Big Chunk Of Cash Dodging Tax Agents

An interesting phenomenon that has prevailed in this country since the end of the last war is the abnormal amount of cash that has been accumulated and held by the people at large, contrary to sound individual

The total currency now outside the banking system figures out to the equivalent of around $400 for every member of the working population, including the armed forces, the Institute of Life Insurance reports. The comparable figure in 1939 was only $115 while throughout the prosperous period of the Twenties the total currency in circulation outside banks was never more than four times the 1939 total. In the next four the working population.

What makes this expansion all the more unusual is that an increasingly large part of the money in circulation consist of bills of denominations that most people would not ordinarily use in everyday transactions. For example, bills of $20 and more, considered together, now make up more than three-fifths of all the cash outstanding, as against less than half before World War 11. And $100 bills alone, of which there are more than $5 billions now outstanding, represent nearly one-fifth of the total money in circulation.

Figures compiled by the Federal Reserve System show that money in circulation outside the banking system reached a peak of $26.7 billions at the end of 1946, more than fou rtimes the 1939 total. In the next four years, 1947 through 1950, the total dropped more than a billion dollars. This down-trend was reversed last year, and the current figure for cash outside the banking sysem is in the neighborhood of $26 billions. About fourfifths of this cash belongs to individuals.

The whole economy, of course, has grown greatly in the past decade, and the general price level has nearly. doubled as well. These and other factors would help to explain the need for a larger amount of cash for personal and business reasons than existed previously. But the amount of cash now in the hands of the public has grown substantially more than can be attributed to economic factors alone. Since 1939 consumer expenditures - up from $67.5 billions to $205.5 billions, gained 204 per cent. Currency outside banks - up from $6.4 billions to $26.3 billions, showed an increase of cent

Cash in circulation has increased considerably more proportionately than have bank deposits. The total of currency outside banks is now the equivalent of around one-seventh of all bank deposits in the nation, including savings accounts and Postal Savings, a ratio nearly half again as great as prevailed before World War II.

There can be little doubt, for one, that the savings element has been a significant expansion factor, even though stashing away cash in old shoes is hardly a sensible or economical productive way for an individual to Considerable suspicion exists that tax evasion and hoarding have played a more important role. This suspicion is strengthened by Federal Reserve figures showing the extent that the bills of large denominations have exceeded the rate of gain of the smaller bills that the average person is accustomed to using.

Right now the total of $20 bills outstanding, by far the largest amount of any single denomination, is nearly six times greater than in 1939, and the $50 and $100 bills are not far behind in their rate of growth. By contrast, there are three and one-half times the amount of $10 bills outstanding now as in 1939, and only twice the amount of $1 and $5 bills.

Spending

The month of June, winding up the fiscal year, brought a spending orgy by government agencies to prevent loss of unspent funds.

The past month is no exception. Federal spending this June threatens to cost the average American family about $37.25 a week. Government agency heads, says the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, operate on the theory that if they do not spend as much during the years as they told Congress they would spend they may pay a penalty in future appropriations cuts.

Heavy June outlays by governmen arise party from the fact that interest payments on the public debt are high for the month. But a study of government spending indicates that the June figures, exclusive of interest payments, has been higher than the average for the other eleven months in all but four years since 1933. And all four of those years were affected by unusual conditions produced by wars.

Last year, for instance, June spending, exclusive of Interest, was 40 per cent higher than the average for the other eleven months of the fiscal year.

"Best available estimates indicate that June spending this year will total about $7 billion. That is $333.3 milion a day for each of 21 working days in June. It averages out at $7.45 a day per family for the entire United States, or $37.25 a week, which is about $156 a family for the month," the chamber reported.

"Even some high government officials deplore the customary June spending spree. Secretary of Commerce Sawyer has said: "Toward the close of the fiscal year if a surplus in any particular account is found to exist, extraordinary efforts are made to discover ways of spending At. It is obvious that these frantic efforts — and use the word rantic advisedly — at the close of the fiscal year represent expenditures which could be avoid-

"As a related problem, there also is a scramble to obligate funds during June, since as a rule funds not obligated by the end of the fiscal year must be returned to the Treasury. The Mutual Security Agency, for example, will have almost $9 billion in unspent funds at the close of the fiscal year. At the end of February, some $5 billion of that amount still was unobligated. But it is estimated that by the end of June the unobligated funds will be only about $400 million out of the unspent $9 billion. In other words, commitments will be poured out, all calling for actual spending of money in later

The End Results of

Compulsory "Education" Undoubtedly the reason most people believe in tax supported schools is that they have not realized that tax supported schools eventually result in compulsory education." It took me 40 years to realize this fact. In fact, I, myself, have largely missed the main objection to tax supported schoolsnamely, that certain human beings are empowered to compel the children of other adults to study what these individuals believe is educa-tion. In other words, they have a educate any youth in any different manner than that prescribed by these men appointed by the governor of the state.

