Jobs report gives Obama much-needed boost

By KEN THOMAS
 and NEDRA PICKLER
 Associated Press

FAIRFAX, Va. — President Barack Obama celebrated much-needed good economic news Friday as the unemployment rate dropped to its lowest level since he took office. "We are moving forward again," he boasted.

Republican rival Mitt Romney retorted that the president still hasn't done enough to help millions of people who are out of work.

The figures announced by the Labor

Department — 114,000 new jobs last month to bring the unemployment rate to 7.8 percent — gave Obama fresh evidence on the heels of his disappointing debate performance to argue that his economic policies are working. Romney countered that the country can't afford four more years of the president's leadership and argued that the rate is low in part because some people have quit looking for work.

Barack Obama

Mitt Romney

"These are tough times in this community," Romney told a rally outside a construction equipment store after meeting with coal miners who have been laid off. "We're going to bring back jobs and bring back America."

Obama responded that Romney wants to roll back policies that are repairing the economic damage.

"Today's news certainly is not an excuse to try to talk down the economy to score a few political points," Obama said. "It is a reminder that the country has come too far to turn back now."

The unemployment rate fell from 8.1 percent in August, matching its level in January 2009 when Obama became president. There is one more monthly unemployment report before Election Day, so Friday's numbers could leave a lasting impact on Americans who are already casting ballots in states that allow early voting.

Schools, PFD kick off Fire Prevention Month

By GAYDEN HAYS
ghays@thepampanews.com

The Pampa Fire Department and the Pampa Independent School District kicked off Fire Prevention Month with a school-wide presentation at Travis Elementary.

The PFD has held this educational event for more than 28 years, and the motto for the 2012 campaign is "Two Ways Out."

Due to the cold weather, Fire Marshal Mike "Big Mac" Ryan and the PFD were unable to demonstrate their equipment, which usually is highlighted by the firefighters climbing the ladder truck onto the roof of the school.

Along with the fire trucks, a "smoke" truck would have helped students experience the atmosphere that might occur during a home fire. However, if weather permits next week, all of the other PISD schools will be able to have these extra tools available.

"The program is to educate the children about fire prevention," said Ryan. "We want the kids to see and touch the fireman in full gear. They tend to be afraid of a fire fighter in his gear, kinda like a space alien."

Ryan highlighted five topics in his talk to the school. First, the PREVENTION cont. on page 3A

Patients warned of tainted steroids

MIKE STOBBE
 AP Medical Writer

NEW YORK — Health providers are scrambling to notify patients in nearly two dozen states that steroid shots they got for back pain may have been contaminated with a fungus tied to a deadly meningitis outbreak.

It became apparent Thursday that hundreds, and perhaps thousands, of people who got the shots between July and September could be at risk. Officials disclosed that a steroid suspected in the fungal meningitis outbreak in the South had made its way to 75 clinics in 23 states.

The Food and Drug Administration urged physicians not to use any products at all from the Massachusetts specialty pharmacy that supplied the steroid.

On Friday, the FDA released a list of about 30 medications distributed by the company, including other steroids, anesthetics and blood pressure medicine.

So far, 35 people in six states — Tennessee, Virginia, Maryland, Florida, North Carolina and Indiana — have contracted fungal meningitis, and five of them have died, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. All received steroid shots for back pain, a highly common treatment.

It is not clear how many patients received tainted injections, or even whether everyone who got one will get sick. The time from infection to onset of symptoms is anywhere from a few days to a month, so the number of people stricken could rise.

The pharmacy involved, the New England Compounding Center of Framingham, Mass., has recalled three lots consisting of a total of 17,676 single-dose vials of the steroid, preservative-free methylprednisolone acetate, Massachusetts health officials said.

Transitioning from summer to winter

By TIMOTHY P. HOSWARE
thosware@thepampanews.com

The chilly weather that hit earlier this week and is continuing through the weekend is a reminder that winter is coming sooner than we think.

Every year in late September and early October the Pampa Public Works Department goes through a "transitional season" to wrap up for the summer and get ready for the winter, said Director Donny Hooper.

"Summer is a busy time for Public Works with road repairs and mowing, but as the season starts to change we are now getting ready for winter," he said. "We now have to get ready for snow removal."

Hooper said his employees are doing their last of the moving and weed eating.

With a staff of around 16 employees, the department maintains 42 parks with 110 pieces of playground equipment, 130 picnic tables, 58 grills, and more than a dozen covered shelters and sprinkler systems. PUBLIC WORKS cont. on page 3A

He said they are now in the mode of getting snow-removal equipment ready for winter.

"We are making sure the antifreeze levels are set and everything is ready for the long haul," he said.

Hooper said snow falls are usually brief and only hamper traffic for a day because his crews are out the night before plowing slow.

First the roads are cleared so traffic can move, then the piles of snow are removed from the streets, he said.

Hooper said the city is fortunate to Ed Turner supervising the streets and parks crews, because before he started his job with the city in 1995, Turner was a weather forecast for the U.S. Navy.

"He is usually pretty accurate with his predictions," Hooper said. "We rely on his knowledge."

Along with taking care of the parks and plowing snow, the Public Works Department maintains 150 miles of roads, 90 miles of alleys and 4,000 street signs in the city.

Hooper said he understands how someone can be frustrated if they have called a couple of times to get a pot hole fixed, but sometimes there are four of five other pot holes already on the list that need to be filled.

And while his department often hears complaints from residents, over the summer he got a dozen or so people who either called or sent cards to praise the department.

"I always show them (the staff) the cards so they know they are appreciated," he said. "We have an awesome staff who take pride in their work."

The department has a 24/7 phone line, called the Action Line, for residents to call in work orders.

The number is 669-5888.

on having two ways out of your home, each family having a plan or routes of escape incase on an emergency or fire.

Second, the "Stop, Drop, and Roll" technique was demonstrated, and several student were called upon to demonstrate.

Third, Ryan explained the dangers of unsupervised cooking, and made the audience promise to have an adult present.

Next the slogan of don't play with matches was explained, and lastly the importance of the smoke detector in a families home.

"I love the kids, they make this job easier, and many times after I talk to the schools, many parents I see tell me their kids keep on them about keeping batteries in the smoke detector," Ryan said.

All students were allowed to shake hands and "high five" with the firefighters.

After the presentation,

Pam Been, secretary at Travis, commented about the event: "It was scary for the kindergartners, but it teaches the children about correct procedures. I was sorry the weather was cool, and the students missed out on the smoke truck and fire engines."

Next week, Ryan and the PFD will be at other PISD schools and daycare centers around around town.

For more information, call PFD at 669-5800 or the school district at 669-4700.

Steroids

Investigators this week found contamination in a sealed vial of the steroid at the company, FDA officials said. Tests are under way to determine if it is the same fungus blamed in the outbreak.

Several hundred of the vials, maybe more, have been returned unused, but many others were used. At one clinic in Evansville, Ind., more than 500 patients received shots from the suspect lots, officials said. At two clinics in Tennessee, more than 900 patients — perhaps many more — did.

The company has shut down operations and said it is working with regulators to identify the source of the infection.

"Out of an abundance of caution, we advise all health care practitioners not to use any product" from the company, said Ilisa Bernstein, director of compliance for the FDA's Center for Drug Evaluation and Research.

Massachusetts health officials said the company has a pending complaint against it from this year, related to the potency of a medication used in eye surgery. It appears unrelated to the current outbreak, said Dr. Madeleine Biondolillo, director of the state's Bureau of Healthcare Safety.

Biondolillo said two prior complaints, including one for sterile compounding procedures, were both resolved in 2006. The pharmacy was inspected and cleared by the state Department of Public Health last year after relocating its operations on the same site, she said.

