Celanese auction ends Saturday

BY DAVID BOWSER

Bargain hunters have been at the former Celanese plant this week, as the inventory of items is sold off. Celanese opened in Pampa in 1952 and was sold in August, 2007. Operations ceased in January.

The plant that once hummed with activity as a symbol of Pampa's manufacturing might in the petrochemical industry now echoes with memories and an auctioneer's chant as bargain hunters search through the empty corridors, rooms and spaces.

This week's auction of equipment at the Celanese plant west of Pampa will draw to a close Saturday with the sale of furniture, drafting tables, office equipment, computers, laptops and respiratory equipment. Each day of the four day sale featured different types of equipment. Tools, machinery, safety equipment, shelving and work benches are on the block today.

Established in 1952, to take advantage of the area's abundance of natural gas, the plant primarily produced acetic acid and acetic anhydride, chemicals that eventually became part of various commercial products ranging from aspirin to photographic film to textiles.

Celanese joined with the Australian investment and advisory firm of Babcock and Brown in 2006 to support a state proposal to connect power plants in the Texas Panhandle to the ERCOT (Electric Reliability Council of Texas) downstate.

Babcock and Brown is a global investment firm involved in power generation and electric transmission and distribution. That had planned on developing a wind farm near Pampa and using the coal-fired power plant at the Celanese plant for backup during peak demand.

The international company, however, is now restructuring and plans are on hold while the world tries to work through economic problems.

Stowers here to stay

BY LESLI ABBOTT
 labbott@thepampanews.com

Wednesday, Richard Stowers, Jr., Culberson-Stowers, Inc. General Manager received a much anticipated Letter of Intent from General Motors.

General Motors told 1,100 other dealerships it does not plan to renew their franchise agreements in late 2010 and expects to shed an additional 900 dealerships through attrition and by selling or discontinuing its Hummer, Pontiac, Saab and Saturn brands. Stowers is not one of those dealerships. The letter identifies Culberson-Stowers as one of its key dealers for Chevrolet, Buick, and GMC in Texas. Part of the GM letter pertaining to surviving dealerships is that they must sign and return a participation pact.

If dealers refuse to sign, GM will terminate their franchise. And for those that sign on to the new pact, they are required to accept any demands without appeal or protest that GM might make pertaining to upgrading their stores and addressing any competing franchises within the same dealership.

But as Richard Stowers looked at the language in the GM document, he said he was shocked. "I don't like it. It's wrong on so many levels, I don't know where to begin. What GM is doing is just wrong. I wish they'd filed bankruptcy six to eight months ago," Stowers said.

Stowers spoke of what the dealership has meant to his family. He is the third generation of the family at the helm. His grandfather, Frank Culberson started the business, and Richard's father, Dick Stowers, has been involved in the business since 1951. Richard, Jr. started in the automobbile business at the age of 15. "Every day when I left school, I'd go straight to the dealership." He says he worked in every department, where he learned the business literally from the ground up.

The corporation has made several acquisitions through the years, including the purchase of Tom Rose Cadillac, Brown Pontiac, and in the 1980's they brought the popular Toyota line to Pampa.

Politicians were speaking their minds this week, to GM's president Fritz Henderson. Senate Commerce Committee Chairman Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., on Wednesday said, "I don't believe that companies should be allowed to take taxpayer funds for a bailout and then leave local dealers and their customers to fend for themselves with no real plan, no notice and no real help. That is just plain wrong." Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison (R,Texas), the Ranking Member on the Senate Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee, made the following statement Wednesday during a Commerce Committee hearing on the General Motors and Chrysler dealership closures. In addition, just this week, General Motors has begun its process, saying that it would close up to 40 percent of its dealerships, which would be approximately 2,300, give or take, of the dealerships in this country following on 789 dealerships from Chrysler. "Now just to put this in per-

New home for Wheeler family ready to unveil

On April 2, 2009 the Carr home in Wheeler was destroyed by wildfire. Saturday, June 6, at 1 p.m., the family will see a brand new home, built completely by volunteers.

