When it comes to showing support in the fight against cancer, Pampa's clearly on the pink team.

Hundreds of people packed McNeely Fieldhouse to recognize those who have fought cancer and their families at the Pink Out pep rally on Thursday evening.

Pampa High School senior Ashtin Sackett was honored throughout the pep rally. Sackett is fighting Stage Three osteosarcoma, a form of bone cancer. At the beginning of the of the pep rally she received a gift basket from the student council and $1,100 in donations, $750 of which came from the money raised at the Pink Out hamburger cookout before the pep rally.

Student council sponsor Lori Valentine said she thought the pep rally turned out great.

Lawyers for Skinner file stay motion

MOLLIE BRYANT
mbryant@thepampanews.com

Hank Skinner's attorneys filed a Motion for a Stay of Execution on Friday with the Court of Criminal Appeals, two days after Judge Steven Emmert of the 31st District Court in Gray County denied Skinner access to DNA evidence for testing.

Skinner was convicted of the 1993 murders of his girlfriend, Twila Busby, and her two sons, Elwin Caler and Randy Busby. He received the death sentence for the crimes, with his execution date set for next Wednesday.

"We are asking the Court of Criminal Appeals to ensure that Mr. Skinner is not put to death without a careful evaluation by that court of the trial court's unexplained refusal to grant the DNA testing Mr. Skinner has sought for so long," said Robert Owen, co-lead attorney of Skinner's defense team.

"The accurate resolution of cases involving the ultimate punishment is of paramount importance to the criminal justice system. No such decision is possible until the Court of Criminal Appeals knows why the trial court rejected Mr. Skinner's request for scientific testing, so that it can assess whether that decision correctly applied Texas law.

"The Court of Criminal Appeals should stop the rush to execution so that it can give Mr. Skinner's appeal the close attention it deserves," Owen said.

Daylight Saving Time ends Sunday morning

ARNIE AURELLANO
editor@thepampanews.com

Pampans should remember to set their clocks back before going to bed on Saturday night, or they might find themselves leaving home an hour early for church the next morning.

Daylight Saving Time (that's right, it's "saving," not "savings" — the extra "s" is purely colloquial) ends at 2 a.m. on Sunday, bringing Gray County and the rest of Texas back into Central Standard Time.

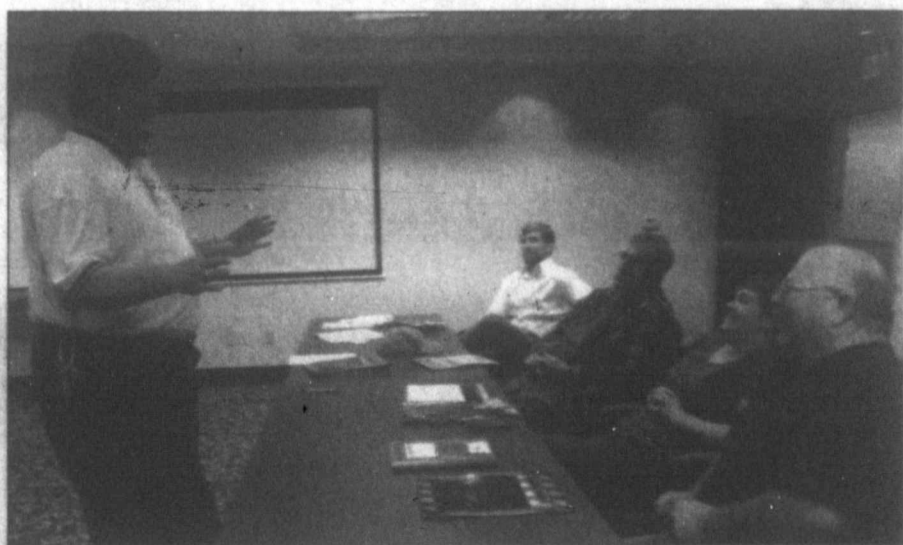

The first Sunday of November has signaled the end of DST in the United States since 2007. That's a month later than the previous end date; from 1987 to 2006, DST ended on the last Sunday of October.

During the same timespan, DST was also observed for a shorter period. Daylight saving kicks in now on the second Sunday of March. That's almost a month earlier than its previous onset, which happened on the first Sunday of April.

But why have it in the first place? Many mistakenly

Automated calls assail Perry in Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney paid for automated telephone messages in Iowa accusing rival Rick Perry of contributing to illegal immigration.

It is the former Massachusetts governor's first attack message against Perry. And it's the clearest sign yet of Romney's hope of winning Iowa's lead-off caucuses.

The messages, which began late Thursday, also show that Romney sees the Texas governor as the more significant threat to his self-portrayal as the leading candidate on the economy, despite Herman Cain's lead in recent Iowa and national polls.

Despite the economy's dominance as a campaign priority, immigration remains a sticking point with GOP activists.

"Rick Perry is part of the illegal immigration problem," Sheriff Paul Babeu, from southwestern Arizona, says on the message.

"A lot of the candidates agree we need a border fence. And almost all of them agree in-state tuition for illegal immigrants is wrong," adds Babeu, a prominent national spokesman against illegal immigration who is weighing a campaign for Congress. "However, Rick Perry disagrees. Rick Perry not only opposes a border fence. But he signed the bill to make Texas the first state in the nation to grant in-state tuition discounts to illegal immigrants."

Romney has criticized Perry publicly for weeks on his immigration positions, especially his signing of the bill allowing in-state tuition benefits for illegal immigrants who came into the country as children and lived in Texas at least three years.

Perry's campaign said Friday the attacks raise questions about whether a bill Romney signed in Massachusetts allowed illegal immigrants access to health care benefits.

"The magnetic pull of his free health care for illegal immigrants made Massachusetts an attractive destination," Perry spokesman Ray Sullivan said.

Romney aides have said regulations put into effect after Romney left office in 2007 made it easier for illegal immigrants to receive care under a 2006 change.

The Romney calls in Iowa were aimed at assembling an audience for an evening telephone campaign event featuring Babeu and came as Perry was campaigning in the Des Moines area. Phone numbers where no one picked up the call received the minute-long message from Babeu.

The call also comes as Romney, who has kept a low profile in Iowa since his disappointing 2008 second-place finish in the state, is pivoting to focus more on the caucuses, now less than two months away.

Although Romney has only visited Iowa three times this year, he has added staff to his small core of paid advisers and is planning to add more.

And he plans to campaign Monday in eastern Iowa counties he carried four years ago, just 18 days after visiting western Iowa and declaring: "I will be here again and again. I'd love to win Iowa. Any of us would."

Romney has been the most durable Republican prospect in Iowa this year, at or near the top of polls of likely caucusgoers since entering the race in June, while other more conservative rivals have risen, including Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann and Cain, a businessman who narrowly tied Romney in a new national poll and led narrowly in a Des Moines Register poll published Sunday.

But Perry has begun advertising aggressively about Texas' robust job growth with two Iowa ads in the past 10 days, and had $15 million banked in October to keep up the pace.

Romney, emphasizing his decades in business more than he did four years ago, has not sought out evangelical conservatives in Iowa, many of whom are leery of his changed position on abortion rights and his Mormon faith. Romney has chosen instead to approach Iowa by reaching out to former supporters and pro-business conservatives and has rebuilt a good portion of his 2008 network.

Cops' Corner

The Pampa Police Department wants to caution you about ongoing scams here in Pampa. Criminals scam in anyway there is communication, such as phone, mail, e-mail, and, yes, texting. They claim to be with different legitimate companies to try to gain your trust. There are a few scams that the Police Department keeps seeing here in Pampa.