The first known case in the meningitis outbreak was diagnosed about two weeks ago in Tennessee, which still has by far the most cases with 25, including three deaths. Deaths have also been reported in Virginia and Maryland.

Meningitis is an inflammation of the lining of the brain and spinal cord. Symptoms include severe headache, nausea, dizziness and fever.

The type of fungal meningitis involved is not contagious like the more common forms. It is caused by a fungus that's widespread but very rarely causes illness. It is treated with high-dose antifungal medications, usually given intravenously in a hospital.

Robert Cherry, 71, a patient who received a steroid shot at a clinic in Berlin, Md., about a month ago, went back Thursday morning after hearing it had received some of the tainted medicine.

"So far, I haven't had any symptoms... but I just wanted to double check with them," Cherry said. "They told me to check my temperature and if I have any symptoms, I should report straight to the emergency room, and that's what I'll do."

The company that supplied the steroid is what is known as a compounding pharmacy. These pharmacies custom-mix solutions, creams and other medications in doses or in forms that generally aren't commercially available.

Other compounding pharmacies have been blamed in recent years for serious and sometimes deadly outbreaks caused by contaminated medicines.

Two people were blinded in Washington, D.C., in 2005. Three died in Virginia in 2006 and three more in Oregon the following year. Twenty-one polo horses died in Florida in 2009. Earlier this year, 33 people in seven states developed fungal eye infections.

Compounding pharmacies are not regulated as closely as drug manufacturers, and their products are not subject to FDA approval. A national shortage of many drugs has forced doctors to seek custom-made alternatives from compounding pharmacies.

New England Compounding Center said in a statement Thursday that despite the FDA warning, "there is no indication of any potential issues with other products." It called the deaths and illnesses tragic and added: "The thoughts and prayers of everyone employed by NECC are with those who have been affected."

AP writers Travis Loller in Nashville, Jay Lindsay in Boston, Randall Chase in Wilmington, Del., and AP chief medical writer Marilyn Marchione in Milwaukee contributed to this story.

El Paso man apparently kills himself during standoff

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A 25-year-old man has apparently killed himself during a five-hour standoff with authorities in El Paso County that started when he opened fire on a bail bondsman and three deputies trying to serve him with a criminal warrant.

Officials say Rafael Lopez barricaded himself inside his home after allegedly opening fire on the officials Thursday afternoon.

Sheriff's office spokesman Chris Acosta tells the El Paso Times (<http://bit.ly/Pf3v31>) that after the first shots were fired from the home, a woman and several children left the home. About an hour later, shots were again fired from inside the home at officials.

Family members say Lopez was being served with a warrant about violating probation.

Several blocks in the area were closed during the standoff.

Obama, Romney mix humor into rallies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Have you heard the one about the kid who thinks President Barack Obama's job is to "approve this message?" Or the time Mitt Romney compared another presidential run to giving birth? At presidential fundraisers and rallies, the jokes are easy applause lines for Obama and Romney, a way to entertain supporters before the talk turns to more weighty subjects like Medicare, taxes and foreign policy.

You certainly won't hear the sound of a snare drum or Obama or Romney telling their fans, "I'm here all night, folks! Try the veal." But during tough economic times, the punch lines lighten the mood and let the candidates poke fun at themselves, their opponents and the odd life of motorcades, basement loading docks and countless handshakes that come with running for president.

Obama often shows a self-deprecating sense of humor on the campaign trail, pointing to his "funny name," the gray hairs that have sprouted on his head and his personal qualities that often find their way into editorial cartoons.

"I confess, I am excited to see Mickey," Obama said at Florida's Walt Disney World last January. "It's always nice to meet a world leader who has bigger ears than me."

Romney tends to take the dead-pan route, playing the role of the buttoned-up former business executive who can deliver a funny one-liner while keeping a straight face. One of the former Massachusetts governor's favorites combines Bill Clinton's comment about his youthful marijuana use with Romney's extensive private-sector pedigree: "I only spent four years as governor. I didn't inhale," Romney says.

Obama's latest punch line involves Big Bird, Elmo and the fuzzy characters of the long-running children's show "Sesame Street."

During Wednesday's first presidential debate, Romney said he would cut the federal subsidy for PBS because the nation couldn't afford it. Even though "I love Big Bird," Romney said.

The next day, Obama accused Romney of being unwilling to uphold tough regulations on Wall Street but being willing to crack down on Big Bird. "He'll get rid of regulations on Wall Street but he's going to crack down on Sesame Street," Obama said in Madison, Wis. "Thank goodness somebody is finally cracking down on Big Bird... Elmo has got to watch out."

A good sense of humor has served presidential candidates well in the past. Richard Nixon appeared on "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" in 1968, joining in on a gag called "Sock it to Me." Ronald Reagan deflected attention about his age in a 1984 debate by vowing not to exploit 56-year-old Walter Mondale's "youth and inexperience." And Clinton traded jokes with late night host Arsenio Hall in 1992 (and wore sunglasses while pumping out a rendition of "Heartbreak Hotel" on his saxophone).

Since July, Obama has been telling supporters a story about a 4-year-old boy named Sammy, whose parents met campaign manager Jim Messina on the presidential trail. The couple, as the story goes, points to a picture of Obama and ask the boy what the president does.

"And the boy thinks for a second and he says, 'He approves this message,'" Obama tells supporters over and over. "So that's what I do. I approve this message."

Whenever Obama invokes Romney at a rally, it typically brings a smattering of boos. Obama's standard response is: "Don't boo — vote," a line that brings laughter and applause. And he likes to refer to his health care reform law by the name "Obamacare," a word promoted by Republicans. "I don't mind the term because I do care, that's why we passed the bill," Obama says.

Become a father figure

PJH seeking male volunteers for mentoring program

On Tuesday night, Pampa Junior High School held its first meeting for WATCH D.O.G.S. with more than 40 people attending.

The meeting was attended by families, school district staff and civic leaders.

WATCH D.O.G.S. (Dads of Great Students) is a father-involvement program created by the National Center for Fathering.

According to its website, <http://fathers.com/>, WATCH D.O.G.S. is comprised of fathers, grandfathers, step-fathers, uncles, and other father figures who volunteer to serve at least one day a year in a variety of school activities as assigned by the school principal or other administrator.

Dr. David Young, the new superintendent of the Pampa Independent School District, was involved in the program at Waco Midway School District and is a strong supporter of the program.

Locally, PJH is seeking male volunteers to greet students with hand shakes, smiles high fives at arrival and dismissal times and through lunch time.

Organizers are asking for more fathers, father figures and adult community members to volunteer invest whatever time they have to give.

Lending support to this inaugural event, the Pampa Lions Club cooked hamburgers and hot dogs for all attendees. Other supporters include REMAX, Bill Allison Auto Sales, Happy State Bank, Wheel Times and Pampa Physical Therapy.

The event would not have been possible without donations from these sponsors.

Pampa Youth and Community Center provided fun activities for the kids as well.

Now that the seed has been planted, we hope to see this program grow and prosper.

Getting flu shots is important for everyone

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flu season is officially upon us and, while the highest incidence of the disease is usually seen during the winter months, now is the time to get vaccinated. Once you have the virus a vaccination won't do any good and there are no magic pills to make it go away.

A vaccination is particularly important for those in one of the high-risk groups: young children, pregnant women, those with chronic health conditions such as asthma, diabetes or heart and lung disease, and people ages 65 and older.

For those people getting the flu is more than just an inconvenience, it is often a life-threatening event. It does not have to be.

We should say that the flu vaccine is not perfect. It includes protection against the three most common and expected forms of the flu this season. It is always possible that another form of the virus — there are countless mutations — will be the most prevalent. This is not likely, but you should know that getting vaccinated is not a 100 percent safeguard.

