Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Barnes and Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Perkins entertained their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Barnes, with a party this week on their first wedding anniversary. Wayne and Irma Lee were married on the 1951 Labor Day, which was Sept. 3. This year, their anniversary date was not the national holiday so there was some discussion about whether they should observe every Labor Day or celebrate Sept. 3 every year. Their wedding was the first held in the new Church of Christ building at Mary Ellen facing west was decorated and vows were exchanged in a formal outdoor setting. The building was still under construction at that time (first service was held there until late December) but, of course, since it was Labor Day work was halted. The couple celebrated another big event recently. They finished college. Irma Lee was graduated from Abilene Christian College, and Wayne from the University of Texas. He is a mechanical engineer, and she was a business administration major. They are visiting here before going to New York where he will work. That's quite a distance to put between friends and family in Pampa, but they are enthusiastic about the future there. Maybe the fact they were the very first couple to marry in the new building makes them special. Makes us wonder what has become of other couples who were the first to wed in buildings of local church groups.

Warmer Weather Ahead For Pampa

If Pampans think it's been cool, they're wrong. It's just the lack of humidity.

At least, that's the word from the Dallas weather bureau.

The mercury Thursday here ran the gamut from 92 degrees to 64. At 11 a.m. today the temperature had climbed to 84.

And the city was on another rainless spree—so far, no rain for the past six days.

There's no need to get winter overcoats, the weatherman insisted because warmer weather is predicted.

Boy Released In Fire Death Of Two

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An accidental death verdict returned yesterday in the fatal burning of two Negro children brought the release of an 11-year-old boy.

The boy was taken into custody by juvenile authorities Wednesday for questioning in the deaths of Mary Louise Cunningham, 12, and her brother, Lindsey, 8.

The two children were burned to death in the attic of their home. A sister, Esther, 11, was critically burned when she tried to put out the blaze with a pan of water.

Justice of the peace B. B. Brothman returned the accidental death verdict. He and juvenile Detective Jack Jury said two witnesses had changed their stories to say that they had not seen the 11-year-old boy toss kerosene on the children and light it while they were in the attic.

Spartans Picked As Tops In Nation

By WHITNEY MARTIN
NEW ORK (AP) Before a muscle has been flexed in serious competition, Michigan State has been selected as the No. 1 college football team of 1952 in The Associated Press annual pre-season poll.

Georgia Tech received only 15 first place votes but was well supported for a place high in the top 10.

Sixty Named
An idea as to the wide difference of opinion as to the merits of the clubs this year may be obtained from the fact that 60 teams were awarded at least one point in the voting, and no less than 17 received votes for the No. 1 spot.

The top 10 with their point totals (first place votes in parentheses) follow:
Michigan State 77 (17)

By RALPH RODEN

Allie Reynolds has achieved two of three feats a pitcher dreams about - a no-hit game and a World Series triumph. Today the 33-year-old New York Yankee righthander stands a good chance of doing both.

Reynolds, one of the game's best "money pitchers," turned in his 17th victory of the season last night as the Bombers whaled the Browns to their first victory of the year in Chicago. Reynolds pitched a complete game, three-hit game American League lead over the Cleveland Indians.

Garcia recorded his 18th victory for Cleveland in blanking Detroit on five hits. Luke Easter's 25th home run of the season in the fourth inning off Bill Wright was Allie Reynolds' first home run since he pitched his first game in the seventh.

Hank Has To Ridicule Cat To Make It Swim Rio Grande

By HENRY McLEMORE
CUERNAVACA, Mexico — "What happened to your cats?" "Did you get them across the Rio Grande?" "Are they with you now, in Cuernavaca, or wandering like feline souls in and about Laredo?" "I'll bet you I have had fifty letters about those cats, and not one about me. I could have gone down three times in the Rio Grande for all my readers seem to care."

Yes, dear readers, they are with me. Bidey, the gray and black one, and Duffy, the tiger cat with the look of the jungle in his eyes.