One of the main scams we keep seeing is the check cashing scheme, where a scammer will claim to be with a legitimate company and will send a check to you; unknown to the victim, the check or money order is fraudulent. The scammer will then ask the victim to cash the check and keep part of the money but send the rest through Western Union or MoneyGram to them. I want to STRONGLY discourage anyone sending money through Western Union or MoneyGram unless you know the person accepting the money personally.

We have also been getting calls of scammers calling and "phishing" for information. For example, the scammers will call and say they are with a well-known company or government agency such as Medicare. They will typically have your address, phone number and full name. They will then ask you to confirm your bank account number or social security number. Citizens have also said that when they have refused the caller the information they requested the scammer will get very agitated and threaten the citizens and in most cases the scammer would hang up on the citizen.

Again, I strongly encourage citizens not to give personal information over the phone. Thankfully the citizens we have spoken to have not fallen in the trap of these scammers. Remember, YOU are the number one person who can stop the criminals from scamming you!

If you have any questions on whether something is a scam, please contact the Pampa Police Department at 806-669-5700 ext. 259.

Thank you,

U.S. Attorney: No federal offense in beating

Woman faces life for trafficking

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Federal prosecutors say an 18-year-old woman faces life in prison after pleading guilty to taking two teenagers to Houston and forcing them to have sex for money.

Edward Stanton, the U.S. attorney for West Tennessee, said Friday that Kala Bray pleaded guilty to conspiracy to engage in child sex trafficking.

Bray and a male co-defendant recruited two Memphis-area teens and lured them to Houston with promises of a trip to a water park. The teens were given drugs including Oxycontin and Xanax and were made to engage in sex acts for money in Memphis and Houston.

Bray faces up to life in prison for the conspiracy charge at sentencing in February. Other charges related to the conspiracy were dismissed as part of the plea.

Texas waits on stem cell rules

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas state medical board is delaying until at least April a final vote on new stem cell therapy rules that could restrict or even block procedures like the one Gov. Rick Perry recently had on his aching back.

Its members voiced support for the changes Friday before voting to return next year to tweak the proposed regulations.

The proposed rules require an accredited body to review stem-cell procedures to ensure patient safety. Such therapies would also have to be done by physicians while adhering to Texas and federal laws. Procedures without the review would be prohibited.

The Republican presidential candidate had stem cells taken from his fat and then grown in a lab injected into his back and bloodstream during a July operation fusing part of his spine.

Body recovered from sewer-line

FAIRVIEW (AP) — Officials say they have found the body of a second worker who died after apparently being overcome by fumes while working in sewer line north of Dallas.

Fairview Police Chief Granver Tolliver says crews were recovering the body Friday from the water treatment system where the man went missing Thursday morning.

Emergency officials say the two men apparently were not wearing protective breathing equipment while working on the sewer line. A third worker called for help after one worker was apparently overcome by fumes and another went in to try to save him.

Baby taken from Occupy Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — State child welfare officials say have taken a 9-month-old boy from his homeless parents at an Occupy Dallas camp.

Child Protective Services spokeswoman Marissa Gonzales says the baby was taken into state custody Thursday and his parents, a homeless couple, were being interviewed. She declined to release more details until a judge signs off on the case.

Cordell Cameron, a spokesman for the protest group, says the homeless parents, who had joined demonstrators about a week ago, were "pretty devastated."

He said they were in the process of trying to obtain housing through a family program but feared they would no longer be eligible.

Cameron says the child was in a heated tent, "there was no abuse" but "obviously you can't keep a baby out in freezing weather."

Fisherman saved by stump

NOONDAY (AP) — A fishing boat accident in East Texas has left one man dead and another saved by looping his belt around a stump in the middle of the lake.

Officials say 61-year-old Mike Ammons of New London was in good condition Friday at a Tyler hospital.

Ammons and 64-year-old Tommy Cook of Overton went fishing early Wednesday at Lake Palestine (PAL-uhs-teen), about 100 miles southeast of Dallas. Relatives reported the pair missing Wednesday night.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Jean Dark says searchers in a DPS helicopter spotted Cook's body Thursday afternoon, then located Ammons about a quarter-mile away. Dark says Ammons looped his belt around a stump and partly pull himself from the water.

DPS says the boat sank during choppy, windy conditions and that both men wore life jackets.

Texas town brings back PD

ALTO (AP) — An East Texas town that laid off its five police officers in a budget crunch has reinstated the department.

A new budget year began Oct. 1 for Alto, a town of about 1,200 located 130 miles southeast of Dallas.

The Alto City Council on Oct. 27 voted to reinstate the police department and accept job applications, for three positions, through Nov. 14.

The council in mid-June abolished police pay and benefits for six months. The department's state accreditation expires Dec. 15.

The Cherokee County Sheriff's Office took over Alto's law enforcement duties.

The Tyler Morning Telegraph reported Friday that Alto, since late June, has had a bank robbery, plus more break-ins and burglaries.

Mayor Monty Collins says it was never the plan to go without a police force indefinitely.

Giffords back in Texas

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords has competed two weeks of intensive therapy sessions in North Carolina as she continues to recover from a gunshot wound to the head.

Giffords' office says she returned to Houston on Friday evening and will return to the intensive rehabilitation program at TIRR Memorial Hermann's outpatient facility.

Her staff says the trip to Asheville, N.C., was strictly rehabilitation-related and had been planned for several months. No other specifics on her therapy were given.

Staffers say Giffords arrived in North Carolina on Oct. 23 and began therapy sessions the following day.

Giffords is recovering from a brain injury she suffered Jan. 8 when a gunman opened fire outside a Tucson supermarket where she was meeting constituents.

McALLEN (AP) — Federal prosecutors said Friday they would not charge a Texas judge seen lashing his teenage daughter with a belt on a video posted online, closing the door on the possibility of criminal charges in the case.

Angela Dodge, a U.S. attorney's office spokeswoman, said prosecutors determined there was no federal crime depicted on the 2004 video of Aransas County Court-at-Law Judge William Adams. The decision came a day after the local district attorney decided the statute of limitations blocked any state charges.

Rockport Police Chief Tim Jayroe said he had discussed video of Adams beating his then 16-year-old daughter with a prosecutor from the U.S. attorney's Corpus Christi office Friday morning.

"There was nothing that we discussed briefly this morning that to him would indicate there could be any federal involvement, but that he had seen the video and they would look into it," Jayroe said.

Hillary Adams, now 23, posted the 8-minute clip on YouTube last week that shows her father viciously lashing her with a belt and trying to force her to bend over her bed to be beaten despite her pleas to stop. The clip had received more than 4 million views by Friday.

Aransas County District Attorney Patrick Flanigan said Thursday the statute of limitations on charges such as injury to a child expired after five years.

"I would expect that yeah, charges would have been pursued but for the inability to proceed due to the statute of limitations," Flanigan said Friday. "You know, whether that would have been a felony or a misdemeanor charge I can't say but I think there would've been some action pursued."

County Attorney Richard Bianchi, meanwhile, said a visiting judge would handle all Adams' cases, not just those involving the state's child protective services as originally planned, for the next two weeks. Adams often presides over child abuse cases.

"Now the issue is to wait on the actions of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct," Bianchi said, referring to a state panel investigating the judge. Bianchi said he'd be "surprised" if Adams, 51, returned to the bench before the commission concludes its investigation.

