out to a lead. After the opening kick off was taken by Sammy Smith, the Harvesters went with short passes, and between the tackle running scored on a Ryan Smith 8-yard quarterback keeper with 10:28 left in the first quarter. The extra point attempt was blown wide right and the Harvesters lead 6-0. However, the defense, which played well, allowed the home run ball on a third down and two situation allowed the Dumas runner to round the corner and 55 yards later tied the score.

The extra point for the Demons was good and gave them a short lead over the Harvesters.

Pampa took the kickoff and was able to drive the ball again to the Dumas 7 yard line before stalling. The team was forced to bring Alan Stovall in and he converted the field goal, once again placing Pampa in the lead 9-7 with three minutes left in the first quarter.

The first quarter ended with the Harvesters leading and the Pampa defense came alive with hard hits by Scott Kelly and then a recovered fumble

PAMPA — Over 100 generous residents turned out and $15,000 was raised Saturday evening to help fight cancer at the "Circle of Friends Dinner Party & Auction."

"Generally, the Pampa 'Circle Of Friends' group is one of the most generous and highest-contributing in the Panhandle," explained Cortnie Price, Circle Of Friends, Pampa board, member.

The donations came from those in attendance, members, the local VFW chapter, and an auction held on the Rafter P. Cattle Company property on Frederic Saturday night.

And the donations didn't stop there. There were floral centerpieces donated Brandon's Flowers; tables and tents by Frank's Hardware; a delicious chicken fried steak dinner by The Plaza, and other valuable items — including an autographed bottle of wine by country singer Miranda Lambert and a Kenneth Wyatt painting donated by Angela and John Spearman.

The dinner time event started just before dusk and continued well after, including an auction emceed by auctioner Dale West.

The Circle of Friends is a non-profit organization founded to support the philosophy and goals and goals of the Don & Sybil Harrington cancer Center. Its purpose is to provide financial assistance to cancer patients and their families in times of crisis and support educational and research programs directed toward improving quality of life. Anyone who wishes to join can contact Cortnie Price, Pampa Circle of Friends Board member at cortnieprice@gmail.com or 806-595-0959. Gifts also can be mailed to Post Office Box 2690, Pampa, Tx 7906

PAMPA — A man suspected of the aggravated robbery of a local credit union was arrested and placed in custody Saturday.

Billy Michael Grimes, 51, of Pampa remained in custody in Gray County Jail Monday in lieu of $50,000 bond, jail records show. Bail was set by Precinct 1 Justice of the Peace Judge Joe Martinez.

Pampa Police Spokeswoman Stormy McCullar said Monday that authorities were initially dispatched to Amarillo Community Federal Credit Union in the 900 block of North Hobart Street in reference to a panic alarm. They were advised a man had approached a teller and displayed a handgun and demanded money about 9 a.m..

The victim handed over the cash, and the suspect ran out of the Credit Union, McCullar said.

Officers searching the area located Grimes and located evidence to implicate him in the crime, McCullar said. The took him into custody for first-degree aggravated robbery and he was arraigned Sunday.

This case remained under investigation Monday. Anyone with any information on this crime is asked to contact the Pampa Police Department at 806-669-5700. They also can call Crime Stoppers at 806-669-2222 to remain anonymous.

This is all the information that is available due to the case still being under investigation, McCullar said.

Arna Reynolds, chief executive officer of Amarillo Community Federal Credit Union, deferred comment on the robbery to authorities Monday.

Larry Elder: Republicans + Nazis = apples and oranges

LARRY ELDER
 Columnist

Maybe comparing Republicans to Nazis started with the 1964 Goldwater/Johnson presidential race.

Republican presidential candidate Barry Goldwater accepted an invitation to visit an American military installation located in Bavaria, Germany. On "CBS Evening News" hosted by Walter Cronkite, correspondent Daniel Schorr said: "It is now clear that Sen. Goldwater's interview with Der Spiegel, with its hard line appealing to right-wing elements in Germany, was only the start of a move to link up with his opposite numbers in Germany." The reaction shot -- when the cameras returned to Cronkite -- showed the "most trusted man in America" gravely shaking his head.

