Deadline for ACRE moved to Sept. 1

ARNIE AURELLANO
 editor@thepampanews.com
 According to Gray County USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA) Executive Director Matthew Street, the 2010 Average Crop Revenue Election (ACRE) production certification deadline has been extended to September 1.
 Producers who participate in the ACRE program receive revenue-based payments as an alternative to receiving price-based counter-cyclical payments.
 "The original July 15, 2011 deadline was extended to September 1, 2011, due to the large workload that many county offices are experiencing," said Street.
 "The extension applies to reporting the farm benchmark yields for 2005 through 2009 and the actual farm yield for 2010," he continued.
 Because of the extended deadline, FSA county offices will not be authorized to use a late-file register.
 This means that no ACRE production certifications will be accepted beyond the September 1 date.
 For more information or questions regarding ACRE certification, please contact the Gray County FSA office at 806-665-6561, ext. 2.

Nearly 750 pounds of donations shipped to Alabama

RANDY PRIBBLE
 rpribble@thepampanews.com
 Nearly 750 pounds of donated items have been packaged and sent from Pampa to tornado victims in Alabama. Organizers of the effort say it will be the first of monthly donations until the need is met.
 The local project, headed by members of Pampa's Trinity Fellowship partnered with the Somebody Cares America organization, is in response to the April 27 outbreak of some 50 tornadoes which ravaged Alabama's northern half, leaving a trail of debris and 238 deaths.

Local donations included everyday household items, such as soap, toothpaste, deodorant, towels and pillows.
 "There were a lot of people who responded to (the story) in the paper," said Sara Farmer, one of the Trinity Fellowship members who helped organize the effort. "A lot of them I didn't even know and they gave very generously. We were very pleased with the response."
 Farmer said many people asked if the group was going to continue the effort and the decision was made to attempt monthly shipments.
 "The drop-off places will continue to receive donations and our plan is to continue to ship things off the last Wednesday of every month," she said.

 Donations of new items or cash donations may be dropped off at the following places:
 •Trinity Fellowship - 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to noon on Friday.
 •Pregnancy Support Center - Noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Wednesday and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Thursdays.
 •The Pampa News office - 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Tough Medicaid decision shelved to 2013

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers responsible for drafting the Texas budget have long been known as creative writers, and when it comes to health care spending, this year is no exception.

Since January, the Legislature has wrestled with a $27 billion shortfall to pay for existing state services. Health care and education dominate state spending, so that's where legislators went to find savings. It now appears health care will take the brunt of the cuts, about $10 billion worth.

The most creative move was a House and Senate conference committee's decision to simply not fund the $4.8 billion in new Medicaid demand expected over the next two years and address the issue in the 2013 session. The Legislative Budget Board, which is responsible for crunching the numbers, made sure lawmakers knew what they were doing.

"It is our estimate that with these funding decisions, the bill is short $4.8 billion in general revenue, as compared to our staff's forecast (of growth in demand for Medicaid services)," Wayne Pulver, one of the board's assistant directors, told the committee Monday night.

Texas legislators are in a tough spot. They are required by the state constitution to pass a budget that only spends the amount of money the comptroller says is available over the next two years. One way to meet that requirement is to ignore federally required spending, a move lawmakers deride as "kicking the can down the road."

The money will likely run out about the same time the Legislature comes back for the 2013 session and they will deal with the shortfall then. This is not unprecedented: Lawmakers typically fund Medicaid at a growth rate that is too low, knowing they'll have time to fix it in the next session.

The problem with cutting Medicaid is that the federal government matches each dollar the state spends with two dollars; so cut one, lose two more. Texas will spend roughly $21.7 billion in general revenue on health and human services over the 2010-11 fiscal years, according to the budget board. Federal matching funds over that period total about $42.2 billion.

That money helped treat 4 million Texans, including poor children, the elderly and the disabled who require assistance.

State agencies asked for $31 billion in general revenue to maintain the current level of services over the next two years, but lawmakers will likely only give them $21 billion. Hospitals will see their reimbursement rates for Medicaid patients cut 8 percent, early childhood intervention will lose $40 million and the Federal Women's Health Program will be eliminated.

Lawmakers have also slashed programs to make sure the state is prepared for natural disaster or epidemics and funding for HIV and sexually transmitted disease prevention, while abstinence education remains fully funded. Chronic disease prevention has been cut more than 50 percent and family planning funding may be cut 80 percent, according to the budget board documents.

To pay for the programs that are left, the Legislature has made it a priority to capture the maximum number of federal dollars while spending as few state dollars as possible.

Federal money often comes with federal regulations that set minimum standards of care the state must provide, guaranteeing the money is spent as intended. One way to get around those regulations is to request a waiver to try something different, like hiring private companies to manage care the way big health maintenance organizations do.

In the health and human services budget compromise, lawmakers calculated they could save $700 million by getting another federal waiver: Democratic state Rep. Sylvester Turner, one of the House's top budget experts, questioned whether the state should assume a waiver will be approved.

"Can you give me the likelihood of that occurring?" Turner asked. None of the five budget board staff members at the meeting could answer.