Adams issued a three-page statement Thursday saying his daughter posted the clip to get back at him for telling her he would be reducing the amount of financial support he gives her and taking away her Mercedes. The statement did not include an apology for the beating, but he told Corpus Christi television station KZTV this week that the video "looks worse than it is," that he already had apologized to his daughter and that he was just disciplining his child for stealing.

Hillary Adams says her parents were angry because she had downloaded pirated content online, and that she turned on the camera because she sensed something was going to happen.

The Texas Department of Family and Protective Services, which requested that he be removed from its cases until the investigation concludes, is also investigating the case.

Agency spokesman Patrick Crimmins has declined to elaborate on the exact nature of that investigation, but he said the agency generally would only investigate a case in which a suspected abuse victim has already reached adulthood if there are still children in the home who could be at risk.

Adams was granted joint custody of his 10-year-old daughter in his 2007 divorce. There are no allegations of alleged abuse by Adams against his younger daughter.

In his statement Thursday, Adams said he would "respond" to all investigations. As Aransas County's top judge, he has dealt with at least 349 family law cases in the past year alone, nearly 50 of which involved state caseworkers seeking determine whether parents were fit to raise their children.

If the judicial commission investigation doesn't lead to punishment, Adams could be safe on the bench until he's up for re-election in three years.

Chairman issues subpoena to DHS

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Judiciary Committee Chairman Lamar Smith issued a subpoena Friday to force the Department of Homeland Security to turn over records about illegal immigrants identified but not detained or removed by federal authorities.

Smith, R-Texas, acted after a subcommittee authorized the subpoena earlier this week.

"For the past two months, the Department of Homeland Security has dragged their feet and stonewalled my request for information," Smith said in a statement Friday. "The administration is wrongfully trying to keep crucial information from the American people."

Smith had asked the Obama administration in August for information about its Secure Communities program, which uses fingerprints collected in local jails around the country to identify illegal immigrants who have been arrested. He said Wednesday the Obama administration was "not acting in good faith."

Smith has said he wants to know what crimes were committed by as many as 300,000 illegal immigrants DHS has chosen not detain.

DHS officials have said they're working on the request, and Democrats who opposed the subpoena said it was premature because DHS was cooperating with the subcommittee.

The Obama administration recently said it will prioritize deportations by removing illegal immigrants convicted of crimes and those who pose a public safety or national security threat first.

Smith and other Republicans have accused the administration of being too lenient and of circumventing Congress to grant amnesty many illegal immigrants.

The congressional subpoena of the Obama administration is the second this week. The other was related to a half billion-dollar government loan to a failed solar energy company.

Thought for Today: "Imagination is the only key to the future. Without it none exists, with it all things are possible." — Ida M. Tarbell, American journalist (1857-1944).

A little visit to a nameless Texas town

Under a cloud...

I went to a town near Rosanky where the people were all rather cranky

Not helpful or funny

They just wanted my money

Am I apt to return? No thanks!

The town will remain nameless for reasons which will become obvious. Suffice it to say that it was a settlement in Austin's original colony. There was an organization, with a building on Main Street, dedicated to the history of the town. It being near lunch time when my daughter Anne and I arrived, the office was closed, so we drifted down the street, looking for a place to eat and seeing what we could see. The Chamber of Commerce was open so I stepped inside.

The clerks on duty looked at us as if to say "What do YOU want?" We told them we were just looking around town, but they weren't inclined to offer much information. One of them finally opened up a bit, but mainly to disparage the Panhandle. We picked up a couple of brochures, asked where to get the best hamburger in town, and left.

After lunch — which was good, but overrated — we made our way back to the "History Center". The lady was in a back office and seemed somewhat put out that we were there. I asked her what the town had to offer and she asked, with animation, "Shopping?" I collect shot glasses and Christmas ornaments, so I'm always on the lookout for some, but it wasn't my main goal, so I told her "no". That seemed to irritate her, so she shoved some brochures and newspapers in my hands and told me that I could find the points of interest there.

By this time I was losing interest, but we persevered. We strolled down Main, checking out the Victorian architecture and historical markers. We went into a fancy gift shop where the clerk—the owner, I guessed—glared at us without speaking. A little further down was a vintage drug store. When we walked in we were greeted cheerily with "What can I do for you folks?" This showed promise. "We're sightseeing," I said. The young man said "fine" or something to that effect and immediately went back to what he was doing. We never made eye contact with another person in the building.

Chamber Music

One of the points of interest was a tour of "historic homes"—about two blocks worth. It was interesting—Sam Houston had been a frequent visitor in one house—but we would have enjoyed it a lot more if there had been numbers on the houses to match the guide. After that, we were pretty much done with "Nameless".

As I cleaned out the car the next day and discarded all of the literature they had given me, I thought it odd that they would spend so much money and effort to promote the town, but treat visitors so poorly. I can't say that I have never been treated that way in Pampa, but it is certainly the rare occasion rather than the norm.

The Silver Lining

I would be remiss to omit a couple of bright spots we found. The first was at the Economic Development Corporation. A former colleague of mine had recently accepted the directorship, so I stopped in to see if he was there. He wasn't at first, but his office assistant was very nice, friendly, and helpful.

Another one was the reference librarian. She was quite cheery and chatty. When we told her we were from the Panhandle, she confessed that she was originally from Farwell (straight down Highway 60, almost into New Mexico). "In that case," I said, "do you know where Walcott is?" She thought a bit and said, "As a matter of fact I do." I told her that's where I had attended grade school. She, too, was very friendly, helpful, and nice—must have been her Panhandle raisin'. (And running into someone in the Austin area that knew where Walcott is, was almost as strange as the time I met someone in Fort Worth that knew about Bootleg Corner. Even stranger, he had actually farmed near our place.)

Where Does the Nut Fall?

Anne and I visited a large mall in Austin. As we were getting on an escalator, we noticed that the brand was "Schindler". I "listed" to one side, and then Anne fired off some zingers:

I guess this would be Schindler's lift.

I can't quite understand Schindler's lisp.

I can understand just enough German to get Schindler's gist.

I would hate to be hit by Schindler's fist.

I hear he's a nice guy when Schindler's kissed.

But I hate to be around when Schindler's...uh, angry. (Better leave that one alone.)

What's in a Name...

Ella Dunn came in the other day to tell me her story: her maiden name was Just. When she married, the pranksters had written "Ella Just Dunn it" on the getaway car.

At the Institute of Texan Cultures in San Antonio, Anne and I ran across the name "Onderdonk". I can't remember the origin (Dutch?), but Anne noted that the name would be perfect for a beer joint: "Onderdonk Honky Tonk."

Joe Weaver is the Executive Director of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

"We had survivors from all over the community with different types of cancers that they survived," Valentine said. "I think it was a memorable occasion. It was emotional and moving."

The student council and the Pampa Fire Department gave pledges to Christy Robinson, chairperson of the local chapter of the American Cancer Society. The Student Council gave a $3,000 pledge, while the fire department's pledges came from t-shirt sales.

The 15 football seniors were also recognized at the pep rally. The senior cheerleaders gave them a poem written by junior Elizabeth Woody. The poem described how the seniors once looked up to the Harvester football players and how they have become the Harvesters they once looked up to.

Valentine said she hoped the rally pumped up the football team.

"Hopefully, it showed our Harvesters that we are supporting them and we love them and want them to do well on Friday," Valentine said.

The evening featured multiple performances by the cheerleaders and the band. Most of the pep rally was in the dark, with black lights illuminated. The No. 12 Pampa Lady Harvesters were also recognized; they play in the area round at 4 p.m. today against Monahans.

