Area wind growth to connect cities, create jobs

MOLLIE BRYANT
 mbryant@thepampanews.com

With construction of wind energy transmission lines under way in Gray County, further development of this renewable energy industry is projected for the area. "The Panhandle is slated to produce 5,500 megawatts of energy," said A.J. Swope, executive director of Class 4 Winds in Amarillo. "Right now we're at 1,000 megawatts, so that's five times what we're used to."

Swope anticipates that the transmission lines will make the construction of wind farms more viable than it has been in the past, as wind energy produced in the region will be ushered to the ERCOT grid by 2013.

The growth of wind energy is a shared dream throughout the Texas panhandle, particularly as places with wind projects benefit in the long term through industry and job development.

Judge Lewis Powers of Carson County reported that an 80 megawatt wind farm in White Deer brought about seven full time employees in. With three wind farms and fourth facility in the works, the county also benefits from tax revenue brought in from the facilities.

"Wind turbine production can stabilize tax value and take up slack (of the oil and gas industry)," said Powers.

"Wind farms make it more palatable for someone investing in future land values, with a potential to lease or sell property," he added.

PGWCD gets $1 million TWDB loan

THE PAMPA NEWS

AUSTIN — The Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District, which includes Gray County, will receive a $1,000,000 from the Texas Water Development Board's Agricultural Water Conservation Program.

The loan was approved by resolution on Thursday and will be used to finance loans to area farmers to purchase center-pivot irrigation systems.

The PGWCD's jurisdictional area covers all of Gray County, as well as all or part of Armstrong, Carson, Donley, Hutchinson, Potter, Roberts and Wheeler counties. The area encompasses 6,378 square miles and contains 967,000 cultivated acres, of which 281,500 are irrigated.

The TWDB is the state agency charged with collecting and disseminating water-related data, assisting with regional planning and preparing the State Water Plan for the development of the state's water resources.

The TWDB administers cost-effective financial programs for the construction of water supply, wastewater treatment, flood control, and agricultural water conservation projects.

Police department warns of online auto sale scam

 editor@thepampanews.com

A handful of Pampans have recently encountered a new online scam, and Pampa Police Department Crime Prevention Officer Stormy McCullar is cautioning locals to be wary.

McCullar said that she has recently been approached by a few people about the con, which involves a the purported sale of a vehicle over a website such as Craigslist.

"What they're doing is they'll post something on (a website) on a car," McCullar said. "They'll make up some sob story that they need to sell the car right away, and they'll ask for $1,500 or $2,000 to put a hold on the car. People would then send that money, and then it's gone."

The sob stories vary from scammer to scammer, McCullar said.

"This one particular person said he was in the service and that he was overseas," McCullar said. "He put up on the website that he needed money for his family, and that since he was overseas, he needed it soon."

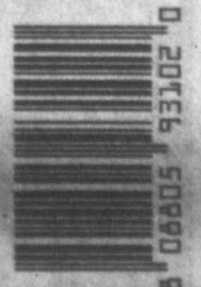

The scam was recently highlighted on a report distributed by the Internet Crime Complaint Center, a joint initiative between the FBI and the National White Collar Crime Center.

McCullar said that, so far, none of the people that she has spoken with have fallen for the hoax. SCAM cont. on page 2

Wind

County, which has two facilities and a third wind farm to be completed in 2012, has seen wind energy spur job growth in an area without many mineral resources.

"It's hard to support much local industry, so this was an industry that landowners were interested in to create some jobs in the area," he said, estimating the wind farms brought in 20 new full time, permanent positions and 700 temporary jobs during construction.

"During installation of the wind farms, you have a tremendous amount of people in the area," Allred added. "A side shoot of our tax abatement agreements with the (construction) companies was for them to spend a certain amount of money buying products and using services that can be provided locally. We wanted to see our local people benefit. There aren't a lot of things we can provide, but we want to protect local citizens' right to provide what they can."

"Wind energy has given us a new layer to our economy," said Gregory Wortham, mayor of Sweetwater. He reported that 30 new businesses came into Sweetwater as a result of wind farm development, some of them local start-ups.

"You get all kinds of service crews, and a lot of them are local industries that just started up with wind or they expanded from oil and gas, and they augment wind with what they do," said Wortham. Wortham has observed wind energy create a global marketplace, as well as a global labor exchange.

"What we call 'the community' is a much bigger place than it used to be. It used to be within our city limits. Now it's like Iowa's part of us, and we're a part of South Dakota. Some industries have always had that and thought that way, railroads, obviously. They understand that kind of network, but a lot of our communities think of themselves as where they are. If it's not happening here, it's not happening. And we don't really think of the larger community that we're in," said Wortham. "With wind energy, we're definitely part of a Great Plains wide thing and a global thing, as well. These large (wind energy) companies, some are headquartered in the United States, and some are headquartered in Germany or Spain. People move back and forth, whether it's our high school and college students getting internships or just having a better outlook, so they want to go to Spain or go to Germany, or our workers who are commissioning projects in some other country, because the best workers in wind energy are here. They're the most experienced and knowledgeable, so they're the ones who are going to service projects in other countries, too." Since the transmission lines won't be up and running for several years, communities in Texas' wind corridor have plenty of time to consider and plan for dipping their toes into this industry.