On Thursday of this week, the Executive Officer of the Panhandle Builders Association, Lew Bradshaw updated on the progress of the home that is being built to replace the family's home that was destroyed in the April wildfires.

"The goal was to have the home completed by 1 p.m. on Saturday, June 6 when the Carr family of five will return from their vacation trip which was donated thru the organization's fund raising.

"Today is just Thursday and the house is complete. We have some wall paper going up right now and a mural is being painted on one wall.

"The landscape supplies, also donated, will be here this afternoon for their layout and the plants will be delivered on Friday. So we are a full two days ahead of schedule."

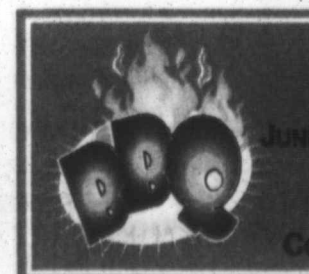

Bradshaw says that it's been a little crowded at times, with 40-60 volunteers stepping around and over one another. "It's been quite a scene and a true blessing to see so many people come out and offer to help. The response has just been phenomenal", he said.

The public is invited for the unveiling of the house that will become a home once the Carr's step thru the door, the house project is at 2827 FM 2473, in Wheeler. The public is invited for the dramatic presentation to the family at 1 p.m., Saturday June 6. "We want as many folks out here at that time for the

New Texas historian starting 2-year term

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Short and stocky, Light Cummins laughs that no one will mistake him for the lean and tall Marlboro Man, the advertising icon of an earlier generation who came to personify the stereotypical Texan.

Despite appearances, Cummins is every bit a Texan. His family pedigree goes back almost 200 years in the Lone Star State and his summers growing up were spent on a Texas ranch where he learned to ride horses and handle cattle.

Now Cummins, 63, is the new Texas state historian and has a statewide platform to preach the gospel of Texas history, which he's taught for nearly a third of a century at Austin College in Sherman.

"Every Texas historian is in one way or another trying to address the question: Why is Texas unique?" he said from his North Texas college office crammed floor to ceiling with books about the state and dominated by a pull down map of Texas. "What is it about our myth, our mythology, what it is about ourselves that so compellingly makes the Texas experience historically unique? That's a very important thing that all Texas historians seek to deal with."

He'll spend the next two years, the term of his appointment by Gov. Rick Perry, advancing awareness of Texas history and providing mechanisms for people to get information about the state's colorful past. Within days of his swearing-in a couple weeks ago in Austin, he established a Texas State Historian blog.

"There are several other states that have a uniqueness to them," he said. "But Texas is unique in that it may be the only state in the union where people have a state-based identification to it, similar to the concept historians call nationalism. That's very very unique."

He credits the Republic of Texas, when in the decade beginning in 1836 Texas was its own country, for fostering that sentiment.

"If you look at the history of nationalism as a concept, you'll find it was in the early 19th century all over the world where people developed national identification," he said. "People who came to Texas developed that in the Republic and it stuck."

Cummins, who just finished his eighth Texas book, a biography of Emily Austin, the sister of Stephen F. Austin, in May became the second person to hold the state historian title in its current form. The Texas Legislature in 2005 formalized the job, which pays nothing and receives no state financial backing. It does, however, make him the public face at libraries and teacher seminars and local historical community functions for a state that has more than 600 museums and more historic courthouses dating from the mid-19th century than any other state.

"I grew up in a family that was very proud of its Texas heritage and with stories of ranching life and pioneer times," he said. "I knew people who remembered very clearly as young folks the era of the trail drives and the great cattle ranches. I had relatives that participated."

Cummins succeeds Frank de la Teja, a professor and chairman of the history department at Texas State University in San Marcos.

"Much of what Light needs to do is in the area of consciousness raising," he said. "Many people don't know about the state historian and if they do, don't know exactly what is involved."

