guards was ordered to attention. A hush fell.

A crewman opened the door. Mrs. MacArthur appeared first. Then, behind her, MacArthur stepped out and stood on the top of the ramp, peering through the blazing white lights.

When he reached the ground, a baby riot broke out. There was a sudden surge of people toward him, and the soldiers and officers seemed powerless to stop it.

VANDENBERG

Dr. E. B. Smith, who cared for Vandenberg during the long illness, said complications of the sickness following the major surgery caused death.

But it was only after death that Vandenberg's family disclosed that he had had a heart ailment for 25 years and that he postponed a necessary lung operation for close to a year.

He died on October 20, 1948.

He insisted, said his son, Arthur H. Vandenberg, Jr., that his health was of far less importance than his attention to the affairs of government.

Blind Man Scouts Vaudeville Talent For New York Benefit

By RICHARD KLEINER
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Along about this time of year, Irving Selis is a very busy man. Phone calls, correspondence and visitors keep him hopping as he prepares the annual extravaganza called "Galaxy of Stars" which is a Madison Square Garden feature each May.

Selis runs the show. Which is rather remarkable, when you know that Selis is and always was totally blind.

Although he can't see them, he scouts every one of the 15 or so acts that make up the big show. From January on, he's building the next show. But it's far from a full-time job with him. Selis is president and executive director of The Associated Blind, Inc., the organization that sponsors "Galaxy of Stars."

The first few Galaxies were produced by willing outsiders. But Selis found too many cooks were spoiling the show.

"It was a mess," he says. "There were 10 people running things and nobody knew what was going on. So I decided I could do myself."

Selis has developed definite ideas about what makes a good show, although he has never, of course, even seen one. He thinks it should start off with an acrobatic act or something like it. Then he likes to see in some singers, dancers, comedians and wind up with another sensational act, if possible.

"I think every show should have something that will interest everyone," is the way he puts it. He doesn't have any trouble scouting singers, but the visual acts present an obvious problem. Agents constantly call him, suggesting acts, because a big New York benefit is a good showcase for their talented charges. Selis tries to find out where he can "catch" the act (he has adopted a good deal of show business slang like that in self-defense). "I go to the theater where the act is playing," he says, "and take along somebody who is sighted. They'll describe what is going on. I can tell from the audience reaction—the chuckles and the gasps and so on—if it's good or not."

He's even done some of his scouting by television, if there is someone with him to put the action into words.

After he decides what he wants, Selis conducts all the financial negotiations himself. If he's unhappy doing business on the phone, he'll run out of the office and head for the agent's office in person. He has charge of the ticket sales—"my biggest headache"—and the millions of other details that go into a successful production.

IRVING SELIS—An audience's reactions give him the tip-off.

Selis, a native New Yorker, was born blind. Now in his 40s, he's a neatly-dressed man who seems to be looking straight at you while talking. He has no trouble running his office nor operating the normal complement of office devices it contains.

He says he was the victim of one of the fallacies about blind people. That's the one that insists a blind person automatically is a good musician.

"They sat me down at a piano when I was a kid," he says with a laugh. "I played for 15 years. Now I can maybe play chopsticks—Harry Truman and me."

Selis "messed around" in the dress business with his father. They got himself a newsstand. But he was always interested in the problems of the blind, and was in on the formation of The Associated Blind—"an organization of, by and for the blind."

The proceeds from the "Galaxy of Stars" aid the organization's work. It has social service workers, gives medical assistance and advice and financial assistance, has recreational programs legislative programs and so on.

"We believe," says Selis, "that the person who'll best understand the problems of a blind person is another blind person."

Indian Manganese Output Keeps Pace

NEW DELHI—(AP)—The production of manganese ore in India during the past three years has kept pace with its increasing demand, especially in hard currency countries, the Indian minister of natural resources said here.

Manganese ore is found in several states in India and it is mined by the state governments. The Indian Government aids producers by supplying explosives, steel, cement, gasoline and rail-road equipment. The Government plans to set up plants for the manufacture of ferro-manganese in electric furnaces.

Although hundreds of deer lie in the Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland where U.S. military weapons are tested, few are ever killed by the flying explosives.

THE "THING"—This weird-looking critter arrived at the Salt Lake City Union Stockyards with a shipment of horses from Longmont, Colo. It has the hind legs of a steer, the hairy coat of a yak and the beard of a goat. After much thought, it was finally classified as a horse.

West Germans Get More Cars

BONN, Germany—(AP)—More motor vehicles are running in West Germany today than ever before. The latest traffic ministry figures show 2,185,355 motor vehicles licensed in West Germany, compared with only 1,768,745 in the same area in 1938, the most active prewar year.

But there is one serious drawback today: a horrible traffic jam. Germany has many narrow winding roads and crooked city streets which were designed before the motor era. The chief exceptions are the autobahns which Hitler built with military utility in mind.

New Voice Beats Vocal Cord Injury

WEIRTON, W. Va.—(AP)—Stanley Filak, a young steel worker, lost his voice Feb. 28, 1950, after a brass bar struck him across the throat. His vocal cords were permanently injured.

A Pittsburgh specialist suggested sending him to the Department of Psychology at the University of Pittsburgh. There, Dr. John Matthews, director of speech, said a course in voice training might help. He enrolled in a special speech clinic class for eight weeks.

There Stanley developed an entirely new voice. At first it had husky overtones but as time went on, the huskiness disappeared. He returned to work last month on a new job.

New U.S.I.S. Head Sent To Far East

SINGAPORE—(AP)—The United States Information Service in Singapore and the Federation of Malaya has a new chief. He is Elmer Newton, former head of the Far Eastern Service of the Voice of America.

Newton, a native of Newton, Mass., was educated at Harvard and New York universities and the Sorbonne. He joined the Office of War Information in 1944 after an extensive business and newspaper career. He became public affairs officer for the Department of State in Canton in 1946, and joined the Voice of America staff in 1948.

Flies Fly Bigger On Fly Farm

By CHUCK SCOTT
NEA Staff Correspondent

UREANA, Ill.—(NEA)—Farmer Willis Bruce isn't happy with the way things are with flies. So he's breeding new crops of tougher flies.

Bruce, who is assistant economic entomologist of the Illinois Natural History Survey, here runs what is probably the only "fly farm" anywhere. His object is to breed super-flies, but just for scientific experiments.

A few years ago, it was noticed that DDT and other insecticides weren't killing flies with as much dispatch as they used to. The entomologists—students of insects—figured out that the flies were developing resistance to the bug killers.

Bruce's studies have corroborated that idea. Flies are exposed to an insecticide. Some die, some survive to lay eggs. These offspring are more resistant to the insecticide. The next generation goes through the same weeding-out process, and gradually a strain of superflies evolves.

By such experimental work, Bruce and his assistants have developed a highly-pedigreed fly strain which is 300 times more resistant to DDT than the normal fly.

The fly farm raises 100,000 to 200,000 and sometimes as many as 500,000 flies a week. It sometimes has as many as 96 different strains of flies with different characteristics of insecticide resistance.

Feeding these hordes of flies is an expensive proposition. They eat so much milk that the lab buys evaporated milk in lots of two dozen cases at a time. Strains not being studied are kept under refrigeration to slow down their life cycle and food consumption. Bruce's flies come from local dairy farms as well as from Florida, California and Georgia. It takes a little over a week for fly eggs to hatch and go through the larvae and pupae stages and emerge as qualified flies. If the flies survive the experiments, they are destroyed at the end of a week.

The fly farm takes elaborate precautions against any of its special super-insects escaping. Their entire life span is spent in wire cages.

You Can Even Choose It for Economy!

Standard equipment, accessories and trim illustrated are subject to change without notice.

It is true, of course, that when men and women move up to Cadillac, their motivating thought is not economy. Their hearts are set on owning the "Standard of the World."

But if they needed another impulse to move them to Cadillac, it could certainly be found in the car's remarkable record for practicality.

Even on the basis of its initial cost, a Cadillac represents a surprisingly sound automotive investment. Indeed, some half million American motorists are driving other makes of cars which actually cost them more than they would have had to invest if they had purchased new Cadillacs!

And the surprise is no less when you look to the everyday aspects of Cadillac's economy. Few could ask for greater mileage from a gallon of gasoline. And the car's freedom from the needs of service—beyond the routine—has long been traditional.

And finally, of course, is Cadillac's tremendous capacity to serve—the years and years and years of wonderful utility designed and built into it.

Yes—when you want a Cadillac, you want it for what it is, and does, and represents. But what an added satisfaction it is to reflect that it is also so eminently practical!

We deeply regret that we are unable to deliver new Cadillac cars without some delay. But the demand for the car is unprecedented—and much of the company's energies and materials are now being devoted to the needs of national security. Once the car is delivered into your hands, however, we know you'll agree that—patience never brought a richer reward.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly
COPYRIGHT 1951 BY MSA SERVICE, INC.

XXVII

PAUL PANCIERA'S comment on Tim's announcement that he had been thinking of forming a dress design firm of his own was immediate. "Naturally, Mr. Reese," he said. "With your talent for design you will have no great difficulties. Especially if you have Miss Roland with you." Then, Mr. Panciera added casually, "Only the business end might possibly prove a problem."

"I imagine you can always hire someone for a job like that," Tim Reese replied.

