Back leader found burned to death. DENTON (AP)—The body of Hogan Hancock, 46, Dallas band leader, was found early today in his burned-out car on a highway two miles south of Lewisville. State Highway Patrolman E. J. Banks said the cause of death was not immediately determined, but that violence was suspected. The car was in a ditch but not wrecked. The fire started in the rear seat. Dr. M. L. Hutcheson, county health officer, was conducting an autopsy this morning at Lewisville, where the body was taken. There are stone idols on Easter Island in the Pacific that weigh 50 to 66 tons each.

Aeronautics Board Hearing in Session

FORT WORTH (AP)—Air freight applicants appeared today to be taking definite sides on an issue between "fixed point" service and "area demand point" service as the civil aeronautics board entered the third day of its first national hearing on air freight applications. Testimony of the first two days has indicated that the issue will reach a major shutdown next month when the hearing is reconvened in Washington. Cross examination of Earl F. Slick of San Antonio, president of the area concept of air freight service, indicated an alignment of at least five other applicants for the plan, with seven others opposing and seeking permits for fixed point schedules. Slick has maintained that air cargo and passenger traffic are as opposite as oil and water and cannot be mixed in the same operation or in the same plane. While on the witness stand yesterday Slick was asked by Dave Gribbon, American Airlines counsel, "If the CAB granted you a flexible schedule for freight pickup, don't you think that should be permitted for passenger schedules too?" "No, there's the fundamental difference between them," Slick re-

Texas Today

By JACK RUTLEDGE Associated Press Staff T/Sgt. William Tawlska of Kelly field has a stomach-full of human nature. He checks mess passes. He doesn't mind the job. But the characters who forget their passes. Sgt. Tawlska classifies them as bold, nervous, and miscellaneous. He says they run a gamut of emotions that would turn Betty Davis green with envy. At first he finds them amusing, then routine, and before the day is over, he says they're pretty disgusting. This is how the camp paper tells it: "First, Doc, let us take the bold group," he says, running a weary hand over his eyes. "This character is a bluffer. As soon as he sees the pass-checker he quickens his pace and draws his wallet from his pocket just as he passes, flipping it open and shut before the checker's eyes have time to focus. Then he tries to disappear into the mess hall. He gets by with it pretty often, because the checker figures he saw the pass. "Another of the bold group is the belligerent, who storm up like they're hitting the beach at Okinawa. They stick their nose about two inches from your face. A novice doc-chief is taken aback by this attitude. A veteran will just say 'well' which generally brings forth a string of oaths conveying the idea the culprit left his pass in the barracks and what are you doing to do about it? If you're a strong character, you place a hand on his chest and push. "Then there's the buddy-buddy type. He starts off with 'gad, what a day' and launches into details of his public and private life which fascinate you. As he makes his spell, he slides up and through the door while your mouth is still hanging open. "I haven't yet discovered how to stop this guy," Doc. "Which now brings to the fumbler. He comes under the nervous type. He walks up and spends three minutes getting his wallet out. That's just the beginning. He fumbles through cards, pictures, receipts and the like while an enormous line of hungry men pile up. He does this with the hope you'll get disgusted and tell him to go on. Best thing is to call his bluff and tell him to keep digging. "Then there's the butterfingers. He's highly annoying, drops papers which sail in all directions, distracting your attention and giving everybody a chance to get in. This character alone costs the army mess system millions a year. "Under miscellaneous we have the drunk. He comes sailing up and opens with some stupid remark like 'whatcha want?' Then he gives you a mumbled description of what led to his condition. "Then there's the letter reader. He approaches all tied up reading a letter in front of his face. He usually reads the girl's letter, and he seems to be upset. You sort of feel sorry for him. "Of course, this ain't all. See how I've got those birds all studied out. Doc? Me, now I always bring my pass. Right here in my wallet. Let's see—no, not this one—this is my fraternity card—no, this is Group II, type B, the fumbler! Both the male and female eat die after spawning.

by Rene Riperson Mart Copyright, 1946, NEA Service, Inc. THE STORY: Red McFan, army pilot, comes home with a chestful of ribbons and a cocky swagger.

RUSSEL was worried about Red. He had been ever since the night before at Tonnell's. Red drank when they were in the Army.

Well, it wasn't too late to correct the last situation. He caught Red just as he was leaving the lab. Tapped him on his shoulder, and when Red turned around.

Red said that would be all right with him and asked what time. 'We have dinner about 4 on Sundays,' Russel said.

Elise dressed for dinner at the 'Condoms that Sunday slowly and with the loving care a woman takes when she wants to look her best.'

Elise, listening, wondered how they could laugh so easily. And then decided that perhaps that was how men survive a war.

Leaves From a Correspondent's Life Notebook

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK—(AP)—"Hello," said Martha Ellen, "come in. It's been a long time."
It had been a long time. I hadn't seen Martha Ellen to talk to since we were cutting up frogs and studying sociology back in the old Kansas City Junior college in the pre-atomic age.

In those days Martha Ellen was just another pretty schoolgirl. She was slim—maybe even a mite on the skinny side, the plump girls might say—and had big expressive eyes and a soft sweet voice. But there were other girls more beautiful. I know because I was in love with three of them my freshman year.