"Every community and county has to look at wind energy from a different perspective, from the perspective of their area," said Allred. "The county can't acquire land without participation of private landowners to lease land and get involved. You need to take the pulse of your community and see if they want to get involved."

Scam

although she added that others often don't come forward after losing money to such a scam.

"Any time you (buy a car online), you're taking a chance," McCullar said. "If someone's giving you a sob story like that, you have to be careful. I've had some people approach me about it, but for every one that does, there's always more that don't say anything, so I just want to let people know, be careful. Don't ever just send money to someone you don't know."

Texarkanas fight over sewer

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) - The two separate governments responsible for Texarkana are squabbling over who will lead the upgrade of a shared wastewater treatment plant.

Officials in Texarkana, Ark., say they're ready to move forward with the South Regional plant project. But the Texarkana Gazette reports the Texas side as the "local lead agency" on contracts.

Harold Boldt, the Arkansas-side city manager, says that condition is a deal-breaker. Steve Mayo, the Texas-side mayor, says there are "no conspiracies involved" and that the lead agency language is just a formality. But Boldt warns that the language could stop the entire project.

Bill King, director of Texarkana Water Utilities, says the dispute over "phraseology" is moot. Both cities have been fighting about water issues in a federal lawsuit.

Austin to set up crime cameras

AUSTIN (AP) - Police plan to install 17 crime cameras on Austin's East Sixth Street in time for the city's Halloween celebration, which brings thousands of people downtown.

Cmdr. Chris McIlvain, who supervises downtown patrol officers, told the Austin American-Statesman the cameras are a "force multiplier" for police. Officials said officers will be deployed to the scene when a crime is observed.

The 17 cameras are to be installed between Congress Avenue and Interstate 35 by Friday. After Halloween, 12 more cameras will go up in the area.

Some have expressed concern that the cameras will only move crime to other parts of the city and won't help officers get to scenes faster. But Police Chief Art Acevedo said they are valuable.

Baptists to meet in Amarillo

AMARILLO (AP) - Texas Baptists are converging on Amarillo for a three-day annual conference where discussions will include approving a budget that would reduce funding for Baylor University.

The conference of the Baptist General Convention of Texas begins Monday at the Amarillo Civic Center.

The Amarillo Globe-News reports that the convention plans to vote on a 2012 budget that would reduce funding of Baylor from about $2.8 million to $1.9 million.

The convention will also elect a new president. The Rev. Jerry Carlisle, pastor of First Baptist Church in Plano, has been nominated for president. The Rev. Jeff Johnson of First Baptist in Decatur is nominated as first vice president and the Rev. Byron Stevenson, pastor of the Fort Bend Church in Sugar Land, has been nominated for second vice president.

Mountain Jesus may be evicted

HELENA, Mont. (AP) - A statue of Jesus on U.S. Forest Service land in the mountains over a Montana ski resort could be evicted amid an argument over the separation of church and state.

The Forest Service gave supporters a small victory by withdrawing its initial decision to boot the Jesus statue from its perch above Whitefish. But the agency warns that court decisions are stacked against allowing a religious icon on federal land as it reconsiders the matter.

The statue has long been a curiosity to skiers, and supporters tout its significance to the area since its placement in the 1950s.

The Freedom From Religion Foundation argues the icon cannot be on public land and is pushing the Forest Service to stand by its decision to remove it by next year.

Paul: Phase out students loans

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican presidential contender Ron Paul said Sunday he wants to end federal student loans, calling it a failed program that has put students $1 trillion in debt when there are no jobs and when the quality of education has deteriorated.

Paul unveiled a plan last week to cut $1 trillion from the federal budget that would eliminate five Cabinet departments, including education. He's also wants young workers to be able to opt out of Social Security.

The student loan program is not part of those cuts, but Paul said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that he'd kill the loan program eventually if he were president. That could put him at odds with some of his young followers, many of whom are college students.

More dust storms expected as drought lingers

BETSY BLANEY
Associated Press

LUBBOCK (AP) - The towering wall of billowing red dust roaring across the blue West Texas sky took Monroe Debusk back more than eight decades to the Dust Bowl years when he was growing up on his family's cotton farm.

The 90-year-old farmer looked out his window Monday and saw the sky darken as a rare 1.5-mile-tall, 250-mile-long dust cloud stretched across the rain-starved land and blotted out the sun.

"I didn't do anything - just thought back to the way it used to be," Debusk said, recalling the massive dust storms that overwhelmed the region in the 1930s. "That's the way they were."

Meteorologists say people living on Texas' parched plains could see more dust storms as a record drought tightens its grip across the Southwest. At least six sandstorms hit Phoenix this summer, with the most powerful striking on July 5 and measuring a mile high. But experts say another Dust Bowl is unlikely thanks to modern irrigation and farming techniques aimed at holding soil in place.

