Middle Grows Thicker Over Rose Bowl Bid

By BILL BECKER
LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Pacific Coast conference found itself today in the middle of a Rose Bowl mud-

In this corner was the eager Big Nine, which yesterday announced formal approval of participation in the bowl. In that corner, blushing Army, just waiting to be asked. In the middle, the perplexed Coast conference, cast in a puzzling dual role of woe and woe-worrier.

Trying to avert a shotgun wedding and perhaps arrange a truce, Dean Stanley B. Freeborn of California, president of the conference, called a special meeting next Tuesday at Berkeley, to which a five-member committee from the Big Nine, headed by Commissioner Kenneth L. Wilson, will fly.

Big Nine's move probably left grooping jaws in the war department, Washington, and at West Point, where Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, superintendent of the military academy, earlier said:

"Normally the academy is solidly against any extension of the normal season, but this year there are plain exceptional conditions which may warrant special consideration."
But, without elaborating, the superintendent added no bid had been received by Army.

With the war department apparently very much interested in sending the Key-dets, including Southern California's own Glenn Davis, on the Pasadena jaunt, the Coast conference is faced with a situation calling for kid-glove diplomacy.

UCLA and Southern California faculty representatives declined comment, but SAC Athletic Director Willis O. Hunter, speaking unofficially and not in his capacity as Rose Bowl committee chairman, expressed pleasure that the two conferences were meeting.

Observer peering through the fog thought that could mean Army on Jan. 1, 1947—the Big Nine champion on Jan. 1, 1948.

Adamson Beats Sunset, 26 to 0, Nears First Title

By The Associated Press
Adamson of Dallas neared its first district championship Sunday in the 16-year-old Texas schoolboy football campaign entered a vital weekend.

The Leopards beat Sunset of Dallas 26-0 in a tie for the top. Five games of 44 scheduled this weekend in the state were played last night with Sam Houston of Houston beating Stephen F. Austin of Austin 16-7 for the first, Sam Houston victory in two years. The Tigers had gone through 24 games without a triumph until they turned the tide last night.

In other games Brackenridge (San Antonio) walloped San Antonio Tech 35-7 in District 15 while Milby (Houston) beat St. Thomas (Houston) 38-0 and Paschal (Fort Worth) trounced Stephenville 38-21 in non-conference contests.

Crucial games are scheduled in District 14 tonight. Orange can clinch the championship by beating Port Arthur. Galveston down Pasadena, which Galveston is favored to do.

Tomorrow Odessa plays Lamesa in District 3 and can take the title by tying or winning the game.

ED's Note: Adamson high school is coached by Verde Dickey, who was coach here until 1936, when he was succeeded by Oduis Mitchell. A brother, D. M. Dickey, is Port Worth and Denver railway agent here.

Frank Culbertson, head of the Pampa-Perryton highway rights-of-way was grounded by bad weather at Austin a few days ago as he was flying back to Pampa from Houston. Mr. Culbertson, who is quite an air enthusiast, had with him a nephew of his, Henry Shumaker, and Sherman Harriman, of Gloucester, Mass. The three of them, and Charles Brock, of Austin, attended the highway hearing there in which a Pampa-Perryton delegation was assured of a new highway route to Perryton.

Brock is the husband of the former Betty Culbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson. He is attending the Texas university, Austin.

Three-Way Draw Expected in SW Conference Race

By HAROLD RATLIFF
Associated Press Sports Editor
Quarter-finals of the Southwest conference football race will be played tomorrow with indications there will be a three-way tie for the lead when the firing is over at Fayetteville, Fort Worth and College Station.

Arkansas, Rice, Texas and Texas A. & M. start the festivities tied for the lead but Rice and A. & M. play each other, thus at least one team will be eliminated.

