Ike Says . . .

No Indo-China Aid Unless Asked For

WASHINGTON, May 4 —UP— Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Vt.) Tuesday after a conference with President Eisenhower that Mr. Eisenhower will oppose any military intervention in Indo-China unless it has the full support of the people of that area.

Flanders told reporters that he and the President are in full agreement that the United States can do nothing militarily alone in the Asiatic conflict.

"I was also glad to hear him say that no military action would be taken unless it had the support of the people of the region," Flanders said.

Flanders called on Mr. Eisenhower as Secretary of State John Foster Dulles headed home from the Geneva Far Eastern conference to report to the President and to Republican and Democratic leaders in Canton.

Officials said Dulles is determined to push his "united action" plan to save southeast Asia from communism despite recent diplomatic rebuffs.

They made the statement as Dulles headed home from the Geneva Far Eastern conference. He was due here Tuesday night, just a week after the party opened.

Officials said Dulles has pressing problems which should be handled at home. Furthermore, they said, he did not want to remain at Geneva where he appeared to lend stature to a meeting with Red China whose world position this country does not want to enhance.

Russia had a different reason. Radio Moscow declared Monday night that Dulles left Geneva in "defeat" because "his dictatorial policy" resulted in U.S. isolation at the conference.

Wheat Crop Outlook Not Too Favorable

Agricultural authorities today still were concerned about wheat prospects in this area, despite recent rains.

Jim Strawn, work unit conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service, visited several farms in the county, Monday and reported this morning that wheat looks "pretty rough."

While there is a lot of moisture in the ground, wheat does not look too good, he said, because of wind damage.

The slow, steady rainfall in the northern part of the county provided very little runoff water, consequently the water level in earth-tank still is rather low. Strawn and County Agent Ralph Thomas both said. Water seemed to soak into the ground without running off, they agreed.

However, it was a different story in the southern part of the county, particularly in the McLean area. "They had hard, quick rains in that area and water did not soak into the ground like it did in this part of the county," Thomas said. Farms (areas) are brimful of water there, he added.

T-H Law Revision Imperiled

WASHINGTON, May 4 —UP— Chairman H. Alexander Smith of the Senate Labor committee said Tuesday moves to write an anti-discrimination revision into the Taft-Hartley law threaten the administration bill to revamp the act.

The New Jersey Republican said any real effort to push anti-discrimination amendments would touch off a filibuster by southern senators. And that could spike the administration plans for revising the nation's basic labor law.

Anti-discrimination amendments were introduced separately Monday by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D-N.Y.) and Irving M. Ives (R-N.Y.) as the Senate kicked off debate on the Taft-Hartley revision bill. The proposals would make hiring discrimination on racial, religious or similar grounds an unfair labor practice.

Lehman made it clear he would press for action on his proposal. If a Democratic-led attempt to send the administration revision bill back to Smith's committee failed, Smith said such a move would mean a filibuster. And he frankly conceded that the anti-discrimination proposals are the "most difficult" hurdle the revision bill must surmount.

But he said this course would be "very hard" and added that it was unlikely debate could be limited to defeat a filibuster.

Other developments:

Sen. Harry P. Byrd (D-Va.) said some of the "windfall" profits made by postwar apartment builders must have resulted from "collusion" between federal housing officials and builders. Byrd, who has been investigating the alleged housing scandals for a year, said he believes the Justice Department will prosecute some of the builders and officials involved.

Indo-China's 'Angel' Nurse

HANOI, May 4 —UP— An angel Tuesday watched over the wounded soldiers of Dien Bien Phu. This angel does not wear wings or a halo, but borrowed army fatigues, a steel helmet and the Legion of Honor.

She is a French army nurse, the only woman among 12,000 battle-toughened soldiers fighting to the death in the surrounded fortress.

Her name is Lt. Genevieve de Gaulard. She is slim, dark-haired and has a gentle smile. Unlike most women all over the world Genevieve doesn't mind telling her age. She is 29.

Brig. Gen. Christian de Castries, hero of Dien Bien Phu and commander of the garrison, drew up his weary men at a ceremony outside his muddy dug-out command post Monday.

While Communist guns fired, De Castries brought Nurse Genevieve before the men and pinned on her breast one of France's highest awards, the Legion of Honor. Then he kissed her on both cheeks.

Genevieve was awarded the Legion of Honor for courage and devotion to duty.

WASHINGTON, May 4 —UP— Special counsel Ray H. Jenkins acknowledged that he once told a reporter some time ago the Army-McCarthy hearings might end in 10 days.

McCarthy Offer Puts Crimp In Proceedings

Senator Proposes He Be Questioned

WASHINGTON, May 4 —UP— Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy offered Tuesday to take the witness chair immediately in the investigation of his row with the Army.

Democratic members of the investigating subcommittee balked, however, and efforts to speed up the hearings collapsed for the time being.

A proposal to stop the questioning of Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens was broached by Republican members of the subcommittee. They have been under administration pressure to cut short the televised spectacle, now in its ninth day.

Would Reduce Principals

This proposal called for reducing the number of "principals" in the investigation from six to two. The Democrats refused to go along.

As the subcommittee wrangled publicly about who was responsible for the delay — a haggle which delayed testimony for more than an hour — these high points were developed:

1. Army special counsel Joseph N. Welch reiterated his belief that if McCarthy were called as the next witness after Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens, the hearings could be ended with testimony by two more witnesses "at most."
2. McCarthy offered to have H. Struve Hensel, assistant defense secretary, removed as one of the principals on the Army side of the case. But only on the understanding that Hensel would be subject to a later investigation.
3. Frederick V. P. Bryan, Hensel's attorney, said his client would agree to being taken out of the case only if McCarthy admitted he was only in "error" in the first place. McCarthy snapped he was "not in error."

Began 17 Minutes Late

The morning session, 17th of the hearings, began 17 minutes behind schedule because of the subcommittee's closed meeting.

Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.) made it clear to reporters that the three Democratic members were balking at proposed changes in procedure, although he said they, too, wanted to expedite the hearings.

Jackson said the three Democratic subcommittee members wanted "to do everything possible to expedite the hearings."

But in view of the "serious nature" of the charges from both sides (See MCCARTHY, Page 2)

Army Gives Nod To Pampa Guard Armory

Pampa will definitely get its National Guard armory in Recreation park.

U. S. Sen. Lyndon Johnson wired The Pampa Daily News a shortly after noon today that the "Army has this morning finally approved and contract let for construction of one unit army building costing $67,871 to house Pampa battery."

L. W. Mars, Amarillo contractor, will do the job, Mars, April 15, told The News he had signed a contract received from the Texas National Guard Armory Board, Austin, and that the only thing holding up construction was approval of the National Guard Bureau, Washington, D. C. It is that approval that Johnson wired about.

The Texas Board of Control March 11 opened bids on the project and the issue has been hanging fire ever since. The edifice a stock plan will contain an assembly hall, three offices, supply room, vault, two classrooms and a kitchen. Pampa Architect B. R. Cantrell designed the landscaping.

Meanwhile a five-man Communist Viet Minh delegation arrived by air to take part in the Indo-China phase of the conference.

Indo-China peace talks are expected to get underway within 48 hours.

The western bloc was attempting to hammer together an acceptable elections plan for Korea to counter the rejected Communist formula.

Previously South Korea, strongly backed by the United States, had argued that free elections should be held in South Korea and that all remains to be done is to hold similarly free elections in the Communist north.

The first hint that the West might now consider an all-Korean election formula came last week from Australian Foreign Minister Richard G. Casey.

Britain and France, it was learned, backed Casey's view, and informed sources said the United States has indicated it would go along if President Syngman Rhee's South Korean government is agreeable.

Pampa To Boast

Pampa may have a population of 20,448, but it will be a month or so before motorists entering the city know it.

Mayor Tom Rose this morning told the Pampa City Commission he received a letter from the Texas Highway Department, stating that the highway number changes sign once a year — in June.

Lindbergh Scores With Flight Story

NEW YORK, May 4 —UP— Charles A. Lindbergh has been awarded the Pulitzer prize in biography for "The Spirit of St. Louis," the account of his first solo crossing of the Atlantic.

The annual award for the best American play was given to "The Teahouse of the August Moon" by John Patrick, a comedy based on the United States occupation of Okinawa after World War II.

The prize for the best work of history was awarded to Bruce Catton for "A Stillness at Appomattox."

Two awards were made for a work of fiction.

The award in poetry was made to Theodore Roethke for "The Waking."

Two awards were made in local (See LINDBERGH, Page 2)

Pampan Finds Lost Parent

A Pampa woman has had a happy reunion with her father, whom she had never seen.

Etta Mae Green, 405 E. Kingsmill, who had been reared by an aunt from birth, this week met her real father for the first time. His name was not available this morning.