Larry Oaks, executive director of the Texas Historical Commission, said Cummins' books and research and accomplishments make him "a master of enriching people's lives through history."

By statute, the historian's only official function is to advise state government leaders and promote the understanding and teaching of Texas history.

"It's great that the state has this office, and as the general public becomes more aware of its existence, I'm sure whoever holds it will be in a position to help promote the great historical and cultural legacy of the state," de la Teja said.

In this May 28, 2009 photo Light Cummins reaches for a book in his Austin College office in Sherman, Texas. Cummins, 63, is the new Texas state historian and has a statewide platform to preach the gospel of Texas history, which he's taught for nearly a third of a century at Austin College.

Cummins calls it a self-generating job and lauded his predecessor for bringing enthusiasm for Texas history wherever he went.

"And that's what I'm going to do," he said. "I'm simply doing what I always do... If anything, I'm intimidated and daunted. I'm worried people may have expectations for what I'm doing that are simply not realistic."

"I'm simply going to be a professor to a larger constituency."

Cummins calls himself a "native Texan born in Connecticut," the result of his mother living with relatives in the East while his father was in the military during World War II. They moved back to Texas two months after he was born, settled first in Bandera, then moved to San Antonio, where his father was a dentist and where he attended school. He spent summers on ranches of relatives in Columbus, west of Houston, received his undergraduate degree at Southwest Texas State and did graduate work at Tulane University. He's a former Fulbright Scholar.

Cummins figures over the years he's been to every town in Texas "big enough to have a stoplight, and some that haven't." Over the past two years alone, he's logged more than 30,000 miles working on a book project with his wife, Victoria, also an Austin College history professor, that began with identifying murals painted in post offices in the 1930s. Now it's grown to include other artwork like sculptures and music and markers from what he calls "the great era of Texas nationalism."

"Texas is a living history laboratory, it really is," he said.

And it's changing. "Texas is a far more diverse state than it was in a lot of ways," Cummins said. "And Texas history, if we're going to keep our identity, Texas history is going to have to respond to that diversity."

"The typical stereotype of Texas can be the cattle ranch and the cowboy, but how many Texans live on ranches today and how many Texans are cowboys?" he asked. "Today, most Texans are urban." They also aren't typically Anglo.

"We're making new history now," he said, suggesting that 100 years from now the stereotypical Texan "may well be a city dweller, may be a woman, may be someone who's not of Anglo-Saxon heritage, but it will be someone who is thoroughly Texan."

One thing he doesn't expect to change is the friendliness he sees among Texans in his travels, like his visit to Blanco in the Hill Country over the recent Memorial Day weekend.

"Texans have an exuberance that you don't generally see in a lot of other states."

Carr's homecoming and introduction to their new home."

Clint Norton of Amarillo decided to spearhead the project after helping with relocation during the fire. Norton is a member of Texas Panhandle Builders Association Remodelers Council.

"On the way back to Amarillo, my buddy and I were talking about how we could help with the recovery process for some of the families," Norton said "By the time we got to Pampa, we had phone reception and we started calling our colleagues and when we hit Amarillo, we pretty much had everyone involved and the idea just took off." "We decided to hold interviews with families who had no insurance and had lost everything they called home and we decided on one family", Norton said.

The volunteers were inspired by ABC's "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition."

The lucky recipient of the home is the family of Huey and April Carr and their three children. Norton organized a drop-off point at Casey Carpet, where he works as a salesman.

The donations from

Amarillo residents along with 120 tradesmen who are volunteering their labor and products, are involved in the project. Semi trucks, completely loaded, delivered everything from furniture and appliances, to clothing, and household items for fire victims in Wheeler.

On May 30, the Carr family was told they would be the recipients of a new home. The volunteers were inspired by ABC's "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition." The family of five was whisked away by a limousine to Amarillo where they boarded a jet bound for San Antonio for a six day vacation complete with hotel, meals and tickets to Sea World and Schlitterbahn in New Braunfels. While the family was away, volunteers have worked around the clock to complete the home.

