Oil rises above $70 on weaker dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy prices climbed higher Thursday despite massive petroleum surpluses as the dollar got weaker and equities markets rose.

Benchmark crude for November delivery added $1.40 to trade at $70.97 on the New York Mercantile Exchange. In London, Brent crude gained $1.43 to $68.63 on the ICE Futures exchange.

Natural gas, gas futures and heating oil also jumped in morning trading.

"It amazes me," Dan Flynn, an analyst with PFGBest, said. "I do believe with all the supply we have, we are way overpriced."

The Energy Information Administration said this week that the country continues to sit on massive surpluses of petroleum. Oil and gas stockpiles are well above average, and distillate fuels have grown to their highest level since January 1983.

Natural gas supplies have ballooned to their highest level on record. The EIA said Thursday that stockpiles continued to grow in underground caverns, climbing to a record 3.66 trillion cubic feet.

Traders have recently shrugged off supply data, however, and have been swayed more by uncertainty in the U.S. dollar.

The dollar has lost value to other major currencies as the federal government pumped money into stimulus programs.

pump up the Baucus bill as it proceeds through Congress. "The bill ... will never see the light of day," McConnell promised.

"What matters is that the final bill will cost about $1 trillion, vastly expand the role of government in people's health care decisions and limit choice," he added.

McConnell said Republicans have offered plenty of ideas, but they have been ignored by Democrats infatuated with the notion that they are about to make history.

"Listening to the proponents of the administration's health care plan, you get the sense that they're more concerned about their legacies than what the American people actually want," McConnell said. "Here's an idea: how about asking the American people what they want instead?"

Democrats are breathing a sigh of relief over the positive news on the Baucus plan, but that doesn't mean the proposal has no problems.

The middle-of-the-road plan still leaves about 25 million people uninsured when fully phased in, in 2019. Nearly 50 million U.S. residents now lack coverage. Absent any change, the budget office projected that would grow to 54 million in 2019.

Congressional Republicans — with the exception of Maine Sen. Olympia Snowe — panned the Finance effort.

However, former GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole and other prominent Republicans beyond Capitol Hill have recently spoken out in favor of a health care overhaul along the lines of the Finance plan, without specifically endorsing it. That may provide some cover for Snowe, if she decides to vote for the bill Tuesday.

Finance is the fifth and last of the congressional panels to debate health care.

Bring world class health care to Texas women

By Margery Engel Loeb and Camille D. Miller

Texas is home to world-class medical schools and institutions that are known far and wide for their state-of-the-art treatment and expertise.

However, many Texans, and especially Texas women, do not have easy access to this remarkable resource.

Some of the health care reforms, now being considered in Congress, hold the key that will open the door. We can look forward to a world in which more women and their families have coverage than at any time in our nation's history. In Texas, there has long been bipartisan, grassroots support for health care for women and children.

For Texas women, and the 21 million women across our nation without health insurance, that will be a truly life changing - and in many cases, lifesaving - moment.

Imagine a system in which, for the first time ever, women won't be charged up to 45 percent more than men for identical coverage, and maternity and reproductive health will be part of a basic care package.

The reforms will also include coverage of important preventative tests like mammograms. And they will put a stop to the shameful practice of denying health coverage because of "pre-existing medical conditions" such as breast cancer and pregnancy, or evidence of "uninsurability" such as being a victim of domestic violence.

The inclusion of women's health needs is so essential to the health of all Americans that the deans of 39 of America's 50 schools of public health -- including the deans at University of North Texas and Texas A&M -- have endorsed a scientific, data-driven report by Columbia University's Mailman School of Public Health stating that such treatments and services should be part of any national health plan.

According to the report, "a well-woman standard of care -- one that includes access to comprehensive care and services essential to reproductive health -- will ensure that women can attain good health, maintain it through their reproductive years, and age well."

By ensuring coverage of prevention and basic health services like maternity benefits, the proposed reforms will create a system that provides not just "sick care" but true health care for women and ultimately for all citizens of our nation.

In these tough economic times, such changes can't come soon enough to Texas. According to a report released recently by Families USA, a nonpartisan consumer advocacy group, family health care premiums for Texas workers rose about four and a half times faster than earnings from 2000 through 2009. That troubling figure may help explain why Texas also has the highest number of residents in the nation lacking health coverage (26.3 percent).

In fact, according to an analysis of U.S. Census data by experts at Baylor University, the counties with the six largest Texas cities ranked the worst in the nation in terms of working-age people without insurance. Houston's Harris County tops the list with 37.6 percent of working-age adults under 65 lacking health coverage. Dallas County is a close second with 33.3 percent uninsured. Bexar, Travis, Tarrant and El Paso counties don't fare much better.

Texas has the infrastructure, the innovation and the expertise to provide top-quality care for all of its citizens. Now all that's needed is for our elected officials to help Texas live up to its world-class reputation for cutting-edge medical care by ensuring that Texans have affordable access to that care. In doing so, they will be making history for women and putting the keys to good health into the hands of all Americans.