She had been told that another man was her father, but on Dec. 30, 1953, her real father found out where she was living. Since that time, they had been in correspondence. Last Sunday night her father and his wife paid a surprise visit to her home.

They were to leave today for Kansas City, Kan., for a short visit.

Park To Be Paved

One of Pampa's seven city parks will soon get a paving job.

City commissioners this morning okayed both paving and curb-and-gutter work on the east side of Alameda park.

City Mgr. Fred Brook pointed out to the commission that the city has had a problem of erosion, a condition that can only be alleviated by extending the shoulder.

City Director of Public Works James Cowan was therefore authorized to go ahead on the work. Curb-and-gutter will cost $444, and the paving, $610.

Yield Signs Okayed

Seven Pampa street intersections will soon have yield-right-of-way signs.

City commissioners this morning gave verbal approval for 14 new signs, two for each intersection.

Intersections involved are Spear and Kentucky, Crawford and Huff, Foster and Starkweather, Kingsmill and Starkweather, Faulkner and Rham, Sumner and Rham, and Oklahoma and Wells.

WRAPPING IT UP — R. L. Thompson (on ground), 825 E. Craven, and Quimby Robertson (on truck), 528 N. Hobart, were helping out today in the wind-up of the citywide clean-up campaign. L. B. (Bush) Haggard, city sanitation superintendent, late this morning reported that he expected to finish off the 1954 clean-up at 3 p.m. today. Ward One, the one they're working in now, is the dirtiest. Thompson and Robertson have been temporarily assigned to the clean-up. Here they're working the back of D. V. Burton Tire Company, 901 S. Barnes. (News Photo)

ROK Urged To Concede

GENEVA, May 4 —UP— U. S. Undersecretary of State Walter Bedell Smith met Tuesday with South Korean Foreign Minister Pyun Yung-Tai and discussed the compromise election proposal with him.

However, there was little hope that the Communists would accept even such a compromise.

Gas Hearing Is Postponed

The case of the City of Pampa and the Texas Railroad Gas Company vs. Empire State Gas Company, which serves Pampa, has been postponed until July 12 in 126th District Court, Austin.

City Atty. Bob Gordon late this morning advised the Pampa City Commission of the postponement and pointed out that it had been granted at the request of F. L. Kuykendall, Empire attorney.

Several weeks ago E. A. Steinberger, a Dallas gas expert, was in Pampa to make an overall survey of the Empire properties for the commission in preparation for the hearing, which had been set for Monday in Austin.

Originally, the TRRC ruled a compromise decision in the case of those rates which have been effective since Feb. 15. Empire contested the TRRC ruling, a decision which took the matter to district court.

If either of the plaintiffs or the defendant is not satisfied with the final district court decision, the matter could be taken to the Texas Supreme Court.

GOP In Two Races

Statewide Filings

AUSTIN, May 4 —UP— Barring last-minute mail filings, Democrats since 1952 will have only five contested races in their party primary next July.

No race drew more than three candidates, only three drawing that many; there were two contestants for two other offices, and the incumbents were unopposed in the nine remaining races.

Attorney General John Ben Shepherd drew last minute opposition from State Rep. Doug Crouch, formerly of Denton (and now of Fort Worth). Crouch accused Shepherd of using his office for "personal political purposes and advancement."

DEMOCRATS

House Speaker Reuben Senterfit of San Saba drop out of the gubernatorial race he threatened to enter last fall, but never did officially. He said he wouldn't have enough time to campaign. That left Gov. Allan Shivers, up for an unprecedented third term, opposed by his strongest 1952 opponent, Ralph W. Scarborough of Austin, and another Austin man, J. J. Holmes, 47-year-old Austin electrical contractor. Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey, also seeking a third term, was opposed by C. T. Johnson of Austin and Rep. George T. Hinson of Mbeola. The other three-candidate race was for the place on the Court of Criminal Appeals which will be vacated by retiring Judge Harry N. Graves. Running for the Democratic nomination to succeed him were Lloyd Davidson, Austin, District Judge Alan Haley of Wichita Falls and W. C. Graves, Dallas attorney. U.S. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson was opposed by State Rep. Dudley T. Dougherty, a Beaville rancher. The unopposed incumbents were Agriculture Commissioner John C. White, Land Commissioner Bascom Giles, Railroad Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson, Representative at Large Martin Dies, Comptroller Robert S. Calvert, Treasurer Jesse James, and three Supreme Court justices, John E. Hickman, Few Brewster and Clyde E. Smith.

Todd R. Adams, 42, Crockett, both are lawyers. Carlos G. Watson, Brownsville attorney who is counsel for the Texas Republicans, filed for renomination, as did Willard T. Holland, 48, Houston contractor. The only other Republican candidates were Thomas H. Nolan, 38, a San Antonio school teacher, running for congressman at large, and Harry E. Linderman, Houston, for agriculture commissioner. But Lane said Republican candidates could file for the office of office, for which there is no contest until June 7. A Republican primary was required by law this year, since the GOP candidate for governor, who was Democratic Gov. Allan Shivers, polled more than 300,000 votes in the 1952 general election. Shivers and all other Democratic nominees except Agriculture Commissioner John C. White were cross-listed onto the Republican general election ticket. White refused to run as a Republican. The GOP has held three previous primaries in Texas since inauguration of the double primary system in Texas in 1918; in 1926, 1930 and 1934.

Pampa Tax Board Needs One Member

City commissioners this morning came within an eye-lash of getting a third member of the city board of equalization. But they didn't need for a new person on the board came to light today when City Tax Assessor-Collector Andrew Jones told the commission that H. E. (Doc) Schwartz would be unable to serve because of illness.

The commission quickly named one man; but, upon talking to him, it was established that he would definitely not serve. A decision will be made next week. In other action, the commission:

(1) agreed to have City Mgr. Fred Brook check with Ernest Loyd, Fort Worth, on the topping of 14 city trucks. Loyd has done the work in the past.

(2) authorized Brook to confer with Police Chief Jim C. on a policy for hiring trained men. In the past and at present, a man is penalized by having to begin as a rookie if he has once worked for the Pampa force, left and then returned.

(3) officially closed the 1954 paving program hearing, because the 500-, 600- and 700-blocks of North Dwight are ready to be paved. No paving can be done till the yearly hearing is officially closed.

(4) approved the estimate of Plains Electric Company, Pampa, on the City Hall wiring job — "three-wire, three-phase primary service, transformer vault; and four-wire, three-phase secondary service." The cost to the city: $1,368.48.

(5) okayed gravelling policies for the city. The gist of them: it's up to the residents to collect the money and get it to the city.

(6) heard a letter of thanks from Brook, acting as chapter "dick" for Pampa DeMolays, the boys who took over the city government for a day several weeks ago.

(7) passed on a water and sewer refund for William T. Fraser in the amount of $275.41.

It was the first meeting of the commission in two weeks and all were present but City Commissioner W. D. Varnon, on vacation in San Antonio. He will be back next week.

Warm Weather Outlook Good

Warmer weather was promised for the Pampa area this afternoon and tonight.

The forecast called for generally fair and warmer weather through Wednesday.

Monday night's low temperature reading, according to Radio Station KPDM, was 39 degrees, 11 degrees higher than the low for the previous night when the mercury dipped to 28. Monday's high reading was 69 and at 1 p.m. today the temperature was 50 degrees.

Oiler Park Robbed Sunday

Police today were investigating the theft of candy, peanuts, chewing gum and other small articles from the concession stand at Oiler baseball park.

Mrs. G. A. Rath, manager of the stand, told police this morning that someone had entered the stand, probably Sunday night, and had stolen a number of small concession items.

Chief of Police Jim Conner said he was inclined to believe it was the "work of kids."

ELMER'S "The Friendly Store" SUPER MARKET

Around The Capital

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
 WASHINGTON, May 4 — UP—What's new around Washington? Sen. Robert H. Humphrey's two boys decided the other day they would put out their own neighborhood newspaper. A weekly, one cent per copy, "Skipper," aged 12, is the editor. Bobby, 11, is sweep-up man, and executive editor. The youngsters have a good chance for readership. A joke columnist, the latest one was "what did one wall say to the other?" Author neighbor was Yona Lieber, John, answer next week. I'm turning in my step and waiting.

Sen. George A. Smathers of Florida was committed to take his lady to a dinner in his honor put on by the Florida Democratic Association. He was held up a little by three roll call votes in the Senate. He called his missus and told her to go ahead, he'd be there later. The senator faded home. He couldn't find his taxi not to mention his studs and white tie. The dinner was well under way and the guest of honor hadn't arrived. His wife, Rosemary, made a frantic call from the banquet hall. Her maid told her he finally found his tails, but nothing else. "Hold the phone," the senator said. He made another search and finally told his wife to go back to her soup, he'd manage. Finally he did. He called on a neighbor, Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, and wound up wearing a shirt that didn't fit, with a collar on top that didn't fit either. Plus upstitching studs and cuff-links that in time for dessert.