Arkansas engages hapless Southern Methodist and Texas meets dangerous Texas Christian. S. M. U. and T. C. U. are out of the running but they could play hob with a couple of dreams. The Christians are most likely to pull it off. They get Texas at Fort Worth on homecoming day and on homecoming day they have been poison for the Longhorns. On seven such occasions out of nine they have dropped Texas.

Rice and Texas A. & M. battle at College Station with the Owls favored by a touchdown. Not only do the Aggies severely crippled but they meet an angry Rice team on the rebound from an unexpected defeat.

Arkansas has only this game in the way of realization of a dream of more than 10 years standing of being a kingpin in conference football instead of a doormat.

Gorillas Capture 27-12 Win From Plainview Eleven

Piling up a 20-0 lead in the first three-quarters and staving off a desperate Plainview rally in the final period the Pampa Gorillas defeated the Plainview Bulldogs, 27-12 here yesterday for Pampa's third victory of the season.

For the first three periods, the Plainview eleven could get absolutely nowhere against a stout, hard-charging Gorilla line that repeatedly threw Plainview back for losses or stopped them cold on the line of scrimmage.

Piling up a 20-0 lead in the first three-quarters and staving off a desperate Plainview rally in the final period the Pampa Gorillas defeated the Plainview Bulldogs, 27-12 here yesterday for Pampa's third victory of the season.

For the first three periods, the Plainview eleven could get absolutely nowhere against a stout, hard-charging Gorilla line that repeatedly threw Plainview back for losses or stopped them cold on the line of scrimmage.

The Bulldogs failed to register a first down in the first half and didn't make the necessary yardage for one until late in the third period.

For the Gorillas, it was the passing and running of Halfback Jackie Williams that was the margin of victory as far as point-scoring goes.

With Williams leading the way, the Gorillas marched down the field 40 yards for a touchdown early in the second quarter, with Fullback Jerry Gillis hitting the paydirt from five yards out.

In the third period, a 27-yard pass from Williams to End Darrell Taylor placed the ball on the five and Williams went over, with Davis adding the extra point.

Airports in State Seen as Recreation Centers in Future

WASHINGTON — Texas, if it keeps pace with the estimated national upswing in airport construction in the next decade instead of the current 321 and many will serve in the dual role of airport and recreation center, according to an analysis of building trends in airports made public today.
In a letter to authorities of various municipalities of the state contemplating airport construction, Frank Sohn, who completed the study for Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company, declared that recreation centers, in the opinion of most aviation officials, offer the most effective means of assuring financial self-support for airports.
"Aviation activities alone cannot bear the full load of airport expense," he said. "Restaurants, beauty shops, bowling alleys, even newsreel theaters are well within the realm of airport activities."

CALL ME LIZ

by Rene Ryerson Mart

THE STORY: Red McFan, army pilot, comes home with a chestful of ribbons and a cocky swagger. When Russ Condon, his closest friend, asks Elise Varney to find a date for Red, she invites Sally Clark—beautiful but cold. Red needs dating. Elise thinks, and Sally is the girl to do it. Red thinks the evening a flop, starts to reminisce about the wild times he and Elise had in Paris. Russ tries to stop him.

RUSSEL'S abrupt action had the desired effect. It broke up Red's reminiscences. Red began to clamber to his feet.
"Yes," he said. "Come on—let's dance."

Elise stood up, and they waited for Sally and there wasn't much Sally could do but accept the situation. She went gingerly into Red's arms.
Russ' eyes followed the other couple worriedly as they moved around the floor.

"I don't know what got into Red," he said apologetically. His face was still crimson with embarrassment.
Elise felt her own guilt too much to blame Red unreservedly. "I'm afraid it's Sally," she acknowledged. "She's given him an inferiority complex—she usually does."

Russ looked at her sharply. "Why did you ask her? Wasn't there anyone else?"
Elise was driven to a small lie. "I thought Red might be good for her."

Russ tucked her closer into his arms. "Well, forget it, honey. This is our dance." His lips brushed the dark hair above her forehead.
Elise looked up at him happily and his arms tightened about her. "You're sweet," he said.