"The right man is not always at hand, I am sorry to say. If you saw a place for me in the firm—if firm there is going to be—I could very well conduct the business end for you."

"I might be able to use you at that," Tim, looking him over carefully, nodded. "I'll probably need someone to front for me. That's not in my line."

Mr. Panciera disguised his elation. "I shall be happy to be at your service, Mr. Reese," he said with a little bow.

At that instant, as Mr. Panciera was speaking, Tim, glancing about the room, discovered the tiny gold mannequin on the table where Mr. Panciera had put it the night before.

Dramatically, the little mannequin held his gaze. This was what Mr. Panciera was going to send him, while here it was before him, here where apparently it belonged.

The gold mannequin was a small thing, but as Tim stared at it, it grew until it hugely and brutally dominated his entire consciousness. Slowly, it became for him a massive corroboration of the suspicion of lying and deceit he had entertained at the Ball.

NOW, gradually, Tim saw the man in the room, something he had not seen at first because of his fascination with the many pictures of Jean Roland.

Now Tim saw the man's easy chair by the table that held the gold mannequin. He saw the cedarwood cigar humidifier on the lower shelf of the table. He saw the book of sporting prints near the humidifier. He saw other fashion awards on the mantle of the fireplace beyond the chair. He saw the man himself standing before him, the key of possession in his pocket.

Now, Jean's lies and evasions crawled out from the dark into the light and he recognized them for what they were.

Now, he knew why she had made light of Mr. Panciera on her visits to the hospital, why she hadn't telephoned him on her return from Europe, why she hadn't told him of the Ball. Now he knew why she had feigned affection for him and why she had not wanted him to come to New York. Now, he knew why he had been kept such a secret.

There had been no place for him, the man in the wheel chair, in their romantic and luxurious life. He had been the meal ticket and something of a necessary nuisance, and that was all.

Mr. Panciera, unaware of Tim's realization that he had been the dupe of an elaborate deception, talked glibly and happily on, giving his ideas of the new firm with a three-way partnership as he saw it.

But Tim could not hear him. He could not hear him for the roar of his dream world crashing into pieces within him.

Nor, turned toward the fireplace, grimly seeking out new evidence of deceit, did he see Jean Roland, every hair in place, radiant in a voluptuous morning robe, making a smiling entrance.

Jean, discovering Mr. Panciera, frowned her displeasure. But he, eager to remove any misconceptions, went quickly to her.

When Gen. Ulysses S. Grant went to West Point, he disliked the idea intensely.

DECLINE OF THE FARM—Newschart shows how the number of farms in this country has declined over half a million—or about 8 per cent—in the last decade. Tentative figures from the 1950 census show a count of 5,379,043 farms, according to U. S. Census Bureau Director Roy V. Peck. Big decline is blamed on big farms swallowing up smaller ones; drop in tenant farming; city folk buying farm land for residential purposes; and rural people taking jobs in cities close by.

'Where Do We Go From Here?' Is A New Question

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Now that General MacArthur's Asiatic command has been transferred to other shoulders, the big question before us is: where do we go from here?

MacArthur is charged with having been too ambitious—with fostering ideas which threatened to precipitate another World War. Well, just what is the assignment which now has been given Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway as the new commander in chief? What remains to be done to fulfill the program of the United Nations?

The U. N. laid down its terms in a resolution last December. This called for the unifying and pacifying of Korea. Secretary General Trygve as recently as April 6 reaffirmed this aim at a press conference.

This U. N. action was generally interpreted as giving MacArthur moral authority to cross the 38th Parallel—boundary between North and South Korea—and proceed to the northern border with Manchuria, which is the Yalu River. Obviously there would be no other way of achieving pacification and unit but to cross that hotly disputed 38th Parallel.

Secretary Lie refused at his news conference to say whether the U. N. troops should cross the parallel. However, as far back as March 12, General Ridgway, then commander of the U. S. Eighth Army, said he knew of no plan for ending the war at the 38th Parallel.

Thus Ridgway's assignment seems to be clearly defined. There is of course attached to it the admonition that it is to be carried out so as to avoid any situation which might precipitate another World War.

Simple though it sounds in the stating, that assignment is a difficult one. The troops of Red China already are in Korea fighting the United Nations forces. The Chinese are being given Russian aid in the way of material. Soviet air power (though perhaps manned by Chinese) is battling American warplanes over Korea.

At this writing the U. N. command is precluded from using air power against Chinese territory to block these attacks. U. N. operations must be confined to Korean territory. The purpose of this restriction of course is to avoid any incident which might precipitate another major war. However, it is a policy which obviously must not be allowed to hamstring U. N. operations.

So the U. N. aims are clearly set down. But will the Red Allies permit the operation to proceed on this basis? I believe that is very doubtful, for it serves the present aims of communism to spread the conflict in Asia and thus involve the western powers in costly defense.

The signs are that Russia's strategy is to bleed the democracies all possible in Asiatic operations and thus reduce their defensive power in Europe. The consensus of observers is that Moscow would like to push the democracies, and especially the United States, into a major war with China, and apparently Peking isn't averse to that program.

Russia would be able to give China valuable aid without committing the Soviet main strength. Then when the Western allies had been sufficiently weakened, the Soviet would be prepared for operations in Europe.

That gets us back to our original query: where do we go from here? There is no very satisfactory answer, because the United Nations forces haven't control of the situation. We shall have to proceed with the Korean war as per specifications, and meet the new situations as they arise. It certainly could be that we have a long and dangerous row to hoe.

Ministers Work On Schuman Plan

PARIS — (AP) — Six west European ministers who haggled half the night over the Schuman plan to pool their nation's coal and steel resources hoped to whop the treaty into shape today.

Luxembourg's Foreign Minister Joseph Bech said the plan probably would be signed Thursday. Then it must go to the parliaments of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg for final approval.

At present the ministers are trying to set up the outlines for international bodies controlling the industries which produce 24,000,000,000 worth of steel and coal a year.

Dutch Foreign Minister Dirk U. Stikker said the conferees still were at odds over what voting strength each nation will have in a council of ministers to be set up to control the pool.

1952 Mardi Gras Promises Glimmer

NEW ORLEANS — (AP) — The 1952 Mardi Gras will take on all the glitter of the past. A spokesman of the four oldest carnival organizations said their Krewe would resume their parades and balls, which were cancelled this year because of the Korean situation, unless the situation worsens.

Judgeship Urged For East Texas

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Senate judiciary had before it today a proposal to create an additional federal judgeship for East Texas. Sen. Connally urged it. Rep. J. M. Combs of Beaumont has been mentioned as a possible judge for such a district. Connally told the committee litigation is increasing because East Texas is expanding industrially. Judge Randolph Bryant of Sherman is now the lone jurist in the district. Connally said the area had 475 civil cases last year compared to an average of 222 in all other federal districts. esjvmsPo ?

When President Lincoln was killed in Ford's theater, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant was scheduled to be one of the victims, but Grant's wife persuaded him not to attend the theater that night.

Action Being Taken To Make Capital Less Inviting Target

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON — (AP) — Washington, in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

An enemy who wanted to drop an atomic bomb couldn't pick a better time than today, MacArthur day, with all the big government brass here.

But, except for MacArthur, today is like most any other weekday in the capital:

All the key men in the government are bunched together in a really small area: President, vice president; Cabinet, Congress, Army, Navy, Air Force.

True, all work in separate offices and separate buildings but when the bombs start falling those buildings aren't far apart.

In addition, hundreds of thousands of government workers are concentrated here.

No the brains and records and nerve centers of the government are jammed together in a relatively small area.

Congress has been chewing over the idea that maybe something ought to be done to make Washington a less easy target or, rather, to spread out the government a bit so it wouldn't all be wiped out in one attack.

If you think the Air Force could keep enemy bombers away, just remember that the top Air Force people say:

No air-defense system, no matter how perfect nor how well developed, can be relied upon to stop completely a determined enemy attack. Top Air Force officials have estimated as many as 70 percent of any attacking planes would get through to drop their bombs.

So the Senate is finally getting around to consideration of a bill that would disperse some government agencies.

There's quite a difference between "disperse" and "decentralize."

Decentralize means transferring federal agencies, or parts of them, to places far removed from the Capital because they're the kind that can do their work, in war or peace, far from here.

For example, bureaus in the Agriculture Department, dealing with animals, could be moved to the Midwest or somewhere else.

Disperse means moving essential government agencies — very essential to what's being done in Washington — from the heart of Washington to some place outside it but not more than 20 miles away.

For example, it might be possible to disperse some parts of the Treasury Department.

But neither the President nor Congress could very well be dispersed. If they were, Washington would hardly be the capital any more.

A subcommittee of the Senate's Committee on Public Works held a lot of hearings on the problem of dispersing some government agencies.

This committee acted on recommendations made by a number of important government agencies and departments, based on a study begun in 1948, for dispersal.

Finally, the committee came up with a bill that would start some of the dispersal. And this bill has been laid in the lap of the Senate for consideration.

Briefly, if this bill became law this is what would happen:

The government, on land it bought, would put up four big buildings within 20 miles of Washington, in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Each of the buildings would be big enough for 5,000 workers. And highways would be built by-passing Washington and, by offshoot, leading into it.

These highways would serve several purposes: general traffic which wanted to use the highways to by-pass Washington could do so; there'd be faster and easier travel between Washington and the dispersed agencies; and in event of attack these highways could be used in evacuating some of the Washington population.