The Carr's new home is about 1600 square feet. Besides the entirely donated home building products, the house has been fitted with new appliances. Numerous companies have donated products and labor to this project.

more than 400 people. More recently, its workforce was scaled back to 250. Once the sale of the plant was announced, The Celanese workforce dwindled to only a handful today as the items at the plant are liquidated. The plant continued to operate, clearing its lines, until January.

Medication safety

Statistics

- In 1999, approximately 7,000 patient deaths were linked to errors in the prescribing and administering of medications.
- One person dies each day, and 1.3 million people are injured each year due to medication errors.
- Adverse Drug Effects (ADEs) may rank between the 4th and 5th leading causes of death.
- The annual cost of drug-related morbidity and mortality is estimated to be $177 billion in the U.S.
- At greatest risk for medication-related problems are America's seniors. While medications are probably the single most important factor in improving the quality of life for seniors, this population remains especially susceptible to medication-related problems.
- Taking four or more of the same medications increases the risk for falls in seniors.

spective, the families of these dealers who have made such an investment and who have taken, really, the financial burden for these dealerships, they buy the inventory, they take the financial risk. It's a huge burden for those around the country. "But we're also talking about 40,000 employees of these dealerships. "We're talking about 40,000 families besides the dealers themselves, and we're talking about communities. I remember selling ads for the high school football program in my hometown, and who was the first person to buy that high school football program for the students that came in for their first experience at selling? It was the auto dealer in town. In my hometown, we had one, and I remember that and I know all over this country people remember that. In United Way, who's there first supporting the community for those less fortunate? It's the auto dealers and their employees. So they're the backbone of the community. And so every community where these auto dealers are going to be shut down, it's going to be a loss, a loss of revenue, because the families are going to have to look for other jobs, but also their own charitable and community events will also suffer. Being involved with the community has always been a priority to the Stowers family. Civic organizations have welcomed the contributions both financially and through service in various ways. In the late 1980's when Celanese exploded, so many vehicles were damaged that there wasn't enough rental cars to go around. Richard instructed his staff to do what ever was needed to help the employees and their families, and that meant loaning and or leasing the company's used automobile inventory while arrangements could be made for repair of the damaged vehicles. Stowers says that he will not be able to order or receive any new Pontiacs other than those currently on his lot. The date in which his Cadillac contract will expire is October, 10, 2010. "We will still be here, functioning as normal for our customers."

OPTIMIST BASEBALL Glo-Valve downs Clarendon 8-2

Clarendon — Glo-Valve Service rode the pitching of Brody Gaines and the hitting of Aaron Allen to overcome Clarendon 8-2 in Pampa Optimist 11-12 Cal Ripken play here Thursday.

Gaines pitched to only 12 batters in four innings on the mound.

One reached base on an error and was caught stealing by catcher Ryan Powell. Another singled but was also thrown out stealing by Powell. Gaines struck out six and did not walk a batter in picking up his sixth win of the season. Brice Hatley and Jonathan Talor pitched for Clarendon.

Allen singled, doubled, scored twice, had one RBI and stole three bases to lead Glo-Valve's offense. Zach Hill contributed two hits, two steals and a run scored to Glo-Valve's offensive efforts.

Glo-Valve broke a scoreless tie in the second inning. After two were out, Hill singled and stole second. He went to third on an error and scored on a single by Colton Thompson. Thompson stole two bases and gave Glo-Valve a 2-0 lead on a single by J. T. Skinner.

In the third inning, Glo-Valve padded its lead. Erick Kuehne and Jason Velasquez walked. Allen followed with a single to load the bases. Powell forced Velasquez at third while Kuehne scored on the play.

The runners moved up on a double steal. Allen scampered home on a wild pitch. Powell followed by stealing home. Glo-Valve led 5-0.