At the end of the rally, everyone whose lives were affected by cancer circled around halfcourt in a "circle of life." Everyone in the circle received glow sticks to shine their light against cancer. A slide-show with the song "I'm Gonna Love You Through It" by Martina McBride displayed photographs of those affected by cancer in Pampa.

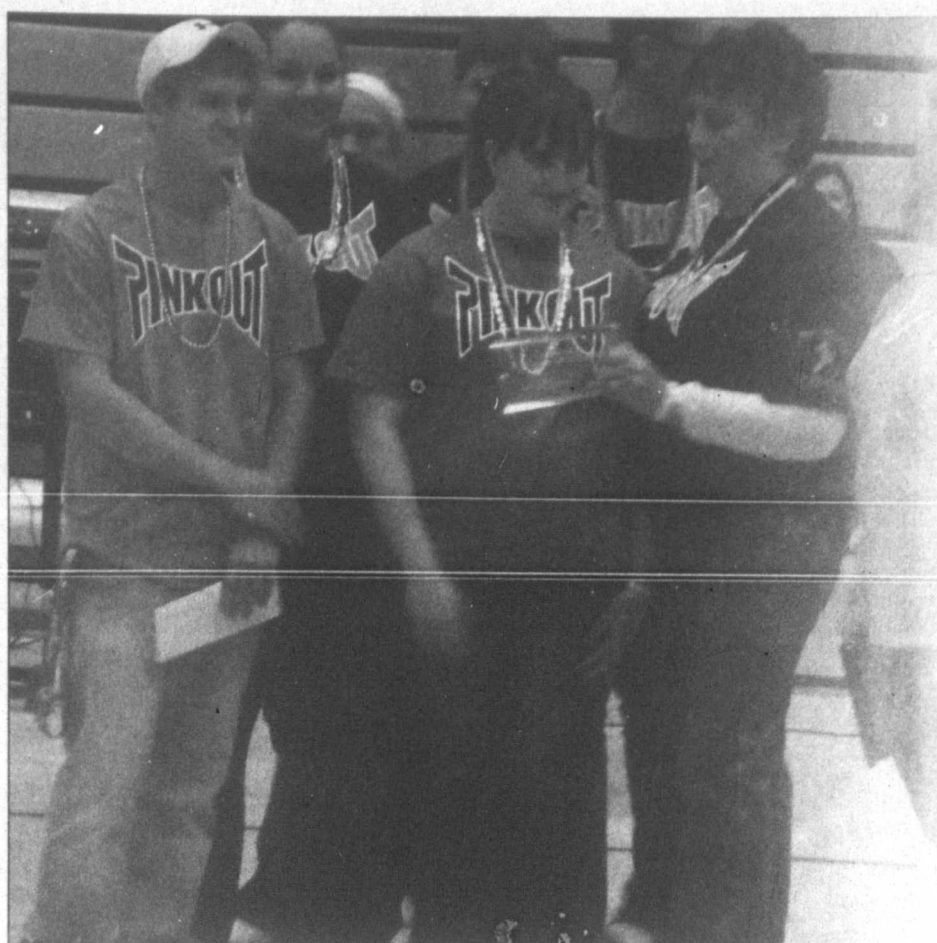

Valentine said it definitely hits home having a student in the high school battling cancer.

"It's something that's no discrimination of age," Valentine said. "It hits all types. It's just a scary disease. Anything that can be done locally to help is awesome."

The town also turned out to support their Pampa Harvesters in the Pink-Out game on Friday, where some Harvesters football players showed their support for cancer awareness with pink towels and wristbands. Senior linebacker Devin Coleman, among others, even wore pink eyeblack for the game. The Harvesters were victorious against district rival Dalhart, but unfortunately, Borger's win against Perryton left Pampa on the outside of the playoff bracket looking in. For more on the game, turn to SPORTS, page 1B.

Abilene Christian bus veers off road; one killed, 15 hurt

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — An Abilene Christian University bus veered off a Texas highway and overturned on Friday, ejecting several of those onboard, killing a 19-year-old student and critically injuring four other people, officials said.

The school-owned bus was carrying 12 agricultural studies students, three faculty members and a faculty member's wife from Abilene to Medina, where they were going to spend the weekend doing mission work at a children's home, school spokesman Grant Rampy said.

"These were students from our agriculture department, heading to an annual service project to help a children's home in town," he told The Associated Press.

The driver, 34-year-old faculty member Michael Nicodemus, lost control as the bus was entering a bend on U.S. 83 near the town of Ballinger, about 50 miles southwest of Abilene, the Texas Department of Public Safety said. The vehicle hit a concrete culvert and did a complete roll, ejecting several passengers, the DPS said. It ended up a shredded, metal wreck.

Anabel Reid, a student from Petersburg, was pronounced dead at the scene, and everyone else who was on the bus was taken to one of four area hospitals. Four of the injured were in critical condition, Rampy said.

Reid was among 23 ACU agricultural and environmental science majors who made the annual trip to the Medina Children's Home last year, where she helped clear land, mow the yard and move in a new family, according to a 2010 story posted on the school website.

In another story, Reid spoke about how a school workshop she attended would help prepare her for a lifetime of Christian service.

"I enjoyed the simulation of village and rural settings and all of the hands-on experience," Reid is quoted as saying the story. "I was able to physically help dig a well which put my dream of working in developing countries into perspective. I learned about the attitude with which I should approach situations and also about the cultures and how to live within them."

Several hundred students and faculty members gathered for a prayer vigil Friday night at an outdoor amphitheater on campus.

Jean-Noel Thompson, the dean of students, said he had just met with Reid's family.

"You can imagine the shock and the pain," he said.

Thompson said Reid's mother spoke to him about how much her daughter loved the ACU community, and she had a message for the driver of the bus: "She wants him to know 'it's OK, it's not your fault.'"

ACU officials, including the university's president, Phil Schubert, fanned out to the four hospitals to be with worried family members, Rampy said. "It's all hands on deck, all members of ACU administration have fanned out to area hospitals," Rampy said.

Mark Lewis, assistant dean for spiritual life, said the wreck immediately made him recall the crash nine years ago that killed five ACU students from Nigeria. In that crash, one of the students apparently fell asleep at the wheel and their SUV veered off a highway about 110 miles from Abilene and landed on its roof on a concrete embankment 30 feet below.

"It's like this can't be true," he said. "You know in your mind it is, but you like to think you're immune from it happening again."

think that DST was created to benefit farmers. As it turns out, Benjamin Franklin first (somewhat jokingly) suggested an idea resembling DST while serving as America's envoy to France in 1784, saying that Parisians might save on candles by getting up earlier to make use of the morning sun.

Daylight Saving Time as we now know it was first broached by New Zealand entomologist George Vernon Hudson, who made his living in a shift-work job and valued after-hours daylight for his insect collecting. He proposed a two-hour daylight saving shift in an 1895 paper to the Wellington Philosophical Society. A decade later, the idea was independently visited by English outdoorsman William Willett, who suggested altering the clock in the summer. He published this idea in a 1907 proposal that was eventually taken up in Parliament a year later, though it failed to pass.