We didn't have much trouble crossing the border, unless drowning is considered trouble. Standing on the American side, with Mexico only a half-dried-up river away, I spoke to them in cat language.

"Meow crosso, cats," I said. "You plungo into rivero and waito for meo on the other side."

I explained to them that once they were across I would go through customs, declare my cigarettes, money and used clothes.

and meet them on the Mexican side.

"Hidden in bushes when you get to the other side," I said. "Don't be picked up and chased across the International bridge. They showed no signs of making a move. 'One for the money,' I said. Bidey stuck a paw in the water and looked at me as if to say, 'What was wrong with New York?'"

"Two for show," I cried. Duffy did a half gainer with layout, and hit for Mexico.

"Sisayo," I said to Bidey. "Better be a liveo sisayo than a crowned cat," he said.

"Okay," I said. "Duffy and I will go on to Mexico, and you can stay right where you are. Fraldy cat."

That was too much for him. He held his nose with a paw, took a deep breath, and hit the Rio Grande.

Once they were in, I went to the customs office and declared my meager belongings.

One tooth brush. One package of cigarettes. One union suit. One $10 traveler's check. One package of hair dye. One pair of sleeve holders. A can of pork and beans. A copy of "Riders of the Purple Sage," and the life histories of Chester Gould, Ham Fisher, and Thomas Jefferson.

"Any livestock?" the officer asked.

"Not any more," I said. "They drowned."

He stamped my bags, wished me a happy time, and I crossed the bridge.

As soon as I was on the Mexican side I walked along the river bank and called the cats.

"Pussy, pussy, pussy," I called. "Tom, tom, tom," I implored.

No answer.

I was just about to abandon the search, and take a hotel room for the night so I could look for Bidey and Duffy the next morning, when I heard a combination grrr and prrr. No use trying to write the sound.

They wrapped themselves about my legs and we hit the road for Mexico, with me just as wet from sweating about their whereabouts as they were from swimming the Rio Grande.

Better Future Gleams . . . To Migrate Or Not Migrate Is Big Question For Britons

By Robert F. S. JONES
LONDON (AP) — To migrate or not to migrate? That is the question facing thousands of Britons who see a better future gleaming for them on the distant horizons of the commonwealth but who are reluctant to uproot themselves from home.

So far about three-quarters of a million have taken the plunge and migrated since the war.

The question is also being faced on a much higher level — by government, industrialists, and military leaders.

On one side, standing as staunch champion of planned large-scale migration organized on government level, is an unofficial body known as the Migration Council.

Its motto could be "migrate — or perish," and its avowed aim is to see 10 million people lopped off Britain's teeming population of 50 million within the next decade.

On the other side stands the British government, agreeing to migration — but only as a principle, not as a large-scale organized movement. Its attitude was summed up by Prime Minister Winston Churchill recently when he growled, "We should all stay and fight it out together."

In the middle, and stakeholders for the future of the British commonwealth of nations, stand the underpopulated, underdeveloped but potentially rich countries of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the West African cluster of colonies.

They want all the Britons they can get, but all of them aren't sure their economies can absorb too many people too soon.

The migration council, born two years ago, has internationalist Sir Norman Angell and jet inventor Sir Frank Whittle among its vice-presidents, and counts a number of M. P.'s of both parties active supporters.

One of its major objectives is to make migration a high priority issue in the commonwealth, and to do this it is going full steam ahead with a publicity campaign and is working to set up a permanent migration and development organization.

The arguments the council uses are economic and strategic. It paints a picture of an unevenly balanced commonwealth, with most of its industry and population huddled into one corner — the British Isles while the rest, all 7 1/2 million square miles of it — is pathetically underdeveloped.

This, the council declares, is one of the main reasons why the commonwealth, with mineral and agricultural resources and industrial potential exceeding those of their the United States or

BETTER THAN COCONUTS—Zuma, left, and Bongo enjoy a tasty bottle of specially-prepared coconut milk as they are fed by Arusimo Bronzini, director of the Rome Municipal Zoo. The baby gorillas are believed to be the first to be shipped to a European zoo since the end of World War II. Born in the French Congo, the simian infants were purchased for $4800. They'll soon be too heavy to sit on Bronzini's lap.