"Since $700 million of this is in the budget... is it real, or hopeful?" Turner asked again.

"The $700 million, in your vernacular, is a hopeful number," state Rep. John Zerwas, R-Simonton, eventually answered.

Turner said he was concerned that much of the forecasted savings in the budget was based on wishful thinking. Zerwas said roughly $1 billion of the budget was based on projected savings from changing how Medicaid is delivered, not actual revenue and far from guaranteed.

"How do we make up the difference if the savings are not realized?" he asked rhetorically. The unspoken answer is the state runs out of money and has to find it somewhere.

The state got into this budget mess because the business tax routinely fails to bring in as much money as expected. The 2009 recession made matters worse. In 1987 the Legislature created a Rainy Day Fund to cope with these crises, but conservative lawmakers refuse to tap the $6.6 billion that is projected to be in the account by 2013.

Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst on Tuesday said he wanted to preserve the majority of the Rainy Day Fund, in part because not enough money was set aside for Medicaid spending. He did hold out hope that the state could cut costs in the long run by hiring private insurance companies to provide state health and human services and changing reimbursement formulas.

Democrats who'd rather pass a comprehensive budget this year are frustrated.

"I had wanted us take responsibility for properly funding our seniors, nursing homes and children in need of health services," said Democratic state Rep. Mike Villarreal, who serves on the Appropriations Committee. "Underfunding Medicaid is just an accounting trick to put off to the next generation of Texans the challenge of getting our financial house in order."

Cops' Corner

The Pampa Police Department wants to make you aware of a scam some of our citizens have been affected by.

The scam goes like this: Someone calls and states that they are from a local law enforcement agency. In this case the caller claimed to be from the Pampa Police Department. They go on to say you have some type of warrant. In this specific incident, the caller told the victim they had a narcotics warrant. The caller knew she did not and hung up the phone and called the police.

The victim advised that the call showed it was from the Police Department.

Unfortunately, in these days technology has become so far. Due to this, it allows callers to disguise their telephone numbers so that it may show they are calling from the Police Department or any other number they wish. We want the community to know that we do not serve warrants in this way. We ask that if someone calls you and threatens you in this matter please hang up the phone and call the Police Department.

Again, we want to encourage citizens do not give any personal information over the phone. The scammers will try "phishing" for information so they in turn can use you personal information to gain credit cards and open accounts. In this case, the callers hung up the phone before they had a chance to ask for money or try "phishing" for their information. We ask you to please do the same if you receive a call. If you would like more information on this please contact Officer McCullar at the Pampa Police Department at 806-669-5700.

AFTERNOONRUSH Pickens says Obama lacks energy plan

3 charged in teen alcohol death

DALLAS (AP) - A store clerk and two other adults have been accused of providing booze for an after-prom party attended by a Dallas high school student who died from alcohol poisoning.

The Texas Alcohol Beverage Commission announced misdemeanor charges Friday over the death of 18-year-old Jonathan Sierra.

The Skyline High School senior was found dead May 1 at the Aloft Hotel. TABC says the hotel did not provide the alcohol and was not cited.

TABC says a 54-year-old clerk is charged with selling alcohol to a minor. Beer sold to a 17-year-old boy ended up at the party.

A 27-year-old man who bought liquor for his underage brother is charged with providing alcohol to a minor. A 24-year-old man is accused of providing alcohol to an underage cousin.

State: No to EPA refinery regs

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas House has approved a resolution urging the U.S. Congress to keep the Environmental Protection Agency from regulating greenhouse gases emitted by oil refineries.

Congress doesn't have to heed the measure, which passed Friday 107-34. It also urges the EPA to keep from interfering with emissions from gas wells, factories and electricity generating sources.

Both the state House and Senate have scrambled to hammer out a budget agreement this week. Yet the EPA measure isn't the first recommendation Texas lawmakers have found time to make to their federal counterparts.

The House also approved a state's rights resolution that urges the "federal government to cease and desist from certain mandates" and calls for repealing some federal legislation. Supporters say that measure refers generally to unfunded federal mandates and banking regulations.

Panel rejects gun measure

AUSTIN (AP) - A Texas senator's plan to allow state lawmakers to carry concealed handguns where the public cannot has run into problems.

A bill extending concealed carry privileges to lawmakers and federal prosecutors has already passed the Senate. But a House committee took state lawmakers out of the bill on Thursday night.

The bill would have allowed lawmakers who are concealed handgun license holders to carry guns into bars, restaurants, hospitals and other places where they are banned.

Rep. Pete Gallego, a Democrat from Alpine, says lawmakers should not have special gun privileges the rest of the public doesn't have.

Sen. Dan Patrick, a Houston Republican, has said lawmakers could be targets for assassination and need to be able to protect themselves as all time.

Coaster death ruled accident

HOUSTON (AP) - The death of a man who fell from a roller coaster during the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo has been ruled an accident.

The Harris County Institute of Forensic Sciences on Friday listed the manner of death for Brian Greenhouse as an accident. The cause of death is pending.