On the second day of the televised McCarthy-Stevens hearings, I visited the House chamber. A couple of hundred kids walked in and walked right out. Their leader asked a guard: "Where is the nearest television set?"

And speaking of the wireless: A place called Meramec Caverns in Stanton, Mo., has placed radio and television sets throughout the cave so that tourists can get a running account of the Stevens-McCarthy going.

Some dairy experts around the Department of Agriculture have thought up a slogan they hope will catch on with dairy farmers who spread margarine on their bread. Mechem Has No Opponent In Primary SANTA FE, N.M., May 4 — UP—An estimated 100,000 New Mexico voters were expected to turn out in perfect weather Tuesday to pick general election candidates in one of the shortest primary ballots in years.

About 30,000 Republicans were expected to take part in the primary election, along with an estimated 70,000 Democrats.

The Republicans will choose between Raton rancher Alvin Stockton and Mayor Holm-Bursum of Socorro in the race for governor. The winner will run against John Simms Jr., young Albuquerque attorney who won the Democratic nomination at his party's pre-primary convention.

Two Congress Candidates. Republicans also will name two candidates for Congress to run against incumbent Democrats. The races feature Mayor Warren Cooney, who like Simms is a Republican mayor of a Democratic town; Santa Fe hotel operator Thomas Childers, and Joseph E. Rendon, a former OSS agent and author who operates an Albuquerque oil brokerage.

Democrats named the top of their general election ticket at their party convention, re-nominating Sen. Clinton F. Anderson and Congressman Antonio Fernandez and John J. Dempsey.

Gov. Edwin Mechem won the Republican nomination to run against Anderson by acclamation at the GOP convention.

Turks Stand As Middle East Bulwark

By CHARLES M. MCCANN
 United Press Foreign Analyst
 Turkish voters have strengthened their country's position as the key-stone of the Middle East.

Where Turkey's neighbors from Iran to Egypt are crisis-ridden on occasion, Turkey stands like a political rock.

It is a firm and powerful friend of the West in general and of the United States in particular, and it has opposed stoutly every attempt by Soviet Russia, on its eastern border, to bully it.

Foreign policy was not an issue in Sunday's Turkish parliamentary election.

Whatever had been his result Turkish foreign policy would have remained unaltered.

Free Enterprise Issue. The issue was free enterprise against socialist government ownership of industry.

President Celal Bayar's Democratic party stood for free enterprise, as the two great American political parties see it, and for the attraction of private capital investment to strengthen the country's economy.

The opposition Republican People's party stood for government ownership of primary-war and heavy industries, communications, power stations, irrigation projects and strategic mineral wealth. Its platform in this respect approximated that of the British Labor Party.

Bayar's Democrats won a victory so overwhelming that it surprised even optimistic party leaders.

The rise of the Democrats has been phenomenal. Bayar formed the party only after World War II. It won 30 seats out of 487 in the National Assembly in the 1946 election. In the 1950 election it won 408 out of 487.

It was expected that the party would lose some seats in Sunday's election. Instead it won some more.

Sen Attends Cornell. Bayar is 70. He is bald, of medium height, with black eyebrows and keen eyes behind his horn-rimmed spectacles. One of his two sons is a student of Cornell University.

He is a banking and economic expert. He joined the national liberation movement of Mustafa Kemal Ataturk, founder of modern Turkey. He became Ataturk's chief economic adviser.

The Republican People's party was that of Ataturk. After Ataturk's death in 1938, Bayar gradually became estranged from the party, especially opposing its economic policies. This opposition crystallized during the years of World War II. Bayar, in the interests of national unity, awaited the war's end to form his own party that he rocketed to leadership.

Russians Claim To Have Solved Origin Of Life

LONDON, May 4 — UP—Russian scientists think they have solved the secret of the origin of life on this planet.

They also believe they have proved there is vegetation on the planet Mars—as a first step towards determining whether there is a higher form of life there as well.

They feel further they may be on the verge of an important discovery relating to cancer control.

These and other subjects of Soviet research were explained Tuesday in a Soviet embassy publication "New Paths of Soviet Science," which not only gave a fascinating insight into the state of science in Russia but was significantly less critical of Western science than usual.

A Couple of Digs. There were only a couple of digs at the "materialist" science on this side of the iron curtain and only one example to show that Moscow knows how to make eyes scientists to the dialectical mark.

The theory on the origin of life is credited to member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences Alexander Oparin and, in brief, is this: Hydrogen, carbon, oxygen and nitrogen solutions were combined deep in the primeval seas under tremendous pressure into amino-acid "bricks."

These bricks built up into complex protein molecules. The molecules formed into "coacervates"—distinctly outlined drops.

The drops could exist only if changes in environment helped their stability. Some found favorable conditions, acquired a "perfect" structure and thus were transformed into the first living things. The others disintegrated.

Varieties of Plants. The subject of life on Mars is being studied by academicians O. Y. Schmidt and others. They have found 200 varieties of plants living in Soviet Yakutia, "the Pole of Cold" where conditions are as bitter as they are on Mars.

The dark patches on Mars have been noted by all astronomers. The Soviet theory is that these are purple or blue vegetation even though they do not give off spectrum lines for chlorophyll, supposedly a universal constituent of plants.

The scientist who had his fingers rapped is Alexander Speransky.

He made "inadequate use" of the teachings of Pavlov (one of the Soviet scientific heroes) in his studies of the nervous system, but after criticism from other scientists he reconsidered his studies "in a new light...to obtain a great many new facts"—says the booklet.

Strawberry Gains. GENEVA, N. Y. — UP—Virus-free strawberry plants made impressive showings in tests at the N. Y. State Agricultural Experiment Station. Within six weeks after planting in a field here plants of the 1952 season were not worth holding over, the plants showed striking growth. Young plants showed greatly reduced mortality.

General Motors has 118 plants in 83 cities in the United States, six plants in Canada and assembly and manufacturing operations in 18 other countries.

Brother Vs Brother?
 MOUNT CARMEL, Ill. — UP—The Kennard brothers, Charles and E. H., may oppose each other in the campaign for Wabash County sheriff next November. Charles Kennard is a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff and E. H. Kennard seeks the Democratic nomination.

Dentists Face Peril

LOS ANGELES, May 4 — UP—Radiation from carelessly used x-ray machines has lowered the life expectancy of dentists to 58 years and may cause a fatal blood disease in their staff, an expert in the use of x-ray warned Monday.

Dr. Gordon Fitzgerald of the University of California, told delegates to the annual meeting of the Southern California State Dental Assn., here that ignorance of x-ray techniques forces many dentists to retire at an early age and is the direct cause of death for many of them.

Their girl assistants, who hold films in patients' mouths also may suffer from a blood disease that is incurable, he said.

"We found in animal experiments that exposure cuts from the life span by a third. The careless use of x-rays appears to give the average doctor of medicine at least 12 to 15 per cent more leukemia," he said.

The San Francisco specialist is one of only 18 of this country's 50,000 dentists qualified in all branches of mouth x-ray.

Music Week Is Celebrated In Shamrock

SHAMROCK — (Special) — Music week in Shamrock opened Sunday afternoon with a vespers service in Clark auditorium. The observance is sponsored by the Fine Arts club, with Mrs. Bernard Harrison as general chairman.

The vespers program was given this year by guest artists, Mr. and Mrs. A. Skoog of Borgers, both accomplished vocalists. Their accompanist was Joy Dickey, freshman music major at Frank Phillips Junior College, Borgers.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Skoog received their B.M. degrees at North Texas State college, Denton, with a major in voice. Their vocal study was with Mary McCormick, former Metropolitan Opera singer. Skoog received his masters degree in the summer of 1953, and also received a scholarship for study in Sweden. The couple spent an entire year in that country studying with the conductor of the Royal Opera in Stockholm. Skoog is doing research on Swedish vocal music, under the direction of Gosta Percy, secretary to the editor of one of Sweden's largest publishing firms, and Einar Reif, director of Royal Academy of Music, Stockholm.

While in Stockholm he won an audition, which entitled him to give a vocal concert over Stockholm's radio. At present he is in his second year of teaching at Borgers night school where he is in charge of music. He also gives private vocal lessons.

Mrs. Skoog was in charge of music at Borgers junior high school last year and is giving private instruction in piano and voice this year.

Tuesday evening is "Home Night" when the following hostesses will open their homes to the public: Mmes. Jack Stroup, Lyman Benson, Cecil Perrin, J. H. Capeton, John B. Harvey, Glynn Bell, Sam Thompson, and W. Y. Burden. The public is invited to attend at any one of the homes.