Dust storms form when wind whips up loose soil. They aren't unusual in West Texas, although the size and speed of Monday's cloud was rare. Typically, the wall of dirt climbs to only about 1,000 feet in that area, not the 8,000 feet seen with the latest storm, experts said.

The wind picked up with a drop in pressure along the edge of a fast-moving cold front, a pattern that typically happens in the fall and winter, meteorologists said. When the cloud hit Lubbock, winds speeds reached 74 mph in some places and visibility was far less than a quarter of a mile.

The wind knocked down tree limbs, which fell on utility lines, knocking out power in parts of the city of about 210,000 people. Dust lingered in the air afterward, filling people's ears and nostrils and leaving grit in their teeth. A layer of dirt covered the pavement, cars and anything else left outside.

"The thing that is scary is this exact type of dust storm is the same type of dust storm from during the 30s," said Tom Gill, a geology professor at the University of Texas-El Paso who has studied dust storms for years.

Burle Pettit, 77, the former editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, said the storm was the worst he'd seen since moving to the city in 1960. He didn't realize the storm was coming and was driving to pick up dinner for himself and his wife when it hit. The dust was so thick he missed the turn for the restaurant "because I couldn't see the stupid building."

"I wasn't scared" while driving, he said. "I was concerned that some idiot would come flying from behind me because you could not see."

Once he arrived, walking the 10 feet from his car to the entrance was another ordeal. He still couldn't see anything, and dirt filled his eyes, nose and mouth.

In hindsight, "a wise person would have turned around but I was hungry," Pettit said, summing up the trip.

Gill believes dust storms could become more common as Texas' drought continues. The state just finished its driest 12 months ever and was blistered by triple-digit heat until early September. This year is on track to be the driest in Texas history, with the average rainfall in the first nine months about 25 percent less than in the same period in 1956, the previous driest year, when 11.23 inches fell.

Lubbock has had just 3.16 inches of rain since Jan. 1.

"If the drought continues, and if we have powerful cold fronts barreling down the South Plains, I see no reason it couldn't happen again," Gill said.

But experts believe an extended period of massive dust storms like those seen in the 1930s remains unlikely. A drought in the 1950s didn't result in any large dust storms, likely because of advances in agriculture and conservation, they said.

Farmers in eight Great Plains states now irrigate their land with water from the underground Ogallala Aquifer, so even with little rain, the soil has some moisture. Texas farmers also "sandfight" in an effort to keep soil from taking flight. A fine layer of silt forms on top of the ground as it dries out after a heavy rain. To keep it in place, farmers poke small holes in the dirt, creating small mounds, almost like ant hills, that create resistance as wind moves across the surface.

"That's really all you can do to it because any time you touch it you're breaking up the existing clod (of dirt)," said Kelly Attebury, a soil scientist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service. Loose dirt is more likely to be lifted and carried by the wind.

But two other farming techniques that help limit dust storms aren't much of an option this year. Typically, farmers leave plants in fields after the harvest to help hold the soil in place. They also plant other crops, called cover crops, after the harvest to give the soil something to hang onto in late fall and winter. This year, there are few plants to leave in fields after farmers abandoned to the drought the cotton that's one of the region's major crops. And, there's been no rain to grow cover crops.

Shawn Wade, a spokesman for a group of cotton producers in the region, said the lack of ground cover could have contributed to Monday's storm.

"Certainly, it had some impact on the end result," he said.

There's also concern that other advances since the Dust Bowl could be in jeopardy. Water in the Ogallala Aquifer has been diminishing for years, causing worry in Kansas, Nebraska and other states that rely on it. And, funding for the federal Conservation Reserve Program, which pays farmers to keep land at high risk of erosion out of production, is in jeopardy as Congress looks to cut costs.

Still, Wade said he doesn't expect big cuts to the conservation reserve program.

"The program has proven to be very successful in reducing soil erosion throughout the High Plains of Texas and the Great Plains," he said, "and this week's happening shows how important these types of programs are when conditions such as the current drought set in."

Today in History

Today is Monday, Oct. 24, the 297th day of 2011. There are 68 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 24, 1861, the first transcontinental telegraph message was sent by Chief Justice Stephen J. Field of California from San Francisco to President Abraham Lincoln in Washington, D.C., over a line built by the Western Union Telegraph Co. (In his message, Field expressed hope that the telegraph would be "the means of strengthening the attachment which binds both the East and the West to the Union.")

On this date:

In 1537, Jane Seymour, the third wife of England's King Henry VIII, died 12 days after giving birth to Prince Edward, later King Edward VI.

In 1648, the Peace of Westphalia ended the Thirty Years War and effectively destroyed the Holy Roman Empire.

In 1901, widow Anna Edson Taylor became the first person to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel.

In 1931, the George Washington Bridge, connecting New York and New Jersey, was officially dedicated (it opened to traffic the next day).

In 1940, the 40-hour work week went into effect under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.

In 1945, the United Nations officially came into existence as its charter took effect.

In 1949, construction began on U.N. headquarters in New York.