It is still vital for people to get flu shots. One of the reasons we have had no serious flu outbreaks over the last decade or so is because people are getting vaccinated, thus the disease has a much more difficult path to spreading.

For that reason alone, flu vaccinations are more than simply a task that you do for yourself. Those who do not get vaccinated become ill and spread it to others who have not been protected. Ultimately, some of these people will have to be treated at taxpayer expense, which costs much more than taxpayers footing the bill for a $10 vaccination shot.

We know that some have fears about taking vaccinations. We regret that in recent years rumors and unfounded notions have arisen about getting vaccinated. None of those are true. It has not helped that some of these ideas have actually been spread by our elected officials who should know better.

You might feel a bit puny for a few days following a flu shot and your arm might be sore for the same amount of time, but otherwise there is absolutely no harm from getting a vaccination. Don't let yourself be fooled by wild Internet rumors.

Flu shots are readily available around town from the Marshall-Harrison County Health Clinic at 805 Lindsey Drive, just behind Good Shepherd Hospital-Marshall, to virtually every pharmacy in town. At the clinic the shots cost $20 if you have insurance and $10 if you do not. Check for the prices at the pharmacies so you don't experience "sticker shock."

Of course your regular doctor can also give you a flu shot.

Where you get the shot doesn't matter, that you get it is important to not just you, but many others of us also. Please act before the virus hits.

Debate shows challenge of our health care law

By PHIL GALEWITZ
Kaiser Health News

More than two and a half years after he signed the most far reaching health care legislation into law, President Barack Obama showed in his Wednesday debate with Mitt Romney that explaining the law is still no easy job.

"It's a great law and complex and complicated... but there is a continuing job to communicate how it works," Don Berwick, Obama's former administrator of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, said Thursday after a health briefing at the Newseum in Washington.

Berwick was not critical of the president's performance but said it was good there are still two more debates this month.

Berwick said Obama faces challenges to explain the law accurately when Romney repeatedly falsely asserts that they Affordable Care Act will take away $716 billion from Medicare beneficiaries. The law reduces the growth in funding to the program partly because the hospital industry agreed to cuts because they would have fewer uninsured patients after 2014. Other cuts would come from reducing funding to Medicare Advantage health plans. In a talk sponsored by the news organization Politico Pro, Berwick and other experts said accountable care organizations — new types of health systems that are promoted by the health law—would continue regardless of who wins the election. "Both sides endorse ACOs because it's a good policy," Berwick said. In an ACO, groups of hospitals and doctors are paid a set amount of money to care for patients and get to share in the savings if they can reduce costs while improving quality.

Berwick said the potential savings from ACOs — made possible because care will be better coordinated—will help make more funding available for education and other community needs.

Robert Laszewski, a health care consultant and former insurance executive, said both political parties embrace ACOs because they don't limit patient choice of doctors as HMOs do. But he cautioned ACOs may not save money quickly enough to control the rising cost of Medicare. "We don't have a lot of time," he said.

Karen Ignagni, president of America's Health Insurance Plans, also said she saw ACOs continuing no matter what happens politically. "I don't think

The candidates campaigned Friday on opposite ends of one of those early voting states, Virginia. Romney, in the state's far western coal country, said he wants to develop coal and other domestic resources to make the United States energy independent in eight years. Obama focused on recruiting women at an appearance in the Washington suburbs, where he argued that his health care policy has improved their health care choices.

Obama, seeking to rebound after Romney dominated their first debate Wednesday night, is accusing his rival of being dishonest about how his policies would affect the tax bills of middle-class families and the Medicare benefits of retirees. He told an audience at George Mason University that his rival "got an extreme makeover" in their face-off.

He also argued Romney can't bring change to the country when he's "willing to write off half the nation before you take office," a reference to Romney's disparaging remarks about the 47 percent of Americans who don't pay federal income taxes. Romney made the comments at a fundraiser in May that was secretly recorded, but the videotape did not emerge until last month. Romney went as far as he's ever gone to try to take back his words in an interview

Thursday night with Fox News.

"Well, clearly in a campaign, with hundreds if not thousands of speeches and question-and-answer sessions, now and then you're going to say something that doesn't come out right," Romney said Thursday. "In this case, I said something that's just completely wrong."

At the White House, senior adviser David Plouffe retorted: "I would take with a huge grain of salt trying to clean something up five months after you said it for the first time."

The next presidential debate is not until Oct. 16, a town hall-style meeting at Hofstra University in New York, giving both sides ample opportunities to blanket battleground states and raise money for the final weeks of television advertising.

Romney released three new ads on Friday, offering a window into his strategy for the coming week. One, called "Facts Are Clear," focuses on the national debt and accuses Obama of wasting trillions of dollars instead of creating jobs. A second spot features Greg Anthony, a former professional basketball player from Nevada, talking about his roots in the state and his switch from backing Obama in 2008 to Romney this year.

The third spot is titled, simply, "Ohio Jobs." It features Romney looking straight at the camera to talk to voters from the Midwestern battleground state seen as critical to his White House hopes. Obama also was campaigning in Ohio on Friday.

Obama's team countered with an ad targeting Romney's tax plan, accusing him of planning to raise taxes on the middle class. The ad was airing in seven battleground states.

Romney planned a rally later in the day in St. Petersburg, Fla., kicking off a weekend of campaigning in that state, the largest of the prized battlegrounds. Obama was holding a Friday rally in Cleveland before heading to California on Sunday for a fundraising spree that will include a concert in Los Angeles featuring Jon Bon Jovi, Katy Perry and Stevie Wonder.

Traveling aboard Air Force One, Plouffe foreshadowed an intense focus on Ohio in the coming weeks, where polls have shifted in Obama's favor. No Republican has won the presidency without winning Ohio, and Obama's campaign sees blocking Romney there as one of its best paths to victory.

Plouffe said the true measure of the first debate was whether it moved voters in the battleground states. Speaking of Romney, Plouffe said:

"Is he going to take the lead in Ohio? If he doesn't, he's not going to be president," he said.

Pickler reported from Washington. Associated Press writer Steve Peoples in Abingdon, Va., contributed to this report.

Humor

Romney always peppers his events with stories about successful entrepreneurs he's met across the country, from a North Carolina furniture maker to an oilman who helped pioneer the drilling of North Dakota's Bakken shale. Romney always gets laughs when he brings up the sandwich maker who founded Jimmy John's. "Jimmy John" Liautaud, Romney likes to remind his audiences, "graduated second in his class — second from the bottom" but still became a successful businessman.

The former Massachusetts governor occasionally surprises audiences with some "he said what?" moments. During a recent taping of ABC's "Live with Kelly and Michael," Romney held hands with his wife, Ann, and traded stories that don't usually come up in the world of heavily scripted modern presidential campaigns.

Ann Romney, who raised five sons with her husband, repeated a story she typically tells about how, after the 2008 campaign, she told Romney she never wanted him to run for president again. Romney said his response was: "You know, Ann, you say that after every pregnancy!"

But the interview got even more revealing. Mrs. Romney talked about a visit to the White House with Texas first lady Anita Perry that led to them opening a door and finding President George W. Bush in the middle of a massage. Bush later told an embarrassed Mrs. Romney, "I look pretty good, don't I?"

The fun continued when former New York Giants lineman Michael Strahan asked Mrs. Romney, "What does Mitt wear to bed?" prompting her husband to pipe in and say, "I hear the best answer is as little as possible."

Some comedians and satirists say the campaigns could benefit from more light moments. Actor and stand-up comedian Gilbert Gottfried said in an interview that, from his vantage point, the campaign trail humor has been "almost as bad as the banter that goes on with presenters at awards' shows."

