Despite deaths, schools resist changing practice plans

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Csillan, a New Jersey high school as school practices started up this Trainers' Association. summer, fatalities which followed new health warnings to coaches about the risks of heat stroke.

Autopsy results are not complete yet, and three deaths is about average for the sport in most years. But athletic trainers who urged high school coaches in June to adopt tougher safety guidelines for football practice were deeply concerned nonetheless.

Several coaches at top prep programs contacted by The Associated Press said they hadn't heard of the recommendations or followed them.

Some called the guidelines, which included no two-a-days during the first week of practice, too restrictive.

"What about all those who get to the ER and are lucky enough to get saved? We want to stop it before it gets to that point," said David leading researcher says at least trainer who co-authored the June three teenage football players died report by the National Athletic

As this football season gets into full swing, a former Kentucky high school coach is standing trial in a player's on-field death. David Jason Stinson is charged with reckless homicide in the death of a 15-year-old Pleasure Ridge Park High School student who collapsed last year at practice. Stinson has pleaded not guilty.

Players in Maryland and Texas, along with another Kentucky student, have died following football practices this year, said Dr. Fred Mueller, director of the National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injury Research at the University of North Carolina.

None of the deaths have been confirmed as heat-related, but each has heightened awareness about heat illness. The first was a 16-year-old in Germantown, Md., who died four days after collapsing during voluntary workouts in July.

A Kentucky player later that month became disoriented during practice and later died, though school officials have said heat was not a factor. Temperatures were in the 70s at the time.

Most recent was a 13-year-old found dead in Vernon, Texas, the morning after his middle school's first football practice last month. Area temperatures during the Aug. 24 practice soared high as 105 degrees

Brent Shinn McGhee had epilepsy, but his father has said he believes the sweltering heat played a role in his son's death. School officials in Vernon, a small town along the Oklahoma state line, have defended the safety measures used by their coaches. "Putting kids through this to win a football game," Brock McGhee said. "It makes no sense."

President touts Wall Street changes on Lehman anniversary

NEW YORK (AP) - President Barack Obama sternly warned Wall Street Monday against returning to the sort of reckless and unchecked behavior that threatened the nation with a second Great Depression.

Even as he noted the U.S. economy and financial system were pulling out of a downward spiral, Obama warned financial titans on Monday — the first anniversary of the Lehman Brothers collapse they could not count on any more bailouts.

He credited his administration and the $787 billion stimulus package rammed through Congress in the first days of his taking office for pulling the country back from the brink.

"We can be confident that the storms of the past two years are beginning to break," he said.

a "return to normalcy," Obama said, "normalcy cannot lead to complacency."

Nevertheless, Obama said, "Instead of learning the lessons of Lehman and the crisis from which we are still recovering, they are choosing to ignore them.

His tough message warned the financial community to "hear my words: We will not go back to the days of reckless behavior and unchecked excess at the heart of this crisis, where too many were motivated only by the appetite for quick kills and bloated bonuses."

Obama spoke at Federal Hall in the heart of Wall Street before an audience that included members of the financial community, lawmakers, and top administration officials. He planned lunch

And even as the economy begins with former President Bill Clinton after the speech, before returning to Washington. Administration officials would not disclose any details of the luncheon discussion.

In marking his determination to prevent a repeat of the crisis that nearly brought down the global financial system last fall, Obama said he was attacking the problem on several broad fronts, including new rules to protect consumers and a new Consumer Financial Protection Agency to enforce those rules and closure of regulator loopholes and overlap that 'were at the heart of the crisis" because it left key officials without "the authority to take action." Fire damages southside home

BY BETSY PHILLIPS editor@thepampanews.com

Pampa firefighters fought a smoky blaze Saturday evening believed to have been caused by discarded or misplaced smoking material.

"We could see the smoke from Cuyler and Brown," said Fire Department Capt. Mike Day. The fire was five to six blocks away.

Five units and nine personnel responded at 6:30 p.m. to 1037 S Schneider.

When firefighters arrived on scene, thick black smoke was rolling from the house. Moments later, Day said, fire broke through the door and front window of that part of the home, which appears to be a perpendicular addition to the original brick home.

According to Day, an occupant of the home, Paula Johnson, was in the rear of the structure, discovered the fire and tried unsuccessfully to put it out with a garden hose.