Or maybe it began when Goldwater accepted the Republican nomination, and Democratic California Gov. Pat Brown said the "stench of fascism is in the air."

Or maybe the Republicans-as-fascists narrative really jump-started during the 1968 presidential campaign. For commentary at the political conventions that year, ABC hired left-wing pundit Gore Vidal and matched him with conservative pundit William F. Buckley. If the network was looking for fireworks, they were not disappointed. Quarreling with Buckley over the impact of anti-Vietnam War dissidents, Gore called Buckley a "crypto-Nazi." Incensed, Buckley fired back: "Now listen, you queer, stop calling me a crypto-Nazi, or I'll sock you in your goddamn face and you'll stay plastered."

More recently, former Vice President Al Gore said: "(George W. Bush's) executive branch has made it a practice to try and control and intimidate news organizations, from PBS to CBS to Newsweek. ... And every day, they unleash squadrons of digital brown-shirts to harass and hector any journalist who is critical of the president."

Entertainer and liberal activist Harry Belafonte, when asked whether the number and prominence of blacks in the Bush administration suggested a (SET ITAL) lack (END ITAL) of racism, said, "Hitler had a lot of Jews high up in the hierarchy of the Third Reich."

Then-NAACP Chairman Julian Bond pulled out the Nazi card in 2004 while criticizing congressional Republicans and the White House: "They preach racial equality but practice racial division. ... Their idea of equal rights is the American flag and Confederate swastika flying side by side."

Bond later clarified whom he meant by "they." Speaking at historically black Fayetteville State University in North Carolina in 2006, Bond said, "The Republican Party would have the American flag and the swastika flying side by side."

Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker, who dared to rein in excessive public employee compensation packages, received the full Nazi treatment. The hard-left blog Libcom.org wrote: "Scott Walker is a fascist, perhaps not in the classical sense since he doesn't operate in the streets, but a fascist nonetheless. ... He is a fascist, for his program takes immediate and direct aim at (a sector of) the working class ..."

This brings us to the recently concluded Republican National Convention. California Democratic Party Chairman John Burton offered this analysis: "(Republicans) lie, and they don't care if people think they lie. As long as you lie, (Nazi propaganda minister) Joseph Goebbels -- the big lie -- you keep repeating it."

In dismissing Republicans' concern over the possibility of voter fraud, Pat Lehman, a leading member of the Kansas delegation, told The Wichita Eagle: "It's like Hitler said, if you're going to tell a lie, tell a big lie, and if you tell it often enough and say it in a loud enough voice, some people are going to believe you."

Next up, we have the chairman of the South Carolina Democratic Party. Dick Harpootlian compared the state's Republican governor to Hitler's mistress. When told that the Republicans were holding a competing press conference at a NASCAR Hall of Fame basement studio, Harpootlian told the South Carolina delegation: "(Gov. Nikki Haley) was down in the bunker, a la Eva Braun."

How casually Democrats make Hitler-Nazi-fascist references to demean their political opponents is astonishing. By calling political opponents "fascists" because of policy disagreements, Democrats trivialize a regime responsible for exterminating 6 million Jews in a war that resulted in the deaths of over 50 million people.

Where does this cavalier Nazi talk take us?

In 1994, schoolteachers in Oakland, Calif., took 70 mostly black high school students to see "Schindler's List." Some of the kids began laughing during a scene where a Jewish woman was mercilessly killed. In a Los Angeles Times opinion piece called "Why Would Anyone Laugh at 'Schindler's List'?" a theater employee wrote: "A three-hour-plus film in black and white about the Holocaust may not be everyone's choice, but those who decide to view it must be prepared and understand. I find it hard to believe kids today are so desensitized to violence that when they see the strange convulsions of someone who's been shot, their first instinct is to laugh. If one of their friends was gunned down on the way home, would they stand there and burst into laughter at the way he/she died?"