Gottfried said he remembered being struck by how Republican Bob Dole showed his sense of humor in commercials and television appearances after his losing 1996 campaign — and how it could have helped him during the campaign.

"I remember watching him, thinking had he done that before, he may have won the election," Gottfried said. "Because during the election he came across as the grumpy old man who is chasing you away from his lawn."

Canadian outlasts Pampa, 26-16

The Pampa Harvesters battled the No. 4-ranked Canadian Wildcats down to the last possession, but came up short, losing 26-16 Friday night at Harvester Stadium.

"I was proud the way they played, the boys believe in themselves," said Pampa Harvester Head Coach Heath Parker on the team after the non-district game.

"They have gone through a lot of adversity this week, six players were down with the flu, but we still came to play ball tonight."

The Harvesters came out hot when senior Chris Rivera intercepted Canadian quarterback Ben Arbuckle on the fourth play of the game, which gave Pampa the ball first and 10 at the Canadian 36-yard line.

Pampa drove the ball, thanks to several completions by Harvester quarterback Ryan Smith, the biggest a 23-yard pass to Taylor Woods, giving Pampa first and 10 at the Canadian 4-yard line. After three straight running plays netted negative seven yards, the Harvesters settled for a 27-yard field goal by Adam Stovall, and with 7:33 left in the first quarter Pampa lead 3-0.

The next four possessions for both teams went nowhere with the defenses for both teams shutting down the offenses of the opposing team. However during this stretch of the game, the battle of field position favored the Wildcats, whose punter pinned the Harvesters offense inside their one-yard line with two consecutive punts. Because of that, the first quarter ended with Pampa on top 3-0, but Canadian on the Harvester's 30-yard line.

Canadian quarterback Ben Arbuckle passed to wideout Boston Hudson twice in the drive, for 11 and 15 yards, which left the Wildcats with a first down and goal at Pampas 6-yard line.

But the Harvester defense stood strong. Led by Rivera, Sheldon Reeve and Kyler Allen, Pampa made a goal-line stand, returning the ball to the Harvester offense.

But, after three straight running plays, the Pampa offense was unable to move the ball and, after a Harvester punt traveled 18 yards, Canadian took over at the 18-yard line of Pampa.

Three straight passes, with the final one a 7-yard touchdown pass from Arbuckle to Boston Hudson, lead to a Wildcat 7-3 lead with 6:08 to play in the first half.

The Pampa offense was unable to move the ball after the ensuing kickoff and was forced to punt. However, on Canadians first play from scrimmage, Taylor Woods picked off the errant throw from Wildcat quarterback Arbuckle, returning it to the Canadian 20-yard line.

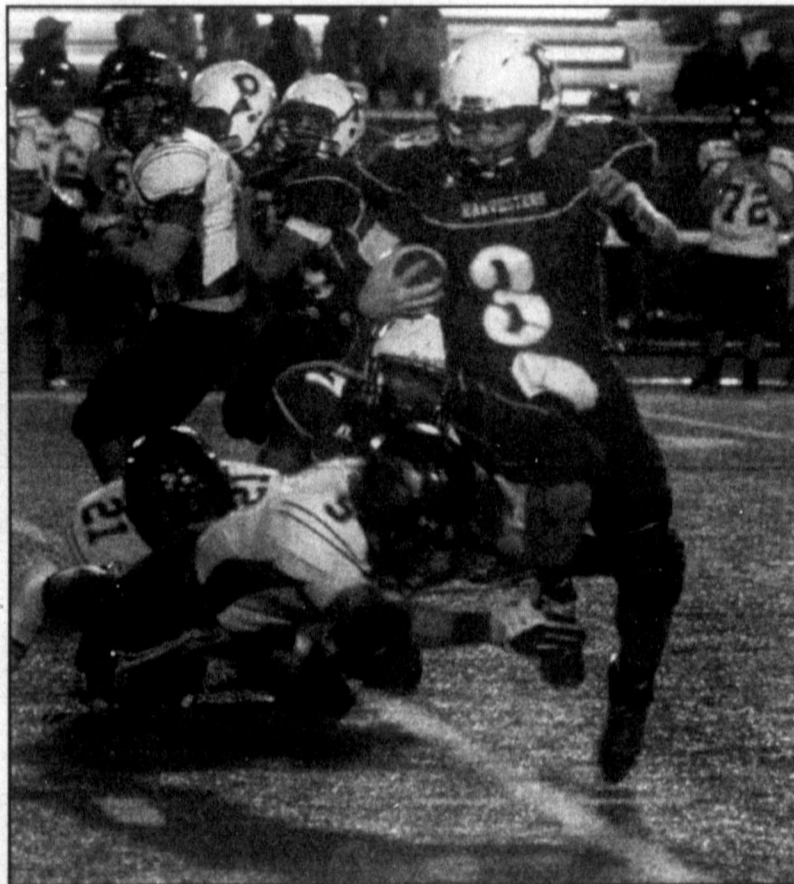

On third down and 10, Marco Trevino for Canadian intercepted Pampa quarterback Ryan Smith's pass and returned it 85 yards for a Wildcat touchdown. After a two-point conversion attempt failed, Canadian led 13-3.

It didn't take Pampa long to answer. Canadian kicked off to the Harvesters, and Tyler Powell returned the ball 10 yards to the 35-yard line. One play and 19 seconds later Smith ran 65 yards on a quarterback option play off the left side of the Harvester Line. Alan Stovall added the point after and the Harvesters moved closer, but still trailed the wildcats 13-10, which would hold up until half-time.

The second half saw both defenses not allowing the opposing team to move the ball until the last drive of the third quarter when Canadian drove 77 yards in seven plays, ending on a 16-yard pass from Arbuckle to freshmen wide receiver Chance Cook, and with the extra point, Canadian lead the Pampa Harvesters 20-10 at the end of the third quarter.

The next possession for the Harvesters resulted in a fumble, but Tyler Powell forced and recovered a Canadian fumble at the Pampa 23 four plays later.

The Pampa offense was not able to move the ball, so the Harvesters Miguel Blanco punted the ball and the Wildcats began a new drive at the Harvester 42. Four straight pass plays and a Harvester personal foul call later, and Canadian scored again when wide receiver/quarterback Hudson hit Brock Hedgecoke on an 8-yard quick slant, extending the lead to 26-10, Canadian, with 1:42 left in the fourth quarter.

Not to be counted out, the Harvesters drove straight down the field, assisted by a 27-yard pass from Smith to Powell, and a 21-yard run by Sammy Smith, and with 16 seconds left in the game, Pampa had cut Canadian's lead to 10 points.

Instead of trying a two-point conversion, Parker decided to kick the extra point, but it was no good.

Pampa continued to show life, and the ensuing kickoff, Ai intentionally kicked high. Ai was recovered at the Canadian 23-yard line. But quarterback Ryan Smith was sacked on the final play, with the game ended in a Harvester loss, which drops their record to 1-5 on the year.

"Obviously we don't want to come up short but this is a good Canadian team, we played a tough

The Canadian's high powered passing attack eventually won out as Canadian outscored the Harvesters 46-32 Thursday night. Thursday night the Pampa Junior High seventh grade A and B teams played host to the Dalhart Wolves. Before this game the Junior high teams had a combined record of 7-5. "I'm proud of the kids, they work hard, listen, and are coming together as a team," commented Coach Bret Bethke about the status of the teams at the midpoint of their season. The first game of the evening was the seventh grade B team, with outstanding play by Reece Parker, Brandon Brant, and Matthew Hill all scoring touchdowns in the 22-0 romp over the Wolves. Wide receiver Tyler Willet and Todd Fleetwood at quarterback added addition offense during the effort. The seventh grade A team didn't fare as well dropping behind early, and eventually losing 22-8. However outstanding players for the Harvesters offensively included wide receiver Justin Thomas and running back Keon Weeks. On the defensive side of the ball lineman Ronnie Garland and Jacobe Mills held the Dalhart offense at bay and linebacker Kade Parker added numerous tackles for Pampa. The next opponent for the Harvesters seventh graders will be next Thursday at Harvester Field vs. Perryton, the B team game will begin at 4 p.m., followed by the A teams kicking off their game 10 minutes later.