Greenhouse died March 20 after falling about 28 feet. His relatives have filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo and Ray Cammack Shows.

Livestock show CEO Leroy told the Houston Chronicle that the matter is in litigation and declined comment. A spokesman for Ray Cammack Shows also declined comment.

Family attorney Tony Denena says he's not surprised that the death was ruled accidental. The lawsuit maintains the ride did not have proper restraints.

Senate approves daycare bill

AUSTIN (AP) - Daycare workers would need parental permission to give medicine to a child or face prosecution under a measure passed by the Texas Legislature.

The Senate voted Thursday to prohibit child-care facility workers from giving medication to a child unless a parent or guardian has given written permission. Permission could also be given by phone for a single dose of medication. Violations would be a Class A misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in jail and a fine of up to $4,000.

Known as Nathan's Law, the bill was written after an infant, Nathan King, was given medication not approved by his parents in a daycare center. He died after being left unsupervised.

The House already passed the bill, sending the measure to Gov. Rick Perry's desk to become law.

NM spaceport hosts launch

UPHAM, N.M. (AP) - Students from New Mexico, Texas and Arizona gathered at Spaceport America at dawn Friday to see a year's worth of work launched into space.

Twenty-seven experiments were part of this year's annual student launch sponsored by NASA through its Summer of Innovation Program.

Engineers from UP Aerospace supervised from a command center about a mile away from the crowd as the SL-5 rocket lifted off. The rocket took the students' experiments a record 73.5 miles high.

After the payload reached its maximum altitude, a parachute deployed and the experiments were returned to earth so data could be downloaded.

Some experiments were designed to monitor changes in temperature and radiation, while one tested whether a cell phone was capable of receiving a text message at the edge of space.

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) - Texas billionaire T. Boone Pickens faulted President Barack Obama on Friday, saying the president has failed to develop the energy plan he promised Americans as a presidential candidate in 2008.

The oil magnate and advocate for alternative fuels said at a town hall meeting at a southeast Pennsylvania university that the Democratic president hasn't followed up on a campaign promise to end America's reliance on Mideast oil within 10 years.

"He's never told us how we're going to get off the Mideast oil, and no one's ever asked him," Pickens said. "We're the only country in the world that has no energy plan."

Pickens stressed, though, that he believes Republicans also have been remiss in tackling the problem.

Since taking office in January 2009, Obama has boosted corporate fuel economy standards, put billions of stimulus dollars into renewable energy projects and worked to limit greenhouse gas emissions. In March, Obama called for a one-third reduction of oil imports by 2025.

But many of his proposals have stalled in Congress, where Republicans have prioritized increased drilling over renewable energy initiatives.

Though Pickens rose to national prominence as an oil tycoon, he has been a vocal supporter of alternative energy, including natural gas, wind and solar power. He maintains that limited resources such as natural gas are not a permanent solution for U.S. energy needs, but should be used as a stopgap measure until new technologies can be developed.

Pickens spoke at West Chester University, 25 miles west of Philadelphia, and toured its refueling station for its 22 natural gas-operated vehicles. He was joined by U.S. Republican Reps. Patrick Meehan and Jim Gerlach. The two congressmen are co-sponsoring legislation to accelerate natural gas production and consumption as a way to lessen dependence on foreign oil and lower fuel emissions.

University officials said they spent an additional $7,700 upfront for the Texas jobless rate at 8%

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas unemployment rate dropped for the third consecutive month to 8.0 percent in April as another 32,900 nonfarm jobs were added, the state employment agency said Friday.

Jobs grew for the seventh consecutive month, and Texas has added more than 86,000 positions since the start of the year, according to Texas Workforce Commission figures.

The Texas jobless rate dropped from 8.1 percent in March and 8.2 percent a year ago, remaining below the national figure of 9.0 percent. The March figure marked the first time in four years that the state's unemployment rate fell in consecutive months.

"Texas has demonstrated its ability to bounce back from the effects of the national recession through strong and consistent job growth over the past year," commission Chairman Tom Pauken said in a statement, noting that Texas led the nation by adding 500,000 jobs in the past five years.

Midland maintained the state's lowest local jobless rate at 4.4 percent for April. Brownsville-Harlingen remained the highest at 11.5 percent, down from 12.0 percent in March.

vehicles, but pay $1.65 per gallon for the natural gas to fuel them - less than half of the current price for regular fuel in Pennsylvania.

Pickens said the United States uses 20 million barrels of oil per day - 13 million of those are imported. He noted that despite being 4 percent of the world population, Americans use almost 25 percent of oil produced worldwide.

Although he supports alternative energy initiatives, he also defends the natural gas drilling process known as "fracking" used in the Marcellus Shale in Pennsylvania and elsewhere that Obama, many environmentalists and others say may threaten the quality of underground water. In the process, fluids are injected into the ground at high pressure to fracture underground rocks and release the gas deposits.

"This isn't anything that's going to hurt anybody," Pickens said, adding that he's never seen any evidence of aquifers being damaged by the more than 8,000 natural gas wells in the U.S. that have used the practice.