In the fifth inning, Glo-Valve struck again. After two were out Velasquez was hit by a pitch. He stole second and third and trotted home on a double by Allen. Allen stole third and tallied on a single by Powell. Powell stole second, third and home to make the score 8-0.

Clarendon refused to go quietly. In the bottom of the sixth, a walk, two hits and two Glo-Valve errors led to two runs and caused growing concern to the Glo-Valve faithful before Allen stiffened to strike out the last two batters.

Powell's two caught stealings were the outstanding defensive plays of the game for Glo-Valve.

Glo-Valve improved to 13-0, one game ahead of Rotary Club with two regular season games to play. The two teams meet Monday at 5:45 p.m. and Thursday at 5:45 p.m.

Glo-Valve defeats DFB 13-1

Three pitchers held Duncan, Fraser and Bridges Insurance Agency to one hit as Glo-Valve Service prevailed 13-1 Monday in a Pampa Optimist 11-12 Cal Ripken League game.

Brody Gaines won his fifth game of the season. He pitched the first two innings. He allowed no runs, no hits and no walks. He struck out four. Casey Martindale struck out one and walked two in the third inning. He did not allow any runs or hits. Aaron Allen pitched the fourth inning, just before the rain came. He surrendered one run, one hit and one walk while striking out two. Solon Wilson and Jacob Nelson pitched for DFB.

Allen led off Glo-Valve's first inning with a single. He stole second and third and scored on a wild pitch. Ryan Powell followed with a double. He stole third and scored on a ground out by Gaines. Glo-Valve led 2-0.

Glo-Valve wasted a hit by J. T. Skinner in the second inning, but struck for four runs in the third inning. Erick Kuehne started the inning with a walk. Jason Velasquez was safe on an error. Allen forced Kuehne at third. The runners were successful with a double steal. Powell hammered his second double to score both runners. He stole third and loped home on a double by Gaines. Gaines stole third and made the score 6-0 in Glo-Valve's favor on a wild pitch.

After two were out in the fourth inning, Skinner started a big inning for Glo-Valve by reaching first on an error. He stole second. Michael Mechelay and Kuehne walked to load the bases. Velasquez blasted a two-run double. He held second, but Kuehne scored on an infield single hit by Allen. Another double steal put both runners in scoring position. They both came home on Powell's third double. Powell took third on a steal and tallied on a single by Gaines. Gaines stole second, third and home to make the score 13-0 in Glo-Valve's favor.

In the bottom of the fourth Jacob Nelson walked and stole second. He kept going and scored when the catcher's throw went into the outfield.

Powell with three doubles, three runs scored and four RBI, was Glo-Valve's leading hitter. Allen and Gaines had two hits each for Glo-Valve.

Allen scored three times and Gaines twice. Gaines had three RBI and Allen one. Jonathan Doyle doubled in the fourth inning for DFB's only hit.

Nelson at shortstop for DFB and Braxton Maul at third snagged hot line drives and Rhett Harden caught a runner stealing for the outstanding defensive plays of the game for DFB. Allen picked up a ground ball at his second base position and beat the batter to first for Glo-Valve's outstanding defensive play.

Remember Juneteenth

AUSTIN, Texas — June 19 marks the annual celebration of Juneteenth, the date that brought Emancipation to 250,000 slaves in Texas. The Emancipation Proclamation was initially issued in 1863, however African Americans in Texas were not made aware of the liberation until June 19, 1865 when Union general Gordon Granger made the announcement in Galveston. The news of freedom gradually travelled to slaves throughout the state as individual plantation owners read the proclamation over the months following the end of the Civil War. In 1979, the Texas Legislature passed an act declaring Juneteenth a state holiday.

Juneteenth is commemorated throughout Texas and the nation with local festivities and celebrations. The Texas Historical Commission (THC) created a brochure, currently only available online dedicated to the African American experience in Texas. Currently, the THC is in the process of creating a new guide on African American history, which will focus on the unique stories behind the real people who migrated and settled throughout Texas, featuring a number of descriptive narratives about notable African American figures and places. The new guide will be available both in print and online in early 2010.