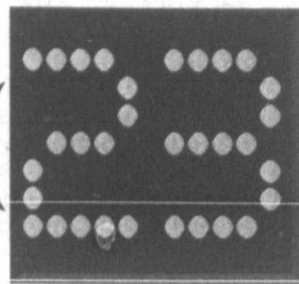

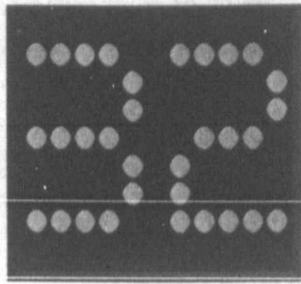

Modern daylight saving time began in 1916, when Germany and its allies in World War I started it as a means to conserve coal. As the war progressed, the practice was taken up by Great Britain, France, and many of their allies, as well as several neutral European countries. The U.S. followed suit in 1918 through the Standard Time Act, which also established standard time zones in America.

Proponents cite DST as a means to save on energy costs; indeed, the longer DST period established in 2007 was done so through the Energy Policy Act of 2005. However, several studies have shown little to no energy savings from having the extra sun during evenings. A study done by the University of California-Santa Barbara reported that after Indiana, which adopted DST in 2006, made the switch, energy consumption in the state actually increased by an average of one percent, with costs for lighting decreasing but consumption of heating and air conditioning rising by two to four percent.

Still, DST may have other benefits. A 2007 study by the nonprofit RAND Corporation found that vehicle crashes are down during DST, perhaps owing to better visibility in the spring and summer.

Whatever the case, the clock strikes midnight on DST for another year, so time-concerned Gray County residents should remember to fall back before falling into bed on Saturday — and thank Ben Franklin and William Willett for that extra hour of sleep.

Harvesters take down Wolves, fall short of playoffs

aglover@thepampanews.com

Playing their final home game this season, the Pampa Harvesters wanted to make it memorable for their 15 seniors. When the final buzzer sounded, the seniors and the rest of the Harvesters joined in one last round of the fight song to celebrate a 32-23 victory over the Dalhart Wolves Friday at Harvester Field.

"They came out and won a great football game," Parker said. "I've been blessed to be a part of winning football teams and teams that have gone deep in the playoffs. It is certainly a privilege to be a part of that. I've never been proud of a group of kids as these kids."

The win was bittersweet, though. Borger beat Perryton 32-14, which meant that Pampa was a field goal short of making the playoffs.

Senior Ryne Richardson said despite the loss, he appreciated how his teammates played.

"I'm grateful for my teammates having our seniors' backs," Richardson said. "It means the world to me. It's just bittersweet to know that we won but still aren't going to make the playoffs."

Richardson made the most of his final home game. In the first quarter, he caught a pass for a first down. In the fourth quarter, he scooped up a Dalhart fumble and returned it for a touchdown that would give Pampa a nine-point lead with eight minutes left. Richardson said it felt good to make that play.

"It's about time that happened," Richardson said. "I'm glad it happened tonight and I will remember this game the rest of my life."

The Harvesters entered the second half trailing 23-21. On their first possession, Pampa was able to move the ball. Junior running back Samuel Smith broke a 14-yard run. The Harvesters got within the Wolves' 30 when the drive stalled. Senior Colten Adams made good of the possession, kicking a 34-yard field goal down the middle putting Pampa up 24-23.

In the fourth quarter, the defense got on the board, when Dalhart's Noah Schneideran was sacked and fumbled. Richardson picked it up and scored.

Senior Reid Miller completed a conversion pass to senior Latigo Collins.

The Harvesters' defense stepped up in the second half, forcing two turnovers and held Dalhart scoreless. Wolves' running back Davonte Burks torched Pampa for 140 yards and a touchdown in the first half. In the second, he was held to 49 yards.

Richardson said this was the best the defense played all season.

"This is the best defensive game I've been a part of," Richardson said. "It was better than the two shutouts we got."

Parker said he was proud of both his offense and defense in the second half.

"Not only did we shut them out, we shut them out and scored," Parker said. "It was a great team effort. Colten hit a super field goal and had some great kickoffs. We didn't make any errors on special teams. We played sound defense and moved the ball proficiently with the running game. That's the formula you want."

In the first half, the Harvesters, who have struggled running the ball earlier in the season, were able to get going early. Smith was able to burst through holes, break tackles and carry tacklers with him for quality yards. Miller added two rushing touchdowns, one which gave Pampa a 14-9 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Smith said the offense was relaxed.

"We played well for each other," Smith said. "We just went out and had fun."

The first half was back-and-forth as both teams exchanged the lead five times. Miller and Collins were able to connect for a 33-yard touchdown in the first half.

Smith said even though the team missed the playoffs, this was the best season he has been a part of.

"I liked playing with a time that had a strong bond," Smith said.

Parker said he is disappointed they didn't make playoffs but is proud of how his team played.

"Not making playoffs is a disappointment," Parker said. "Right now, I don't want to take anything away from (the seniors) in Pampa, Texas — a classy group of young men. I want them to feel good about this victory. We will worry about the rest when the sun comes up tomorrow."

Harvesters fought hard in final game this week in SPORTS:

Pampa entered the final game with their backs against the wall. The odds were against them as some predicted the Harvesters to lose by four touchdowns. The home side of the stadium which is usually packed definitely had empty spots. It could have been easy for the Harvesters to just go through the motions. Friday night, they didn't do that.

ANDREW GLOVER

senior Latigo Collins, who has received a lot of coverage in previous games.

Just like the game at Perryton, Pampa kept responding. Just as quickly as the game kicked off, Dalhart was already on the board. This could have easily led to Pampa's offense feeling pressured to score and cause them to hurry things. The Harvesters were calm and drove downfield to even things up. Pampa could have got down when a trick play failed resulting in a safety for Dalhart. The Harvesters' defense rose up and made a stop. Throughout the first half, Pampa was able to respond. After the first quarter, Pampa found themselves ahead. At halftime, Pampa was very much in the game.

The true test was going to be how they responded in the second half. The Harvesters passed the test with flying colors. The defense forced two turnovers and shutdown Dalhart who ran all over them in the first half. Pampa's defense gave the offense a chance to get the score it needed to put themselves in the playoffs for the third consecutive season. The offense got two much-needed scores that allowed them to take a victory.

In the end, though, Pampa was a little short of the total they needed to make the playoffs. For the 14 seniors, it's probably hitting home that they played their final game. Even, though the Harvesters weren't able to make it to the playoffs, the team can still be proud of the win. Last year, this same team shut us down. For the Harvesters to turn around and beat this same team by nine is impressive. In the long run these seniors are going to remember that they won their final game. The fact that they didn't score enough points to make the playoffs isn't going to resonate with them 10 years down the road.

There's not too many senior classes that get to say they won their final game. The Harvesters should be proud of their hard-fought win and how they closed the 2011 season.

Andrew Glover is The Pampa News sports reporter. He can be reached by email at aglover@thepampanews.com

In fact, they did things they hadn't done all season. For most of the year, Pampa struggled to get a running game going, especially early in the game. Friday, junior Samuel Smith was able to break through holes and break tackles for big gains. Smith's running helped open up the passing game.

Senior quarterback Reid Miller, who struggled to find options in other games, was able to hit other receivers. Seniors Ryne Richardson and Sam Cain made catches. Junior Ryan Smith caught two key passes that helped keep drives alive. Miller hitting other targets helped free up Pampa could have got down when a trick play failed resulting in a safety for Dalhart. The Harvesters' defense rose up and made a stop. Throughout the first half, Pampa was able to respond. After the first quarter, Pampa found themselves ahead. At halftime, Pampa was very much in the game.

The true test was going to be how they responded in the second half. The Harvesters passed the test with flying colors. The defense forced two turnovers and shutdown Dalhart who ran all over them in the first half. Pampa's defense gave the offense a

Pirates rout Horns, clinch playoff spot

Czubinski

At the end of last season, the Lefors Pirates were done after beating the Darrouzett Longhorns. That was something that didn't sit well with them. This season, the No. 10 Pirates made sure to not repeat last year's ending and routed Darrouzett 51-6 in Darrouzett to return to the playoffs.