The cost of land, buildings, and highways would run about $107,000,000.

This would, of course, have nothing to do with decentralization of the government, since the less essential government agencies could be moved to far-away places where and when room was found for them.

During World War II some agencies were decentralized, taking about 30,000 workers out of crowded Washington. After the war most of them came back.

Whether anything comes of this bill now in the Senate is something else. At least the ice has been broken to make Washington less inviting as a target.

Allowing for evaporation, 28,320 gallons of water are required to irrigate one acre of land one inch deep.

Building Is Being Cut

NEW YORK — (AP) — Plans for millions of dollars of new commercial construction have been quietly abandoned in the past few weeks.

Reluctance of investors to risk possible federal ban on completion of the work is advanced as a reason for the action.

This is reported as indicating how deep the slash in such building activity will cut later this year.

These projects should be on the architects' boards now if a start on them is to be made this fall. But clients of two New York architectural firms are said to have cancelled or deferred preliminary work on a total of $80,000,000 of construction.

Such actions will intensify the slump in private building, a slump counted on by the government to stretch supplies of vital materials for defense and military construction.

Myron L. Matthews, vice president of the Dow Service, publishers of daily building reports, says private nonresidential work is very active at present, but calls it a "temporary honeymoon."

"New construction projects are just not being fed into the hopper to keep the work going," this analyst of the industry says. "Potential investors in buildings now permitted by government regulations are not sure that they won't be banned by the time contracts are ready to let."

Expert Glum On Atomic Survival

SINGAPORE — (AP) — Professor Marcus Oliphant, top Australian atom scientist, thinks Singapore authorities are being "far more sensible" in building homes rather than air raid shelters.

He told the Singapore Standard in an interview here while en route to Karachi recently: "It's all hokey, this talk about beating off an atom bomb. There is nothing you can do if it falls, except live in underground shelters. The bomb can flatten a city and kill thousands."

Oliphant said high speed aircraft made defense measures difficult.

Asked how war might be prevented, Oliphant asserted: "To ban war is to ban the atom bomb. But the answer rests with America and Russia today. We can do nothing if either decides on open conflict."

State Starts Economy Plan

AUSTIN — (AP) — The state's search for ways to cut down the expense of running its business has started in earnest.

The Texas Economy Commission, appointed by Gov. Allan Shivers to do the hunting, has approved the framework of their project.

Director Stuart MacCorkle said the job called for a detailed study of the way the state:

1. Compiles its budget.
2. Keeps a finger on its expenses.
3. Keeps its books.
4. Assesses and collects its taxes.
5. Does its buying.

In each part of the study, MacCorkle said, answers to those questions will be sought: How much improvement can be made by administrative action alone? How much improvement would require amending the Constitution? How much improvement would require amending the Constitution?

Commission Chairman John S. Redditt stressed the importance of "making haste slowly" in developing a sound, long-range approach to the financial problems of state government.

The commission has raised $75,000 from contributions to finance its first year of work. It uses no tax money.

New Type Jet Bombers Placed In Photo-Reconnaissance Duty

TOKYO — (AP) — U. S. jets are kicking the daylight out of Russian-made jets every time they tangle over North Korea.

Since the Reds first started using jets in the Korean war, Nov. 1, they have lost 147 destroyed or damaged by U. S. Fifth Air Force pilots.

U. S. losses are secret but an Air Force officer said: "Overall the Communists have lost 314 planes of all types since the Korean war started June 25. That includes aircraft knocked out on the ground as well as in the air."

American losses for the same period were listed as 184. Eleven of these were lost in air combat. The others were shot down or damaged by ground fire. Many returned to base or landed behind their own lines.

Of the 147 enemy jets claimed by U. S. pilots 42 were known destroyed, 12 were listed as probables and 93 were damaged — all in air combat.

In the greatest jet battle in history Thursday the Reds lost 33 of their sleek swept back wing jets. They sent 40 MIG-15s against 32 B-29s bombing a bridge spanning the Yalu River.

The Superforts were escorted by 80 F-84 Thunderjets and Sabre Jets.

In 25 minutes 33 Red jets had been blasted out of the skies. The rest fled to their Manchurian sanctuary. Two B-29s were shot down, but the bombing mission was completed.

No American jets were lost. The air war in Korea has been fought in two parts.

The Reds first pitted the North Korean Air Force against UN warplanes. Within two or three weeks it was destroyed.

About four months later the Reds sent their jets into action. The first were sighted Nov. 1. The first jet-to-jet air battle in history was fought Nov. 8.

Four F-80s took on four Soviet-made MIGs. One MIG was shot down. The others darted back across the Yalu.

The Communists use hit and run tactics. From high altitudes on the Manchurian side of the Yalu, they make one sweeping dash on U. S. planes and then dash back to their sanctuary.

American planes have orders not to chase the MIGs into Manchuria. President Truman said, "if we were to do those things (penetrate Manchuria or China) we would be running the very grave risk of starting a general war... the exact situation we are trying to prevent."

General MacArthur's demand that allied planes be allowed to bomb Communist bases in Manchuria was one of his important differences with President Truman.

Race Relations, Medical Skill Team Up To Save Girl's Life

By RICHARD KLEINER
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK — (NEA) — They've developed a machine that makes the back-seat driver as old-fashioned as a Model T. This baby not only tells you what you're doing wrong at the wheel, but gives you a report card at the end of the drive.

It's the Roadometer, an educational driver-teacher developed by an insurance company (Aetna Casualty and Surety Co.). The machine is a very handsome and efficient gadget, but it doesn't have a kind bolt in its body.

In fact, you can almost hear it chortle as it takes you for a harrowing two-minute ride, via colored movies.

You sit on a regular automobile seat, with the steering wheel, horn, directional signals, accelerator pedal and brake pedal all in proper position. In front of you is the hood and a movie screen. Behind you is a nightmarish collection of nuts, bolts, screws, wires, movie projectors, slide projectors, electrical relays and assorted mechanical stuff.

A message flashes on the screen, telling you to drive normally and use all the equipment just as you would in your own car. You push a button marked "start" and you're off.

The movie shows you the scene, as you drive down an innocent-looking suburban street. Before the next two minutes have elapsed, you're a nervous wreck, you've been in a couple of smash-ups, hit somebody and the Roadometer presents you with a score card showing just how lousy a driver you are.

Unless, of course, you happen to be a good driver. Then everything goes well, you don't hit anybody, your car is still intact, the Roadometer tells you you're good, and your insurance company loves you dearly.

As you drive down the movie street, it turns into a taxi-driver's paradise. First a bum in a pick-up truck cuts you off. Then you have to steer around some construction work. Then a big box falls off that no-good pick-up truck, right where you can't miss it. Then you have to steer around a sharp S-curve.

You've only begun. Next on the sinister schedule, some jerk starts off from behind a parked car right in your path. You make a hair-pin right turn. And you take a curve, just as one fool coming at you passes another fool, both going at high speed.

All the time, as you accelerate, brake, blow your horn, use your signals and steer, the Roadometer behind you is clicking and banging. The clicks and bangs are evidences of an ingenious mechanical brain, which keeps track of how you're doing.

If you don't brake fast enough, the machine knows. It knows if you steer too near the center or the curb, if you forget your directional signals, if you don't slow down when the no-good truck cuts you off. It knows everything except your name and address, fortunately.

The Roadometer is the climax of 16 years' research to improve driver-testing devices. This one is almost perfect. The harder you step on the accelerator, the faster the film unwinds and you get the illusion of speed. If you

Sixty Percent Of Texas TD Deaths Happen In The Home

DALLAS — (AP) — Sixty per cent of the some 2,600 Texas type patients who died of tuberculosis last year by 1,500 in the last 18 months and that another 450 beds would be added by September.

And Dr. Howard E. Smith of Austin, director of the State Health Department's division of 2,600 beds — considerably more than double the total of 18 months ago, he said.

The United States Public Health Service recommends a minimum of 2 1/2 TB hospital beds for each death.

Dr. James E. Perkins of New York, managing director of the National Tuberculosis Assn. reported by Claude Gilmer of Rock Springs, chairman of the annual TB death rate of 35.7 per state board for hospitals and 100,000 population compared to a national average of 30.

He said yesterday beds for this died at home.

He said the mental hospitals, jammed to overflowing, pose an even bigger problem for the state board and that there is a serious TB problem within the mental hospital system itself.

Officers of two societies within the association were elected Friday.

Dr. John A. Wiggins of Fort Worth was chosen president of Texas Chapter, American Trudeau Society, the association's medical section. Dr. Robert B. Morrison of Austin was named vice-president and Dr. Wayne A. Reser, Wichita Falls, secretary-treasurer.

Edgar G. Smeltzer Jr. of San Antonio was named president of the Texas Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries.

Clergyman's Son Is New Valentino

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK — (AP) — A young clergyman's son is perturbed at the task of enacting the life story of the screen's greatest lover — Rudolph Valentino.
"I feel embarrassed," admitted Anthony Dexter.

He feels a little worried, too, wondering how middle-aged housewives and their teenage daughters will react to his portrayal of the all-time film sheik.
The film, "Valentino," produced by Edward Small for Columbia Pictures, has been a 12-year project. The studio says Dexter, a 31-year-old stage actor, got the role over 75,000 candidates.