Loeb, a Women Donors Network steering committee member of their Moving Forward initiative, lives in Victoria.

Miller, president/CEO of Texas

Health Institute, lives in Austin.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My sister "Tricia's" daughters, ages 5 and 7, are my only nieces. A few weeks ago, I sent the 7-year-old a gift for her birthday. When I didn't get a response, I called my sister to ask if it had arrived. Tricia said, "Oh, yeah, we got it. We've been busy and so we didn't open it. We'll get to it someday." I felt terrible knowing my niece didn't get the gift on her birthday and didn't know I had remembered her.

I have since learned that my nieces weren't given the gifts I sent last Christmas, either, which explains why I didn't receive thank-you notes. Tricia told me her girls get lots of presents so she limits when they can have them. She gives them as rewards or saves them for rainy days.

The younger daughter's birthday is coming up, and now I'm wondering what to do. I don't want to spend the time or money picking out something she may never see. Should I just send a card? Or call to wish her a happy birthday?

My sister is generous with my kids. They open the gifts right away and send thank-you notes. How do I reciprocate? -- HURT IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR HURT: By intercepting your gifts and presenting them as "rewards" or "saving them for a rainy day," your sister is defeating their purpose and may be taking the credit that should be going to you. Your nieces should absolutely know that you think of them on their birthdays and other holidays.

By all means call them and send cards. And start contributing to a college fund for them. Although they may not appreciate right now what a thoughtful gift you are giving them, I guarantee they will in the future.

DEAR ABBY: I have a good relationship with my 84-year-old mother, but it's difficult to spend time with her because during the past year she has started hitting me. She does not appear to be angry when she does it. She'll do it if I say something she thinks is funny, when I do something nice or for no reason at all.

It hurts me physically and emotionally when she hits me. I have asked her repeatedly to please not do it, but she persists. Any ideas? -- BRUISED IN SPRINGFIELD

DEAR BRUISED: I have a suspicion. I have written before that any significant change in a senior's behavior or personality should be reported to his or her doctor. Your mother may need to be physically and neurologically evaluated because it's possible that she doesn't remember that you have asked her not to hit you. My advice is to have your mother checked out.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is divorced from my grandson "Cody's" father, "Mitch." Cody is only 8, and when Mitch makes plans with him and then doesn't show up or even bother to call, of course Cody is sad.

I can't stand to see my grandson hurt over and over again. How can

I help him get through these difficult times? -- PROTECTIVE NANA IN RHODE ISLAND

DEAR PROTECTIVE NANA: It isn't possible to shield your grandson entirely from his father's neglect. However, you might lessen his disappointment by making alternative plans to do something with him if his father is a no-show.

DAILY HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Oct. 9, 2009:
This year, you find that staying on a level course takes a fair share of talent. Disruption seems to be a given at work and in your daily life. You often will want to withdraw. Don't let stress make you feel negative. Your creativity flourishes as you rarely have seen before. Learn to flow rather than judge. If you are single, you could meet someone quite special; remember to toss your rose-colored shades. If you are attached, the two of you have a very special tie. Keep the chemistry alive. CANCER pushes you into the limelight.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
*** Just when you thought everything was handled for the weekend, a surprise heads in your direction. How you handle this event could define your weekend. Complete rather than initiate. Tonight: Head on home.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
*** You might feel that you have all the details handled, only to find out otherwise. Difficulties occur involving a meeting, a last-minute snafu and/or a friend with a hassle. Know that you can handle it all graciously. Stay calm. Tonight: Join your pals.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
*** The best of intentions easily could get waylaid. Stay centered, knowing you want to end the week on a positive note. Trust your decisions, especially around family and home. A boss or higher-up is unpredictable. Tonight: Stay within your budget.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
** Listen, think and say no to a knee-jerk reaction. You might not like what you are seeing. Make that OK, and you will be OK. Listen to what someone says, but also be aware of this person's motives, and perhaps feelings, of which they might not be aware. Tonight: Christen the weekend well.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
*** Use the daylight hours to the max. Listen and share more of yourself, be it in a meeting or with individuals. Trust in your ability to figure out what is appropriate here. A partner might not be behaving appropriately. Tonight: Take some much needed personal time.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
*** Everyone looks to you for answers and responses. You know when enough is enough, especially from an unstable partner who drives you a touch crazy. Don't project the negativity you feel; rather, take a walk and rise above a situation. Tonight: Finally doing what you want.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
*** Keep detaching, and that will help you deal with uproar and a fast change of events. Face it: As inspired as you can be, not everyone sees the wisdom of your ways. Be open to possibilities. Don't take another's actions personally. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
*** Work with a key partner and don't worry so much about the end results. Surely someone might have a difficult time getting this person's logic, but not you. Stay on top of a situation and refuse to let a friend or loved one bring you down. Tonight: Leave the mundane as quickly as you can.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
**** You might discover that others really need you, and if you don't help, you'll incur their wrath, like it or not. How you handle someone and the decisions you make could take an interesting turn. Tonight: Relate to a one-on-one level.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
*** Get everything done, and be sure a project or situation is tight, as an element of the unpredictable races through this afternoon. Trying to obtain an overview could be close to impossible. Tonight: Celebrate the weekend. Choose from your many invitations.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
*** Someone who you thought you had settled a problem with reactivates. Be careful with your finances, as you could be put in a position where you might have to pick up an expense. Be willing to find another way that works better. Tonight: Run errands on the way home.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
*** Pressure continues from the home front. You wonder how and why you need to put up with a difficult partner. Stop and take in a dose of realism. Think back and go over your initial agreement. Tonight: TGIF.