Head coach Joey Czubinski said he was proud of how his team played.

"We played great," Czubinski said. "We jumped out and took care of business. We wanted to get it done and get home. That's what we did."

Czubinski said one of the keys was his defense making Darrouzett one-dimensional.

"We took away their running game," Czubinski said. "It's pretty easy to stop someone when you know what they are doing. We were able to match up well and go after the quarterback."

Czubinski said it's nice to return to the playoffs. "We made it four years in a row and got used to being there," Czubinski said. "Last year we didn't end up going and it didn't sit well. This year we are back. I want my young players to get used to going. Making it five out six years is pretty impressive."

The Pirates (8-2, 1-1) will play the Groom Tigers (8-2, 2-0). The two teams met in October, which ended in a 54-50 Lefors' victory. Game details will be determined today.

OSU looks to remain undefeated vs. KSU

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — From a pack of four top 20 teams that were unbeaten a month ago, No. 3 Oklahoma State is left as the Big 12's best hope at winning a national championship.

The Cowboys are 8-0 for only the fourth time in school history and can reach 9-0 for the second time in the program's 110-year history with a win Saturday night against No. 17 Kansas State (7-1, 4-1 Big 12).

Even more important, at third in the BCS standings, Oklahoma State (8-0, 5-0) controls its own path to the national title game, needing four more wins to get there.

"It's fun to be a part of it," quarterback Brandon Weeden said. "I can't really say that I expected it, but we always hoped in the back of our minds."

The Cowboys will need to reverse a recent trend to keep going.

Oklahoma was undefeated before losing at home to Texas Tech two weeks ago, then went on the road to beat K-State 58-17 a week ago. Now, the Wildcats are the just-beaten team seeking to knock off a rival that hasn't lost yet.

"I would say we're pretty angry that we got beat that bad in our own house. It never sits that well with anybody to get beat that bad in their own house, especially on homecoming," Wildcats center B.J. Finney said. "So, we're having to ... start over from scratch and remind ourselves what got us to be 7-1 and return to it."

Kansas State had the best defense in the conference before Landry Jones set an Oklahoma record with 505 yards passing as the Sooners scored 44 straight points in the victory. Weeden is just as capable, ranking seventh in the nation with 339 yards per game and with his own All-American receiver to throw to.

"You never want to suffer a loss like that, and any time that you do, you always want to bounce back twice as strong from it, so it definitely fuels it," said K-State cornerback Nigel Malone, who had two interceptions last week to boost his season total to six.

Unbeaten just a week ago, the Wildcats need a win to stay within striking distance of the Big 12 title. Otherwise, they'd be two games back with three to go and the Cowboys would hold the tiebreaker.

"They don't want to have back-to-back weeks where they feel like they don't play their best," Weeden said. "They're going to be hungry. They're going to make adjustments."

The challenge will come in slowing a Wildcats ground game led by quarterback Collin Klein that averages 210 yards per game and helps them control the ball for nearly 34½ minutes per game.

The Cowboys rank 111th out of 120 Bowl Subdivision teams in yards allowed, but have made up for it by leading the country in every turnover-related category — turnover margin, total takeaways, interceptions and fumbles forced. So far, Kansas State has been nearly as good at protecting the ball — committing only eight turnovers through eight games.

"They're not as bad a defense as some people might want to make out. ... They're far better than the numbers indicate," Wildcats coach Bill Snyder said.

First things first, though. Oklahoma State has never won a Big 12 title, much less a national championship.

"That's always your ultimate goal. Whether or not it's realistic and all that, you've still got a shot for it," Weeden said. "Our ultimate goal at the beginning of the season was win the Big 12 championship. We've got to take care of that first, and then the goals will kind of fall in place after that."

The PAMPA NEWS

Sitting through actioner 'In Time' just feels like it takes an eternity

From the trailers, "In Time" looks like a great action/sci-fi movie. It stars Justin Timberlake in his first action role, Amanda Seyfried as the love interest, Cillian Murphy as the villain, and supporting turns from Olivia Wilde, Johnny Galecki, Matt Bomer, Vincent Kartheiser, Alex Pettyfer, and Matt O'Leary, all of whom are excellent actors in their own right.

The subject matter looks interesting, both as a sci-fi concept and as a social issue (one which is particularly hot right now). Yet, somehow "In Time" feels like a complete waste of talent and time.

In the alternate universe of "In Time," everyone stops aging at 25, at which point you are given one free year. Time is also the currency; coffee costs 4 min, a bus ride cost 2 hours, and a night at a fancy hotel can cost months. The rich have hundreds or even thousands of years, while the poor live day to day — literally — with many waking up with less than 24 hours on their clocks, hoping to make enough by working to make it to the next day.

Will Salas (Timberlake) is one of those day-to-dayers, working in a factory with his best friend Borel (Galecki) and dreaming of making enough to take his mother, Rachel (Wilde), to New Greenwich, where all of those with extra time spend theirs. When Will saves Henry Hamilton (Bomer) from a band of Minute Men (a.k.a. time thieves), he's rewarded with a century.

With that much time Will's life quickly becomes complicated and turns into a series of vignettes which do not add up to much. Somehow it includes robbing banks with love interest Sylvia (Seyfried), something which the trailer plays up, but which actually takes up very little time in the movie, and taking time from the rich and giving it to the poor.

For a supposed action movie, there is actually very little action. Instead there's a lot of talking and running away, and the running is not even all that exciting. The film has several moments where you can see great ideas and great writing shine through, but for every five-minute scene that's clever, heartbreaking, or exciting, there's a twenty-minute scene that brings the film to a complete standstill. Also, there are several scenes which seem to have been left on the editing room floor. At one point, an armored truck plays a big part in a robbery, but the last we saw our heroes they were sitting in a limo.

There's also the matter of Will's father, whose death, which may have been a murder, is mentioned multiple times throughout the movie, with the promise of being solved, and yet the movie ends without any hint of who his father was or how he died.

The movie does have one thing going for it (besides all the hot young actors): The timing of the release. It is fortuitous that, as the movie is released, there are multiple protests around the country which are focusing the light on the same theme: The one percent who have it all and the 99 percent who have nothing and a system that no longer works because of all the people it hurts in order for one small select group to live like kings. It's the equivalent of Occupy Cinema.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 5, 2011:
 This year opens up more spontaneity. You will be less reserved, allowing your emotions to flow. If you are single, you will be amazed how this openness attracts even more suitors. You also might discover that you attract someone who is emotionally available, unlike in the past. Enjoy. If you are attached, passion runs high.  ★★ Don't you think you deserve some time off, a change of scenery and a little R and R? Take the opportunity to do just that -- alone or with company. You have pushed and pushed. Take this day as yours to do whatever you want with. Tonight: Whatever feels right.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 ★★★★★ You might be more grounded than many people right now, but for you, no, you feel inspired and emotional. Allow a special friendship through the porthole to color your day and your choices. A partner also could be emotional and not pliant. Let it be. Tonight: Where the action is.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 ★★ Take charge and allow all the activity to chum around you. In some manner, this plan might be a lot easier than being one of the emotional wild things that seem to be coming out of the woodwork. Remain mellow even if you are dumbfounded by others! Tonight: Could go quite late.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 ★★★★★ Listen to your intuition and follow it. You can scarcely resist acting on what you keep hearing in your inner mind. Romance could be particularly intense. Speak of trips and potential new avenues. Read between the lines with a loved one. Tonight: Take in new vistas.