Today in History

Today is Saturday, May 21, the 141st day of 2011. There are 224 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 21, 1911, during the Mexican Revolution, the Treaty of Ciudad Juarez was signed by President Porfirio Diaz and revolutionary leader Francisco I. Madero; under the agreement, Diaz resigned his office, and ended up living the rest of his life in exile in France.

On this date:

No more rants about 'running out of fuel'

I just learned I'm going to save money! My apartment building in New York will switch from heating oil to cleaner natural gas. Gas is much cheaper than oil now because energy companies found ways to get more of it out of the ground.

Even more astounding is that by using this technique, America won't run out of natural gas for 100 years or more! Time to break out the Champagne?

Not so fast, say environmentalists. To get gas out of the ground, companies use pressurized chemicals to blow up rock. It's called hydraulic fracturing — fracking. An Oscar-nominated movie, "Gasland," says that fracking contaminates our water supply with chemicals. In the movie, some homeowners set their tap water on fire.

That got my attention. I've seen Michael Moore's movies and environmental documentaries, which I thought were nonsense. But "Gasland" is more convincing.

Unfortunately, "Gasland" producer Josh Fox turned down my interview requests, as did representatives of the big national environmental groups that oppose fracking. I think I know why. The movie and the left's arguments against fracking are deceitful.

First, the movie implies that nasty chemicals get into the water table. That seems logical, since they shoot them down into gas wells. But it turns out that the shale gas wells are thousands of feet below the water table. Do the chemicals flow up — against gravity?

But then what's the explanation for the most dramatic part of the movie: tap water so laden with gas that people can set it on fire?

It turns out that has little to do with fracking. In many parts of America, there is enough methane in the ground to leak into people's well water. The best fire scene in the movie was shot in Colorado, where the filmmaker is in the kitchen of a man who lights his faucet. But Colorado investigators went to that man's house, checked out his well and found that fracking had nothing to do with his water catching fire. His well-digger had drilled into a naturally occurring methane pocket.

"There are lots of ... naturally causing effects that occur," says Matthew Brouillette of the Commonwealth Foundation, a think tank in Pennsylvania — where much of the film was shot. "It's really no surprise. We find that 40 percent of the wells in Pennsylvania have some sort of naturally occurring methane gas and other types of things."

John Hanger, former director of Pennsylvania's Department of Environmental Protection, who also appeared in the film, is less sanguine: "Gas can migrate ... from poor drilling into people's private water wells. ... We have had gas move from poorly done gas drilling through the ground and reach people's water wells. So there is a need for oversight ... gas does have some impacts. It is not perfectly clean. But compared to coal and oil, which are more dirty fossil fuels, natural gas can be produced and consumed in a manner that is cleaner than coal."

Filmmaker Josh Fox concedes that the states concluded that the fire wasn't caused by fracking, but he says the government regulators collude with industry, or don't use good science. His movie portrays Hanger as an indifferent bureaucrat. Hanger says the movie is just inaccurate. "Josh Fox has a mission. ... He is trying to shut down the gas — drilling industry."

Frankly, I'm skeptical of all of them: lefty moviemakers who smear companies, companies with economic interests at stake and the regulators, who are often cozy with industry and lack essential knowledge. The surest environmental protectors are property rights — and courts that assign liability to polluters.

But hydraulic fracturing is a wonderful thing. It's not new. Companies have done it for 60 years, but now they've found ways to get even more gas out of the ground. That's the reason gas is getting cheaper and panicky politicians no longer rant about America "running out of fuel."

Natural gas is not risk-free, but no energy source is. Perfect is not one of the choices.

Shared prosperity? Where is the sharing?

The big five of Big Oil might want to mull over a bit of advice that baseball great Ted Williams once offered to rookies: "If you don't think too good, don't think too much."

Apparently, the chieftains of BP, Chevron, ConocoPhillips, ExxonMobil and Shell thought that a bit of gruff, CEO bluster would be just the thing to brush back public anger over the industry's all-star avarice and arrogance. Bad thinking.

Recently, the head of these multibillion-dollar behemoths, pumped up on narcissism, strode into a U.S. Senate hearing room and took wild swings at a bill titled: Close Big Oil Tax Loopholes.

In a time of $4-a-gallon gasoline, stratospheric rises in petro profits and a federal budget deficit severe enough that Republicans have called for killing Medicare, the spark that exploded the public's fury at oil giants was the revelation that the big five are on the government dole, drawing more than $2 billion a year in corporate welfare payments.

Exxon's top exec flailed at the bill, absurdly labeling it "discriminatory." Next up was Shell's man, who feigned almost-comic outrage at the notion that our nation's budget deficit should be reduced "by taking more from the few," as though he was unaware that "the few" in question are notorious tax dodgers, paying little or nothing on their enormous profits. Wildest of all though was Conoco's chief, Jim Mulva, who inflamed senators and insulted the public by calling the bill "un-American."

No, Mr. Mulva, what's un-American is that you five clueless CEOs expect to haul in $100 billion in profits this year, yet you're whining that you should be given $2 billion in special tax breaks, even as little kids are being cut off from Head Start and the GOP threatens to take Medicare away from grandma. Start thinking about someone besides your sorry selves.

