

Isolation of Japan Crowning Achievement of Air Power

By SHERMAN MONTROSE
NEA Staff Correspondent
GUAM.—The virtual isolation of Japan—less spectacular but perhaps militarily more important than the flaming ruin inflicted upon her cities—is the crowning achievement of American air power in the Pacific.

War industries of Japan now are cut off almost entirely from the formerly rich flow of supplies of war materials from Asia.

The end of the Okinawa campaign, with American planes only 35 miles from the southernmost Japanese homeland and but 550 miles from Korea, will complete the isolation of the Asiatic mainland from Japan.

Similarly, millions of Japanese troops in China, Malaya and Thailand will be completely deprived of homeland aid and supplies.

It can be said that the present isolation of Japan is far more effective than was that of England at the time the Luftwaffe was at the peak of its strength.

Bombing raids of the 20th, Seventh, Fifth and 13th Air Forces of the Pacific Oceans Areas are heaping on Japan the kind of devastation which the Eighth and Ninth United States Air Forces and the RAF rained on Europe.

Japan's failure to foresee America's growing naval and land-based air power in the Pacific may cost her the war before Allied soldiers actually set foot on the "sacred" lands of Japan. This is the private opinion of many ranking military leaders in the Pacific, to whom I talked during a 3,000 mile tour of our bases.

Far more vulnerable to attacks from the air than was "Pestung Eilande," Japan is seeing her huge industrial armament centers and her teeming cities laid waste by only a small portion of the air power to be available in months to come. Japan's war plants are centralized, above ground and extremely vulnerable. Already many of her industries have been crippled and some completely knocked out.

With many of her airplane engine manufacturing centers in ruins, Japan faces the day when she no longer will be able to send fighters against our bombers and attack our shipping from the air. Just as our air power throttled the once great Luftwaffe, Japan's fighter and bomber strength faces extermination.

Capture of the large Borneo oil fields cut off Japan from a principal fuel producing center, although it is likely that Japan will run out of planes and engines before she lacks fuel to feed them.

From Okinawa medium bombers such as the B-25 can strike heavy blows on the China Coast, hitting Hangchow, Nagasaki, Saibo, Heavies—the B-24's and B-17's which soon will be released in huge numbers from the European theater—will take off from Okinawa to drop bomb loads on Swatow, Amoy, Foochow, Hangchow, Nanking and Shanghai.

Long Haul Ahead
Japanese shipping through the Indian and Yellow Seas faces extinction by American planes. Manchuria, "breadbasket" of Eastern Asia, will have only a small outlet to Japan. Few ships may ply between Korea and the northern coast of Japan, out of range of all but our longest range bombers.

As our air power continues its expansion on an ever-increasing scale, with the United States and United Kingdom fleets in complete control of the Pacific's surface areas, it must be apparent to Japan that we can land anywhere, anytime, on the homeland.

Once we land we stick. Guadalcanal, New Guinea, the Marianas, the Marshalls, Iwo Jima and now Okinawa have proven that the Jap's first team just isn't good enough to throw us back into the sea. With her supplies from China cut off, her armies on the mainland isolated from aid, her cities being laid waste by fire bombing and "block busters," how long can Japan last?

From the heavy gloom over the Pacific Ocean areas in the dark days of 1942 and 1943, the picture has changed to one of optimism. Leaders from the Pacific's surface and air forces alike, but air power will be the decisive factor in the conquest of Japan.

To the B-29—a bomber born of necessity—falls the major role in the destruction of Japan.

From the great B-29 bases on Guam, Saipan and Tinian, Super-fortresses now are staging 500-plane raids on the Mikado's homeland and that load could be increased through use of Iwo Jima and Okinawa. But men of Maj. Gen. Curtis B. LeMay's 20th Air Force tell you that "bomb load doesn't mean a thing."

"One 2,000-pounder smack on the target," they say, "means more than a score of near misses on a pin-pointed special mission target such as an aircraft engine plant."

As precision bombing instrument, the B-29 is admittedly not at its best over Japan, where targets are obscured by clouds and fog on more than half of our raids. Quite frankly, pilots and the navigators of the 20th Air Force tell you that they're not certain of results when targets are obscured by instruments, although the instrument technique is improving and good results are shown by photographs following raids.

"If we can see the target," they say, "we'll hit it."

Just as frankly, they do not make extravagant claims of successes on all bombing missions. On this target, they said, a column of ground visiting correspondents, "we scored magnificent misses."

It took 11 missions by one unit's planes to knock out a certain section of one of Japan's airplane engine plants but they were back again until the target was demolished.

No Milk Run
The run to Japan is no "milk run" and planes and crews have to be able to take it as well as dish it out to the Japs. Pilots are averaging more flying hours a week now than once was considered safe for a month. Pressurized cabins and flying aids are helping to combat fatigue.

B-29's have been flown all the way from the coast of Japan to the Marianas with two engines out on same side. Recently one plane was turned upside down while bombing at low level from the terrific blast of a hit on an enemy oil or ammunition depot. It was righted and flown home. One ship, rammed by two enemy planes, its left horizontal stabilizer gone, part of the tail gunner's compartment ripped out and with other damage, still managed to get home without casualties.