This Oakland students/"Schindler's List" disconnect is aided and abetted by leftists like Gore, Bond and Burton who shout words like "Nazi" or "fascist" or "Hitler" at conservatives.

And, no, it appears they have no shame.

Tragedy in Benghazi borne of ignorance and intolerance

"Men never do evil so completely and so cheerfully as when they do it from religious conviction."

That famous epigram was found in the notes left by the 17th-century French mathematician and philosopher Blaise Pascal, who was preparing a defense of the Christian faith when he died in 1662. The evils wrought by Hitler and Stalin believe it. What happened in Libya on Tuesday suggests it still holds some truth.

Angered by a scurrilous video mocking the Prophet Muhammad, apparently filmed with the support of right-wing Christians, Libyan Muslims attacked the U.S. consulate in Benghazi. Among them, and perhaps inciting them, was a squad of well-armed Islamist militants. Four U.S. diplomats were killed, among them Ambassador J. Christopher Stevens.

The protests quickly spread to Egypt, where the U.S. Embassy was overrun, but without casualties. On Wednesday the protests spread to Yemen, Tunisia, Iraq and Iran. The Quran, while not explicitly forbidding visual depictions of Muhammad, makes it clear that his name and image are to be honored. Some supplemental teachings are stricter, and in some Muslim sects, the faithful rise up in what they see as righteous anger.

Which is, of course, what some Christianist sects in this country do in opposition to the Muslim faith. Christians and Muslims have been killing each other in God's name since the 7th century. Reason does not signify.

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton asked an important question Wednesday morning in eulogizing Mr. Stevens: "Today, many Americans are asking -- indeed, I asked myself -- how could this happen? How could this happen in a country we helped liberate, in a city we helped save from destruction? This question reflects just how complicated and, at times, how confounding the world can be."

Many people don't do well with complicated and

John Stossel: Discussing all of the Clinton myths

JOHN STOSSEL
 Columnist

Bill Clinton got rave reviews for his speech at the Democratic National Convention. My wife said: "Clinton was great. He made Republicans look like liars and losers." Clinton, now a sainted elder statesman, also gets credit for the booming economy of the '90s.

Today, he appears in an Obama commercial -- in full "I feel your pain" mode -- saying that Obama "has a plan to rebuild America from the ground up."

When someone claims anyone can rebuild a society from the ground up, I say he is arrogant and delusional.

Clinton then tries to scare viewers by telling them that Republicans want to "go back to deregulation. That's what got us in trouble in the first place."

Ah, the progressives' George W. Bush deregulation myth: Bush's anti-regulation crusade caused our problems. This is a lie that seems true because of constant media repetition. In fact, Bush talked deregulation but vastly increased the regulatory state. He hired an astounding 90,000 new regulators. Under Democrats and Republicans, regulation grows.

A rare exception was repeal of the Glass-Steagall Act, which forbade financial companies from offering both commercial and investment banking services. You know who signed that?

Bill Clinton.

He was right to sign it (backed by Treasury Secretary and later Obama adviser Larry Summers) because outlawing full-service banking put American banks at a competitive disadvantage.

Five years earlier, Clinton supported the Riegle-Neal Interstate Banking and Branching Efficiency Act, which finally legalized interstate branch banking. Federal and state laws that forbade intrastate and interstate branch banking -- that is, diversification -- were one of the worst features of American finance. They made banks highly vulnerable to failure of specific business centers and farm communities, helping to make the Great Depression what it was. (By contrast, Canada had no such restrictions and no bank failures.)

So Clinton -- not Bush -- was the bank deregulator. Were those acts responsible for the financial debacle of 2008? No. Bear Stearns, Lehman, etc. were not affiliated with commercial banks.

Banks got in trouble because they filled their portfolios with securities built on shaky mortgages. And here is where Clinton (SET ITAL) does (END ITAL) bear responsibility.

His secretary of housing and urban development was Andrew Cuomo, now governor of New York and apparent presidential wannabe.