As one politician bluntly said of Washington's annual tax giveaway to massively profitable oil corporations: "We don't need incentives to the oil and gas companies to explore. There are plenty of incentives." That was no lefty basher of Big Oil talking, it was George W. Bush.

Yet, thanks to an army of lobbyists and the regular delivery of bushel baskets full of campaign cash, the oil guys have been allowed to keep drilling into our public treasury, pumping out some $4 billion a year in various tax subsidies — more than half of which goes to the five richest corporations.

Incentives for what? Not to explore for more oil, hire more Americans or invest in renewable energy. Instead, top executives have spent the vast majority of their huge profits driving up their own corporation's stock prices to enrich — who else? — themselves. This is why oil executives are less popular than a Mississippi River flood.

Indeed, despite being called "un-American" by Conoco, the congressional proposal to repeal the loopholes is supported by 74 percent of us Americans, including a majority of Republicans. Yet, in March, every single Republican in the House voted in lockstep to protect all of the oil subsidies. Also, the budget that the GOP rammed through the House last month retains every dime of the $4 billion giveaway, even as that budget slashes food stamps, job training, college aid, and health care for seniors and the poor.

But it's the poor oil goliaths that draw the tongue-clucking sympathy of these compassionate corporatists. For example, GOP presidential hopeful Tim Pawlenty called the idea of ending the subsidy "ludicrous," wailing that killing it would be a crude "tax increase" on the waifs of Big Oil.

Meanwhile, Chevron's CEO says: "I don't think people want shared sacrifice (from oil corporations). I think they want shared prosperity." Hello, Earth to Chevron-Man, you've been grossly prosperous for years — where's the sharing?

If ignorance goes to $100 a barrel, try to get drilling rights on that guy's head.

"The National Road," by Dr. Stephen Chase will be the program next Monday night at the Gray County Genealogical Society's monthly lecture.

This secretary inquiry of Amarillo historian Dr. Chase will amaze you. If your grandparents migrated from the west on The Mother Road, how did your great-grandparents get to the Midwest?

Understanding the history of the National Road is vital to well-researched family histories. GCGS is fortunate to have Dr. Chase's established expertise on this little-taught blurb of American history at 7 p.m., on Monday at Lovett Memorial Library.

Interested in scholarly inquiry? You are always welcome to attend GCGS programs.

At the April GCGS meeting, historian Billie Gale Cole discussed "Without Starting with historical information from the Bible, Ms. Cole moved through five thousand years of Canaanite history: Babylon to 2011, diaspora here, diaspora there; destruction of the Temple II, Roman Empire, Masada, Medieval Europe & Middle East, Palestine and WWI; Hitler and cohorts, attempting destruction of genetic proof that Third Reich Aryans were hiding Canaanite/Hebrew/Israeli/Judaic heritage; to Israel and the holy city of Jerusalem today.

Curator Kay Lard shared "The Gover Heiskell Family," chock full of family photographs. The book, compiled by Susan Hambleton was published in Colorado, 2011 by Snaptish.com.

Harvester tennis looks back on successful 2010-11

aglover@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Harvesters tennis team spent time looking back at a season that concluded with two qualifying for state during their banquet Friday at Briarwood Full Gospel Church.

Head coach Sarah Corse said the team had a great fall, giving it momentum in the spring.

"For the first time since I've been here we had a winning record," Corse said. "It was great. We had some newcomers come in and help. Coming out ahead really led us into the spring and what are expectations were going to be."

The Harvesters went 9-3 and finished fifth at the team regionals. Corse said that was the turning point of the season.

"We really came out of Wichita Falls ready to play," Corse said. "Our next tournaments, it didn't matter where we were going to. Whether I was placing them in a hard tournament with 4A and 3A teams they performed. We came home with a lot of hardware."

In the spring, seniors Holly Gage and Aaron Silva finished third in mixed doubles at the state tournament. The pair won second in district and regionals. Junior David Moore and Camila Vallejo made it to the second round in boys and girls singles respectively. Sophomores Logan Karbo and Nick Nelson also qualified for regionals.

The junior varsity was recognized for their accomplishments. Seniors Olin Boyd and Austin Beck won boys doubles at district. Freshmen Bray Eddleman and Blake Chishum finished second in boys doubles. Fanny Canon won third in girls singles. Cecilia Alonzo won fourth in girls singles. Freshman Brandon Gage won boys singles. Dylan Parks finished second in boys singles. Chuck Benavidez finished third in boys singles.

Then awards were presented. Seniors Gage, Jordan Mayhew, Beck, Silva and Hannah Smith earned Academic All-State selections. Regional qualifiers Karbo, Nelson, Vallejo, Moore, Gage and Silva were given certificates. Gage and Silva also received certificates for qualifying for state.