Dallas man condemned for wife, child's death loses appeal

HOUSTON (AP) — The conviction and death sentence of a Dallas man for fatally stabbing his estranged wife and drowning her 6-year-old daughter in a bathtub have been upheld by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Gary Green was sent to death row two years ago for the September 2009 slayings of Lovetta Armstead and her daughter, Jazzmen, at their home. Armstead was stabbed more than 25 times. One other child, a boy, was stabbed in the stomach. He survived.

Attorneys for the 41-year-old Green raised 46 points of error from his trial, including challenges to the sufficiency of the evidence against him, his confession and jury selection. The court this week rejected all of the claims.

Green could still pursue appeals in federal court. He does not have an execution date.

Wyo. tribble-naming contest begins

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Anybody who doesn't think this is the cutest little news story of the day must be a Klingon.

The American Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming is holding a "Name the Tribble" contest. The idea is to promote American Archives Month and show people that archives aren't just repositories of musty old documents — they can be home to cool stuff, too.

Such as a tribble, a small creature from the Star Trek television series. The American Heritage Center houses items donated by several celebrities including the late Forrest J. Ackerman had no ties to Wyoming but years ago donated many boxes of manuscripts, photographs, "sci-fi."

Think Pink, awareness and early detection key in defeating breast cancer

WASHINGTON -- October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month. From The Peninsula Hotel in Hong Kong to the Empire State Building, national monuments will be lit in pink to raise awareness.

Why is that necessary? Surely everyone is aware of breast cancer. We do it because one in eight women in the US will be diagnosed with breast cancer in their lifetimes.

Kay Bailey Hutchison

We do it because the key to beating breast cancer is early detection. We do it because breast cancer is the second-most diagnosed cancer in the US and the fifth leading cause of death among women. And we do it because there is no cure. Every donated cent gets us closer to the goal of a cancer-free world, but this must truly be a collaborative effort.

For all the talk of Congressional gridlock, there are areas where bipartisan cooperation not only occurs, it is common.

And many of us on both sides of the aisle have worked hard to ensure that cancer awareness gets the attention it demands.

In the Senate, I joined my colleague Senator Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) to cosponsor the National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program (NBCCEDP). We know early detection is our best weapon in the fight against women's cancers, and this program has given millions of disadvantaged women access to vitally important cancer screenings.

In 1998, Senator Dianne Feinstein, (D-CA) and I came together as original proponents of the Breast Cancer Research Stamp. Since then, more than 903 million stamps have been sold, raising over $72 million to fight breast cancer.

And in April, 2011, I introduced Senate Resolution 144, supporting early detection for breast cancer and calling on the Senate to remain committed to ensuring access to life-saving breast cancer screening and treatment. The following May, I again joined Senator Feinstein on the bipartisan Senate Cancer Coalition, to introduce a Senate Resolution designating May as National Cancer Research Month.

There has also been a tremendous role played by private and not-for-profit sectors. A good measure of the awareness-raising is due to the work by the Susan G Komen Foundation, which started the "Walk for the Cure" and which is responsible for the iconic pink ribbons. The foundation was started by Nancy Brinker after her sister, Susan Komen, died of breast cancer. Nancy promised to do everything she could to help ensure breast cancer never claimed another victim. The dedication of the Komen Foundation and its workers has increased awareness, which has led to more early detection and better survival rates and more research.

Breast cancer can hit anyone. Early detection is crucial, and self-examination and mammograms are key. And while there is no guaranteed prevention, there are some lifestyle habits that can lower risk, including maintaining a healthy weight, exercise, limiting alcohol intake and not smoking. Genetics can also play a part — ask your doctor for more information.

Finding a cure will take all hands on deck. Better treatment outcomes for women (and men) depend on awareness and investment. This Breast Cancer Awareness Month, I hope everyone will commit to steps that can increase early detection for themselves and their loved ones and give what they can to the national and international effort. As anyone whose life has been affected by breast cancer can attest, the possibility of a cure is worth every penny.

Hutchison, a Republican, is the senior U.S. senator from Texas.

Broken toe spurs Neil young to write his first book

By DAVID BAUDER
AP Entertainment Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Neil Young's fans have come to expect wild swings if they've followed his music career since the 1960s. There's the near-violent guitar solos and throbby rock of his collaborations with Crazy Horse. Lilted acoustic melodies like "Harvest Moon." Electronic experiments. Moments of genius and ill-advised detours.

No one should be surprised that reading his first book, the memoir "Waging Heavy Peace," should feel exactly the same.

Young's scatter-shot style includes a description of Crazy Horse as a living organism that illustrates an artistic sensibility better than any non-musician can, along with a recitation of a shopping trip he took once in Hawaii and praise for his electric toothbrush.

He generally avoids specific talk about songwriting. Yet he candidly admits that his song "Alabama," a trigger for Lynyrd Skynyrd's answer "Sweet Home Alabama," was ill-advised. Young's passions — his family, electric trains, cars and a system to sonically improve digital music files — get as much space as music.

"If you hang out with somebody, the conversation doesn't always run out in a linear fashion, from A to B," he said. "It's what's on their minds. Things happen. You see things out the window, you get interested in that. You get distracted by things. I always thought that was a natural way to go with it."

Ultimately, a reader learns more about Young than they would if he had a ghostwriter's help, a notion he practically snorts at in disdain. "That's a scary damn idea," he said, "having a ghost in the house."

Some free time and a broken toe led the 66-year-old Rock and Roll Hall of Fame member into the project. It was in his blood. Young's father, who died in 2005, was a well-known journalist and author in Canada. Young has always been a careful steward of his musical history and it's little surprise he'd want to look back at his life in the same way.

The idea is to promote American Archives Month and show people that archives aren't just repositories of dusty old documents — they can be home to cool stuff, too.

Such as a tribble, a small creature from the Star Trek television series. The American Heritage Center houses items donated by several celebrities including the late Forrest J. Ackerman, a science fiction publisher credited with inventing the term "sci-fi."

Ackerman had no ties to Wyoming but years ago donated many boxes of manuscripts, photographs, movie stills, correspondence, books, movie posters and artifacts including a tribble from the Star Trek set.

"A tribble is a little fur-ball-type thing. It looks like a hairy softball that is very soft and cushy," said Lander, journalist Ernie Over, who was Star Trek creator Gene Roddenberry's personal assistant from 1985 to 1990.

Tribbles have no arms, legs, heads or even eyes. The idea was to mass-produce them as simply as possible, Over said.

In the famous 1967 Star Trek episode that first featured tribbles, the prolific creatures multiplied and overran the Enterprise until Montgomery "Scotty" Scott beamed them onto a Klingon ship.

Ha-ha: Klingons despise tribbles. And tribbles hiss when they encounter Star Trek's best-known bad guys.

Tribbles are sought-after Star Trek souvenirs nowadays. Archivist and Trekkie Keith Reynolds said he couldn't resist running around with the furball when he found it in the Ackerman collection.

"The people who had no idea what it was, they were completely grossed out. They thought it was a toupee," he said. "Or some dead animal."

He said the tribble isn't much to look at, just a tuft of fake fur.

A good tribble name should sum up "tribblesque qualities," said his co-worker, Rachael Dreyer, organizer of the naming contest.