Local artists will go from home to home during the evening hours to present their numbers. They are Robert Reeves, Flake George, Eli Smith and Henderson Coffman, in a male quartet; Jimmy Smith, reading; Margaret Zeigler, Frances Bechtel and Tom Christner, musical numbers; Ernest Cadenhead, vocal solo; Miss Delores Scott, vocal numbers. The boys' trio, composed of Pat Howard, G. Benson and Holmes Brannon, will present a number, and Nancy Bear and Connie Blake will play a duet. Bill Day, musical director of McLean high school, will sing Thursday evening at 8:30 in Clark auditorium, the Shamrock Irish Band will appear, under the direction of Bandmaster Robert Reeves. An unusual program has been planned.

Among the numbers to be presented will be "Take Me Out to the Ball Game"; "Three Bears," a humorous novelty; and a bass solo, "Asleep in the Deep," with band accompaniment. There will be a vocal solo, "Serenade of the Bells," by Ernestine Hofmann, with band accompaniment. As a grand finale, the "United Nations March" will be played, followed by "My Wild Irish Rose."

Brow-Plucking Rule Is To Take It Easy

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Most teen-agers take cosmetics in their stride. But when it comes to eyebrow plucking, many react rather violently.

Some freeze at the thought of tweezers and allow their brows to grow their unruly way. Others seem to go wild in their plucking. It doesn't take any magic or special talent to learn to use tweezers to shape the brows well. Employing caution and patience, you teen-agers can learn to pluck your brows becomingly.

The girl with the free-tweezing tendency must realize that her brows should be lovely to look at on her. Shaping them in the sophisticated fashion of some celebrity will do nothing to add to the attractiveness of her face.

In general, the natural brow line is the most becoming to every woman. The teen-ager, in particular, should not experiment with exotic modes.

The best plan to follow in tweezing the brows is to remove the hair that grows over the bridge of the nose and the few stragglers that appear low on the lids. No one should ever tweeze the upper sides of the brows.

The girl who is timid about tweezing can be assured that she will not run into trouble if she works slowly, plucking only in those areas mentioned.

And, if she is afraid of disturbing sensitive skin, she can prepare the area for tweezing by applying hot water. After the plucking session, cold water will help to close the pores, and a bit of petrolatum jelly will soothe the brows and soothe the skin.

A strand of pearls, right for any occasion, is also right for any shape face. The girl who wishes to cut the length of her face should wear a rather short strand; while the girl who wants to add length should select a long strand.

Carry Head High To Avoid 'Hump'

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Many readers have asked advice lately on what to do about a fatty deposit between the shoulder blades. This condition is known by the lofty title of "dowager's hump." Actually, it is likely to disturb a hard-working seamstress, typist or pen pusher. For it develops when the head is habitually held forward and the shoulders are rounded.

Tension and depression are partly responsible for the condition. They tend to stiffen the muscles and pull the neck bones out of place. So, the first thing you should do is learn to carry your head high at all times. You are holding your head properly when your ear lobes are directly over your shoulder bones.

And to help relieve tension, try this: Let your head fall onto your chest and then raise it slowly, tilting it back as far as possible. Do this up to 12 times and as often during the day as you think of it.

In addition to working at improving your posture, you can hasten the disappearance of the heavy lump of fat with massage. Using a good tissue cream, massage the area from the hairline down every night.

And don't forget the importance of relaxation. In trying to improve your posture, don't assume a stiffly straight one. Correct posture is comfortable.

Breakfast In Bed, a Mother's Day Treat

WHEN-AFTER, you will already have purchased your gift for Mother's Day by now, but the problem is to find a special way to give it to her. After all, this occasion calls for a gesture of affection on your part—the sort of loving act that means more than any gift. Here's an idea. Why not serve Mother her breakfast in bed? As you know, that's a rare luxury for mothers, and she'll enjoy it doubly because you prepared her meal yourself.

Here's a suggested menu for a full three-course breakfast, taking full advantage of canned and pre-prepared foods:

Kellogg's Flax in Cream Deviled Scrambled Eggs
Brown-and-Serve Cinnamon Butty Coffee
Marmalade

You can produce this scrumptious breakfast quickly and efficiently. First of all, start the coffee brewing. Remember that it takes two level measuring tablespoons of coffee to three-quarters of a measuring cup of fresh, cold water to produce each serving of flavorful coffee. You'll want to make Mother at least two cups. Percolators should perk no more than six to eight minutes. Vacuum coffee should be allowed to brew for two or three minutes after the coffee has risen to the upper bowl, and drip coffee needs boiling water and should be stirred before serving.

Next, set up the tray, heat the oven for the buns, and prepare the scrambled eggs. While the eggs are cooking, brown the rolls as directed on the package and open the can of figs. Arrange the food and the fresh hot coffee, add the wrapped gift, and you're all set. And what about warbling "Happy Mother's Day To You" to herald your arrival?

Deviled Scrambled Eggs
3 eggs, slightly beaten
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup milk or cream
1 1/2 oz. can deviled ham

Blend eggs with cream or milk, salt, pepper and 2-tablespoons of the deviled ham. (3 Tablespoons is about half the can—you can use up the rest for sandwiches later in the day.) Pour the mixture into the buttered top of a double-boiler. Cook over hot water, stirring often with a fork until creamy and set. Garnish with an additional teaspoon of deviled ham and parsley. This makes one serving.

Too Many Parents Forfeit Their Responsibility To Themselves

By MRS. MUREL LAWRENCE

The principal of a certain big-city junior high school came to work this week to find these things: a flooded gymnasium; smashed laboratory equipment; a burned school banner; overturned desks; ripped couches in the teachers' lounge and paint-splashed walls.

Said the principal to the press: "Too many parents have forfeited their responsibilities."

Responsibilities to whom? Our children. Of course our children. Always, the children. "Responsibility to children" define the American parents' success or failure? Isn't it our minds day and night?

Yet the children go on destroying. And on the charts, the delinquency rate creeps up and up. . . I am tired of exhortations urging more of this "responsibility to children." What I'd like to see is someone stand up and shout across the nation, "Too many parents have forfeited responsibility to themselves."

Because the destructive and undisciplined children are made by people who feel no responsibility to themselves.

I have seen them standing before judges, beside their sullen young in their faces. I have seldom seen awareness of what the judgment means to their children. Mostly, I've seen hate and shame of what it means to them. Because the only self-respect these parents have is what the children's conduct permits them.

So they have pursued the children with their terror of this power to make or break their self-respect. They have had to either overlook or scream at the bad behavior which threatens it — or plead slavishly for good conduct which can justify it.

We simply cannot love children who have the power to make us feel a success or a failure.

To teach Jimmy to be responsible for his conduct, we have first to find a self-respect that is independent of it. Then we are free of the bondage that makes his public tantrum or his lie our disgrace. And out of our independent self-respect, we can deal with his conduct firmly, kindly and convincingly.

If the authorities want more responsibility for children, they better start telling us to regain control of our own integrity.

RUTH MILLET

News item with a Dallas, Tex., dateline: "There'll be ball sitting at the Dallas Texas League ball park this year.

"The club is installing a 'Kiddie Klub' where the parents may watch the ball game.

"There will be movies, funny books and games for the kids in a special air-conditioned room. The city health department has licensed the baby sitters.

"Well, now, there's one more place where parents can go without worrying about the baby-sitter problem.

"Now it is entertainment world that has adopted that old, hospitable phrase, 'Come and bring the children.'

"It's a good thing, too. For that homey invitation has fallen in disfavor with many individuals.

"The dinner invitation these days rarely includes the children. The tacit understanding is: 'You get a baby sitter, and we'll have our children in their rooms and out of the way by the time you get here.'

"So it is a rare thing for many of today's children to get to spend an evening out with their parents — unless it is an evening of paid-for entertainment.

"No longer do couples feel free to load the children in the car and go calling on friends.

"If they want to take them out, they go where they know the children are welcome. They look for a place that SELLS entertainment. It's a sound, healthy phrase: 'Come and bring the children.'"

And since it is so seldom used by individuals these days, it is good that the theaters and ball parks are making it their own.

Land Abuses Cited In Talk By Oklahoman

AMARILLO, May 4 —UP—Land not suitable for cultivation should be returned to use as rangeland, a U. S. Department of Agriculture official suggested Monday as a means of correcting the drought and soil erosion problems.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Ross Risley, a former Oklahoma congressman, spoke at the 24th annual Panhandle Feed Grain Dealers Association convention. Risley said the worst drought and erosion damage has occurred on acreage that should never have been put under cultivation. He said farmers were asked for all-out production when the Korean fighting broke out, "but somebody miscalculated on how much wheat, cotton and corn we would need for the cold war after Korea."