"It's the finest airplane we've ever had," said one spokesman for a wing group. "One unit's planes averaged 228 hours before an engine change. We can keep 85 per cent of our planes in commission and be ready to execute a mission with all of our planes on 48 hours' notice."

Galveston Officer Is Awarded Medal

TEHERAN, Iran.—(AP)—Lt. Col. Bennett C. Doble, of 4500 Avenue (N) Galveston, Texas, has been awarded the Legion of Merit medal for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services." Persian Gulf Command Headquarters has announced.

Brig. Gen. Donald P. Booth, commanding the PGC presented the medal of Lt. Col. Doble in special ceremonies recently.

The award to the Texas officer was based on his services at the port of Khorramshahr on the Persian Gulf from December, 1942, to January, 1945, his citation said. "During this period Col. Doble served consecutively as berth officer, section officer, operating officer, and superintendent of water division, Fort of Khorramshahr, Iran," the citation said.

"By developing soldier supervisory sections for the employment of natives, and by improving effective methods for the discharge of cargo from ships and the clearance of cargo from docks, Col. Doble achieved a continuous increase in the port's operation, and, thereby, contributed materially to the rapid delivery of large quantities of vital war material to the Russian Army."

The Port of Khorramshahr was the largest of the three ports operated by Persian Gulf Command soldiers before the mission of moving essential war material through the Persian corridor to Soviet Russia officially ended June 1.

Before entering the Army at New Orleans, La., Aug. 16, 1942, Doble was traffic manager of the West Indies and South American division of Lakes Brothers Steamship Co. Inc., at Galveston.

NEW YORK—What makes that old black magic—the dress which casts its spell over summer—look new this year is added color, which unfurls at necklines, epulees, waists, points up boleros, accents the pert flare of peplums.

Far from being limited to one set of frills, most black and navy blue dresses still cling to their vaulted wardrobe virtue—basic use—and stand ready to be stripped down for background wear. ### Civilian Life Also Changes, Soldiers Find

Maybe it won't be as difficult for the returning service man to fit into civilian life as many people think. It is being assumed that because he finds it difficult to make his own decisions (having obeyed orders for so long), finding it easier to say "yes" than to take a negative point of view, the returning service man will find the going tough in civilian life.

Ruth Millett

The civilian doesn't make as many of his own decisions as he used to. He is told what he can buy and what he can't. He is told just how far he can drive his car. He is told just how much he can eat of certain foods, etc., etc.

U. S. production of petroleum in 1944 averaged 2,250 gallons per each American family, which figure approximates the amount of oil required to heat an 8-room house in the North Atlantic states—though, obviously, not every such house is so heated.

Plentiful Peaches Help Food Budget

By GAYNOR MADDOX NEA Staff Writer. Peaches are the big fruit news this year. The Georgia and Carolina crops are huge. The New Jersey peaches will be as plentiful as last year, which made a record. Plan your menus accordingly, but because peaches are the biggest crop they will be cheaper.

The family budget, and the family appetite, both can profit. Here are tested recipes geared to these days of peach plenty, but sugar, butter and meat shortage.

Breakfast Peaches and Sausages. Six large freestone peaches, 1/2 pound sausage meat, 2 tablespoons crumbs, juice 1 lemon, 2 tablespoons honey or corn syrup, slivers of ginger or dash powdered ginger, 1/4 cup water.

Scald the peaches and peel. Cut in halves and remove stones. Arrange halves on shallow baking pan or dish. Mix sausage meat with the crumbs and fill each allowed center of peach. Mix lemon juice, sweetened, water and ginger. Pour round the fruit. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 40 minutes, basting occasionally.

Peach Griddle Cakes. Slice peaches quite thin. Heat griddle iron. Arrange 2 or 3 slices peaches on the griddle to be covered with briddle cake batter. Bake as usual. Or add 1/2 cut minced peaches to the batter and bake as usual.

Peach Pie. One baked pie shell, 2 pounds peaches, dash ginger, 1 tablespoon fortified margarine, 1 glass currant or apple jelly. Prepare pie shell and set aside until needed. Scald, skin and slice the peaches. Add ginger, margarine and the glass pie jelly. Heat and heat very gently over low heat until jelly is softened and the peaches ever so slightly heated. Then pour into the pie shell. Chill. Serve plain or with sour cream, flavored with nutmeg (1/4 teaspoon powdered nutmeg to 1 cup sour cream).

Lack of sulphur in the system will sometimes cause a depressed state of mind.

W. A. Thomas, collector of internal revenue for the second district of Texas, has received a communication from Joseph D. Nunan, Jr., commissioner of internal revenue, Washington, D. Noting that the income tax laws exempt non-resident aliens not engaged in a trade or business in the United States from taxation on profits from transactions upon securities or commodities exchanges, the commissioner directed careful scrutiny of claims for such exemptions. Before allowing such exemptions, proof will be required that the individuals concerned were not, in fact, residents of the United States and were not engaged in a trade or business in this country.