Entries can be emailed to ahc\(at\)uwyo.eduuwyo.edu), with "Tribble Contest" and your name in the subject line. They also can be posted at the center's Facebook page, <http://www.facebook.com/UWAHC>

Python found near sewage plant

MONTAGUE, Mass. (AP) — Montague's sewage treatment plant has been visited by an unusual guest.

An employee on Thursday found a three-foot long ball python on the ground near an outside tank at the western Massachusetts facility.

Employee Tina Tyler tells The Recorder of Greenfield (<http://bit.ly/SxLvST>) she thinks the snake was seeking warmth.

Workers caught the snake, put it in a trash barrel, then called police.

Police directed them to Black Jungle Terrarium Supply, a Turners Falls shop that deals in reptiles.

Black Jungle co-owner Richard Revis says non-venomous ball pythons are popular pets due to their relatively small size and docility. He thinks it was released by an owner who no longer wanted it.

Revis says the snakes are native to Africa and releasing them in New England is a death sentence.

Vietnam returns endangered turtle to Cambodia HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A critically endangered turtle that somehow made it to Vietnam decades ago has been returned to its original home: Cambodia.

The mangrove terrapin was handed over to Cambodian authorities in a ceremony in southern Ho Chi Minh City on Friday.

The conservation group Education of Nature Vietnam said the turtle would be introduced into a conservation breeding program in Cambodia.

The turtle was first spotted by ENV staff in 2010 in a park in Ho Chi Minh City.

The park bought the turtle from local people in the 1980s, but the conservation group says it is unclear how the terrapin ended up in Vietnam.

Police: 'Burglar' call actually came from dog

OREM, Utah (AP) — Police in Orem, Utah, say a man who thought he was getting a call from a burglar had actually gotten a call from his dog.

Authorities in the community south of Salt Lake City say the man alerted police Wednesday after he received a phone call from his home phone on his cellphone. Officials say the man heard banging and scratching noises on the line and figured it was an intruder.

Police went to the man's home but didn't find anything missing or broken.

The man later called officers and told them he figured out the mystery. He said his dog had grabbed the home phone's receiver and apparently hit the redial button while burying it in the backyard.

Police find high-speed chase suspect in hot tub

ALMENA TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) — Authorities say they captured a runaway suspect trying to hide in a backyard hot tub in southwestern Michigan following a more than 100 mph chase.

The Van Buren County sheriff's department says one of its deputies stopped a pickup truck early Wednesday for a defective plate, but the driver took off. The department says the driver lost control and the pickup overturned in Almena Township, west of Kalamazoo. The driver fled on foot.

The department says a Kalamazoo police dog tracked the man and he was found hiding in a hot tub with a cover over it. The 28-year-old man was arrested on charges including fleeing police, resisting arrest, driving with a suspended license and operating a vehicle under the influence of drugs.

Pa. boy, 7, reunited with prize-winning pumpkin

Troy Mead didn't expect to see the 66-pound pumpkin again after Bloomsburg Fair officials tossed it when his family missed a pickup deadline.

After an article about the missing pumpkin in the Bloomsburg Press Enterprise on Wednesday, a fair worker called the paper to say she had found it near a trash can and took it home so the gourd didn't go to waste. She said she wanted to return the great pumpkin to its rightful owner.

It's now greeting visitors on the Mead family's front porch in Catawissa.

Troy says he'll be drying out and saving the seeds to plant next year, in hopes he can grow another giant.

Western Pa. judge sets example by doing jury duty

EBENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A western Pennsylvania judge spent the day in the county courthouse — but not in her usual seat.

Instead, Cambria County Judge Linda Fleming sat among 119 other people who reported for jury duty Thursday at the courthouse about 70 miles east of Pittsburgh.

Fleming says she felt it was important to serve and not use her position as an excuse to get out of jury duty. Potential jurors watch an orientation video in which Fleming and four other judges explain the process. Fleming says a woman sitting next to her didn't recognize her in the video.

Fleming was picked for a 36-member panel assigned to a criminal case. But she wasn't seated as one of the case's 12 jurors after an attorney objected.

Fleming says she declined the $9 each juror is paid for the day.

Crickets, worms on menu for Philly museum event

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When a natural history museum throws a party, it figures that some unusual food might end up on the menu.

Interested in noshing on crickets, worms and farm-raised python? The Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia has an event for you.

It's hosting an adults-only cocktail party on Oct. 27 called "Cuisine From the Collections."

While many of the living plants and animals represented in the museum's 18 million research specimens already are food for other species, most aren't your typical kitchen staples.

Other menu items will include seaweed, buffalo and rabbit. The food is by the museum's caterer and chefs and students from Drexel University's Goodwin College of Professional Studies.

Tickets are $100 for nonmembers. Proceeds benefit the 200-year-old institution's mission of scientific research and exploration.

4th alligator discovered roaming Long Island

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — There's a gator glut on Long Island.

Newsday (<http://bit.ly/SHStg>) says the fourth alligator discovered in a week has found a new home at a Riverhead aquarium.

The most recently publicized stray was found Monday at a Wading River golf course on eastern Long Island.

Other alligators were found on successive days about 55 miles west, near a Baldwin supermarket.

The spate of gators started a week ago in Mastic.

Experts believe people may be disposing of the 2½-foot-long beasts when they start to become unmanageable.

The week's gator-wrangling total comes to five if you include New York City. Police removed a pet alligator from a Brooklyn home on Monday.

The Suffolk County SPCA warns that exotic animals make bad companions.

Young

anything. That's always worked for me with everything else I've done."

He also wrote with a clear head, swearing off alcohol and marijuana, the latter due to a doctor's advice and fear that continued use could lead him into dementia, which his father suffered from.

That was no easy decision. Young said he wrote virtually all of his songs while high and wondered if he could without the crutch. His songwriting dry spell lasted more than a year before he started again, and he's set to release the new two-CD set "Psychedelic Pill" on Oct. 30 that includes some epic jams with Crazy Horse.

Young writes movingly about his family and with admiration for son Ben, who is afflicted with severe cerebral palsy. There's a heavy sense of loss, too, for old friends who died like Danny Whitten of Crazy Horse and David Briggs, his record producer. He was clearly rocked when Kurt Cobain's suicide note quoted Young's lyric, "It's better to burn out than to fade away."

The book is not for gossips. Look elsewhere to find out who slept with who or who's feuding. Some of his direct celebrity references are mundane (Linda Ronstadt's fondness for peanut butter), although he couldn't resist a joke about David Crosby's advanced chemical collection.

"I just don't care about it at all," Young said. "Tell all? Tell what? ... I don't like to read it and I don't like to write about it."

Some, celebrity references are oddly oblique, like a paragraph about "my friend Paul."

"Paul and I are friends because we both knew and loved Linda, who I met first during Buffalo Springfield days," he wrote. "Linda was a wonderful girl and lady. Today we are in touch periodically and talk about music or whatever. I like Paul a lot."

Wait a minute. Would that be McCartney? (Yes).

Does that mean Linda McCartney, whose photo of Young is on the book's back cover, had a pre-Paul romance with Neil? (No).

His editor would occasionally probe Young to reveal more details. Often he'd just say no.

Young said he doesn't read reviews of his music, but he did sneak some peeks at book reviews. They're mixed: Entertainment Weekly called it a "jumbled, slightly surreal narrative that struggles with momentum." The Wall Street Journal called it terrific, "modest, honest, funny and frequently moving."

Young has already written part of a sequel, which he said started out to be about cars and dogs but now is largely about record players. He's not leaving music behind, though. There's a tour with Crazy Horse this fall.

"When music is finished with me, I'll be OK," he said. "Right now I still do it because it seems natural. If it ever comes to the point where I can't do it justice, when I'm not doing my best, then I'll stop."