To learn more about Juneteenth celebrations occurring in your community visit www.juneteenth.com. To download a copy of the THC brochure, African Americans in Texas: Historical and Cultural Legacies, visit www.thc.state.tx.us/travel. Additional free heritage region brochures are also available online or by calling 866.276.6219.

TPWD increases license, boat registration fees

AUSTIN, Texas — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has approved increases to hunting and fishing licenses, as well as boat titling and registration fees. Most fees will increase by five percent and the increases take effect with the 2009-2010 license year, starting this fall for recreational hunting and fishing licenses.

Hunting licenses will increase from $23 to $25, while the popular Super Combo all-inclusive license increases from $64 to $68.

Non-resident hunting licenses increase by $15 from $300 to $315, which also reflects a five percent hike.

Fishing packages will also increase by $2. The resident freshwater fishing package increases from $28 to $30 and the saltwater fishing package increases from $33 to $35.

The biggest increase in license fees approved by the commission affects lifetime licenses. The resident lifetime fishing and hunting licenses will increase to $1,000 and the lifetime combination license increases to $1,800.

"We have not increased the cost of a lifetime license for 12 years," said Gene McCarty, TPWD deputy director of administration. "Frankly, these licenses have been undervalued and could represent significant lost revenue over time if not adjusted."

Boat owners in Texas will also see increases in boat registration and titling fees. Boat registration, which are valid for two years, for vessels less than 16 feet in length increase from $30 to $32 and those in the 16-26 foot range go from $50 to $53. Boats 26-40 feet increase from $70 to $110 and boats greater than 40 feet increase from $90 to $150.

The department received less than 400 comments related to the fee increases during the public comment period, the majority of which came from the TPWD online survey and by email, with only 16 comments resulting from a series of 19 public meetings scheduled around the state. Overall, comments ran more than 2-to-1 against the increases, citing bad economic times as the primary reason.

"Initially we considered a 10-15 percent increase but in this economy we know that is unrealistic and counterproductive," said McCarty. "But, it's important to mention that this will just keep us even."

McCarty noted the fees for none of the special endorsement stamps were increased.

In addition to the fee increases, the commission approved a new administrative fee of $100 for reinstatement of any recreational or commercial license that has been revoked or suspended.

The commission also authorized staff to implement a drawing for a package that includes a lifetime hunting and fishing license and one-year subscription to Texas Parks & Wildlife magazine. Entry fee for the drawing will be $5 and will go on sale Aug. 15 whenever licenses are sold.

2009 Hustlin' Harvester Basketball Camp

The 2009 Hustlin' Harvester Basketball Camp will be held Monday, June 8 thru Friday, June 12 9:00 am - 12:00 pm for incoming 1st thru 5th grade and 1:00 pm - 4:00 pm for incoming 6th thru 9th grades. These grades are as of the 2009-10 school year. The camp will begin each day in McNeely Fieldhouse. Forms and registration are available by mail or may be dropped off at the Pampa High School athletic office. The 5 day camp fee is $60 and includes a t-shirt, basketball, Skills & Drills Book (a book each camper will receive with skills to help them become better students in the classroom and drills to help them become the best basketball player they can be) and one on one instruction. The camp mission is to have fun and to help each boy improve himself in the fundamentals of basketball. This includes improving skills such as shooting, passing, ball handling, rebounding and team building. The camp will be ran by head basketball coach, Dustin Miller and will have instruction from several former Pampa Harvesters. If you have any questions contact Dustin Miller, 664-7813, late registration will be taken Monday morning, June 8th beginning at 8:30 am. Registration may also be mailed to Dustin Miller, 1710 Grape, Pampa, Tx 79065.

At St. Paul United Methodist Church, pastor Steve Cox will continue a three week series on Faith, Hope & Love. The message is especially appropriate during these times of hardship when we need to reach back to our roots for guidance.