The home owner, Ignacio Vargas, Jr., was in the front portion of the house, smelled smoke and called 911.

Fire officials estimate that about $16,600 was done to the structure and another $6,000 to its contents. The Eastern Texas Panhandle Chapter of the American Red Cross provided lodging, clothing and help with replacement of medications.

Natural gas prices jump 12 percent

Natural gas demonstrated again how much it has split from the direction of crude, as prices spiked more than 11 percent despite an enormous glut in supply.

Crude prices fell for the second straight trading day. Analysts at Goldman Sachs said prices for natural gas may even triple over the winter, though most energy experts believe there is a far greater chance that prices will plunge again.

There are two big factors that support the latter view, which would mean extremely cheap heating bills for a lot of people over the next few months.

The first is that natural gas in storage is 17 percent greater than it was last year and has even neared the maximum storage capacity in some places. And the U.S Energy Information Administration said in its short-term energy outlook that it expects another 12 percent buildup through October.

At the same time most meteorologists predict a very mild winter for large parts of the country. With demand already way down from industrial utility customers, the U.S. has an enormous amount of unused natural gas.

Meanwhile, managers of the United States Natural Gas fund, an exchangetraded fund that tracks natural gas prices, said it will again offer shares before the end of the month. The fund allows any investor to buy shares, which UNG uses to buy natural gas contracts on Nymex and the ICE Futures exchange.

The fund had run out of shares and in June, filed documents with the Securities and Exchange Commission seeking permission to offer another

Oil and natural gas have historically tracked one another as far as prices go, but this year has been a different story.

Benchmark crude for October delivery fell 61 cents to $68.68 a barrel. On Friday, the contract tumbled $2.65 to settle at $69.29.

A lot of pressure has been placed on the dollar-based crude because the dollar has rebounded in recent days. Oil prices have fallen about $4 during the last two trading days. Still, prices have doubled from earlier this year during what may have been the depth of the recession.

A lot of experts believe that optimism is premature because crude in storage, like natural gas, remains at very high levels.

There have been some signs of an economic recover, yet some warn that it will take some time for energy demand to return.

"At some point hope has to become a reality or prices will have to adjust accordingly," said PFGBest analyst Phil Flynn.

At the pump, the average price for a gallon of regular gasoline fell a tenth of a cent to $2.572, according to auto club AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. That's 7.3 cents more than a month ago, but $1.22 less than at this time last year.

Gasoline for October delivery on the Nymex fell 2 cents to $1.7393 a gallon. Prices have most certainly peaked for most motorists this year, barring some disruption in the Gulf of Mexico. "The 'driving season' is over ... and supplies are greater today than in May," analyst and trader Stephen Schork wrote in his morning report.

In other Nymex trading, heating oil for October delivery was essentially flat at $1.7321 a gallon. Natural gas jumped 36.4 cents to $3.324 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In London, Brent crude fell 13 cents to $67.56 on the ICE Futures exchange.

will focus on ways "to spur global demand but also to address the underlying problems that caused such a deep and lasting global recession," Obama said.

Obama and others seeking ways to better monitor the financial system and to police the products banks sell to consumers have been opposed by lobbyists, lawmakers and turf-protecting regulators. Mergers and sales of banks have consolidated lending power in even fewer hands. And those large firms still bet far more than the capital they have on hand.

Yet regulations have not moved. Much of the legislative motivation in Washington has been consumed by the contentious debate over changes to the health care system. Government intervention into private automakers such as General Motors have left lawmakers skittish to move further into corporate board rooms. And it's not as if another collapse is obviously imminent.

Five of the biggest banks — Goldman Sachs, JPMorgan Chase, Wells Fargo, Citigroup and Bank of America — posted second-quarter profits totaling capital levels by the end of $13 billion. That's more than double what they made in the second quarter of 2008 and nearly twothirds as much as the $20.7 billion they earned in the second quarter of 2007 when the economy was considered strong.

The failure of Lehman Brothers — the biggest bankruptcy in U.S. history - and the panicky sales of Bear Stearns to JPMorgan Chase and Merrill Lynch to Bank of America transformed Wall Street and gave fewer competitors increased market power.

As of June 30, three banks - JPMorgan Chase, Wells Fargo and Bank of America — held $2.3 trillion in domestic deposits, or $3 out of every $10 in deposit in the United States. Three years ago those three institutions held about 20 percent of the industry total.