are 100 percent with them! You might enjoy this little vacation into others' lives. Tonight: Whatever others want -- within reason.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 ★★★★★ You might need to screen your calls or leave your cellphone at home if you want to plunge into the moment. You have decided to be with favorite people. The company counts, not the event. Tonight: Carrying on as if there is no tomorrow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
 ★★★★★ Toss yourself completely into a loved one's life for a day. Whatever the results, you will only feel good about yourself. If you are single, make time for a potential new friend. Tonight: And the good times go on and on.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 ★★★★★ Sort through invitations and decide what you really want to do. You have quite a selection. You won't need to go far. You could relish a flirtatious conversation, but you also might love a gathering of your pals. Tonight: Play out the moment.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 ★★★ Sometimes giving in to your more emotional side causes a problem. It is easy to lose self-restraint and just tumble into the abyss of abundance. You might not even care either. You are finally present in the moment. Tonight: Call it a night only when you are ready.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 ★★★★★ Be spontaneous and direct. Follow your own course without hurting another person's feelings. Try a new spot or a different type of activity. You might discover a new passion. Tonight: Ride with the moment.

Last week in Indianapolis hundreds of people lined up to cash in at the Empire Roadshow. People gathered carrying Antiques, Watches, Gold and Silver Jewelry, Coin Collections, and even Guitars. The roadshow comes to town and sets up in several locations so anyone can attend without having to drive any great distance.

One customer said this "I couldn't believe that a few pieces of broken gold and some old coins I had got me $700.00 in less than 15 minutes. That stuff had been sitting in my dresser for over 20 years". Another gentleman said that he had brought in his father's Gibson guitar that his dad bought as a kid for $60.00 and received a check for $3,500.00. One of the experts at the roadshow said that most people have no idea what their broken gold, sterling flatware, coin collections, watches are really worth. The service the roadshow offers is truly genuine.

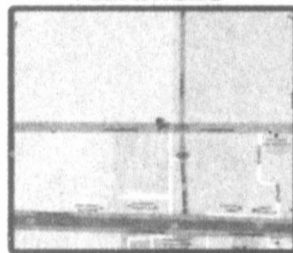

It offers the general public an opportunity to a free appraisal and even a chance to sell their items on the spot. The roadshow is free and anyone with anything is welcome. About 80% of the attendees sell their items to the experts. Antiques are not all that the roadshow is interested in, they also want to see any kind of coin or collection you have, any kind of jewelry whether gold or costume, watches, and all of your musical instruments.

Cottonseed prices nearly double as feed demand soars

ROBERT BURNS
Texas AgriLife Extension Service

COLLEGE STATION — With cotton production down and the need for supplemental feeds high, cottonseed prices are nearly double that of an average year, according to Texas AgriLife Extension Service personnel.

Despite rains, by the last week of October the entire state remained in one stage of drought or another, with more than 70 percent under severe to exceptional drought conditions, according to the U.S. drought monitor.

Though the rains greened up pastures and rangeland, and gave winter wheat producers some hope, forage and hay remained scarce throughout the state, according to AgriLife Extension county agent reports.

As a result, livestock producers are looking more to alternatives such as whole cottonseed, said Mark Brown, AgriLife Extension agent in Lubbock County.

"Cottonseed is selling for an amazing $340 per ton due to feed shortages and short supply," Brown reported.

A lot of producers today would be glad to pay $340 per ton — if they could find it at that price, said Dr. Ellen Jordan, AgriLife Extension dairy specialist based in Dallas. It's all about supply and demand, and the drought.

"Demand is going to surpass cottonseed supply this year by far," Jordan said.

"Not only do we have the dairies looking for cottonseed, but people are looking for cottonseed to extend their forage supply to their beef cattle."

Regional feed prices in Comanche were $398 and $393 per ton in Friona on Oct. 26 — 27, Jordan noted.

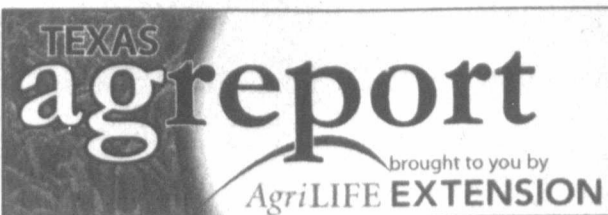

On an average year, when demand isn't so high and there's a better cotton crop, prices usually hover around $200 per ton, she said.

There is a limit to how much cottonseed can be safely fed to a large ruminant such as a dairy or beef cow, Jordan cautioned.

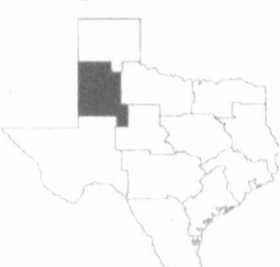

"If you feed more than about eight pounds per cow per day, there can be some reproductive and other issues," she said. "Those are the levels that we put as the maximum for dairy cattle, but all cattle will have issues with feeding too high a level of cottonseed. We usually feed it at a rate of about five pounds (of whole cottonseed) per head per day."

More information on the current Texas drought and wildfire alerts can be found on the AgriLife Extension Agricultural Drought Task Force website at <http://agrilife.tamu.edu/drought/>

ing for cattle producers. Other cotton producers were waiting on a freeze. The harvesting of early defoliated cotton was completed. Peanut producers began harvesting but were seeing below-average yields. With market prices up, beef cattle producers who had been holding onto calves were considering selling. Some producers were shipping cattle to leased pastures in states to the north, while others culled their cowherds to sustainable stocking levels.

SOUTH PLAINS: The region received some rain — and even snow. The cotton harvest was ongoing, wheat growers were planting and the corn harvest was winding down. Gins were keeping up with harvest with about 50 percent of the usual volume for the season. Cottonseed was selling for $340 per ton due to feed shortages and short supplies. Many counties had the first freeze of the year on Oct. 28. Daytime highs ranged from the 40s to the 80s during the week. Rangeland and pastures began to recover a little here and there because of light rains in the last two weeks. Livestock were mostly in fair to good condition with producers continuing to supply supplemental feed. With short hay supplies and other increased costs, producers expected to be forced to sell more cattle.

With hay scarce and supplemental feeds expensive because of the drought, the demand for cottonseed has pushed prices up to nearly twice what they would be in a normal year, according to Texas AgriLife Extension Service experts.

PANHANDLE: The region received its first snow — as much as 4 inches — and cold front of the season. Actual moisture received ranged from a trace to about 2 inches. Soil-moisture levels were still very short to adequate with most counties reporting very short to short. The corn harvest was ongoing, and the cotton harvest began. Wheat growers continued planting. Rangeland and pastures were in from very poor to good condition, with most counties reporting very poor to poor. Livestock producers continued supplemental feeding of cattle.

ROLLING PLAINS: The region had its first significant cold front of the season. The cold front was accompanied by rain, from 0.5 inch to 2 inches in some areas, and some snow in Motley County. The moisture was a boon to stressed winter wheat, pastures and hay fields. Some cotton producers planted wheat in failed cotton acres in hopes of growing graz-

Expert: Expect weed growth after drought

COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Barron Rector, Texas AgriLife Extension Service range specialist, cautions that, following this year's drought, wildfires and tons of imported hay, there may be a lot more weeds for landowners to deal with, and some could be invasive species or even toxic.