The people of St. Paul want to focus on older people and their needs. We gear our ministries around providing for things that are often overlooked, those things that older people appreciate. We pray for good health and healing regularly with those needs being shared every Sunday during the worship service. We have experienced some dramatic healings this past year. One lady had a stroke and was almost in a coma. The church began to pray for her and now a year later she is almost fully recovered.

Please come and sample our church and the fellowship we provide.

Briarwood presents famed musician Gordon Mote

On Sunday morning June 14th, Briarwood church will present Gordon Mote. One of the most gifted singers, musicians, and song writers in America today. Many know him as the pianist for the Gaither Vocal Band, but his musical career goes far beyond that. He is one of the most sought after recording studio session players in Nashville. He has recorded with the likes of Martina McBride, Trace Adkins, Alan Jackson, Brad Paisley, Carrie Underwood, Rascal Flatts, Alison Krauss, Josh Turner and Bob Sieger, to name a few. For six years in a row Gordon was nominated as Piano/Keyboard Player of the year by the Academy of Country Music, and won the award in 2009.

Rev. Lynn Hancock says, "Gordon Mote is one of the most talented people I have ever met. He just happened to be born blind." Mote miraculously began playing the piano when he was 3 years old. He later graduated with honors from Belmont University with a degree in music. Two days after graduation, he was hired as a keyboard player and background vocalist for Grammy Award winning recording artist, Lee Greenwood and his musical journey began. It has taken him literally around the world. He performs in excess of 100 concerts a year. He shares the stage with legendary Gospel ...And he is still one of the most sought after studio musicians.

Don't miss this exciting Sunday Morning Celebration, June 14th at 10:45am at Briarwood Church. (1800 Harvester) For more information you can call 806-665-7201.

Actor David Carradine found dead in Bangkok

BANGKOK (AP) — The body of American actor David Carradine, best known for the 1970s TV series "Kung Fu," was found in a hotel room closet with a rope tied to his neck and genitals, and his death may have been caused by accidental suffocation, Thai police said Friday.

The 72-year-old actor's body was discovered Thursday in his luxury suite at Bangkok's Swissotel Nai Lert Park Hotel. Police initially said they suspected suicide, though Carradine's associates had questioned that theory.

Police Lt. Gen. Worapong Chewprecha told reporters that Carradine was found with a rope tied around his genitals and another rope around his neck.

"The two ropes were tied together," he said. "It is unclear whether he committed suicide or not or he died of suffocation or heart failure."

Thai police completed an autopsy on Carradine on Friday. But Police Col. Somprasong Yenthum, superintendent of the Lumpini police station, which is handling the case, said results would not be ready for at least three weeks because the cause of death was unclear. He called the time lag "normal."

Dr. Nanthana Sirisap, director of Chulalongkorn Hospital's Autopsy Center, told reporters that the autopsy was conducted because of the "unusual circumstances surrounding Carradine's death," but did not elaborate.

Police Lt. Teerapop Luanseng had said Thursday that Carradine's body was found "naked, hanging in a closet," and that police at the time suspected suicide.

But one of Carradine's managers dismissed the theory.

"All we can say is, we know David would never have committed suicide," said Tiffany Smith of Binder & Associates, his management company. "We're just waiting for them to finish the investigation and find out what really happened. He really appreciated everything life has to give ... and that's not something David would ever do to himself."

Carradine had flown to Thailand last week and began work on a film titled "Stretch" two days before his death, Smith said. He had several other projects lined up after the action film, which was being directed by Charles De Meaux.

Carradine was in good spirits when he left the U.S. for Thailand on May 29 to work on "Stretch," Smith said.

"David was excited to do it and excited to be a part of it," she said by phone from Beverly Hills.

Filming began Tuesday, she said, adding that the crew was devastated by Carradine's death and did not wish to speak publicly about it for the time being.