Dog Worth $1,500 Hit
SAN PEDRO, Calif. (AP) — A San Pedro waitress who says she has often gone hungry to feed her three giant dogs, reported to police recently that she's fighting mad.

Somebody had shot one of her huge Bouvier des Flanders animals to death. The dog weighed almost 150 pounds and was valued by Mrs. Dorothy Vanger Pol at $1,500.

She said the Netherlands police use the breed to catch criminals, and there are only about 60 of the animals in the United States.

Army Sets Up Schedule For Release Of Reserve Officers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army schedule for releasing from active duty several thousand reserve officers who are serving overseas, will be set by Dec. 1, 1947, and Sept. 2, 1945, and who to extend their service periods, are serving overseas, will be released as soon as possible.

It said their early release is possible because (1) a large number of officers have elected to extend their service periods, are serving overseas, will be released as soon as possible. (2) the Army is getting returned for separation as soon as possible. (3) the Army is getting returned for separation as soon as possible.

The announcement said there will be no release of officers until after the end of World War II. The release of officers will be in three stages: 1. Those officers who served at least one year between Dec. 7, 1941, and Sept. 2, 1945, and who are serving overseas, will be released as soon as possible. 2. ## Even In Death, Eva Peron Still Makes Presence Felt

By STRATFORD BRADFORD
BENOS AIRES (AP) — Eva Peron, even in death, is making her presence felt in Argentina.

In her short career, she was accorded honors which come to few living men, and almost never to women. These honors show a sign of diminishing.

A move is under way to have her declared a saint of the Roman Catholic church. Whether or not that will result, she already is considered saintly by Argentine workers. They are reminded daily of her and her work for them.

Whatever had happens to them now, they will say that their "Evita," if she were alive, could have prevented it. Any future good will be directly attributed to her influence and her tradition.

The labor page of La Prensa, now controlled by the General Labor Federation (CGT), bears the title "Union Page — Eva Peron." A block print of her head is on the page, and with it the words: "Alive or dead, I will always be with the workers."

The CGT claims six million members, or one third of all Argentines. It has renamed its central headquarters "Eva Peron."

She is buried temporarily in that headquarters — her casket, borne on a gun carriage, pulled there by a group of workers. The CGT has promised eternal flowers at the tomb.

These are just part of its tributes to the woman who was its unofficial head — who, with her husband's influence and then her own, fought its battles for it, enlarging its membership, obtaining benefits for members, and building it potentially, into the strongest single force in Argentina.

It was from a CGT union that a telegram was sent to Pope Pius urging that steps be taken toward having her declared a saint. A Vatican source replied — that while Mrs. Peron was known to have practiced the civil virtues "heroically," little was known of her religious virtues.

In any event, he said, the move toward canonization would have to originate in the Argentine archbishopric. This reply was never published in any large Argentine newspaper, and it is apparent the drive has not been halted.

The party papers, in fact, now capitalize the "E" in "Evita" when speaking of her.

Her birthday, May 7, in recent years has gained the status of a semi-official holiday and has been termed "Saint Evita's Day."

Just before her death it became one of the nine days a year when newspapers cannot publish.

July 26, the day of her death, July 26, the day of her death, will be observed in the future as a day of mourning.

A new province — the equivalent of a state — bears the name "Eva Peron" in honor of her work in improving the status of

"Thank heavens for a lively political campaign!"

Unbroken Arrows Helped In Plea For Indian Union

By JOHN MEIKELL
SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Four hundred years ago, the colorful legend goes, Chief Hiawatha of the Onondaga Indians bound five arrows together and then tried to break them.

They were like an oak. Thus Hiawatha persuaded five Indian nations to unite in the powerful Iroquois Confederacy.

The anniversary of the confederacy is being observed this year on the seven Indian reservations in New York State.