But even then Martha Ellen Scott had one thing the others didn't have: A dream of greatness. And now it's come true. She's Martha Scott, screen and stage star, a veteran of seven movies and five Broadway plays. But also—she is still Martha Ellen.

She has her own four-story house on Sutton Place, one of those quietly austere East Side streets where if you drop a twenty dollar bill you kick it aside with your foot, because you want to be seen on Sutton Place bending down to pick up a measly double sawbuck.
When we went in, Martha's husband, Mel Powell, a top jazz pianist turned composer, was in the back room rambling around on the keys, which he manipulates for seven hours daily.

"I don't get tired of it," Martha said. "Sometimes he does."
Upstairs her four-year-old son, Scott, was catching some early shut eye.
"He's my only real hobby," Martha smiled.
We sat down in a large second-floor living room lined with books which she says she never gets time to read. Her chief reading now is her script role in George Abbott's comedy "It Takes Two," opening soon on Broadway.
Martha Ellen says the fun in being an actress lies more in the work itself than in any so-called glamour of fame.

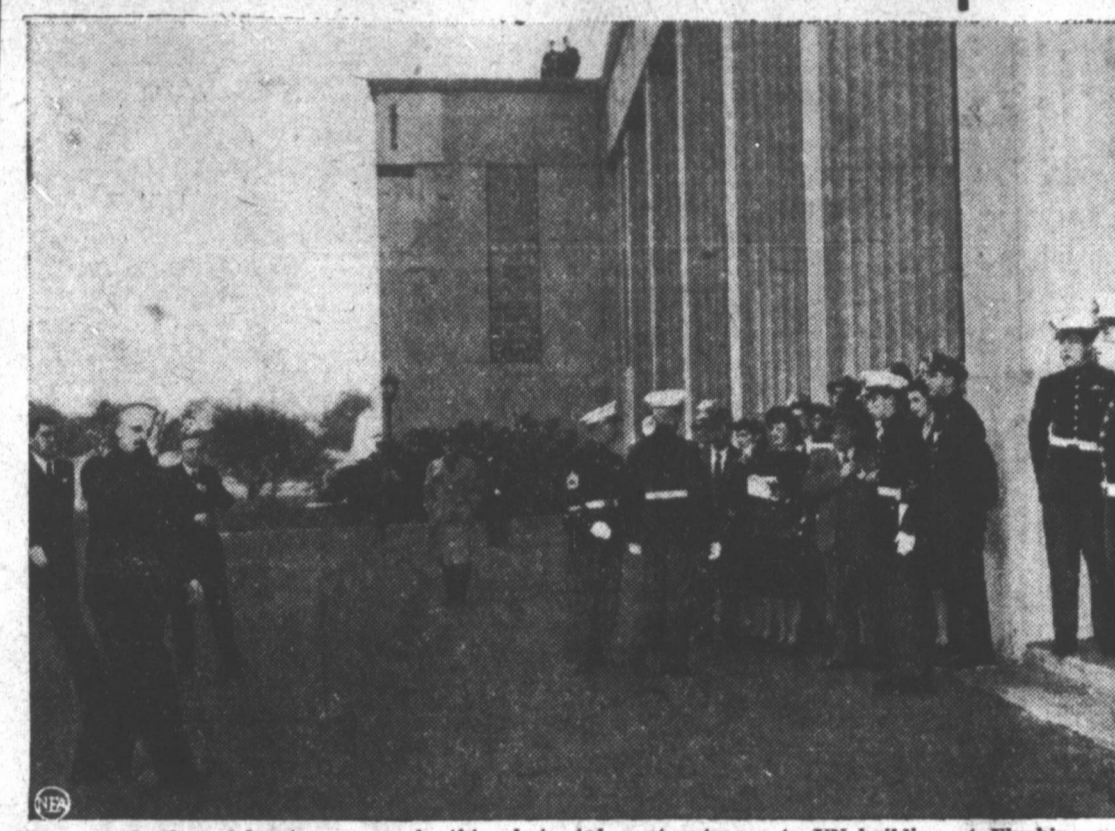

"It's still the most fascinating kind of mental life to me," she said. "You like inside another person in each role. I like that."
Knotted up like a squirrel on the sofa, she giggled as she recalled how it all started—the long road that led her to bright lights.
She had never thought of the theater until a boy she was secretly in love with in the Kansas City Westport Junior high school got a part in the class play. She tried out and won a part, too. Just to be near her knicker pants hero.
When she came off the stage the opening night, he said:
"Oh, Martha Ellen, you were wonderful."

But Martha Ellen hardly heard him. The audience applause was doing strange things to her ears and setting a new tune to her heart.
"He never did know I had been in love with him," she said. "He's still in Kansas City."
NEW YORK—(AP)—America, to one returning after several years abroad, seems like a giant crippled by pygmy fears.
Or, perhaps, like a schizophrenic in a field of mice, brooding over which one may grow up and give him trouble.
The national temper, bold, resourceful and aggressive under the strain of war, appears to be to have deteriorated under the frictions of victory and uneasy peace.