Cuomo, as Wayne Barrett wrote in the Village Voice in 2008, made a series of decisions that "helped plunge Fannie and Freddie into the sub-prime markets without putting in place the means to monitor their increasingly risky investments. He turned the Federal Housing Administration mortgage program into a sweetheart lender with sky-high loan ceilings and no money down, and he legalized what a federal judge has branded 'kickbacks' to brokers that have fueled the sale of overpriced and unsupportable loans. Three to four million families are now facing foreclosure, and Cuomo is one of the reasons why."

Barrett goes on: "Perhaps the only domestic issue George Bush and Bill Clinton were in complete agreement about was maximizing home ownership, each trying to lay claim to a record percentage of hom-owners, and both describing their efforts as a boon to blacks and Hispanics. HUD, Fannie and Freddie were their instruments, and as is now apparent, the more unsavory the means, the greater the growth. ... (Cuomo) did more to set these forces of unregulated expansion in motion than any other secretary and then boasted about it, presenting his initiatives as crusades for racial and social justice."

Naturally, when Clinton's HUD secretary became New York's attorney general, he vowed to prosecute unscrupulous lenders. I'm waiting for him to prosecute himself.

President Clinton happily takes credit for reducing America's budget deficit and presiding over a period of strong economic growth. But this happened not because of wise leadership. Clinton had the good fortune to reside in the White House just as the high-tech information revolution kicked in and a Republican Congress stopped him from spending what Democrats wanted to spend.

Progressives say that his increase of the top tax bracket did not prevent economic growth, but it never occurs to them that growth would have been even stronger had government not confiscated that money.

Sadly, most who watched St. Bill at the DNC will never know the truth.

confounding issues. The ill-educated youth of some Islamic nations prefer simple fervor. Many of the supposedly better-educated citizens in the Western world, who have less excuse, prefer simple answers, too, even if they're wrong.

What is inexcusable, however, is that a sophisticated, well-educated man like Mitt Romney -- a Mormon who has known the ugliness of religious intolerance -- would try to politicize this tragedy. His vile charge Tuesday night that the Obama administration had "sympathized" with the embassy attackers was not only untrue, but violated the cardinal rule that in times of foreign strife, politics stops at the water's edge.

If an incident like the Benghazi attack can so befuddle him, what would he do in a larger crisis?

In days to come, President Barack Obama, who vowed Tuesday to work with the Libyan government to bring "justice" to those responsible for the deaths of Stevens and his colleagues, will have some complicated, perhaps confounding, decisions to make.

The United States long has reserved the right to levy a "proportional response" to attacks on U.S. interests. With the advent of unmanned attack planes, Obama has options that were unavailable to his 43 predecessors. He doesn't have to send Marines to the shores of Tripoli.

When someone in Libya identifies the killers -- and someone will -- Obama will have to decide whether to kill them or let Libya deal with them. The first option will play better at home; the second may be better for long-term U.S. interests in the Arab world. Actions have consequences. So do elections.

Who are the workers dropping their job search?

TERRY SAVAGE
Creator's Syndicate

The numbers don't sound so bad -- and may even sound like they're improving. A drop in the unemployment rate from 8.3 percent to 8.1 percent appears to be moving in the right direction.

But the decline in the headline unemployment rate came despite a paltry 96,000 new jobs being created last month. The rate fell because 368,000 more people dropped out of the workforce and stopped looking for jobs.

The workforce "participation rate," which peaked at 67 percent in 2000, has now dropped to 63.5 percent. It seems like a small percentage decline, but that number represents millions of people who are unemployed, underemployed, or simply have given up finding work.

What do you do when you "give up" on finding work? That's what I'd like to write about today.

The jobs story will be the crux of the political debates for the next 60 days. But for just a moment, aside from politics, let's put the facts of this unemployment issue in perspective. Exactly who is bearing the brunt of this crisis? And if you are either unemployed, or underemployed, how should you be facing the future? And is there any hope for the future?

Who are the unemployed and discouraged?

— Women of a 'certain' age. Women joined the workforce in increasing numbers in the 1970s -- and not just working "until they were married," as had been the case with their mothers. Most expected to work their entire lives -- at least until they were ready to collect Social Security. The most shocking experience for a woman, especially a woman alone, is to find herself unemployed in her late 50s -- years from being able to collect Medicare and Social Security benefits.