Obama has sought tougher capital requirements for banks, arguing that banks' buying of exotic financial products without keeping enough cash on reserve was a key cause of the crisis. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner has urged the Group of 20 nations to agree on new

2010 and put them in place two years later.

The administration also has proposed increased transparency of markets in which banks trade the most complex - and potentially risky - financial products. Obama's broad plan also would give the Fed new oversight powers and impose conditions designed to discourage companies from getting too big.

Sen. Chris Dodd, the Democratic chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, is leading the push for those new rules and his aides hope to have legislation together before the year's end. Already they have conducted hearings on the source of the problem and how best to prevent another.

But a key component of the Obama plan — creating an agency to oversee marketing financial products to consumers — faces a tough road to become a law. Industry lobbying against it and other proposed financial rules has been fierce and the president's fellow Democrats have been slow to take up the cause.

Deaths

At least 39 players have died from heat-related causes since 1995, not counting the three deaths this year, according to Mueller. Most of those cases happened in early August.

Heat safety is preached every preseason by sports medicine experts. But many high school coaches remain reluctant to change how they practice, and bristle at the inference that their players are in danger.

"Sometimes people think coaches are totally stupid when it comes to this stuff," Katy (Texas) High School coach Gary Joseph last month. "We're not going to do anything to endanger these kids."

In Peoria, Centennial High School coach Richard Taylor said he hadn't seen the NATA recommendations before his team began practicing but was interested. Taylor said he wanted to make sure the school was doing the right thing, and added that most of his players get acclimated to the heat during informal summer workouts.

NATA seized on the Stinson's criminal charges in Kentucky this summer when it recommended that high school football teams take longer breaks, along with the prohibition on two-a-days during the first week of workouts.

The report focused on the first two weeks of practice in August, and the guidelines are similar to what the NCAA already enforces.

Some high school coaches dismissed the proposals as unnecessarily restrictive. Others stood by their safeguards.

"Our training staff is

constantly looking at the best methods to make sure our players are taken care of the best way possible,' said George Smith, football coach and athletic director at St. Thomas Aguinas in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Resisting change is common, said Dr. Michael Bergeron, director of the National Institute for Athletic Health & Performance. His survey of 540 high school programs in 2005 found that very few coaches were willing to make major adjustments to their practice regiments.

"They say, quite frankly, 'We're going to do what we're going to do," Bergeron said. "It's really tough changing their minds.'

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My toddler and I were rear-ended a few days ago. Thankfully, neither of us was hurt. The other driver's insurance is paying for the car repairs. They will also reimburse me for a new car seat if I buy one and submit the receipt.

My husband, the sole wage earner in our family, insists that we don't need to replace the car seat. Money is tight, but I think we could come up with it, and besides, we'd be reimbursed. He also thinks the accident was so minor that the seat should protect our child in another collision, and I'm "just a gullible consumer buying into marketing propaganda." (For the record, he's a loving husband and father, just tight with money.)

Should I replace the car seat knowing it will upset him, or should I continue feeling guilty about placing our child in a possibly compromised car seat? -- SAFETY-FIRST MOM IN TENNESSEE

DEAR SAFETY-FIRST MOM: Far be it from me to imply that insurance companies aren't the epito-. me of generosity, but when an insurance company offers reimbursement for a child safety device that has been through an accident, I think you should take the hint. As to your husband's fiscal conservatism, tell him that he won't be fronting the money because you are gullible. He'll be doing it to give you something worth more than money -and that's peace of mind.

DEAR ABBY: I have been living with a very nice man for 28 years, and at one point we were married. He lives in my house and drives my car. I do the cooking, cleaning, laundry and household chores. He does small repairs around the house, keeps the irrigation system in good repair and contributes $600 a month for expenses. He goes to visit his family and friends in the West every summer for two weeks or more. This year he told me he was not coming back because he's broke. I was upset to say the least. He did come back, and now at 75, I think I will end up supporting him for the rest of my life.

Abby, should I bite the bullet, say "It's only money" and support him, or should I kiss him goodbye and wish him well? UNDECIDED IN FLORIDA

DEAR UNDECIDED: Have you kept him in your house all these years because of his handyman skills and the $7,200 a year he gave you? If the answer is yes, then out he goes.