The farm expert said 17 million acres in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico and Colorado have been seriously damaged by drought and wind erosion, and another 15 million acres could be ruined by a continued lack of rain. Risley said the drought had been broken in several areas by recent good rains, but the situation was still grave in other sections.

He said the Eisenhower administration has begun to attack the storage problem resulting from over-production of dairy products, wheat, cotton, corn and certain vegetable oils. Because of the administration program to aid cattlemen, Risley said, cattle markets are strengthening and the run of cattle to market is smaller than a year ago. "Barring unusual developments, the cattle industry may find it has made a normal three-year readjustment in the short space of one year," Risley said, "and it has done so without the use of direct price supports."

It's A Vice Versa Deal... Henry Says There's No Such Thing As Man Owning A Dog

By HENRY McLEMORE
There is no such thing as a man owning a dog — but millions of dogs own men.
Man is dog's best friend and let no one tell you different. I am surprised that Senator Vest's immortal eulogy was delivered on behalf of a man who had lost his dog and not on behalf of a dog whose master had departed this world.
All the dogs I have ever owned — from Major, who slept under my bed when I was four, to Dilly, my new English bull pup of twelve weeks — have enjoyed me as a slave.
I am surprised that I don't wear the collar and leash and have Dilly take me out for walks, romps, and neighborhood sniffing. The foot of my bed is Dilly's, and, in order not to disturb her, I sleep in a curled-up, circulation-halting spiral that leaves me partially rigid in the morning.
When I let her out to roam and wander, I am the one who worries about how she is getting along and who spends minutes — yes, hours — on the porch whistling, talking baby talk, and calling her. She is out among the flowers, not caring a hoot whether I have an idea for a column, whether I am going to like what I'll have for dinner, and how my negotiations with the House and the Senate are coming along.

She bubbles in when she chooses to — and bubbling in is the only way to describe English bull pups. They are so awkward and so ill-proportioned that they look like a cross between a hippo and a pig. They snort, snore, wheeze, and walk sideways; they sit down with a supreme court sternness on their face and then roll over for loss of balance. Watch one in action and you will realize that not until you have had a bull pup have you ever really had a dog. Try a bull pup and you'll find out that you'll never be satisfied with a Cocker (no matter how big its eyes), a boxer (no matter how splendid looking), a poodle, or any other breed.
As I write this Dilly is in the hospital. She tumbled down the front steps and pulled her leg out of joint. There go fifty bucks for X-rays, hospitalization, and a gallon of gas each time I drop by to pat her on the head and let her know that she isn't abandoned.
When I bought her I got these instructions among others:
Bed: 27" by 30", raised from floor, mattress of cedar shavings and kapok.
Food: A. M. and P. M.: Fine ground meat; must be well soaked and mixed with a quarter pound of horse meat. Noon: Pabulum or barley cereal mixed with half-cupped milk, half water. Generous helping of calcium and cod liver oil once a day.
Habits: Newspaper training after eating, or outdoors after eating.
Training: Use short words and mean them. Say, "Go to bed," "Down," "No."
Oh, yes, a light snack before bedtime.
Dilly doesn't like horse meat, hates Pabulum and barley, thinks milk is for sissies, despises her own bed, considers newspapers useful to human only, and likes the outdoors only when she thinks Nature has made outdoors suitable to her.
Still I love Dilly. When she turns that monstrous tongue across my cheek, squirms when I tickle her pink tummy, and insists on dogging my every step, I just have to say, "She's my dog, bless her."

OPEN WIDE—Serenó Vandini feeds an oddity of the horse world, a two-legged foal born on his Ferrara, Italy, farm. A veterinary found the animal otherwise in top condition. It hops around like a kangaroo.

Knows Which Half Is His

CHESTER, W. Va., May 4 —UP—McCormick, Medina, Ohio, no longer was worried Tuesday about which half of a champion bull he owned.
McCormick obtained sole possession of international champion Leroy Domino 15th Monday by paying $12,000 at the start of an auction held at Hillcrest Farms. Last year he paid $105,000 for a half interest in the animal.
"I've always been worried about which half of that bull I owned," McCormick said. "Now that worry is over."

New War Weapon

"Of course there is an organized group of Communists in the Korean war prisoners who have returned to this country. I ought to know — until a couple of months ago I was one of them." Thus William A. Ulman, writing in the Saturday Evening Post, quotes a returned American sergeant.

Mr. Ulman's article carries the descriptive title "The GI's Who Fell for the Reds," and is based primarily on interviews with over sixty former POW's. To get these interviews he traveled more than 6,000 miles by car, and ranged from New York City to tiny fastnesses in the Kentucky hills. As he points out, there is no simple answer to why an American POW becomes a non-repatriate or — just as bad — a Communist sympathizer when he returns to his home. "But, from his talks with returnees — some of whom had been at least temporarily converted to Red views and some who hadn't — he came to four definite and important conclusions.

First, none of those who swallowed Red propaganda knew what they were fighting for — "they had no satisfactory definition of what Communism was in theory or, more important, in practice."

Second, every man questioned, save for a handful of World War II veterans, felt that he had been inadequately trained for combat — "All, regardless of previous service, were bitter over the lack or inadequacy of anti-Communist political indoctrination, which these veteran soldiers now consider as important as grenade practice." (Early in the article, Mr. Ulman says he visited the Pentagon and was "fairly told" that each soldier is given a considerable number of hours of such indoctrination. However, going by his interviews, "It was evidently not sufficient or was poorly carried out in practice.")

Third, most of the soldiers he talked with felt that the demands made by wives and mothers for peace at any price and quick return of their men "were worth between two and four divisions to the Communist armies."

Fourth, "As to the question of what makes an American soldier turn Communist in the first place, I was given a double-distilled answer: vanity and self-indulgence on one hand, fear and hunger on the other." In other words, the Reds followed the "conditioned reflex" with promises of rewards to those who would cooperate.

Mr. Ulman deals in considerable detail with the backgrounds and records of POW's who were leaders in Communist cells. They are a mixed lot. One came of a family of pronounced Marxist leanings. Another was of the type who loves power. Others were "helpless punks" in the face of trained Communist indoctrinators. Others became believers when American officers capitulated to pressure and falsely confessed to have waged germ warfare — in this connection, Mr. Ulman writes: "It cannot be overemphasized that the persuasive power of one American officer on a group of GI's in such circumstances is beyond calculation, to say nothing of the effect on world opinion." One thing is common to them all — the Chinese Reds hoped that on their return to this country they would devote their energies and varied talents to spreading the Communist line.

It is obvious that a small number of such men, even if they should fulfill their former captors' hopes, aren't of much danger to this country. But Mr. Ulman's article is an impressive and often frightening description of a new weapon of war which works on minds — one that did not exist before the present world-wide conflict between irreconcilable ideologies.

Confidence Note

Of late, the great farm equipment industry has been facing a sales problem. The problem resulted from a decline in farm income which, naturally, caused farmers to tighten purse strings and think twice before buying.

The farm equipment people haven't just shaken their heads and said the situation is bad but there's nothing to be done about it. Instead, they've come forward with a positive and far-sighted solution — new and better products.

The story is told in a Wall Street Journal News Article signed by Roy Vicker. It begins, "Farm equipment makers are giving a flock of pointers to other industries plagued with sluggish sales. They're using new products into production and giving fresh features to old ones." Mr. Vickers describes many of the improvements and they are striking and important ones, not just gimmicks.

Another point of interest is the attitude of the leaders in the industry. Mr. Vickers quotes an executive of one major concern as saying, "Production of greatly improved machines is in our best interest, and is also in the best interest of our farmer customers." Another said, "If you sell 1954 equipment at the right prices, you can interest customers. If you try selling 1948 equipment at high prices, you are headed for trouble." Still another told him, "Farm labor is scarce and high priced. This, coupled with softened farm commodity prices, makes cost-reducing implements all the more important to farmers."

These views are typical of the entire industry. The upshot is that the farm equipment makers look to the future with confidence — and the farmer is getting the best tools the world has yet seen.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Nonfictive Of An Educated-Individualist
I missed reading Albert Jay Nock's book published in 1943 under the heading of "Memoirs of a Superfluous Man." I prefer to call it a narrative of an educated individualist.

I had read his book "Our Enemy the State" and his "The Theory of States" and many of his magazine articles. So when this book was published about 10 years ago I thought I did not need to read it.

A friend of mine quoted a sentence from this book that made me want to read it. The sentence was: "The only thing that the psychically-human being (man with a soul) can do to improve society is to present society with one improved unit."