Corse gave out team awards that were decided jointly by her and coach Eugene Polasek. Vallejo and Nelson won the Fighting Heart Award. Moore and Collin McClendon won the Sportsmanship Award. The Attitude Award went to Matt Albracht and Elizabeth Terry. Braden Russell won the Team Award. Sophomore Makayla Hampton and Landon Karbo won the Most Improved Player Award.

In a lighthearted moment of the banquet, Corse said Hampton is a great competitor and gets absolutely furious when she loses. Hampton responded by saying "I don't get that mad." Corse jokingly asked "So, was that your evil twin?" Silva and Gage won the Most Outstanding Player and Harvester Up Awards.

The banquet concluded with senior will and a slideshow of the season.

Glo-Valve edges Cabot, falls to Duncan Fraser & Bridges

SPECIAL TO THE PAMPA NEWS

Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency scored seven runs in the top of the fifth to put away Glo-Valve Service 13-1 in Pampa Optimist 11-12 Cal Ripken League action Thursday.

In the early game, Cabot Corporation spotted Panhandle eight runs in the top of the first but nibbled away at the lead until scoring three in the bottom of the fourth to win 10-9 in a game shortened by the time limit. Fernando Anguiano scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Bryson Burrell, who relieved Chase Brown in the second inning, was the winning pitcher.

Adam Zuniga held Glo-Valve to one hit. He walked three, hit a batter and struck out six. Brendon Woelfle, Chase Voss and Logan Martindale pitched for Glo-Valve.

With one out in the first inning, Greyson Wilson started a rally for DFB with a single. Zane McCoy followed with a double. Zuniga and Kyndan Lott reached base on errors scoring Wilson and McCoy. Zuniga came home on a wild pitch giving DFB a 3-0 lead.

Glo-Valve scored its only run in the second inning. Clay Baten walked and stole second. He went to third on an infield out and scored on a passed ball.

DFB picked up three unearned runs in the third inning on a walk to Wilson, a catcher's interference and singles by Lott and Brandon Kinser. The roof caved in on Glo-Valve in the fifth as singles by Brant Logan, Lott, Kinser and Derrek Norris, three walks and three errors produced seven runs.

The winners improved to 8-0 on the season and maintained its two-game edge over Rotary Club.

Voss and Bryce Parker made outstanding defensive plays for Glo-Valve. On the first pitch of the game, Voss made a diving stop of a sharp grounder at third, got up and threw a strike to Baten at first for the out. Parker, at second base, ranged far to his left to glove a ground ball and throw the batter out. For Cabot Moses Avila caught a sharp line drive in center for the outstanding defensive play of the first game.

Glo-Valve beat Cabot Corporation 7-6 Monday. Woelfle was the winning pitcher with strikeouts. Brown was the leading hitter with two hits and two runs.

Rotary and Glo-Valve play today at 5:45 p.m. Monday's game feature D.F.B. at Claude at 5:45 p.m. and Rotary and Cabot squaring off at 7:45 p.m. in Optimist Park.

Recent rains green things up, but too late for small grains

ROBERT BURNS
Texas AgriLife Extension Service

COLLEGE STATION — Rain came to many parts of the state, giving some relief to drought-stricken crops and pastures, and — temporarily at least — alleviating the danger of wildfire.

The consensus among Texas AgriLife Extension Service personnel and farmers located where rain was received was that it came too late to save small-grain crops, and more rain will be needed soon for any substantial improvement in pasture and hay land.

Parts of Central Texas received from a trace to 4 inches of rain on May 13. About 1 inch was more common, as was received at Davidson Brothers Farms, just east of Georgetown. The Davidson Brothers, Dennis and Buster, and son Dustin, raise stocker cattle and grow hay, as well as some corn and cotton.

"Our biggest rain since January was yesterday at about eight-tenths," Dennis said. "We had 8 inches of rain in a two-day period in September, which was enough moisture to get our oats up for grazing. But we didn't have another good rain until Christmas Eve."

Then there were small rains near the end of January, which they have "been pretty much living on" until the recent 0.9 inch rain, he said.

"Corn: It's deceiving if you look at it. It's green, and if you don't know much about farming, you'll think it's alright," Dennis said. "But if you look at it right now, it's starting to tassel and it's not even waist high, so that's not going to make any grain. I don't even think it'll put an ear out."

Dennis said they'll probably either bale or ensile their corn. But because it won't likely make any grain, the silage will not be of any quality, and will mainly be a filler-feed.

Local wheat was in similar condition, said Jared Ripple, AgriLife Extension integrated pest management agent for Williamson County. The crop may look good and golden from the road, but plants are stunted and stands thin. The crop is apparently making grain, but yields will be well below average.

More information on the current Texas drought and wildfire alerts can be found on the AgriLife Extension Agricultural Drought Task Force website at <http://agrilife.tamu.edu/drought/>.

AgriLife Extension district reporters

compiled the following summaries:

PANHANDLE:

A few counties got from a trace to slightly more than 1 inch of rain. In some areas, there was only enough rain to settle the dust, and the storms also brought high winds and above-average temperatures. High wildfire danger was ongoing. Irrigators were actively watering, trying to keep up with crop-water demands. High winds made it difficult for producers to irrigate newly planted crops. Cotton and peanut planting was in progress. Rangeland was mostly in very poor condition. Cattle were reported to be in good to fair condition with continued supplemental feeding. There were reports of wheat-streak mosaic in some irrigated wheat.