HOW WILL YOU PAY FOR RETIREMENT? LET'S TALK. Duane Harp Financial Advisor 1921 N Hobart Pampa, TX 79065 806-665-6753

Edward Jones

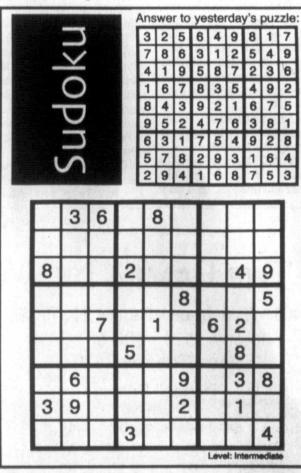

However, if you cooked for him, cleaned for him, washed his dirty underwear and socks and slept with him because you LOVED him -- then I think the pain of separation would make your life misery and you should continue accepting him for who he is and let him stay.

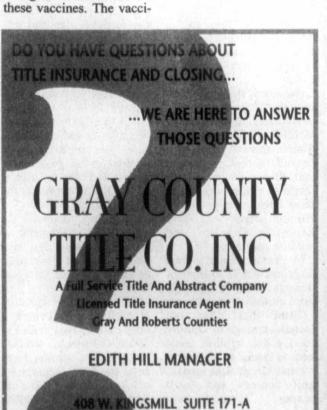

DEAR ABBY: I recently had my teenage daughter vaccinated against HPV. Since then, my motherin-law has been sending me e-mails regarding the "dangers" associated with nation was recommended by my daughter's pediatrician and she handled it fine.

Regardless, it was a done deal -- so why try to horrify me and scare her granddaughter? Any ideas on how to handle this? --TIRED OF MEDDLING MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR TIRED: Just this: Did you seek your mother-in-law's input when making the decision? No? Then don't take the bait and don't react, but do delete her e-mails.

No. 1 Lady Pirates sweep Lady Harvesters

BY ANDREW GLOVER aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Lady Harvesters volleyball team was swept by the No. 1 Randall Lady Pirates (8-25, 7-25, 14-25) on Saturday at Randall.

Pampa (12-8, 0-1) never had the lead in the match. Head Coach Libby Garza said she was disappointed in how her team handled the number one team in the state.

"Randall is very good," Garza said. "We just didn't lay up to our ability. We could have played better defense and talked a lot more. I expected us to compete much better than we did."

Garza said Emilie Troxell and Kara Stephens stepped up against Randall.

"I think this was Emilie's best offensive games this year and one of Kara's best defensive games," Garza said.

Troxell had six kills and five digs. Stephens had three kills, one block and 14 digs. Taryn Eubank had one kill, one block, 10 digs and 16 assists. Garza said one of the reasons her team lost was because they were intimidated by Randall.

"They are good, but we are better than what we played," Garza said.

The head volleyball coach said her team will need to come out strong on Tuesday to beat Palo Duro.

'We need to play our game and just be ready for anything and everything to come over the net," Garza said. "We will need to work hard and communicate well. If we take care of our side we will be suc-

Head Coach Sarah Corse said they started the first match and it began raining.

"We waited until it stopped," Corse said. "We didn't finish the first match until 4 o'clock.'

Pampa was also supposed to play Frenship but since the first match went long, they didn't get to play them. Corse said everyone played great last Saturday.

"It was nice against Andrews to get back on track," Corse said. "Things just clicked." Corse said if they play like they did Saturday they can beat Hereford.

"We just need to close out matches when we get the lead," Corse said.

Nick Nelson, Myles Foreman, Aaron Silva and Colin McClendon won both their singles and doubles. For the girls, Holly Gage, Sammie Finney, Alissa Hoelting, Robin Fernuik and Kayla Ware won all their matches.

Foiling feral hogs

OVERTON - Farmers and ranchers may be inadvertently aiding and abetting one of their worst enemies, the feral hog, by providing supplemental feed for white-tailed deer and other wildlife, said a "http://agrilifeextension. tamu.edu/"Texas AgriLife Extension Service wildlife expert.

rematch against Randall.

But a new study conducted at the "http://www.welderwildlife.org/"Welder Wildlife Foundation near Sinton showed that is it possible to design fencing that allows deer access to feeders while excluding feral hogs, said Dr. Billy Higginbotham, AgriLife Extension fisheries and wildlife specialist.