Dexter, the son, grandson, great-grandson and nephew of clergymen, was born in Nebraska and christened Walter Reinhold Alfred Frederick Fleischmann. Figuring that was too much for the average theater marquee, he changed his name to Walter Craig. His producer changed it again to Anthony Dexter after seeing him for the Valentino part in 1947.

In the years since then Dexter spent his time studying Valentino, learning tango dancing, bull whip cracking, fencing, "watching polo and football games and watching for the writers to finish a script."

"This also gave him plenty of time to grow an elegant pair of sideburns. The sideburns, long enough to cover his upper molars, still make him uneasy. People stare at them, just as they would if a 1927 flapper pranced by them."
"Playing the role of a great lover — you've got three strikes against you before you start," said Dexter, a bit morosely. "I am not more like Valentino than you are."

I thought this was rather gracious of him, as I am more often compared to the late Lon Chaney, Sr.

Actually Dexter bears quite a resemblance to Valentino.
"I'm about an inch taller than he was and weight ten pounds more," he admitted. "But he had black hair and was darker; he had an olive complexion. Also he was a good horseman. I used to do a little calf riding out of clothes back in the Middle West, but I wouldn't know what to do with an eastern saddle."

Wheeler Band Progressing

By LOUISE COFFMAN
WHEELER — (Special) — In the past sixteen months, Wheeler's Mustang Band has progressed from a hopeful dream to an alert forty-piece band. The band organized in January, 1950 under the direction of Patrick Boddy without uniforms, without instruments, and practically without musicians. Boddy has molded a band and an active Band Boosters organization has secured the needed uniforms, music, and instruments. In addition to the band, the school now boasts a 130-piece Tonette Band, a twirling corps, a large accordion ensemble and other musical groups from each instrument section of the band. Two annual awards have been set up for the outstanding bandman of each year. Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holt, Jr., are presenting the A. J. Holt Scholarship Award for 1951 and the Kiwanis Club has set aside the "Wheeler Band members shown are Dale Wofford, Burley Owen, Alvin Arganbright, Nick Hibbits, Tiley Green, Leveta Moore, Judy Underwood, Wainette Burgess, Barbara Mitchell, Billie Owen, Donna Greenhouse, Mary Black, Georgia Herd, Garth Nash, Bobby

Stewart Cast In Clown Role

By BOB THOMAS — James Stewart plays a man who has committed some clouded crime in his past. He hides from the law by taking a job as a clown in the circus. Don't get me wrong. Stewart isn't as invisible as the king-size rabbit. He's playing a clown in his new film, and he'll appear in heavy makeup throughout the story. Not once will you see his real face.

The film is the new C. B. DeMille epic, "The Greatest Show on Earth." Stewart plays a man who has committed some clouded crime in his past. He hides from the law by taking a job as a clown in the circus. Don't get me wrong. Stewart isn't as invisible as the king-size rabbit. He's playing a clown in his new film, and he'll appear in heavy makeup throughout the story. Not once will you see his real face.

Dorothy Lamour, Charlton Heston, etc. I found Stewart happily hiding behind his grimacing clown's makeup.

"This is quite a part," Stewart drawled. "If you sneeze, you're liable to miss me." He works a mere 15 days out of the 100-day shooting schedule.

I asked him why he is doing the role.

"Well, it's a good part, even if it is short," he replied. "And I've always wanted to work for this man (DeMille). When he first announced he was going to make this picture a couple of years ago, I called him up. I told him that I wanted to be in it, no matter what the part was. I guess he remembered, because when he finished the script, he told me about the role. I guess he was afraid I wouldn't take it, because the part was small. But I jumped at the chance."

FLIER IDENTIFIED — JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — (AP) — The Navy has identified a flier who died a few minutes after his plane crashed at sea Monday. He was Chief Aviation Machinist Mate Donald E. Thompson, 31. His home was Dallas.

Wm. Penn Gets Modern Headgear

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — There's a "feather" in the hat that crowns the status of William Penn atop Philadelphia's City Hall. It's the antenna of one of two newly-installed radio stations that enables the city's fire department to maintain two-way communication with crews manning firefighting apparatus.

Radio Corporation of America designed and built the two 250-nation's third largest city with round-the-clock protection against disasters of any kind. The system, costing $87,000, is said to be the most modern in the U. S. The two radio stations, within a few miles of each other, can be operated from either location. They are in constant contact with 180 30-watt transmitter-receiver units installed on fire engines, pumps and other motorized equipment.

WARDS BIGGEST SALE OF THE YEAR STARTS TODAY, ENDS APRIL 28

Insurance Action Must Come Quickly

By JAMES MARLOW — Here are points for veterans of World Wars I and II to keep in mind about government insurance. And some of them had better act fast.

Last week Congress passed a bill making changes in what veterans could do about such insurance. Those changes go into effect as soon as President Truman signs this bill into law.

(It's not certain he'll sign it. But he's expected to, no later than April 28. So if what is explained here affects you, it will be smart to assume the bill will become law and act quickly, before April 28.)

In both world wars servicemen could, although they didn't have to, buy government insurance of two general kinds: term and permanent. Since they didn't have to buy it, many never did. But ever since they got out of service, because they were veterans, they have been free to buy it any time they wished to. And they still can do so, but only until the President signs the bill into law.

Thereafter, any veteran who never had bought any government insurance never will be able to buy any. If you've never bought any, but have been thinking of doing so, you can still buy it, provided—

You file with your nearest Veterans Administration office an application for government inurance before the bill becomes law.

Many veterans bought the insurance while in service. But many dropped it after getting out. For instance, only about 4,000,000 veterans of World War II still have the insurance they bought in the service.

Any veteran who ever had the insurance but dropped it can still reinstate it after the law goes into effect, provided—the policy he had was of the permanent kind, such as straight life or endowment.

To say it another way: if you ever had a permanent policy but dropped it, you can reinstate it any time you wish, even after the new law goes into effect. But the new law will make a difference for a veteran who had the term insurance. And this is why:

Government term insurance runs for a certain period of years. Until now a veteran who had term insurance but let it lapse—that is, dropped it—could at any time in the future, even years afterwards, renew it if he wished.

The new law makes a change in this. Under the new law a veteran will not be able to reinstate his lapsed term insurance unless he does so within the specified period life of his policy.

For example: Jones bought term insurance in 1948. Its life ends in 1958. Jones let it lapse in 1949. If he doesn't reinstate it before its expiration date in 1958, he'll never—under the new law—be able to get government term insurance again.

Take Smith, he bought term insurance in 1942. Its specified period ended in 1950. So the life of his policy has ended. If he wants to buy any more government term insurance, he must do so within the few days he has left before President Truman signs the new bill into law.

What about a veteran who has term insurance but wants to switch it to the permanent kind? Will the new law change anything for him? No. He can change it to permanent any time, so long as he had a term policy at the time he made the switch.

Blind Help Each Other

NEW YORK — (AP) — "Let the blind lead the blind." That is the motto of an organization made up entirely of blind people including the board of directors, officers, and members. It's called, "The Associated Blind, Inc."

The organization was founded 34 years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Irving Sells, both blind, who were annoyed by blind groups which had sighted people as leaders. They believed that sighted people couldn't fully appreciate the problems of the blind and started their own organization.

At the headquarters of the organization a shop sells items made by blind people all over the world. The senders are paid upon acceptance of the article.

Lefors High School Students To Enter Interscholastic League Competition

LEFORS — (Special) — The mixed chorus of the Lefors High School sang at the interscholastic league contests at West Texas State College, Canyon, last Friday. The chorus was under the direction of Mrs. Harold Turnbo. It has been organized only three weeks, and rated a IV in both the concert and sight reading divisions.

The group was entered in Class B and sang three numbers, "A Legend" which was sung a cappella, "Now Thank We all Our God," and "Thanks Be to God." Geraldine Dunn accompanied the chorus for the last two numbers. Lefors had two groups entered in the ensemble division. ## Complete Costume Offers Day-into-Nighttime Wear

By GAIL DUGAS
NEA Staff Writer
NEW YORK — (NEA) — The complete costume appears for all hours of the day in the new collections of St. Louis designers. These designers are always conscious of trends in youthful fashions. They watch St. Louis camps carefully and from what they see, the youthful St. Louis fashion look is born.

There are coordinated separates in both casual and party wear. The emphasis in this new group of separates is on wearability rather than novelty.

St. Louis designers, highly successful in their handling in cotton, use delicate fabrics — voile, tissue gingham, eyelet batiste, organdy and tissue chambray — with great skill.

A dance frock, for instance, is done in embroidered organdy, cut with full skirt and low bodice. A cover-up bolero in cotton satin is added, eliminating necessity for an evening wrap.

The Sheer dresses with full skirts appear below slim, bare-arm bodices. Sometimes a mask of sheer organdy in jacket shape lends an airy look to a stright sheath. The complete costume (left) is done by Paula Brooks in cotton satin pique and velveteen. The short dress has a full skirt, a nipped-in bodice and wide, tapered shoulder straps of the velvet to convert it for the late-in-the-day wear. Velveteen trims the revers and cuffs of the jacket.

Another example of the complete costume (right) is found in a Daryl design. This is the checked gingham sheath with an overdress of sheer white organdy. The dress is wearable with jackets and dusters. The organdy overdress is collared and belted out in the gingham of the sheath.