There is lacking above all—balance, the long view and confident faith in the immediate future, a future better than the people of any other country can ever dream of.
You get a feeling of widespread disillusion and personal insecurity, both largely unreasoned and baseless. These are the more striking to one just back from other lands, where America is still regarded by the common people as the beacon light to a secure world.
Housing, food and clothing shortages, appear to have made everybody individually a bit more selfish, put a brake on charitable impulses. The philosophy of "I'll-get-mine-let-the-next-guy-worry-about-himself" has gained many adherents. This is understandable among combat veterans, less justifiable on other grounds.
This personal fear that "there may not be enough for me" is reflected in many ways. The housewife who for weeks can't find a cheap bar of soap to buy loses some of her sympathy for the dirty-cared children of Europe.
"I want my kids' ears clean first," she thinks, and thereafter her views on proposals for world unity are colored by worry over whether they are just camouflaged plots to grab her soap supply.

So it is with steaks and shoes and nylon stockings and new motor cars and everything else the world is short of. The sum of the individual selfishness can crystallize into a national desire to "keep what we've got—and let the rest of the world work out its own problems."
Another puzzling attitude to one freshly returned—an attitude most often met in bars, it is true—is that "we should give Russia more muscle and less conversation."
This war talk would shock the average European right out of his bistro seat. There is considerable cynicism in Europe—as here—over the slow progress of the United Nations. But there definitely is no desire to cease these efforts at peace.

UN'S HUMAN CURTAIN: Cops, Marines, Special Guards Fence in New World's Capital

ing time driving from gate to gate before he persuaded a guard to recognize his credentials—which were in perfect order—and let him enter and go to work.
Bryan Urquhart, aide to Secretary-General Lie, was barred by a guard from the delegate's lounge. Andrei Y. Vishinsky, vice foreign minister and second man in the Soviet delegation, was kept out of the lounge by a guard's wide-spread arms until a secretariat member intervened.
The general public, without passes but hoping to share in the 250 seats supposedly available for their use, fared even worse. That may be one reason why, after the opening day when the President was there, the public stayed away in droves.

When Robert Louis Stevenson built a home in tropic Samoa, he included a fireplace costing more than $1,000.
Elmer Davis, internationally known radio commentator who headed the Office of War Information during the war, fared no better than the merest cub when he tried to get in. It took him most of half an hour. Another newswoman, who had covered Security Council meetings from their first day in this country, not only took half an hour to get in but almost as long to find a way through which the guards would permit him to leave the building.
The famous sculptor Jo Davidson, arriving as the guest of an assistant to Secretary-General Trygve Lie, was turned away. The marine guard recognized him, but somebody had neglected to send through his pass. The marine was sorry—but After trying all the other gates he could find, Davidson drove to the Flushing Meadows police station. A desk sergeant telephoned the United Nations, and was told that a pass would be at the gate by the time Davidson could get back. It wasn't. Eventually Davidson gave up and went home.
Robert Kenny of the U. N. press division was sent post haste, in an official car, from the secretariat offices at Lake Success with a big bundle of official translations of President Paul-Henri Spaak's opening address, the session could not properly begin until each delegate had one of the translations on his desk.
Kenny had credentials of which one of his associates said: "He is supposed to be able to go up on the dais, tap Trygve Lie on the shoulder, and interrupt him in the middle of an oration. If he thinks it necessary."
But these credentials couldn't get his U. N. official car through the official gate. While delegates and distinguished guests waited, wondered and waited, Kenny was explaining his status, describing the delay he was causing, and begging to be let in. At last he won. The guard permitted him to leave his car at the gate and limp on a leg injured in World War II, a mile to the building with his heavy bundle of documents.
A news service teletype operator spent $3.85 on taxi fare and wait-

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(AP)—The coal labor dispute remained as the principal stock market depressant today with leading rails and industrial stocks extending their downward shift. Dealings were among the slowest of the past several weeks. Extreme reactions running to two or more points were reduced in the majority of cases as the close. Transfers held to around 900,000 shares.

One of the day's soft spots again was American Telephone which registered a new 1946 low. Losers included Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Goodyear, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Consolidated Edison, Phelps Dodge, Dow Chemical, Du Pont, American Can and Union Carbide.

A little bidding here and there was attributed to the fact that liquidation never was urgent and to the belief that three successive stumbles had put the list in technical shape to relieve if the news warranted.

Secondary railway bonds yielded. Most commodities subsided after a foreign advance. Cotton, approaching the finish, was off $1.25 to $2.45 a bale. At Chicago wheat ended up 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents a bushel, corn up 1/4 to 1/2 off as much, oats down 1/4 to 1/2 and barley unchanged to up 1/2.

Transport Plane Limps In Safely

NEW YORK—(AP)—A four-engine American Overseas Airlines plane, carrying 34 passengers and a crew of five, landed at LaGuardia field from Gander, Newfoundland, today with one engine dead and another "rough," the control tower at the field reported. An official at the tower said the landing was made without difficulty and that no one aboard the liner was injured. The plane landed at 6:54 a. m., one minute before its scheduled arrival. Emergency equipment had been alerted at the field for any possible mishap.