ROLLING PLAINS:

A few counties in the eastern part of the district received from 0.75 inch to 4 inches of rain. The rest of the region remained dry, windy and under extremely high wildfire danger. Wildfires raged in King and Dickens counties on May 14-15 and into the early week. Preliminary estimates were that more than 75,000 acres were lost. The wheat harvest was under way, with below-normal yields. Where possible, producers were still irrigating wheat to try to get it to fill out grain heads. Cotton producers were planting on irrigated acres, and some of the crop was already emerging. Dryland cotton farmers were waiting on rain to plant. Pastures were in poor condition, and hay supplies were short. Some producers were considering selling more cows because of the lack of grass and cost of hay. Stock-water tanks and lakes were very low. In Parker County, most of the pecan crop looked good. Growers began spraying for pecan-nut case bearer.

Central Texas rains came too late for many small-grain crops, said Jared Ripple, Texas AgriLife Extension Service integrated pest management agent for Williamson County. Though this wheat looks good and golden, plants are stunted and stands thin.

Garden expert shares drought pointers

COLLEGE STATION — Saving valuable landscapes even successfully adding some new plants — depends on the length of one's hose and depth of one's commitment, according to a Texas AgriLife Extension Service gardening expert.

"It's the season. People are going to want to plant," said Jayla Fry, AgriLife Extension Master Gardener program assistant in College Station. "By all means, go for it."

During a drought, the use of drip irrigation and mulch can help sustain landscapes. "But at the same time you have to realize that during times of a major drought like this, you're going to have to add the water," she said. "So it's an expense that one has to weigh out when adding to the landscape."

Fry said existing plants — from flowers to shrubs to trees — also need special care during the drought to stay healthy and last until rain returns.

"A couple of things to consider in a drought are lawns and trees," Fry said. "With lawns of course, they need to be protected with supplemental irrigation. So about once a week you're going to want to add about an inch of water. Bermuda grass is a little more drought tolerant than St. Augustine, so it is more forgiving."

Trees are a higher investment for property owners and should be watered during a drought to keep them from dying.

"You're going to want to protect trees and how you do that is with your water hose," she said.

Fry suggested that a water hose be turned on until it produces a pencil-sized flow. Place the running hose at the drip-line, or the edge of its canopy, and move the water around the tree every 15 minutes until the ground is completely soaked.

"You need to do this every two weeks, even when the rains come again," she said. "The trees will need the extra water to recoup from this prolonged drought."

For flower beds, Fry said, the soil is an indicator of whether water is needed.

"If it is cool to the touch, then you're OK," she said. "But especially with the wind and the drought conditions, you're going to want to supplement with irrigation. Shrubs will need between the amount of water that you add to your lawn and the amount that you add to your trees."

Adding mulch, she noted, will maintain soil moisture and reduce soil temperatures, which helps plants survive a drought.

"And of course, by adding mulch you get the benefit of cutting down on weeds in your flower bed. So mulch can be a great help during drought periods," Fry noted.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, May 23, 2011.

Others find you remarkable, alluring and "together." This image might be difficult to maintain. Let others see you as less than perfect. For several months, you seem to have had the ability to fulfill your desires. Your circle of friends and acquaintances will expand. If you are single, you will meet several very desirable suitors. Use care with new people. They might not be all you think they are. If you are attached, the relationship will benefit from spending more time together, socializing or as a couple alone. AQUARIUS makes you smile.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You have an upbeat, personal and unique style that singles you out. Your clarity encourages people to follow your lead. Even if you want to pursue a project or your own, others won't let you. Tonight: Don't act like it is Monday night.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Take a stand, but do it gracefully. How you tell someone that you don't agree with him or her can define how willing this person is to work with you. Honor what is happening with a respected friend or relative. Tonight: Burning the candle at both ends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Keep reaching out for the impossible. Linking minds and exchanging ideas could be difficult. Normally this type of brainstorming isn't, but your mind is so out there, as concepts and ideas fly in and out. Tonight: Relax to good music.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Your ability to home in on the real issues with someone you care about adds to the warmth of the bond. You might see the solution, where this person or someone else doesn't. Let them figure it out. Be gracious. Tonight: A close encounter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Many people try to tell you what to do, even though they might have never been in your position. Perhaps letting them live out a part of your life and being as responsible as you could help. This is the perfect time and place. Tonight:

Sort through invitations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Maintain a high profile. Your way of handling projects, daily demands and maybe even work testifies to your efficiency. You will get a lot done quickly. Reach out for someone at a distance. Tonight: Let go of your day. Find your favorite spot.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your ability to home in on what counts (especially with loved ones and special friends) is why you are considered such a thoughtful sign. A discussion about money might not be graceful, but most certainly is necessary. Tonight: Where the gang is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You might want to stay close to home or work from home. By all means, do. You might be exhausted from the past few weeks. Take a personal day if you must. What you do today very well might need to be done again. Would it not be better to take the day off? Tonight: Be a couch potato.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Continue to speak your mind and clear out a problem before it happens. Be sensitive to the other point of view. If this conversation evolves to brainstorming, you might be surprised by this person's ingenuity. Tonight: Hang out; catch up on friends' news.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Stay centered on the emotional and financial costs of a suggestion. If you still would like to nix an idea, do. Remember, you have a talent for knowing what is doable. Stick to your guidelines, and you won't go wrong. Tonight: Your treat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Stop and think about how you feel. You might be surprised by how good you feel. With this information in hand, be willing to take a risk you have been considering. The worst end result is that it doesn't work. Why not give it a shot? Tonight: Whatever feels right.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Keep your own counsel. Someone who notices you could start teasing you, trying to pull out what you might be withholding. Keep communication flowing, but don't say anything you would prefer not to. Tonight: Share with a trusted pal.

'Priest' just a mishmash of some other, better movies

There's something oddly problematic about "Priest."

It's quite a visually riveting film, although nothing we haven't seen before. It almost feels like a compelling horror sci-fi action flick, but mostly because it's pretty much just snippets of other horror, sci-fi or action flicks.

Based in name on a Korean graphic novel, "Priest" is the story of a warrior trained by the church to hunt monsters, like "Van Helsing." See, there's this ongoing conflict between humans and vampires, like in "Blade." The war has left the world barren, and humans now live either in fortified, neon-lit cities (like in "Blade Runner") or out in the post-apocalyptic wasteland (like in "Mad Max").

See where I'm going with this? Good, because it's not over.

The garrison cities are being watched over by an omnipresent big brother figure ("1984").

The humans have won, but the vampires kidnap a girl, prompting the sheriff to convince a priest to help save her. ("The Searchers," anyone?)

This rescue mission, however, is against church orders, so a team of his peers is sent to hunt him down (let's say "Minority Report"). They're a group of pale-faced stoics in all-black ("Dark City") who go into slow-motion when fights break out ("The Matrix").

One of them is an Asian woman who harbors a tacit love for another priest ("Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon").

I suppose I could keep going, but that would just ruin the movie, and all the other movies it's taken from.

It's a shame, because it's a waste of a cool premise and an even cooler lead actor. Paul Bettany has an intensity that almost makes you take the movie seriously at points, but then something happens that just reminds of you some other movie you've already seen, and the illusion is shattered into a hundred derivative pieces.

Likewise Karl Urban, who thoroughly seems to be enjoying his role as the sinister, sneering vampiric villain. Maggie Q was crammed in there as the aforementioned Asian woman, and she's always fun, too.

But there's just not much for them to work with, and it easily shows. Granted, I didn't outright hate it, but I suspect that's more because I liked most of those other movies.

It's hard to call it a letdown, because you don't really go in expecting much. Maybe the sequel that it hints to at the end will be better, but I suppose that depends on what movies that one copies off of.

Newest 'Pirates' a fun ride, but with a little too much

When we first see Captain Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp) in "Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides," he is once again acting out some over-the-top scheme, and like in the previous films, it's a joy to watch.

In fact, the first 20 minutes of the fourth Pirates film captures the spirit of the first film more than anything in parts two and three.

Unfortunately, the film goes on to make many of the same mistakes that brought the previous sequels to their knees.

This time, Sparrow is abducted and forced to help the legendary Blackbeard (Ian McShane), find the fabled Fountain of Youth. It is quickly apparent that Jack is no longer just on a mystical quest to the isle of Tortuga, but a mission to stay alive. Along for the ride is Blackbeard's daughter, Angelica (played wonderfully by Penelope Cruz), who has a mysterious past with Sparrow. Unfortunately for the audience, though, they're not the only ones after the mystical waters of the fountain.

No, hot on their heels are an armada of Spanish ships and a British fleet inexplicably captained by Sparrow's frenemy, Barbossa (Geoffrey Rush). There's also a priest and a mermaid thrown in for good measure.

One thing the Pirates movies have always known how to do is the big sprawling action scenes, and this film does not disappoint. From the grand opening scene, to the big final fight, every action piece is handled very well and keeps the audience enveloped. The comedic bits, which are peppered throughout the film, are also handled very well and always seem to strike directly at the funny bone.

But, as with the previous sequels, the new film suffers from kitchen-sink-itis, in which the writers try to throw everything they can at the audience instead of creating a well crafted and focused story. Here that creates too many subplots which either lead nowhere or simply add nothing to the film. For example, the previously mentioned Spanish armada could have been excised completely, with their few pertinent bits given to either the British fleet or Blackbeard's men. Similarly the priest and mermaid, who are clearly being used to set up a sequel, feel forced into the plot. Had someone simply made a few edits the entire movie could have been cut down by 20 minutes and instead of being an entertaining film, it could have ended up a great one. As is, the movie is better than the previous sequels, but falls very short of the original.

Local attorney Travis Tidmore reviews movies for The Pampa News as well as on his blog, www.thecinemaniac.com.