Christopher Columbus (1451-1506) was an Italian explorer who sailed across the Atlantic Ocean in 1492, hoping to find a route to India (in order to trade for spices). He made a total of four trips to the Caribbean and South America during the years 1492-1504. Columbus sailed for King Ferdinand II and Queen Isabella of Spain. On his first trip, Columbus led an expedition with three ships, the Nina, the Pinta, and the Santa Maria, and about 90 crew members. They set sail from Palos, Spain, and on October 11, 1492, spotted the Caribbean islands off southeastern North America. They landed on an island they called Guanahani, but Columbus later renamed it San Salvador. While exploring the islands in the area and looking for gold to loot, Columbus' men traveled to the islands of Hispaniola (now divided into Haiti and the Dominican Republic), Cuba, and many other smaller islands. On the return trip, the Santa Maria was wrecked and the captain of the Pinta sailed off on his own to try to beat Columbus back. Columbus returned to Spain in the Nina, arriving on March 15, 1493.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Oct. 8, 2012:
 This year an innate tension exists between two seemingly opposing interests that are pulling you in different directions. As a result, your juggling skills become critical. Your unusual resourcefulness and creativity emerge and allow many different opportunities to open up. Some of you could become involved in higher education, publishing and/or travel. A foreigner or someone very different might suddenly appear in your life, which could cause you to permanently alter your thinking. If you are single, this person could become more than just an acquaintance. If you are attached, travel could play a very important role in your year; it also might draw the two of you closer together. CANCER is emotional, and you often feel a need to respond.
ARIES (March 21-April 19)
  You might need to depend on someone else, which could make you uncomfortable. You simply cannot be everywhere at once. Consider an option that comes too late this time but perhaps just soon enough for next time. In the meantime, be patient. Tonight: Mosey on home.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 * Reach out for a key person who has been evasive lately. If this individual continues in this manner, revamp your approach or simply choose not to deal with him or her. Your clarity and sense of direction remain assets. Count on change and new developments. Tonight: Share a different perspective about an investment and/or an expenditure.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
  You offer a lot. Your creativity might be at a standstill, but this will last for only a short period of time. Your optimism flows and helps open up many different options. Your sense of humor carries you through the most difficult moments, and also helps lighten the mood. Tonight: Avoid extremes.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 * Tension builds. Allow greater give-and-take, and remember to center yourself. Take a risk and trust your sixth sense; you will like the end results. Touch base with a family member, as this person might have some important news. Tonight: Whatever works for you.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 * Time works in your favor, though impulsiveness might be your initial reaction. Know that an immediate decision most likely would backfire. Tomorrow, you could get different results. A meeting adds enthusiasm and will be instrumental in getting you to spread your wings. Tonight: Get extra R and R.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 * You benefit from hearing what people around you have to say. You might not be sure as to what decision or choice to make, so get as much feedback as possible. You need to understand where others are coming from. With more empathy and understanding, you'll head down the right path. Tonight: Catch up with a friend.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 * Meet responsibilities head-on. Your willingness to step up to the plate is what identifies you and separates you from others. Your unique perspective and ability to detach play into the situation and are two of your strengths. News from a distance makes you smile. Tonight: Take the first step in making a dream happen.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
 * Reach out for experts. Do some research on your own, too, and you will have a greater understanding when speaking to others. One person gives you feedback that hits home. You finally know which way to go. You are lucky with money right now -- consider buying lottery tickets. Tonight: Listen to passionate music.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
 * Deal with a key person directly who has an impact on you personally and/or professionally. At times, you might find that your guard goes up when this person shares. A meeting or a friend helps you keep your goals in mind. Many different people come toward you with ideas. Tonight: Togetherness works.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 * Let others express what they want. You are anchored and know how to deal with various suggestions. By encouraging such exchanges, others will feel more comfortable and be willing to share with you. This is how you build loyalty and support. Also, you'll gain access to many good ideas. Tonight: Go with the flow.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 * Focus on accomplishments and getting a project completed. Your creativity surges and might distract you, but if you funnel it into what you're doing, it could help you complete and/or add a little more imagination to that project. A loved one would like more of your time. Tonight: Squeeze in some exercise.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 * Brainstorm and share more with others. At the same time, you do not want to reveal too much about a particular person. Your willingness to be vulnerable is OK, but not if it exposes someone else. A purchase or a matter involving your personal life puts a smile on your face. Tonight: So what if it is Monday?

Bond movies have beat do-or-die odds for 50 years

By RYAN NAKASHIMA
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Over the last 50 years, the owners of the James Bond movie franchise have had heart-stopping crises as thrilling as the ones that face their fictional secret agent.

They've nearly gone bust more than once and have come close to losing all of their rights in court.

But the franchise has survived and thrived under the family of late producer Albert R. "Cubby" Broccoli, whose name has graced every official Bond intro since "Dr. No" in 1962.

The son of Italian immigrants was a risk-taker, and his earlier ventures included farming the vegetable bearing the Broccoli name that his uncle brought to America. After years of hustling his way into Hollywood, Broccoli fought for the movie rights to the Ian Fleming novels and passed his faith in the British spy tales to his children.

"Cubby used to say, 'This is the goose that laid the golden egg, keep it safe,'" said Broccoli's youngest daughter, Barbara, now the series' co-producer, in a phone interview from London. "One of the things he said was we're temporary people making permanent decisions. When you have a franchise, and you're invested in it as emotionally as we are, you make decisions based on the health of the franchise going forward."

For five decades, the Broccoli family has held on to its 50 percent stake in the "007" movies, while studio partner Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc. owns the other half. The series is one of the longest running in history, having made $4.9 billion in ticket sales over 22 films. The 23rd Bond movie, "Skyfall," is set to premiere Oct. 23 in London.

It's not like the formula for action, sex and intrigue has always worked perfectly. Some films fell flat, like "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," George Lazenby's infamous one-Bond wonder.

The franchise has occasionally needed new blood to keep it fresh, and there have been six Bonds so far.

For "Skyfall," the family is making another noticeable change: it cast 31-year-old Ben Whishaw as Bond's gadget guru, Q. The last two movies did without the longtime sidekick, who had been played by the late Desmond Llewelyn in an epic 16 Bond films.

"The decision was made to make him a younger man, as would be the case these days," said Michael G. Wilson, Albert Broccoli's stepson who is also co-producer of the series, by phone. "Let's hope he goes on as long as Desmond Llewelyn did."

It may seem a minor casting decision, but nothing is taken lightly by the family that has stuck with Bond this long. Their tribulations are brought to life in the documentary, "Everything Or Nothing," which debuts Friday on EPIX.

In one incident from the 1970s, the film explains, Broccoli's Canadian co-producer, Harry Saltzman, had squandered his Bond fortune on outside investments. Instead of turning to his partner for help, Saltzman pledged their production partnership Danjaq as collateral on nearly $20 million in personal loans from Swiss bank UBS.

Broccoli enlisted Wilson, a practicing lawyer, to prevent the production company from being foreclosed on by the bank. Wilson argued Saltzman couldn't pledge 100 percent of the production entity without consulting his partner. In the end, the Saltzman-Broccoli partnership broke up. Saltzman bitterly sold his stake to McClory, an Irishman whose early script work with Fleming allowed him to win the movie rights to "Thunderball."

The rights form the basis for "Never Say Never Again," a 1983 remake. The film brought leading man Sean Connery back as Bond after a 12-year hiatus, and was a way for Connery to snub the producers that he felt had shortchanged him.

That year, Connery's Bond and Roger Moore's Bond in "Octopussy" hit theaters just months apart, though "Octopussy" won the box office battle. Due to the bitter rivalry, "Never Say Never Again" isn't included in Danjaq's count of 23 Bond flicks.