Some were executives, many were executive assistants, and others worked in now-shuttered plants and factories. They bought homes or condos that have dropped in value and are losing them to foreclosure as their paychecks disappear.

Solution? We need churches or civic groups to recognize this quiet, but devastating community issue. We can't have a generation of bag ladies. Creativity will be the key -- perhaps matching those who might lose their homes with potential "renters" of rooms in those homes. Many young mothers are looking for home child care, while older women are looking for a place to live and a way to contribute.

— College grads, just starting out. By now, it's well understood that we have a generation that took on student loan debt to invest in their future job marketability. Now they have the debt -- but no job openings. They're forced to live at home -- if their parents still have a home.

Solution? Do NOT go on to grad school and pile up more debt -- even though the education is valuable. Volunteer. Get involved with the community -- and business leaders might recognize an additional dimension to your worth.

— Mid-career executives with experience and skills. So many of these unemployed or underemployed people had started on a great career track -- and ran into a dead-end as they lost jobs, not because of poor performance, but simply for budget reasons. They are parents of small children, wondering how they will make the mortgage payments and put food on the table. They can't afford anything -- least of all to give up hope.

Solution? I've been hearing about "resume deflation" -- the act of rewriting your resume to eliminate mention of advanced degrees or previous management responsibility. Thus, if a job opening does appear, the potential employer will not "fear" that you'll leave when the economy improves.

These are by no means the only groups that are unemployed. There are literally millions of heartbreaking stories in America today.

Ongoing scams
The Pampa Police Department wants to caution you about ongoing scams here in Pampa. Criminals scam in anyway there is communication such as, phone, mail, e-mail, and yes texting. They claim to be with different legit company to try to gain your trust. There are a few scams that the Police Department keeps seeing here in Pampa.

One of the main scams we keep seeing is the check cashing scheme, where a scammer will claim to be with a legit company and will send a check to you; unknown to the victim, the check or money order is fraudulent. The scammer will then ask the victim to cash the check and keep part of the money but send the rest through WESTERN UNION or MoneyGram to them. I want to STRONGLY discourage anyone sending money through Western Union or MoneyGram unless you know the person accepting the money Personally.

We have also been getting calls of scammers calling and "phishing" for information. For an example; the scammers will call and say they are with a well know company or government agency such as Medicare. They will typically have your address, phone number and full name. They will then ask you to confirm your bank account number or social security number. Citizens have also said that when they have refused the caller the information they requested the scammer will get very agitated and threaten the citizens and in most cases the scammer would hang up on the citizen.

Again, I strongly encourage citizens not to give personal information over the phone. Thankfully the citizens we have spoken to have not fallen in the trap of these scammers.

Remember, YOU ARE the number one person who can stop the criminals from scamming you!

If you have any questions on whether something is a scam please contact the Pampa Police Department at 806-669-5700 ext. 259

The Bookworm: The book 'Hidden America' sheds light 'It gets darker now, which means you reach for the lights earlier, too.'

TERRI SCHLICHENMEYER
THE BOOKWORM

"Hidden America" by Jeanne Marie Laskas c.2012, Putnam $26.95 / $28.50 Canada 318 pages

It gets dark earlier now, which means you reach for the lights earlier, too.

One click and you can see to read, cook, find your keys or avoid tripping over the cat. Chances are, in fact, turning on the lights is so automatic, you can find the switch without even thinking about it.

But think about this: who makes sure you have lights in the first place? The energy company? Think again, then read the new book "Hidden America" by Jeanne Marie Laskas.

Not-quite-standing in a mine shaft 500 feet beneath Ohio, Jeanne Marie Laskas had two epiphanies.

First, "Dude, this is ridiculous." Then: her daily life was dependent on people like those miners. Without them — and their work in a $27 billion industry — there would be no electricity. How come she didn't know that?