To give any man such power to conscript the minds of the youth of the land is the worst form of tyranny. It is the opposite from lfberty. The men who believe they are wise enough to have this power are men who cannot tell the difference between their ideas of government than those of Joseph Stalin or any other dictator other than degrees. They are men who cannot tell the difference between tyranny and liberty. They cannot define liberty, and liberty should be the essence of any Jewish or Christian education and the basis of any government based on a republic.

The result of this compulsory "education" is exactly what we have today-more and more authoritarian government, more restrictions on human liberty, more attempts to domineer over the physical and mental and moral actions of human beings. The result is long periods of unemployment, irredeemable paper money, infla-tion, mounting debts, more and more class legislation, collective bargaining that takes away from an individual the right to make an individual bargain and almost c' 1 tinuous wars. These are all fruits of compulsory "education." They are the natural sequence of conscripting the minds of the youth of the land and putting them under the control of agents of the state who direct their development.

Of course, most every rational person wants every individual to have all the opportunities possible to become educated. If we had public or tax supported schools that didn't give certain individuals the power to determine what education is and to see that this or that school complies with their interpretation of education, the harm would be a great deal less. It is the universality in compulsory "education" that works the most havoc.

As late as 1895 compulsion in education was not practiced in the state of Pennsylvania. I do not have the dates that other states adopted compulsory "education," vania. When this step back into ment store ratings.

tyranny and the dark ages was adopted in Pennsylvania, that gave the state the exclusive right over the molding of the mind, soul and In keeping with his lives of the youth of the land, Governor Hastings in reluctantly signing the compulsory public education bill, said he did so only because the proponents were numerous and so vocal and the general public so indifferent. He believed, however, that when the people discovered what had been done to them, they would turn out en masse at the next session of the legislature and demand the repeal of the law. Incidentally, the bill which Governor Hastings apologized for signing, had been passed by two preceding biennial sessions of the legislature and had been vetoed by two governors, first by Governor Beaver, a Republican, and second, by Governor Pattison,

But the people of Pennsylvania, and in all the other states, have not realized how much power certain men assume when compulsory "education" is practiced. The result is that they have not repealed compulsory attendance to schools, and we are reaping the natural results of a monopoly in education. Instead of repealing these laws, as Governor Hastings believed would take place, in April of this year the ol administrators in their convention in Boston had grown so confused or so tyrannical that their leading speaker contended that private schools were divisive and dangerous to the "democratic unity provided by our public schools." It looks as if the monopoly in molding the minds of the youth of the land has been gaining ground rather than losing it.

And of course the result of compulsory "education" is that the real educators are deprived of their God-given right to educate. Such great educators as Moses, Socrates, Jesus, St. John and St. Paul are deprived of their freedom to help enlighten their fellow man without the consent of the bureaucratic. "educators" selected by the governors of the states. That is the fruit of compulsory "education." We have not as yet, in the United States gone as far as to kill those who disobey the order of our "educators" as they killed Socrates and Jesus for educating in a way that did not please the agents of the state. So far we only grab the children from their parents and put them in state institutions so the state can "educate" them and put the responsible parent in jail. It will only be a question of time if compulsory education is continued that the state will liquidate all those who try to educate in a different manner from what the state prescribes, just as they do now in Russia and in the time of Jesus. Every human being must be equally free to educate as he sees fit so long as he grants every other individual the equal right. We want no compulsion or monopoly

The entire 'team of about 340 athletes is in Helsinki but just eight days ago - when virtually all the tryouts were over no one knew for sure just how much money was in the till or whether any of the hopefuls would have to be left home. We talked to Brundage, a bespectacled, dignified Chicagoan who has been through the mill for his unshakeable stand on amateurism, and he looked weary. For months he had been talking up the fact that the United States needed funds to get the team across the Atlantic.

"I suppose we'll get over the top, but it's the same old story," he sighed. "We never know until the last minute if we'll make it." Mind you, this was some 24 hours before the team was scheduled to depart.

No Subsidization

Well, it comes as no surprise. In cas you didn't know, government does not subsidize ernment whoops it up for the team, then hands it a fistfull of money and tells it to come back with plenty of medals.