The documentary also explains why "Casino Royale," Fleming's first Bond book, was made twice. The first version debuted in 1967 and was a ridiculous mash-up featuring multiple Bonds played by the likes of David Niven, Peter Sellers and even Woody Allen. The spoof was possible because Fleming had sold that book's rights to Columbia Pictures, now owned by Sony Corp., for

That's why a Sony Vaio laptop is among Bond's arsenal of gadgets these days, despite Sony's former archenemy status. (Heineken, not a shaken martini, is also a new favorite Bond libation, thanks to the brewer's corporate sponsorship.)

Both Sony and MGM declined to comment about their business dealings ahead of the 50th anniversary on Friday.

But the curtain has yet to fall on the financial drama surrounding Bond.

In July, MGM made a preliminary filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission to prepare for who are looking to recoup their investment after converting $5 billion in debt into ownership stakes in a 2010 bankruptcy.

The IPO could happen before "Skyfall" or potentially before MGM's other major coproduction, the J.R.R. Tolkien tale "The Hobbit," which MGM is co-financing with Warner Bros. and is set for release in December.

According to a person familiar with the matter, the timing is meant to take advantage of the hype surrounding the two movies, which promise to be among the year's biggest money-makers. The per-her father never liked — but which the family has had to deal with many times over the years.

"I don't think he was comfortable with Bond being a pawn in the Wall Street gamble," Broccoli said.

Wilson, who fought hard to keep Bond from being hijacked by financial shenanigans, said his focus is different now than when he first stepped in to protect the family business.

"We just keep our heads down and make movies," Wilson said. "We keep it on track. That's our job really. That's what we do."

sunday horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Oct. 7, 2012:

This year you will assume a strong leadership role and be able to handle it well. You have unusually high energy and drive. Curb an unexpected and sometimes combative style if you become frustrated. Have an outlet, such as a sport or hobby, to help you release this unusual liveliness. If you are single, you will meet someone special through your travels and/or an acquaintance. If you are attached, the two of you become closer if you take up a mutual commitment. Your sweetie could be taken aback by your high energy. CANCER enjoys seeing you take the lead.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★ You might want to spend some time at home and/or with family. This downtime will help you relax. A difficult friend or loved one could be far more challenging than you might think. Your creativity surges in this conflict. Tonight: A must appearance.

This Week: Distractions float by nearly every day; you'll have to decide which one you want to follow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ You will take a step toward someone, which, at first, could feel tenuous. You might find grounds for this attitude, as the unexpected occurs.

Ultimately, it makes no difference if you handle it well. Know why you are irritated, and express it. Don't play games. Tonight: Tell it like it is.

This Week: Schedule meetings on Monday. You have a lot on your plate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ You might want to deal differently with a difficult friend or close loved one. You genuinely understand this person's needs, but you can't always play into his or her control games. Decide not to get involved. Your imagination could be a factor in a disagreement. Tonight: Your treat.

This Week: Deal with your finances Monday. Communication remains key for the remainder of the week.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Put your best foot forward, and understand that you can make a difference. You do not need to respond to a close loved one's tantrum. It simply does not work for you — power plays are not your cup of tea. Tonight: You get what you want.

This Week: You beam, and others respond Monday. Do not say "yes" to everything.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Back away from a difficult situation, which is being presented as "all or nothing." Take some time off to indulge yourself. What comes from out of left field actually will be good news, once you recuperate from your startled first response. Tonight: Not to be found.

This Week: Monday is Monday, but the Lion roars from Tuesday on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Your ability to deal with someone difficult becomes even more obvious. This person is rebellious. Know that you cannot push him or her. A child or loved one throws a tantrum because he or she needs something that you can choose to provide. Tonight: Allow in more fun.

This Week: Monday and Thursday highlight you. You might want to vanish in between.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ You have made plans with a parent or older friend, but you'll discover that neither of you wants to do what is planned; however, you do still want to spend time together. Be spontaneous, and you will enjoy yourselves more. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

This Week: You'll take the lead and think all is well, which might not be the case.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Your perception could be way off when dealing with a difficult neighbor or sibling. You could be too involved in the situation to respond in a neutral manner. Do something to distract yourself. Tonight: Follow the music.

This Week: Do adequate research before you express your opinion. You will sound more knowledgeable and confident.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Decide to take a leisurely walk with a dear friend or close loved one. The time will recharge your energy and allow you to bond closer with this person. Every relationship needs special time — even friendships. Tonight: Stick with the togetherness theme.

This Week: You interact on a one-on-one level. Be willing to detach.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You might want to defer to someone else's way of thinking, especially if you are feeling testy. The less you try to be in control, the better off you will be. Listen to what this person shares, and try to get out of your own head. Tonight: Sort through invitations.

This Week: Others respond to you, but maintain their distance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Make this your day for some R and R. The activities you choose could reflect your mental state.

Easily, a roommate or loved one might decide to join you. Make sure that having this person come along will not stress you out. Tonight: Start thinking about tomorrow.

This Week: Take it easy Monday. From Tuesday on, others will seek you out.

PISCES (Feb. 18-March 19)

★★★★ Listen to a child's plans. You might decide to jump right in and go along with them. Those of you who are young at heart will mix romance with good times. Single Fish could meet someone special, if they decide to go out with friends. Tonight: Curb your frustration.

This Week: Your creativity surges at the beginning of the week. Act when you feel the timing is right.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a 42-year-old woman who has wanted to write to you for years. I'll soon celebrate my 20th wedding anniversary. I am very unhappily married.

I married "Bill" for all the wrong reasons. I never truly loved him the way a woman should love a man. I have remained in the marriage because I am "supposed to." I was brought up to obey the Commandments and do what is right.

Bill is a wonderful husband and father. He has a steady job that pays well; I work part-time. Bill and I get along just fine. He is easy to talk to, and we're very good friends. I don't want to lose that. But there is absolutely no passion in our relationship and never was.

I married Bill because it "was time." He feels more like a brother than a husband. I don't want to hurt my children, but I can't pretend any longer. I am attracted to other men. I'm afraid I'm going to start hating him because I feel so trapped.

I don't know what to do. I just want to stop pretending. We have both spoken to professionals and I have talked to my priest. I told Bill a little about how I feel — that I don't love him the way a woman should love a man. He just keeps on trying — buying me flowers, doing all the right things. It doesn't matter. It just makes me angry. Could you please offer me some suggestions? I have read your column since I was a teen, and I value your opinion. Thanks. — HAD IT IN HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR HAD IT: Let me get this straight — you married your husband under false pretenses and have lied to him for 20 years. Both of you have my sympathy.

The best advice I can offer is to think long and hard about what you have now and what you "might" have in the future. Believe me, there are NO GUARANTEES and expectations have changed a lot since you were in the dating and mating market. If you really cannot love your husband the way he should be loved — and counseling won't help — then let him go. He deserves better.

DEAR ABBY: My mother died recently after suffering a stroke. Immediately following her death, one of my father's more painful tasks was notifying various agencies: Social Security, retirement benefits and so on. Dad shook his head in amazement as all but one of the people he notified simply fired off a series of questions, thanked him curtly and hung up. Only one civil servant proved to be truly civil, prefacing the conversation with, "I'm sorry for your loss."

Abby, I know people who work in government and private pension departments receive many calls about deaths every day. That doesn't make each death less sad, or each call less difficult for the person picking up the phone and dialing. We can connect on a human level even through layers of officialdom and technology. A few simple, sympathetic words can make a world of difference in the dark days following the loss of a loved one. — NANCY IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR NANCY: Perhaps it's a self-protective mechanism when people who work with case numbers, files and statistics lose sight of the fact that behind that information are broken hearts and grieving families. Thank you for the reminder. I'm sure no one meant to be cruel. What you have described is an example of people who have become desensitized.