Humiliated, she decided to go in search of the people who make sure we have food, that it gets to the supermarket near our homes, and that our scraps disappear when we're done. These are people, she says, "who, were they to walk off the job tomorrow, would bring life as we know it to a halt."

Coal, for instance, gives America half its electricity and is the "fastest-growing energy source on the planet..." But getting it isn't for the faint of heart: miners often spend half their lives in darkness, sometimes in a constant-crouch position. Yes, they make good money, but the always-shifting, groaning planet makes the paycheck dearer.

"Most of the people who pick our food have brown skin," Laskas learned at a migrant camp in Maine. Once upon a time, locals did the work, but not any more.

In New Jersey, Laskas spent time in a frantic air traffic control room, where she found a lack of technology and a feud between government and unions. She followed cowboys in Texas and learned that ranching has gone high-tech and that "designer" bulls make our meals tastier. She bought a gun in Arizona, went cross-country with an African-American female semi-driver, and took a ride in a Bomag over mounds of trash in California.

And in Alaska, while living on a man-made "island" in negative-38 degree weather, Laskas learned that total isolation is never total and that pre-cognition can bring shivers quicker than can ice...

Oh, how I loved this book!

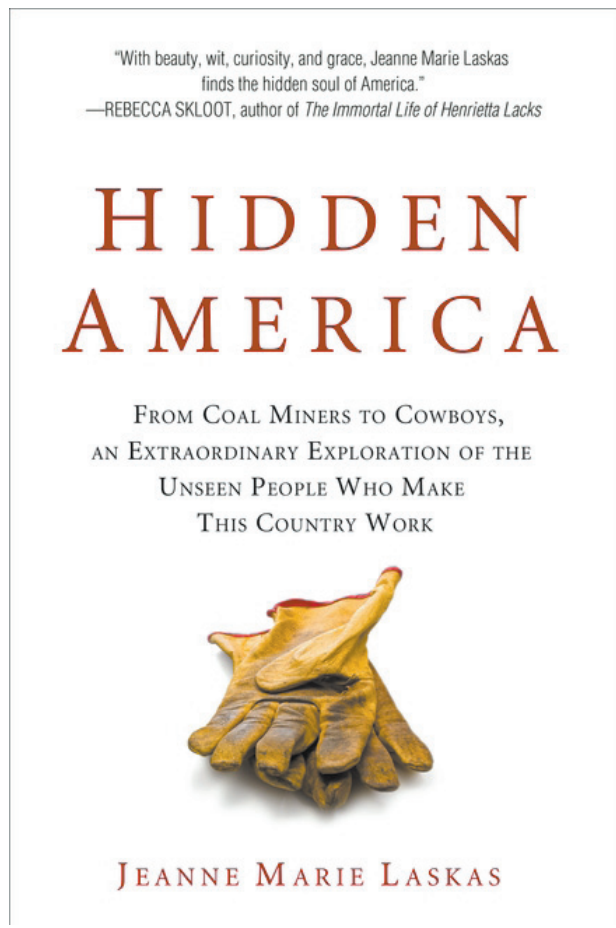

I loved it because author Jeanne Marie Laskas sees things differently, with perfect curiosity. I loved it because she got dirty while she was learning about the people she chose to follow, and because she seemed to ultimately care deeply about them. I loved it because it taught me something important while it made me laugh.

But there was one thing that made me scratch my head: cheerleaders.

Seriously? They "make this country work"?

Ohhhkay...

Still, I think that if you've ever used electricity, drank from a plastic bottle, eaten, dressed, flown, shopped or, yeah, even watched the NFL, this book needs to be at the top of your to-read pile. For you, "Hidden America" sheds a lot of light.

ATTACK THE DAY

by Aaron Hernandez at midfield — giving the Harvesters the ball back.

Despite the good field position, a holding penalty killed the drive and momentum and the Harvesters were forced to punt the ball.

The Demons drove down the field and had to settle for a field goal after the Harvester defense shut them down at the 25-yard line. This resulted in the half time score standing at Dumas 10, Pampa 9.

The halftime activities first featured the Harvester Band entertaining the Pampa contingent that drove to the game, then turned into the Dumas homecoming show.