In 1952, Republican presidential candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower declared in Detroit, "I shall go to Korea" as he promised to end the conflict. (He made the visit over a month later.)

In 1987, 30 years after it was expelled, the Teamsters union was welcomed back into the AFL-CIO. (However, the Teamsters disaffiliated themselves from the AFL-CIO in 2005.)

In 1991, "Star Trek" creator Gene Roddenberry died in Santa Monica, Calif., at age 70.

Ten years ago: The House narrowly passed a $100 billion economic stimulus package.

Five years ago: American officials unveiled a timeline for Iraq's Shiite-led government to take specific steps to calm Baghdad and said more U.S. troops might be needed to quell the bloodshed. The

One year ago: Following the latest release of secret U.S. military documents by WikiLeaks, British Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg told BBC television that allegations of prisoner abuse and civilian killings in Iraq were extremely serious and needed to be investigated. Playwright Joseph Stein, who wrote the book for the classic Broadway musical "Fiddler on the Roof," died in New York at age 98.

Today's Birthdays: Football Hall-of-Famer Y.A. Tittle is 85. Rock musician Bill Wyman is 75. Actor F. Murray Abraham is 72. Movie director-screenwriter David S. Ward is 66. Actor Kevin Kline is 64. Former NAACP President Kweisi Mfume is 63. Country musician Billy Thomas (Terry McBride and the Ride) is 58. Actor Doug Davidson is 57. Actor B.D. Wong is 51. ## Proposition 2 vital for area water planning

It is hard to remember which came first—the wildfires or the drought. Both, coupled with the intense summer heat, have made these past months unbearable for Texans in many parts of the state.

Texas is experiencing one of the most severe droughts on record. The eleven months from October 2010 through August 2011 marked the driest in Texas for that same timeframe since 1895, leaving many families and farmers suffering from this critical water shortage.

The Texas Water Development Board (Board) estimates that the drought could cost Texas businesses and employees upwards of $12 billion, annually, in lost income. Enter Proposition 2.

Proposition 2 is a proposed constitutional amendment that will allow the Board to issue additional general obligation bonds in an amount not to exceed $6 billion at any time.

Proceeds from these bonds will be used in a revolving loan program that political subdivisions - such as cities, counties, districts, river authorities, and nonprofit water supply corporations - can apply for and access to fund water and wastewater infrastructure in their communities.

By using a lower bonding rate, this financing option through the state is sometimes the only way water infrastructure projects are possible.

There is a history of voters approving constitutional amendments that give the Board this authority.

In 1957, Texans authorized the Board to issue up to $4.23 billion in bonds for financing water-related projects. It is estimated that the Board's existing bond authority will be exhausted before 2013, when the Legislature meets again.

Without additional bonding authority and the passage of Proposition 2, the Board will not be able to assist communities with funds to provide for the water needs of the state.

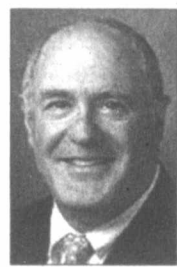

Simply put, without Proposition 2, the Board will be out of money to loan. And without rain, ensuring a sound infrastructure may be the only way to have access to water in dire times.

Will Proposition 2 cost taxpayers money? No.

Proposition 2 is self-supporting, meaning the repayment will not come from state general revenue.

Entities that choose to use this funding to address their water needs will repay the principal and interest on the loans. It is those principal and interest payments that will be used to repay the bonds.

While I understand the concern that the Board will be authorized to issue debt that has not been specifically approved by the taxpayers, the ever-green nature of these bonds is vital to the continuation of long-term funding for water infrastructure.

The fact of the matter is, if cities do not have the option to apply for monies from the Board, communities throughout the state will be forced to raise money on their own to support these essential water projects.

Ultimately, these monies will provide the funding necessary to support the infrastructure and components of the State Water Plan.

The State Water Plan, which is updated every five years by the Board using a 50-year planning horizon, represents a true bottom-up approach necessary for water planning.

Regional water plans developed by local entities are used to form the larger, statewide document. This plan prioritizes projects for water funding throughout the state, and funds to realize those projects are supported by the Board through these loans.

With meteorologists telling us that the current drought is going to get worse before it gets better, the decisions that we make regarding future water supply and infrastructure are more important than ever before.

It is important that we all make our voices heard at the ballot box, and I encourage everyone to get out and vote.

Seliger represents District 31 in the Texas Senate, spanning 26 counties from the Panhandle to the Permian Basin. Seliger currently serves as Chair of the Senate Select Committee on Redistricting, as well as actively serving on the Education, Finance, International Relations and Trade, and Natural Resources Committees.

At ease, Perry hunts pheasants in Iowa

AKRON, Iowa (AP) - Meet Rick Perry, lifelong hunter. He's floundered on the debate stage. He's stumbled on immigration. But the Perry who showed up for a pheasant hunt on a chilly Iowa Saturday was perfectly, naturally at ease - and not afraid to talk about it.

"As long as I've got memory I've had something to go hunting with," Perry said, "so it was a long love affair with a boy and his gun that turned into a man and his gun and then it turned into a man and his son and his daughter and their guns."

