Lure Of Sucker Bait Sure To End Someday

It do beat all how some fellow can catch the same darn fish with the same darn bait year after year.

Take, for example, those expert "fishermen" in Washington,

Old man Pflueger never came within spittin' distance of putting out a lure that would catch the big ones and the little ones like the old New Deal Special.

There's nothing especially slick about the old lure. It's based on the principle that the human fish is a queer one who wants to believe the impossible can happen and the good fairies will leave a dime under the pitlow every time a Washington bureaucrat knocks out one of his

Hank Wallace, who left his brains in an lowa cornfield and took what was left to Washington, is the New Deal in the flesh; a man who lived on a pink cloud and told himself over-and over that up was down if you just wished for it hard enough.

Until a Brooklyn mystic took Henry over the coals in the wonderful Gooty Guru episode — an event that reduced the vice president of the United States to the role of a comic opera buffoon — Henry persisted in believing that you could grow plums on citrus trees if you just aot Congress to pass a law and the way to put pock on everybody's table was to kill all the little piggies.

It is the habit of New Dealers to disclaim Henry as if he were the village idiot and something that could happen to any family - God forbid! Which attitude is as phony as a tissue paper garb-

The Henry Wallace who dreamed he was the guru of the brave, new world — the guy who didn't know his britches from second base - he was the New Deal, in Any adult who thinks that a dime is more than a buck if you slice it into thinner pieces has got a gap in his head. Yet, that is precisely the fallacy behind collectivism in all its hideous forms. It goes like this:

"Listen, bird brain, do not addle your already empty head mulling the great problems of life. There exists in Washington a group of godlike men endowed by their Creator with enough brains for them and you both.

"The only thing you've got that we want is a little bit of freedom. You can trade it in, no money down (well, hardly any money down, and we will send you in a plain envelope a master plan, pair of handcuffs and all you can eat until you die.

"And then we will bury you."

This is not a new pitch.

It is as old as the first record of the first crook.

Hot dawa, Miranda, that's for me. Lead me to the dotted line before the man leaves town!

Sounds goofy, but that's what happens every day. Wealth is taken from one man; a healthy slug is deduced by the government for "processing" the deal; and the remainder is passed along to the next man in the line.

The total wealth decreases, of course, and there iseventually-less and less for all the participants in the iolly exchange. But remember the deal: The sucker has traded this nifty bargain for the one item essential to real wealth:

He's no longer free to produce as he wants to.

He's no longer free to set his own price. He's no longer free to exchange his wealth.

He's no longer free to indulge in free enterprise-The only system in the history of the world that has created wealth and prosperity. It doesn't figure that the fish are going to take the bait forever. Sooner or later they're going to blow the whistle on the fishermen. They're going to wise up. And one of these days, Washington won't be able to sell subsidies, tariffs, restrictions, OPS's, and all the other measures designed to restrict the economy of the nation and force it into a pattern for the convenient manipulation of men who know how to buy votes with the voters' own money.

Success Secrets By ELMER WHEELER

When Agnes McCarthy applied for a job as secretary to a famous radio commentator, she learned in advance that he budgeted his time more carefully than any housewife ever budgeted a husband's salary. Agnes knew the job would be ought by hundreds of capable girls equally attractive and competent.

How to make herself stand out? Agnes used a simple trick to make certain she would be noticed and remembered.

When she turned up for the interview she wore two wrist watches—one on each arm. Long after all the girls were tested for shorthand, typing, perconality and so on, the commen lator remembered the girl who wore two wrist watches. She got the job because she renembered to dramatize the thing which was most important in the commentator's life . . . TIME.

So remember, if you are trying make an impression on somehody, concentrate on those things which are important to them.

American reads in his morning paper about the steel case he is likely to focus his attention mainly upon such questions as whether wages have or have not risen as fast as the cost of living, or upon how much the wage increase will cut into steel profits. The chances are that he will take more or less for granted the necessity for having a wage board look into the matter of how much of a wage advance is fair, with the understanding that the President will take such steps as he may find necessary to implement the findings or the wage

So, one of the objects of the Constitution, as stated in its preamble, was to "secure the have terminated within a year or blessings of liberty to ourselves so. and our posterity."