That statement caused me to dig up the book and read it. While there are some things in the book that are tedious and hardly worth reading, it has much sound philosophy in it if one believes in liberty and the importance of the individual. It was so interesting to me that I ordered three copies of it — one for each of my children.

This book was written when Mr. Nock was about 80 years old. He writes in it how he changed his beliefs when he got new facts.

Since I have mentioned the reason I came to read this book I want to quote from the particular chapter that contains the above mentioned sentence. He starts out with a quotation from Spinoza as saying "The primary and sole foundation of virtue, or of the proper conduct of life, is to seek our own profit."

That might be rather a startling statement to those people who think profit for an individual is a crime.

Then Mr. Nock writes: "I found myself settled in convictions which I suppose might be summed up as a philosophy of intelligent selfishness, intelligent egoism, intelligent hedonism. It may be seen also how subsequent observation and reflection confirmed me in this philosophy. With a squeeze here and a pull there, any of those terms, selfishness, egoism, hedonism might be made to fit in a hand-me-down fashion; but I do not like them, because they connote something academic, elaborate, something which needs a great deal of explaining. My findings are too simple and commonplace for anything like that. If it were obligatory to put a label on them, I should say with Goethe's well-known remark in mind, that they amount merely to a philosophy of informed common sense.

To know oneself as well as one can; to avoid self-deception and foster no illusions; to learn what one can about the plain natural truth of things, and make one's valuations accordingly; to waste no time in speculating upon vain subtleties, upon things which are not and work not; — this perhaps is hardly the aim of an academic philosophy, but is what a practical philosophy keeps steadily in view. Because the Meditations of Marcus Aurelius so consistently does keep just this in view, it still remains, and for those who can take it will probably always remain, the best of handbooks to the art of living.

The fundamental validity of egoism and hedonism seems to me indisputable, as it did not only to the Cyrenaics and to Epicurus, but to Christian moralists like Butler and Wilson among Protestants, to Spinoza among Jews, and to the mighty Augustine of Hippo among Catholics. But putting all such authority aside, I hold it to be a matter of invariable experience that no one can do anything for anybody. Somebody may profit by something you do, you may know that he profits and be glad of it, but you do not do it for him. You do it, as Augustine says you must do it, are bound to do it (necessitas est the strong term he uses), because you get more satisfaction, happiness, delight out of doing it than you would get out of not doing it, and this is egoistic hedonism.

"I have known many persons, some quite intimately, who thought it was their duty to take 'the social point of view' on mankind's many doings and misdoings, and to support various proposals, mainly political, for the mass-improvement of society. One of them is a friend of long standing who has done distinguished service of this kind throughout a lifetime, and is directly responsible for the promulgation of more egalitarian and coercive 'social legislation' than a soul could shake stick at. In conversation with me not many months ago, this friend said mournfully, 'My experience has cured me of one thing. I am cured of the idea of social reform.'"

NO PARTISAN POLITICS WITH ECONOMIC SYSTEM — Secondly, it suggests that Eisenhower will not play partisan politics with the economic problem. For it is obvious that if he waits until September to intervene, it will be too late for government action to reverse the trend or improve the Republican position before the November outcome will hang on pocketbook issues rather than McCarthyism, communism or even the war in Indo-China.

IKE'S GAMBLE — Ike is admittedly taking a heavy gamble, reminiscent of his selection of the Bay for the Normandy invasion. He is motivated by his determination to substitute a full, peacetime economy for a system based on wartime and defense spending, artificial props and federal handouts of every variety.

He deliberately defies the challenge of the Democrats' extreme liberal faction, headed by Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Sens. Paul H. Douglas of Illinois and Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, and Walter P. Reuther, CIO president.

They insist upon immediate application of first aid by Washington, such as greater tax reductions, smaller money, public works, peak subsidies, increased unemployment and Social Security benefits. It is an extremely popular cry on voting eve.

F.D.R. JR.'S SCREAMS — As a prospective candidate against Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Roosevelt has introduced what he calls an "overall reconstruction" bill, embodying these schemes. It is a direct thrust at Ike's philosophy. However, it has not won the support of the Democratic leadership which looks upon it as a political ploy for nomination and election.

In fact, conservative Democrats, even though they would profit by believing that society can ever be improved through political action. After this, I shall 'cultivate my garden.'

One Improved Unit
"The only thing that the psychically-human being can do to improve society is to present society with one improved unit. In a word, ages of experience testify that the only way society can be improved is by the individualist method which Jesus apparently regarded as the only one whereby the Kingdom of Heaven can be established as a going concern; that is, the method of each one doing his very best to improve one."

Ike Puts Off Business 'Needle' To See If Conditions Improve

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower's economic advisers have postponed until September the time when they will decide whether to determine whether a "shot in the arm" in the form of a "slam-bang" emergency program to check the so-called depression.

This decision furnishes a tip-off on White House thinking on this question. In the first place, it reflects administration confidence that there will be a sharp upturn during the summer months.

Industrialists attending the U. S. Chamber of Commerce convention here last week also forecast improvement. Some think it will start next month.

NO PARTISAN POLITICS WITH ECONOMIC SYSTEM — Secondly, it suggests that Eisenhower will not play partisan politics with the economic problem. For it is obvious that if he waits until September to intervene, it will be too late for government action to reverse the trend or improve the Republican position before the November outcome will hang on pocketbook issues rather than McCarthyism, communism or even the war in Indo-China.

THE BASIC MEANING — In short, Eisenhower avowedly strives at some risk to check and reverse a 20-year-old economic trend and philosophy. Since 1933, our production and consumption system has been sustained and expanded, to a great degree, by federal money and measures. They were employed because of the depression, the war, European and world recovery, the Korean conflict and the Russian menace.

Eisenhower insists that we must eventually stand on our own feet, with minimum government support. That is the broad and basic meaning of his greatest gamble.

The Doctor Says

By EDWIN J. JORDAN, M. D.
For some years April has been designated cancer control month by Presidential proclamation and by the act of Congress. This is the time when the American Cancer Society raises funds for its activities in the field of research, education and service. It is a worthwhile endeavor.

I do not subscribe to the belief that people need to be scared to death about cancer to do something about it. In fact, too much fear is to be avoided almost as much as carelessness in heeding warning signs.

The person who is terribly frightened of cancer at all times should refrain from reading about the disease. He should merely be informed once and for all about what signs to watch for and pay attention, and should make a real effort to forget all about it at other times.

There are important things about cancer, however, which everyone should know. Surely it should be obvious that no cancer can be treated until the patient has consulted a physician and the physician has made the diagnosis. Early diagnosis is the most important factor. The person who stays away from the doctor in the presence of warning symptoms because he is afraid he will be told that cancer is present is taking a grave risk.

Lumps which appear on the body should always be suspected. Abnormal bleeding from any of the openings of the body is also always a cause for immediate examination. Loss of weight, which cannot be explained by dieting or other obvious cause, is another thing which should be taken as a reason for consulting a physician.

Of course, cancer in some locations is much easier to diagnose than in others. By modern methods of diagnosis, including X-ray, abnormal findings, even those involving the internal organs, can be discovered early enough so that treatment is satisfactory.

Fair Enough... A Lot Of Funny Business Goes On In NYC Waldorf Apartment

By WESTBROOK PEGLER (Copyright, 1954, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
NEW YORK — Regarding the efforts of Arthur J. Goldsmith of the Waldorf Tower and his clandestine political following to elect senators from other states, let us cite today a letter from Goldsmith to a young man who was put up to run against Pat McCarran in the Nevada Democratic primary of 1950. There will be other information in this installment further exposing a ruse put out by the Associated Press which had the purpose of covering Goldsmith's tracks.

That ruse was a handout from one of Goldsmith's stooges trying to create an impression of "southwestern" fortunes were doing the very thing that Goldsmith's secretive clique of Eastern millionaires were trying to do in Western states, Nevada, England, West Virginia and Tennessee. That is, to swing elections with secret slush-funds.

A letter dated July 10, 1950, from Goldsmith to George Franklin Jr., of Las Vegas, said he would pass along information to Franklin in the form of a letter-head from Nevada on a political mission with a woman married to a man who had been born in Russia. This woman, who was very active in Nevada politics for a brief time, arranged the pilgrimage to the Waldorf Tower in Las Vegas she had organized something called "The Atlantic Union" and George Franklin Jr., had been elected local president.

McKee, whose name occurs often in Goldsmith's tangled and mysterious political affairs, told Franklin that "we very much appreciated the privilege of meeting you and hearing your clear-cut presentation of the Nevada situation."

"I am enclosing a list of the contributors to Senator McCarran's 1944 campaign which I copied from the records in the Archives Bldg., in Washington," McKee continued. It is rather peculiar that all the large out of state contributors are reported with one initial only. Am enclosing some printed matter which we used effectively in the Pittsburgh area in 1942 and which might offer some suggestions for use for some of the material which Dr. Birkhead is sending."