Perry has been a hunter for decades. He hunted with his family, sometimes at a rented ranch with a racially problematic name. And when he was a Texas state legislator, he and a group of the freshman members he served with would fly in Perry's plane to hunting camps in different parts of Texas.

"Perry had an old junky airplane we flew everywhere; he had an old snub-nosed 310," said Cliff Johnson, a former state legislator who still hunts with Perry, referring to a small Cessna 310 airplane. "Hell, every time third time we flew we'd have an onboard fire. They were put together with John Deere parts, let's just put it that way."

Contrast that with his rival, Mitt Romney, who struggled mightily to explain his own limited personal background with hunting and firearms. In 2008, Romney said he'd been "a hunter pretty much all my life" when he'd actually only been out a handful of times. He backed the 1994 Brady gun control bill, and as governor of Massachusetts, he supported the state's strict gun control laws and signed one of the nation's tougher assault weapons laws.

Perry's love affair, on the other hand, has manifested itself as a record of easing restrictions on carrying guns in Texas.

"Gov. Perry believes that all law-abiding, licensed gun owners should be able to carry their firearm anywhere they please," Perry's campaign said in a statement outlining his positions on gun control.

As governor, Perry supported legislation that made it easier for Texans to pay for a concealed handgun license, and a bill to let them keep their concealed handgun licenses for five years instead of four. He helped cut agreements with other states to let Texans carry their concealed handguns outside the state.

Perry has his own concealed handgun license - and regularly carries one, once famously shooting a coyote that was threatening his daughter's Labrador retriever while out on a jog. The gun company, Ruger, has a special version of its .380 in Perry's honor: the True Texan Coyote Special.

And where it comes to guns, Perry has plenty of the same aggressive bravado he's displayed on the debate stage. He sent a video introduction to the National Rifle Association Convention that featured him shooting a rifle and calling himself "a believer in the notion that gun control is hitting what you're aiming at." (He's also said it's "use both hands.")

He's not afraid to make it a point of aggressive contrast with Romney.

"I would no more consider living in Massachusetts than I suspect a great number of folks from Massachusetts would like to live in Texas," he wrote in his book, "Fed Up!," while naming Ted Kennedy and John Kerry as popular figures in that state. "Texans, on the other hand, elect folks like me. You know the type, the kind of guy who goes jogging in the morning, packing a Ruger .380 with laser sights and loaded with hollow-point bullets and shoots a coyote that is threatening his daughter's dog."

Perry is also quietly, obviously comfortable with a rural hunting culture that's common to many Republican primary voters - but that's alien to many of his rivals.

Ahead of Saturday's hunt, Perry and a handful of his staffers stayed at the 14-room Hole in the Wall Lodge outside of tiny Akron, in western Iowa, reachable only after a drive down a dirt country road. He appeared in the main lodge shortly after dawn, clad in hunting camouflaged rain boots and a tan button-down shirt.

"I feel great," a relaxed Perry, leaning his head back against a wood and stone pillar, told the pair of reporters who had appeared in the half-darkened lodge for a 6:30 a.m. breakfast prepared by the innkeepers. Perry said he wasn't worried about his back bothering him during the hunt. He had surgery to fuse two of the vertebrae in his spine earlier this year, and said he had been stretching and swimming until he could start running again.

He spent at least a half an hour over breakfast with Iowa Rep. Steve King, leaning on his elbow as King explained the background of the yearly hunt. It's named for Col. Bud Day, a decorated Air Force veteran who was a prisoner of war in Vietnam with Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz. He mixed easily with King's family, including two sons and two grandchildren.

And when King and his family clambered into waiting cars to drive the dozen or so miles to the Loess Hills Hunting Preserve, Perry carried his own shotgun to his waiting SUV.

Tips on filing for Social Security disability

TOM MARGENAU
Creator's Syndicate

About a month ago, I answered some questions from people who were wondering if I thought they might be eligible for Social Security disability benefits. I essentially told them that the only way they would know for sure is to actually apply for such benefits.

I took flack from some readers who thought my answer encouraged an "entitlement society" where everybody is trying to mooch some kind of financial windfall off the government. I answered those charges in a previous column.

But I got many more comments and questions from readers asking for my help in applying for Social Security disability. In a moment, I'll offer some tips for people who plan to sign up for benefits. But first, I need to provide some general information about the disability program.

Disability benefits were added to the Social Security program in 1956. A separate funding structure was established to pay for the program. A small percentage of the Social Security payroll tax (currently 0.9 percent) is earmarked to fund the disability program. Those monies are collected and disbursed from a trust fund (the Disability Insurance Trust Fund) that is managed separately from the retirement fund (formally known as the Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund).

Many people mistakenly confuse Social Security disability with the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) disability program. They are totally different government programs. SSI is welfare benefit payable to people with low income and assets. It's funded by general income tax revenues, not Social Security taxes. Both programs just happen to be run by the same agency: the Social Security Administration. It doesn't help that SSA refers to one as SSDI (Social Security disability insurance) and to the other as SSID (Supplemental Security Income disability).