Security Card Is Not Work Permit

Judging from the number of youthful applicants for social security account numbers many boys and girls do not understand that an account number is needed only if the individual is working or has a job in prospect, said James L. Farmer, manager of the Amerillo social security branch office.
Some of the applicants for social security account numbers do not have any intention of engaging in employment soon, according to a check made by a member of the office staff. Therefore, it may be that the impression has gone out that a social security account card may be used as a "working permit," which is entirely erroneous.

"Children often get social security account cards and lose them when in reality they did not need them to begin with," said Mr. Farmer. "When they obtain a job it is necessary for them to secure a duplicate account number card, which requires another application and additional work that is expensive to the United States government," he stated.

Admiral Nimitz promised that "strong United States air forces, based on conquered islands" within effective striking distance of Japan, "will continue to hammer enemy shipping and defenses preparatory to further amphibious assaults."
Simultaneously, he announced Gen. Douglas MacArthur's air forces command of all army air forces based on Okinawa, incidental to regrouping American air power in the western Pacific "for greater operating efficiency."

Four different air commands are now hammering at Japan. The attacks are coordinated but each command issues its own report, making it difficult to gain a clear picture of simultaneous action.
Yesterday's action included the carrier sweep over Tokyo, successful B-29 raids on four cities and a bomber raiding aviation gasoline, a fighter sweep from two B-17s over Kobe airdromes and shipping which destroyed or damaged 19 planes and 25 vessels. There was no report from MacArthur's air forces for the day.

Tokyo conceded American air forces held supremacy over the homeland, but commented "mastery of the air is not an absolute factor" in deciding the result of an invasion.
A current rumor in the Philippines has it that a lone Japanese plane rescued Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, supreme Japanese commander in the islands, who once boasted he would make MacArthur surrender.
MacArthur reported Australian troops under his command made two new landings in the Balikpapan area of south eastern Borneo, "completing our control of the Balikpapan bay shore area." Other Aussies advanced a mile toward flaming oil fields and best off two night infiltration attacks.

clined to comment immediately upon Rudnick's order of the day, in which he informed his troops that Britain and the United States had withdrawn recognition from "the legal government of the Polish republic." Rudnick's statements, however, underscored the potentially grave situation now confronting the British in determining the future of the Polish armed forces under their operational command.
It raised the question of whether the British and American governments can continue to support on foreign soil an armed force directed by officers many of whom are outspokenly antagonistic to the new Warsaw government without straining relations with Warsaw and Moscow.

One of the reasons for the short supply, Anderson said, is the fact that "our people ate so well last year, ate so far into our stock piles, that we don't have much reserve."
Stating that his would not be "a bare-shelf policy for maximum production. He said, however, that the government must be prepared to protect farmers from the economic ills of possible surpluses.
Anderson disclosed that he has started discussions with other government agencies looking toward the eventual elimination of food subsidies.

FEPC Fight

"The house provided nothing for FEPC when it passed the $752,000,000 war agency bill on June 8, but the senate added $250,000 in a compromise that broke a four-day filibuster. There were no liquidation strings attached to the senate funds.
The house committee recommended that the house decline to accept Senate amendments on all other money items in the major senate change, in addition to FEPC, more than doubled the house-voted funds for the office of War Information.
Representative Colmer (D-Miss.), a spokesman for the southern group fighting FEPC, said "I'm willing to go along on the $250,000 if it's for liquidation of the FEPC." He added "We will make a fight to put that across."

Cotton Acreage Hits New Low

AUSTIN, July 11.—(AP)—The United States Department of Agriculture reported that cotton acreage in cultivation in Texas as of July 1, was 13 per cent below that planted last year and the lowest acreage in 50 years.
The 1945 planting season, said USDA, has been one of extremes. Central and eastern districts were too wet through much of March, April and May and the western areas were extremely dry beyond the planting date for cotton.
In all areas except the north and south high plains, the unfavorable planting season resulted in late plantings, but did not prevent most farmers from getting in their intended acreage.
With the 1945 planting acreage reduced more than 50 per cent in the high plains area, the outlook for cotton is not any too favorable.

Cotton under cultivation to date is estimated to be 6,400,000 acres; last year 7,354,000 acres were planted.
From 1890 to 1900 the cotton acreage harvested in Texas ranged from about 4,000,000 to 7,000,000 acres, reaching a peak in 1925 when 18,443,000 acres were planted. From 1935 through 1937 the cotton acreage in Texas ranged about 10,000,000 but from 1937 to date the acreage planted has been below that figure.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON SERVICEMEN'S PROBLEMS
BY DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, July 11.—Veterans have certain rights to burial in national cemeteries and can get headstones from the government. Here are some questions on that subject:
Q. The wife of a veteran friend of mine has an incurable disease and is expected to die any day. The question has come up as to whether she can be buried in a national cemetery which is nearby. In this possible? If so, how can it be arranged?
A. Yes, she can be buried in a national cemetery. So can the widows and under certain circumstances, the minor children or unmarried adult daughters of an honorably discharged veteran. Application stating all the circumstances must be made to the Quartermaster General, United States Army, Washington 25, D. C.