Birkhead is a weary old professional practitioner in the same field of politics who ran a layout called the Friends of Democracy, which employed John Roy Carlson, deceased, as a professional liar and sneak. The Friends of Democracy is out of the New York telephone book now and the disposition of its "files" which Carlson sometimes referred to is not known to me.

The total contributions to McCarran for both the primary and the election were only $7,510. The largest single donation was $5,000 from the Senator's campaign committee of the National Democratic Party. Three were only two contributions for $500, both from Nevada citizens, two of $250, each, and of the total, only $906 came from outside the state.

On the other hand, a moaning National Affairs, dated May 18, 1950, and signed with McKee's rubberstamp, as "chairman," said: "We need money now because the outcome of the primary in several states this summer rather than the elections in November will determine who will represent those states in the Senate."

"If McCarran wins the primary, he is almost assured of election. Had enough of his? Or do you want six more of the same? We think the gentleman should be retired to private life — and we are working toward that end."

"Do you agree with us? If so, please send us a generous check today. Sincerely yours."

Who were these high-minded patriots operating by mail out of Goldsmith's residential suite in the Waldorf Tower to elect senators to represent the people of Nevada? The list at the left side of the letter-head included McKee as chairman, Westmore Wilcox, Jr., as treasurer, and Goldsmith as secretary. The "executive committee" included Dr. Harry Birkhead, Birkhead, R. U. S. 111, Davenport, Morris and Telford Taylor, the synthetic general who won his stars prosecuting second string Germans at Nuremberg in cooperation with Russian partners-in-crime of those same fascists. They also included Clark M. Eichelberger, who put out the A. F. story that rich "Southwestern" citizens were using their wealth to elect nationalistic Americans and thus to promote race-hatred. And, perhaps most important of all, they included Raymond S. Fanning, not further identified, whose interesting background will be developed in these dispatches in due time.

And what were the contributions of this "Committee on National Affairs" by contrast with the modest total expenditures of Pat McCarran in the 1944 campaign (only $7,510 beyond the lump sum from the national committee, under Roosevelt), the "Committee on National Affairs" needed $5,000 into West Virginia to elect Mat Neely and remove Chapman Revercomb, the author of an anti-Communist Immigration Bill, plus $4,000 to the West Virginia State Democratic Committee. And, although Goldsmith claims to be a Republican, this Goldsmith outfit in 1948 gave $1,500 to Estes Kefauver, Democrat, against Carlisle Reese, Republican, in Tennessee; $1,000 to Paul Douglas, Democrat against Curley Brooks, Republican, in Illinois; and $600 to James E. Murray, New Deal, leaving Democrat, against Tom J. Davis, Republican, in Montana.

In spite of all this, President Eisenhower autographed a mysterious dream-book attesting to the fine citizenship of this plotter in the Waldorf Tower; two of his brothers, Arthur and Milton, held secret consultations with Goldsmith at the Tower after the 1952 campaign; and Arthur Eisenhower, on a trip to Nevada, took special occasion to blast Sen. Joe McCarthy for his work in routing traitors out of the government.

Something funny goes on here. Not having gassed up the old kettle and set out on a whisk around the nation in some months, it's a little hard to say how that handsome and supple thing, the English language, is doing anywhere else in the United States, but here in New York it is rapidly being reduced to a series of troglodyte ensurable grunts which threaten seriously to mar the built-in beauty of a prized instrument of speech. If you use words of more than one syllable while conversing in the mid-section, or Broadway area, of Manhattan you are likely to be classed as an affected dud with a rush of words to the mouth. You tell a man you know and you tell him a reasonably detailed story of something that happened to some one of news consequence in theatre or TV and, after listening, he gives you a searching look and intones: "So?" Or, if he is feeling especially talking, he gives you a questioning look and says: "Then?" But he is nothing like the man who replies to anything with "Nah." This is a formidable little word with almost literally a thousand meanings. It can mean good things, bad things, midding things. I knew a man who had worked for a seven months on a long, involved plot for a TV soap opera, complete with more than 20 different characters, three sub-plots and all the trimmings. His work was to cover one year of telecasting at five times a week. We met in the street and I asked: "How is it going?" "Nah," he shrugged. It later developed that this meant it had been bought for next season, the sponsor and the agency had high hopes for it, actors were being auditioned for the cast, and all that remained was to find a suitable title to cover the serial. The lack of title led to the "Nah."

Then there was a play in rehearsal. It had a good script, a fine cast, a top director, a producer with all the money needed. As is true of even the greatest hits, little things showed up in rehearsal. The author was called on to rewrite here and there, to kill one scene, perhaps, and substitute another. The author worked for five days trying to get the kinks out of a key scene and make the play move brightly. He came back to the rehearsal and sat on the rehearsal stage and read it to the director, who was down in the front row. As he read, it became obvious that he had done brilliant work. Actors sitting around the stage brightened up, became enthused. You could feel the power of the new scene. When the author had finished reading he paused for a reaction. There was a long silence and then the director spoke.

"Umh," he said. "Umh." The latter word could have disqualified him. It had few syllables. At another time an actress being considered for replacement for the summer in one of the choice female roles on all of Broadway was given a superb audition. It had feeling, nuance, understanding. Plainly she was exactly what had been hoped for. All concerned smiled warmly and appreciatively as she played the scene. This was it, their replacement problem was over. No other actress need be looked for. They had found the right woman. She finished and stood, under the rehearsal light, waiting. She heard whispering in the front rows and knew that producer, author and director were discussing her. After a few minutes, the producer looked up.

"Oke," he said. The latter word could have disqualified him. It had few syllables. New Bayonet-Fighting System Based On Ring Tactics

By NEA Service
If you can throw a punch, you can learn bayonet fighting in minutes. That's the conclusion among military experts who have spent two years of research at the University of Illinois. The official bayonet fighting system of the U.S. Army and Marine Corps hasn't changed much since 1905. It has been criticized as being difficult to execute well, awkward, uncomfortable, with poor balances, speeds and coordinations. The new system is said to be much simpler to learn and to teach, easier to execute and more in line with natural movements. It closely resembles the techniques of a boxer, as can be seen in the photos below. Groups of young men were trained in the new "Boxer" method and by the old Regulation system. They were paired off in combative contests. Slow motion movies were taken and the results are reported "amazing." Various other tests and comparisons turned out pretty much the same way. The new method proved far superior in speed, striking power, scoring hits, balance and recovery. The U.S. Marine in the pictures is Pfc. Mark Havanagh, a member of the boxing squad at the Marine base, Quantico, Va.

Humble Chief Says Doubled Oil Output Will Be Needed

DENVER, May 4—UP—Humble Oil president Hines H. Baker of Houston, said Tuesday that the American oil industry must find a way to satisfy a doubled demand within 25 years despite soaring costs, tax problems, national defense requirements and increased competition from natural gas and foreign oil. Baker addressed the last general session of the mid-year meeting of the Independent Petroleum Association, which began Friday with advance committee meetings that within 25 years domestic consumption of oil will double, Baker said, dictating "an expansion... comparable with all that has been achieved to date" in the oil industry.

In the Middle East, wells produce in a month as much oil as the average American well produces in its lifetime of 20 to 30 years, Baker said, and dirt cheap natural gas is becoming a strong competitor. American oil companies also are finding the cost of domestic exploration increasing rapidly, and the industry must for security reasons maintain an adequate reserve producing capacity which is expensive in that wells cannot be pumped at the maximum efficient rate, the Humble Oil executive said.

Congress has always understood the cost factors peculiar to the oil industry which require special tax considerations, he said, and the industry is not earning "a larger rate of return on its net investment than the average for manufacturing industries." Baker said the "tax provisions applicable to petroleum are based on the nature of the business and are not special tax favors" — and any change "would not only penalize oil producers but very shortly would hurt all consumers and in time reduce the tax revenues realized from petroleum operations."

Texaco Finds New Gas Field

The Texaco company has announced the discovery of a new Western Oklahoma gas field, following the flowing at a daily rate of 2,500 MCF of gas on a one-hour drill stem test of a wildcat — the L. J. Perforations were made at 6,740-6,761 feet in the Morrow Pennsylvania sand. Texaco continued, and bottom hole pressure was 2,000 pounds. The crew is drilling ahead. The L. J. Barby is 5 1/2 miles southwest of the nearest production, the Northwest Knowles pool, eight miles west of Knowles.

JAB begins exactly like the Slash. It is like a long left to the jaw in boxing. Bayoneteer advances his left foot and pivots to the right on his right foot. His left arm is lowered and right arm is raised so that the right forearm lies along the stock of the rifle. As the movement continues, the left leg is carried further to the front, the trunk is bent forward and both arms are extended hard to the front. This is the long-range attack. It has been timed at 66/100 of a second.