The Demons came out in the second half with renewed purpose and once again plagued the Harvesters with big plays on offense and solid defense.

The Demons scored 27 straight points on long runs and took advantage of Harvester turnovers.

The scoreboard read at the end read Dumas 30 - Pampa 9.

Chris Rivera and the Harvester defense rose to the occasion and stuffed the rolling Dumas offense. They held their ground and after a 25 yard completion to Ryan Powell, Smith again scored for the Harvesters, making the score Pampa 16 and Dumas 37.

This would be the final scoring and the Harvesters are 0-3 on the season.

However they will now play teams that are in their own classification, and most importantly, three of their next four games will be played at Harvester field.

Friday, the Pampa will host Dumas in the Harvesters Homecoming game at 7:30 p.m. with the gates opening at 6:30. p.m.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Sept. 19, 2012:
This year you will be encouraged to greet change with greater ease. If you fight progress, you could encounter your share of bumps along the way. Learn to let go, and head down the path that greets you with energy and optimism. If you are single, you meet more people than usual. You will fall into an intense tango with many of your potential sweeties. Take your time deciding. If you are attached, nothing seems to be a "maybe" or an "if." You will find that everything is either black or white. Hopefully, you will be on the same page. SCORPIO is nothing if not deep and mysterious.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Deal with others directly. You might not like what comes down the path, but know that you can transform a situation. Emotions expressed could help everyone involved. Strong energy directs you. Push as hard as possible to get a project done. Tonight: Listen to a suggestion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Others clearly command the stage. You will be very happy if you do not try to interfere with this trend. An unexpected change encourages you to let go of what has not been working. You have tinkered to get this situation more in sync, to no avail. Tonight: Just do not be alone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ You want to mix in a happier or more social part of your life. You could be jolted by what heads your way. The unexpected forces you to transform the way you deal with a key person. As a result, you might decide to open up. Tonight: Handle a personal matter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Your creativity opens you up to a new possibility when faced with a difficult and unpredictable situation. You feel good and empowered. Share some of your more intense feelings. Indirectly, you mobilize others by revealing more. Tonight: Paint the town red.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ A sudden insight or new information heads your way. You might want to slow down, as this novel perspective could change a lot in your daily life. For a while, make fewer commitments until you review certain facets of your life. A close friend or associate could become insecure. Do your best to let this person know your feelings.

Tonight: Mosey on home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You could be seeing a situation very differently from in the past. You'll discover that a person you counted on no longer is predictable. He or she has been more uptight and now chooses more off-the-wall ideas and actions. Tonight: Visit with a pal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Be aware of how much you offer. Sometimes you give away too much of yourself. The unexpected impacts your daily life. You can work with sudden change, yet something within you seems to be building. Could it have to do with a loved one? Tonight: Treat yourself well.