Social Security and you

option of filing your claim over the phone.

Tip 2: One of the first questions on the disability application form essentially asks this: "What is wrong with you, and how does this impairment prevent you from working?" Answer this question as thoroughly as possible. The inability to work (not just the impairment itself) is the key to qualifying for benefits. You should describe in as much detail as possible how your impairment (or impairments — see Tip 3) impact your ability to do your job.

Tip 3: List all physical and mental problems you have, no matter how insignificant they seem. Don't simply write down the condition that you consider your primary disability. It's frequently a combination of disabilities that qualifies someone for benefits.

Tip 4: A big section of the disability questionnaire seeks information about your medical sources. Thoroughly list the names, addresses and phone numbers of all of the hospitals, clinics, doctors and other professionals who have treated you. The government needs medical records to determine whether your condition is severe enough to qualify you for benefits. And, of course, those records will come from the people you list on the application form. I can tell you from experience that nothing slows up a disability claim more than the inability to get records from medical sources.

Tip 5: The Social Security Administration actually contracts with a state agency — known as Disability Determination Services in most states — to make disability decisions. Shortly after you file, your claim will be sent to your state DDS. Call SSA and get the DDS phone number. Then, call DDS to find out the name of the analyst who has been assigned to your case. Make that person your new best friend!

If you have a Social Security question, Tom Margenau has the answer. Contact him at thomas.margenau@comcast.net.

No. 13 Lady Harvesters hold off fired up Rangerettes

ANDREW GLOVER
aglover@thepampanews.com

Saturday was senior day in Perryton, and most of the time seniors usually raise their level of play to make their last home game memorable.

Facing the No. 13 Pampa Lady Harvesters, the Rangerettes, led by their six seniors, held their own, but Pampa still emerged victorious in a three-game sweep (25-12, 25-16 and 25-17).

"That's the best I've seen Perryton play against us," head coach Libby Garza said. "I thought they were playing great. For them raising their level of play, I was very proud of the way we played today."

Junior Maddie Fatheree said the Rangerettes gave them a challenge.

"They played good today and we just had to fight harder," Fatheree said.

Senior Ramie Hutto said the Lady Harvesters rose their level of play.

"We had some ruts but we definitely pulled through," Hutto said.

Pampa (28-8, 8-0) pulled away early in the first game taking an 11-4 lead. Good passing by senior Kirsten Kuhn to Fatheree made it easy for the outside hitters to land kills. Senior Caitlin Sieck scored three and seniors Kailyn Troxell, Alanna Stephens and junior Calli Brewer each contributed one. Perryton didn't get closer than five as Pampa coasted to a 13-point victory.

The second game started close, but the Lady Harvesters pulled away with the score tied at 11. Troxell scored three of the next six kills to put Pampa up 17-14. From there, the Lady Harvesters outscored the Rangerettes 8-2. Stephens scored the final kill to put Pampa a game from clinching the match.

In the third game, the Lady Harvesters jumped out to a four-point lead and maintained it throughout the match. Troxell and Stephens helped Pampa gain a 5-1 lead. Hutto, Brewer and Sieck also scored kills during the match. Garza said her team's strong play helped give some starters a rest.

"I was able to keep Stephanie (Allen) out," Garza said. "That's good because we will need her every game when we start playoffs."

Allen has been fighting a knee injury since the middle of district and has had limited action the last few games. Brewer has been starting in her spot.

Pampa hosts Dalhart for senior night 6 p.m. Tuesday. Dalhart (11-22, 6-2) beat Borger (19-19, 1-7) Saturday and have clinched the second seed in the district. Borger and Perryton (10-22, 1-7) will play for the final playoff spot in Borger 6 p.m. Tuesday.

No. 6 Warriors outduel No. 8 Pirates in district opener

aglover@thepampanews.com

Lefors head coach Joey Czubinski said he was hoping for a physical game against its district rival Miami. Friday night in Miami, that's what he got, but still the No. 8 Pirates came up short in a 44-33 loss to the No. 6 Warriors.

"We had a great game," Czubinski said. "We showed up and hit hard. It was a good six-man game. They just made a few more plays than we did."

This was the second consecutive season that Miami emerged victorious. Last year, the Warriors won 58-7. Czubinski said his team left with a different feeling than last year.

"At the end of the night, we were proud of what we did," Czubinski said. "The community was proud of how we played. Last year we were 4-4 and reeling. This year is a different team and we will be fine."

Czubinski said the key point of the game happened at the beginning of the third quarter.

"We had the ball in the red zone and couldn't punch it in," Czubinski said. "I think that made the difference in the game. We lost by 11 and they made a couple of stops."

The Pirates (6-2, 0-1) struck first when junior Aaron DeLeon caught a 31-yard pass from senior Seth Scully. The Warriors responded, thanks to two touchdown runs by senior Jared Roberts. Roberts scored from 13 and 23 yards to give Miami a 16-6 lead after one.