BEAUTY AFTER FORTY
... good for Success when it comes your way! Keep your goal in sight. Never give up if you have an idea in which you believe! After Forty we MUST be successful at whatever we start. Youth has time to do something else but we haven't!

Thelma Ritter has just become a Paramount star. She was prepared to receive this new success. She had kept on working toward it.

And, by the way, you read in this column the first interview with her after she went into the movies. I gave her story to you as a Career Aiter Forty and we wish her well.

I am always thrilled by the success of mature women in whatever field they work. If you are ready you can grasp any success that comes your way.

I know a woman who after she reached Forty, had an idea for a different kind of book. She believed in it wholeheartedly but there was no interest in her plans and her idea. She had to do other things but she never gave up her original idea. Suddenly she found the right outlet and — there it was! Soon a real success. She was prepared for all that came from her original idea!

Don't let people discourage you. Don't believe that your ideas aren't big and important just because others can't appreciate them. Smile and accept it because you may be you will have to lay aside your dreams and do other things that are nearest in order to make a living. But HOLD ON to your original plans and ideas. If you believe in yourself and in what you want to do, you CAN make your mature years full of new interests and new success. People, of course, will flock to you when things go your way. Smile and accept it because you can, definitely, if you are prepared for all that success. Just continue to work hard and make your dreams and do other things that are nearest in order to make a living. But HOLD ON to your original plans and ideas. If you believe in yourself and in what you want to do, you CAN make your mature years full of new interests and new success.

FISH AND VEGETABLE SALAD is a real eye-catcher. Salads Go With Spring Weather

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Staff Writer
Spring calls for dishes that have sparkle and tang, that look fresh, cool, crisp, to spark the tired end-of-winter appetite. A fish and vegetable salad, garnished with green pepper slices, tomatoes and olives, served on a bed of crisp lettuce catches the eye.

Fish and Vegetable Salad (Serves 6)
Fish Layer: One-half pound white fish, cooked, cooled, flake. Fish mold rinsed with cold water, set in refrigerator.

Vegetable Layer: One tablespoon unflavored gelatin, 1-4 cup cold water, 1-4 cup boiling water, 1 bullion cube, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon chili sauce, 1-2 cups club soda well chilled, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 2-3 cup shredded carrot and celery.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water, add to gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add onion, chili sauce, cool. Slowly pour in chilled carbonated water. Add parsley, carrot and celery. Pour onto set fish layer and return to refrigerator to set firmly.

For a party luncheon, serve with hot crisp rolls, chilled soft drinks. Keep them iced until just before serving. Their tangy carbonation is better that way.

Egg Aspic (Serves 4)
Three hard-cooked eggs, 1-2 cup cooked peas and carrots, 1 tablespoon gelatin (1 envelope), 2 tablespoons cold water, 2 bouillon cubes, 1 cup boiling water.

Slice eggs. Arrange in bottom of 6-inch, buttered pie pan and garnish with carrots and peas. Fill with layers of sliced egg. Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve bouillon cubes with gelatin in boiling water. Pour over eggs and chill in refrigerator until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Shadow Stick For Eyelids
By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Writer
Blotchy eye shadow jobs, in which the color lands everywhere but the place you intend, can now be shoved into the past, thanks to a new form of eye make-up.

This shadow is packaged in a case resembling that of a lipstick, and it can be swirled out in the same way when you're ready to use it.

Because the color can be drawn on with quick, easily-guided lines, you can be certain of achieving the effect you wish despite inept fingers.

A light stroke leaves a smooth, even deposit of the shadow, so you guide the tip, thus eliminating the unevenness of distribution that sometimes results from the old dip-and-rub method.

Begin by delicately outlining your lids, just above your lashes, penciling from the inner corner of your eyes outward to just beyond the outer tip.

Then, with a fingertip, blend the color upward and outward, shading from dark to light. To leave your lashes apparent, depth, leave a dark rim along their base. Then smooth the color in progressively lighter tones until it vanishes into nothingness just below your eyebrows.

The result is a creamy, slightly lustrous make-up that is almost subtle enough to pass for nature's handiwork.

ASIA HAS ITS SAY ON MACARTHUR'S OUSTER — Asiatic opinion of the firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur was sharply divided as the former supreme commander of U.N. forces in the Far East returned home to present his case to the American people. The Newsmap above gives the views of major Asiatic countries as reported by correspondents. One of the major points of issue between MacArthur and Truman is the general's insistence that Asia deserves priority over Europe as the foremost battleground against Russian aggression.

Openings For Federal Jobs Are Reported

Federal office jobs are now easier to get at many centers throughout Texas, says Paul H. Figg, director of the Fourteenth U. S. Civil Service Region. He listed the following office positions, as those in which vacancies exist now and occur most frequently: Typist, stenographer, clerk, tabulating equipment operator, including card punch operator. Examination processes have been speeded up and those who obtain eligible ratings are given more rapid consideration. Figg said. He pointed out that as the rearmament program is accelerated there will be an increasing demand for this type of employee. Persons interested in any of the office positions listed should obtain a copy of the examination announcement together with application forms from any first- or second-class post office and submit them to the Fourteenth U. S. Civil Service Region, 210 South Harwood, Dallas, Texas.

Companies retaining the ratings are Sunshine Dairy Foods, Plains Creamery and Borden's Creamery. The United States Public Health Service Milk Ordinance sets up the standards which must be met by these distributors. Read The News Classified Ads.

What Keeps Glass Of Water Upright?

Here's a brain teaser for you — unless you are an airplane pilot. The picture shows a plane making a sharp 30-degree banking turn. Angled horizon shows this. Box at right, with arms projecting, is a new electronic autopilot, developed for the Navy by Minneapolis-Honeywell aeronautical engineers. On one of the autopilot's arms is balanced a glass half full of water. Question: When plane banks sharply, why doesn't the glass fall over? Even if the glass manages to stay put, why isn't surface of the water tilted? If you're skeptical, you're in good company. When Defense Department security officers reviewed a story of the upright glass of water, they didn't believe it. So they were taken up in this plane and the "miracle" was photographed to prove the point. If you can't figure it out, the answer is below.

Here's Official Explanation:

The glass remains upright and the water surface remains horizontal because the banking turn is "completely co-ordinated." This means that all the gravitational factors that affect the flight of the plane, such as movement up or down and the sidewise pitch and roll, are immediately compensated for by the new electronic autopilot. The gadget automatically keeps all these changeable factors in constant, inter-relating balance. The effect is that of level flight, which is why the water doesn't spill. It is impossible for a human pilot to make the compensations perfectly and simultaneously. He may compensate too much or not enough or not quickly enough. So several factors are out of balance and in a sharp banking turn this causes the plane to slip or skid or lose some altitude, making a jerky maneuver. Incidentally the autopilot does not replace the human pilot. It merely simplifies his work by enabling him to make the proper compensations by twisting a few of the coefficient knobs on the autopilot.

U.S. Putting Newest Subs In Korea Waters — 1 In Combat

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The U.S. has put some of its newest snorkel submarines into Korean waters and at least one evidently has been in combat.

The Navy has acknowledged only that undersea boats were sent to the area almost as soon as the war started. It has said nothing about types or how the submarines were being used.

This reticence has two primary causes: the normal secrecy surrounding any work of the traditionally "silent service"; and the quiet but careful watch needed for the appearance of Russian surface or undersea craft in Korean conflict. Disclosure that guppy snorkel subs are operating in the Far East arose out of publication of a picture in the official Navy service magazine "All Hands." The current edition of the magazine contains a photograph of the crew of the Pickrel receiving the "Submarine Combat insignia" in a Pearl Harbor ceremony. The brief caption states it is for "a successful war patrol they completed in Korean waters."

In answer to a question, a Navy spokesman said that under the provisions for such an award, a successful war patrol "is one in which at least one enemy vessel is sunk" or in which another "operation of comparable significance is successfully accomplished." The spokesman said he could say nothing about the Pickrel's patrol.

However, it was apparent that if she was in an action, the submarine must have used her torpedoes against some hostile craft of more than small size. A guppy submarine has no deck gun such as was used in World War II for shelling small surface ships. Her only weapon is the torpedo and torpedoes are reserved for larger and more profitable targets.

The Pickrel was in the new year ago when she made a non-stop, underwater 5,200 mile voyage from Hong Kong to Pearl Harbor. In the 505 hours needed for the trip the "Pickrel" was operated entirely on the snorkel "breather tube" which enables submarines to remain below the surface and still use their powerful diesel engines.

The Pickrel's present skipper is Lt. Cmdr. Henry B. Switzer, Pittsburgh, Pa. The Pickrel went into service on April 4, 1949.

Submarines have three major missions, all appropriate to the Korean war:

- 1. Sinking enemy ships; 2. Reconnaissance for hostile ships, aircraft or submarines; 3. Landing of raiding or scouting parties on hostile shores, usually at night.

At no time have the North Korean Communist had either a cargo or combat fleet of more than insignificant proportions and much of this has been disposed of in the 10 months of fighting. Reconnaissance undoubtedly is an important function of American submarines operating in the Far East.

Any sudden move of Russia to aid her North Korean and Chinese satellites by striking at UN supply lines would need to be spotted promptly.

Some estimates place the number of Russian submarines in the Soviet Far East fleet at about 70 or 80, a few of them the snorkel type.