Foreman Harvester tennis player of the week

BY ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

Head Tennis Coach Sarah Corse named Myles Foreman as player of the week for his play from September 21 through the 26.

Corse nominated Foreman for his strong play in singles during district.

"Myles has been playing great for us," Corse said. "Dumas was only his second district loss. So he has been playing really well."

Foreman won his singles matches against Randall September 22 and Palo Duro September 26. Foreman has been playing tennis since fourth grade and got interested in the sport because his brother was playing it.

"My brother actually started a year before me,"

Foreman said. "He played the first year and I followed my brother."

Foreman said his most memorable match when he was 12 and earned a come from behind victory.

"I was down 2-7,"

Foreman said. "I fought back and won the match and that was in the semi-finals. So, I got to play in the finals that year. So, that was pretty exciting for me when I just started."

Foreman has enjoyed playing doubles in high school.

"I am a doubles player," Foreman said. "It's nice to have her coaching us after so many coaching changes. It's nice to have a coach that is going to stay here and coach us. It's great."

Foreman said Pampa High School went through three or four coaches before Corse arrived three years ago. The senior tennis player said Rafael Nadal is his favorite tennis player.

"I like his forehand," Foreman said. "It's so awkward but so good too."

Foreman said if he wasn't playing tennis he would be doing a lot of choir and music.

"I like playing the guitar and the piano a lot," Foreman said. "I enjoy signing but that's the thing I keep secret. I don't do it in front of anybody else. I won't stand up and sing alone."

If Foreman could do anything he said he would be a musician but he will probably go into engineering.

Harvester tennis downs Bulldogs to end skid

BY ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters tennis team ended their five game losing streak defeating the Borger Bulldogs 12-7.

Head Coach Sarah Corse said the match went mostly Pampa's way the whole time.

"The boys won seven of nine," Corse said. "The girls went 4-5."

Myles Foreman, Garrett

Couts, Aaron Silva, Logan Karbo, and Nick Nelson won their singles for the boys. Holly Gage and Sammi Finney won their singles for the girls. David Moore and Silva, Karbo and Nelson won their doubles for the boys. In girls doubles, Finney and Gage won and Erin Buck and Hilary Acker won. Landon Karbo and Kaitlin Winegeart won in mixed doubles.

Corse said it was nice to get a win and hope it carries over Saturday against Hereford. Pampa (4-11, 1-6) plays at Hereford on Saturday. The Harvesters beat Hereford September 15 at home.

The Harvesters also played Caprock Saturday in Caprock and lost 13-6. Corse said the turning point of the match was when they did not win the girls doubles. The head tennis coach said her boys played well.

PJH shut out by Eagles

BY ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

Pampa Junior High seventh and eighth grade football teams lost to Canyon Junior High Tuesday.

The eighth grade B team lost 36-0 to Canyon at Harvester Field. Coach Jim Gill said Canyon got off to a fast start.

"After they scored on their opening possession, the Eagles took the ball away from the PJHS B squad and returned it for another touchdown," Gill said.

The eighth grade coach said Brandon Stokes did good leading the offense down the field and his defense did good on stopping the Eagles on several possessions.

The eighth grade A team lost 30-0 to Canyon, also at Harvester Field. The Reapers drove the ball to midfield but had to punt. Pampa's punt was blocked giving Canyon a short field. Gill said his defense forced the Eagles into a third and long situation but Canyon completed a pass for a touchdown. The Eagles scored on another third down and long with a touchdown pass. Canyon led 24-0 at halftime.

Gill was pleased with how his team played in the second half.

"The defense did not give up another score and the offense behind the runs of Daymon Villegas and Freddrick Jackson moved the ball down the field. The offense led by Clifton marched down the field on three occasions in the second half but was unable to reach the end zone."

The seventh grade football teams lost to Canyon Tuesday in Canyon. The B team lost 44-0 and the A team lost 42-0. Coach Clint Allen said they are putting last night's loss behind them and will get ready for Dumas.