Aurelio Giraud, the hotel's general manager, said Carradine checked into the hotel May 31 and he last saw him June 3. He said Carradine chatted with staff and even played piano a few nights in the lobby as well as flute which the "guests really enjoyed."

"I was a fan. I had a very nice talk with him when he checked in," Giraud told The Associated Press. "He was very much a person full of life. I mentioned to him that I had seen (the movie) 'Crank' with my family and that was the last smile he gave me."

Giraud said a chambermaid discovered Carradine's body, adding that she knocked and entered after there was no response. Police arrived shortly thereafter.

Somprasong said there was no evidence there was anyone else in the room at the time of Carradine's death.

Carradine, a martial arts practitioner himself, was best known for the U.S. TV series "Kung Fu," which aired in 1972-75. He played Kwai Chang Caine, an orphan who was raised by Shaolin monks and fled China after killing the emperor's nephew in retaliation for the murder of his kung fu master.

Carradine also appeared in more than 100 feature films with such directors as Martin Scorsese, Ingmar Bergman and Hal Ashby. He returned to the top in recent years as the title character in Quentin Tarantino's two-part saga "Kill Bill." Bill, the worldly father figure of a pack of crack assassins, was a shadowy presence in 2003's "Kill Bill — Vol. 1." In that film, one of Bill's former assassins (Uma Thurman) begins a vengeful rampage against her old associates, including Bill.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my mid-60s and still work full-time. I love my work, not only because it pays well, but also for the good times I have with co-workers and the intellectual stimulation I get from solving problems. I also feel younger than my age. That may be because I have a purpose in life -- to get up early every morning, take my shower, put on my makeup and hurry to the office. At the end of the day, I feel fulfilled because I know I have done something worthwhile.

My problem is the tactless people who ask me when I'm going to retire. Sometimes I tell them that they will be the first to know if I decide to do so. Someone even told me that I should retire now "so I can begin to enjoy my life!" I told her I don't have to retire to enjoy my life because I enjoy my life every day.

I don't know what their motives are in asking. At times I become so annoyed that I just look at the person and give a sweet smile -- just to shut him/her up. I don't want to be rude, but now and then I feel like telling them that it's none of their business. Abby, what is the best response to give these busybodies? -- IRRITATED OUT

WEST

DEAR IRRITATED: Give the person your standard "sweet smile" and say: "To me, retirement is a dirty word. Please don't use it in front of me again."

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law has been trying to get my son out of his tights-whites for a few years now. He has gained a few pounds and they are just a little too tight. He isn't overweight, but men's underwear makers don't make in-between sizes. She has bought him a larger size, but he refuses to wear them.

Do you have any ideas on how to get him out of -- so to speak -- his tights-whites and into something more flattering? By the way, I am not a meddling mother-in-law, but my daughter-in-law was too embarrassed to write.

-- NOT A MEDDLER

DEAR NOT A MEDDLER: One way to accomplish it might be for your daughter-in-law to occasionally mention how "hot" your son would look in something else. If that doesn't work, she should just continue to feed him the way she has been -- and when the tights-whites cut off his circulation, he may decide to get out of them himself.

DEAR ABBY: I had what I thought was a good friend, "Meg." We were part of a larger group that was very close. When my husband left me, Meg disappeared from my life.

I carried on with career, family and friends, and I am now remarried. My new husband is charming, affluent and well-known in our community. Now Meg has suddenly reappeared and behaves like her absence over the last four years never happened. I am sure she wants to be a part of our inner circle because of my husband's success.

When I encounter her socially, I am always cordial. I have politely declined her overtures and invitations, but she doesn't seem to get the hint. What can I say to nip this in the bud? I don't want to be rude, nor do I want to keep making excuses. -- TIRED OF HYPOCRISY

DEAR TIRED OF HYPOCRISY: What's wrong with telling your fair-weather friend the truth? You don't have to be mean about it. Just say that when she disappeared from your life, you went on with yours, you understand that life can take people down different paths, and you wish her well on hers.