The Russian surface fleet includes a collection of several hundred miscellaneous craft, but with some cruisers and destroyers of modern design.

Committee Tours Site Possibilities

DALLAS — (AP) — A four-man site-selection committee has taken a last look at three possible locations in Texas for the new Air Force academy.

Yesterday the committee, headed by General Carl (Toohay) Spaatz, inspected a proposed 9,000-acre site near Grapevine Lake, northwest of here, then left for a look at Perrin field, near Denton and Sherman. Monday the committee toured Randolph Air Force Base at San Antonio.

The three proposed Texas sites are among seven sites from which the committee will recommend one as the location for the academy.

Spaatz said yesterday the recommendation possibly would be made to a congressional committee within two months.

Photographers Get Apology Of Air Force

SAN FRANCISCO — (AP) — Brig. Gen. Sory Smith, director of Air Force Public Relations, yesterday issued this official apology for the handling of press photographers covering MacArthur's arrival in Honolulu Monday:

"The Air Force apologizes sincerely for its part in the reported mistreatment by Air Force Police of photographers in connection with General MacArthur's arrival at Honolulu. "We are retracing the facts of the incidents. The importance of the most effective operations of the press are thoroughly understood and believed in by the Air Force."

Do You Really Want To Take Off That Ugly Fat?

Don't say it's your thyroid when reaching for the box of chocolates. Possibly one hairy person in 100 has some glandular disturbance and that is truly a case for the physician. Never take any treatment for a gland condition without your doctor's advice. But for the other 99 per cent who are trying to fight the "battle of the bulge," common sense is the watchword. Don't overeat, but don't go hungry, either. Furthermore, it just doesn't make sense to go on a strenuous diet—take off weight and then quickly put it back on, again when the diet period is over. For it is obvious that one cannot continue a starvation diet over a protracted period. Within the last year or so several diet and vitamin "plans" have appeared in the market, which means cut down drastically on the food intake and fortify with vitamins. But as mentioned above, you can't keep this up very

Telegrams Are Made To Order

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — It's just like Christmas at the Western Union. You can call up and send greetings to General MacArthur by number.

"The business is far short of Christmas, the company says, but it's enough to warrant drawing up samples."

"A lot of people don't know quite what they want to say when they call up," an official explained. "If they don't like ours: they write their own."

Among the samples: "Welcome home. You have been a great military leader."

"The world will remember you as a great military leader. We are with you."

There aren't as many wires as the deluge to President Truman and Congress when MacArthur's firing was announced, the official said, adding:

"Naturally we're neutral in this matter. But we want to be helpful."

Commie Film Is Unveiled

HOLLYWOOD — (AP) — Oscar winner Leo McCarey today has taken the wraps off his new film, which he says will aim at the heart of communism in the U. S.

Until now, McCarey has been silent about his new film, "My Son John," since he was fearful that other producers might steal the idea. Now that the film is well under way, he revealed to me something of its nature.

"The idea came to me when I was in the middle of a show business story, 'Born In A Trunk,'" said the creator of "Going My Way." "The new story was so imperative that I dropped everything else to get to it."

"After the idea came to me, I knew that I had to have Helen Hayes for it. So I hurried East to tell her about it. Fortunately, I sold her on it. Then I had to come back and get the script into shape."

"This is a story about communism in America. But a picture that is merely against communism does not do the job. You have to be positive about the thing. You have to show not only that communism is bad, but that the American way of life is better."

"I have seen all the other anti-Communist pictures made in Hollywood. I don't want to knock the people who made them, but to me the pictures were not art. They are merely remakes of the wartime films, with Communists as the villains instead of the Nazis."

"In my picture there will be no scenes of the Communist Party. There will be no Russians with heavy mustaches and thick accents, saying, 'Comrade, you will meet me on the corner at nine o'clock; we will stop and have a drink of vodka before the meeting.'"

Measuring Monkey For Suit Difficult

SEATTLE — (AP) — Jack Mallagan undertook to measure a monkey for a sailor suit.

Before he was through, a crowd of 50-25 of them jammed into his small store — was watching the resulting match.

Mallagan got the assignment because sponsors wanted to use his pet Japanese monkey, Moe, as a mascot in a nautical civic event.

Jack knew it had been done because organ grinder monkeys wore suits. But, he said, "it's the first time I ever tried it." And he figures he did "not too badly."

With a little struggle, he found that the girth of the arm was 5 inches. Around the shoulders — 14 inches, maybe. Neckline—10 inches, he hopes.

But the hip measurements almost threw him.

"You ought to try to measure a monkey's bottom," said Jack. "Moe," he said, "did the hula in four different directions. Jack finally marked it down as 12 inches."

He hopes the sailor suit fits.

Senate Debates Moving Workers

WASHINGTON — (AP) — A program designed to move 45,000 government workers out of Washington as a security measure came up for Senate debate today.

The so-called dispersal and decentralization bill would move 20,000 employees out into the capital's suburbs and at least 25,000 more to permanent offices in other cities. The idea is to make Washington a less attractive target.

MEMO TO ADVERTISERS

Questions and Answers about Newspaper Advertising

Q. Do you know of any measure for the value of newspaper circulation to an advertiser such as the standards that a business man uses in buying merchandise?

A. Yes. In the well-known standards that have been approved and adopted by advertisers—namely A.B.C. standards.

Q. What is A. B. C.?

A. A.B.C. stands for Audit Bureau of Circulations, a cooperative association of 3300 advertisers, advertising agencies and publishers in the United States and Canada.

Q. What is the Bureau's work?

A. To audit the circulation of newspapers and periodicals so that advertisers can buy space on the basis of definite standards and verified facts and figures.

Q. How does A. B. C. accomplish this?

A. The Bureau has a large staff of experienced auditors. They visit the publisher members periodically and make audits of their circulation records. This information is then published in A.B.C. reports for the use and protection of advertisers.

Q. What do these reports show?

A. A.B.C. reports tell how much circulation a newspaper has, where this circulation is, how it was obtained, how much people paid for it, and many other verified facts that advertisers should know when they buy advertising.

Q. Are all publications eligible for A. B. C. membership?

A. No. Only those with paid circulation. This is important to advertisers because it is the best proof of interest and purchasing power on the part of the readers.

Q. Is this newspaper a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations?

A. Yes. We are proud of our circulation and we want our advertisers to know just what they get for their money when they advertise in our columns. The audited information in our A.B.C. report gives them the complete facts.

Aces, Hawks Score 36 Runs In Gulf Game

(By The Associated Press) The Gulf Coast League was a mixture of all that is good and bad last night as two games were decided by close scores, one by a football score and one was postponed because of a heavy fog that obscured the outfield fences. The Corpus Christi Aces and the Port Arthur Seahawks tied up in a marathon that had little semblance to a base ball game. There were a total of 47 hits, 36 by the Aces and 22 by the Hawks, and 36 runs, the Aces winning by a 20-16 count. In other games Brownsville edged Texas City, 4-2; Harlingen beat Laredo for the second time, this one by a 5-2 score, and Lake Charles at Galveston, was postponed because of fog. The schedule remains unchanged tonight with Port Arthur at Corpus Christi, Lake Charles at Galveston, Laredo at Harlingen and Texas City at Brownsville. Home runs by Joe Sauch and Stan Goletz gave Brownsville a 4-2 victory over Texas City for the second straight victory over the Texans. Ramon Saldago had a no-hitter going for Texas City for five innings but couldn't hold the pace. Earl Caldwell, former major leaguer, struck out two men with the bases loaded in the top of the ninth inning to save the victory for Harlingen over Laredo. He whiffed pinch-hitter Billy Popela and first baseman Bob Pardue after starting pitcher Roger Powell had run into trouble with one away in the last frame. Corpus Christi jumped on starting pitcher Sam Gibson for seven runs and ten hits in the first three innings to set the pattern for the high scoring fracas and needed every one of them before they were finished. There were 11 errors in the contest in addition to 47 hits. Laredo 600 100 001-2 8 3 Harlingen 604 600 01x-5 7 2 Port Arthur 600 350 107-16 22 3 Corpus C. 622 542 20x-20 25 8 Galveston, W. # Harvesters Drop 13-9 Loop Tilt To Bulldogs At Borger

The Pampa Harvesters were sent to the cellar Wednesday afternoon in the North Half of District 1-AA, when the Borger Bulldogs handed the Pampans a 13-9 setback at Gasser Park. It was Pampa's second conference loss in two starts. Borger took over second place in the three-team league. The Bulldogs have a 1-1 loop record, and the Amarillo Sandies lead with a 2-0 mark.