"The soundest way to control weeds is to prevent the invasion, which means we must understand the biology, limit the movement, understand the human behavior and actions that can cause the spread, and understand the pathways for its introduction," he said.

"Our major problem with land management today is our inability to recognize an invasive plant species and deal with it accordingly," Rector added.

And following the recent influx of hay from other regions of the U.S. and even abroad, landowners should expect more invasive plants, he said.

Invasive species of weeds can cause economic or environmental harm due to habitat degradation, displacement of native plants threatening the reduction of wildlife food resources, alterations to the ecosystem of a region or alterations and changes to natural waterways.

"Invasive plants are those that have a tendency to spread and invade healthy landscapes ultimately causing some kind of negative impact," Rector said. "Invasive plants are often best defined as plants that do not stay where they are planted."

Since 2008, portions of Texas have been in moderate to extreme drought, he said. This has had an important impact on forage production for livestock. In response to the drought, many livestock owners have opted not to sell their herds, but to buy hay that is available.

"That hay is coming from Louisiana, Tennessee, Nevada, Florida, Nebraska, Kansas and other surrounding states," Rector said. "Some individuals have even purchased hay from foreign countries, such as Brazil, Chile, Argentina and Canada."

"This sets up a potential problem because interstate commerce of hay is not regulated for the most part. There's no one at the state line to inspect the hay for foreign invasive plants."

"Many landowners and livestock producers could be setting themselves up for weeds they've never seen and introduce potentially invasive plants."

A baby born today, Nov. 6, 2011, before 11:02 a.m. (PST) has a Moon in Pisces. Afterward, the Moon is in Aries. In both cases, the Sun is in Scorpio.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Nov. 6, 2011:

This year you express your fiery nature, with the exception of late January through April 2012. Be careful where you put your energy. In fact, you might be best off not initiating anything during this period and just rolling with what already exists. It is not a good time to start a relationship, either. If you are single, you could attract someone very exciting before summer 2012. You will find many of the traits you are looking for in this person. If you are attached, the two of you need to discuss your frustration or hurt feelings, but certainly don't make any decisions in the above-mentioned period. ARIES can trigger you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

This Week: You start

Monday on an even beat. Avoid scheming. Use care with money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Sometimes issues are more apparent than you realize. Detach and relax without phones ringing or people asking for this or that. You will be able to process many of the issues. Tonight: Not to be found.

This Week: Much goes on behind the scenes. You are in your element from Wednesday on. Relationships are key.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ You draw many people together, and happily so. Listen to a friend and get to the bottom of a personal problem. Your general sense of what works is important. Make the most of the moment. Tonight: Where the gang is.

This Week: Push hard Monday and Tuesday, when you are most likely to succeed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ A parent, older friend or authority figure could be going overboard. Clearly this person wants to take the lead. A close friend or loved one could be unhappy with this situation. Tonight: Do your best at juggling.

This Week: Take charge Monday, keeping your goals in mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★★ Don't key into someone's issue so much that you cannot see clearly. You want to distance yourself, perhaps not literally but possibly mentally. You need to relax. Choose a movie or go for a drive. Let your mind wander. Tonight: Don't even think about tomorrow.

This Week: Express your vision. You get reactions. Still, you might need to take the lead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★★ Deal with others directly, demonstrating your caring. Others could do the most unanticipated things. Relate in a way that makes a difference. Express your caring to your immediate domestic circle. Tonight: Go with a suggestion.

This Week: You will be dealing with funds and other issues. Try not to trigger.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★★ Are you still working on that project? Don't push yourself beyond your limit. Understand what is needed to make a situation work. Be more lighthearted and easygoing with someone who is a part of your daily life. Tonight: Change activities.

This Week: Allow greater creativity to emerge. When you take the heat off, you could be surprised by what occurs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★★ A child or romantic tie could be full of snap, crackle and pop. Your fiery side responds accordingly. Don't take unnecessary emotional risks. Keep reaching out to those you really care about. Let more fun in. Tonight: Be ever frisky.

This Week: Your ideas count and make a difference. Apply them anytime from Tuesday on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ How you structure a familial or domestic matter might make it subject to upheaval and major change. Your instincts guide you more than you realize. You might not want to let everyone know what is on your mind. Tonight: Close to home.

This Week: Honor what is going on with you. Tap into a child's or loved one's energy. Avoid a power play.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★★ Keep conversations moving, though you might want to hang with friends and loved ones. You might be making judgments that prevent you from seeing the complete situation. Surround yourself with friends -- be it out and about or at home. Tonight: Hang out.

This Week: You might regret your words if spoken too quickly -- careful.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★ Make it OK to treat someone to an event, a meal or more. Make it OK also to treat yourself to a long-term desire: a special membership, a clothing item. You will be so content that you will be unlikely to have buyer's remorse. Tonight: Tap into a little self-discipline.

This Week: First assess a situation, then act on it Wednesday or Thursday.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Over the past five years, family gatherings have become increasingly stressful. When they come here, my nieces don't control their young children. Last year after everyone left, I sat down and cried! The mess was horrific, and the damage to my house and yard was dumbfounding. What's worse is they didn't seem to care.

I'm dreading this holiday season. I have refused to host anymore and my husband supports my decision. But I feel bad for my parents. They are in their 70s and have always had pride in their family.

As our family has branched out, respect has gone completely out the window. Last Thanksgiving we were all on our own. We always invite my parents, but they decline because they don't want to hurt any feelings. We have told them it doesn't matter who they're with, as long as they celebrate with one of us.

I feel like I'm being punished for not having the whole family at my house. If it weren't for my daughter, we would leave during the holidays to avoid the dissension. How do I deal with my feelings and live with myself? I don't understand the disrespect in the young generation. If you say anything about a child's behavior, you are verbally abused and made an outcast. -- GIVING UP IN TEXAS

DEAR GIVING UP: I'm glad you wrote, because you're blaming the wrong people. The disrespect you have described is a direct result of children not having been taught how to behave by their ineffective parents, and because there have been no consequences for bad behavior.

If you are asked why there will be no celebrations at your house this year, tell the questioner it's because you can no longer handle the mess and the damage. It's the truth. And PLEASE don't feel guilty for doing so.

As to your parents, please understand that staying home is THEIR choice. They may prefer to celebrate -- or not -- by themselves. It has no reflection on you.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 43-year-old single mom of 16-month-old twins and in the midst of a career change. I will be entering the legal profession. Some people have told me that courts and lawyers tend to be "conservative" and may frown on single mothers.

My question is, should I wear a ring on my left hand without saying anything about my marital status? Of course, if asked directly, I will say I am not married. But would simply wearing a ring on the third finger of my left hand (perhaps my boys' birthstone?) be considered disingenuous or dishonest? -- PUT A RING ON IT? IN NEBRASKA

DEAR PUT A RING ON IT?: Because of advances in the field of reproductive medicine, women both married and single have been able to safely have children at later ages. However, one of the interesting things about motherhood is that no one can tell by looking who is -- or isn't -- one. Unless you walk into court and announce that you are a single mother, your personal life should not be a distraction to anyone, whether the person is conservative or liberal. There is no disgrace in being a single parent if you can afford to feed and educate the children you have, so stop worrying you'll be labeled with a scarlet letter.

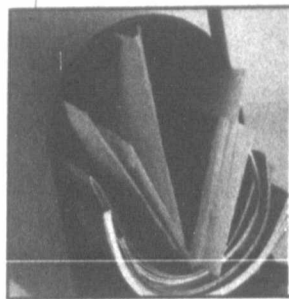

P.S. I see no reason to "put a ring on it" if it's a lie.