In Texas alone, feral hogs cause $52 million of damage to crops and pastures annually, he said.

"And that does not include damage to wildlife food plots, wildlife feeds and feeders, or to recreational areas like parks, golf courses and landscapes," Higginbotham said.

In an attempt to curtail the damage, landowners hunt and trap feral hogs, he said. But at the same time, Texas hunters and landowners put out approximately 300 million pounds of shelled corn annually, primarily for white-tailed deer, spending an estimated $50 million. Feral hogs crash the party by raiding the feeding sites and eating the corn, often preventing deer and other wildlife from visiting at all.

The party crashing does more than just deny supplemental feed to whitetailed deer and other wildlife. Better-fed feral hog sows are more likely to produce more piglets per litter, and those piglets have a higher survival rate, Higginbotham said.

Fencing seemed the answer to the problem, he said, but how high was high enough to stop hogs and low enough to admit deer?

To answer this question Higginbotham devised a cooperative study with Dr. Tyler Campbell, wildlife biologist and station leader at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wildlife Services-National Wildlife Research Center near Kingsville.

Higginbotham and Campbell enclosed deerfeeder sites with fences of three heights: 20 inches,

Feral hog

28 inches and 34 inches. All fences used six 16-foot long panels, staked with T-posts and arranged in a circular pattern around feeders. During July and August, remote sensing cameras, which are tripped by motion, were used to record deer and feral hog traffic. The cameras recorded traffic before the fencing was erected and then for two weeks after in late July and early August. Before the fencing, the automatic cameras recorded 5.3, 3.1 and 4.7 hog visits per hour for sites no. 1 (34-inch fence), no. 2 (28inch fence) and no. 3 (20inch fence), respectively. Deer visits per hour were 0.8, 1.4 and 0.1 respectively for sites 1, 2 and 3.

Once the fencing was installed, all three heights limited feral-hog access. but the two highest fences excluded them completely. To a small degree, the 34-inch fencing and the 28-inch fencing limited some deer access as well. but the overall effect on deer traffic was minimal as they could easily jump the fences, Higginbotham said.

With the fencing, hog visits per hour were reduced to 0.0, 0.0 and 1.8 for sites 1. 2 and 3 respectively. Deer visits per hour were negligibly reduced to 0.66 from 0.8 for the 34-inch fencing. but actually doubled for the 24-inch fencing and more than quadrupled for the 20-inch fencing, he said.

It's funny how perceptions change over time.

I was raised in the Panhandle and have spent most of my time in towns just a little smaller than Pampa, with a couple of notable exceptions.

Shortly after I was married, my wife and I lived in Fort Worth for several years, and I can state that for a city, it wasn't bad.

When I moved back to the Panhandle, I had to re-educate myself regarding traffic. One day on my lunch hour I was following behind a fellow driving about 20 mph and I kept thinking "Get outta my way!"

It finally occurred to me that if I relaxed and had to follow the guy clear across town, the trip might takeme an extra thirty seconds!

Then I moved to a town of 5,000 people that had two blinking lights and one traffic signal. Getting anywhere was a breeze. I would find myself in Amarillo, sitting at an intersection next to the interstate, waiting for the full cycle of lights so I could go again. "Man, life is sure faster in the big city, isn't it?"

I'd catch myself saying.
"Waiting at a light for fifteen minutes!" So now here I am back in a community of about 18,000.

I have no idea how many traffic signals there are in town, but I know it really doesn't take long to get from one side of town to the other.

"What's he getting at?" you're asking. If you're like most of us, you probably run pretty much the same beat whenever you go shopping.

The point of my little observation is this: take a little time to get out of your normal circle and see what's there. Chances are you'll see some things you haven't some places that might have just what you're looking for...or maybe some things you never knew existed, but now you can't live without.

If you usually

shop N. Hobart and Perryton Parkway, drive downtown, or Wilks-Brown-Frederic (Hwy 60), or maybe S. Hobart, just to see what's there. And don't be limited by what the name of the store says. (Heard-Jones is way more than pharmaceuticals, and Pampa Office Supply carries a great line of gifts.) You may even find a new place to eat, or a pastry to sample (my favorite is fresh maranitos!)

Break out in the next couple of weeks and see what's there!

The Retail Committee has begun planning for the Christmas season, so be watching for future announcements.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Sept.