Several of the members of the Constitutional Convention were diligent students of history, and they were well aware that people in various nations had enjoyed brief interludes of liberty, but that nearly every free government had soon come under the demination of some powerful clique or some dictator, and that freedom had then perished. They knew also that, not infrequently, the rule of the tyrant was made more acceptable to the masses by allowing a puppet king to remain as nominal head of the government. (This was, of course, the procedure followed a century later by Mussolini when he took over the government of Italy.) It was doubtless the fear that the newly founded government would soon become tyrannical which led to the adoption in 1790 of ten amendments commonly known as the Bill of Rights. Amendment V provides among other things that "No person shall be...deprived of life, liberty, or

For nearly a century, the fears of the Founding Fathers seemed groundless. Our country became the hand of the free," and its rapid development was one of the wonders of the world. But then the destructive parasite of tyranny fastened itself upon the nation.

Thus it was allowed to spread almost without opposition until, little by little it developed into a network of labor monopoly which has gradually but surely been choking out our liberties. This belief of state school administrators, that private schools teaching against the state having the right to do things that are immoral and harmful for any individual to do, is pleasing to those superintendents who want to instill in the youth more and more state socialism and regimentation.

monopolies have become a supergovernment, changing into a puppet regime the republic of freemen established by our forefathers. Thus we see the President of the United States forced to appoint a wage board dominated by labor monopolists, and to give it virtual authority to fix wages rates throughout the steel industry. Fascism has supplanted competition as the determinant of wages and prices and profits. And now the labor monopolists propose to use their puppet to compel recalcitrant workers to join the unions and contribute funds to strengthen the hold of the monopolists upon our economy.

Remember that Amendment V to our Constitution says that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." But despite this provision, steel workers are to be deprived of their liberties and the steel stockholders are to be robbed of their property, not by any "due process of law," but merely by the arbitrary decree of the Pres-

And what legal authority does he cite to justify this tyrannical of authority? None whatever. He merely refers to the Constitution and the laws as a whole. But the Constitution gives powers, and Amendment X to the Constitution says definitely that "the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." Clearly, then, this is a resort to the tyrant's usual procedure - government by decree. One of the President's excuses for his illegal action is that collective bargaining has broken down. In this connection, it is well is a manifestation of the destruction of individual liberty by the labor monopolies, and is inherently anti-social. The Doctor Says

By EDWIN J. JORDAN, M.D.

Summer is just around the corner, and a few far-sighted people are already beginning to ask questions about hay fever. For example, F.H.M. writes "once having started taking shots for desensitizing in hay fever, is it necessary to keep it up all year, or can the patient get relief by building up his im-munity for a few months immediately preceding the pollen season?
"I have obtained remarkable relief from shots taken approximately once a week from April 1st to August 15th. Is it better to keep up these injections all the year around, or is it satisfactory to build up each season?"

This is a difficult question to answer, since there is some difference of opinion about it. Some doctors believe that at least some patients do better if they receive njections all the year round-the so-called "perennial" treatment. Other patients seem to do well if they take the injections for several months prior to the August 15th beginning of the fall rag-weed-hay fever season.

The decision as to which method to follow should rest with the doctor giving the treatments, but in a case such as that given the fact that the results were good win the seasonal treatment, suggests that method is all right for him. In, any event, either method is much better than waiting until the last minute to start injection

Sufferers from hay fever do not all get the same amount of relief from this treatment. However, the results obtained today are better for some people than they were several years ago. Some people who receive the treatment get almost complete relief; a larger number are greatly improved, that is, instead of being completely miserable for three or four weeks they may be really uncomfortable for only a few days.

Some people seem to get little, if any, relief from this treatment and these must be considered as failures. But the number of place Armed Services, and Henry Cabot ple who are in this group seems to be constantly shrinking. Lodge, Jr. of the same state, wno