The music had stopped before they were aware of it and suddenly they felt a little foolish alone there on the floor in each other's arms. Russ laughed and disengaged her and they went back to their table.

Red was there, alone. He had another whisky before him and he was scowling darkly at the glass.
"Where's Sally?" Elise asked quickly.
Red nodded vaguely.
Elise met Russel's puzzled eyes. "I'll go find her," she said. She picked up her little beaded purse and went in the direction of Red's nod.
She found Sally in the powder room, repairing her make-up.

SALLY saw Elise in the mirror and said without turning her head and with cool firmness: "I'll not dance anymore with you Mr. McFan. He must have thought I was his 'Margie' the way he tried to wolf me. Disgusting!"
"He's not my Mr. McFan," Elise said weakly. "He's a friend of Russel's. And—Sally you might try to be a little more friendly!"
Sally had finished her perfect mouth. She dropped the lipstick into her bag. "You know how I feel about these things," she said. "There wasn't anything Elise could say. Of course, she knew how Sally felt about these things. . . that was why she had asked her."

No, there was no use in feeling angry at Sally, Elise admitted to herself. It was her own fault entirely.
Red was still drinking when they went back to the table. And he was beginning to get ugly. "Might as well get drunk," he said thickly. "Katy Hepburn won't dance with me."
"I'll dance with you, Red," Elise said.

She waited while he got clumsily to his feet. She saw that he was really a little drunk and she half regretted her impulse.
But she forgot that when Red put his arms about her. There walls will furnish an unbroken view of field activities for visitors, he noted, a construction feature now more practical than ever with new double-glass insulating window-panes which cut down heat losses through windows as much as 50 percent and sharply reduce frost formation and condensation which might obscure vision.

Nationally, the survey showed, less than 20 percent of the total of more than 3,000 airports are equipped with administration buildings while only 800 have office buildings. Almost half the counties in 48 states are without airports facilities of any kind, Sohn said.

Civil enterprise is the first step in establishing airports in sufficient number that all Americans may participate in the growth of aviation, he declared. "But proper and adequate planning," he added, "to avoid the financial and structural pitfalls of past decades is more than ever essential."

was a magnetic vitality about the man that was like an electric charge. Elise's bare skin tingled under his touch. She tried to draw away from him a little. He held her closer.

The uncertainty of Red's movements vanished the moment they started to dance. He was light and smooth on his feet. Their steps matched effortlessly.
"Say, we do all right together, baby," Red said. He seemed as surprised at it as she was.

He held her very closely. Around and around they circled with the hypnotic rhythm of the music wedding them together.
Elise pulled herself sharply from his arms when the music ceased. She was breathless.
Russel looked up and shrugged when they got back to the table. "Sally wants to go home," he said.

Elise was conscious of a sharp relief. "I think we had better go," she agreed.

THEY drove Sally home first, and then a definitely groggy Red. Russel went in with him and put him to bed. When he came back he got in the car and drove for awhile without saying anything.

Elise thought, "He is angry with me for inviting Sally."
Her hand stole out and touched his on the steering wheel. And suddenly the fevered night-bare of the evening fell away. There was no Red McFan, no Sally Clark, no complications. Just she and Russel and the sweetness of complete understanding.

He stopped the car and took her in his arms. "Oh, Elise—Elise—"
For a moment she felt his heart throbbing close to hers. She waited. She knew what it was he wanted to say.

But some fear, some lack of courage held him back.
He kissed her again and let her go. "It's late, dear. I'd better take you home."
She thought of that moment many times afterward. She thought of how different everything would have been if Russel had said he loved her and asked her to marry him, then.

It would be nice being married to Russel. Having a home... a real home again.

She got up then and stretched leisurely, throwing her long arms up above her head, stretching her slender body to a lovely silhouette in her sheer gown.