Saturday's

15, 2009: This year, you often learn that the premise you based an idea or project on no longer works. You are in a quickly changing universe, whether you like it or not. You are growing to a new level, and if you can incorporate change, you will do well. If you are single, you meet people with ease, though you might just choose the person who is unavailable emotionally. If you are attached, the two of you grow together when you go away as a couple. LEO reads you cold.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 Strap on your seat belt. The status quo could be subject to sudden change. Flow rather than hold on. You are entering a period in which innovative thinking is appreciated. Friends respect your thinking, even if they find you idealistic. Tonight: Plug in some fun. Give up being serious.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)  You might want to see the unexpected as a unique opportunity. Digging in your heels could be a problem ultimately. Inspired thinking helps you evolve. Someone close shares some intense feelings. Tonight: Buy a special item on the way home.

* Something you thought was a given turns out to be otherwise. You could be surprised by someone's unpredictability. Don't get too stuck in old thinking. Keep communication moving. Once more, you are reminded that sugar works better than vinegar. Tonight: Meet a pal for dinner

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Daily Horoscope

CANCER (June 21-July 22)  Be aware of the cost of a certain relationship or indulgence. Listen to what is being said quite subtly by someone you look up to. Re-evaluate if you are startled by someone's insight. See life from a different perspective. Tonight: Buy a token of affection for a loved one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)  Manifest your strong determination to understand what is going on with finances and others' attitudes. You cannot hold on to the status quo; transform with the times. Others look to you for advice. Someone adores you. Tonight:

Just be yourself. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Listen to what is being said. Kick back and understand what is happening behind the scenes. Not all of the facts are being presented - you can be sure of that. Don't take another's statement personally. It is not intended that way. Tonight: Vanish.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 Emphasize what you want as opposed to what others think. You might not be seeing someone as he or she really is. Events could force you to take a hard look. You might want to hold on to the past as it slips away right in front of your eyes. Tonight: Find a special friend. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 A must appearance could indeed cause a lot of stress for a child or loved one. You might not be comfortable with an implicit demand coming in from out of left field. Juggle different forces, but eventually you will have to go one way or the other. Tonight: A must appearance. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 Look beyond the obvious. Stretch past your comfort zone and let go of rigid thinking, no matter what area of your life you are looking at. You could feel that a sudden change or realization forces your hand. Can you really continue down the same path? Tonight: Put on a great piece of music.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

* One-on-one relating continue to be your strong suit. What you hear or something that happens could shake up the status quo. If you are wondering which way to go, don't - let go and go with the new. You really won't have a choice soon. Tonight: Make togetherness your theme

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)  Others continue to dominate the horizon. You will get your two cents in but perhaps not on your timetable. Know when to step back in order to take two steps forward. Realize what is happening behind the scenes. Tonight: Sort through suggestions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 You seem infused with innova tive thinking. Your willingness to move forward sometimes stuns some people and others might not be able to keep up with you. Your instincts provide insight into a friend or loved one. Tonight: How about a massage?

Romo throws 3 TDs to lead Cowboys past Bucs

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Roy Williams, Patrick Crayton and Miles Austin aren't Terrell Owens, which is not a bad thing as far as the Dallas Cowboys are concerned.

Each scored a long touch-down Sunday, helping Tony Romo have a career passing day and christen the team's post-T.O. era with a 34-21 victory that spoiled the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' debut under coach Raheem Morris.

"We're the most talented offensive team in this league," Williams said. "We've got guys that can do multiple things. It showed today." The Cowboys released Owens in March, thrusting Williams into the role of lead receiver and asking others such as Crayton, Austin and Romo's favorites target, tight end Jason Witten, to help take up the slack.

They couldn't have asked for much more in the opener.

Romo threw for a careerbest 353 yards, giving him a franchise-best 17 300-yard performances and improving to 8-1 in September starts since becoming the Cowboys' regular quarterback 2 1/2 years ago.

He's been practically unstoppable in two games against the Bucs, throwing for eight touchdowns and no interceptions.

"They're an aggressive defense. You're not just going to come out and check the ball down against this team," said Romo, who was 16 of 27, including TDs covering 42 yards to Austin, 66 to Williams and a career-long 80 to Crayton.

The Bucs had 450 yards total offense. Byron Leftwich was not sacked and threw for 276 yards, one TD and no interceptions while completing passes to 10 different receivers.