Pampa's fielding and hitting improved, but pitching took a beating from Bulldog hitters. The Bulldogs collected 13 base knocks, with Charles Tyras lowering home run over the left field barrier the climax. Tyras sent one of Joe Tynes' offerings over the fence but the plate umpire called it foul. The bearded Bulldog then repeated the performance with the next pitch, and this time it was in fair territory. Starter Wayne Harden was charged with the loss. He gave up 10 runs and 11 hits in four innings. Tynes took over in the fifth and he allowed three runs and two hits. A doubleplay in the top of the seventh erased a Pampa threat of knotting the game. The Harvesters pushed across four runs and blasted out five hits before the twin killing ended the game. Pampa got one run in the second inning when Buck Smith drove a triple to the centerfield wall. He scored on Ed Dudley's up 10 runs and 11 hits in four innings. Borger took over second place in the three-team league. # Oilers Squeeze Gold Sox In Exhibition Contest, 4-3

Established Golf Stars Tamed In North-South Meet
PINEHURST, N.C.—(AP)—Just about everything that could happen has already been written into the books on the 31st North and South Amateur Golf Tournament. Yesterday's double-barreled round produced the most sustained sniping at established stars in the event's history. Whatever happens from here in will be tame by contrast. Second and third round matches set up quarter-final pairings, over 18 holes, like this:
Upper bracket:
Hobart Manley, Savannah, Ga., vs. Dr. W. J. Panowaki, Towson, Md.; Jack Coyle, Springfield, Ill., vs. Richard D. Chapman, Pinehurst, N.C.
Lower bracket:
Billy Joe Patton, Morganton, N.C., vs. H. H. Harverick, Jr., Lancaster, Pa.; Harvey Ward, Jr., Southern Pines, N.C., vs. William Dagnanite) Goodloe, Jr., Valdosta, Ga.
Winners will meet in 36-hole semifinals tomorrow, with the championship match, also 36 holes, Saturday.
Come from competition were three members of the Walker Cup team Uncle Sam is sending over to England to meet the British in mid-May. Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Bill Campbell, Huntington, W.Va., and Jimmy McHale, Overbrook, Pa., were ousted yesterday, with only McHale getting as far as the third round.
Stranahan led a 1-up match to Joseph McBride, Paterson, N.J., who had to play off at 80 Tuesday morning to get into the tournament. McBride, a former Amateur champion, lost to a former champion, profited by three strokes that dotted Stranahan's 77 card. Campbell, defending champion, lost 4 and 2 to Jack Coyle, Springfield, Ill., in the morning. Coyle, low amateur in four open tournaments this winter, then ousted Bill Markham, East Hampton, Conn., in a 23-hole third round duel.
That was one of three marathons. The granddaddy of them all came in the second round when Ray Palmer, Wyandotte, Mich., went 10 extra holes to beat Bill Mawhinney, Canadian amateur king from Vancouver. Palmer won 18 to square the match and they halved the next nine holes before Palmer's par five ended it on No. 10. In the afternoon Palmer went up against Chapman and lost 4 and 3 decision. Chapman, playing some of his best golf in quest of his first North-South title, surprised Coyle, low amateur in four open tournaments this winter, then ousted Bill Markham, East Hampton, Conn., in a 23-hole third round duel.

Hyde, Dial, Matthews Are Touched For Seven Bingles
The Oilers notched their fifth straight exhibition victory against West Texas-New Mexico League competition Wednesday night in the local park. Pampa squeaked past the Amarillo Gold Sox, 4-3, in a well played tilt. Each team collected seven hits, but Pampa pitchers were stingy with base knocks with men on bases.
Mack Hyde started for the Oilers and he blanked the Gold Sox for three innings. He allowed one single in retiring nine Amarillo batters. Carrol "Red" Dial worked the next three frames. He was touched for one hit and a double run. The last three innings was worked by George Washington Matthews, and the southpaw was solved for hits and one and one run.
Pampa got to starter Doc Fletcher for a run in the third inning, with the aid of two bingles. Hyde put the Oilers out from error, and a triple off the left-centerfield wall. He was pushed across the plate when Francis Rice rifled a double to rightfield.
The Oilers got the rest of their runs in the fifth frame. Nelson Davis and Dial were given free tickets to first base Rice forced Dial at second, and Davis went to third on the attempted double play.
Amarillo failed at its second double play try, and Davis scored on the play. Gil Castillo forced Rice at second. Luis Suarez kept the rally alive with a single to right. Deck Woldt hit one of Fletcher's pitches back toward the box and the ball hit the hurler's foot for a single.
He picked up the ball and threw wild to first and Suarez scored on the error, and Castillo had already scored on Woldt's single.
The Sox got one hit and one run in the fourth.
Chuck Howard walked to first. Harper followed with a single and Howard raced around to third base. The Sox third sacker scored when Pampa failed to work a double play.
Amarillo scored its second run off Dial without a hit. The Gold Sox used a walk, bunt, error and a fielder's choice to plate the run.
Matthews gave up the third Amarillo marker. The Gold Sox collected three hits in the third to score its final run. Matthew left two runners stranded that frame, and he struck out two batters in the ninth and left two base runners stranded. Murray lined out to Castillo at short to end the game.

Indians Check Tigers, 4-2; Dodgers Edge Phillies, 4-3

Early Wynn and Bob Lemon sound warning that Cleveland will be a tough nut to crack in the American League. Wynn's four-hitter in a 10-inning battle at Detroit yesterday, following Lemon's gaudy two-hit win opening day, emphasize the class of the Indians pitching staff. And Bobby Feller hasn't worked yet.

total of only 29,661, with 15,148 of them at the Yankee Stadium. Jim Konstanty, key to the Phillies repeat pennant hopes, failed his first test at Brooklyn. Making his first real appearance of 1951 with one on and nobody out in the ninth, Konstanty let the game wriggle away on Duke Scider's tying triple and Jackie Robinson's winning single, 4-3.

With the score tied at 2-2 in the ninth, Willie Jones' second homer of the day had given the Phils the edge over Prescher Roe. Jones' two homers and one by Dick Sisler provided all the Phil runs.

Leo Durocher's pennant timetable was disrupted at Boston when Sam Jethroe homered with two on in the ninth for a 6-3 win over his New York Giants. Jim Wilson was the winner.

The loss went to Al Gettel, third of four Giant pitchers. As the western teams in the National were not scheduled, the even split of the east in the first two days left Pittsburgh out front with a 2-0 record.

Golf Association Holds Meeting
The Ladies Golf Association held its weekly meeting at the Country Club Wednesday afternoon. After the business meeting, the ladies shot nine holes of golf.

Beth Heiskell and Ruth Kirkpatrick each won a golf ball in "blind bogey." Heiskell took a four on number five for low score. Kirkpatrick took a 12 for a winning double to score the deciding run. Right-hander Al Lawrence pitched for the Twins and gave up 10 hits.

A six-run sixth inning and near perfect relief pitching by Walt Reibling were the highlights of Wichita Falls' triumph over the Gainesville Owls. Jodie Beller caught a grand-slam home run for the losers in the fourth inning to stake them to a temporary lead.

The Austin Pioneers combed Temple pitching for 18 hits to even the series at one game each. They jumped on three Eagle hurlers for their output and were never behind. Stumpy Jones, cunning little left-hander, went the distance for Austin and gave up eleven hits but coasted in behind the big lead.

The Waco Pirates were held hitless for six innings by Lefty Charles Davis but broke loose in the late stages to turn in a victory. Davis had a no-hitter until one was swatted by a batter who was driven to the showers in the eighth frame.

Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
COLUMBUS, O., (AP)—Minor league baseball is about to revive its wartime "concession" which will permit ball players to work at part time jobs in other fields during the season. Since baseball men are eternal optimists, this comes as a slight surprise. But President George M. Trautman of the National Association points out there are seven fewer leagues scheduled to operate this year than last and he wouldn't be surprised to see a few more fold up before the season ends. Rookies, he says, are hard to get. They're already relaxing the rookie rules to permit old-timers to stay, and these older men can't always get along on the kind of dough they're paid in the lower minors. Trautman's records list 1,015 of last year's minor leaguers now playing for Uncle Sam, and the Class D, C, and B circuits show the top figures. Still there are 50 leagues with 372 clubs in operation and that calls for a lot of manpower.

The idea of part-time work seems so logical that you wonder why it isn't followed even in normal times. But the bush-haired boss of the bush leagues explains: "It's our time profession; that a boy shouldn't work at or think about anything else. They have to be all professionals and in the lower minors, a boy is just serving his apprenticeship. I don't think he is a real professional until he reaches Class 'A.'"

Another thing that is causing the minors much concern is the likelihood that the "amusement dollar" won't be so easy to get — what with higher living costs, higher taxes and ceilings on wages. . . . Some time ago, Clark Griffith, who has been around baseball about as long as anyone, warned club owners they can expect one bad year in ten — and 1951 may be it. . . . And nobody so far has devised a drive-in ball park to meet one kind of comp run. . . . Bob Felt chimed in at this point with a report of the next-best thing. . . . One ball park in West Texas, he said, will have a heated grand stand so the fans can be comfortable even in bad weather. . . . Trautman chuckled at that one. "It was in that part of the country," he said, "where one club owner told me he had to have a full-over every couple of weeks to push away the bugs. So the fans could see the signs on the fences. The card-storms piled it up too high."

Another of Fed's tales explains some minor club's keep operating in the face of heavy losses. . . . It was at a banquet somewhere in Wisconsin where the club president also is a prominent surgeon. . . . During the conversation, the doctor chimed cheerfully: "We only lost $4,000 last season — and I don't know where we could have spent the money better."

Jodie Beller Hits Grand Slam Home But Mates Lose

(By The Associated Press)
The second half of the Big State openers are scheduled for tonight with Austin, Sherman-Denison, Gainesville and Tyler playing before the home folks for the first time this season.

Last night Wichita Falls defeated Gainesville, 8-6, for the second time to grab the lead in their second outing. Austin blanked Temple, 12-6; Texarkana edged Sherman-Denison, 4-3, and Waco beat Tyler, 7-1.