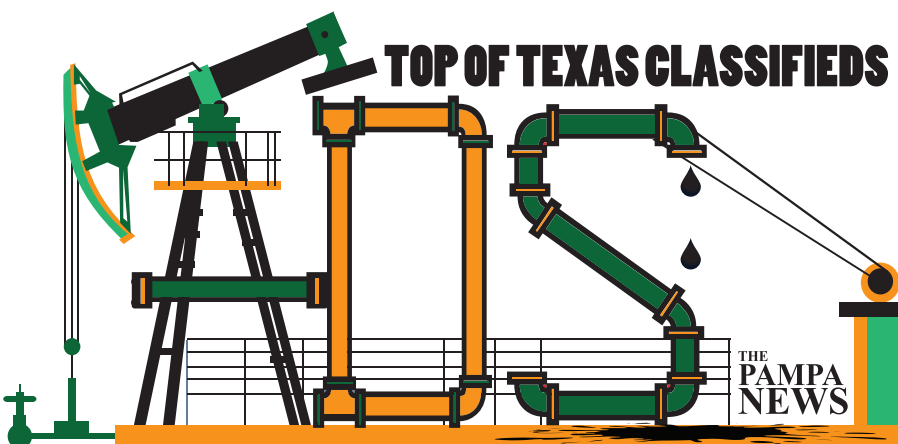

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Be more upbeat, and work with a child or very lively friend. Sudden ideas come from out of left field. Discuss them before you act. Impulsiveness plays a strong role in what goes on. Tonight: Ask for what you want with the expectation of receiving it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ You might want to step back from a sudden change involving your domestic or personal life. You could be wondering what might be best to do. Take a hard look at your finances before making a decision. Above all else, do not rush into anything. Tonight: Chill out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ An unexpected situation could create a lot of tension. What you can be sure of is that stability is not an option, especially in your home or personal life. Express your feelings to someone who seems to understand you. Tonight: Where your friends are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You might want to take a break from a demanding situation. Unfortunately, that option is not on the table right now. A heart-to-heart talk could shock you and prevent you from moving forward with a key situation. Learn to say "no" more often. Tonight: Let the fun begin.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ If you feel uncomfortable by what you are hearing, you might want to pull back some and make your own decisions. In fact, you really might not want any more input at this moment. You could feel at odds with certain events happening around you. Tonight: Where you can let your mind wander.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I thought "Arlene" was a close friend until I heard that she and another "friend" had arranged a trip to the theater. Several other women were also invited, but I wasn't. I should point out that when Arlene and I attended shows in the past, I was always the one buying the tickets.

I paid for her golf dues last October because she was a little short, and she still owes me about $1,000. I provided her transportation to the golf club for the last four years because she doesn't have a car. Arlene and I have shared many shopping trips together, and I have always picked up the tab for lunch.

What's your take on this? I'm crushed! — LEFT OUT

DEAR LEFT OUT: If this was a one-time event, then it's time to straighten up and "uncrush" yourself because, regardless of how much money you have invested in your relationship with Arlene, you don't "own" her. My take on this is that in your zeal to be a good friend you have gone overboard.

If being excluded is an ongoing problem, then you and this woman are not as close as you assumed, or she has decided to take a breather. In that case, my advice is to work out a payment plan for the golf dues you are owed and widen your circle of friends.

DEAR ABBY: We have a large condo in Florida and are thrilled to have family and friends visit. I keep a small calendar of our appointments, events, etc. in the corner of my kitchen. A few of our visitors have made it their business to read the calendar and ask me who and what these events are all about.

My husband and I have been having some marriage problems and are seeing a therapist. One relative noticed these appointments and wanted to know "what that was all about"! Abby, isn't it rude to read someone's personal calendar and ask these kinds of questions? I must leave the calendar where it can be seen or my husband doesn't remember medical appointments, etc. —

CALENDAR GIRL

DEAR CALENDAR GIRL: Of course it's rude to read someone's personal calendar. (It's called snooping.) Before the next houseguests come to visit, relocate the calendar to a private area. Then remind your husband about his appointments. That way he will know the schedule, and there will be nothing to arouse anyone's curiosity.

DEAR ABBY: Why can't bakeries slice English muffins and bagels completely through? Nobody eats either one without toasting them and slicing them first.

Along the same line: Why do loaves of bread have "ends"? Everybody throws them away and they are wasted. — MINA IN KELSO, WASH.

DEAR MINA: English

muffins aren't meant to be sliced. To prepare them at their best, they should be purchased whole and the perimeter perforated using a fork so the muffin can then be torn apart before toasting. This leaves lots of irregular nooks and crannies so when they are buttered, they are even more succulent.

As to the ends of bread loaves (called "heels"), not everyone throws them away, just as not everyone cuts the crusts off. Some people enjoy the heels because they make for a chewier sandwich.

BANANAGRAMS!

For each bunch below, rearrange the letters to form two intersecting words that fit into the corresponding grid.

BANANAGRAMS!

Change one letter in the top word to one of the letters that appears in the bottom word, then rearrange the tiles to form a new common word. Do the same with each new word until you arrive at the bottom word. For example, one path from BARK to PLUM is BARK, MARK, RAMP, RUMP, PLUM.