Scully cut the deficit with a 47-yard fumble recovery return for a touchdown but Roberts added two more touchdowns from one and 28 yards. Junior Gaitlin Reagan caught a 20-yard pass from Scully to cut the lead to 10. Roberts scored his fourth touchdown sending the Warriors to the locker room with a 36-20 lead.

Juniors Tjaden Swires and Colten Helfer added touchdowns in the second half to round out Lefors' scoring.

The Warriors (7-2, 1-0) host the Darrouzett Longhorns (3-3) 7:30 p.m. Friday. If Miami wins it will clinch its second straight district title.

The Pirates must win against Darrouzett on November 4 in Darrouzett. Next week Lefors rematches with Higgins in Higgins. The Pirates won 62-6 in Lefors on September 16. Czubinski said his team just has to take one game at a time.

"We are going back to work on Monday, practice hard and get ready for the next game," Czubinski said.

Senior Ramie Hutto said the Lady Harvesters rose their level of play.

"We had some ruts but we definitely pulled through," Hutto said.

Pampa (28-8, 8-0) pulled away early in the first game taking an 11-4 lead. Good passing by senior Kirsten Kuhn to Fatheree made it easy for the outside hitters to land kills. Senior Caitlin Sieck scored three and seniors Kailyn Troxell, Alanna Stephens and junior Calli Brewer each contributed one. Perryton didn't get closer than five as Pampa coasted to a 13-point victory.

The second game started close, but the Lady Harvesters pulled away with the score tied at 11. Troxell scored three of the next six kills to put Pampa up 17-14. From there, the Lady Harvesters outscored the Rangerettes 8-2. Stephens scored the final kill to put Pampa a game from clinching the match.

In the third game, the Lady Harvesters jumped out to a four-point lead and maintained it throughout the match. Troxell and Stephens helped Pampa gain a 5-1 lead. Hutto, Brewer and Sieck also scored kills during the match. Garza said her team's strong play helped give some starters a rest.

"I was able to keep Stephanie (Allen) out," Garza said. "That's good because we will need her every game when we start playoffs."

Allen has been fighting a knee injury since the middle of district and has had limited action the last few games. Brewer has been starting in her spot.

Pampa hosts Dalhart for senior night 6 p.m. Tuesday. Dalhart (11-22, 6-2) beat Borger (19-19, 1-7) Saturday and have clinched the second seed in the district. Borger and Perryton (10-22, 1-7) will play for the final playoff spot in Borger 6 p.m. Tuesday.

No. 6 Warriors outduel No. 8 Pirates in district opener

aglover@thepampanews.com

Lefors head coach Joey Czubinski said he was hoping for a physical game against its district rival Miami. Friday night in Miami, that's what he got, but still the No. 8 Pirates came up short in a 44-33 loss to the No. 6 Warriors.

"We had a great game," Czubinski said. "We showed up and hit hard. It was a good six-man game. They just made a few more plays than we did."

This was the second consecutive season that Miami emerged victorious. Last year, the Warriors won 58-7. Czubinski said his team left with a different feeling than last year.

"At the end of the night, we were proud of what we did," Czubinski said. "The community was proud of how we played. Last year we were 4-4 and reeling. This year is a different team and we will be fine."

Czubinski said the key point of the game happened at the beginning of the third quarter.

"We had the ball in the red zone and couldn't punch it in," Czubinski said. "I think that made the difference in the game. We lost by 11 and they made a couple of stops."

The Pirates (6-2, 0-1) struck first when junior Aaron DeLeon caught a 31-yard pass from senior Seth Scully. The Warriors responded, thanks to two touchdown runs by senior Jared Roberts. Roberts scored from 13 and 23 yards to give Miami a 16-6 lead after one.

Scully cut the deficit with a 47-yard fumble recovery return for a touchdown but Roberts added two more touchdowns from one and 28 yards. Junior Gaitlin Reagan caught a 20-yard pass from Scully to cut the lead to 10. Roberts scored his fourth touchdown sending the Warriors to the locker room with a 36-20 lead.

Juniors Tjaden Swires and Colten Helfer added touchdowns in the second half to round out Lefors' scoring.

The Warriors (7-2, 1-0) host the Darrouzett Longhorns (3-3) 7:30 p.m. Friday. If Miami wins it will clinch its second straight district title.

The Pirates must win against Darrouzett on November 4 in Darrouzett. Next week Lefors rematches with Higgins in Higgins. The Pirates won 62-6 in Lefors on September 16. Czubinski said his team just has to take one game at a time.

"We are going back to work on Monday, practice hard and get ready for the next game," Czubinski said.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Oct. 24, 2011:

This year you might want to steer a steady ship, but the surprises keep coming. You will process your feelings and learn to move through your moods. It is from this constant flow that you will find stability. Communication sometimes is stilted, and you will learn to become more effective. If you are single, you might be attracted to someone who is emotionally unavailable. Use care before getting involved. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from plenty of downtime together to nourish the bond. LIBRA reads you cold.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Defer to others, knowing full well that if there is a problem, you would prefer it be someone else's. Remain sensitive to a boss or someone you look up to. Unpredictability and another person's power play could cause you to feel off balance. Go with a suggestion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Your nerves could be fried due to many unexpected events. You wonder what the best thing to do is under the circumstances. You might want to analyze what is happening. Resist a knee-jerk reaction. Tonight: Finish up a project.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Allow more playfulness. You might wonder when enough is enough. Pressure builds around your work or a routine. Clearly, you might need to reorganize your plans. Unexpected developments could make a meeting quite different and exciting. Tonight: Time for fun.