Inconsistent Oil Policies Toward Iran Plague U. S.

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Five American oil companies are now negotiating in Teheran for an 8 per cent interest piece in the Anglo-Iranian oil concession. They are the same five against which the U.S. Department of Justice has pending a civil antitrust suit charging conspiracy to operate a world oil cartel. This situation presents the Administration with an entirely inconsistent policy on foreign oil development. On the one hand the government has gone to court to break up an international cartel. On the other hand, the Administration has been urging the same five companies to join a new cartel to get Iranian production going again. It could provide a more economic stability for the long-sundered and bankrupt Iranian government.

The five U.S. companies involved in this two-way action are Socony-Vacuum, Standard of New Jersey, Standard of California, The Texas Company and Gulf Oil Company. Cabled news dispatches from the Iranian capital have indicated that the five companies have received a commitment from the Iranian government. This commitment grants them immunity from prosecution under the antitrust laws if the now pending deal is accepted by Iran. But no official government source in Washington will talk about it. The apparent reason for this enforced silence is that everyone is afraid of saying something that might upset the deal. Iranian oil production has been shut down since June, 1953. That was when Iran's government nationalized its oil properties and seized the huge Abadan refinery at the head of the Persian Gulf. This threw out the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., which had a 50-year concession on oil rights in the country. Anglo-Iranian had offered Iran a new agreement with a 50-50 split of income, but Iran turned it down and kicked the British out. In the nearly three years since

Weekly Epistle From Capital Rogers 'Too Early A Bird'

Rep. Walter Rogers, of Pampa, talks of fishing, the Eisenhowers and a $28.5 billion appropriation bill in this week's newsletter to the 18th Congressional District. The congressman relates how he and his three oldest boys had made plans to go fishing at 5 a.m. one day, how he had left word in two places to be called at 4:15 a.m. and how he "awoke with a start, reached for my watch and saw that it was 4:30 a.m." Still groggy with sleep, he continues, "I charged out of the bed and made a mad dash for the boys' room to awaken them." But on the way was the kitchen — and a trash can with two more sitting on top of it. Rogers hit the trigger of the trash can — "this dangerous instrumentality" — and "bedlam broke loose." Rogers and the boys got dressed, only to find, from Mrs. Rogers, that they were a bit early — it was 10:55 p.m. The Pampian had held his watch upside down when he'd sleepily looked at it. And, to top it off, it was raining so hard that when they finally did get up

The Army's Hush-Hush CID

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA)—With in the Army's military police corps there exists an elite, hush-hush group of criminal investigators who wear civilian clothes, operate around the world and work hand-in-hand with the U.S. Secret Service, FBI, U.S. Narcotics Bureau and other federal and local law enforcement agencies.
The mission of these super criminal investigators is to protect U.S.

troops as well as seek out those men in uniform who commit crimes.
Not long ago in Germany a farmer was found dead in the back of the truck on which he had been riding. Death was caused by what appeared to be a bullet wound in the man's head and local authorities had picked up a U.S. Army officer who had been hunting along the road as the suspected assailant.
The Army's CI men assigned to the case were skeptical of the officer's guilt although there was strong circumstantial evidence against him. The autopsy report made by a local coroner was a little vague and the officer's denial of guilt sounded true.

CI men took a ride along the same route. In the middle of this trip one of them noticed a very low-hanging branch. He stopped and found what appeared to be dried blood on a sharp twig.
An Army mobile crime lab proved that it was blood and the same type as that of the dead man. The branch had killed him, not a gun.

On the other side of the picture, not long ago, the same sort of careful detective work uncovered a murder plot in what appeared to be an ordinary automobile accident. A GI had killed his wife and tried to make it look like the result of a car smash-up.

National attention has been focused on this special Army investigation group by the much-publicized Pvt. G. David Schine,
pute. Schine's application to get in the Army's CI school at Camp Gordon, Ga., was turned down. In the resultant publicity the existence of the school and some of its activities became general public knowledge for the first time.

Following regulations, the Army's Provost Marshal, Gen.
William H. Maglin, is not revealing why he turned down Schine's application for the school. But the established qualifications for candidates make it fairly apparent why Schine didn't make the grade.

In the first place Schine's experience investigating communism for the McCarthy committee in no way qualified him for this specialized MP work. "We worry about sin," explains Gen. Maglin.

RE-ENACTING A CRIME: "Blain" dummy lies on floor of resashed room in mock crime scene at Army's CID school, where future criminal investigators learn how to track down vital clues.

"Subversion is the worry of the Counter-Intelligence Corps, another part of the Army entirely."
Only rarely do draftees get into CI group. One of the last who did was a former G-man. Another qualification is two years service in the Army. Gen. Maglin feels that an investigator must have an intuitive knowledge of how the service operates.

Members of the CI group are officers, warrant officers and sergeants. They're mostly former detectives, police officers and investigators and plan to make this work in the Army a career.

Since the war CI men have had a hand in breaking up dope rings around the world, arresting murderers, halting big and small rackets in the Army and breaking up bootleg rings.

Several months ago a CI man worked his way into a phony insurance firm which had elaborate plans for bilking GIs in Europe.
He was able to break up the racket before it got started.

A little more than a year ago CI agents moved in on a gang of counterfeiters in Europe who were just starting to print $2 million worth of military payment certificates.

In all of this work in the U.S. and abroad CI men work closely with local police and other federal agents. It has become an important adjunct to the nation's crime detection and prevention force.

G. L. Lunsford Tries Politics Third Time

G. L. (Nat) Lunsford, 47, of 810 W. Wilks, has announced and filed for the office of county commissioner from Precinct Two.
A Pampa since 1929, he will run in the July 24 Democratic primary against incumbent W. E.
(Bill) Jarvis and M. C. Schaffer.
"I'll serve full-time on the job and not have any other sideline," he said in making his announcement.
Since coming to Pampa in 1929, Lunsford has been associated with his brother in the Lunsford Bit and Machine shop, 844 S. Cuyler. He is a welder.
Born in Marietta, Okla., it will be his third "go" at political office. In 1950 he was defeated for the same job by J. W. (Bill) Graham, a candidate for the post himself this year till he took himself out of the race Friday.
Two years ago, Lunsford was defeated in a run-off primary by Justice of the Peace John Andrews.
Lunsford was reared in Chickasha, Okla., and was graduated from Chickasha high school. He remained in that locality till he came to Pampa.
In Pampa he is a member of the Calvary Baptist church and has been an umpire and a sponsor in the Kiwanis softball league.
He has also managed in the industrial league.
He is married and has a daughter, Estelle C. Lunsford, 15.

tummy when he drove.

Carlson's weekly program, "I Led Three Lives," is a suspenseful serial based on a book written by Herbert Philbrick. For nine years Philbrick posed as a Communist for the FBI and is still very much around as a New York newspaper
(The Herald Tribune) columnist.
Carlson plays Philbrick.
Philbrick keeps an eye on how Carlson plays Philbrick.
"It's a tremendous responsibility to portray a real person every week," Carlson said Tuesday.

"Furthermore, we are dealing with material that is the most important thing in the world today and that's a responsibility. Also, the FBI has to be satisfied with the scripts."

Philbrick reads each script all of which are based on some incident in the book. From New York he notifies Ziv productions, which film the popular series, of his approval. Often he suggests changes in Carlson's impersonation.

"When we first started the show,
I wore slacks and a sport jacket.
The way men dress out here in California," said the actor.
"Philbrick said, 'remember, I'm an eastern advertising man in the story,' so I bought those suits with the vents in the back, the knit tie and button-down shirts. You know, real Boston."
"I used to wear a Windsor knot on my tie, a big knot, but I was told to make a smaller, eastern knot."

The program, seen on 157 stations, is rated among the top ten shows in the country, and has collected several awards including the George Washington honor medial of the Freedom Foundation at Columbia University.

Carlson emphasized that the program is "not Red-baiting, not intended to teach anybody anything, but just to entertain."
In addition to TV films, Carlson continues his "Orson Welles Junior" career as a movie actor, writer, producer and director. Currently he's directing his second picture, "Riders to the Sky," starring Nina Foch and Rory Calhoun at Universal-International Studio.
Carlson believes directing "is more interesting, more to my taste, than acting."
"I hope since the TV show I will not lose my identity as Carlson and be known as Philbrick, but I'm not sure," he said with a grin. "Around the studio here the telephone operator calls me 'Comrade Herb' and the grips on the set say 'This is Philbrick.'"
He added, "the show has changed Philbrick's life, too. He's in the audience's demand on the lecture circuit now."