The climax comes this Friday when Indians gather for a huge powwow at the New York State Fair, across Onondaga Lake from the spot where their ancestors founded the league. The will stage ceremonial dances, smoke pipe and portray the legend.

In 1552, according to the story handed down through generation of the Onondaga Indians, Hiawatha met with the chiefs of the Mohawks, Senecas, Cayugas, Onondagas and Oneidas on the shores of the "Lake of the Salt Springs."

He said he had sent by the Great Spirit and proposed a plan for peace among the tribes based on unity, brotherhood and the right of each nation to decide its own future.

The great chief of the Onondagas was not convinced. Hiawatha then took an arrow, snapped it over his knee and held up the broken pieces. He took five more arrows from his quiver, to represent the five nations. Binding the arrows together he showed that he could not break them. Together, he told the chieftains, they were one oak, but single they were of willow.

Finally, it was agreed that the stubborn Onondagas always would provide the head chief of the confederacy and that Onondagas always would be the seat of the confederacy council.

Thus the confederacy was born. A sixth nation, the Tuscaroras, came from North Carolina in 1712 and joined the council.

The tribes, living in peace among themselves, conquered all the land from the Atlantic to the Mississippi and from the Lawrence River to the Gulf of Mexico.

The long house of the Onondagas remained the capital of the confederacy, and the council still operates today. It represents 7,400 Indians and controls 87,000 acres of land in New York.

The pattern of the Iroquois Confederacy was copied by abolitionists before the revolution, according to Dr. E. A. Bates, ethnologist and Indian authority at Cornell University.

Benjamin Franklin referred to the Iroquois Confederacy during the first convention of the colonies in Albany. If the Indians could unite, Franklin asked, why couldn't the colonies?

And, Bates said, James Madison and Thomas Jefferson tried to incorporate into the Constitution various phases of the Iroquois confederacy.

Many Ruined By Drought

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' sizzling heat wave and drought in the past month have cost farmers 100 million dollars, State Agriculture Commissioner John C. White estimates.

He says 2,000 farmers and ranchers have already been financially ruined and ruin threatens 7,000 more.

He estimated loss to cotton farmers alone at $75,200,000. Grain sorghum losses have run $8,793,000 and he described pastureland losses as being in untold millions.

One of the most graphic examples of what the drought has cost is reflected in the number of small stock farmers forced off the land he said.

He said the 2,000 farmers and ranchers already bankrupted by searing temperatures were in a 59-county area. Unless general rains blanket the state immediately, he said the additional 7,000 will go under in September.

Cotton losses increased from 280,000 bales from the middle of August to about 378,000 bales at present, he said. This represents a total damage of some 8 per cent of the crop.

"We can now expect a total yield of only about 3,824,000 bales, compared to the 4,200,000 bales estimated around Aug. 1 by the United States Department of Agriculture," he said.

About 12 per cent of the 47 million bushels of grain sorghum predicted a month ago disappeared in the heat, a loss of 5,852,000 bushels valued at $6,793,000, he said.

Most of the corn damage was suffered in July, White said, but there was also some shrinkage of crops in August. Complete figures were not available.

He predicted about one-half million tons of hay will be needed to carry livestock through the coming month even if it does rain.

Do All Of Us Have Housing Problems?

DELAWARE O. (AP) — Think you're having housing problems? Then consider the story of the Delaware cockatoos.

The late owner of the pair of Delaware, O., willed them $9,000 for a new home and care at the Columbus O., Zoo.

Earl Davis, zoo director, is trying to get some metal for finishing the interior of the new home. He can't use plastics because the parrot-like birds are so destructive.

The government allocates the metal needed. Recreation projects get metal in alphabetical order — and you know where that puts the zoo!

Sea Food Is Sought

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — With the big research traveler "Cape St. Mary," the West African Fisheries Research Institute is probing the comparatively unexplored waters of Nigeria, Gold Coast, Sierra Leone and Gambia.

It is hoped that research will lead to increased sea food supplies for the British West African territories.