CANCER (June 21-July 23)
★★★★ Someone you look up to could be tossing havoc into your path. Try to steer clear. It appears as though everyone wants a situation to tumble his or her way. You could witness a boss not controlling people trying to control each other. Back away with grace. Tonight: Close to home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Keep conversations moving. Explore why a situation might not be working like you would like it to. This situation could provide your imagination, encouraging solutions. Perhaps you are a very demanding associate. Tonight: Catch upon a friend's weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Rethink a personal matter. Your ability to think through another person's problem is great for him or her, but can you do the same for yourself? Don't take a child's or new friend's actions personally. Tonight: Treat yourself well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your spirit is hard to beat. You seem to be able to deal with nearly anyone at any time. Right now, that skill is good news, because you might need it when dealing with a partner or loved one. Know that no one can control you unless you want them to! Think positive. Tonight: All smiles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Take your time; take a deep breath and think through a problem. You have a unique ability to understand many dimensions. You also might not want to enlighten others just yet as to what you are perceiving. Tonight: Take some much-needed personal time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Allow more give-and-take between you and another person. You have similar goals but very different approaches. Understand what is going on with a loved one or a friendship. Be careful with your finances, especially if someone has an agenda. Tonight: With friends.

★★★★ Instead of pushing a topic, wait on being a good receiver. An investment with real estate might be a problem. Try to understand if you made a bad judgment call. Don't push too hard. The unexpected occurs when you least expect it. Tonight: Bumping the midnight oil.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Much could be going on that is uncomfortable and encourages you to detach. You know better than anyone that you don't need to be in the middle of everything. You might want to rethink a situation that always seems to be unstable. Tonight: Put on a great piece of music.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Someone comes forward and shares a lot more of him- or herself. You want to flow with this person, but you still might not be sure. You might start veering away. Perhaps you are a very demanding associate. Tonight: Talk over dinner.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, my friend of more than 30 years was being married for the first time. Three days before the ceremony, "Caryn's" wedding planner emailed all the guests, saying the wedding was canceled. No explanation was given, and we were asked to "respect the bride's privacy" and refrain from contacting her.

I waited a week, then sent Caryn a note saying I was thinking about her. I had given her two shower gifts and a wedding present a month in advance.

Caryn has not returned the gifts. I didn't expect to get the lingerie back, but I did expect that the expensive tableware would be returned to me. In subsequent phone conversations — and emails and texts — she has never mentioned the gifts. Should I tell her I'd like my gift back or let it drop? Obviously, it's bothering me, but if you tell me I should forget about it, I will. — DISGRUNTLED FRIEND IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR FRIEND: Either Caryn doesn't have a clue about proper wedding etiquette — that if a wedding is canceled, all unused gifts should be returned — or her fiancé skipped out and took the gifts with him. I see no reason why, after all this time, you shouldn't ask your friend if she's planning on returning the gifts. Then you'll have your answer.

DEAR ABBY: With Halloween fast approaching, my husband and I are again trying to figure out how to deal with a sticky situation. A few years ago, we took in the granddaughter of a dear friend who passed away. "Teresa" is mentally challenged and childlike at age 35.

She gets excited on holidays just like a youngster does. We usually stay home and observe the holidays without incident, but Halloween is different, because Teresa wants to go trick-or-treating and expects candy from people who may not understand.

We've tried in the past to suggest a party at church, but Teresa expects to collect goodies throughout the entire neighborhood, where we don't know everyone. People can be cruel and have made rude comments about Teresa's age and size. (She weighs 300 pounds.)

Is there anything we can do to help strangers understand? Can you think of something else exciting we can do that might interest Teresa and lessen her desire to go trick-

or-treating? — SPOOKED FOR HALLOWEEN

DEAR SPOOKED: Teresa should not go trick-or-treating unescorted, and then, only to households where the residents know her or have been alerted to her condition, which should eliminate insensitive comments. If that doesn't work, then perhaps Teresa might enjoy handing out candy to trick-or-treaters who come to your door and celebrating the holiday that way.

DEAR ABBY: I loaned a friend a significant amount of money, with the understanding that he would pay me a small amount every week for a year until it was repaid. For the most part he has been making the payments, but he has missed a few.

In the past, I have always given him a gift of $50 for his birthday and on Christmas. Would it be cheesy on my part to deduct the amount from what he owes me rather than give him cash on these occasions? — DOIN' THE MATH IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR DOIN': While I see your point, you're mixing apples and oranges. A loan is a loan, and a gift is a gift. Your chances of being repaid will be better if you don't mix the two.