Joe Szekely smashed a double against the leftfield wall in the last of the ninth inning with a mate aboard to drive across the line that gave Texarkana victory over the Twins. Johnny Herr went the distance for the Bears to stop Sherman-Denison with six hits, then rode home on the winning double to score the deciding run. Right-hander Al Lawrence pitched for the Twins and gave up 10 hits.

The Austin Pioneers combed Temple pitching for 18 hits to even the series at one game each. They jumped on three Eagle hurlers for their output and were never behind. Stumpy Jones, cunning little left-hander, went the distance for Austin and gave up eleven hits but coasted in behind the big lead.

The Waco Pirates were held hitless for six innings by Lefty Charles Davis but broke loose in the late stages to turn in a victory. Davis had a no-hitter until one was swatted by a batter who was driven to the showers in the eighth frame.

Missions Get Aid From Fog In Win Over Beaumont

(By The Associated Press)
The Tulsa Oilers will try again tonight to open their 1951 home, baseball season. . . . Six times they tried to go far and each time the weatherman has taken a hand.

Last night rain washed out the Oilers' game with the Fort Worth Cats. All other games got off to the boots although fog played a big part in one of them.

The San Antonio Missions got a big win over Beaumont, 11-7; Oklahoma City beat Dallas, 7-6, and Shreveport defeated Houston, 6-4.

The Missions pushed across five runs in the sixth inning after the fog had made it almost impossible to handle balls in the outfield. The big unending wind out at Beaumont lead and the home towners were never able to recover. San Antonio collected 10 hits and Beaumont was credited with eleven.

The Oklahoma City Indians took an early lead then fought off all attempts by the Dallas Eagles to catch up. The Eagles scored two runs in the eighth and two in the ninth but the tying run was nipped at the plate trying to score from first on a double in the ninth to snuff out the rally.

The Shreveport Sports chalked up a 6-4 victory over the Houston Astros and spoiled the Texas League debut of the fabulous Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell. Frank Benites was the big gun in the ten-hit Sport attack that shelled Mizell from the mound in the seventh inning. The Sport catcher had a home run and a single in three trips to drive in three runs.

The Colmet Comet finished a length behind A Lark but he was far from disgraced. The clocking of 1:09 4/5 for the six furlongs was only a fifth of a second off the track record. Pancho Supreme ran second in a photo finish.

Vandenberg: Man Who Shook The Tabernacle

In One Stroke, He Changed American Foreign Policies

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—On Jan. 10, 1945, Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan rose in the Senate to speak. What he said that day radically changed his own life and profoundly affected the course of American foreign affairs.

Until that hour he had been a voluble and vehement isolationist. With flowery, ponderous phrases, the then 50-year-old Republican had trumpeted that theme for some 30 years.

At one dramatic stroke, he swept it all away. He declared isolationism dead, said the oceans were no longer moats protecting America, urged the nation to plunge boldly into world affairs, and promised to support such a course.

The effect on this country and the world was electric. Vandenberg's 30-minute speech was beamed around the globe. Overnight he found himself a center of attention; praise was heaped on him by the press and politicians of both parties. President Roosevelt took 50 copies of the speech to Yalta with him.

The six years Vandenberg lived from that moment on were as distinct as if they'd been lived by another man. It was more than a turning point; it was a dividing line. People talked of the Old and the New Vandenberg.

The pre-1945 Vandenberg had been assailed often as pompous, arrogant, vacillating. He'd been ridiculed as a man who made talking virtually a way of life, who once gained distinction by NOT making a proposed 80,000 word speech. In his early Senate days he'd been dubbed "Buster Brown" and a "pouter pigeon."

No one scorned the New Vandenberg. When he rose to speak, he'd scurried through cloakrooms to pass the word, and senators filed in to listen. An alert went out to the press, and visitors swarmed into the galleries. Largely gone were the sonorous Shakespearean phrases. He dropped most of the four-syllable words he'd loved to fondle. His speeches became terse, direct, incisive.

Even his attire was affected. Once he'd been given to cutaway coats, striped pants, wing collars and black string ties. Now he began wearing conservative double-breasted suits and bowties.

He'd had fairly close calls at the polls in former times, but in 1946 he rolled up a 567,000-vote margin and captured all 68 Michigan counties.

But that wasn't the real measure of his new stature. Mr. Roosevelt made him a delegate to the UN conference at San Francisco in 1945, and thereafter Vandenberg took part in a number of UN sessions and key world peace parleys. By the testimony of other distinguished participants, he played a leading role in all these meetings.

His spectacular conversion to a world outlook, which one writer said "shook the tabernacle," led other isolationists to follow him. So he became the "architect of the bipartisan foreign policy."

With the personally persuasive Vandenberg at work, the skirts were greased for speedy adoption of the UN charter in the Senate. Thereafter he piled up a long list of triumphs, helping to cast into law the satellite peace treaties, the Truman Doctrine for Greece and Turkey, the Marshall Plan. He fostered successful resolutions that cleared the way for the North Atlantic Treaty and the Military Aid Program.

No one man did more than he to put these programs into a form acceptable to both Democrats and Republicans.

For his feats of leadership and political craftsmanship he was almost revered in America, but reviled in Moscow. Once the Soviet radio belated him for a steady 15 minutes. Said Vandenberg: "I believe only the Pope has been similarly distinguished."

Most amateur biographers of the senator ascribe his historic switch to two things: the putting away of political ambition after three unsuccessful bids for the presidency, and the deep shock he felt at the German V-1 and V-2 attacks on Britain during World War II.

He asked a colleague then: "How can there be insulation or immunity when Man can devise weapons like that?"

Even at the height of his late-career fame, Vandenberg never lost the ability to laugh at his own foibles, especially his long-windedness. Everyone agrees he was friendly, likable, personally magnetic. He had big, sparkling brown eyes set owl-like in a broad face capped by a high polished forehead. To conceal his baldness, he brushed a few strands of his gray hair across the great void. In summer he sported a plain straw sailor tilted forward at a rakish angle. His voice was low and gravelly.

To Vandenberg, being a senator was no accident. He planned it when he was 15, in fact, bore the nickname "senator" in high school.

He had a dozen years of hardship in his youth. His father, a Dutch harness maker in Grand Rapids, died bankrupt when Arthur was nine. He had to scrounge for a living. Fortunately he proved an ingenious lad. A year later he had two boys working for him and was making $15 a week on minor hauling jobs. Simultaneously he sold vegetables he'd grown, ushered in a theater, had a paper route, managed a lemonade and flower stand, and traded postage stamps.

Through high school, where he starred in oratory and led his class, he kept on at part-time jobs, dreaming meanwhile of great wealth which would end his insecurity. He almost wrecked his health trying to earn his way through law school, and gave it up.

Before that he'd done a stint as reporter for the Grand Rapids Herald (starting at $6 a week) and so he returned to that job. As city hall reporter he used to memorize the speeches of aldermen he liked. One was William Alden Smith, and when Smith ran for Congress, Vandenberg was his unofficial campaign manager.

Later, Smith went to the Senate and then he bought the Herald. One day he walked into the office, put his arm around young Arthur (22) and said: "My son, you are now the editor and publisher of this newspaper."

That was the real beginning for the startled Vandenberg. He built the paper up, made his voice a power to be reckoned with in Michigan Republican politics. He thundered isolationism from his editorial page, and drew attention from national GOP leaders. In 1928 his break came. An won election and was on his way. Twice he refused bids to incumbent Michigan senator died. Only the failure of his health in run for governor; his eye was on and Vandenberg was appointed 1940 brought a halt to his long, hard-working Senate career.

Pravda Asserts Mac Fired Because Of Incompetency

MOSCOW — (AP) — Pravda has asserted President Truman had dismissed General MacArthur because the former Far East commander had been unable to accomplish the invasion of China.

The Communist Party newspaper — in the first Russian comment on MacArthur's dismissal — said the general had been given the job not only of taking all of Korea, but also of invading Manchuria to attack the Chinese People's Republic.

The U. S. President, Pravda said, was trying to shift to MacArthur the responsibility for American failures in Korea.

The editorial occupied three columns on the front page of Pravda, under the headline "Clumsy Maneuvers of President Truman."

(President Truman said he had fired MacArthur because the general's public advocacy of an invasion of the Chinese mainland by troops of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist regime, contrary to U. S. government policy, threatened a third world war.)

"Precisely owing to his inability to effect these aggressive plans, the ill-starred MacArthur was removed from his post," Pravda said. "His inability to cope with the situation in Korea is the reason for the inglorious collapse of MacArthur's career."

The editorial demanded to know what the United States now proposes to offer as a peaceful settlement of the Korean conflict, it added that American policy in the Far East was unchanged by MacArthur's dismissal.

Surgical Practice Brings Term In Jail

ADEN — (AP) — An Aden barber recently for causing the death of a child by removing its uvula with a pair of hair-cutting scissors. The uvula is the pendulous fleshy lobe in the middle of posterior border of the soft palate. Cutting it out is a widespread practice in this British protectorate. It ranks with blood-letting and branding, to which many local inhabitants resort as a cure for children's ailments.

The operation is usually carried out by barbers who make a profitable sideline of it. A number of deaths have resulted from this practice in the last few years but it has been difficult to secure conviction, which would run counter to popular feeling.
